Of the different arms of the Service the cavalry and artillery are perhaps the most inadequately represented. There are several Guardsmen, some on the active list and some retired. The same cannot be said of the cavalry, however, for, whereas Lieut.-General FitzWygram, Major-General Frank Russell, and Major-General Goldsworthy have all disappeared from the Parliamentary arena, the only notable new recruit who comes to look after the interests of the cavalry is Colonel the Hon. H. Legge, late of the 9th Lancers. Major Rasch, already mentioned, Colonel Brookfield, Lord Edward Talbot and Captain Jessel have, however, all served in the cavalry, and may be relied upon to give Colonel Legge assistance. Captain Pretymann, who was the only artillery man in the last Parliament, will be ably seconded in this by Captain Lee, who lately vacated the post of Military Attaché at Washington, and who served with the American Army in Cuba. Captain Pretymann is brother of the General appointed Military Governor of Blomfontein by Lord Roberts. He entered the Army as a lieutenant of the Royal Artillery in 1880, and served for nearly ten years. The Engineers have to rely on those in other branches of the Service to see after their welfare, but the auxiliary forces, as we have said, are well represented. We trust that the Militia officers who have been returned will work hard to secure redress for the grievances of the old Constitutional force. There were signs last Session that the authorities had begun to realise that the systematic neglect with which the force has been treated in recent years does not tend either to the well-being of the Militia itself, or to that of the Army as a whole. It is a matter for regret, however, that this feeling has not been reflected in the treatment of such of the Militia as are out in South Africa. In the next Parliament Militia officers must make their voices heard, and must speak to the purpose.

Perhaps the most satisfactory feature of the election returns is the large number of men elected who have seen service in South Africa. Their experience will be especially useful to the House on the many military matters which are bound to arise when Parliament assembles. One ounce of practical experience is worth a ton of theory, and men who have gone through the campaign will certainly speak with more weight than those who have only followed it at a distance. Sir Savile Crossley, who has had some experience of the artillery, should be able to give the House information at first hand on the much-debated question of the efficiency of our guns, and Captain Pirie, who went out to the Cape to look after the remount department, will be another member from whom expert evidence of an interesting kind may be confidently looked for. As we have probably not yet heard the end of the Spion Kop disaster, we are pleased also to note the return of Lieut. C. Lowther, who, as soon as the Imperial Yeomanry was raised, joined its 8th Battalion, and on getting out to South Africa was appointed A.D.C. to Sir Charles Warren. In this capacity he saw all the fighting on the Tugela, in some respects the most interesting part of the whole campaign. Lord Edward Talbot, another member who has served throughout the war, acted as Deputy Assistant-Adjutant-General to the South African Field Force. Lord Compton, Colonel Brookfield, Captain John Howard, Captain Seeley, Captain W. R. Green, Lieut. Morrison, have all, too, seen service at the front, and mention may also be made of the Hon. A. B. Bathurst, who went out with the 4th Batn. Gloucester Regiment to guard Cronje at St. Helena. In view of the report that attention is to be called in the House to the way in which Press telegrams were censured in South Africa, interest attaches to the re-election of Lord Stanley and Captain Bagot; the former has acted as A.D.C. to Lord Roberts and as Press Censor in South Africa, whilst Captain Bagot, who, by the way, is hon. sec. to the Portland Hospital, which was the first Volunteer hospital to go to South Africa, is now Chief Press Censor at Capetown. It is being suggested that certain matter was eliminated from Press telegrams because it might be distasteful to certain generals in the field. We do not doubt that Lord Stanley and Captain Bagot will be able to correct this impression when they return home.

DIRECT COMMISSIONS IN THE ARMY.—It appears that competitive examinations are to be held for Militia candidates for commissions in the Line in the usual manner; but it seems a little hard to make Militia officers, who have been serving many months with their embodied battalions, undergo a competitive examination while there are still a large number of vacancies, when so very recently young Line officers have been appointed direct to commissions without any training or any examination whatever. For several months the Militia candidates for the Army have been doing exactly the same duties as those performed by junior subalterns of the Line, and, indeed, many of them are serving at this very moment in South Africa in the field, and are far better fitted to become officers of the Regular Army than even Sandhurst cadets after their full course of preparation; and surely these Militia subalterns, who have been serving their country during a period in which Army commissions have practically been given away to absolutely untrained and unqualified private gentlemen for the asking, are deserving of equally good treatment with the latter. Even if there should prove to be an inadequate number of vacancies in the British service for the number of Militia subalterns who might wish to take advantage of any such arrangement as we have suggested, there will be a large number of vacancies to be filled shortly in the Indian Army in consequence of the increase in the establishment of British officers in all the native regiments of the Indian Army, and these might very profitably be offered to the Militia candidates who have been qualifying themselves in a most desirable manner for the regular Army by serving for so long with their embodied battalions.—Morning Post.

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1033.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1035.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1035.

Army Foreign.

In the Revue du Cercle Militaire Captain Painvin offers some remarks upon the criticisms lately made by the Times correspondent at the French manoeuvres. He attributes weight to the judgment expressed, because the correspondent has seen much fighting in India, the Soudan, and recently in South Africa, and has been able to observe the effect of new arms in actual war, and the tactical modifications which the introduction of these arms may entail. The French officer then quotes the censure expressed upon the close formations adopted. He says that in all manoeuvres there must be an element of unreality—inevitable, because danger, one of the principal factors of war, is wanting. "The essential point is that our troops should give proof of endurance, and should be capable of making long marches, and that our generals should handle with ease the masses of men confided to them. Now, in these respects the grand manoeuvres in Beauce have given complete satisfaction to France. The unreality indicated would disappear when the bullets whistled"—not, however, we may say until experience had been dearly bought. Captain Painvin then goes on to give an anecdote of an attempt which was made during manoeuvres to reproduce the assault upon Warsaw in the year 1831. Among the officers present was one who had taken part in that assault, and he was ordered to repeat the manoeuvre, which in actual warfare he had executed with complete success. But the operation was a failure, and being asked why he was unable to do in peace time what he had executed in war, he replied that during the real assault he had been able to see whence the enemy's projectiles came, and had only to march in that direction; and he asked how he should be expected with the same ease to discover the enemy. "Bullets and shells are then the real regulators of the fight; they determine its course and impart its true character, and it is easy to understand that an engagement during peace manoeuvres, being deprived of these regulators, can scarcely be approximated to the reality." In this way does Captain Painvin explain the close formations in which the French troops moved under fire.

The decree of General André concerning the promotion of officers in the French army is causing a great deal of heated discussion. The Progrès Militaire thinks that the Minister was not justified in resting his authority upon the particular article of the law of March, 1838, which was cited. It is of opinion that the Minister proposes to extend to superior and subaltern officers the absolute freedom of choice which his predecessor reserved in regard to the suitability of officers to discharge the functions of members of the Superior Council of War, and of generals of division and brigade. Under the pretence of giving youth to the staff of the army, the fate of all officers passes into the hands of the Minister, who becomes as powerful as was Louvois under Louis XIV. The future of officers depends no longer upon their direct chiefs; it is the Minister alone who will reward, and the Promotion Board is to present lists including a much larger number of officers than is required, among whom the Minister will find the dignus inter pares. Many objections were raised to the decree of General de Galliffet, and that of General André is causing even greater opposition. On the other hand the France Militaire considers that, after all, the chief of the Army should in a certain measure, be its master, and thinks the present discussion not altogether justified. Another of our contemporaries regards the new arrangement as the entry of politics into the army. The decree reveals an exaggerated confidence in himself on the part of the Minister, who will henceforth be occupied in discovering what is the political nuance, and what are the religious opinions of the officers nominated for promotion.

The Temps has lately been asking what has become of the French Colonial army, which, under the law of July 7, is to be transferred from the control of the Minister of Marine to that of the Minister of War. The change is to be effected by January 1, 1901, and it has been rumoured that the technical committee which has been appointed to settle the details has failed in its work. According to the France Militaire this statement is categorically denied at the Ministry of War, and the Committee is continuing its weighty task so that everything will be arranged before the date fixed for the transfer.

The Epoca of Madrid recently stated that the question of Morocco might easily be opened again if Spain should not show her strong resolve to maintain firmly the status quo in that country. Senor Silvela's organ is generally well informed, and it has stated that there was a safeguard in the fact that England, Germany, Italy, and Russia would all have something to say in the case of French aggression in Morocco. The Berlin correspondent of the Debats, however, claims to have good authority for stating that Germany has no purpose in Morocco, and that it would be contrary to her whole policy to throw any obstacle in the way of France, which she is now doing her utmost to propitiate. The correspondent asserts that the German Government is resolved to respect the interests of France everywhere, and that the popular spirit of Pan-Germanism does not reflect the views of the Government in that matter. It may be pointed out, however, that if it be true that Germany has secured a coaling station in the Red Sea, she will not be unlikely to seek another link in the chain of her communications in the neighbourhood of Morocco.

On October 3 an imperial order was issued for a gradual demobilisation of the Russian troops in Manchuria and on the Chinese frontier. The Russki Invalid states that the troops at the seat of war in Pechili, with the 3rd, 4th, and 5th Rifle Brigades and the artillery attached to them, as well as the naval forces, are to be retained under the command of Vice-Admiral Alexeieff. The forces which advanced into Manchuria, and all those which crossed the Russian frontier, will be demobilised, with the exception of certain troops "which are absolutely indispensable for the military arrangements of the commanding officers." All the troops and their auxiliaries, including the reserve divisions, which have not crossed the frontier, are to be reduced to a peace footing, with the exception of the 5th battalions of some Siberian regiments, and the Stretensk and Chita regiments, which continue mobilised in the Amur district, the regiments with four battalions being transferred to the reserve. The rescript orders troops of the Semirechensk territory to be reduced to a peace footing, and that portions of the Turkistan Rifle Brigade shall be recalled to their quarters with the exception of one battalion which remains temporarily at Semirechensk. With the troops which have not crossed the frontier, and the third park of artillery, only as many artillery horses will be retained as are required for transport and hospital work. In regard to the Cossacks, it is announced that the reserve regiments will be demobilised at once, together with the reserve battery of artillery, and the Cossack infantry brigade. The regiments of the second reserve will be kept mobilised for a time in case need should arise for their services. It is further stated that as soon as order is restored in China, all the troops still remaining on a war footing will be demobilised and transferred to their former garrisons in European Russia.

The new German machine-gun stood the test of the manoeuvres extremely well, and is now to be supplied to the whole army, the regiments on the western frontier receiving it first. The gun is mounted with springs on four-wheeled carriages drawn by four horses. A man to take charge of the horses is mounted and four others ride, two on the gun-carriage and two on the limber. The gun has an extremely rapid breech mechanism, and is provided with a bronze water-jacket. The limber contains 250 cartridges in belts, which work automatically, and so rapidly, according to some statements, that as many as 500 or 600 shots can be fired within a minute. The officers and men wear a uniform of greyish green, and the leather accoutrements and boots are khaki, the collar and badges being red. The men are armed with the new Chasseur rifle, and are provided with pioneering tools, and the non-commissioned officers carry revolvers. During the manoeuvres these machine-guns were used both with the infantry and cavalry.

It is pleasant to know that at least one foreign officer has a good word to say for the severely criticised Army of South Africa. Lieut.-Colonel Nicholas Tolschin, of the Imperial Russian Army, has accompanied our arms, and speaks in the highest terms of our officers and men. He has a profound admiration for British troops. Whether winning battles by their dogged gallantry or indulging in manly sports, their discipline and esprit de corps are splendid. He defends Lord Methuen and Sir William Gatacre. These officers, he holds, were placed in impossible positions at the outset of the campaign, as they were without cavalry, and could have done nothing if they had not sought to strike blows by means of the frontal attack. The attitude assumed by some sections of the English Press and some members of Parliament is spoken of as "contemptible, reflecting the greatest discredit on a nation which is usually chivalrous." Lieut.-General French is referred to as a cavalry leader of first rank, "who has done more than anyone else—Lord Roberts excepted—to bring the campaign to a successful issue." Sir Charles Warren is held to be "a great administrator, the settlement of the rebellion in Griqualand West being entirely due to his genius in this direction." It may be still urged by our detractors that such fulsome praise cannot be substantiated by the facts, but Colonel Tolschin none the less deserves the thanks of those he has so generously championed.

An artillery expert, writing in the Militär-Wochenblatt, seems to be satisfied that France and Germany have solved the chief difficulties as regards the quick-firing field-gun. He claims that these two nations alone have approached the subject intelligently—a statement to be taken for what it is worth. Our own artilleryists contend that we also have a good quick-firing gun. France and Germany do not seem to have been identical in their aims. The French have tried to secure the highest muzzle-velocity of the projectile combined with the greatest mobility of the gun. Germany has never lost sight of mobility, but has sought rather to increase the power of the projectile than the muzzle-velocity. The result is that the German gun throws the heavier projectile, is more simple in construction, and is believed to possess the greater endurance. It may be found that the British gun is not far behind in merit. As a rule our artilleryists are too conservative, a little too slow to move; but we have at least more recent practical knowledge.

ROYAL ARMY MEDICAL CORPS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The injustice of nearly every available billet being retained by retired pay and temporary acting officers is well emphasised in your paragraph. The case of the R.A.M.C. officers deserves special attention, as every appointment worth having has been bestowed on retired officers and civilians. There is practically no hope of any home service except for those on the R.P. list; to many coming back from South Africa and wishing to retire there will be no vacancies. The present appointments are nominally temporary; in the event of an applicant presenting himself with a better record of service and merit such appointments should not be continued. Especially does this apply to posts held by civilians, who draw nearly double the pay given to retired officers for the same work. Those who have gone through the campaign can demand, in all fairness, a share of the desirable billets. R.P.

A NUMBER of the Militia units which have been disembodied have had transport animals in their charge. These, after inspection by veterinary surgeons, as a safeguard against infection, have been handed over to the Remount Depot at Woolwich.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S
HIGH-CLASS
CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition, 1900.
Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

Obituary.

ARMY.

Lieut.-Gen. Henry Philip Hawkes, C.B., retired list, Indian Staff Corps, of Till Hill, Farnham, died suddenly at St. Ives, Cornwall, on the 9th inst. The son of Mr. P. C. Hawkes, of Okehampton, he was born 1834; joined the Army March 3, 1850; becoming Captain, March 3, 1862; Major, Aug. 15, 1868; Lieut.-Colonel, March 3, 1876; Colonel, March 3, 1881; Major-General, Dec. 12, 1890; Lieut.-General, June 9, 1894. He served in the Abyssinian War, 1867-68, as Assistant Commissary-General (mentioned in despatches, medal, and Brevet of Major); was actively employed in the Malay Peninsula in 1876 as Assistant Commissary-General with the Laroot column (medal). Served in the Burma expedition, 1886-87 as Acting Commissary-General-in-Chief, and received the thanks of the Government of India (mentioned in despatches, C.B., and clasp). He was twice married—in 1856 to Louisa, daughter of Major J. Shepherd, Indian Army; and in 1897 to Sarah Anne, daughter of the late Mr. John Dewrance.

Lord Hamilton of Dalzell.—Lord Hamilton of Dalzell, whose death was announced last Tuesday, served in the 2nd Life Guards from 1847 to 1860.

Capt. Herbert Wodehouse Taylor, of "M" Battery, R.H.A., who has been killed in South Africa, entered the Royal Artillery as 2nd Lieut. in 1887; became Lieut. three years later; and in 1897 was promoted to be Captain. He was in the 34th year of his age.

Capt. Frederick Bruce, according to a telegram received in Cheltenham, has died at Tien-tsin from cerebral apoplexy. Capt. Bruce, who was 34 years of age, passed from the Militia into the Welsh Regiment, and thence into the Madras Infantry, which formed part of the Indian Contingent.

Capt. Archibald Dundonald Stewart, 1st Batn. Rifle Brigade, was killed in action in South Africa on the 9th inst. Born, Feb. 26, 1864, he joined the Rifle Brigade as Lieut., Aug. 23, 1884, and became Captain, Nov. 23, 1892. He served in the Burma expedition, 1886-88 (medal with clasp).

Capt. George Leigh Paget, who is reported to have died from the severe wound he received in the engagement at Kaapmuiden, was the eldest son of Sir George Ernest Paget, of Sutton Bonington, Loughborough, chairman of the Midland Railway Company. Capt. Paget was born in 1871, and would have completed nine years' service with his corps on Nov. 7. He became captain a little more than two years ago, and the present was his first campaign.

Lieut. Harry Kerr Attfield, whose death in the fighting near Ventersburg Road Station on Sunday is reported by Lord Roberts as "a great loss," would have completed his 24th year on Nov. 26. He joined the Derbyshire Regiment as 2nd Lieut. a little more than four years ago, and became Lieut. in Feb., 1898. Before the present campaign he served with the Tirah Expeditionary Force in 1897-98, and had the medal and two clasps for his services.

Lieut. Philip A. T. Jones, who has died from the effects of his wound, was born on March 25, 1875. He was appointed 2nd Lieut. in the 8th Hussars in 1895; became Lieut. in 1897; and after acting last year as Adjutant of his regiment, was appointed to that post in the spring of the present year. He was on special staff service in South Africa from Nov., 1899, to April, 1900.

Lieut. Frederick Herbert Wylam, who has also fallen, had just completed the 24th year of his age. He joined the Army as 2nd Lieut. in the 8th Hussars in 1897, and the year following was promoted to be Lieut.

Lieut. E. M. Hanbury, 3rd South Lancashire Regiment (4th R. Lancs. Militia), was killed at Jagersfontein Oct. 13.

2nd Lieut. John Roger Williams-Ellis, 1st Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers, was killed in action in South Africa on the 9th inst. Born Dec. 1, 1880, he joined the Royal Welsh Fusiliers as 2nd Lieut. Dec. 6, 1899.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

FURLOUGHS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The other week I went to see a relative at Aldershot, and during a brief chat with a few men of the Line battalions I heard over a dozen of them grumbling about short-service men not being granted privileged furloughs the same as the Royal Reserves and ex-Reservists, viz., working furloughs until recalled. I suggested to them they should complain to the authorities, but they replied that it would be considered a crime, so that is the reason why I have taken up my pen on their behalf. For my part I fail to see why a man who enlisted for seven years with the colours and five on the Reserves, but who perhaps was abroad when his time expired and had to serve an extra two years, should be kept at Aldershot watching the Reserves going on privileged furloughs, while the latter is practically a younger soldier and has served the whole of his time at home. I should like to know who is responsible for this arrangement. The man who has been abroad five or six years (and whose time has expired) should not be allowed worse privileges than the man who has spent the whole of his time at home. I think everyone will agree with me that it is very hard on the time-expired men to have to "stick it" while their younger confrères are allowed to go on privileged furloughs. A word about the Royal Reserves. I am told they were offered an exorbitant bounty to complete 12 months, which they have not yet done, but they are granted privileged furloughs notwithstanding. The short service men are getting no bounty at all for their extra 12 months. They do not grumble at that, and all they want is a working furlough like the other favoured men. There would be an excuse if they were abroad, or their service were required abroad. Hoping the above matter will be inquired into and put right, and thanking you in anticipation, ARIEL.

THE RECENT CYCLIST MANŒUVRES.

Major-Gen. Sir J. F. Maurice, R.A., has issued a report on the cyclist manœuvres held under his direction near Brighton on Aug. 4, 5, and 6, and expresses it as his opinion that all difficulties and delays were solely connected with the actual working of the peace programme. "None of them," he says, "would exist in war if the organisation and other arrangements had been completed beforehand." Gen. Maurice holds that the manœuvres answered the purposes for which they were designed by him, and showed conclusively that large bodies of cyclist riflemen with machine guns could, if organised and trained beforehand, be delivered without confusion on an assigned area bordering on a particular portion of the coast. He sketches out a scheme of organisation—holding that to be of use, the Volunteer cyclist must be properly trained to the work he has to perform. He sums up his conclusions in these terms:—

"It appears to me certain from what I have seen that, given the previous organisation, any cyclist bodies within a hundred miles of the landing place of an enemy could be gathered to oppose him before he was ready to interfere with their concentration, using that term in the sense applicable to the case. By 'concentration' I here mean the assembly within cyclist striking distance of the enemy of cyclists on every road by which he could advance, provision for their ample supply both with food and ammunition, and, by help of local labour previously organised, the preparation of the country between the roads in such a way as to make the defence easy and the advance difficult. As the area of the semi-circle thus available would be more than 15,000 square miles, I think we ought to be able with proper organisation to obtain out of this in each case, wherever the landing point may be, at least 100,000 cyclists. The exact conditions and terms to be proposed require careful consideration. Of one thing my experience in this case has convinced me more fully than ever. Nothing can exceed the patriotic enthusiasm of the country. The devotion of their own personal case and the sacrifice of time, ability, and energy that have been made by all who worked with me, men all of whom were engaged in arduous and important duties of their own, is a lesson that I at all events can never forget. It represents a power for defence in the country that it would, in my judgment, be madness to allow to go to waste."

SALISBURY PLAIN.—During the summer the total number of troops, Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteers, trained on Salisbury Plain, under command of Major-Gen. T. A. Cooke, has been 54,412 of all ranks. The whole of these have been called upon to go through the special course of musketry and field training prescribed for the "emergency mobilisations."

MILITIA AT THE FRONT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In an "Army Note" in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE of the 13th inst. the following appears:—"The 4th Batn. Bedfordshire Regiment, under command of Lieut.-Col. Lord Cranborne, have seen a good deal of real fighting in South Africa. The battalion has been for some time at Mafeking, and is the only British battalion quartered there, the rest of the force being Australians." You also imply, I take it, that this is the only Militia corps out of so many in South Africa that "has succeeded in getting beyond the lines of communication." I am confident you will be good enough to correct this unintentional error when I inform you that another Militia battalion, namely, the 3rd Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers (formerly the South Cork Light Infantry), under the command of Col. F. W. Bell, is also quartered at Mafeking, therefore, entitled to share, with the Bedfordshire, the honour of being "so well to the fore" in South Africa. The former regiment, which had been stationed at Aliwal North and Stormberg, received unexpected orders to proceed to Vryburg in the month of August, a distance, roughly speaking, of about 800 or 1,000 miles away. The journey by rail occupied three days and three nights. Upon Aug. 5 the battalion received a further order to proceed to the now historic Mafeking, where it arrived late that night. The honorary colonel of the 3rd Royal Munster Fusiliers is Sir Augustus R. Warren, Bart., late of the 20th Regiment, a distinguished Crimean and Indian Mutiny officer, who was succeeded in the command of "the Old South Cork" by its present C.O. Col. Bell, and who has had the exceptional honour of taking the corps upon active service to South Africa.

JAMES H. DONEGAN, Lieut.-Col. (retired),
3rd Royal Munster Fusiliers.
Junior United Services Club, S.W.,
Oct. 15.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS AND BRASSES

Morris & Sons
239 Kennington Rd. London S.E.

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPELL & CO. LTD. EXETER
4 & 5 DUNCANNON ST. LONDON.
& CHARING CROSS.
DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

HART, SON,
PEARCE, & CO. LTD.
Metal Workers.

— SPECIALITÉ —

Memorial Brasses.

88-91, DRURY LANE,
LONDON, W.C.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Oct. 13.

The War Office this afternoon issued the following from Lord Roberts:—

"Pretoria, Oct. 12, 4.35 p.m.—Several attempts have been made with more or less success during the last few days to interfere with our railway and telegraph communications. The persistency of the Boers is somewhat remarkable, for the damage done is soon repaired, and is invariably followed by severe punishment. De Wet's men continue to be greatly scattered in the neighbourhood of the Vaal. A good many deserted after the fighting reported in my telegram of the 10th inst. A slight engagement took place near Middelburg yesterday, when we had two men wounded. Several of the enemy are reported to have been killed. Gen. Lyttelton, with the Headquarters 4th Division and the 8th Brigade, reached Dollstroom yesterday, on the road to Middelburg. Stephenson reports that he had two men killed and four wounded in an encounter with some Boers north of Nelspruit on the 10th inst. A man of the Sussex Regiment was killed near Kroonstad on the 10th, and the following day two Boers fell into a trap laid for them by some of Brabant's Horse. Kelly-Kenny reports that two policemen were killed by a marauding party of Boers at Pietersburg on the 10th inst."

A patrol left Aliwal North on the 11th with the object of obtaining provisions for the town in anticipation of the arrival of the garrison which was expected shortly. It returned without having accomplished its object, owing to the presence of numerous small parties of Boers in the neighbourhood.

"Pretoria, Oct. 7 (delayed in transmission).—Van Post, an influential burgher belonging to Pretoria, has obtained permission to proceed to the Free State for the purpose of seeing De Wet and of representing to him the absurdity of continuing the struggle. Schoeman has gone to interview Gens. Delarey and Botha with the same object. The Boers have blown up a culvert near Brugspruit and destroyed a considerable portion of the gear of a colliery, whose manager, Mr. Howard, afforded aid to the British prisoners who escaped from Pretoria."—Reuter's Special Service.

Monday, Oct. 15.

Lord Roberts reports:—

"Pretoria, Saturday, Oct. 13.—A satisfactory little affair took place near Frankfort on Oct. 11, when Col. Grove, Royal West Kent Regiment, surprised a Boer laager at dawn on that day. Seven of the enemy were killed, nine were wounded, and 18 were made prisoners. Our casualties:—No. 3766 Sergt. W. Canty, Royal West Kent, severely wounded. Five prisoners have arrived at Krugersdorp, having been released by Delarey:—Corpl. Walham, and Ptes. Freetham and Nicholls, belonging to the Northumberland Fusiliers, Pte. Dirgan, to the Border Horse, and Pte. Keyss, to the Kimberley Mounted Corps. They were for some time in gaol at Zeerust, and not well treated until Delarey arrived there, when all went well with them. The few English ladies at Zeerust did all they could for them. A party of the 4th Cheshires, escorting empty waggons, was captured on Oct. 11, between Bethulie and Springfontein. The Boers kept a mule waggon and released the men."

Tuesday, Oct. 16.

A Reuter telegram of Oct. 11 from Pretoria says that an Army Order has been issued, announcing that Gen. Sir Redvers Buller has relinquished the command of the Natal Field Force, and is about to return to England. The Order adds that the Commander-in-Chief cannot allow Sir Redvers Buller to leave South Africa without thanking him for his great services while commanding the Natal Field Force, as well as for the ability with which he carried out the operations, while serving under Lord Roberts's immediate command, which resulted in the collapse of the Boers in the eastern portion of the Transvaal.

A war correspondent at Rustenburg says that Gen. Broadwood engaged the enemy near that place on Sunday, and captured 14 waggons and five prisoners. He had only one man wounded. Lord Methuen arrived at Rustenburg yesterday.

A Cape Town correspondent says that by instructions from Lord Roberts the return of refugees to the Transvaal has been postponed for the present.

Lord Roberts has telegraphed to the Viceroy of India, as Colonel of Lumsden's Horse, requesting him to secure, if possible, that the situations in India of the members of the corps be kept open a little longer. Lord Roberts trusts that the war is nearly over, but adds that it is essential that all should hold together till the end. Lord Curzon expresses the hope that employers will accede to Lord Roberts's request.

Lord Roberts, in a despatch of Monday night, the 15th, from Pretoria, says that Gen. French, with two cavalry brigades, has started from Machadodorp towards Heidelberg, to clear a part of the country not hitherto visited by our troops. Col. Mahon, with the mounted infantry attached to the column, had an engagement with the enemy on Saturday in which he was successful, but the British losses were severe, three officers and eight men were killed, and three officers and 25 men wounded. Gen. French on Sunday occupied Carolina; the Carabineers captured a Boer convoy en route. Gen. Lyttelton is continuing his march towards Middelburg. Gen. Rundle has reported from Vrede that on Oct. 11 he marched out to assist a convoy which was attacked by the enemy, and drove them off. On Friday, a patrol of Australian Bushmen encountered a party of Boers near Ottoshoop. Three of the Bushmen were wounded, one mortally, and one is missing. Nine of the Boers were wounded. The following day the Boers retreated from their position. Gen. Settle, who is moving on the east of the Kimberley-Mafeking Railway, entered Bloemhof on Sunday without opposition. He has captured 50 prisoners, and is now moving on Hoopstad.

Wednesday, Oct. 17.

Marauding parties of Boers are reported in the vicinity of Kroonstad and of Vryburg.

Some remarkable revelations were made at the sittings of the Transvaal Concessions Commission in Pretoria on Thursday and Friday. Mr. Van Kretschmar, managing director of the Netherlands Railway, after his counsel had protested against his being examined, was called and extracts from his diary and correspondence were put in, showing that the company had taken the initiative in blowing up bridges with the object of stopping the advance of the British; that a "Destruction Commando" had been organised, and acted as the rearguard of the Boer army; that the company had paid £1,000 towards the expenses of Mr. Hargrove's "conciliation tour" in Cape Colony; and that it had also provided a substantial annual salary to Mr. R. Statham, a pro-Boer journalist and author. In a letter addressed in April last to his directors in Holland, the witness had admitted that the company had compromised themselves by deed and word and writing. They had made cannon and ammunition, destroyed bridges on British territory, paid their staff on commando, and assisted the Free State with persons and material. In other letters the witness suggested a combination of Germany, Holland, and the Transvaal against Great Britain. In December he wrote that he considered the Boers ought to be content with annexing Kimberley, Northern Natal, and Amatongaland, with Delagoa guaranteed as an international free port. On Friday the Commission considered the concession to the National Bank. Mr. Henderson, the joint general manager, defended the privileges granted to the bank as being not prejudicial to the public interest, but other witnesses contended that the concession was so prejudicial, and was inequitable to other banks.

Thursday, Oct. 18.

Lord Roberts, in a Pretoria despatch of Tuesday night, says Gen. Kelly-Kenny reports that on Sunday a small detachment of police at Wepener attacked a party of Boers who had appeared in the neighbourhood, killed seven, and made two prisoners. The police had no casualties. In an encounter on the same day near Ventersburg Road Station Lieut. Attfield and two men were killed and four men wounded, all belonging to the Derbyshire Mounted Infantry. Lieut. Attfield's death is a great loss. Gen. Barton reports from Welverdiend that Boers in small parties are in that neighbourhood, doing all the mischief they can. He had an encounter with some of them on Sunday, when the Scottish Yeomanry Cavalry, under Sir J. Miller, and the Royal Welsh Fusiliers behaved with great dash. Six Boers were left dead, and a large quantity of small arm ammunition was captured. No British casualties are reported. Prisoners continue to be sent in by Gens. Clements and Broadwood from the Magaliesberg district. Theunis Botha, brother of the Commandant-General, surrendered at Volksrust last Saturday.

Friday, Oct. 19.

Lord Roberts says:—

"Kelly-Kenny reports that Lieut. Banbury, 3rd South Lancashire Regt., killed on the 13th inst., was a young officer of great promise. A party of Boers managed to get into Jagersfontein during the night of the 16th inst. In the morning a fight ensued. Our losses, nine men killed and two mortally wounded. Boers lost their commandant and 20 of their number killed. Kenny-Kenny despatched a column through Edenburg yesterday under Col. Hughes-Hallett, which should be at Jagersfontein to-day."

"It is a place famous for its diamond diggings, situated 67 miles south-west of Bloemfontein. The population in normal times is between 5,000 and 6,000."

CAPTAIN GALL'S
SPECIAL PROMOTION CLASS

For ALL or ANY of the Subjects.
TERMS ON APPLICATION.

90a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards.—Lieut.-Col. T. C. P. Calley was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

4th Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. Robertson (late 3rd Cameron Highlanders), left Cape Town in the steamship Aurania on Oct. 7.

6th Dragoon Guards.—Lieut.-Col. A. Sprot was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

8th Hussars.—Major C. E. Duff was reported slightly wounded on Oct. 13.

11th Hussars.—Mr. Albert Paget, the eldest son of Gen. and Mrs. Arthur Paget, has just been gazetted to the 11th Hussars. The regiment, which is now stationed at Cairo, will remain there for another year.

16th Lancers.—2nd Lieut. H. Gilmour was reported severely wounded on Oct. 13.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The 33rd Brigade Division R.F.A. arrived on Wednesday at Aldershot from Woolwich, and went into the new hut barracks at Frimley. Although the brigade has been in existence since May, it has as yet received no guns. It has a full complement of men and horses. The batteries composing the brigade are the 137th, 138th, and 139th, and are under the command of Lieut.-Col. A. C. Bailward.

Lieut.-Col. Brady, R.A., has been appointed to command the depot of the Southern Division Royal Garrison Artillery, at Gosport.

Lieut.-Col. Simpson, on promotion from major commanding the 23rd Battery Royal Field Artillery has been posted to the Field Artillery in India, and appointed to command the Royal Artillery at Jhansi.

Major E. H. Paterson, R.A., is to retain his post as instructor at the School of Gunnery for a further period of six months.

Major F. B. R. Toms and Major C. E. Weigall, Royal Garrison Artillery, have passed the tactical examination for promotion to lieut.-colonel.

Major Robinson, R.F.A. (on being posted to the 1st Royal Field Battery), Major Gray, R.H.A. (on relief), and Capt. Haycock, R.A. (invalided), left Cape Town in the steamship Aurania on Oct. 7.

Capt. the Hon. Maxwell Ward, R.A., has just returned from Canada, and has taken up a fresh appointment in the Isle of Wight. Capt. Ward is the only son of Lord Bangor.

Lieut. W. S. Brancker, M Battery, R.H.A., was reported wounded on Oct. 13.

Lieut. A. R. C. Begbie, R.H.A., was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The Royal Monmouth Engineers will be disembodied at Monmouth on Oct. 31.

The Royal Anglesey Engineers were disembodied on Oct. 13 at Beaumaris.

The Humber Division (Submarine Miners) will be disembodied on Oct. 31. The Medway Division were disembodied on Oct. 13. The Needles Division (Isle of Wight) were disembodied on Oct. 13.

Lieut.-Col. L. B. Frend hands over his duties as officer commanding troops and companies, Royal Engineers, at Aldershot, on promotion, to Lieut.-Colonel C. A. Rochfort-Boyd, on return from active service in South Africa.

Lieut.-Col. R. C. Maxwell was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

Major H. E. S. Abbott, R.E., proceeds to Rawalpindi to act as superintending engineer, and Major G. M. Porter, R.E., to Karachi as C.R.E., Sind district.

Lieut. Sherrard, R.E., condition slightly improved, Oct. 11.

INFANTRY.

Irish Guards.—Major G. C. Nugent, who has returned invalided from South Africa, where he served on the staff of Major-Gen. Sir Henry Colville, has been granted leave on the recommendation of a medical board.

Royal Scots (1st).—2nd Lieut. P. C. Dalmahoy discharged to duty, South Africa, Oct. 7. 2nd Lieut. R. C. Wrey was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Lieut. St. J. E. Montagu discharged to duty, South Africa, Oct. 7. The 3rd. Batn. left Strensall for Bradford on Oct. 18.

(King's) Liverpool Regiment (8th).—Major C. Campbell has passed the tactical examination for promotion to Lieut.-Colonel.

Lincoln Regiment (10th).—Major T. H. Bingham Day, commanding 2nd Batn., writes from Pretoria, Sept. 19:—"Would you kindly, through the medium of your paper, allow me to tender the sincerest thanks of the battalion to all those who have sent out shirts, underclothing, tobacco, and, various other most useful gifts? These have, I think been now all received, and both the gifts and the kindness and generosity of those sending them is most highly appreciated by all ranks."

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—Col. the Hon. J. S. Trefusis, with 11 officers and 280 men of the 4th Batn., arrived at Jersey on Wednesday to garrison the island, replacing the 2nd and 3rd Batns. The former are now en route for Bloemfontein, while the latter leave to-morrow. The old garrison entertained a large company to a farewell "At Home" and dinner on Monday. The 4th Batn. left Salisbury Plain on the 16th and arrived at Jersey Oct. 17.

Somersetshire Light Infantry (13th).—Capt. St. John Mildmay was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—The 5th Batn. left Salisbury Plain for Aldershot on Oct. 18.

Yorkshire Regiment (19th).—The 4th Batn. and details left Strensall for Sheffield on Oct. 13.

Lancashire Fusiliers (20th).—2nd Lieut. Marriott (late 3rd East Lancashire) left Cape Town in the steamship Aurania on Oct. 7.

Royal Scots Fusiliers (21st).—Capt. D. M. Stuart has been appointed District Inspector of Musketry, Scottish District, in succession to Capt. H. C. Metcalfe, Northampton Regiment, who has received a similar appointment in Ireland.

Cheshire Regiment (22nd).—Discharged to duty in South Africa: Lieuts. O. Hassall and C. C. Redfern. 2nd Lieut. F. W. Woolnough was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

1st Royal Welsh Fusiliers (23rd).—Major Archdale, who has distinguished himself in South Africa, has been appointed to command the 2nd Batn. Lincolnshire Regiment. Lieut. Kyrke, wounded at Dwarsvlei on Oct. 9, is progressing favourably.

Scottish Rifles (26th).—The 3rd Batn. and details leave Lanark Muir on Oct. 19, and arrive at Chatham on the 20th.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (27th).—The 5th Batn. left Salisbury Plain for Dover on Oct. 18.

Gloucestershire Regiment (28th).—The 3rd Batn. and details left Salisbury Plain for Devonport on Oct. 17.

East Surrey Regiment (31st).—Details left Finner on Oct. 8 to take up temporary quarters at Belfast. The 4th Batn. left Finner for Birr (temporarily) on Oct. 10.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd).—Col. Martyr, D.S.O. (invalided) left Cape Town in the steamship Aurania on Oct. 7. The 3rd Batn. left Salisbury Plain for Devonport on Oct. 17.

Royal Sussex Regiment (35th).—Capt. W. T. Robinson was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (43rd).—Major G. F. Mockler was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

2nd Shropshire Light Infantry (85th).—Quartermaster (Hon. Lieut.) J. Forrest arrived at Plymouth on Monday in the hospital ship Trojan.

Royal Irish Rifles (86th).—Capt. A. K. R. Hall was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st).—Major Cochrane left Cape Town in the steamship Aurania on Oct. 7. Lieut. Clarke arrived at Plymouth in the hospital ship Trojan on Monday.

Derbyshire Regiment (95th).—Lieut. H. K. Attfield (Mounted Infantry Co.), was reported killed on Oct. 14 at Ventersburg Road Station.

North Staffordshire Regiment (98th).—2nd Lieut. J. F. Giffard was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

Leinster Regiment (100th).—The 4th Batn. left Salisbury Plain for Dover on Oct. 15.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—The 5th Batn. left Salisbury Plain for Lydd on Oct. 17.

2nd K. O. Yorkshire Light Infantry (105th).—Lieut. Simpson arrived at Plymouth in the hospital ship Trojan on Monday.

Rifle Brigade.—Discharged to duty, South Africa, Oct. 7:—Capt. Heriot Maitland and 2nd Lieut. W. F. Bassett. Capt. Clarke arrived at Plymouth on the hospital ship Trojan on Monday.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Civil Surgeon W. J. Moir was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

Chaplains' Department.—Army Chaplain W. F. Sweetman was discharged to duty on Oct. 14.

Post Office Corps.—Capt. A. Palmer was discharged to duty Oct. 14.

Reserve of Officers.—The Earl of Albemarle, commanding the infantry of the City Imperial Volunteers, is to be given the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the Reserve of Officers.

Royal Guards Reserve Regiment left Wellington Barracks on March 15 for the Tower of London.

Royal Southern Reserve Regiment.—The 2nd Batn. left Woolwich for the Portsmouth Hill Forts on Sept. 25.

Royal Rifles Reserve Regiment.—The 2nd Batn. left Portsmouth for Parkhurst on Oct. 17.

Royal Irish Reserve Regiment left the Curragh for Athlone on Oct. 20.

Militia.

The appointment of Capt. Hobdell, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment, as a commandant and railway staff officer on the lines of communication in South Africa has been confirmed.

The 3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regiment, under the command of Col. Lloyd, have left Aldershot for Waterford. The regiment will be disembodied at Wexford.

The 5th Royal Irish Regiment (Kilkenny Militia), under Col. Knox, has been ordered to move from Salisbury Plain to Aldershot to be stationed.

The Yorkshire Militia Artillery were disembodied on Oct. 12.

The Sussex Artillery were disembodied on Oct. 17.

Arrangements are now almost complete for the dispersal of the Militia units encamped on Salisbury Plain. The 3rd Lincolnshire Regiment have already left for Manchester, and 250 of the 5th Royal Munster Fusiliers for Lydd, both going into winter quarters. The 3rd East Surrey Regiment, commanded by Col. Sir George Clerk, has left Perham Down Camp for Kingston-on-Thames, where disembodiment followed, and the 4th Leinster Regiment left Bulford Camp for Dover to go into winter quarters. The 5th Royal Fusiliers, commanded by Col. Lang, has also left Perham Down Camp for Hounslow, where the battalion will be disembodied, and the 4th Devonshire Regiment leave Park House Camp for duty in Jersey. The 3rd Gloucestershire and the 3rd Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (with Line details) leave West Down and Bulford Camps to-morrow for winter quarters at Devonport. The 5th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers have proceeded from Bulford to quarters at Dover; while the 3rd Royal Irish Rifles have left Bulford for Newtownards and the 4th Royal Irish Fusiliers for Cavan to be disembodied, the Line details of the Irish Fusiliers transferring to Dublin. The only Militia battalion in the Salisbury Plain awaiting orders is the 5th Royal Irish Regiment and the remaining portion of the 5th Royal Munster Fusiliers.

The 7th Royal Fusiliers, or Royal South Middlesex Militia, who have been embodied just five months, since May 14, were on Monday released from duty with the colours at the Tower of London. The battalion, which numbers close upon 800 officers and men, was, on embodiment, sent to Salisbury Plain, where it spent about half its period of colour service, until relieved by the 5th Batn. (Royal Westminster Militia) of its own regiment, the two battalions changing places. Had custom been strictly followed the 7th would on Monday morning have been sent to Hounslow, its headquarters, for disembodiment; but, in view of the fact that many of its men belong to the more immediate London suburbs, it was decided to make the general release in the ancient quarters they have lately occupied, only the permanent staff and the recruits going back to headquarters. On release the men received from the pay due to them sufficient to carry them home and a trifle over, the remainder of their money following through the post. Some of them took, too, the suit of clothes offered rather than the 13s. 6d. given in lieu of it; and to judge by appearances those who took in kind had the better bargain. Though generally in high spirits at being released, there appeared no distaste for the military life which they have lately been living under Col. Dibley, but there were expressions of preference for soldiering under canvas rather than at the Tower. Men acknowledged that there were times of stiff, hard work in the field, but "on the Plains it was a bit easy; here they have a job for you every minute."

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES of GROUND with FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD £120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.

£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400 (Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT - - - £100 to £185 (Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315 (Chelsea, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

Three other metropolitan Militia battalions were released from colour duty on Monday, the 7th King's Rifles (the old Barnet Rifles) being sent from Aldershot to Barnet for dismissal, the 5th Duke of Cambridge's Middlesex from Dover to Hounslow, and the 3rd East Surrey from Salisbury Plain to Kingston.

The Inniskilling Fusiliers Militia was inspected at Aldershot by Major-Gen. Brook, commanding the 1st Brigade at Aldershot. He expressed much satisfaction with the manner in which they had worked at Aldershot, and extolled the conduct of the men who had done so well in the South African campaign.

Volunteers.

The battalions comprising the West London Volunteer Brigade, the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd V.B.'s Royal Fusiliers, 1st and 2nd Batns. Middlesex Regiment, and the 17th Middlesex Rifles competed last Saturday at Bisley for the handsome challenge cup presented by Lieut.-Col. Roche, commanding the last-mentioned regiment. At the conclusion of the competition Major-General Guyon, the chief umpire, announced that the 1st Batn. Royal Fusiliers, who had put on 46 per cent. of the hits, were first. The 17th Middlesex Rifles, with 28 per cent., and the 3rd V.B. Royal Fusiliers, with 22 per cent. followed in order of merit.

The Secretary for War has approved the formation of a Cadet Corps to be attached to the Queen's Westminster Rifles, commanded by Col. Sir Howard Vincent, C.B.

Among the Volunteer officers elected to seats in the new Parliament are Colonels Brookfield, Sir C. Cayzer, C. E. Colston, Sir H. Fletcher, Sir J. H. Kennaway, J. Gretton, E. Hughes, Hon. F. Lambton, S. A. Sadler, Lees Knowles, Major J. T. Firbank, Captains Lord Balcarres, Hon. H. Cubitt, E. Gray, Lieuts. Sir A. Agnew, A. Allhusen, and R. Cavendish.

The Earl of Albemarle, who has been in command of the C.I.V. Batn. in South Africa, and who returned from the front on Friday, visited the headquarters of his regiment, the 12th Middlesex (Civil Service Rifles), on Saturday, where he was accorded a hearty reception. Col. Tytheridge, who has been in command of the battalion during the absence of the noble Earl, congratulated him on his safe return, and tendered the good wishes of himself and brother officers. Lord Albemarle, in thanking Col. Tytheridge, gave a few of his experiences at the seat of war, which, he said, had not been a bed of roses.

It is announced that the Long Service Medal has been awarded to 540 Volunteers who have given 20 years' efficient service. The largest district award is 135, to Volunteers in the Scottish district, the remainder going to: North-Western District, 103; North-Eastern, 101; Home, 81; Western, 55; Eastern, 30; Southern, 16; South-Eastern, 11; Woolwich, 6; and Thames, 2.

A Glasgow telegram states that much disappointment is felt in that city at the refusal of the War Office to grant the application of the Lanarkshire Volunteer Regiment for increasing their mounted corps to 140. Lord Lansdowne intimated that he feared the granting of the application would prejudice recruiting in the Yeomanry Regiments.

At the Queen's Hall, Buckingham Gate, on Monday, 15th, 2nd Lieut. P. F. Browne, of the Royal Warwickshire Regiment, was presented by Col. Sir C. E. Howard Vincent, Lieutenant-Colonel commanding, with a sword of honour in recognition of his distinguished service in the Queen's Westminster Volunteers.

It has been decided that detachments representing the respective branches of the Army should be sent out as a guard of honour for the opening ceremony of the First Parliament of the Australian Commonwealth, and the 1st Middlesex (Victoria and St. George's Rifles) have been selected to represent the whole of the Volunteer Force of Great Britain. A detachment, therefore, of this regiment, consisting of one captain, one subaltern, four sergeants, and 49 rank and file will, according to present arrangements, leave England for Australia about the middle of November, and will probably be absent over three months.

Col. E. T. R. Wilde, who has commanded the Tower Hamlets Rifle Volunteer Brigade for 10 years, has been granted a two years' extension of his appointment.

SEPARATION allowances and half-wages may be specially continued during furlough to families of Royal Reservists for whom certificates can be given by commanding officers.

We have heard the last, it is to be hoped, of Col. du Paty de Clam. He has now been placed on the retired list of the French Army, having been already removed from active service in 1898.

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd. 23, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

Reviews.

LORD ROSSLYN'S CAPTIVITIES.*

On Jan. 13 Lord Rosslyn left England for the Cape, "the servant" of the Daily Mail and the Sphere, as he calls himself. "Owing to the action of his late colonel, Sir John Gilmour," and to his belief that on account of the "friction between Pall Mall and Suffolk Street, and between Suffolk Street and Edinburgh" (mercifully concealed from the public), the Imperial Yeomanry would be a long while before they were ready, he relinquished the sword for the pen, and listened to Mr. Harmsworth's offer, to become his correspondent, for "he was thirsting to see the war," and at the same time he was to organise the Absent-minded Beggar Relief Fund for homecoming wounded soldiers at the Cape.

To the British at the Cape, native and imported, he was exceeding welcome, and he found friends wherever he went. To the military authorities, perhaps, he was less acceptable, as his position was not so clearly established. Lord Roberts received him kindly, took an interest in the "Absent-minded Beggar Fund," and gave him a letter to General Buller. After an active, bustling career at Cape Town Lord Rosslyn set off for Durban to join Thorneycroft's Mounted Infantry, in which the colonel had offered him a commission. He arrived at Chieveley, Buller's headquarters, on Feb. 26, just in time for the battle of Pieter's Hill. To his applications for leave to proceed to the front Sir Redvers Buller sent answer that he would be allowed to do so "on condition that he did not write for any newspaper," and in an interview subsequently, when Lord Rosslyn referred to Lord Roberts's letter, Gen. Buller said he did not take his orders from Lord Roberts, but from the War Office. "I saluted," says the Daily Mail correspondent. "I should have liked to have done something else." He was some time at Ladysmith, but he wanted to be in the thick of it. It was a cheery birthday present to get a telegram from Lord Roberts on March 16, giving him permission to join at Bloemfontein, and he had to bid adieu to the T.M.I., and to begin the adventurous journey which led to his first captivity.

He was thirsty, as he says, for battle, and uncommonly well he slaked his thirst at the fiery fountain, for not only was he present at Pieter's Hill and the relief of Ladysmith in a soldier's capacity, but he managed to cross from Natal, through Basutoland, to the Boer lines in another capacity, and to be taken prisoner as a non-combatant Englishman when he emerged in the Orange River Free State. It was no wonder that the Boers could not exactly make out this stalwart, resolute young gentleman, six feet two, as he informs his readers incidentally, who appeared amongst them with no passport of visible business, with camera and race-glasses, declaring himself, with the air of a belted earl, to be a non-combatant Englishman desirous of visiting the country. He was not long in custody. His captors were about to fall upon a small detachment of the Royal Irish, 5th Fusiliers, and Mounted Infantry, under the command of Capt. McWhinnie, meandering about near Reddersburg, without artillery. In the middle of the attack Lord Rosslyn made a dash for liberty, and drove away, under fire from both sides, to the British. After a very gallant defence, through the whole day till dark, renewed the next morning, the party surrendered, Lord Rosslyn was once more a captive, and was marched off to Pretoria, where he remained until the entrance of Lord Roberts. The world has forgotten, perhaps, the famous, if premature, telegram which startled us in London one morning, when the Daily Mail announced the surrender of Pretoria from Lord Rosslyn, then a prisoner on parole in the Transvaal capital. Thence he turned his steps towards home, and was, as he tells us, the first direct traveller from Pretoria to London, "with nothing before him but visions of home, sweet home," where we hope he will long remain in happiness and peace.

If the critic indulged in the practice not unknown to the craft, and common enough among eager readers, and turned to the last chapter of the volume in which Lord Rosslyn records the "light" and, "he hopes, the bright and interesting tale" of his personal adventures in South Africa, he would probably form the opinion that the gallant young nobleman exhibited a decided deficiency in the better part of valour. The "Idle Reflections" at the end of the book bristle with sharp criticism and with the most decided solutions of problems that are as yet unsolved by older and more diffident examiners of the great question of the settlement awaiting "the exercise of the righteousness, temperance and judgment to come" of British statesmen.

Although the account of his life and adventures in his six months' wanderings would have been more readable had the blue pencil been freely used, and careful editing been applied to the pages, this record by a man who has "the courage of his opinions," and "lets them have it," must be read. It is one of the most interesting of the many volumes which have been poured out by the correspondents who have supplied the public with narratives of a very extraordinary campaign.

THE OFFENCE AND THE DEFENCE.

A volume of some importance entitled The Defence and Defensive Positions, by Capt. F. M. Edwards, D.S.O. (Madras, Addison and Co.), deserves particular note. The author who writes in praise of the defensive, had been engaged upon his book for five or six years, but for some time had hesitated to publish it. Before the events of South Africa, however, he was tempted to give his thoughtful and suggestive volume to the press. He considers that what has happened during the war is only what might have been expected to happen, our several reverses being due to the modern military teaching which advocates offensive action. The effect of the study of the Franco-German war upon English students has undoubtedly been to impress upon their minds the great results to be obtained by the assumption of the tactical or strategical initiative. Capt. Edwards does not question the justice of this view, but he points out that strategical initiative is not incompatible with the tactical defensive. He reviews the advantages which belong to both modes of action, and insists upon the extraordinary difficulties that beset the attack under modern conditions. The defending force will adopt selected positions with either natural or artificial cover, whilst the attack will be forced to advance exposed to the effect of shrapnel and rifle fire. He bids us remember that whereas all military teaching is now on the side of the initiative, the defence was Wellington's great weapon. Von Moltke said that the defender, in order to bring about a decisive result, must eventually himself become the assailant, but he raised the question whether, before advancing to the attack he should not exhaust all the material advantages to be gained from stationary fire by employing it to the very last moment. Capt. Edwards's demonstration is historical, and embraces a study of all the more typical examples of the present century. His conclusion is that in successful defensive actions it will almost always be found that the attack lost more heavily than the defence, and he instances the battles of Vimiero, Talavera, Albuero, Salamanca, Waterloo, Inkermann, the Shipka Pass (first battle), Gorni Dubnik, Plevna, Cherkovna, and others in support of his contention. The power of the defence to inflict heavy loss on the attack is still more noticeable locally. Thus at Fredericksburgh the Irish Brigade attacked a position also held by Irishmen of equal strength below Marye's Hill, and 937 out of 1,200 of the attackers were down in a few minutes, whilst the loss of the defence was inconsiderable. The Russian attack on the redoubts of the middle group at Plevna on July 30 cost the Penza regiment 29 officers and 1,006 men, whilst the 126th Regiment lost 75 per cent. of its strength. Again, at the third battle of Plevna, Skobelev's fighting on the Green Hills cost him 8,160 out of 18,000 men. Fuad Pacha's counter attack against Wilhelmoff's column at Dermendere cost him nearly 600 men, whilst the Russians lost only 60. The German Guard corps at Gravelotte lost 2,230 men on the slopes before St. Privat. Capt. Edwards also comes to the conclusion that, even in unsuccessful actions the defence, as at Wörth, Spicheren, and Gravelotte, will often inflict greater losses than it suffers, unless the retreat should become a rout. The power of the defence to inflict great loss is more noticeable in recent campaigns than earlier in the century, and though Capt. Edwards's book was in anticipation of the war in South Africa, it has afforded new illustrations of that fact. And yet, he says, the "Infantry Drill Book, 1896," in speaking about estimating losses in field manoeuvres, says: "Where a case admits of any doubt it will generally be desirable for the umpire to decide in favour of the force acting on the offensive." The principal points laid down by Capt. Edwards are these, that the defence has ordinarily the power of enabling an inferior force to repulse temporarily an attack and delay the advance of the superior force; that no defensive action, unless ending in a powerful offensive movement, can be decisive in its effects; and, taking it for granted that the opponents are fairly equal in moral qualities and efficiency, that an equal or superior force acting on the defensive should always defeat the attack. The author is not content to deduce principles only; he adds chapters on the selection of defensive positions and the utilisation of them. Evidently he has thoroughly mastered his subject, and his argument, supported as it is by the evidence of warfare, will command attention, and is embodied in an extremely interesting book which will be welcomed by all military students.

PINK AND SCARLET.

It is well known that Mr. Jorrocks regarded hunting as "the sport of kings, the himage of war without its guilt and only 25 per cent. of its danger." General Hamley, Sir Evelyn Wood, and many other prominent soldiers are, or have been, of the same opinion, and Lieut.-Col. E. A. H. Alderson, enthusiastically sharing the view, prepared for the press, before he went out to South Africa to take command of mounted infantry, a volume entitled Pink and Scarlet; or, Hunting as a School for Soldiers (Heinemann). The titles of his chapters—Clothing Equipment, Interior Economy, Transport, Field Training, Intelligence, Getting into Position, the Battle, Care of the Wounded, &c.—sound wholly military; but when we open the book we find the gallant officer relating hunting experiences or bringing to bear upon the particular circumstances he deals with, the events and the accomplishments of the hunting field. The book is full of spirit, and will be found very entertaining both by soldiers and huntsmen, and the broad conclusion is that hunting can take up the fighting education of the young officer just where the barrack square and the drill field can go no further, and that if taken and made use of in the right way, it can continue the education as nothing else can, except actual experience of war or work under conditions very nearly akin to it. Perhaps the best things that can be learnt by the soldier in the hunting-field are intelligent use of ground, self-reliance, decision of action, flexibility, adaptability to circumstances, and familiarity with fatigue, danger, and difficulty. Col. Alderson's book is a most lively discussion of the subject, upon which few writers could be more competent to speak.

Armee und Marine is a new illustrated weekly, published in Berlin by Messrs. Boll and Pickardt and edited by Count Reventlow. It promises very well. The illustrations are many and generally well executed, and include portraits, scenes of military life, naval episodes, and other like subjects. The first number has a capital portrait of the German Emperor in the uniform of the Cuirassiers of the Guard, and there is a fine picture of the departure of the marine battalions for China. Articles upon modern battle-ships, naval and military manoeuvres, and the naval exhibition at the Hague, are well illustrated also, and there is an element of fiction. Altogether the publishers must be warmly congratulated on their excellent start, and doubtless Armee und Marine will do still better in later numbers.

The Autotype Company, by special arrangement with the committee, and the artist, have produced a fine photogravure copy of the most successful and characteristic portrait of Lord Kitchener, by W. A. S. Cope, A.R.A., exhibited at the Royal Academy. The size of the reproduction is 30 by 16 in., and the impressions are printed on plate and India paper, the outside measuring about 40 by 26 in. The issue takes the form of 100 remarque proofs signed by Lord Kitchener and Mr. Cope, 250 artist's proofs signed by Mr. Cope, and lettered prints. The Sirdar is represented standing in his tent, clad in the khaki uniform which he used throughout the Egyptian campaign. The grey of the tent, the faded uniform, the light brown high boots, the dark brown leather strap round the waist, the green central pole, the helmet lying on the ground, and the deeply-tanned face of Lord Kitchener, with eyes looking out at us from a well-modelled head, are admirably rendered.

It is hardly necessary to remind our readers that Messrs. Topping and Spindler, whose announcement will be found in our advertising columns, are the most extensive and oldest established firm of their kind in the world.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos
in Bond for Export.

NEW AND CHEAPER IMPRESSION.
2 vols. 8vo, 16s. net.

STONEWALL JACKSON AND THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR.

By Lieut.-Col. G. F. R. HENDERSON.

With an Introduction by Field-Marshal the Right Hon. Viscount WOLSELEY, K.P., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., &c.

With 2 Portraits and 33 Maps and Plans.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

*Twice Captured: A Record of Adventure during the Boer War. By the Earl of Rosslyn. Wm. Blackwood and Sons, Edinburgh and London.

ST. PAULI
(BREWERY: BREMEN)
LAGER OR PILSENER BEER.
SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER IN THE MARKET.
ANNUAL EXPORT, 12,000,000 BOTTLES.
Supplied to all the Principal LONDON Clubs,
The Messes of the British and German Navies, &c., &c.
AGENTS IN—

EUROPE:
ALDERSHOT.
ATHENS.
CHATHAM.
CONSTANTINOPLE.
GENOA.
GIBRALTAR.
LISBON.
MALTA.
NAPLES.
PORTSMOUTH.
PLYMOUTH.

ASIA:
ADEN.
BAGHDAD.
BANGKOK.
BOMBAY.
BUSHIRE.
CALCUTTA.
CEYLON.
HONG KONG.
KARACHI.
MADRAS.
MAURITIUS.
NOVA GOA.
PENANG.
RANGOON.
SHANGHAI.
SINGAPORE.
TEHERAN.

AFRICA:
ALEXANDRIA.
BEYROUTH.
BONNY.
CAIRO.
MASSOWAH.
MOMBASA.
SUAKIM.
SUZ.
PORT SAID.
TANGIERS.

AUSTRALIA:
ADELAIDE.
BRISBANE.
MELBOURNE.
PERTH.
SYDNEY.
NAPIER.

And all the Principal NAVAL and MILITARY Stations.

The ST. PAULI BREWERIES CO., Limited,
8, Great Winchester Street, London, E.C.

JEROME SACCONE,
LIMITED,
GIBRALTAR,
WINE, SPIRIT, & CIGAR
MERCHANTS
TO THE
ARMY & NAVY.
LONDON HOUSE:
15, COCKSPUR STREET.
Wine Shipped FREIGHT FREE to any port in the Mediterranean, and half-freight to India and the Cape.
Telegraphic Addresses:
"Saccone, Gibraltar." "Saccone, London."

THE SATURDAY REVIEW
OF
Politics, Literature, Science and Art.
(Established 1855.)
EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review
are treated only by Naval and Military men.
The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.
ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:
8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.
HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,
TWEWS,
TARTAN PANTALOONS.
11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING
MILK
AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.
A PERFECT
UNSWEETENED
CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.
AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK
Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTENS,
ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this
good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.
WHOLESALE DEPOT,
HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.
Apply for particulars, Samples, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,
144, New Bond Street,
LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.

H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOX
Appropriately arranged for everyday a a lasting memento.

PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

SHELTON & BALL,
Military and Court Tailors,
180, NE BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
(Opposite Burlington Gardens).

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).

THREE CHEERS FOR THE
RED
WHITE & BLUE
COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.

TRANSVAAL WAR.

DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT
THE FRONT A SUPPLY OF . . .

BRAND'S
BEEF TEA
TABULES.

To be had of ALL CHEMISTS, GROCERS, and
STORES. In boxes of 12, price 2s. 3d.

One tabule with boiling water makes a cup of savoury
and nutritious Beef Tea.

BRAND & Co., Ltd., Mayfair,
W.

... THE ...
Royal Navy List.
(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.
Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST
CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER
10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS
(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.
"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—Nautical Magazine.

Officers are earnestly requested to send
at once their special services to the Editor.
WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.
Advt. Dept.:—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)

THE
Burton Brewery
COMPANY, LIMITED,
BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.
BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.
Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO
Mr. E. RUDGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent,
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street,
Alexandria, Egypt.

NEW WORK BY FRANK T. BULLEN.
Now Ready. Large post 8vo, 7s. 6d.

The Men of
The Merchant Service:

Being the Polity of the Mercantile Marine for 'Long shore Readers.

By Frank T. Bullen,
Author of "The Cruise of the 'Cachalot,'"
"The Log of a Sea-Waif," &c.

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER & CO., 15, Waterloo
Place, S.W.

Notices.

THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

ALL EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.		TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year...	£1 8 0	One Year...	£1 13 6
Six Months ...	0 14 0	Six Months ...	0 16 3
Three Months ...	0 7 0	Three Months ...	0 8 3

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid
in advance.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
will be forwarded on application.
BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS—
Price 6s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.

ALL BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the
MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED FOR REVIEW.

The Waterloo Campaign, 1815; England, Egypt, and the Sudan (Constable). The Thin Red Line, by Major Griffiths (Macquenn). Soldiering in Canada, by Lieut-Col. Denison (Macmillan). The Forward Policy and its Results; Astral Gravitation in Natural Phenomena
(Longmans). The History of Corsica; The Shervintons
(Fisher Unwin). The Successors of Drake (Longmans).
The Adventures of a Journalist (Sands). The Imperial Reciter (Bousfield, Norfolk Street, W.C.). Gordon's Campaign in China (Chapman and Hall).

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1900.

NAVAL TRAINING.

THE subject of naval training—whether it shall be training under masts and sails, or whether training in steamships will suffice—is being agitated in other countries besides our own, and notably in France. Mr. Thursfield's lecture and the discussion that followed it, embodying as they did the views of the most competent authorities in this country, naturally attracted much attention abroad where the same conditions exist, and the same divergence of view is found. The school of tradition finds its supporters even among young officers, whose life at sea began when steam had already asserted supremacy, while the new school has stout and competent advocates among those who were nurtured under the old discipline of masts and sails. Opinion upon the subject varies in many quarters, and seems to lean now to one side and now to the other, but even in the mercantile marine, where practical considerations above all things predominate, it has been possible in some quarters to note a re-action towards the old school. At first sight it might certainly appear that since masts and sails belong to the past and have no place in modern warships, a judgment upon the subject should be easy, but the weighty opinions expressed by many prominent seamen in the highest ranks of their profession, show that the question is fraught with greater difficulties than might be supposed.

The advantages of both systems of training are treated judiciously in the last number of the Yacht, by M. Paul Amrel, a writer whose name is unknown to us, but perhaps, as is common in France, his signature may hide the personality of some well-known officer. In any case we may say that M. Amrel has studied his subject, and knows what he is writing about. He notes the influence of tradition as exercising a powerful sway, and shows that in every country the system of training under masts and sails has been retained, and he points to the Borda, the Bourgainville, the Iphigénie, the Melpomène, and the Bretagne as typical training ships employed in the French navy. He draws attention to the fact that the Russians have preserved masts in a number of their cruisers, not as a means of propulsion, but because they consider the exercises which are imposed, to be essential for the moral and physical education of the ships' crews. M. Amrel then shows how the same difficult question has affected the mercantile marine. The examination for the rank of "Capitaine au long-cours," as the French skipper is called, includes many subjects which are quite useless to the commander of a steamship. Inevitably the merchant officer navigating under steam forgets more and more the traditions of his life in sailing ships, and the men who serve under him resemble very little the seamen of the past. Nevertheless, there has been in France a reaction in the mercantile marine towards training under sails. The well-known steamship company of the Chargeurs Réunis decided to build a three-masted vessel for the training of its future officers, and, though the project fell through, this is understood to have been due to financial considerations. Perhaps it was that, after all, and seeing the outlay involved, the company thought the game not worth the candle. The project, however, was taken up afresh by an individual, and for a time the system was put in practice. Quite lately, the North German Lloyd announced that it was about to send out its young officers and men in a large sailing ship, in which they were to be trained in the delicate and complicated manoeuvres of the old navigation. M. Amrel believes that this kind of instruction has the best effect in developing the moral value and character of men, and says that all who remember the hard trials endured under sail, and the coolness, judgment, and experience required to make good the smallest mishap, especially in bad weather, will agree that only in such a school can a nautical education be completed. Therefore, he says, the seaman, be he officer or man, who is accustomed to the vicissitudes of life in a sailing ship, is a better seaman and knows his profession more thoroughly than he who has only navigated under steam.

But, after all, he says—and there is truth in the judgment—this is only half the question. Is it necessary to possess such a thorough knowledge of seamanship in this century of machinery? He does not believe it is. The man has now less need to be a seaman, and the officer tends to become an engineer, an astronomer, and a mechanic. In other words, the officers and men of modern ships are losing those original habits and that special disposition which formerly gave such a distinct character to the seamen. M. Amrel concludes that, if the true seaman can only be developed in a sailing ship, the navigation of the present day, which has become completely a science while ceasing to be an art, does not demand that full nautical knowledge which, if it was indispensable in former times, is no longer so in these days. It would be preferable, he says, when it can be accomplished, to send young seamen afloat in sailing ships, but this cannot be regarded as essential for the making of the man for present need.

TURBINES.

VERY interesting and instructive are the two letters which have appeared upon the above-named subject in The Times. In the first place Mr. Parsons has been inspired by certain notices of the trials of the Viper to write and explain why it is that, although that destroyer has successfully beaten the record for speed, the figures do not work out so well as regards coal consumption. He appears to deprecate comparison between the destroyers fitted with his turbine machinery, and those which are not so fitted, but which have proved themselves fairly fast boats and economical at moderate rates of speed. The Albatross was mentioned in this connection, a comparison being drawn between her performance at a speed of thirty-one knots, and that of the Viper. These two vessels have the same displacement, and it has been tacitly assumed that the horse-power necessary to drive the two vessels is the same, but this Mr. Parsons denies. He points out that in the case of the Viper all the under-water fittings have been designed to stand the highest speed of which the ship is capable. That is to say, 36·858 knots, and that as they are of considerably larger and heavier scantlings than is usual they offer in consequence increased resistance to their passage through the water. On the engineer's side of the question there is also something to be said. To give the Viper her five extra knots, and to usefully absorb the relatively enormous horse-power developed by her engines, her propellers have extra width of blade, and a much greater total blade area than that of the Albatross. This greater blade area is not only useless at lower speeds, but involves a positive waste of power at such speeds owing to the increased skin friction. Messrs. Thornycroft who built the Albatross, agree with Mr. Parsons that as the power developed by the turbine cannot be directly measured, it is difficult to compare the two systems upon a basis of coal burnt per indicated horse-power; but they contend that when a comparison is made between the actual distance which one ton of coal will carry the Albatross, fitted with reciprocating machinery, and the distance which the same quantity of coal will carry the Viper, fitted with turbine machinery, it is found that while one ton takes the Albatross 22·6 nautical miles at a speed of fifteen knots, it will only carry the Viper rather less than twelve.

The points to note in regard to this correspondence concern the advantages and disadvantages of extremely high speed in our destroyers. Mr. Parsons has been able, by means of his turbine machinery, to achieve wonderful success, attaining a speed practically five knots faster than the fastest boat previously tried. But to obtain this speed it has been necessary, as he admits, to fit the boat in such a manner that when running at moderate speed she is very much more costly for fuel than the relatively slower vessels. Moreover, it would also seem that the turbine-driven boat carries less coal on a given displacement than a boat fitted with machinery designed for a lower power. What we have to face then is that to obtain a spurt of extremely high speed on occasions, we are relinquishing two other qualities which, if not absolutely essential, are of great value. There can be no question that as our destroyers will more frequently run at cruising speed than at their fastest rates it is desirable that at that speed they shall be driven economically, and it is also a distinct loss to the fighting qualities of a destroyer if to obtain a speed which might be used only once in a commission we distinctly diminish her radius of action. It is, of course, possible that Mr. Parsons will be able to remove, at least in some measure these disabilities. But it is not so clear that the trials of the Cobra prove that he has accomplished something in this direction already. The questions raised have a bearing also upon the suggestion that the turbine principle should be used in still heavier ships. Complaints are already being made in connection with the cost of coal in vessels fitted with the Belleville boiler, and it is a serious matter if it should be shown that to attain a few knots extra speed at a pinch we must be ready to pay a high coal bill when cruising at moderate speed, and to relinquish at the same time, at least to some extent, the radius of action which has hitherto been considered necessary.

Navy Notes.

A correspondent writes:—There is no Act of Parliament for the formation of the Cabinet, neither does one exist for constituting the Board of Admiralty. Custom that has obtained continuously for an almost indefinite period has become law. The laws for the government of the Navy are imperative in the acceptance by officers of any appointment the Admiralty confer on them, and failure to comply with the Board's commands can be followed by summary discharge from the Service (Art. 100, Naval Discipline Act). It would be unconstitutional for an officer on the active list, who is liable to be sent at any moment on foreign service, to be appointed Ministerial Lord and rule over officers at the Board who were possibly his seniors in flag rank. And it is unlikely that officers of ability and experience would serve in such circumstances. Besides which, in the event of national emergency the services of a Ministerial Lord who was an able commander, might be demanded by the nation to ensure the success of its fleet. The Ministerial Lord of the Admiralty, though not a secretary of state, is a cabinet minister selected from the Privy Council, and must be a member of the legislature who has displayed both political and departmental ability. It would be out of place to make a naval officer Ministerial Lord simply because of his professional ability, as without knowledge of Parliamentary procedure he would most probably be of no use in the House. His career unfits him for political life; he would be at least fifty years of age on entering Parliament, and as great a novice to its methods as a newly-fledged member of twenty-five. A naval officer's term of office as Ministerial Lord would depend on the political life of his party. When a change of Ministry took place he would most certainly be relieved by a civilian, as it is not likely the nation would trouble to keep a stock of naval officers merely to fit in as First Lord of the Admiralty when a vacancy occurred. It has, in the past, been obvious to Prime Ministers that in forming their Cabinets the Navy was best served by a civilian as its chief with naval colleagues to advise him. This the nation has invariably endorsed, and the wish of the people is the law of our land. The late Admiral of the Fleet Sir Geoffrey Hornby supported it. The matter was well threshed out in the Hartington Committee, who considered that the Senior Naval Lord should be the right hand of his ministerial chief. How well that method answered has recently been displayed by the administration of Mr. Goschen, aided by Admiral of the Fleet Sir Fred. Richards. Had it ever been considered advisable that the Ministerial Lordship of the Admiralty should be exercised by flag officers of the active list the appointment would have been made, but it would have proved itself a venture not worthy of repetition.

At the present time, when so much is written about naval training, we may be pardoned for reverting to the Channel Squadron Regatta, and the lessons which it seems to us to teach. Altogether, it appears the boats of eleven ships competed, and the points won by each vessel, allowing three for the winner, two for the second boat, and one for the third, are as follows:—The Hannibal thirty points, this vessel scoring well in almost every class, her stokers and marines especially coming to the front. The Magnificent comes next with twenty-six points, and it is significant in the case of this vessel that, although four points behind the Hannibal, she carried off the same number of prizes. Next on the list are the Pactolus and the Jupiter, bracketed with twenty-four points each. This is most creditable to the little Pactolus, seeing that her ship's company must be less than 250 while the larger cruisers, like the Furious, carry at least double that number, and the battleships not less than 800 each. Here the question of training crops up, and it is to be remembered that the small ships can only compete in the events for the smaller boats. It looks as if great encouragement is given in this ship to rowing, and this is borne out by the circumstance that the same vessel also carried off the Officers' Challenge Cup, presented by Admiral Fellowes. Fifth on the list is Prince George, with sixteen points, this vessel having secured the first prize for pinnaces with racing crews and cutters manned by ordinary seamen, as well as scoring in the skiff race for officers, cutters with racing crews, whalers and gigs manned by E.R. artificers, cutters manned by stokers, and skiffs with racing crews. The flagship was sixth on the list, with fifteen points. Then the Repulse and Furious tied with thirteen points, and, finally, the Diadem had twelve, the Mars six, and the Resolution five.

It is evident from these figures that the small vessels are not necessarily handicapped, while it would seem very desirable that some further official notice should be taken of these events. Everybody admits the value of this kind of training, and most of our admirals lay great stress upon it, but it has not yet been raised even to the position attained by the evolution of coaling. It is a matter for consideration whether it may not be advisable on the part of the authorities to supplement the prizes given for boat sailing and boat pulling on different stations, and thus do something towards encouraging the practice. We have not a list of the prizes given in the Mediterranean, where we understand they rule the highest, but in these recent races the sums of money carried off by the various ships were as follows:—Hannibal, £25 19s.; Pactolus, £24 16s.; Jupiter, £21 9s.; Magnificent, £21; Furious, £17 4s.; Prince George, £17 2s.; Majestic, £16 10s.; Diadem, £14 8s.; Repulse, £11 10s.; Resolution, £8 10s.; Mars, £3 12s.; making a total of £182.

A correspondent writing from Peking on August 14 mentions that three 12prs. mounted on Captain Scott's carriages, and having painted on them "Ladysmith to Peking. Immediate" had arrived there, and at the time of writing were mounted on the wall of the Forbidden City to command the South-East Gate. The reason the 4in. guns did not get up seems to be that they were badly mounted, but he does not say from what ship they were sent. In its way, this is another tribute to Captain Scott's ingenuity, and we are not surprised to hear that when Parliament meets something further is to be said on the subject of the reward he has received for his services. Seeing that Colonel Watkins received £10,000 and a C.B. for a range-finder, the C.B. alone is very little for a man who enabled the heavy guns to be transported all over South Africa. But then we know by the cases of Admiral Scott, who also designed a gun carriage, and Admiral Colomb, who devised a system of signalling, as well as others that could be mentioned, that the Admiralty does not look at these matters in the same light in which they are regarded at the War Office.

According to a telegram from the correspondent of The Times at Ottawa, Rear Admiral Beaumont is to proceed to Australia to relieve Admiral Pearson, who was last reported on his way to Fremantle for the purpose of meeting the first Governor-General of the new Australian Commonwealth. This is the first intimation of any such change being in contemplation, and at present it does not appear to be known for certain whether the report is true or not. Like the rumours about the command in China, there must be at present a large element of gossip in all these stories. It is quite certain that neither Sir Compton Domville nor Sir Cyprian Bridge is going to China, and it is much more likely that Sir Edward Seymour will be granted another year in command of the station than that he should be relieved by Sir Harry Rawson. It is entirely according to precedent that the admiral on a foreign station should be left there to conduct to an end operations of such a nature as those which are now occurring in the China seas. In addition to this, Sir Edward Seymour certainly deserves some kind of recognition of the services which he has rendered to the State on this occasion, and to keep him in the appointment for another year would be looked upon as part of such a reward.

The Daily Mail yesterday found fault with the transport department of the Admiralty for having sent back some of the Colonial soldiers as steerage passengers. We are second to none in our appreciation of the gallantry and patriotism of the Colonials, but it seems to us that in this matter it is essential to look at the facts from the broadest point of view. Are we going to deal with Australian and Canadian troopers in a different way to that in which we have been in the habit of treating our blue-jackets and soldiers? To complain of the Admiralty officials because they have followed the rule is absolutely ridiculous. At the present moment we hear on all sides that when our soldiers and sailors come home from South Africa they will come home thoroughly discontented, because they have learnt that their Colonial brethren are being paid for similar services to those they themselves render at rates six times and seven times as high as they themselves get. If the Daily Mail is consistent it will demand not only that the Colonials shall have second-class passages instead of going in the steerage, but that our blue-jackets and soldiers and marines should be treated in a similar manner. Indeed, it must go further, and point out the incongruity of paying one of General Baden-Powell's troopers a higher rate of pay than is given to the officer of the watch on board a man-of-war, entrusted at times with upwards of a million of pounds' worth of public property.

When the question of rewards for services rendered in connection with the South African War comes up for consideration the work of the Transport Department will doubtless receive due recognition. The magnitude of the task, and the success with which the difficulties were met, has excited the admiration of the country, and the naval authorities have, we believe, expressed their approbation of the manner in which the duties of the Transport officers were performed. Credit is due to all concerned, from Admiral Clark and Captain Pitt downwards, but we may perhaps make special mention of Captain Tyrwhitt and Captain Coke, who are divisional officers at Liverpool; Captain Bradford, who succeeded the latter officer at the Royal Albert Docks; and Captain White, who filled a similar position at Southampton. Upon Captain Sir Edward Chichester also, who was head of the Transport service in South Africa, a large share of the responsibility devolved. Nor must it be forgotten that a number of officers from the retired list, like Captain Elliott and Commander Bernard, were specially employed on this work. We trust that the Admiralty will see fit to supplement the return which has been already published, and which covers a period from July 1, 1899, to the end of last March, and in the next to supply the names of the Transport officers which are not given in the "Navy List." It is only just that they should be connected officially in such a document with an achievement without parallel in the annals of the world.

To-morrow is the anniversary of the death of Nelson, and the Navy League have, in accordance with their recent custom, decorated the column in Trafalgar Square. This year the scheme of ornamentation is not nearly so elaborate as it has been on previous occasions, but although there is no band of evergreen encircling the column, there is no lack of wreaths and flowers and other emblems around the plinth and base. We understand that on this occasion hardly a branch of the League, numerous as these are, but will be represented by some floral token in memory of the great admiral, and as a reminder to the nation of the value of its Se Service.

It is announced that next year we are not to have one Naval and Military Exhibition but two. Arrangements it seems have been in progress for some months past for holding one of these exhibitions at Earl's Court and a preliminary committee of distinguished soldiers and sailors has already been formed. The other exhibition is to be held at the Crystal Palace, and we are told it is to be on a very large scale and in connection with a scheme whereby the leading charitable institutions of the two Services will substantially benefit. In connection with this show we understand that one of the best known of the charitable organisations working for the war funds will undertake the distribution of a certain share of any profit that may accrue.

If the accounts we have received from the Continent are to be believed, we are coming a little bit nearer towards the navigability of air-ships. The vessel which Count Zeppelin has built made an ascent on Wednesday which appears to have demonstrated that she can be steered on a given course without difficulty. Since the last experiment several changes have been made in the mechanism and a good many additional fittings have been adopted. The signalling, and communicating arrangements generally, including the telegraph and telephone, are, it is said, of the latest kind, and entirely answer their purpose, although one of the characteristic features of the machine is the loud noise made by the air passing through it. The trial appears to have been made under favourable circumstances, inasmuch as there was no strong wind at the time. But it is something even in a calm to have lifted the machine, to have directed her course, and to have managed her descent without the slightest hitch, and this is what is claimed.

A MEDAL FOR COOMASSIE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."
SIR,—As I see by the Press that the War Office intend to grant a medal for the late operations resulting in the relief of Coomassie, the present time may be opportune to remind them of an injustice under which the "Handy Man" suffers. In the last expedition to Coomassie, viz. 1895-1896, a few officers and men were landed from the West African Squadron, but for some unknown reason have never received the star which was given by her Majesty ostensibly for all who took part in the operations. Surely her Majesty never intended that the "Handy Man" should be denied the same reward as Tommy Atkins? It may be news to your readers to know that such is the case, and will, I hope, show them how the "Handy Man" is rewarded for services rendered to the Empire. That the authorities will remedy this injustice is the hope of one who likes FAIRPLAY.

Navv Personal.

The Prince of Wales has graciously accepted the presidency of the Royal Naval School, Eltham, in place of the late Admiral of the Fleet H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. His Highness has for many years been a patron of this institution.

The Duke of York has been pleased to become president of the Royal School for Naval and Marine Officers' Daughters, vacant by the death of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

Admirals of the Fleet the Earls of Clanwilliam and Sir J. Edmund Commerell, V.C., had the honour of dining with Her Majesty at Balmoral on Friday in last week. Sir Edmund also had the honour of obeying a command to the Royal table on Monday last.

Admiral Sir Charles Hotham, Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, had the honour of entertaining the Prince of Wales at luncheon at Admiralty House on Monday last. His Royal Highness subsequently visited the new Royal yacht accompanied by Admiral Sir Charles Hotham, Vice-Admiral Sir John Fullerton, commanding the Victoria and Albert, and Rear-Admirals Arthur Wilson, V.C., Controller of the Navy, and Pelham Aldrich, Admiral Superintendent of Portsmouth Dockyard.

The late Admiral Sir Henry Fairfax's estate of Ravenswood, Roxburgh, was sold in London on Tuesday last for £41,000.

Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Bedford, Commander-in-Chief of the North America and West India Station, leaves Halifax, N.S., on the 6th prox. for Bermuda, in commencement of his annual visit to the southern portion of his command.

Rear-Admiral Thomas Jackson, Admiral Superintendent at Devonport, and senior officer, pro tem., accompanied by staff officers of the Gunnery School and officers of the Civil Engineers' Department, examined the site, on Friday in last week, at Trevol, Torpoint, on which the barracks and other requirements for the Western Gunnery Establishment are to be erected. Rear-Admiral Jackson's ability and experience as a gunnery officer are of considerable advantage in this important work, the commencement of which is most necessary in the present unserviceable condition of the Cambridge.

Rear-Admiral W. Dyke-Acland, who was Captain of the Dockyard Reserve, Devonport, 1897-99, succeeds to a baronetcy by the death of his father. The gallant officer, it will be remembered, was injured by a horse at his Devon residence in the summer, and though recovering therefrom was unable to leave for Oxford to attend the late baronet during his illness.

Rear-Admiral Sir Gerard Noel, Admiral Superintendent of Naval Reserves, takes the place of the late Captain the Hon. Maurice Bourke on the Council of the Royal United Service Institution. Sir Gerard Noel in 1875 won the gold medal for his essay "The Gun, the Ram, and the Torpedo."

Rear-Admiral the Hon. T. Seymour Brand was unsuccessful in contesting the parliamentary election for Eastbourne on Monday last. Certain reflections on his competency as a naval officer in connection with the grounding of the Swiftsure, while under his command, in the Magellan Straits in 1884, were circulated among the constituents and attributed to his political opponent. The latter publicly denied the authorship of such reports, and congratulated the gallant officer on being exonerated from blame after the matter had stood the test of official inquiry. Naval discipline is too severe to admit of officers who display negligence in navigating H.M. ships escaping punishment, it was therefore somewhat unfair to rake up the dried bones of past misadventure, more than a decade after its occurrence, solely for electioneering purposes.

Commodore Alfred Winsloe, commanding the Training Squadron, left Portsmouth in the St. George on Monday last, accompanied by the Juno, and called at Plymouth the following day, leaving that port in the evening for Gibraltar and the Mediterranean, from which he will probably return home early in the spring of next year.

Captain Frederick Pike, of the Gladiator, left Portsmouth on Thursday last for the Mediterranean, to replace the Isis, now in China.

Captain Frederick S. Inglefield of the Devastation, has been ordered home to commission the Glory in December next, and take her to China to relieve the Centurion, returning home in command of the latter battleship.

Captain Arthur Horsley pays off the Europa, on Tuesday next after her troublesome voyage to Australia and back, and has the good fortune to obtain the command of the Magnificent the following day, in place of Captain John Ferris, who is transferred to the Empress of India.

Captain Randolph Foote has joined the Ordnance Committee in place of Captain Henry D. Barry, recently appointed to the Mars.

Captain Frank Henderson, of the Hermes, at Bermuda, will shortly return home with that cruiser in consequence of the defective state of her machinery.

Captain William Fisher, of the Magicienne, senior officer at Delagoa Bay, and the officers serving under his command, were, by the courtesy of the Governor of the Portuguese settlement at Lorenzo Marques, afforded an opportunity of visiting Komati Poort last week.

Captain Herbert J. Crocker, seconded last week in order that he may study Chinese, is the first officer connected with the Naval Service who has been officially allowed to devote himself to learn the language of the Celestial Empire. Captain Ernest Rason, now retired, was the first, and for some time the only naval officer who qualified in Russian, and at the present there are four interpreters of that language. We therefore hope that now Captain Crocker has set the example other officers, both Naval and Marine, will study the Chinese language.

Commander Arthur W. Torlesse, after serving barely nine months as Assistant to the Staff-Captain at Devonport Yard, now leaves that post for the Coastguard at Queenstown, and is replaced at the western post by Captain Henry R. Robinson, who is only one year junior to his departmental chief. Captain Robinson and Commander Torlesse both joined the Service on the same day, and although the latter became lieutenant four years and commander one year before his brother officer, he has been less fortunate in obtaining another step in rank, the accession to which by Captain Robinson gives him eleven years' further service, while Commander Torlesse probably retires six years hence.

Commander Arthur W. Ewart, of the Naval Intelligence Department, takes the place of Captain Hugh Williams as Naval Attaché at Paris. Commander Reginald Allenby, who has been an additional member of the Intelligence Department since September last, now becomes one of the staff.

Commander Henry R. P. Floyd, of the Fearless, left Malta on Saturday last for Devonport to pay-off that vessel, she having been three years in commission with her present crew. She was originally commissioned in 1888 at Portsmouth, and has served continuously in the Mediterranean, barring the period she has recently been attached to the squadron in South Africa.

Commander Clifton Sclater commissions the Condor, successor to Lord Charles Beresford's famous sloop at Alexandria, on the 1st prox., at Chatham, to relieve the Pheasant on the Pacific Station. The latter gunboat was commissioned in 1888 for the West Coast of Africa and transferred to her present station in 1890, and since then has remained abroad. Her successor is a larger and more effective vessel.

Commander Henry J. D. Laxton, of the Nymph, arrived at Pernambuco from Portsmouth on Saturday last, and left on Tuesday for Rio de Janeiro to join the broad pennant of Commodore Robert Groome.

Lieut. George F. E. Nugent, invalided from the Thetis, arrived at Southampton on Tuesday last in the Union Castle steamship Trojan from St. Helena.

Inspector of Machinery George A. Haddy, recently promoted from Gibraltar Yard, arrived home on Friday in last week by the Orient steamship Ortona to join the Diadem for special duty with the Channel Squadron.

Surgeon Arthur Bankart, of the Royal Yacht Osborne, arrived at Balmoral on Friday in last week, and had the honour of dining with Her Majesty on Sunday last.

Lieut.-Commander Godfrey Corbett, Sub-Lieuts. Anthony MacDermott and William H. Phillips, Surgeon Herbert Pearse, and Assistant-Engineer F. J. Simmons left Plymouth on Saturday last in the Orient steamship Ormuz for Australia, to commission the Karrakatta at Sydney, N.S.W. Lieut. Charles Pickering, R.N.R., also took passage in the same vessel to join the Tauranga.

Sir A. John Durston's rank as Engineer-in-Chief of the Fleet, gives him precedence of all non-combatant officers, according to the table of relative rank at page 659 of the "Quarterly Navy List."

ROYAL MARINES.

Major Charles G. Matson retires voluntarily, with a gratuity, having less than twenty-three years' service.

Lieuts. Basil A. Hill, Frederick J. Tanqueray-Williams, George C. Woodcock, and Arthur F. Valkeld, R.M.A., have qualified in subjects A and B for promotion.

Lieut. Archibald M. Gillies has been transferred to the unattached list of the Indian Staff Corps.

ESTABLISHED 1789.

ROBERT LEWIS, 20, ST. JAMES' ST., LONDON, S.W.

CIGARS.

The Finest Selection of all the Leading Havana Brands.
Sole Agents for the Hoffman House Cigars.

CIGARETTES.

GOLD TIPPED, BALKAN SOBRANIE, and YENIDJE NARGHILE BRANDS.

TOBACCO.

WINGFIELD LAWN TENNIS, GUARDS, and SANDRINGHAM MIXTURES.

Telegrams: "Intimidad, London."

20, ST. JAMES' STREET, LONDON, S.W.

Telephone No. 3787, Gerrard.

Navy Foreign.

The French Northern Squadron has been re-constituted in the light of arrangements lately made. The first division (Vice-Admiral Ménard) consists of the Masséna, Carnot, and Amiral Baudin; the second (Rear-Admiral Touchard) of the Formidable and the Amiral Duperré; and the third (Rear-Admiral Mallarmé) of the Bouvincs, Jemmapes, Valmy, and Tréhouart. The light squadron under command of Captain Bellue consists of two divisions, the first formed of the Dupuy de Lôme and the Bruix; the second of the Infernet, D'Assas, La Hire, and Cassini. There are two repeating ships for signalling, the Fleurus and the Cassini, and three destroyers, the Yatagan, Durandal, and Fauconneau are attached. The squadron is likely to undergo a further modification soon, owing to the intended despatch of a coast-defence division to Biserta, and the Hoche is to relieve the Duperré, which is to have new boilers and a change in her armament.

A committee has been appointed to revise the French naval signal book, as well as the system of tactics for light squadrons. A similar revision was made in 1891 by a committee under the presidency of Admiral Charles Duperré. The present revision is due to the fact that when the squadrons met for manoeuvres in the summer some discrepancies were found in their practice. Changes had been introduced in the Mediterranean Squadron by Vice-Admiral Fournier which had not made their way into the tactics of the Northern Squadron. We believe we shall be right in saying that Admiral Fournier's system somewhat closely resembles that employed by the late Sir George Tryon, known as the "T. A. System." The new committee has Vice-Admiral Gervais for its president and the members are Vice-Admiral Fournier, Rear-Admirals Roustan and Touchard, and Captains Jauréguiberry, Puech, and Manceron, and Commander Perrin is the secretary.

A special arrangement has been made by the French Minister of Marine to give a character of greater permanency to the squadrons. A certain number of battleships and cruisers in the second category of the reserve are to be indicated to relieve other ships in the squadrons, and are always to be fitted in a special manner for commission at immediate notice, the officers in command of the squadron arranging with the naval prefects the details of these substitutions. Upon commissioning, the ships in question will complete their complement of officers and men by borrowing them from the ships they are to replace, which will in turn be transferred to the reserve. The relief ships in the Mediterranean are at present only the Brennus and Lavoisier, and in the Channel the Courbet and Surcouf, but the Minister intends to increase the number as soon as possible.

It is announced from Odessa that the construction of one cruiser and four torpedo boats will immediately be undertaken at Nikolaieff for the augmentation of the Black Sea Squadron. The Prinze Potemkine Tavriskivsky is making rapid progress afloat.

Some of the French wounded have arrived home from China, including a seaman of the Pascal, who had been shot through the eye, the bullet issuing at the ear, and several men who belonged to the Cochinchina regiment, formed of the Tonkinese and Chinese battalion. The wounded say that of the 600 men who composed that regiment scarcely a hundred remain. It left Saigon of June 18, reached Taku on the 30th, and saw a good deal of fighting at Tien-tsin, being employed up to July 16. The men who have reached Marseilles report that the Chinese fight with great courage and would be extremely dangerous if better commanded. They state also that on July 13, when the attack on the native city of Tien-tsin was made, 750 wounded were conveyed to the European hospital, while thirty-two Frenchmen were despatched to Hiroshima, where they were well cared for. The Empress of Japan visited the hospital where they were, with some ladies of the Court, and made them many presents. They all express a high opinion of the Japanese. A considerable number of promotions have been made among men of the lower deck belonging to the D'Entrecasteaux and the Descartes for service in China. A témoignage officiel de satisfaction has been awarded to Colonel de Pelacot for the intelligence and zeal which he showed in the fighting on July 11, 13, and 14 at Tien-tsin, and also to two seamen who were with the Legation Guard in Peking.

The German third-class cruiser Amazone, which was lately launched at Kiel in the presence of Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia—the Prince having now been appointed to succeed Admiral Hoffmann in the command of the squadron—is one of four vessels of 2,600 tons which are in hand at Danzig, Bremen, and the Germania Yard, Kiel. The new vessel displaces 2,600 tons, and is 328ft. long, with 38ft. 6in. beam, and 15ft. draught. For protection she has a 2in. steel deck, and she will carry ten 4-in. and fourteen 1.4in. quickfiring, and four machine guns, besides having two submerged torpedo tubes. The engines are of 8,000 horse power, supplied by Schulz water-tube boilers, and are intended for a speed of twenty knots. The ship's complement will be 210 men.

The United States Naval Department has asked for tenders for the building of six armoured cruisers authorised by Congress, of which three will be sheathed and coppered. The proposed length of the unsheathed vessels is 502ft.; beam, 59ft. 6ins.; extreme draught, 26ft. 6ins.; displacement, 13,400 tons. The armament will comprise four 8-in. guns in two electrically controlled turrets with an arc of fire of 270 degrees, fourteen 6-in. quickfiring, of which four are at the corners of the superstructure in sponsons, and ten in the battery; eighteen 3-in., twelve 3-prs., eight 1-prs. (four being automatic), two 3-in. field guns, two machine guns, and six other small pieces. Protection will be given by 1,976 tons of armour and 100 tons of cellulose, the main belt being 244ft. long, 5 to 6in. thick, and 7ft. 6ins. deep, and lighter armour will be above. The casement protection will be 4ins., the sponsons 6ins. and the turrets 6ins., and the deck 1½ to 4ins. The cellulose will be worked along the sides above the steel deck. There will be a signalling turret with 5-in. armour. The two engines will develop together 23,000 indicated h.p., and the speed is not to be less than 22 knots. The sheathed vessels will differ only in the dimensions due to the sheathing. All the cruisers are to be fitted to serve as flagships.

A FRENCH MARINE AT TIEN-TSIN.

The Patrie publishes the following extracts from the letter of a French Marine who took part in the fighting at Tien-tsin in the middle of July:—

"Having left Hanoi on June 25, we arrived at Taku on July 7, and disembarked the next day. We expected a little rest after the fatigue of the voyage, for we had had three days of very bad weather at sea; but, alas! hardly had we disembarked ourselves than we were set to work to disembark the matériel. At midday we started in heavy marching order, carrying also two day provisions, for Tien-tsin, which was besieged by the Chinese, and where the Europeans were in need of reinforcements. We went about 21 miles by rail, and then 13 miles on foot, for the railway for that distance was completely demolished. Add to this that we had fasted for nearly 20 hours and you will understand that we were at the war. We arrived at Tien-tsin at 11 a.m. on July 9. The shells were falling thick on the town, and we were careful to creep along close to the houses in order to avoid meeting one of these disagreeable explosives. At last we reached our quarters, which were very badly situated, and served as an excellent target for the Chinese. Fortunately these fellows did not shoot straight. Later we occupied the line of trenches which protected the railway station, and formed the principal defence of the town. It was therefore the centre of the Chinese attack. We numbered 100 Marsouins of my company. On our left were about 150 Japs; and on our right about 100 English, 40 or so Americans, and about a mile and a-half away a good number of Russians. Save a few shots which were fired at us whenever we showed ourselves, and which passed away above our heads, all was calm. We even took a little repose, sleeping, however, always with one eye open. At 3 a.m. we were aroused by a heavy fusillade. It was the Chinese who had got within 60 yards of us. By the feeble light we could see that they were six deep, and we knew afterwards that they numbered 3,000 to 4,000. Without losing our heads, we opened a sustained fire on them, which caused them to withdraw to about 160 yards, where they entrenched themselves and recommenced firing. They fired anyhow, and so, luckily, many of their shots went astray. Up to that moment we had only two killed. At 6 a.m. the Japs, those good and brave little soldiers, charged with the bayonet and drove the Chinese out of the trenches. We took advantage of this to stand up out of our trenches and to fire well-sustained volleys on the Chinese, who fled in all directions away from us. But just then our position was again rendered critical, for the Chinese artillery opened a heavy shrapnel fire on our trenches and killed seven comrades. Here I must tell you by what a miracle I am still alive. We were back in the trenches when a wounded Jap came to take shelter also. His arm was broken, and some of our comrades bandaged the wound and asked for water for the poor little fellow to drink. I was the only one who had any left, and to avoid being seen by the enemy I crawled towards the wounded man on all fours in order to give it to him. I was within three yards of him when a shell fell on him and crushed him, and at the same time killed six of our men. The concussion was so strong that it knocked me flat down. I got to my feet in a cloud of dust and rushed back to the trenches. The comrades asked me if I was hurt. I said 'No,' but I felt a pain in the calf of my right leg. I examined the place and found a slight graze and a small bruise, caused by a piece of shell. It is nothing serious, and even if it were it would be all 'pour la France.'

THE CHINA CRISIS.

Monday, Oct. 15.

A telegram from Tien-tsin states that Field-Marshal Count von Waldersee inspected the British Pao-ting-fu column last Thursday, and complimented the commander on the splendid appearance of the troops. The force, which consists of three columns, left Tien-tsin for Pao-ting-fu, on Friday. It is made up as follows:—British, 1,300, including 150 Victorians, under Gen. Campbell; Germans and Italians, 2,000, under Gen. von Ketteler; and French, 1,500, under Gen. Bailloud, who is in charge of the whole force. Simultaneously three columns will start from Peking. They consist of 2,000 British, 2,200 Germans and Italians, and 1,600 French.

Sir Ernest Satow arrived at Tien-tsin on Saturday. The 4th Brigade has arrived at Taku.

The recent order warning British infantry and artillery for service in China has been withdrawn. This disposes of the Hong Kong report that 10,000 more troops were being sent.

Tuesday, Oct. 16.

A column was despatched from Hong Kong on Monday to the Kaulung frontier. It consisted of 300 men of the 22nd Bombay Infantry and 60 men of the Asiatic Artillery, with one Maxim and two 7 prs. Its object is to prevent armed refugees, whether rebels or Imperialists, from invading British territory after the defeat of either party. The rebels, who are reported to be 3,000 strong, are some 30 miles to the north of the British frontier. One thousand of Admiral Ho's troops are marching in pursuit of them. He has asked for 2,000 reinforcements from Canton, and it is reported that a force of this strength is marching from Canton overland to intercept the rebels. He has informed the Governor of Hong Kong that the rebellion has evidently been carefully planned, and that the absence of outrage and pillage is the result of deliberate design, the rebels being anxious to conciliate the villagers and show their respect for the foreigners.

Wednesday, Oct. 17.

Pao-ting-fu is reported to have been captured on the 13th inst. by the allied English, German, French, and Italian troops.

Sir Ernest Satow, British Minister to China, started for Peking on Monday. M. de Giers, the Russian Minister, will probably soon return.

Thursday, Oct. 18.

A courier reports that a column of 500 French is en route for Hsien-hsien to relieve a party of French priests there. It met with no opposition during its six days' march to the south. The British 4th Brigade is arriving. The Americans have evacuated the arsenal at Tien-tsin, and have handed it over to the Provisional City Government.

Friday, Oct. 19.

It is reported from Canton that the rebels, under Sun-yat-sen, have captured the prefectural city of Mu-Chau, on the East River. The city was taken on Monday. The Cantonese say that if Nui-Chau, which resisted the Tai-Pings, falls, the rebels will take Canton within a week. Admiral Ho, with the bulk of his forces, left Sam-Chun this morning, in pursuit of the rebels. He left 250 troops to protect Sam-Chun, and sent 200 to garrison the Mandarin station of Nao-Tau, on the western arm of Deep Bay.

The Russians have captured Mukden, and Col. Dumbrowski has been appointed commandant of the town.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each, or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Bewley & Co., Importers, 49, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacconists.

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES IN THE ARMY.

The suggestion to import "business principles" into the methods of our Army sounds workmanlike, and is sure to attract the attention of the many who are at all times ready to repeat a parrot cry, but we venture to suggest that in practice the matter may not prove quite as simple as it sounds. The essence of all good business administration consists in being able to ascertain by a glance at the books whether the works are being run at a profit, and if not, what man, tool, or other machine is failing to pay for his up-keep. The matter, as a rule, is simple. If on a railway, for instance, a new driver fails to keep time with the same locomotive and load behind it over a given stretch of the metals or burns an extravagant amount of coal in doing its work, the fault is at once detected and inquiry can be instantly made with a view to punishing the delinquent, and the same holds good in any other department of civil business, for the routine of work is normally the same and its cost can be stated with accuracy in terms of £ s. d. But the Army is only at active work once in a term of many years, and then the nature of that work is so entirely different from its everyday peace time occupation, that no man yet, however war-experienced himself, can rely absolutely on his judgment as to how the men under him, fresh to the business, will behave under fire, and feel certain that everyone will have all his wits about him at the critical time. To meet this difficulty every civilised army endeavours to conduct the training of its men under conditions which shall approximate as closely as possible to those of actual warfare—and they succeed in exact proportion as they are more or less free from press or Parliamentary criticism—but when every expedient the ingenuity of man can devise has been put in practice, the gulf which remains between the real and the sham is still too great to be certainly bridged over. This is far more the case amongst the officers than with the men. Up to a certain rank, fighting involves very little thinking; obedience and self-control will generally suffice, but with the officers not only is accurate concentrated thought a necessity under conditions which render thought almost impossible, but the leading of troops further requires a certain intuitive gift of mind-reading which can only be exercised when the bullets are flying, and can never be learnt from book-reading. The point is generally ignored entirely by civilian critics, and very rarely touched on by military writers, chiefly because in the present state of our knowledge of the action of one brain on another at a distance, accurate accepted terms do not exist with which to convey a clear meaning to the reader.

The essential point in an officer's duty in the field lies in his maintaining control over the men under him as long as possible. As man after man falls he must watch, or rather feel, the variation in the collective will power of his command, and meet it by word, by example, or by both, before the critical moment is reached. That is the meaning of the practice, common in all armies, for officers to walk and ride down in front of their men at psychologically critical moments. They do not do it because they like it, but because the instinct of the leader teaches them it is the right thing to do. Higher in the scale, the task becomes much more intricate. The essence of success in battle, ever since firearms became the decisive element, has been the art of economising troops as a whole, a totally different conception to the idea of diminishing losses locally, a method which generally leads to greater collective slaughter and indecisive results.

To exercise this economy, troops once committed to the fighting line must remain there as long as any useful effect is to be derived from their fire, i.e., until control is slipping from the hands of the leader on the spot. At that instant, but not before, support must reach him, and this is the task in turn of every leader behind the fighting line up to the general in command who holds the last reserve. The solution of this problem is not to be learnt from books, or on the manoeuvre ground; it implies not only feeling the pulse of one's own command, but actually realising the condition of the line in front and the rate at which its endurance is deteriorating. To be too soon is almost as grave an error as to come too late, for losses increase rapidly with the density of the fighting line, and their effect rises in a far higher ratio than the mere numbers indicate. The whole line may collapse of a sudden, where by more gradual reinforcement its resistance might have been prolonged indefinitely. The deepest military thinkers in Germany, who studied Napoleon under the pressure engendered by their national humiliations, long since realised that it was precisely in this indefinable talent which finds expression in the economy of troops and his use of the reserves he was thus always able to maintain under his hand, that his genius revealed itself. Others have equalled and even excelled his strategy, and his knowledge of book tactics was most indifferent, but in this one intuitive gift he was supreme.

The germ of this power exists in a dormant degree, more or less capable of developing in suitable surroundings, in most men who voluntarily embrace the career of arms and often reaches greater proportions in men who are almost abnormally dull intellectually. It seems as if nothing but the pressure of responsibility under circumstances of imminent personal danger could make them wake up and act, but correctly-timed action in such a moment may outweigh many drill-book mistakes which would wreck a man's career on the manoeuvre ground. And it is the knowledge of this latent possibility in all men which renders war-seasoned soldiers so singularly lenient, apparently, to the mistakes public opinion in the press is so apt to gibbet. It is not suggested that examples are not made of men who blunder in manoeuvres, far from it indeed; every year several disappear whose inaptitude has become too glaring; but the rule is a fair one based on long experience, to give a man a long and fair trial. Even if this supreme quality is left out of account, it is not so easy to form a just opinion of a man's capacity as it appears to our public instructors. To appreciate a situation correctly even when no bullets are flying requires a far wider knowledge of warfare than our amateur critics usually possess. Whether, to launch an assault against a formidable position is the act of a lunatic or of a genius, does not depend on the nature of the position, or even on the numbers of its defenders, but entirely on the assumed condition of their nerves at the moment the decision is formed. In the absence of bullets an assumption must be made or all action would become impossible, hence the competent critic never condemns an attack, because it is an attack, but limits himself to the force in which it is executed, which, again, is largely influenced by the underlying assumption on which the leader is working, a point on which the unofficial critic is always in the dark.

There remains still the difficulty of ensuring that the umpires should apply some uniform standard to each individual's work, and in the present state of tactical knowledge this is insuperable. In every country there are at least two diametrically opposite schools, to say nothing of minor sub-divisions of the two chief schools, just as in every country there are Conservatives and Radicals—for precisely the same reason—and the consequences to the officer under inspection are obvious. Work that one inspector would unhesitatingly approve, another would as certainly condemn. Under these circumstances we suggest that the man who can solve the many and intricate problems involved, and express them in the terms of profit and loss usual in a balance sheet, will need a collection of intellectual gifts which would be both rare and remarkable. At present we see no indication of his early arrival.

OFFICERS' EXPENSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I see that a committee has been assembled at the War Office to consider the question of the regimental expenses of officers—band, mess, &c. It seems to me that their expenses could be considerably lightened by means of a Government allowance. There are many burdens now borne by officers which, as a matter of fact, ought to be borne by the taxpayer, whose interests the officer frequently lays down his life to protect. It is all well and good for well-meaning Members of Parliament to say, as they sometimes do, that expenses are too heavy. Everyone knows that. The remedy to my mind is not difficult to find, and it rests with the House of Commons to supply it, as it could if it approached the matter on anything like common-sense lines. Why should not officers' quarters be partly furnished—not with table and chairs only, but with comfortable bed, chest of drawers, washstand, bookcase, &c., and why should not a proper mess kit be supplied for each unit maintaining such establishment. The regulation great coat, the sword-belts, haversack, leggings, forming part of an officer's kit, might surely be supplied from Pimlico. Then again, Pimlico might reasonably be called upon to provide a cheap livery for mess waiters and a suit of plain clothes for servants. These are details in which the War Office might assist. The saving might not be great, but to the young officer of slender means, and to those living on their pay only, the saving would be matter for consideration.

A SOLDIER PARENT.

OFFICERS on leave from India serving with the field force in South Africa will be required to return to India when no longer required by the military authorities at the Cape. Fresh leave to England will be granted to those medically unfit. Such sick leave will be given to them, however, only when it is absolutely necessary, and not with a view to its covering any balance of leave.

THE design of the medal for the South African War has now been finally approved. It bears on one side the head of the Queen in rather high relief; on the reverse is a figure of Britannia holding out a wreath towards soldiers who are pressing forward, whilst two warships are moored in the bay, hard by. The work is most artistic. The ribbon is a mixture of orange (the South African colour) and red with an outside line of deep blue. It is exceedingly ugly.

THE Gentlemen Cadets appointed to commissions on the unattached list from the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, with a view to appointments to the Indian Staff Corps, are to be posted thus:—To the Punjab command:—R. O. Duff, G. D. S. Le Mesurier, J. H. Wilson, D. H. Vanrenen, R. M. Bund, C. H. Tyrrell, T. B. Traill, R. A. H. Robertson, G. L. Blair, A. M. Brown, J. F. C. Carter, R. W. MacDonald, and C. W. J. Smith. To the Bengal command:—G. C. C. Clarke, D. M. Field, L. G. Crothwait, G. F. W. Anson, A. Latham, R. S. Cooke, and B. Turnbull. To the Madras command:—G. D. Ogilvie, V. V. Staniford, C. R. Gannon, C. C. Cunningham, F. M. Bailey, A. L. Welford, F. T. P. Edden, M. H. L. Morgan, G. Pearce, W. A. Garstin, J. H. Carruthers, M. S. Hewett, A. K. Norris, F. F. Hodgson, C. E. Hunt, S. Phillips, G. Airy, A. F. Harper, D. M. Patrickson, W. Marshall, W. R. B. Stacey, C. P. Graham, A. D. Reid, and A. C. L. Wood. To the Bombay command:—G. B. A. Rind, V. Coates, H. J. Goad, N. W. White, P. Ashfield, and J. C. Hathornthwaite.

ELKINGTON & Co., Ltd.

Goldsmiths, Silversmiths, and Court Jewellers.

THE ORIGINATORS AND PATENTEES OF ELECTRO PLATE.

CANTEENS containing ELKINGTON'S Celebrated Spoons and Forks and Patent Secure Handle Table Cutlery.

Samples and Estimates Post Free on Application.

ELKINGTON & CO., LD., are Actual Manufacturers with the largest number of Registered Designs in the World.

22, Regent Street, S.W.; and 73, Cheapside E.C., London.

9, Parker Street, Liverpool; St. Anns Square, Manchester;
22, Blackett Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne; St. Vincent Street, Glasgow.
Manufactory: Newhall Street, Birmingham.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

1st L. Gds.—1936 Collett, accidentally injured, Pretoria, Oct. 14.

7th D. G.—3623 Cpl. Driscoll, wounded, Middelburg, Oct. 15.

4th Hussars.—2944 Lowman, wounded, Middelburg, Oct. 15.

6th Dragoons.—3033 Gledhill, wounded, Middelburg, Oct. 15.

8th Hussars.—Lt. Wylam and 6 men, killed; Lt. Jones* Maj. Duff, and 9 men, wounded; 1 missing (? names), Carolina, Oct. 13.

10th Hussars.—3368 Burnell, missing, en route between Pretoria and Rustenberg, Sept. 29.

14th Hussars.—2 men killed, 7 men wounded (? names), Carolina, Oct. 14. CORRECTION: 3666 Beauchamp, reported missing, is now at convalescent camp, Bloemfontein, Oct. 11.

15th Lancers.—2nd Lt. Gilmour, wounded, Carolina, Oct. 13.

Imp. Yeo.—1st Bn.—5601 Sgt. Reeve, 9983 Biggs, wounded, near Vrede, Oct. 11. 10th Bn.: 7955 Cooper, wounded, near Rustenberg, Oct. 10. 14th Bn.: Lieut. Pomfret, wounded, Reitz, Oct. 13. 19th Co.: 8415 McGibbon*, accidentally wounded, Welverdiend, Oct. 14. 76th Co.: 15895 Butterfield, accidentally wounded, Thaba N'Chu, Oct. 6. 77th Co.: 15880 L.-Cpl. Smallwood, 15830 Frinsh, 15864 Oates, 15881 Savory, missing, believed prisoners, Heilbron, Oct. 13. Scouts: Capt. Anderson, prisoner, Commando Nek, Oct. 7.

N.S. Wales Bushmen.—1194 Fehey*, 1225 Abeline*, 1883 Mackillar*, wounded, Lichtenburg, Sept. 28; 399 Cooper, killed; 457 Beaumont, wounded and prisoner, since released; 476 Perrot, wounded, Molopole, Oct. 12.

W. Australian Bushmen.—11 Scheurer, wounded, near Machadodorp, Oct. 14.

Tasmanian Bushmen.—99 L.-Cpl. Banks Smith, 49 L.-Cpl. Fleming, wounded, near Rietfontein, Oct. 9.

E. Prov. Horse.—Trprs. Meadow, Oliff, prisoners, near Krugersdorp, Oct. 10.

Driscoll's Scouts.—Harper*, wounded, near Lindley, Oct. 4.

Kitchener's Horse.—3174 Lewis, wounded, Brughspuit, Oct. 10. CORRECTION: 3405 Cpl. Railton, erroneously reported wounded, was killed in action.

Nesbitt's Horse.—Sgt. Brink, killed; Pte. Young, wounded, Oliphant's River, Oct. 13.

District Mtd. R.—Pte. Stuart, wounded near Rouxville, Oct. 12.

Canadian Mtd. Rif.—2nd: 110 Leggat, wounded, Wonderhoek, Oct. 11.

R. H. A.—"M" Batt.: 67273 Russell, killed in railway accident, Kaapminder, Oct. 8; Lieut. Branker and 9 men (? names), wounded, Carolina, Oct. 13.

R. Engrs.—Lieut. Sewell, prisoner, Vlakkfontein, Oct. 6. Electrical Engrs.—Lieut. Stubbs, wounded, Vlakkfontein, Oct. 6.

Grenadier Gds.—2nd: 2533 Couldrey, 4720 Seaman, 3731 Walton, 4999 L.-Cpl. Procter, 4405 White, wounded, Vrede, Oct. 12.

Coldstream Gds.—2nd: CORRECTION: 8342 Cox, reported missing, Magersfontein, Dec. 11, 1899, was killed in action and buried by Boers.

Scots Gds.—2nd: 2679 Grimshaw, 9299 Hamilton, 1285 Churchill, wounded, Vrede, Oct. 12.

E. Kent.—2nd: 3249 Clayton, killed, Brughspuit, Oct. 10. Vol. Co.: 7277 L.-Cpl. Francis, wounded, Brughspuit, Oct. 10.

N'hd. Fus.—1st: 3554 Hudson, wounded, Wonderhoek, Oct. 11.

Lincoln.—Mtd. Inf. Co.: 5156 Simpson, missing, believed wounded prisoner, with Hamilton's force, Oct. 4.

Devonsh.—2nd: 3256 Gridle, dysentery, Standerton, Oct. 12.

Lancs. Fus.—2nd: 5990 Langtry, wounded, Ventersburg Rd. Stn., Oct. 14.

Cheshire.—2nd: 3547 L.-Cpl. Morris, 4730 Witter, wounded, Boschkor, Oct. 10.

S. Wales Brdrs.—3369 Sgt. Stevens, killed; 4222 Sexton, wounded, Kromellenburg, Oct. 13.

K.O.S.B.—Missing: 3035 Davidson, 2982 Watson, Honingspruit (July 22); 6753 Kelly (May 31), 3179 Royce (July 17), 5705 Scougall (July 16), places unknown.

Worcester.—Mtd. Inf. Co.: 944 L.-Cpl. Clarke, killed, near Springs, Oct. 13.

West Riding.—1st: 5002 Cavanagh, wounded, Nootgedacht, Oct. 10.

South Lancs.—3rd: Lieut. Hanbury, killed, Jagersfontein, Oct. 13.

Derby.—Mtd. Inf. Co.—Lieut. Attfield, killed; 3518 L.-Cpl. Gilbert, wounded, Ventersburg Rd. Stn., Oct. 14.

N. Lancs.—Mtd. Inf. Co.: 2918 Argyle, 4857 Kenton, killed; 5400 Bell, 5117 Healey, wounded, Ventersburg Rd. Stn., Oct. 14.

R. West Kent.—3766 Sgt. Canty, wounded, Frankfort, Oct. 11.

Shropsh. L.I.—2nd: 1469 Gill, apoplexy, Barberton, Oct. 11.

Manchester.—2nd: 4548 Cpl. Woodstock, 5545 Hynes, killed, Crocodile Valley, Oct. 10; 4205 Morrison, 3698 Bryant, wounded, Boschkor, Oct. 10; 5282 Clayton, reported missing, has rejoined, Sept. 8.

R. Irish Rifles.—2980 Goult, 2931 Hickey, 2547 Hutchinson, prisoners, near Springs, Oct. 13. 2nd: CORRECTION: 2320 Magilton, dangerously ill, Springfontein, Sept. 1, was previously erroneously reported as belonging to 14th Hussars.

Arg. and Suth.—1st: 6225 Menzies, 6020 McDonald, wounded, Machadodorp, Oct. 14.

R. Dublin Fus.—1st: 6566 Fitzpatrick*, accidentally run over by train, Oct. 9.

Rifle Brig.—Capt. Stewart, 7763 Powell, killed; Capt. Paget*, 7173 Col.-Sgt. Thomson, 1262 Burnes, 949 Ralph, 6949 Rock, 5712 Hayden, wounded; 718 Cpl. Tomlinson, 1638 Brown, 6063 Matthews, 9868 Goreham, 8874 Marsh, 1659 Flinn, 7878 Flinn, prisoners, Vlakkfontein, Oct. 6. Capt. Paget*, wounded, Kaapmuiden, Oct. 9. 1st: 747 Adams, wounded (? place), Feb. 28.

Kaffrarian Rif.—1363 Sgt. Osgood, missing, near Rhenoster Poort, Oct. 5.

Orange Riv. Col. Pol.—Cpl. Morrell (Roberts's Horse), wounded prisoner; Brett*, wounded; Mettlekamp (Roberts's Horse), Cornell (Brabant's Horse), Kewley, missing, Petrusburg, Oct. 10; Honeywill, killed; Richardson, wounded, Reitz, Oct. 13.

Imp. Mil. Rys.—Gd. Ingoldsby*, Driver Bottomley, wounded; Fireman Graham, prisoner, Vlakkfontein, Oct. 6.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

7th D. G.—3623 Driscoll, wounds, Middelburg, Oct. 16.

4th Hussars.—2944 Lowman, wounds, Middelburg, Oct. 16.

5th Lancers.—4212 Otway, wounds, Diamond Hill, June 11.

12th Lancers.—4608 Blenkinsop, wounds, Diamond Hill, June 11.

14th Huss.—4119 Riding, dysentery, Kroonstad, Oct. 16.

17th Lancers.—2643 Ashcroft, dysentery, Kroonstad, Oct. 10; 3817 Julier, killed, Vrededorf, July 24; 5207 Phemister, injuries due to fall from horse, Kroonstad, Oct. 15; 5936 Greenwood, Kroonstad, Oct. 15.

Imp. Yeo.—26th Co.: 5346 Crocker, Pretoria, Oct. 11.

28th: 14933 Warren, wounds, Johannesburg, Oct. 14.

30th Co.: 4113 L.-Cpl. Summers, Winburg, Oct. 11.

54th: 9541 Magee, Kroonstad, Oct. 11. 55th Co.: 10066 Temple, Doorn River, Oct. 16. 66th Co.: 12186 Aaroen, Pretoria, Oct. 10. 77th Co.: 15854 McClure, Boer Hospital, Heidelberg, Aug. 18.

N. S. Wales Lancers.—507 Avard, wounds, Carolina, Oct. 10.

N. S. Wales Bushmen.—1383 Mackillar, 1192 Fekey, 1225 Abeline, all wounds, Lichtenburg, Sept. 28.

Victoria Bushmen.—418 Riley, pneumonia, Marandellas, Oct. 13.

Nesbitt's Horse.—120 Branfield, heart disease, Grahamestown, Oct. 8.

Border Scouts.—118 Cpl. Steinkamp (? disease), Uppington, Oct. 9.

Canadian Mtd. R.—331 Merchant, Johannesburg, June 12.

R.P.A.—42nd By.: Hardy, meningitis, on German, Apr. 3. 66th By.: 36144 Thompson, (? 32544) 81781 Morris, killed railway accident, Kaapminder, Oct. 8.

R.H.A.—Mtd. By.: 76473 Shg.-smith Sargent, wounds, Dalmanutha, Oct. 13.

Grenadier Gds.—2nd: 1248 Leadier Mooi River, Aug. 26; 6844 Roberts, dilatation, heart, Vrede, Oct. 12. 3rd: 6820 Flynn, dysentery, Pretoria, Oct. 15.

Coldstream Gds.—2157 (?) Watkins, dysentery, Standerton, Oct. 10. 2nd: 294 Solbrowe, Erste Fabrieken, Oct. 13; 9582 Fetch, wounds, Middelburg, Oct. 12.

Scots Gds.—1st: 2607 Beaumont, Bloemfontein, July 7. CORRECTION: 2157 Watkins, dysentery, Standerton, Oct. 10, was erroneously reported as belonging to 2nd Coldstream Gds.

Royal Lancs.—6370 Chapman, Naauport, Oct. 13.

Warwick.—6th: 9581 Green, pneumonia, Bloemfontein, Oct. 13.

Lancaster.—2nd: L.-Cpl. Harrison, on Majestic, Mar. 28; 3rd: Howard, pneumonia, on Aurania, July 7.

Royal Fus.—2nd: 3322 Ames, Pocheftroom, June 27.

Liverpool.—1st: Young, dysentery, on German, Mar. 22; 2491 Grimley, pneumonia, Pietermaritzburg, Aug. 6. CORRECTION: 2566 Sacks, reported missing, died Waterval Onder, Aug. 23.

Norfolk.—2nd: 5146 W. Smith, Pretoria, Oct. 15.

Lincoln.—2nd: 5292 Wilkinson, killed Uitval's Nek, July 11.

Devonshire.—2nd: 3156 Criddle, dysentery, Standerton, Oct. 12; 2509 Quinn, dysentery, Ladysmith, June 8; 2289 Saunders, wounds, Colenso, Feb. 25; 5254 Stocker, dysentery, Ladysmith, May 6; 5529 Cox, wounds, Colenso, Feb. 24; 5521 Wills, Standerton, Aug. 21; 5648 Hore, wounds, Chieveley, Feb. 27.

Suffolk.—1st: 2885 Hicks, Bloemfontein, Oct. 12.

W. York.—2nd: 4777 Taylor, Rustenberg, Oct. 12; 5310 Bradbury, Ladysmith, May 6. 4th: 4431 Fox, Wynberg, Oct. 13.

Lanc. Fus.—6th: 2987 L.-Cpl. Fletcher, Orange River, Oct. 14.

S. Wales Brdrs.—4222 Sexton, wounds, Kromellenburg, Oct. 13.

K.O.S.B.—1st: 5415 Downie, Middelburg, Oct. 10. 3rd: 3508 Qmr.-Sgt. Williams, dysentery, Christiana, Oct. 12.

Gloucester.—2nd: 843 Sgt. Young, (?) disease, Penn's Farm, en route for Kimberley, Mar. 7. Mtd. Inf. Co.: 5438 Rivers, Pretoria, Oct. 10.

West Riding.—5500 McDermott, pneumonia, at sea, Mar. 3.

Sussex.—1st: 5612 Shutton, killed, with Hamilton's Force, Oct. 4.

S. Staffs.—4th: 5137 Manion, accidentally shot, Bethleham, July 4.

Dorset.—3106 Lawrence (attached 5th Div. Mtd. Inf.), wounds, Wakkerstroom, Sept. 7. 2nd: 2732 Willstead, Newcastle, Oct. 14; 1262 Dobney, Newcastle, Oct. 17.

5440 Pike, Ladysmith, May 3; 1294 Harwood, dysentery, Pinetown Bridge, May 19; 5574 Rawles, Pietermaritzburg, May 22.

S. Lancs.—1st: 5043 Hackett, Eastcourt, Aug. 7.

Royal Highlrs.—2nd: 3202 Jack, Kroonstad, Oct. 14.

Essex.—Mtd. Inf. Co.: 4772 Saich, Pretoria, Oct. 14.

Derby.—1st: 4804 Kemp (? place), July 6. 4th: 7390 Ward (? disease), Port Elizabeth, Oct. 14.

Northampton.—2nd: 479 Bromwich, Oct. 12; 5815 Dallison, Oct. 10; Kroonstad.

Berks.—2nd: 4344 Messer (? disease), Wonderfontein, Oct. 10; 3342 Cottrell, accidental injuries, Greenpoint, Oct. 13. Vol. Co.: 6899 Walker, Middelburg, Oct. 14.

Middx.—2nd: 4307 Hucker, Pinetown, May 25; 2815 F. Smith, Newcastle, Oct. 10.

K.R.R.—1st: Ptes. Wharred, Cullum, dysentery, on German, Oct. 24. 23.

Durham L.I.—3rd: 3611 Watt, Kroonstad, Oct. 11, 6529 L.-Cpl. Hamblin, Oct. 13.

Arg. and Suth.—2988 Harley, Pretoria, Oct. 8. 4th: 4390 Ball, killed; L.-Cpl. Kirkwood, wounded, near Boschard, Oct. 10.

Leinster.—5th: 1881 Murphy, dysentery, Pretoria, Oct. 13.

R. Muns. Fus.—2115 O'Brien, dysentery, Pretoria, Oct. 14.

R. Dublin Fus.—3476 Dolan, 6277 McDonald, 3976 Byrne, killed, Colenso, Dec. 15, 1899.

C.I.V.—275 Hunt, gunshot wound in head, on s.s. Montrose, Oct. 6; 765 Rowe, Pretoria, Oct. 6.

Army Nursing Reserve.—Sister Caldcrough, dysentery, Maritzburg, Oct. 11.

Roy. Canadian Regt.—7811 Forest, Apr. 22; 8140 Purcell, Mar. 31 (both ? diseases), Bloemfontein.

Cape V.M.S.C.—Copley, tubercle, Germiston, Oct. 13.

Civilian Ry. Employee.—Williams, endocarditis, Bloemfontein, Oct. 11.

LIEUT. A BECKETT and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. à Beckett have received a very large number of letters and telegrams from all parts expressing sympathy and satisfaction at the honourable acquittal of Mr. à Beckett.

PIGEON POST.—Lieut.-Col. H. T. W. Allatt, 1st Btln. Royal Home Counties Reserve Regiment, and lately of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, has, very properly, been chosen to organise and superintend the proposed Army Pigeon Post at Aldershot. The duty could scarcely be entrusted to more capable hands, for Col. Allatt has studied the subject with the deep attention of an enthusiast. Not only is he a pigeon fancier, but he has studied all foreign systems. He read a paper some years ago at the Royal United Service Institution, in which he pointed out the advantages of pigeon despatches in war. There is nothing, in fact, dealing with the question upon which he is not an authority. Under his capable management, therefore, the new department should start with a fair prospect of success. Hitherto the carrier pigeon has been chiefly in the hands of the Royal Navy, and the "lofts," as they are called technically, have been established at naval stations. A retired naval officer, Capt. St. John Hornby, has achieved a very notable success in the breeding of these pigeons at the Holmwood, Dorking.

FOR REGIMENTAL CANTEENS AND MESSES.

GRAVINA

is a desirable and economical addition to the kitchen supplies of the Mess-room.

GRAVINA is a gravy powder, particularly useful for making a gravy for joints. By its aid many appetising hot dishes can be made from scraps of cold meat, or odds and ends of game, poultry, &c.

GRAVINA is one of the varieties of the popular

EDWARDS'

DESICCATED

SOUP

and it is the one specially recommended for gravy. When, however, a hot soup is required without labour, one or other of the soup preparations is more suitable, and will be found much more superior, and in every way preferable, to the usual porting, and in supplied to men on night guard, or after an arduous day's duties.

List Prices for 1lb. Tins.
Gravy, 1/10; Brawn Soup, 1/3; White Soup, 1/3;
Tomato Soup, 2/6.

Can be obtained of most Grocers and Stores.
Manufactured by

FRED. KING & Co., London & Belfast

The Gazettes.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Oct. 16.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following promotion in, and appointments to, the Most Honourable Order of the Bath:—

To be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the 2nd Class, or Knights Commander, of the said Most Honourable Order, viz:—

Col. the Right Hon. J. H. A. Macdonald, C.B., commanding Forth Volunteer Infantry Brigade, and formerly commanding Queen's R.V. Brigade, Royal Scots (Lothian Regt.).

To be Ordinary Members of the Civil Division of the 3rd Class, or Companions, of the said Most Honourable Order, viz:—

Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. T. A. Lunham, Cork Artillery (Southern Div., R.G.A.).

Col. Sir Henry Fletcher, Bart., commanding Sussex Volunteer Infantry Brigade, and formerly commanding 2nd V.B. Royal Sussex Regt.

Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. A. F. Godman, 1st V.B. Princess of Wales's Own (Yorkshire Regt.).

WHITEHALL, Oct. 15.

The Queen has been pleased to give and grant unto Major W. Quentin, I.S.C., Her Majesty's Royal licence and authority that he may accept and wear the Insignia of the 3rd Class of the Order of the Brilliant Star of Zanzibar; and that Major C. I. Fry, Capt. C. O. O. Tanner, I.S.C., and Surg.-Capt. P. P. Kilkelly, Indian Medical Service, may accept and wear the Insignia of the 4th Class of the Order of the Brilliant Star of Zanzibar, conferred upon them by H.H. the Sultan of Zanzibar.

WAR OFFICE, Oct. 16.

Irish Guards.—Field Marshal Right Hon. F. S., Lord Roberts, K.P., G.C.B., V.C., &c., Commanding-in-Chief the forces in South Africa, from Col. Commandant R.A., to be Col.

4th Dragoon Guards.—Promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. G. B. Lamont antedated to Dec. 15, 1899.

6th Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. W. G. Home to be Capt., vice H. P. Le der promoted (July 1).

10th Hussars.—Lieut. T. B. Ponsonby, from 4th Batn. Gloucester Regt., to be 2nd Lieut. in succession to Lieut. S. L. Barry, seconded.

14th Hussars.—Lieut. F. R. Lawrence, D.S.O., Adjut., to be Capt., to complete establishment (July 11).

17th Lancers.—Lieut. C. L. Prior, from 3rd Batn. North Stafford Regt., to be Second Lieut. in succession to Lieut. D.A. Legard, promoted.

19th Hussars.—Surname of Second Lieut. O. M. Croshaw, who was promoted Lieut. in Gazette of Oct. 2, is as now described, not as therein stated.

20th Hussars.—Second Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—E. S. Percy-Smith, vice H. R. Lee, promoted; S. H. Christy, vice K. M. Woolcombe, transferred to I.S.C. (Aug. 10). Appointment to a Second Lieutenancy of Trpr. M. B. P.

Urquhart, from Imperial Yeomanry, which appeared in Gazette of Oct. 2, is cancelled.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

1st Batn.—Lieut. J. W. Yardley, Capt. Reserve of Officers, having been attached to 6th Dragoons, ceases to belong to Imperial Yeomanry (March 31).

17th Batn.—Sergt. Henry Tokemann to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Sept. 2).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

Capt. W. E. Wingfield seconded for service on Staff. (Sept. 14).

Supy. Capt. to be Capt.:—H. M. Thomas, vice H. E. Stockdale, appointed Divnl. Adjut. (Sept. 10); C. N. B. Ballard, vice A. G. Glanville, appointed Divnl. Adjut. (Sept. 23).

Lieuts. to be Capt.:—L. B. Montrésor, on augmentation (Sept. 1); C. D. Hope, vice B. R. Kirwan, seconded (Sept. 8); H. A. L. H. Wade, vice W. E. Wingfield (Sept. 14); H. P. R. Coodo, vice N. E. Tilney, seconded (Sept. 15); A. B. Forman, vice E. G. Cheke, appointed Divnl. Adjut. (Sept. 17); G. H. Stobart, vice J. Dalby, appointed Divnl. Adjut. (Sept. 21).

Lieut. N. J. Waller, from Suffolk Artillery, to be Second Lieut.

Capt. W. Thwaites to be Divnl. Adjut., on augmentation (Oct. 1).

Royal Garrison Artillery.

Lieut.-Col. E. Ward, from Army Ordnance Dept., to be Lieut.-Col., vice F. A. Bowles, removed on appointment to Staff (Oct. 1).

Lieut. C. J. L. Allanson seconded for service on Staff (April 4).

Lieut. I. A. M. Cummins seconded for service with Native Mountain Artillery, India (Oct. 4).

2nd Lieuts. seconded for service with Native Mounted Artillery, India:—A. H. W. Haywood, H. C. Szczepanski, E. B. Cotter, A. H. Moberly (Oct. 4).

Lieut. G. L. Hay, from Dublin City Artillery, to be 2nd Lieut.

COLDSTREAM GUARDS.

2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—C. F. Roundell, on augmentation; A. G. Leather-Culley, vice C. E. Wyld, promoted (July 10).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Scots.—Major V. M. Birkbeck retires on retired pay on account of ill-health; Capt. R. L. Macgregor to be Major, vice V. M. Birkbeck.

Royal West Surrey Regt.—Lieut. A. W. Tuffnell to be Capt., vice G. E. R. Kenrick, seconded for service on staff (May 7).

East Kent Regt.—2nd Lieut. F. W. Tomlinson to be Lieut., vice J. McB. Ronald, promoted (Oct. 17); Trpr. Archibald J. Corlett, from the Natal Police (nominated by Governor of Natal), to be 2nd Lieut., vice F. W. Tomlinson (May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Oct. 17).

Liverpool Regt.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Corpl. P. N. Field, from Natal Mounted Rifles, which appeared in Gazette of May 18, cancelled.

Leicester Regt.—2nd Lieut. R. T. Arundell to be Lieut., vice B. C. Dent, promoted (June 24); 2nd Lieut. H. G.

Sealy, from 5th Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers, to be 2nd Lieut., vice R. T. Arundell.

King's Own Scottish Borderers.—Candidates, recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa, to be 2nd Lieuts.:—Sergt. Hon. Moubray St. A. T. St. John, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. G. M. Hannay, promoted; Trpr. Gore Barron, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. H. Armstrong, transferred to I.S.C.

Worcester Regt.—2nd Lieut. E. W. Bateman, from 4th V.B. East Surrey Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. E. B. Hankey, promoted.

East Lancashire Regt.—Capt. E. H. F. Finch retired on retired pay on account of ill-health (Oct. 17); 2nd Lieut. G. Clayhills to be Lieut., vice B. C. De Gex, promoted into Lancashire Fusiliers (June 20); 2nd Lieut. Alec St. Leger Goldie, from 3rd Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut. in succession to Lieut. E. C. Da Costa, promoted.

Border Regt.—2nd Lieut. H. H. B. Prior, from 1st Regt. Royal Jersey L.I., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. G. C. Brooke, seconded.

Royal Sussex Regt.—2nd Lieut. E. C. Beeton, from 1st V.B., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. R. B. Hopkins, promoted into Manchester Regt.

Royal Highlanders.—Lieut. W. J. St. J. Harvey to be Adjut., vice Capt. J. G. Collins, vacated appointment (Sept. 5); Pte. Bernard C. A. Steuart, from Col. Lumsden's Corps (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. J. Harvey, promoted.

Northampton Regt.—Christian names of 2nd Lieut. Philip James Partridge are as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Aug. 3, 1900.

Manchester Regt.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Lieut. E. V. E. Neill, from Victorian Local Military Forces, which appeared in Gazette of Sept. 18, cancelled.

North Stafford Regt.—2nd Lieut. G. H. Hume-Kelly to be Lieut., vice B. B. Waddell - Dudley, deceased (June 21); Pte. Leslie G. Williams, from Col. Lumsden's Corps (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. H. W. M. Down, promoted.

York and Lancaster Regt.—Capt. F. F. W. Daniell, on completion of his period of service as Adjut., has vacated appointment (Sept. 16).

Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders.—2nd Lieut. J. A. Orr to be Lieut., vice W. M. Stewart, promoted (June 6); Lieut. J. S. M. Matheson, from 3rd Batn., to be 2nd Lieut., vice J. A. Orr.

Royal Irish Fusiliers.—Date of appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Lieut. W. A. V. Findlater, from 3rd Batn. Devon Regt., is Oct. 13, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 12.

Royal Irish Reserve Regt.—Appointment as Capt. of Capt. N. C. Castle, Reserve of Officers, is antedated to May 10.

Army Service Corps.—Name of 2nd Lieut. Hector Gowans Reid is as now described, not as stated in Gazette of March 20.

City of London Imperial Volunteers (Mounted Infantry).—Corpl. B. C. Townshend to be Lieut. in Army (Aug. 4).

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.'S

Overcoats for Winter.

Newest Styles, Fashionable Materials.

Overcoats for Winter.

In all sizes. Ready for Immediate Use.

Overcoats for Winter.

Cut by our own Cutters, and made in Best West-end Style at Moderate Prices for Cash Payments.

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.,

12, 10, & 8, BROOK STREET, . . .

. . . HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

Military Types.

A Complete List of the Coloured Military Plates which have been issued with this Paper will be sent post free on application.

Offices: 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

EVERITT'S PATENT
Trousers Press and Stretcher.

PRICE

25/-

PRICE

25/-

Three of the great advantages of this Press are:—

Simplicity

By the novel arrangement of the top bars and screws, a pair of trousers can be taken out or replaced in less than a minute. When the pressure is applied the top board bends, thereby ensuring an equal pressure on all parts of the trousers, thus making it the ONLY PERFECT PRESS on the market.

Effectiveness

It is specially constructed for convenience of travellers, requiring, when folded the space of about 2 inches, and can be opened for use in half a minute.

Portability

Will take from One to Eight Pairs of Trousers, and any pair can be removed without disarranging the remainder.

To be obtained of all High-Class Tailors, and The Stores, or direct from the Patentee: HARRY EVERITT, Tailor, 14, Maddox St., Regent St., London, W.

WHEN BUYING

= = A CHEAP BICYCLE

look at the tyres. If they are not

DUNLOP TYRES

the machine is not cheap at any price.

THE DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD.,
ALMA STREET, COVENTRY; 160 to 168, CLERKENWELL ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Capt. A. A. Watson is granted temp. rank of Major whilst employed in South Africa (June 6).

Indian Army.—Gen. Sir R. C. Stewart, K.C.B., Madras Cavalry, is transferred to Unemployed Supy. List; Lieut.-Gen. Sir R. C. Low, G.C.B., Bengal Cavalry, to be Gen.; Major-Gen. R. M. Jennings, C.B., Bengal Cavalry, to be Lieut.-Gen. (Sept. 30).

Brevet.—Lieut.-Cols. to be Cols.:—G. F. Browne, D.S.O., Military Attaché, Peking (Sept. 19); H. W. Brackenbury, R.F.A. (Oct. 12); N. P. O'Gorman, D.A.A.G., China and Hong Kong (Oct. 17).

Half-Pay.—Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. H. C. O. Plumer, from York and Lancaster Regt., to be Lieut.-Col.

MEMORANDA.

Officers granted temp. rank of Major whilst employed as Instrs. at School of Musketry:—Capt. H. C. de la M. Hill, East Kent Regt.; Capt. F. A. MacFarlan, Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders.

Officers granted temp. rank of Capt. in Army whilst serving with Line Batns. in South Africa:—Capt. C. J. Lloyd-Carson, 3rd Batn. East Lancashire Regt. (Jan. 13); Capt. F. W. E. Blake, 3rd Batn. Royal Sussex Regt. (Feb. 10); Capt. J. H. N. H. Burke, 3rd Batn. Connaught Rangers (June 26).

Lieut. W. H. Walshe, 3rd Batn. Gloucester Regt., granted temp. rank of Lieut. in Army whilst serving with a Line Batn. in South Africa (June 21).

Officers (temp. 2nd Lieuts. in Army) granted temp. rank of Lieut. in Army whilst serving with Line Batns. in South Africa:—Lieuts. P. L. Moubray, 3rd Batn. Royal Highlanders (June 27); H. N. B. Harrison and E. E. Barrow, 3rd Batn. the Duke of Cornwall's L.I. (June 30); H. H. Witherington, 5th Batn. Liverpool Regt. (July 18); O. M. T. Frost and C. W. Hext, 3rd Batn. Devon Regt. (July 23).

Officers (temp. 2nd Lieuts. in Army) granted temp. rank of Lieut. in Army whilst serving with R.A. in South Africa:—Lieuts. A. G. Thomas (July 13), and T. N. French (Aug. 1), Duke of Edinburgh's Own Edinburgh Artillery.

2nd Lieut. C. H. Furneaux, 3rd Batn. Cheshire Regt., granted temp. rank of 2nd Lieut. in Army whilst serving with a Line batn. in South Africa (Aug. 25).

Militia officers seconded for service with British Central Africa Regt.:—Lieut. E. U. Walshe, Waterford Artillery (S. Div. R.G.A.); Lieut. J. S. Graham, 3rd Batn. Bedford Regt. (Sept. 14).

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Clare (S. Div.).—Lucius William, Baron Inchiquin, appointed to Hon. Colonelcy of regt.

Londonderry (S. Div.).—Seconding of Capt. J. Blandy Jenkins, announced in Gazette of Sept. 4, should have borne date Oct. 17, not as therein stated.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (MILITIA).

Royal Anglesey.—2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—G. O. Harvey and W. H. C. Pery-Knox-Gore (Oct. 9).

INFANTRY.

5th Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. E. A. Leather to be Lieut. (Oct. 3).

5th Batn. Royal Warwick Regt.—2nd Lieut. G. M. Holand removed from Militia for absence without leave.

5th Batn. Liverpool Regt.—Lieuts. R. S. C. Chaffey and A. J. Whittle to be Capt. and to remain seconded (Oct. 8). 6th Batn.: 2nd Lieut. B. L. C. Teeling to be Lieut.; 2nd Lieut. W. H. Fowler to be Lieut., and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieuts. R. H. Spconer and S. Wickins, jun., to be Lieuts. (Oct. 5).

3rd Batn. Devon Regt.—2nd Lieuts. M. I. G. Jenkins and R. J. Scarborough to be Lieuts. (Oct. 6).

4th Batn. Royal Irish Regt.—Capt. R. M. Minchin removed from Militia for absence without leave.

3rd Batn. Yorkshire Regt.—Lieuts. M. E. Clark and N. Monckton to be Capt. (Sept. 13).

3rd Batn. Cheshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. C. H. Furneaux seconded for service with Line Batn. in South Africa (Aug. 25).

4th Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. C. Alexander to be Lieut. (Oct. 8).

3rd Batn. West Riding Regt.—Major E. L. Cordes granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col. (Oct. 17); Lieut. D. M. Jenkins to be Capt. (Sept. 17).

4th Batn. Border Regt.—Colin H. Gifford to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 6).

3rd Batn. Welsh Regt.—Lieut. and Instr. of Musketry D. W. Panton to be Capt. (Oct. 4).

3rd Batn. Loyal North Lancashire Regt.—Lieut. J. E. Massey seconded for service with West African Regt. (Oct. 3).

3rd Batn. Northampton Regt.—Lieut. F. E. G. Jackson to be Capt., and to remain seconded (Oct. 4).

3rd Batn. Royal Berkshire Regt.—Arthur P. Strange to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 6).

3rd Batn. Seaforth Highlanders.—Hon. Surg.-Major J. Corbet retires under para. 81 Militia Regulations, with permission to retain his rank, and wear prescribed uniform.

6th Batn. Royal Irish Rifles.—2nd Lieut. C. L. Master to be Lieut. (Oct. 8).

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. T. D. Pottinger to be Lieut. and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieut. T. McCutcheon to be Lieut.; 2nd Lieuts. P. G. Barrett and A. M. Fleury to be Lieuts. and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieut. F. J. Croly to be Lieut. (Oct. 6).

3rd Batn. Connaught Rangers.—Reginald E. H. Knox to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 8).

4th Batn. Leinster Regt.—Major G. H. Brooke, retired pay, formerly Adjt., appointed to Hon. Colonelcy of batn. (Oct. 17); 2nd Lieuts. G. H. Atkinson and G. F. G. Turbett to be Lieuts. (Oct. 8).

5th Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers.—Herbert J. Kerr to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 3).

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Warwick.—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. H. de G., Marquis of Hertford to be Lieut.-Col. and to command, under para. 32 Yeomanry Regulations (Sept. 6).

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

1st Ayrshire and Galloway.—2nd Lieuts. A. Mackay, J. L. Smith, W. M. Lockhart, R. McQ. Alexander and J. G. C. Wyllie to be Lieuts.

5th Lancashire.—2nd Lieut. C. C. Furness to be Lieut.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

1st Lancashire.—2nd Lieuts. C. H. Burton, E. M. Newell, J. G. Armour, H. W. Wilson, A. H. Robinson, G. P. Whitaker, and G. Rollo to be Lieuts.

2nd West Riding of Yorkshire (Leeds).—Donald Hey to be 2nd Lieut.

RIFLE.

1st V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt.—Lieut. N. E. Cutler to be Capt.; Charles G. Liddle to be 2nd Lieut.

4th V.B. Liverpool Regt.—Reginald C. S. Boulton to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. Suffolk Regt.—Gerrard B. Steward to be 2nd Lieut. Cadet Corps (Queen Elizabeth School) attached to 1st V.B.: George F. Bridge to be Lieut. 2nd V.B.: William H. Prentice to be 2nd Lieut. 3rd (Cambridge-shire) V.B.: Ernest E. Pearson to be 2nd Lieut. (extra supy.). 4th (Cambridge Univ.) V.B.: Alick L. Prince to be 2nd Lieut. (extra supy.).

2nd V.B. West Yorkshire Regt.—Reginald Lupton to be 2nd Lieut. 3rd V.B.: Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. F. W. Tannett Walker to be Lieut.-Col., and to command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations.

2nd V.B. Yorkshire Regt.—Major W. H. Fowler granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

4th V.B. South Wales Borderers.—2nd Lieut. C. I. Massey to be Lieut.

1st Roxburgh and Selkirk (Border).—Lieut. J. Rodgers to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. W. E. A. Cochrane to be Lieut.

3rd Lanark.—Major R. Howie granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

1st Surrey (South London).—Joseph D. Garside to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Surg.-Capt. E. T. Crouch to be Surg.-Major.

1st V.B. South Stafford Regt.—Lieut. H. E. Twentymann to be Capt. 2nd V.B.: Surg.-Capt. J. K. Butter, M.D., resigns his commission.

1st (Pembroke) V.B. Welsh Regt.—Horace L. Lewis, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut. 3rd V.B.: James H. Ritchie to be 2nd Lieut.

4th (Perthshire) V.B. Royal Highlanders.—2nd Lieuts. A. H. G. Heiton and M. W. Gloag to be Lieuts. (Oct. 9).

1st (Oxford Univ.) V.B. Oxford L.I.—Rev. H. H. Gibbon to be Acting Chaplain.

1st Nottingham (Robin Hood).—Lieut. H. M. Whitehead to be Capt.

17th (North) Middlesex.—Pendarves C. F. Gibson to be 2nd Lieut. (Extra Supy.).

2nd London.—Lieuts. F. L. Breysig and C. E. J. Cary-Elwes to be Capt.

2nd V.B. Vork and Lancaster Regt.—Lieut. C. V. R. Boyle to be Capt., and to remain supy.; 2nd Lieut. H. Rhodes to be Capt.; Surg.-Lieut. H. H. B. Wilkinson retires under para. 111 Volunteer Regulations, and is granted rank of Surg.-Capt., with permission to wear uniform of batn.

2nd V.B. Durham L.I.—Tom Boddy to be 2nd Lieut. 2nd V.B. Highland L.I.—Capt. J. P. Cochrane granted hon. rank of Major.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Oct. 17.]

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Oct. 19.

South Lancashire Regt.—Major-Gen. F. R. Solly, F.R.S., to be Col., vice Major-Gen. and Hon. Lieut.-Gen. A. H. L. Fox-Pitt-Rivers, deceased (May 5).

6th Dragoon Guards.—Promotions to Lieut. of under-mentioned 2nd Lieuts. antedated:—N. L. Calvert to July 1, vice W. G. Home, promoted; R. Anketell-Jones to July 4, to complete establishment.

3rd Hussars.—Surname of Trpr. M. Burge, Imperial Yeomanry, appointed to a 2nd Lieutenantcy in Gazette of Oct. 2, is as now described, not as therein stated.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

3rd Batn.—Temp. Major Earl of Scarborough, second in command, resigns his commission (June 18); Sergt. D. Turner to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (April 5).

10th Batn.—To be Lieuts., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army:—C. J. St. Quintin (Feb. 3); Sergt. Francis Francis, Lance-Sergt. Barry Halkett (March 3); Sergt. Edward R. Murray, Corpl. William S. Lowndes (March 15).

13th Batn.—Capt. T. Earl of Longford, 2nd Life Guards, on rejoining for regimental duty, ceases to belong to Imperial Yeomanry; Lieut. T. R. A. Stannus to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army; Corpl. Hon. Victor Gibson to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Aug. 30).

15th Batn.—Temp. Lieut.-Col. L. Sandwith, Capt. 8th Hussars, resigns command of batn.; Major H. Le Roy-Lewis to command batn., with temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. in Army (Oct. 3).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.—Surname of 2nd Lieut. Thomas W. Van Tuyl is as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 5.

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Scots.—2nd Lieut. A. E. Croker to be Lieut., vice W. D. Shaw, deceased (Oct. 9).

Royal Warwick Regt.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenantcy of Lieut. J. S. Craig, from 1st V.B. Cheshire Regt., which appeared in Gazette of Sept. 18, is cancelled.

Bedford Regt.—Lieut.-Col. W. O. Cavenagh removed from Army, Her Majesty having no further occasion for his services; Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. T. D. Pileber to be Lieut.-Col., vice W. O. Cavenagh.

Lancashire Fusiliers.—2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—A. E. H. Fenning, vice R. R. Willis, promoted; G. H. Soames, on augmentation.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Capt. P. R. Mantall to be Major, vice H. J. Archdale, promoted into Lincoln Regt. (Oct. 6).

Worcester Regt.—Capt. H. A. Fulton to be Adjt., on augmentation (Oct. 5).

East Lancashire Regt.—2nd Lieut. F. A. C. Wrench, from 5th Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers, to be 2nd Lieut. in succession to Lieut. A. A. Sanders, promoted.

Royal Sussex Regt.—Promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. R. N. Dick is antedated to Dec. 13, 1899.

Hampshire Regt.—Capt. F. S. K. Shaw seconded for service as an Adjt. of Volunteers (July 23).

Royal Highlanders.—The seconding of Lieut. J. D. G. Walker for service on the Staff and restoration to

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters

YEOMANRY AND MILITIA OUTFITS,

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

establishment of Supy. Lieut. F. D. Murray antedated to Oct. 24, 1899.

North Stafford Regt.—Capt. J. W. Saunders retires from the Service on account of ill-health, receiving a gratuity; Lieut. J. J. B. Farley to be Capt., vice J. W. Saunders.

Highland L.I.—Lieut. H. J. Pack-Beresford to be Capt., vice A. C. Grant, seconded for service with Egyptian Army (Aug. 28); 2nd Lieut. L. G. Pringle to be Lieut., vice R. E. S. Prentice, appointed Adj. (Aug. 1).

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. B. Alexander, from 7th Batn., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. A. M. King, promoted.

West India Regt.—Surname of Trpr. R. H. Kerr, Imperial Yeomanry, appointed to a 2nd Lieutenancy in Gazette of Sept. 25, is as now described, not as therein stated; Lieut. D. W. S. Stephenson, from 4th Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers, to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. F. E. W. Butt, promoted.

Army Service Corps.—Name of 2nd Lieut. Herbert Walter Peebles is now described, not as stated in the Gazette of Sept. 14; 2nd Lieut. C. V. R. Thomas, from 4th Batn. Cheshire Regt. (nominated by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief in South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut.

CITY OF LONDON IMPERIAL VOLUNTEERS.

Infantry.—Lieut. C. P. Grindle resigns his commission (June 8); Pte. Charles O'R. Greenwell to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (June 9).

STAFF.

Lieut. R. W. Duff, Forfar and Kincardine Artillery, to be extra A.D.C. to Right Hon. J. A. L. Earl of Hopetoun, G.C.M.G., Governor-General of Commonwealth of Australia (Oct. 5).

Temporary appointment of Capt. F. R. H. Chapman, retired pay, as Staff Capt. at Hdqrs., is dated Aug. 23, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 2.

Appointment of 2nd Lieut. F. N. Thorne, Royal Sussex Regt., as A.D.C. to Lieut.-Gen. Sir C. Warren, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., R.E., is cancelled.

Appointments to staff made in South Africa confirmed:—2nd Lieut. T. B. H. Thorne, Middlesex Regt., to be A.D.C. to Lieut.-Gen. Sir C. Warren, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., R.E., from May 31 to July 8; Capt. Sir F. W. F. G. Frankland, Bart., 3rd Batn. Bedford Regt., to be an Asst. Press Censor, graded as Staff Capt. (Sept. 14).

To be graded as Staff Capt. whilst employed in Remount Dept.:—Ridingmr. and Hon. Capt. D. Hall, 1st Life Guards (Nov. 16, 1899); Ridingmr. and Hon. Capt. E. G. Tomblings, 8th Hussars (Feb. 26).

2nd Lieut. A. S. Grant, Royal Highlanders, to be an Asst. Press Censor, graded as Staff Lieut., from Aug. 21 to Sept. 14.

2nd Lieut. H. T. Law, 4th Batn. Royal Lancaster Regt., to be a Staff Officer to a Station Commandant, graded as Staff Lieut. (Aug. 24).

Indian Staff Corps.—Col. (local Major-Gen.) Sir Norman R. Stewart, Bart., to be Major-Gen. (Sept. 30). Army Veterinary Dept.—Vet.-Lieut. C. B. M. Harris, F.R.C.V.S., to be Vet.-Capt. (Aug. 27).

Brevet.—Lieut.-Col. N. M. Lake, R.E., to be Col. (Oct. 19).

MEMORANDA.

Supy. Major-Gen. (local Lieut.-Gen.) J. D. P. French, Commanding Cavalry Division, South Africa, to be Major-Gen., vice Sir W. F. Butler, K.C.B., promoted (Oct. 9).

Lieut.-Col. and Col. H. S. S. Watkin, C.B., Supt. Royal Small Arms Factory, placed on retired pay (Oct. 8).

Lieut. C. A. W. Hawker, 3rd Batn. Wiltshire Regt., granted temp. rank of Lieut. in Army whilst serving with a Line Batn. in South Africa (Sept. 11).

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Oct. 20.]

THE officers, warrant officers, and non-commissioned officers who have not yet fired the prescribed course of revolver practice are to do so without delay. It was absurd to provide for the carrying of revolvers by individuals unless they know how to use them if the emergency arises.

A GENEROUS OFFER.—In recognition of the gallantry displayed by all ranks of the Army in South Africa, the Worshipful Company of Clothworkers, of which Lord Kelvin is the present master, have decided to offer four scholarships, tenable for three years, at the Sutton Valence Grammar School, they being the Governors. The scholarships will cover boarding and tuition fees, and will be open to the sons of commissioned officers, naval or military, who have been killed in action, or have died of disease, or have been disabled owing to the campaign in South Africa. These scholarships will be awarded by the Court of the Company subject to a qualifying test. Applicants will require to be not less than 10 or more than 15 years of age. Applications should be addressed to the Clerk, Clothworkers' Hall, Mincing Lane, E.C. It is to be hoped that other of the City companies will follow the example of the Clothworkers, which in all matters affecting the welfare of her Majesty's Service is always foremost in doing good work.

FIVE more companies of the Army Ordnance Corps are to be formed as early as possible. This will bring the establishment of the corps up to twenty companies, nineteen service and one depot. The officers will be drawn, of course, for the most part from the Royal Garrison Artillery.

THERE is good news for champagne drinkers in the near future. The vintage of 1900 promises to be phenomenally good—the best for 20 or 30 years. This is the opinion of M. Charles Heidsieck, of the famous firm in Rheims. The fine, warm weather of July and August, and the superb September, in which not one drop of rain fell, matured the grape under favourable conditions rarely seen. As regards past years and wines coming on it is said that the champagnes of 1895 are giving great satisfaction to connoisseurs, and rank with those of 1892 and 1893. The wine of 1898 is developing well, "showing great delicacy and elegance," so that buyers may be recommended to lay it down.

GRATUITIES TO RETIRED OFFICERS.—The following instructions are promulgated with reference to gratuities to retired officers and other persons specially employed during the recent emergency:—

"The following will be substituted for the Secretary of State's instructions on the Royal Warrant of Aug. 25, 1900 (Army Order 186 of 1900):—1. Articles 601A and 601B will apply to employment commencing between Oct. 1, 1899, and Sept. 30, 1900, including employment with the Royal Reserve Regiments, the Imperial Yeomanry, or Volunteers proceeding on active service. 2. Any retired officer who claims the gratuity under Article 601B will be held to have elected to receive such gratuity in lieu of any increase of retired pay to which he might otherwise have been entitled under Article 601A. 3. The paymaster or agent who makes the final issue of full pay to the officer concerned, will pay without special authority any gratuity due, provided that the officer—(a) Actually serves with his unit until its disbandment or disembodiment; or (b) Is certified by his commanding officer to have served satisfactorily for the full period required of him. Any other cases will be submitted to the War Office for decision."

FOR THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH "Epps's Glycerine Jujubes" always prove effective. They soften and clear the voice, and are invaluable to all suffering from cough, soreness, or dryness of the throat. Sold only in labelled tins, price 7d. and 1s. 1½d. James Epps and Co., Ltd., Homeopathic Chemist, London.

APSLEY PELLATT & CO.
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing
Cross, London, W.C.
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA
MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

A LADY having no children, and being accustomed to them, wishes CARE of two CHILDREN, to board and educate; sea-side, healthy and bracing home. Highest references and exceptional educational advantages.—Address, Mrs. Robert Leck, Hillside Cottage, St. James Road, New Brighton, Cheshire.

ARMY & NAVY PENSIONERS' EMPLOYMENT SOCIETY supplies men of good character as Clerks, Time or Gate Keepers, Messengers, Porters, and Caretakers.—Apply, personally or by letter, to Secretary, 2, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C. Branches in Dublin and Glasgow.—Telegraphic Address: "Sergeancy, London."—Time-expired men (i.e., men who have served 12 years with the colours), will also be registered.

BOURNEMOUTH, WEST.—For Summer or Winter residence; comfortable apartments in a pleasantly situated house; close to pine woods and sea; healthy position; fine view; near shops; excellent cooking and attendance; reasonable terms.—Address, M., Myrtle Villa, Alum Chine Road, Bournemouth.

DOCTOR and his Wife intending to spend January to April abroad, are willing to take CHARGE of a PATIENT wishing to be out of England during those months. Either sea voyage or otherwise. Highest references.—Apply by letter, "Medicus," ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

EMPLOYERS.—If you want YOUNG MEN OF GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, groomers, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary, The National Association for Employment of Reserve Soldiers, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employons, London."

EXCHANGE.—A LIEUTENANT in the MADRAS INFANTRY wishes to EXCHANGE with an officer in an English Regiment serving at home.—Apply to "Lieutenant," care of Grindlay and Co., 54, Parliament Street, S.W.

FOR SALE.—3 SHOPS and upper parts in the main Hackney Road; shops let monthly and upper parts weekly, producing £311 gross and £127 nett; long lease, price £1,000, £500 can remain if required.—Apply X., c/o Griffiths and Millington, Limited, 60, Watling Street, E.C.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

THE DE VERE, THE PRINCE OF WALES, THE BROADWALK.
(Opposite Kensington Palace.)

Lift. Electric Light. Everything up to date
Tariff on application.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LTD.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.

Established 1853.

Chairman—C. R. RIVINGTON, F.E.C., J.P., D.L.
Paid-up Capital £200,000
Debentures and Debenture Stock £207,230
REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.

W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.

REVERSIONS AND LIFE INTERESTS

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the
EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand,
Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

... TYPES OF ...

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Will shortly be issued as Supplements to the

"ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE,"

Full Particulars on application.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage, Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES,

BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.

The Warehouses, having been built expressly for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities.

JOHN HANES, Manager.

Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.

LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C., and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.

ASSURANCES AND LOANS

can be effected by

MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS

in Government Service,

on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business.

Annual Revenue exceeds	£1,100,000
Bonus Additions Declared exceed	£6,750,000
Accumulated Funds exceed	£8,400,000
Claims Paid exceed	£17,000,000

ARMY ALTERATIONS

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date.

Subscription—5s. 6d. per annum, post free. One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.

ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE.

With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations. BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer,
Ashton-under-Lyne.

The Pioneer

(Established 1865).

This leading Indian paper has long held the acknowledged position of being in the very forefront of Indian journalism. Its circulation extends all over the Indian Empire, and is wider than that of any other two daily papers in the country.

Subscription to Europe, America, and the Colonies, £6 16s. per annum, post free.

THE PIONEER MAIL

(Established 1874)

Is published weekly in time for the English Mail, and contains a summary of Indian news for Anglo-Indians in Europe.

Subscription to Europe, America, or the Colonies, £2 8s. per annum, post free.

For scale of charges for advertisements, address—
GENERAL MANAGER
PIONEER PRESS, ALLAHABAD, INDIA.
Or the London Office,
13A, COCKSPUR STREET, PALL MALL, S.W.

E. & E. EMANUEL, 3, THE HARD, PORTSEA, SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate.
"Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd. Batn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wiltshire Regiment. August, 1896."

Watch and Clock Makers.

Report.
"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,79 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., R.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.

ESTABLISHED 1803.

Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.

Paid-up Capital, £300,000.

Invested Funds over £1,500,000.

E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager

REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GROUND

NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

Black Handle - 5s. 6d. Pair Ivory Handles,
Ivory Handle - 7s. 6d. In Russia Leather

Kropp Duplex Case - 21s.

Strop - 7s. 6d. Kropp Strop Paste, 6d.

Write for Pamphlet 'Shaver's Kit or Outfit' post free.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & CO., London, W.

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM,
P.S.C.

(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),
35, HEREFORD SQUARE, S.W.
(one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station, Metropolitan and District Railways).

Prepares for Sandhurst, Woolwich, Militia, and Promotion Examinations.

At the late Examinations (June, 1900), the following Four of Col. Needham's pupils were successful:—

WOOLWICH.....A. G. Rolleston.....8088
SANDHURST...P. W. von B. Malcolm.....6022
.....G. G. Symons.....6531
University Candidate: A. L. Prince.

A SPECIAL CLASS FOR THE NOVEMBER PROMOTION EXAMIN-ATION WILL BEGIN WORK WITH COLONEL NEEDHAM ON WEDNES-DAY, THE 3RD OCTOBER NEXT.

HOVE, SUSSEX.

PREPARATION for all ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITY EXAMINATIONS.

MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,
Late the Border Regiment,
Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late R.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINA-TION.

At the last SIX Examinations SEVENTY
THREE PUPILS have been SUCCESSFUL, and the FIRST PLACE on the whole List has been taken FOUR TIMES.

SUCCESSSES.

SEPTEMBER, 1899.

Place.	Name.	Marks.
FIRST (Cavalry) ..	*B. Hamilton-Stubber	1692
2nd (Infantry).....	*W. P. H. Hill	1873
2nd (Artillery)	*W. E. Delves-Brough-
	ton	1542
17th (Infantry)	*C. C. Clifton	1622
28th (Infantry)	*B. G. Clarke	1522
65th (Infantry)	*L. E. C. W. Wilmer	1330
8th (Cavalry)	*O. K. Chance	1356
(Colonial Candidate) *C. D. Macklem		1308
— (Artillery)	*E. T. F. Hood	1187
— (Infantry)	*O. F. Lloyd	1179
— (Infantry)	*F. H. Span	1147
— (Infantry)	*J. C. W. Anderson	1132
	* First Trial.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.
Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5862
Infantry	L. Aylmer	5851
Infantry	K. O. Goldie	5653
University	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.

ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY,
and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.

No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.
Capt. M. M. FESTING.

Resident and Non-resident Pupils received.
Prospectus with List of Successes on application.
Officers Coached by Correspondence.

Publications.

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Camps, and Examinations.
Now Ready, 5th EDITION.

THE OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH
BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIDE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memoirs, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Book.
Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.

By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.

3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS.

Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables,
Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

Wm. Clowes and Sons, 13, Charing Cross, S.W.,
and A. & N. Co-operative Society.

Of whom Reprint-Books, and Blocks may be had.
Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.

SIXTH THOUSAND.

The Officers' Memorandum Book for Peace and War.

By Gen. Sir RICHARD HARRISON.

Price 3s. 6d.

Can be obtained from the Army and Navy Cooperative Society, Limited, 105, Victoria Street, S.W., or of the Publishers.

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL & CO., Limited,
4, Stationers' Hall Court, E.C.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,

AND

MR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.

(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge),
ECCLEFECHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and Non-Resident, for

ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVER-
SITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.

Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate
Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of
many years' successful experience.

Careful Individual Attention. Strong
Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical
Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer.
Competent Military Instructor.

SUCCESSSES, 1900.

Woolwich.—None sent up.
Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only Candidate.

Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy.

TRINITY, CAMBRIDGE; Entrance, also PREVIOUS EXAMINATION—J. Cundell.

A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare;
and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.

LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION

WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and UNIVERSITIES.

MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.

Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PRE-
PARES A Limited Number of PUPILS.

RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST
Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.

The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.

RECENT SUCCESSSES.WOOLWICH.

G. F. Farran.....8001 marks.....Dec. 1898.
W. Burrell Hayley.....9223.....Dec. 1899.

The only pupils sent up.

SANDHURST, December, 1899, to December, 1899.

Viscount Ingestre.....7th Cavalry Cadetship.

C. M. Truman.....Cavalry Cadetship.

E. P. Grant.....Infantry Cadetship.

G. Winne Finch.....Infantry Cadetship.

B. H. Leatham.....Infantry Cadetship.

G. E. Hawes.....Infantry Cadetship.

C. A. Antrobus.....Infantry.

E. H. Pipon.....Infantry.

H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh Infantry.

E. Neave.....Infantry.

G. Wahab.....Indian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

SANDHURST, WOOLWICH,
INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SER-
VICE, AND UNIVERSITIES.*MR. J. J. GREVATT

(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY,
for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.

A Barrister on Staff assists Candidates for
DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.
Prospectus with list of successes on application.
WORK WAS RESUMED AUGUST 15, 1900.

57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

EPSOM COLLEGE.

NEXT TERM BEGINS JANUARY 18, 1901.

Public School for all Classes.

Successes this summer:—London Matricula-tion, 16 passed; Intermediate and Preliminary Scientific, 14 passed; Higher and Lower Certificates, 40 passed.

Separate Junior School.

APPLY, THE BURSAR.

Educational.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE &
TRAINING FARMS,
HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.

Full information from the Director at above
address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria Street, Westminster.

BRIGHTON—Crescent House School.

A. H. THOMAS, M.A., Oxon.

(Late 2nd Master O.M.C.).

OFFERS A SOUND GENERAL EDUCATION
to Boys preparing for

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND NAVY.

Reduced Fees offered to Sons of Officers serving in South Africa.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,
ASPATRIA,

Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising
Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

JUNIOR APPOINTMENTS in the SUPPLY and ACCOUNTING DEPART-MENTS of the ADMIRALTY (18-20), November 8.*FORTHCOMING EXAMINATION.

The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on forms to be obtained, with particulars, from the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, London,
S.W.

RUSSIAN.

Young Englishman, who has lived in Russia for 20 years, wishes to give
LESSONS IN RUSSIAN.

Address: H. E. NORMAN, Holly House,
Boutflower Rd., Clapham Junction, S.W.

THE PRINCESS HELENA COLLEGE
EALING, R.

President—H.E.H. the PRINCESS CHRISTIAN.

The NOMINATION to FOUNDATION SCHOLARSHIPS of the fatherless daughters of clergymen and officers (Naval, Military, and Civil Service) will take place in November.

Forms of application may be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, Lady Jeune, 79, Harley Street,
W., or from the Lady Principal of the College, and must be sent in not later than October 31.

HOME SCHOOL FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.

Home School for the Daughters of Gentlemen
in one of the healthiest suburbs of London. A thoroughly sound modern education is given to a limited number of young ladies, under the careful superintendence of an experienced lady principal, assisted by accomplished masters and mistresses
(graduates).

Pupils are prepared for the London University examinations, Royal Academy of Music, &c., when desired.

References kindly permitted to His Grace the Archbishop of York, Sir William Howard Russell,
the Rev. Canon Duckworth, Colonel Swiney,
Judge Gates, parents of pupils, &c.

Address—
D. C. L., Ellery, Atkins Road, Clapham Park,
London, S.W.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1,
CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.

ARMY TAILOR AND MILITARY OUTFITTER.—F. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.

BREECHES MAKERS AND MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.

GUN AND RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W., PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. '303 Rifles a specialité.

MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN, Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., EDINBURGH (late 27, North Bridge).

MILITARY TAILORS AND BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.

HOTEL DIRECTORY.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well
Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining,
Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.

DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea
Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.

DUBLIN.—SHELBOURNE HOTEL.
First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.

EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south
aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate.
An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.

LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families.—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.

PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL AND QUEEN'S HOTEL.—
Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH

AND

MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.

(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge).

Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors,
PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for
the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and
UNIVERSITIES at

CEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE
HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;

For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.R.
Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."

Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and

7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT
(150 yards from the Station), for Promotion
Candidates and Day Pupils.

Telephone, "217, Kensington."
List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed,
will be sent on application.

TURKISH & ARABIC.SCHOLARSHIPS. REWARDS.

Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S principal successes at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish, held on April 5, 1899, were Colonel E.
Stephenson, commanding officer of the Essex
Regiment, QUALIFIED INTERPRETER at FIRST
TRIAL, with 667 marks, and on October 18, 1899, Major H. A. Curtis, R.A., QUALIFIED with 643; and in Arabic, on Oct. 20, 1899, Capt. H. R. Cook,
R.A., who "passed" with 502.

FIFTEEN other officers were also exclusively prepared by him and passed as QUALIFIED INTER-PRETERS in TURKISH with high marks.

Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.

NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-
STANI, RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.

Distance offers no hindrance to success.

Intending Candidates should begin work early.

Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.

Shipping.INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA,
QUEENSLAND, BURMAH,
PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.
BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVA-
TION COMPANY, LIMITED.
BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to
CALCUTTA.	ZANZIBAR.
MADEIRA.	MOBASSA.
COLOMBO.	BRISBANE.
RANGOON.	BATAVIA.
MAURITIUS.	BOCKHAMPTON.
BOMBAY.	TOWNSVILLE.
KURACHIEE.	MARYBOURGH.
BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo
to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH,
EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great
Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House,
Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square,
Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock
House, Billiter Street, E.C.

P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA,
CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICES.

P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS
TO GIBALTAR, MAR-
SEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN,
BOMBAY, KURACHIEE, CALCUTTA,
CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN,
AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.

P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TIC-KETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.—For particulars apply
at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall
Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue,
W.C.

BIBBY LINE

TO

MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMBO,
RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA
(via Tuticorin).

Tons. Liverpool. Marseilles.
STAFFORDSHIRE * 6005 Oct. 18 Oct. 25.
CHESHIRE * 5775 Nov. 1 Nov. 8
DERBYSHIRE * 6635 Nov. 17 Nov. 24

These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs.
Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.

Every possible comfort for first class passengers only.

This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles
are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,

26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and

10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.

ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,

138, Leadenhall Street, London.

C. HOWARD & SONS,
45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Fantaloons,
Polo Breeches.
11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.

F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.

Established over 80 Years.

ALL BUT NEW
OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,
for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of

LEWIS MOSES,
65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,
at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms and apparel purchased.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS
ARMS, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES
Engraved as Gems, from original and artistic designs.

NOTE PAPER and ENVELOPES brilliantly illuminated by hand in gold, silver, bronze, and colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 10.
HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.

All the New and Fashionable Note Papers.
BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS of FARE,
GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS,
INVITATIONS and BOOK PLATES.
REGIMENTAL BAND CARDS.

A VISITING CARD PLATE
elegantly engraved and 100 CARDS printed for 4s. 6d.
RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD.

E. WHISTLER,
11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND
BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.

Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S
The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach,
Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations,
Bilious Affections.

The Physician's Cure
for Gout, Rheumatic
Gout and Gravel; the safest and most gentle
Medicine for Infants,
Children, Delicate Females, and the Sickness of Pregnancy.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA
Sold Throughout the World.
N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,
Naval and Military Outfitters,
WEST END BRANCH—
19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.
Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard. Telegraphic Address—
Do. Do. 5810 Avenue. "Realistic, LONDON."
New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements
(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)
BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.
REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.
Infantry, 35s. 6d. Cavalry, 38s. 6d.
ON APPROVAL.

If the Blood is Diseased the Body is Diseased and Enfeebled. Keep your Blood Pure and the Health of the System will follow.

Clarke's Blood Mixture,
THE WORLD-FAMED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RESTORER,

is warranted to Cleanse the Blood from all Impurities from whatever cause arising,
For Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Sores of all kinds, Eczema, Scourvy, Scrofula, Bad
Legs, Glandular Swellings, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous.
It is the only real Specific for Gout and Rheumatic pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the Blood and Bones.

As this Mixture is pleasant to the taste and warranted free from anything injurious to the most delicate constitution of either sex, from infancy to old age, the Proprietors solicit sufferers to give it a trial to test its value. Clarke's Blood Mixture is sold by all Chemists throughout the world. Price 2s. 9d. and 11s.
per bottle.

Thousands of Testimonials of Wonderful Cures from all parts of the World.
Proprietors: The Lincoln and Midland Counties Drug Co., Lincoln.
BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS OR SUBSTITUTES.

HEERING'S COPENHAGEN
CHERRY BRANDY

Purveyor by Appointment to the Royal Danish and Imperial Russian Courts and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales
ESTABLISHED 1818.

Peter J. Heering SOLD THROUGHOUT
THE WORLD.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS

in the "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE" will be sent on application to the offices.

RICHARD DICKESON
AND COMPANY,
WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND
PROVISION IMPORTERS.
LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, Mansell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVER: Market Lane and Queen Street,
ALDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street. FLY-
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse. PEM-
BROKE DOCK: Tremeryck Street. GIBRAL-
TAR: City Mill Lane. CAPE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street. PORT ELIZABETH:
Lenkells Warehouses, Rafane Vale. DURBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street. Agencies at
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c., &c.

Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price Lists
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Canteen
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

OLD ARTIFICIAL TEETH BOUGHT.

Persons wishing to receive full value should apply to the manufacturing dentists,
Messrs. BROWNING.
If forwarded by post, value per return.
Chief Office: 133, OXFORD STREET (opposite
Berners Street), London.
Established 100 years.

The Rangoon Times

Is the Most Popular Daily Newspaper in
BURMA. Conducted on Independent
Lines. Has a large Circulation throughout the Province, and is a Splendid
Medium for Advertising.

THE WEEKLY
RANGOON TIMES

Is published on every Homeward Mail day, giving an excellent summary of the week's news.

THE RANGOON COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER,

Published every morning, is a Favourite
Medium with Business Men for Advertising Purposes.

10, MERCHANT STREET, RANGOON.

The Madras Times.

PUBLISHED TWICE DAILY.
MORNING EDITION.—The only morning daily
paper of the capital of Southern India.
EVENING EDITION.—Being despatched by the mail trains, this edition circulates throughout the South of India, from Orissa to Cape Cor-
morin, and the Nizam's Dominions, Ceylon,
Burma, the Straits Settlements, &c.

THE MADRAS TIMES

WEEKLY AND OVERLAND EDITION.
For Weekly Subscribers, and for despatch to
the United Kingdom, Russia, Germany, France,
America, South Africa, Burma, the Straits Settlements, China, Japan, and Australia, the MADRAS
TIMES (Weekly and Overland Edition) is the best weekly newspaper in Southern India. Post free 21 5s. per annum.

AGENTS IN LONDON FOR ADVERTISEMENTS, &c.:
Messrs. HENRY S. KING & Co., Cornhill.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS

EPPS'S

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

COCOA

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

MOUSELL BROS.,

FURNITURE REMOVERS

AND STORERS,

Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, W.

AND WALHAM GREEN, FULHAM.

BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT

BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.

LEAMINGTON.—Windsor Street.

MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.

LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.

LIVERPOOL.—Bronte Street, Russell Street.

EXETER.—London Inn Square.

GLOUCESTER.—Depository, and Van and Wagon
Works, Commercial Road.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and
VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete,
and single Articles in condition equal to New
at one-third original cost.

SECOND-HAND
UNIFORMS
BOUGHT AND SOLD.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UNI-
FORMS in all conditions at from one-fifth
original cost, or sells the same on commission.
Mufti clothing also purchased.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2127.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRICE 6D.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—		PAGE
The Guerilla War - - - - -		1037
The Situation in China - - - - -		1037
The Command of the Sea - - - - -		1048
Officers Old and New - - - - -		1038
Corsica and Bizerta- - - - -		1049
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes - - - - -		1038
Army Personal - - - - -		1041
Army Foreign - - - - -		1042
Navy Notes - - - - -		1049
Navy Personal - - - - -		1051
Letters to the Editor—
The Cavalry in South Africa - - - - -		1043
The Forces of New South Wales - - - - -		1052
Officers' Expenses - - - - -		1046
Articles—
The Future Uses of the Volunteers - - - - -		1040
Major-General Hart, C.B. - - - - -		1040
Trafalgar Day- - - - -		1052
War Summary - - - - -		1043
The China Crisis - - - - -		1052
Casualties in South Africa - - - - -		1053
The Gazettes—
Army - - - - -		1054
Navy - - - - -		1058
Regimental Intelligence - - - - -		1045
Reviews—
The Great Boer War - - - - -		1047
Some Books in South Africa - - - - -		1047
Obituary - - - - -		1044
Naval Intelligence - - - - -		1058

THE GUERRILLA WAR.

THE existing condition of affairs in the Orange River and Transvaal Colonies affords but little ground for satisfaction. If anything, indeed, the general situation tends at present to grow worse rather than better. In various quarters, from Ermelo in the east to Zeerust in the west, a distance of 260 miles, and thence to Philippolis, nearly 340 miles due south, recent conflicts have occurred between British and Boers in which the latter, being as we are told "splendidly mounted," almost invariably elude pursuit, after inflicting, in many cases, as much loss on our troops as they suffer themselves. The continuance of this insane struggle is proving disastrous to the country, and it is only explicable on the supposition that it is deliberately kept alive by the few leading Boers of any weight now remaining in the field at the instigation of ex-President Kruger's friends, who still cling to the vain hope of European intervention. Since the only ground on which such a hope can now be based with any plausibility is the evidence that the Boers as a people are still in arms and unsubdued, the guerilla war is likely to continue until the illusion of intervention has been finally dispelled, by the failure to arouse any enthusiasm for the Boer cause by Mr. Kruger's presence in Europe.

In considering the probability or otherwise of an early restoration of peace, it must be borne in mind that we have been fighting the entire manhood of a people in arms, who, having no standing army the defeat of which in the field would ordinarily be accepted as determining a country's fate, and being possessed of a mobility unsurpassed in modern times, can continue in arms so long as their ammunition holds out, assured of active sympathy and support from their brother Boers, who from various motives have returned to their farms. Lord Roberts has tried leniency until it has been construed into an evidence of weakness, being misunderstood and unappreciated. There are signs at last, however, that more drastic methods are about to be adopted. It is unfortunate that they should be necessary, but the interests of both the whole of South Africa, and also of the Empire, demand the early termination of this struggle. It will be interesting now to record briefly the doings of the various columns still operating against the Boer commandos, and to note the incidents that have occurred recently in various widely-separated places. In a fight on the 17th inst. at Jagersfontein, a few miles east of Fauresmith, in the Orange River Colony, we lost nine killed and two mortally wounded; the Boers had twenty-one killed. The defending force was divided, part holding two forts south of the little town, and part some kopjes to the west. The enemy attacked at daybreak, assisted by men and women in the town. They released the prisoners in the gaol and shot down the unarmed natives, after which they decamped. Fauresmith, garrisoned by the 2nd Batn. Seaforth Highlanders, was subjected to a determined attack, probably by the same commando, on the 19th inst. This attack was unsuccessful, but further south a strong raiding force had occupied Philippolis for some days until dislodged on Wednesday by British reinforcements. The growing activity of the marauding bands in the direction of the southern border will have to be carefully watched. At one point the border has actually been crossed; the commandeering of horses and saddlery south of the Orange River, and not far from the station of that name, was reported from Kraddock on Wednesday; and Colesberg, in Cape Colony, is apprehensive of a raid. Lord Methuen and Colonel Douglas have been actively engaged near Zeerust fighting with Delarey and Lemmer. During his recent trying march to Zeerust, Methuen surprised Lemmer's laager on the 16th inst., and captured over 200 waggons. Colonel Douglas, who remains for the present at Zeerust, also took some waggons and a few prisoners. Since leaving Rustenburg Methuen had six killed and ten wounded. On Saturday his convoy was unsuccessfully attached near Zeerust, and on the same day his force, after some hours' fighting, drove a Boer commando from Botha's Farm, a few miles from Zeerust. Our loss was four killed and ten wounded, and our success apparently did not go beyond dislodging the enemy from their position, which was strong and protected in front by wire entanglements concealed in the growing crops. The Boer forces in this neighbourhood are still in possession of artillery. As a rule the raiding bands are now depending on their rifles alone, whereby their mobility is much increased.

In the eastern Transvaal General French, having marched his column fifty miles south-west from Carolina, reached Bethel on his way to Heidelberg on Saturday, after traversing a district hitherto unsearched by our troops. He has experienced a little fighting every day and has had several casualties. About 1,000 Boers the remnants of various commandos have hung upon his line of march, and at Ermelo he found the people very troublesome. His convoy of sick and wounded was twice stopped by commandos, and eight waggons seized and carried off. The western districts are being searched by several small columns acting independently. While Lord Methuen has been engaged about Zeerust, and has been watching the country towards Eland's River and Rustenburg, Lord Erroll has occupied Buffelshoek from Ottoshoop, fifteen miles south of Zeerust, without any casualties. General Settle, 150 miles further south, reached Hoopstad in the Orange River Colony on Saturday, having been attacked en route from Bloemhof. It will be observed that the Boers are now as often as not the attacking party, and although they rarely score an absolute success they almost invariably inflict some loss on our troops. Throughout the central region, from Pretoria southwards, the British have also been in conflict with the enemy at many points. General Paget's force during the last few days has captured sixty-five prisoners and large numbers of cattle and sheep in the neighbourhood of Pienaars River. Further south a foraging party from General Barton's command was attacked on the 18th inst. near Frederikstad Station, and on Saturday the enemy assaulted his camp with great daring. On the same day the Mounted Infantry of General W. Knox's command at Kroonstad drove a small commando from the vicinity of the railway near Honing Spruit, and General Hunter a few days' later burnt down the village of Bothaville, fifty miles north-west of Kroonstad, as a punishment for "sniping." To the south-west of Bloemfontein a number of small commandos having a reputed total strength of 1,500 men are raiding the country, and it is reported that many who took the oath of neutrality are prepared to go again into laager along the Kimberley road. In the extreme south-east Zastron was smartly seized by a party of police from Rouxville on Wednesday and ten Boers captured.

The above is a brief record of the general condition of unrest prevailing over the entire theatre of war. While London is preparing to pay its well-deserved tribute of admiration to the gallant City Imperial Volunteers now returning from the front, and Sir Redvers Buller is on the sea homeward-bound to receive the thanks of his countrymen, his arduous task being accomplished, the great bulk of the British Army is still retained in South Africa with its hands full, and no great diminution of the force is as yet possible.

THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

THE great and complex Chinese problem is now sorely taxing the diplomacy of the civilised world in its efforts to find a solution. Its chief item and the absorbing topic of the hour is the recent Anglo-German Agreement, having for its object the maintenance of the "open door" policy in China, and the integrity of the Chinese Empire. Whether or not Great Britain, as the German Press maintains, has by this Agreement abdicated her position of commercial supremacy in the great Yang-tse Valley, we have not to consider here. What is satisfactory to us is that, by this important instrument, Great Britain has, in her general policy in the Celestial Empire, become allied to the most powerful military Power of the day. The immediate probable gain will be one of comparative stability, for a time at least, in the action of the great Powers, all of which are likely, in the main, to fall into line with Great Britain and Germany.

It may well be, as has been pointed out, in the Morning Post of Wednesday, by Mr. A. R. Colquhoun, a well-known authority on China, that the new Agreement contains ambiguous expressions, the exact meaning of the "Chinese Empire," and other analogous terms used therein, being uncertain. What chiefly concerns us here is the conclusion to which he comes, and with which we agree, namely, that the ultimate position—whether favourable or otherwise—of Great Britain in China will depend on her power to make her voice heard. The concluding words of his article are as follow:—"We were not prepared for the present crisis in the Far East, but we must be prepared for the next. To sit still and let things drift is not preparation. The weight of each Power in the Far East is in proportion to the force it is prepared to bring to bear. We had no force available, and our interests had gone to the wall. The struggle is not yet over, and, though we have seriously handicapped ourselves, we may yet save our reputation, if not our purses, at the last round—and for that last round let us prepare."

While diplomacy is labouring after a common line of action for the Powers, affairs in China become daily more alarming. In Manchuria Russia is at present apparently content to guard and hold the railways. At Tien-tsin and Peking the allied garrisons are settling down for the winter, Count von Waldersee's recent expedition from those places to Pao-ting-fu having terminated. The manner of its termination, however, was satisfactory alone to the amour propre of a French column, which, acting semi-independently and finding itself on the line of march to Pao-ting-fu, cut in before the allied columns converging from Peking and Tien-tsin, and on the 15th inst. occupied the town, over which a white flag was flying. The evacuation of the place without opposition had been ordered by Li Hung Chang, and the Boxers, by that act of diplomacy, were spared the salutary lesson that had been prepared for them. Military operations are now suspended in Chi-li north.

While the Boxer society is still far from being suppressed in the north, although quiet prevails there at present, a new danger to the Chinese throne has arisen in the south, from the outbreak of a rebellious movement directed against the Manchu dynasty. The centre of its activity lies near Canton and along the East River, about a hundred miles to the north of the newly-acquired British territory forming the hinterland of Hong Kong. The 2nd Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers and some Artillery have in consequence been recalled from Tien-tsin to Hong Kong to stiffen the garrison. The situation is one that justly causes anxiety, and European troops continue to be despatched to China to strengthen the position of the Allies generally. The Fourth British-Indian Brigade had arrived at Tien-tsin on the 18th inst.; on the 19th a force of 1,700 Russians passed Port Said en route for Port Arthur; and, according to the Echo de Paris, a mobile force of 3,800 French will be ready to embark at the end of the present month at Marseilles, Philippeville, and Tunis, for the Far East.

OFFICERS OLD AND NEW.

ALTHOUGH the war in South Africa still drags on wearisomely, and there is no certainty that the troops can soon return in any considerable numbers, some have already arrived, and many officers are once more amongst us to face their detractors and speak in their own defence. It is no secret, from the tone of those, who have already reached this country that much mortification and soreness of heart have prevailed in South Africa. The magnitude of the late struggle has never been fully appreciated here; its extreme difficulty, the natural obstacles so cleverly utilised by an astute and warlike enemy, perfectly equipped and fighting on his own ground, these have never been sufficiently taken into account. There must be a reaction, however. The task, so far, has been all on one side. We have had fault-finding comments, reiterated accusations, but no real defence. The correspondents have seldom been amply informed, despatches have never told all their inditers knew. Within a few weeks or months at most the country will be filled with indignant men eager to speak on their own behalf. They will claim a hearing and will be listened to with attentive, sympathetic respect. Light will be let into dark places, new and authentic versions will be given of episodes and incidents that need only clear, well-founded explanations to be viewed in a very different light. Army officers one way and another have considerable influence; there are many channels through which they can make themselves heard, on platforms, in social circles, and in the Press. Some already have written monographs on matters in which they were especially concerned, and to these may be added the more sober and judicial accounts just published by Winston Churchill and Conan Doyle. There must be a reversal of the first hasty verdict and more justice must be done.

Correction will best be applied by considering the British officer as he was and as he is, by comparing the man of yesterday with the man of to-day. In some fine qualities he is unchanging let us earnestly hope; he will be an honourable, chivalrous gentleman for all time; a prominent member of the "come on" school as opposed to the "go on," one who will always take the post of danger, will be eager to lead rather than follow. But the contrast between past and present is sharply accentuated, and the distinction is between the amateur and the professional. Time was when his military business occupied no more than the smallest half of his daily life, when parades were few, drills infrequent, instruction, except of the most elementary kind, was wanting. Officers put on uniform as little as possible; a Guards' colonel might be seen with an umbrella, in a black frock-coat, and stove pipe hat, inspecting detachments; the mess dress of the Household Cavalry was the ordinary black evening clothes of general society. "Leave" was an almost inalienable right, three or four months out of every twelve by no means an unusual allowance. In one famous regiment the difference between "first" and "second" leave—the two divisions of the winter leave season, that is to say—was wittily described as meaning that when the second period began no one came back and all the others went away. There is leave still and leisure, and all manner of manly sports and pastimes, but there is real hard work too, and lots of it. It is the greatest mistake to imagine that nowadays officers play at soldiering. There is plenty to do day after day, year in year out, military training is in constant progress, all officers are busily engaged in teaching and being taught. The whole business of drilling the young soldiers who are continually passing through the ranks, from the stage of the recruit to the reservist and dacapo, falls upon the officers; they must first learn before they can apply their knowledge. The acquisition of knowledge is imperative on other grounds. Not only must a man show an earnest desire to improve himself, and that soon under pain of dismissal, but he must satisfy the sharp tests applied by searching examinations for promotion. It may be fearlessly affirmed, and the statement will be borne out by all who know the facts, that the schoolmaster is abroad in the Army, and that to stigmatise our officers as ignorant, incompetent idlers is a base libel on a really most zealous, painstaking, and intelligent body of public servants.

Whether the system at present in force gives us quite the right leaders may be open to question. It has been planned by well-intentioned authorities working according to their lights, and recent experience tends to show that more attention might with advantage be directed to such vital matters as outpost duties and reconnaissances or the best methods of attack in face of the terrible developments of modern fire. Yet there is one especial difficulty in regard to the tactical instruction of our officers. While the fundamental principles of warfare are generally constant for other armies, ours has to fight under ever-varying conditions, and the methods that serve in one country against one kind of enemy will be of no avail in another. Within a couple of years our troops have been engaged in rugged mountain country and in vast tropical deserts. What was effective in the Tirah and now in the Transvaal would have been useless in the Soudan. This enlarges indefinitely the character of the training. Some clever folk have suggested that kopjes on the South African model should be constructed at Aldershot to teach men how to deal with them. The next campaign may be in a marsh country or in an impenetrable jungle. The long and the short of it is that our officers often know more, not less, than their comrades abroad, and they are so much the better for all practical work in the field. It will surely be found when full information is to hand that if we have been worsted on a few occasions there have been many more in which our subordinate leaders have evinced remarkable aptitude, often uncommon skill. If they have failed, it is as others, the best instructed, the most scientifically trained among Continental officers would have failed. What we have to guard against especially is the evolution of an officer who has mastered theory but knows no practice—who is at home in the closet but astray in the field. The ideal leader is a cross between the pedant and the prize-fighter, the scientist and the bludgeon-worker. He who unites in his person a happy admixture of these two diverse and extreme qualities is the man most certain to carry his troops to victory, and we have perhaps gone nearer to finding him than have our neighbours, whose products are somewhat blindly extolled.

Army Notes.

It is pleasant to record in these columns—a "professional" paper consecrated to the interests, well-being, and fair fame of two noble services—the tribute paid to our officers by an old comrade who has recently shared many of their trials and dangers. Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., speaking at the Pall Mall Club on Thursday night, chivalrously defended them against the aspersions of such writers as Mr. Hales. He most strenuously and indignantly denied what Mr. Hales had said. "Mr. Hales had poured out the vials of his scorn on the 'kid-gloved British officer,' with his 'hee-haw manners,' his 'drawling speech,' his 'offensive arrogance,' and his 'worship of dress.' These charges had since been repeated in a more serious way in an article in the Nineteenth Century. He (Churchill) had seen more of the war in South Africa than Mr. Hales, and he utterly denied the truth or justice of these charges. (Cheers.) A man had a right to be judged by his peers, and let the British officer be judged by the fighting races whom he trained and led. (Cheers.) Would Buller's army, so often beaten, have fought its way into Ladysmith if the private soldiers had believed their officers to be kid-gloved effigies and duffers or arrogant fools? (Hear, hear.) Our system of military education might be defective, but there was something that was worth preserving. Ask the troopers of the Imperial Light Horse or of the South African Light Horse what they thought of the Regular officers who fought with them. Ask the men of Brabant's Horse or Montgomery's Scouts, ask officers of the Australian and Canadian contingents whether they were ashamed of their English brothers in arms. He knew what their answer would be. Whatever their impatience with our military system, they would say it was a foul and cruel slander to call the British officer either negligent or stupid. (Cheers.) Ask the fighting races of India what they thought of the men who led them, or ask the black Sudanese and even the fellaheen their opinion of the 'kid-gloved' officer. (Hear, hear.) Finally, let the casualty lists in the South African war be glanced at, and in that glorious disproportion of mortality between the officers and men would be found something to convince even the bitterest critic that the British officer had done much to preserve the honour of his country and the dignity of British manhood. (Cheers.)"

"Balaklava Day! The 25th October, 1854!" Forty-six years have taken toll of the survivors of the two feats of arms which on that day illustrated the annals of the British Army—the last "charges" that cavalry will ever deliver in stricken field, if the sorry theorists who suppose that the warfare in Natal and the South African Republics represents the universal future of campaigning are to be credited. The Brigades of the Cavalry Division, each with its distinct action, for some years had their festivals or commemorative banquets apart. To the Heavy Brigade there belonged the honour of a most signal achievement—the overthrow of a great array of horsemen by a force infinitely inferior in numbers and position which involved the arrest, and finally the abandonment, of the project of the Russian general to lay hold of the base of our operations against Sebastopol, and which caused him to retire his army and stand on the defensive in the valley of the Tchernaya. The rôle of the Light Brigade was very different. They were, as the Commander-in-Chief told the officer in command of it, "destroyed." It was, we think, unjust to the Brigadier to say, "You have destroyed the Light Brigade." They were destroyed in obedience to confused and ill-judged orders, badly expressed and interpreted, but executed with a magnificent élan, devotion and courage never surpassed. For years there were two commemorative dinners on the same day, but the numbers attending each diminished, and gradually those who desired to keep green the memory of actions that will never die in our history gathered together at the summons of some ardent comrade, and met, as they did last Thursday at the Junior, to greet each other once more ere "the retreat" is sounded for the veterans who have one great memory to bind them whilst they live—"We fought at Balaklava."

At a time when the reconstitution of the War Office in Pall Mall occupies so much attention it is interesting to note that there are many complaints of the cognate department in India. Complaints are often heard that the military department of the Government of India, which is its official cognomen, is to all intents and purposes a civil administration. In other words, the civilelement is altogether predominant. There is only one military member upon the Board, and he is not always a soldier in the true sense of the word, for his antecedent experience may have been in the closet, not in the field. The result is that the purely professional matters do not receive expert attention; schemes and measures which have been put forward to increase efficiency and well-being are submitted to the decision of an authority not always competent to deal with them. Again, the Indian War Office, like that in Pall Mall, is continually subordinated to financial control, and it is said that it is far too anxious to stand well with the Financial Department. Lord Curzon appears to have realised this, and has been seriously anxious to reform his military department, strengthening it by a large admixture of practical men, and giving it a military rather than a civilian character. If now, as report goes, he is to be brought home to England shortly, any good intentions he may have had will have borne no satisfactory fruit.

The War Office is displaying commendable energy with regard to the Channel defences. Closely following on the despatch of some 6in. quick-firing guns to Dover, three 9in. wire-built guns of the same character arrived there on Friday last. Their "effective" range, many of the papers announce with pride, is nearly eleven miles. But what earthly good, one is tempted to ask, is a range of eleven miles when one considers that the naval gunners in South Africa had repeatedly to be warned that they were dropping projectiles into their own advancing troops at a range of less than seven miles? And, indeed, this was repeatedly the case. Again, if it is impossible to see what you are firing at when the range is seven miles, how can a range of eleven miles be deemed the slightest quality in a gun? An object on the sea at such a distance would be practically invisible. It would seem that the greatest practical range had now been reached; it is certain, moreover, that greater muzzle velocity and not greater range power is the direction in which improvements in modern guns should now tend.

A commendable suggestion has been put forward that war medals should be more largely worn in private life—out of uniform, that is to say—so that people should recognise the men who have served, and pay to them the consideration that is their due. It would help many an old soldier to employment if he was seen to carry on his breast the scraps of ribbon that bear witness to his deeds, and possibly in fashionable society the veteran officer who was decorated might sometimes find himself less at a disadvantage with younger and showier rivals. No doubt at present medals or ribbons are occasionally seen; as when a pensioner puts them on with his best clothes on Sunday or pay-day, or the old soldier servants of a military club are encouraged to wear them in livery. It is the accepted rule, too, at public dinners or entertainments when Royalty is present that all who have medals and orders should show them at their button-holes. What is wanted is a general and accepted custom, based upon authority, or rather the expressed wish of authority, starting from the Queen herself. Nothing less would make the practice popular, or overcome the somewhat excessive shyness or shamefacedness that, so far, has prevented its adoption. We cannot well quarrel with such modesty, which is not too prevalent a virtue in these days of self-advertisement; but the most shrinking natures will be fortified by a Royal proclamation to encourage the wearing of honours awarded by the Sovereign for gallant and distinguished conduct on the field.

The day is not far distant when we shall have professional accounts of the recent operations in South Africa, more detailed than those which have appeared in the public despatches, more accurate because better informed than the vivid, yet hasty, impressions of the war correspondents. One of the first has just appeared in the Journal of the Royal United Service Institution. It is written by Major J. E. Caunter, Lancashire Fusiliers, and it describes the movements of the 6th Division, to which he was D.A.A.G., from Enslin to Bloemfontein. It is a business-like paper, with all the weight and definiteness of an official report, expanded by graphic description and useful information. It may be commended for perusal to those conceited and ill-informed critics who presume to laugh at our military organisation. From first to last the 6th Division, which had but recently arrived in South Africa, was handled with great skill and precision by its commander, Major-General Kelly-Kenny. He was ably supported by his two Brigadiers, C. E. Knox (an artilleryman, who had been through the Bechuanaland Expedition), and Stephenson of the Essex Regiment, who has proved himself a first-class tactical leader. The good work done by the 6th Division, which contributed so largely to the heading off of Cronje in his retreat, has received much of the praise it deserves, but we have to thank Major Caunter for a more detailed account of the fine spirit shown by the troops. His description of the march from Waterval Drift to the Modder on February 14, is worth quoting in full:—

"All were in good spirits when a start was made at 1 a.m. for Wegdrai on the 14th, and few imagined that before the dawn of another day they would have completed, perhaps, the hardest march of the campaign, and would have come up with the cavalry, and established themselves on the River Modder at Klip Drift. The direction of the march was practically due north, with the Riet on the left flank throughout. The rate of marching during the darkness was very slow, and, although after daybreak a better pace was maintained, it was not until 11 a.m. that the farm of Wegdrai was reached. The distance in a direct line was about 10 miles, but this must have been greatly exceeded in going round kopjes and avoiding heavy ground. During the day-time the heat was intense, but the men struggled pluckily to the end, and looked forward to a well-earned rest until the following morning. The Division had hardly settled down in bivouac, filled water-carts and bottles, and made what poor attempts they could to cook the meat by the aid of the scrub growing on the banks of the Riet, than commanding officers were asked whether their men could make another effort, as it was of great importance to push on, if possible, to the Modder River that night. The answer was the same from all; the men were undoubtedly done up and wearied by the night march, but if an effort were called for, they would guarantee that it would not be called for in vain. Accordingly, after three hours' rest a fresh start was made. The direction was now N.N.W., leaving the village of Jacobsdal about three and a half miles on the left. Parties of the enemy were seen in the neighbourhood, but were driven off by a few volleys. Good progress was made while daylight lasted, but as fatigue began to tell, frequent halts became necessary, and the pace slackened. To add to the hardships heavy rain came on about 9 p.m. At each halt the men fell rather than lay down, and were asleep almost before they touched the ground. Many declared they slept as they marched. From point to point the distance from Wegdrai to Klip Drift is only twelve miles, but, including detours, the column had covered at least fifteen, when at last, soon after midnight, footsore and weary, but game to the end, it reached its destination. From 1 a.m. on the 14th to 12.30 a.m. on the 15th, the Division had marched between 27 and 28 miles."

The difficulties encountered by our Intelligence officers in South Africa has been amusingly described by Major Caunter, D.A.A.G. of the 6th Division in South Africa, in an article from which quotations have been made elsewhere:—

"The Boer prisoner appears at first an excellent medium for the collection of intelligence. He is anxious to tell all he knows, and is rarely at a loss for an answer; he never takes part in the fighting, but invariably belonged to the commissariat or transport, or has been a despatch rider; he has always been opposed to the war, and feels certain that the majority of burghers are sick of it, and are only too anxious to discover a pretext to return to their farms; his countrymen have suffered terribly since October, are short of sugar and coffee, and their ponies are in bad condition; they have no confidence in their leaders. He is usually prepared to give you the numbers and movements of any particular commando or force. The native deserter from the Boer laager, on the other hand, is quite helpless when interrogated as to numbers, knows nothing of intended movements, but has in all cases been cruelly ill-used by his late masters, and is quite ready to show you the marks of his ill-treatment. How much, or rather how little, to believe, and what deductions to draw from the tissue of falsehoods poured hourly into his ear by these precious informers is the not too easy task of the Intelligence officer. The native on the whole, however, was found fairly reliable on topographical matters, his statements as to the direction and nature of roads and the practicability of drifts, &c., generally proving accurate. As to the Boer, the best plan undoubtedly was by judicious questions to get from him all he seemed so eager to tell, to affect to believe anything and everything, to sympathise with his lacerated feelings at being separated from his family, and then to credit only what agreed with known facts, or was corroborated by other and more reliable intelligence. The 'slim' look that would flash, ever and again from the cunning eye, was often an excellent guide as to the reliability of the statement."

A suggestion has been made by a distinguished general officer that a small detachment of Chelsea pensioners should form part of the guard of honour which accompanies the Duke of York to Australia. These fine veterans are really the "Old Guard" of the British Army, and they would surely be very cordially welcomed by our Colonial sons. Moreover, such an honour would be deeply appreciated in the Army as proving that long and good service is not forgotten. There are amongst the pensioners of Chelsea Hospital some survivors of the Maori wars, and they would no doubt be well remembered in New Zealand. The suggestion is strongly commended to the War Office.

The promotion of Captain Baron von Lüttwitz to the General Staff of the German Army at Berlin, gratifying as it must be to himself and to his friends, will cause regret to the British officers to whom he is known in this country and abroad, because they will miss at military gatherings a courteous, intelligent, and accomplished comrade in arms; but they will feel that the selection is thoroughly justified. Baron von Lüttwitz's successor enjoys a historic name and has the reputation of possessing the excellent qualities associated with the post of military attaché to the German Embassy.

MAJOR-GENERAL A. FITZROY HART, C.B.

Some very unfair and ungenerous strictures were passed upon General Fitzroy Hart in the terrible fighting on the Tugela, and it is but making proper amends to this gallant officer to give publicity to Dr. Conan Doyle's appreciation of him. It will be found in the pages of "The Great Boer War," which is reviewed in another column, and is as follows:—"Brigadier Fitzroy Hart, to whom the final assault was entrusted, is in some ways as singular and picturesque a type as has been evolved in the war. A dandy soldier, always the picture of neatness from the top of his helmet to the heels of his well-polished brown boots, he brings to military matters the same precision which he affects in dress. Pedantic in his accuracy, he actually, at the battle of Colenso, drilled the Irish Brigade for half an hour before leading them into action, and threw out markers under a deadly fire in order that his change from close to extended formation might be academically correct. The heavy loss of the brigade at this action was to some extent ascribed to him and affected his popularity; but as his men came to know him better, his romantic bravery, his whimsical soldierly humour, their dislike changed into admiration. His personal disregard for danger was notorious and reprehensible. 'Where is General Hart?' asked someone in action. 'I have not seen him, but I know where you will find him. Go ahead of the skirmish line and you will see him standing on a rock,' was the answer. He bore a charmed life. It was a danger to be near him. 'Whom are you going to?' 'General Hart,' said the Aide-de-Camp. 'Then good-bye!' cried his fellows. A grim humour ran through his nature. It is gravely recorded and widely believed that he lined up a regiment on a hill-top in order to teach them not to shrink from fire. Amid the laughter of his Irishmen, he walked through the open files of his firing line holding a laggard by the ear. This was the man who had put such a spirit into the Irish Brigade that amid that army of valiant men there were none who held such a record. 'Their rushes were the quickest, their rushes were the longest, and they stayed the shortest time under cover,' said a shrewd military observer. To Hart and his brigade was given the task of clearing the way to Ladysmith."

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1057.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1059.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1069.

THE FUTURE USES OF THE VOLUNTEERS.

The year 1900 will long be memorable in the annals of our Volunteers owing to the part they have taken in the War with the Transvaal. Matters were not going too well with our forces early in January; our barracks in England were then almost denuded of regular troops, a portion of our splendid Militia force who had been temporarily occupying our empty barracks were also on their way to South Africa to protect our lines of communications. Then our military authorities began to realise the task we had on hand, and asked our Volunteers what they could do to help in the war. It was no doubt Lord Robert's suggestion to the War Office that Volunteer companies should be enrolled at home, and sent out to their respective territorial regiments at the front. Thus sixty-three Line regiments serving in South Africa were by the end of April each supplied with an extra company of three officers and 116 rank and file, raised and connected with their own regimental districts. By this means between eight and nine thousand men (including drafts) of splendid physique, well trained before leaving England, were added to our Army in four months, men who had given up their trade or calling to take service in the regular ranks. No comment is now necessary on the work they have achieved. It is well known throughout the Empire that our Volunteers have, for the first time in their history, had a chance of showing what they are made of, and what they can do. To these 8,000 or 9,000 men belonging to our Infantry Volunteers, we must add some 10,000 Yeoman Volunteers, 1,600 of the City of London Volunteers, and 25,000 Colonial Volunteers, making in all a grand total of between 45,000 and 50,000 men, all specially selected, for one year, or longer if required. The number of Volunteers sent out from the United Kingdom could have been doubled had the restrictions regarding age, length of service, and musketry classification been less severe; the medical examination was also a high test. That our Volunteer force is not composed of "tin" soldiers has now been amply proved, not only by the work done in South Africa, but by the less fortunate Volunteer who remained behind to go through a training of fourteen days to one month. The War Office scheme of extending Volunteer camps this year from eight to twenty-eight days has been an unqualified success. As everyone knows, Army rates of pay, separation allowance, &c., were issued to those who stayed in camp for fourteen days, but these allowances, &c., were only given provided 50 per cent. of the enrolled strength of Volunteer regiments were actually in camp for fourteen days or more. The result was that about 70 per cent. of our Volunteers throughout Great Britain attended these emergency camps for fourteen days. This splendid response to the War Office call should be gratifying to those in authority, and thanks should be extended also to their employers, many of whom suffered by allowing their men to leave work for a fortnight and for a month.

Military training in all its branches, besides an extended course of musketry took the place of the old régime; field officers and adjutants no longer shouted "steady" on ceremonial parades, but allowed captains and company officers to retain the entire control and training of their men. The direct consequences may be seen in two ways: Firstly, about 90,000 Volunteers throughout the United Kingdom have a practical knowledge of military training in all its branches, which they never had before; secondly, every Volunteer realised the common-sense part of the new work he was undertaking, compared with the old of pipe-claying belts and "marching past" preparatory to the inspection. Every Volunteer approves of the new system, and appreciates its results. In future, to make our Volunteer force thoroughly efficient for home defence, every Volunteer corps in Great Britain should annually attend a fourteen days' brigade or divisional camp, the work to consist of military training, as laid down in our infantry drill, a special course of musketry. Thirty minutes each day might be devoted to battalion and physical drill to steady the men prior to their extended order work; the regimental transport should be thoroughly tested; and, finally, pay and allowances at Army rates should be given to all ranks who put in ten clear working days in camp. During the year say once a quarter, where the battalions are not consolidated, the captain of every outlying company should practice a mobilisation scheme, counting such a parade as one or two company drills towards efficiency, according to the manner each man turned up ready to entrain for his place of rendezvous. The transport of baggage, ammunition, &c., should form a special part of the experiment, so that mistakes would soon be found and quickly rectified. After practising year after year, our Volunteers would repair to their respective stations of mobilisation without any hitch, and without leaving behind them such important things as rations, blankets, or ammunition.

Finally, a few words may well be said with advantage as to the value of cyclists in case of invasion. There are in Great Britain thousands of young men who can afford to buy a cycle, and who spend a good many hours a week riding their machines for exercise and amusement; but they know nothing (the majority of them) about a rifle or how to use it. In case England was invaded these very men would be the first to come forward and offer their services and their cycles to the Government. A few days' practice each year would give us an additional 100,000 men, who, though not properly drilled, could move about England, on account of our good roads, with a mobility equal to and better than the Boers. They would carry on guerilla tactics in a country they were familiar with, and unknown to the enemy. If well led and properly handled they would become a most formidable force to an invading army, just as De Wet has been in South Africa. Such a force would very soon draw the attention of the enemy. They would harass his advance, his flanks, and threaten his lines of communications. The enemy would promptly detach a force to deal with these, and thus relieve pressure on the home defensive army operating elsewhere. This force should be immediately taken in hand—the Government should at once take steps to encourage it in rifle shooting. If an invasion took place it would be too late to get a great guerilla swarm together. But what the Boers could do out of their little population, surely we should be able to manage with our forty millions of people. Common-sense says "Try and see at once what we can do out of the thousands of young men we have in England." I suggest that England should be divided up into districts, each district having its own head-quarters, town or place of concentration under its own cyclist commander or "field cornet"; every man who has a knowledge of the rifle and can pass a shooting test should be served out with a rifle, blanket, and bandolier to be kept at his own home, and on the word "mobilise" from the commander, in ten minutes we should have a force of, roughly 100,000 men on their cycles fully equipped and on the way to their places of assembly.

SOLDIERS invalided from South Africa, and now on furlough, who have been ordered on completion of furlough to rejoin the home details of their units should, it is ordered, if those details are under canvas be directed to join their territorial depôts.

MILITIAMEN who join the Regular forces before disembodiment will, in addition to the gratuity of 21s. authorised by Army Order 203, 1899, receive also any gratuity or furlough pay which they may have earned by service with their embodied unit.

A WAR OFFICE order states that British Rifle Regiments are prohibited from wearing black helmets and green putties. All British Rifle battalions wearing green putties should replace them at the next biennial issue by khaki putties of the pattern worn by British Infantry.

In respect to inquiries as to the circumstances under which soldiers may have become prisoners of war, the following amended instruction has been inserted in the Queen's Regulations for the Army:—"Whenever officers or soldiers are taken prisoners by an enemy, a Court of Inquiry will be assembled under local arrangements to inquire into the conduct of the senior officer or soldier of the party, and, if the general officer commanding considers it desirable, into the conduct of any other officer or soldier of the party. The Court of Inquiry will be held as soon as possible after the return of the prisoners."

GIBRALTAR.—BRISTOL HOTEL.—First-class. Situated in the centre of the town. With a garden. Every modern comfort and best sanitary arrangements. Quiet situation.

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd. 23, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

Army Personal.

The date of Lord Roberts's return may now be fixed pretty confidently. The authoritative announcement that he will leave the Cape about November 15 should land him in England some time in the first week in December. There can be little doubt that his place now is Pall Mall and not South Africa, where his work is practically done. What remains will be better accomplished by another—not an abler or stronger man, but some one of sterner stuff. It is no disparagement to Lord Roberts to say plainly that his kindly method of procedure will never bring this wearisome war, still so painful and so costly in human life, to a speedy end. We do not approve vindictive measures—sharp reprisals even are to be deprecated; but a very firm hand is wanted, and extraordinary vigour in repressing the predatory bands that still keep the field. This could hardly be expected from Lord Roberts, whose policy throughout has been all towards a leniency which might be thought judicious enough until its futility was abundantly proved.

We have no positive information yet as to who will be nominated to succeed Lord Roberts in South Africa, but a general impression prevails that it will be Lord Kitchener. It is worth while repeating that he is not the next senior by several; Sir F. Forestier Walker is the next, a lieutenant-general in the Army List, while Kitchener is no more than a major-general. Next comes Lord Methuen, also a lieutenant-general; then Major-General Tucker, the senior major-general; next, in order of seniority, Sir Frederick Carrington; and last, Sir Francis Clery. Nearly all the divisional commanders have the local rank of lieutenant-general, which, at the present moment advances them above Kitchener, so that it would be necessary to give the latter local rank of full general if he is to succeed to the supreme command. This is only a small matter nowadays when all sorts of liberties are freely taken with the seniority list. Kitchener's appointment would commend itself to the public, who believe that his fitness for the post in the present state of affairs far exceeds that of any of his comrades in South Africa. He is a man of iron, stern and inexorable in his fixity of purpose, and he might be relied upon to carry through the pacification of these two new turbulent provinces with an unyielding, but not necessarily too harsh or injudicious, hand. At the same time, much disappointment will be felt if Kitchener is not brought into the War Office to assist in that regeneration which is so loudly demanded, but the necessity for which is by no means absolutely proved.

Some sharp things have been said about Lord Wolseley for daring to hint that War Office administration is not quite so bad as made out; that the expressions so familiar in so many quarters of "Augean stables" and "Sloughs of Despond," greatly overstate the case, to say the least of it. Such criticism is too often the utterance of the ignorant, or falls from those who know the true culprit and seek to shelter him. It is really the much-quoted "man in the street" who, till he was shaken into alarmed wakefulness, dozed on in a fool's paradise, satisfied with things as they were. The nation has been warned a hundred, nay, a thousand times over, by its experts, that it was unprepared for serious war, that its military means were inadequate, that they would go near collapse in any great crisis. How often has the answer been returned that Army estimates were already bloated and overgrown, and that not one sixpence more should be spent? Now, to put our armaments on a proper footing will need many more millions, and the money must be spent in the one direction where it was so dangerously economised, by the denial of sufficient men for the Empire's defensive needs, and of ample war material. That improvements may and must be introduced into administrative machinery goes without saying, but to reform the War Office system—no very easy task, even if its necessity be proved—is only a secondary object compared with the provision of proper means.

That there is no vacancy on the Headquarters Staff that Lord Kitchener can fill is not the only reason, according to some, why he will not at present go to Pall Mall. Another is that already mentioned, that his services will still be required in South Africa. There is yet a third, based on no certain knowledge, yet largely held by the gossips and quidnuncs who pretend to be so much better informed than all the rest of us. This is to the effect that Lord Roberts does not want him. In other words, that the relations between the supreme commander and his chief of the staff were never very cordial in South Africa. Some colour is given to the belief by the frequent absences of Lord Kitchener from headquarters, and his discharge of duties, those especially of field command at a distance, which do not usually appertain to a chief of the staff. Again, it is said that Lord Kitchener ventured once or twice to remonstrate with Lord Roberts on the delicate question of his chief's personal staff. It was not so much that Kitchener objected to the choice made, which would indeed have been impertinent, but he had reason to think that some of the younger men were "leaky," that news got out, that they talked too much and gave away secrets of movements and other confidential matters which from their position came within their knowledge. There is probably great exaggeration in all this, and the exact truth will probably be never known. We may, however, fairly conclude that if friction existed it was no more than might be expected between two strong men, each anxious to go his own road, and just a little jealous of each other.

Much mischief was certainly made when Lord Roberts started for South Africa, by the foolish report that he was to be no more than the figure-head, that the real leader would be the younger man. This was emphasised by the cartoon in a comic paper which represented the tall, stalwart Kitchener leading little "Bobs" by the hand. That the sturdy old soldier would resent such a view was only natural and we may be sure that he very early vindicated his superior position and authority, if indeed it was ever in danger of eclipse. One or two sharp remarks in this direction have been fathered upon Lord Roberts, but whether true or ben trovato who shall say? It is averred on the other hand that from the first Kitchener was wont to respect and admire the gallant old man, and letters are extant in which he expresses his deep satisfaction at the privilege that had come to him of serving with and under him in the field. Kitchener is too old a soldier not to realise the value of association with a senior whose experience was so wide, so long, so varied. "Lord Roberts is a tower of strength," he wrote once, and the phrase is worth repeating, for it bears upon a vexed point, and may help to dispose of rumours that are hardly entitled to live.

To-Day, a paper credited with much exclusive knowledge, says this week:—

"Failing Lord Lansdowne, the man most talked of for War Secretary is Lord Balfour of Burleigh, at present Secretary for Scotland, with a seat in the Cabinet, who has given ample proof of great administrative gifts. He has done much good work as a member of various commissions, notably those on Educational Endowments and Metropolitan Water Supply, and he has been Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade. There is nothing much in this experience to qualify him for the tangled business of Pall Mall, and were it not for his personal equipment and the high esteem in which he is held as a man of strength and intelligence, his nomination would be quite a leap in the dark. A War Minister who has never done a stroke of War Office work and a Commander-in-Chief entirely new to the intricacies and perplexities of Pall Mall would be quite under the thumb of their clerks and coadjutors, a most baneful and pernicious thing. Mr. George Wyndham would not labour under this disadvantage, and the worst that can be said against him is that he is so young, being no more than seven or eight and thirty. To be in the full prime and vigour of life is surely a recommendation for most things, and Mr. Wyndham has already a good record in dealing with things military. His conduct of War Office matters in the House of Commons, especially the thankless task of defending the publication of the Spion Kop despatches, won him golden opinions. He is essentially a persona grata to the military side of the War Office, and his brief but not inglorious service in the Coldstream Guards has given him a professional knowledge that is not without its weight."

Lord Roberts has replied to the Lord Mayor that he cannot accept the freedom of the city of Belfast until next March.

H.E. Sir Rudolph Slatin Pasha gave a dinner at the Grand Continental Hotel, Cairo, on the evening of October 12. Among his Excellency's guests were H.E. Sir Reginald and Lady Wingate, and M. and Mme. de Hoeltzke.

Colonel G. A. W. Forrest, late of the Hampshire Regiment, who on Thursday completed the term of his appointment as Commandant of the Duke of York's School at Chelsea, has been granted a three years' extension, which enables him to retain the post until he reaches the age limit. Colonel Forrest entered the Army in 1866, and saw active service in the Burmese War of 1889-90, being dangerously wounded. He has held his present position since 1893.

Colonel the Duke of Wellington retires from the Army owing to non-employment for the regulation period. He joined the Grenadier Guards in 1868, and became commandant of the 1st Batn. of the regiment in 1891, giving up the command in October, 1895, and has since then been unemployed.

Colonel Lucas, D.A.G. of Imperial Yeomanry, and Colonel Deane, C.B., who have been on special service in South Africa, arrived early yesterday morning at Southampton in the steamer Saxon. Colonel Lucas proceeded to his residence at Warnham Court, Horsham, but will be at the Imperial Yeomanry headquarters next week.

Colonel Francis Cornwallis Maude, V.C., C.B., whose sudden death occurred at Windsor just a week ago, was born in 1828, and entered the Royal Artillery in 1847. He saw much service at the time of the Indian Mutiny, when he commanded the artillery of Havelock's column in his march to Cawnpore, and later took part in the repeated attempts to relieve the Lucknow garrison. This was partially effected by September, 1857, but the relieving force was also besieged for two months, until finally relieved by Sir Colin Campbell. The following year Colonel Maude was present at the capture of Lucknow. For his services he received the brevets of Major and Lieut.-Colonel, the C.B., and one year's extra service for the campaign. He was three times recommended for the Victoria Cross—once by the unanimous vote of the men of his battery. He was awarded the V.C. for the following service, as recorded in Havelock's despatches, dated Oct. 17, 1857:—"This officer steadily and cheerily pushed on with his men, and bore down the desperate opposition of the enemy, though with the loss of one-third of his artillerymen. Sir James Outram adds that this attack appeared to him to indicate no reckless or foolhardy daring, but the calm heroism of a true soldier, who fully appreciates the difficulties and dangers of the task he has undertaken; and that but for Captain Maude's nerve and coolness on this trying occasion the Army could not have advanced." He was promoted Colonel in 1866, and from 1876 to 1886 served as H.M.'s Consul-General at Warsaw. In 1895 he was made a Military Knight of Windsor. Colonel Maude was a considerable German scholar and the author of several technical works.

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:—

LIFE. { War Risks, World-Wide. } Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch.
ACCIDENTS & DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence Abroad. } The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.
BURGLARY, &c.

Special Quotations for Messes.
Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums.
Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.
Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT.

Two battalion commands become vacant next month, viz., the 1st Royal Munster Fusiliers, Lieut.-Colonel E. S. Evans on the 4th prox.; and the 1st Batn. South Lancashire Regiment, Lieut.-Colonel H. C. Savage on the 25th prox.

Lieut.-Colonel E. Raban, R.E., the Director of Architecture and Building Works under the Admiralty, will shortly be promoted Colonel by brevet. He served with the expedition which proceeded in 1879-80 against the Naga hill tribes, and was present at the assault of Konoma, being mentioned in despatches and receiving the medal with clasp. He was promoted Lieut.-Colonel in 1890, and has held his present appointment since 1896.

Lieut.-Colonel Edward Tufnell, the Conservative representative for S.E. Essex, was educated at Eton. He entered the Army in 1867 as ensign in the 39th Regiment. He exchanged to the 18th Regiment (Royal Irish) in 1870. He served with them in India, Egypt, and the Nile Expedition. He retired from the Army in 1889, was appointed a member of the Hon. Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms in 1894, and he is also a Knight of Grace in the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

A new and most promising recruit has been added to our pro-consular service in Major Matthew Nathan, R.E., who, after having filled many acting appointments, has now been made Governor of the Gold Coast in succession to Sir Frederick Hodgson. Major Nathan is an Engineer officer of distinguished service; he was in the Nile Expedition, afterwards in India, where he fought in the campaign against the Lashais; and he has claims for good work done in both. He is a Staff College officer as well as a Royal Engineer, and he has shown that he possesses the tact and judgment so necessary in colonial administration.

Major J. H. E. Reid, of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, has been appointed officiating A.A.G. of the Madras command. He served in the Afghan War of 1878-80, and took part with the Bazar Valley Expedition. When the Wali's troops revolted on the Helmund he was present, and though during the battle of Maiwand he received a wound, he took part in the defence of Kandahar. For his services he was mentioned in the despatches and received the medal.

Major Frederick S. Maude, of the Coldstream Guards, who has been appointed Military Secretary to the Governor of Canada, is a Brigade-Major on the staff in Natal. He has passed the Staff College, is a good soldier and an able organiser, and the appointment, alike professionally and socially, is an excellent one. Major Maude who is thirty-six, belongs to the family of which Earl De Montalt is the titular head, and is related by marriage to the Earl of Dysart and the Marquis of Headfort.

Captain F. W. Marshall, reserve of officers, and late of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, has been selected for duty in the Army Ordnance Department. He entered the K.O.S.B. in 1882, and the only active service he has seen was with the Chin Lushai Expeditionary Force in 1889-90, for which he received the medal with clasp.

Captain Malcolm, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, who recently returned from South Africa, where he was severely wounded in the leg, has already, despite his youth, had a life of much adventure. Some years ago, in company with the late Captain M. S. Wellby, of the 18th Hussars, whose death in South Africa has been so greatly deplored, he made a remarkable journey through Tibet to Peking. Subsequently Captain Wellby went on an expedition to Abyssinia, and his experiences there will shortly be published.

There will be no enforced retirement next month among general officers on the establishment under the terms of the Royal Warrant.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each, or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Bewlay & Co., Importers, 49, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacconists.

Army Foreign.

The correspondent of the Standard at Moscow has lately been reporting some curious circumstances in regard to the movements of Russian troops. When the 3rd Sappers, who had been ordered to China, were brought back from Odessa just as they were on the eve of sailing, the general commanding the 27th Infantry Division, which has its head-quarters at Wilna, made a speech of singular character. The Czar, he said, had decided to bring the troops back in order that they might be ready to join the other forces "against that foe whom we shall be ordered to meet." Wilna is the chief centre for the defence of the line of the Niemen, and it is somewhat remarkable that such a speech should have been made and should have been allowed to be published. According to a later report, besides these troops arrested at Odessa, a number of other regiments have been diverted from China and Manchuria, not to the Russo-German frontier, but to the Turkish frontier in Trans-Caucasia. These men, to the number of 20,000, were also stopped at Odessa and were despatched by way of Novo-Tcherkask and the Georgian military road to the frontier indicated. There seems to have been growing in St. Petersburg a suspicion of the intentions of Germany, and it was reported that Turkey, which is largely under German influence, was massing her troops on that frontier. The Russian Press has recently been very bitter in its expressions in regard to her Western neighbour, and these movements of Russian troops would seem to indicate that the suspicions are shared by the Russian Government. In any case the facts are noteworthy.

General Baron Alexander Kaulbars, lately appointed to the command of the 2nd Siberian corps of the Russian army recently embodied, is relatively young, having been born in 1844. He was educated at the Nicolas Cavalry School, from which he issued in 1861 as a sub-lieutenant in the old regiment of the Gatchina Guards. He has been a general officer since 1884, and knows Russian Asia well by long service with the troops, and also through having accompanied several missions in the Khanates. In 1872, at the age of twenty-eight, as a lieutenant-colonel, he was at the head of a special mission sent to Kashgar, and afterwards had charge of an exploring party in the delta of the Amu-Daria, which had for its object to improve the navigation between that river and the sea of Aral. The general served as Bulgarian Minister of War in 1883, and on returning to his own country was commander of brigades and divisions, and finally of the 2nd Cavalry Corps. He has taken part in many campaigns, and was wounded in Asia in 1871. General Sergius Myloff, who commands the new 3rd Siberian corps, is but little older having been born in 1842. Most of his service has been in the Caucasus, where he has served on the staff, and commanded the 20th Infantry Division. General Vladimir Philipoff, who has received another important command in Russian Asia, has also served much in the Caucasus, and during the campaign of 1877-78 was chief of the staff of the Erivan column. He has filled some diplomatic missions, was a member of the commission for the Delimitation of Eastern Roumelia in 1878, and from 1880 to 1886 was in the diplomatic service at Constantinople.

When the French Chamber resumes its sittings at the beginning of November interpellations are promised having reference to the recent decrees of General André, whose action in regard to the system of promotion, of which we gave an account last week, has been severely criticised. The General will also be asked to explain his recent removal of several officers from posts in the Fontainebleau Military School. It is stated that the officers of the school would not tolerate a certain Captain Coblenz, who had left the Saumur Cavalry School at the head of the list, and had recently been cavalry instructor at La Fère. This gentleman is an Israelite, and the gunners at Fontainebleau were not willing to associate with one whom they described as a "dirty Jew." One of them—Major Duval de Gravelle—went so far as to represent their objection at the Ministry of War, and wrote a formal letter to the Minister's secretary. For this act of insubordination he was placed under arrest for a fortnight and then sent in disgrace to an artillery school in the provinces, while six of his comrades at Fontainebleau were removed from their posts at the college. It is stated that the general commanding the school has since sent in his resignation. On the other hand, it has been asserted that Captain Coblenz had old quarrels with the officers at Fontainebleau, and that his appointment was protested against in order to avert further misunderstandings.

One change introduced by General André at the School of St. Cyr is much discussed in the French military Press. Hitherto the officers for the cavalry have been selected three months after entering the school, but henceforth they will not be nominated until after twelve months. The Progrès Militaire considers that the change has only one fault; it does not go far enough. General André should suppress the cavalry section altogether. If this were done, the young cavalry officers would only be nominated on completing their course at St. Cyr, and would then go to finish their training at Saumur. The Débat considers that not sufficient weight is given to the special cavalry training, but the Progrès contends that the qualities demanded in the infantry and the cavalry are practically the same. Infantry officers must be equally skilled in horsemanship, and, therefore, the special cavalry training is only a complement to that given to the infantry. The Temps generally shares the same view. Another point involved in the changes which have been made is the selection of instructors for St. Cyr. The Minister proposes that they shall be taken indifferently from among officers from that school and from St. Maixent. Against this the Echo de l'Armée protests on the ground that these latter will find themselves in a difficult and delicate situation not conducive to the good of the school.

The language dispute is still raging in the Austrian Army. It appears that at an official assembly, which was held at a place called Gross-Bitesch, in Bohemia, for the purpose of calling the roll of reservists in that district, a private answered with "zde," the Czech word for "here," instead of the German "hier." He was promptly sentenced to three days' imprisonment. To answer in Polish is a far more heinous offence apparently, for at Cracow we learn that a man who replied "jetsam" (the Polish word) when his name was called, was ordered a week's incarceration. A Slovak, who speaks his own language, is doomed to four days only. The military authorities, our informant goes on, are determined to maintain German as the language of the Army.

FOR REGIMENTAL CANTEENS AND MESSES.

GRAVINA

is a desirable and economical addition to the kitchen supplies of the Mess-room.

GRAVINA is a gravy powder, particularly useful for making a gravy for joints. By its aid many appetising hot dishes can be made from scraps of cold meat, or odds and ends of game, poultry, &c.

GRAVINA is one of the varieties of the popular

EDWARDS'

DESICCATED

SOUP

and it is the one specially recommended for gravy. When, however, a hot soup is required without labour, one or other of the soup preparations is more suitable, and will be found much more supporting, and in every way preferable, to the usual coffee or cocoa supplied to men on night guard, or after an arduous day's duties.

List Prices for 1lb. Tins.

Gravy, 1/10; Brown Soup, 1/3; White Soup, 1/3; Tomato Soup, 2/6.

Can be obtained of most Grocers and Stores. Manufactured by

FRED. KING & Co., London & Belfast

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Oct. 20.

Pretoria, Oct. 18.—Kelly-Kenny reports that Lieut. Hanbury, 3rd South Lancashire Regiment, killed on 13th inst., was a young officer of great promise. A party of Boers managed to get into Jagersfontein during the night of the 16th inst. In the morning a fight ensued. Our losses nine men killed and two mortally wounded. The Boers lost their commandant and 20 of their number killed. Kelly-Kenny despatched a column from Edenburg yesterday under Col. Hughes-Hallett, which should be at Jagersfontein to-day.

Durban, Oct. 19.—The address which will be presented to Gen. Buller to-morrow by the Durban municipality states that on the General's arrival in Natal, last November, he found the colonists anxious and troubled because of the unexpected progress of the invasion, the Boers having penetrated within striking distance of the capital. Sir Redvers Buller, by taking personal control of the Natal force on reaching South Africa, showed that he instantly recognised the gravity of the situation, and foresaw the danger in which the Colony stood. Relief was felt when it became known that Gen. Buller had decided to come to their aid. His past career in South Africa, in the stirring days of Inbolland and Kambula, had made for him an imperishable name, and they had still fresh memories in connection with the operations for the relief of Ladysmith. The heroic army which he commanded had a task assigned to it which the colonists thoroughly appreciated. The dogged tenacity and bravery of the forces had accomplished a feat in the relief of the beleaguered garrison which would ever remain in the hearts of the Natal colonists who had locked up in that town some of their best manhood. Since the relief of Ladysmith the General's strategy, the address adds, had been irresistible. The enemy had been scattered in all directions, and the burghesses of Durban would ever remember the name of Sir Redvers Buller, who took with him, on his departure for the homeland, the heartfelt thanks of all.—Reuter.

Lourenco Marques, Oct. 19.—Mr. Kruger was secretly taken on board the Dutch warship Gelderland at five o'clock this morning.—Reuter.

Monday, Oct. 22.

Gen. Buller arrived on Saturday at Durban, where he was received with great enthusiasm. He was presented with an address of welcome by the mayor at the Town Hall, and in the course of his reply referred to the valuable assistance rendered to the military authorities by the Natal Railway and Public Works Department. The Natal Volunteers, he said, had been bold in battle, admirable in the field, and of the greatest possible assistance to the Army. He hoped the coming settlement would be one in which South Africa would unite. That was the only way in which the bitterness remaining after the strife could be readily removed. In 1881 Mr. Kruger had said to him that he did not like the peace that had then been concluded, and he replied that he also did not like it, because the Boers thought they had beaten the British, but the British knew they could beat the Boers. The quarrel had now been fought out, and the British had come out on top. After being entertained at luncheon, Gen. Buller went on board the Hawarden Castle, which left in the course of the day for Cape Town.

The Times correspondent at Zeerust sent some details respecting the reoccupation of that place by Lord Methuen and Gen. Douglas and of encounters between their forces and the Boers under Delarey, who are said to have lost heavily.

Fresh manifestations of Boer activity were reported from Johannesburg, Aliwal North, Bloemfontein, and Standerton, and measures were being taken to repress their roving commandoes.

The Dutch cruiser Gelderland, with Mr. Kruger on board, left Lorenzo Marques on Saturday for Europe. She will call, among other places, at Jibuti and Marseilles.

Tuesday, Oct. 23.

Lord Roberts, telegraphing from Pretoria, forwarded particulars received by Gen. Kelly-Kenny from Col. Hughes-Hallett of the attack lately made by Boers on Jagersfontein. In the night they crawled by a wall on the outskirts of the town. At daybreak they attacked and were assisted from inside the town by both men and women sympathisers. They were driven off, but managed to release the prisoners in the gaol. They lost about 20 men, including their commandant. They killed eight or 10 unarmed natives, shooting them with explosive bullets. Gen. Kelly-Kenny intended to take strong measures with those inhabitants who played us false. Lord Roberts also sent a report from Lord Methuen of his march on and re-occupation of Zeerust, already described. Gen. Knox reported from Kroonstad that a combined attack by mounted infantry from Honingspruit and Serfontein resulted in a party of about 100 Boers being driven from a position near the railway with some loss. A determined attack was made by the enemy on Fauresmith on Oct. 19, but they were repulsed. The British casualties were two men killed and an officer and five men wounded. Two dead Boers were found after the fight. On Oct. 17 Gen. Barton had a running fight with a body of Boers near Frederickstad, driving them from several positions, and inflicting loss. The British casualties were two men killed and four wounded.

A Laffan telegram from Cape Town stated that before the Gelderland sailed from Delagoa Bay Mr. Kruger's baggage was carefully overhauled by the Customs officials, but nothing of a contraband nature was discovered. Mr. Kruger's 24 boxes were found to contain only private property, which included various title-deeds.

The Governments of New South Wales, Queensland, New Zealand, and Tasmania agreed to the suggestion of Victoria to recommend the Imperial Government to fix a date for rejoicings throughout the Empire on the close of the war.

A Brussels correspondent said that the Belgian Government informed the Transvaal Agency in Brussels that a long sojourn of Mr. Kruger there would be unwelcome and calculated to occasion anti-British demonstrations, which the Government could not allow. It was therefore announced that Mr. Kruger would pass through Belgium without stopping. The Queen of the Netherlands, moreover, would probably only accord him a private audience, devoid of all official character.

Wednesday, Oct. 24.

The Times Mafeking correspondent, telegraphing on Monday, said that Lord Methuen was then at Buffels-hoek awaiting supplies. He intended to march to Elands River yesterday, with the view of intercepting Mr. Steyn's junction with Delarey. Gen. Erroll, acting in conjunction with the Mafeking forces, had occupied Louws Farm, where the Boers were driven back on Oct. 16 after a sharp fight.

Gen. Buller arrived at Cape Town on Tuesday. He was heartily cheered on his way to Government House. He was entertained at luncheon, and afterwards presented with an address, by the mayor and corporation before leaving for England.

Thursday, Oct. 25.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram of Monday night from Pretoria, says that Gen. French reached Bethel on Saturday last, having met with opposition on the greater part of the march from Carolina. His total casualties were one officer and six men killed, three officers and 24 men wounded, and five men missing. Lord Erroll occupied Buffels-hoek from Ottoshoop on October 19 without any casualties, owing to the good work done by the New Zealanders under Capt. Polson. Gen. Settle reached Hoopstad on Saturday. The Boers attacked him en route, and his casualties were an officer and 15 men wounded. Lord Methuen reports a Boer attack on a convoy of his near Zeerust on Saturday, in which his casualties were one man killed and an officer and eight men wounded. Gen. Barton reports an attack by the enemy on a foraging party five miles from Frederickstad Station on October 18, in which two men were killed, four wounded, and two officers and two men taken prisoners. On Sunday Gen. Barton's camp at Frederickstad was assailed by the Boers, who came on with great daring. Gen. Paget reports two successful surprises of Boer parties by our troops west of the Pienaars River, in which 18 prisoners and large numbers of cattle and sheep were captured.

A Reuter telegram from Mafeking says that on Saturday Lord Methuen delivered an attack on a strong force of the enemy north of Zeerust, and succeeded in dislodging them. Our casualties were four killed and 10 wounded. Capt. Gordon Wood, of the Shropshire Yeomanry, was shot dead while being carried wounded off the field on a stretcher. With the object of removing an impression, prevalent among the Boers, that burghers will suffer death or banishment on surrender, instructions from Lord Roberts have been circulated in the Western Transvaal that burghers surrendering voluntarily, who have never taken the oath or who have been forced to break it, will not be sent out of South Africa, but will be permitted to return to their farms at the conclusion of hostilities, and the stock belonging to them, if taken during the campaign, will be paid for. No promise regarding future treatment can be given to burghers who have been taken prisoners on the battlefield.

Gen. Buller sailed from Cape Town for England on Wednesday. Before his departure he was entertained at luncheon by the municipality, and in responding to the toast of his health dwelt chiefly on the patriotism shown during the war by the British colonists of Natal and Cape Colony.

Friday, Oct. 26.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram of Wednesday night from Pretoria, says that Gen. French is continuing his march from Bethel, and expects to reach Heidelberg to-day. He reports a little fighting every day. On Tuesday a portion of Gen. Paget's mounted troops captured four waggons and 15 prisoners. On Wednesday Col. Aytoun, of the Queensland Mounted Infantry, with a small force, captured two field cornets and five waggons; and on the same day Lieut.-Col. Hunt, with three squadrons of Yeomanry, captured 35 prisoners and a large number of cattle. In all, 65 prisoners have been taken by Gen. Paget's forces during the last three days. A patrol near Jagersfontein Road disturbed a party of Boers who were trying to destroy the line. Two Boers were killed. Fuzes, nippers, and a quantity of dynamite were found.

A Reuter's telegram states that the Boers have captured Jacobsdal, after a stubborn resistance on the part of the garrison, which suffered severely. A detachment of Cape Town Highlanders was practically cut up, losing 34 men out of 52.

THE CAVALRY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I was glad to see "Squadron Leader's" letter in a recent issue, for I can fully endorse all he says. People who say that "the cavalry ought to have done this and might have done that" are apt to forget what the nature of the country was in which we were operating, and what it means to a commanding officer to find himself with worn-out horses hundreds of miles from the base of supply. Cavalry chargers are not trained in a day, though some seem to think they are. Nor are they always procurable when wanted. The best commander, my experience leads me to believe, is the man who recognises the difficulties of others. This Lord Roberts does. I have heard him say more than once, "I quite see the difficulties; no man can do impossibilities." But it is not always the case that officers in high command can be found so level headed. I have served with what I think I may call a crack cavalry regiment from the commencement of operations, until invalided two and a half months ago. We had gone out from England with good repute; at any rate we were smart and fit for service in any ordinary campaign. But the service in South Africa was the very roughest. At the best of times the Cape is not a favourable climate for horses, as is well known. On active service it becomes worse. And yet one finds ignorant writers condemning the cavalry as though they had been going through autumn manoeuvres on Salisbury Plain. There is nothing in the world easier than finding fault. I wish some of those who have been so ready to find fault with my service could have had the experience I have had. They would be the first to cry another tale. We have heard it said more than once that the days of cavalry are past and gone. Are they? The South African campaign does not certainly give support to that view, as Lord Roberts, Sir Redvers Buller, Lieut.-Gen. French, and others will be able to show when they return to give us the benefit of their opinions.

ANOTHER SQUADRON LEADER.

AN energetic lady nurse in a South African military hospital, on going one morning to attend to her favourite soldier, found him asleep, but pinned to the bedclothes was a laboriously scrawled memorandum as follows:—"To il to be nussed to-day. Yours respectfully, J. S."—Homeward Mail.

HENNESSY'S

THREE STAR

BRANDY.

Genuine Brandy.
Bottled in Cognac.

Obituary.

NAVY.

Capt. the Hon. Foley C. P. Vereker, Nautical Adviser to the Board of Trade, died at his residence, Rubenstein, Spring Grove, Isleworth, on the 24th inst., in his 51st year. Capt. Vereker was the second son of the fourth Viscount Gort, and entered the Navy in December, 1863. He was made Sub-Lieut. in March, 1870, received his commission as Lieut. in April, 1873, as Commander in September, 1881; and as Captain on Dec. 31, 1888. Capt. Vereker had been chiefly employed in the surveying department of the Navy, having been appointed an Admiralty surveyor of the first class in January, 1876. He was subsequently placed in charge of important surveys on the South China Station and on the Australian coast; after which, between the years 1891 and 1895, he resurveyed considerable portions of British waters, including those in the neighbourhood of Spithead and Southampton Water. As a young man Capt. Vereker saw a good deal of active service, taking part in encounters with the Sulu pirates in 1872, and the bombardment and destruction of Mombasa Fort in January, 1875, for which he was mentioned in despatches. In command of the Rambler he was employed in the naval and military operations in the Eastern Sudan, at Suakim, 1884-85, receiving the Egyptian medal and Khedive's bronze star. Capt. Vereker served as a Lieut. in her Majesty's yacht, from which he obtained his promotion to commander. The funeral will take place to-day, at 3 p.m., at St. Mary's Church, Spring Grove, Isleworth.

Capt. H. Donaldson-Selby, retired, whose death is announced as having taken place at Louth, Lincolnshire, in his seventy-fifth year, entered the Navy as a cadet in 1839. During the war with Russia he was employed as first lieutenant of the Simoom in the Black Sea. Landing with the Naval Brigade he took part in the defence of Balaklava when attacked by Liprandi. Afterwards he was engaged in the Niger in the night attack on the sea defences of Sebastopol. For his services he was promoted to the rank of commander (May, 1856) and awarded the Crimean and Turkish medal, with Sebastopol clasp. Capt. Selby afterwards served as inspecting commander of coastguard on the Lincolnshire Coast, being in May, 1871, placed on the captain's retired list. He had been in receipt of a commander's pension of £65 a year on the Greenwich Hospital Pension List since September, 1894.

ARMY.

Col. Maude, V.C.—The funeral of Col. Maude, V.C., an old Mutiny veteran, and, since 1895, a Military Knight of Windsor, whose death last week is referred to in another column, took place at Windsor on Tuesday. The escort was furnished by the 1st Batn. Grenadier Guards, under the command of Major the Hon. J. T. St. Aubyn and Capt. Glyn (Adjutant).

Lieut. J. A. C. Hennessey, 45th Bengal Infantry, who was mortally wounded in an encounter with Mahsud raiders on Oct. 23, and has since died, obtained his commission in the Indian Staff Corps so recently as July, 1898.

Lieut.-Col. Forbes Macbean, late commanding the 92nd Gordon Highlanders, Sergeant-at-Arms to the Queen, died at Dover on the 23rd inst., at the age of 75. Col. Macbean retired from the service so long ago as 1869.

Lieut. Edward Harlee Finch, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers, reported as having been killed in Gen. Barton's engagement at Frederickstad on the 21st, was in his 25th year. He joined the Lancashire Fusiliers in Sept. 1896, and soon afterwards he was transferred to the Royal Scots Fusiliers, becoming Lieut. in December, 1898. The present was his first campaign.

2nd Lieut. Arthur Swanston, Inniskilling Dragoons, reported killed on the 16th, when with Gen. French's column on the march to Bethel, was in his 26th year. He joined his regiment from the Northumberland Artillery Militia at the end of last November. This was his first campaign.

MILITARY MEMORIALS IN "LATTEN" BRASS OR MARBLE, &c.—Special Illustrated Military Price List on application to GAWTHORP, 16, Long Acre, W.C., and 19, Castle Street East, W., London, Craftsman in Metals to H.M. the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Patronised by the War Office, Lord Wolseley, Sir Francis Grenfell, the Guards, Cavalry, and most Regiments of the Line. See Memorials to Officers killed at Glencoe, Dekiel's Drift, Kimberley, Wagon Hill, Ladysmith, Magersfontein, Omdurman, Khartoum, Khyber Pass, Crete, &c., and in the Boer War of 1880-81.

RETIRED ARMY OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In a time of national emergency, as on the outbreak of war, retired officers, or who may have retired on a pension or on a gratuity, but liable to recall under age limits, have been invited by the Secretary of State for War to offer their services for re-employment with their corps and departments of the Army. On the cessation of hostilities, and the War Office require their services no longer, they revert to the retired lists, as far as the Royal Warrant for pay and promotion provides, without an increased promotion or addition to pension. The question arises, are officers, who have retired and on being asked to offer their services for re-employment, placed on the same footing as regards Army Reservists? It is understood that the time an officer was not on the active list he forfeited, as a retired officer, his claims to increase, to pension, or to service—but on recall the time so spent on the retired list might be permitted "to count as continuous service" towards an increase to pension on reverting to the retired lists on the cessation of the war. It is a serious liability for a retired officer to be liable to recall in time of war and to obtain for his services no increase to his pension or to promotion. It appears as if this was a matter worthy of the attention of the financial advisers to the Secretary of State for War.

AUDAX.

INSIDE LADYSMITH.

A most interesting diary, kept by the 1st Batn. Manchester Regiment (the old 63rd) during the siege of Ladysmith has been privately printed. A few extracts from it may be found interesting:—

"Oct. 31, 1899.—The right half battalion (except half B Company on Range Post) was moved at 9 a.m. to occupy Caesar's Camp. Left half battalion followed in afternoon.

"Nov. 9, 1899.—The following telegram was received in the evening from Col. Ian Hamilton: 'Deeply regret so many poor fellows hit. I have informed chief how excellently well your regiment behaved under trying circumstances.' Col. Hamilton was present nearly all day with the battalion.

"Nov. 28, 1899.—A good deal of shelling during the day, mostly from the new 6in. gun on Middle Hill, a good deal directed at No. 1 sangar. Two howitzers to be mounted on Waggon Hill at night. Definite news of success by Buller and Clery; not very authentic, however.

"Nov. 30, 1899.—Clery reported to be within six miles.

"Jan. 6, 1900.—At 3 a.m. heavy firing started at Waggon Hill. At 3.45 a.m. heavy firing suddenly developed on S.E. corner of Caesar's Camp, then containing D Co., and A Co., its relief. Losses at this corner were exceptionally heavy, nearly all the men in the left section being killed within half an hour. It appears that the Boers crept up at night round our left flank, between the Natal Police and ourselves, and came up a gully on to the crest line, passing themselves off as the "Town Guard," and then shot our men down. . . . The shell fire was much less severe than on Nov. 7 and 9 (Bulwana Long Tom fired 93 shells on hill), but there can be no comparison of the strength and determination of the enemy, and the heat and accuracy of his rifle fire. Nearly all our men were shot in the head and arms while firing, and lay dead in their sangars; many were shot from behind and hanging over their sangars facing down the hill to their front.

"Jan. 8, 1900.—The following letter was received from Col. Hamilton, dated Jan. 8:—'The O.C. 7th Brigade wishes to convey to all ranks of the Manchester Regiment his admiration of the courage and determination displayed by them in the action on Jan. 6, 1900. The casualty list testifies to the severity of the fighting, and the fact that all our positions are maintained shows how complete was the victory. The Brigadier is proud to have been so long and so closely associated with a battalion which has invariably come to the front when called upon, to show the enemy and the world at large how stubbornly Englishmen can fight.'

"Jan. 21, 1900.—Very peaceful here. Gen. Buller's column very busy all day shelling a very large hill. He is gaining ground, and sent in report of favourable progress. Heavy storm of rain and wind both yesterday and to-day, the former destroyed the mess.

"Jan. 27, 1900.—Boer deserter in—states Boer losses with Buller to be very heavy—and more news, which is not reliable. Not much doing anywhere. Very quiet in morning. Late in evening received official news that

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

Sir C. Warren had succeeded in taking Spion Kop, and holding it all day on 24th inst., but had lost it at night. Great to-do about rations and forage.

"Jan. 28, 1900.—Very quiet. Last day of bread ration—and no more grain, &c., for horses, except R.A., from this date.

"Feb. 16, 1900.—Very hot again. Some slight firing heard from west; fairly quiet here. Some siege prices to-day in town:—One mealie cob, 3s. 8d.; two plates of grapes, £2 6s.; eggs per dozen, £2 8s.; vegetable marrow, £1 7s.; packet 'Old Gold' cigarettes, usual price 3d., £1 5s.; cigars, box of 50, usual price 14s., £9 10s.; 4lb. tin Capstan tobacco, £3 3s.; matches per box, 1s. 1½d.; one 6d. tin of jam, £1 3s.; one bottle of home-made jam, £1 11s. 6d.

"Feb. 28, 1900.—About 5 p.m. we saw our cavalry scouts on the hills about two miles S. of No. 5 picquet, and about an hour later three squadrons (about) came in through Intombi and were enthusiastically received. They consisted of Natal Carbineers and Imperial Light Horse. Held our men in readiness for service at any moment. Huge convoys could be seen at dusk on Elandslaagte road beyond Gun Hill."

THE remains of the late Col. H. A. Trevelyan were interred in the Masonic Plot in Mountain View Cemetery on Sunday afternoon. The body had previously been taken to the residence at the Barton Estate, from where the funeral was held, many country residents assembling there to do honour to the old soldier. Several beautiful floral pieces were laid on the coffin. The funeral procession arrived at the Belmont school-house about 3.30 o'clock; where Companies C and F and the Raisin City Band were stationed in readiness to act as escort. The military companies, in obedience to orders, assembled at Armoury Hall at 1.30, and from there marched in three companies as a battalion to the school-house, accompanied by the band. Upon arrival of the funeral cortege they fell in line, preceding the hearse, and following the Raisin City Band which played a dirge until the Kroeger School was passed, when it marched in quick time until the cemetery was reached. The battalion was led by Major George W. Jones, on horseback. Following the companies came a carriage containing the pallbearers, who were Fulton G. Berry, L. L. Corry, W. A. Veith, Gen. M. W. Muller, Col. T. J. Hay, and A. Halmeier. With the line of buggies following the hearse, the length of the procession was about three-quarters of a mile. The chief mourner's carriage contained Mrs. Marks, Charles Riddell, John Wilkinson, and Gus Eisen. The cemetery was reached about 4.30 and the band recommenced playing a dirge. The battalion halted, and as the hearse went by to the grave presented arms, and during the remainder of the service stood at parade rest. The Rev. Harvey S. Hanson then read the Episcopal burial service, after which a military squad fired three rounds over the grave. Bugler Barton, of Company C, sounded taps. The battalion and band then moved out of the grounds, and upon approaching the cemetery gate the band struck up a quick movement. That Col. Trevelyan was held in high esteem was evidenced by the honours accorded him at his funeral. As a citizen he was universally liked, and as a soldier he was a favourite among the California military officers. In issuing orders to companies C and F to act as escort at the funeral, Gen. Muller thought that thereby he could show the deep appreciation in which his many kindnesses were held. The colonel was not an American citizen, but Fresno was his home, and, next to his native land, America was high in his esteem.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
AND BRASSES
Morris & Sons
239 Kensington Rd. London, S.E.
Established 50 years

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPELL & CO. LTD. EXETER
44 & 45 DUNCANNONS' LONDON.
60, CHARING CROSS.
DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

MEMORIAL BRASSES
MARBLE & OTHER TABLETS,
Stained Glass Windows.
DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES FURNISHED BY—
Founded COX, SONS, BUCKLEY & CO., (LTD.)
18, Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, London.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

Royal Horse Guards (Blues).—2nd Lieut. the Duke of Westminster left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman.

1st (King's) Dragoon Guards will remain at Aldershot for the winter. 2nd Lieut. Adams left Cape Town, Oct. 15, on passage home in transport Lake Erie.

2nd Dragoon Guards.—The regiment winters at Aldershot. Major Fanshawe takes up duty shortly as second in command, on appointment, from the 19th Hussars. 2nd Lieut. Gaynor left Cape Town on Oct. 15 on passage home in transport Lake Erie.

3rd Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. Burt left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Britannic on passage home.

5th Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. Parker arrived at Plymouth on the 18th on board the hospital ship Dunera.

6th Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. O. H. M. Jones is discharged to duty in South Africa.

7th Dragoon Guards.—Capt. Haig left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Britannic, invalided.

1st (Royal) Dragoons.—Major Rogers left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman. 2nd Lieut. Sir R. St. G. C. Gore has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys).—Major Middleton is appointed second in command, vice Major Hippisley, promoted to the command.

5th Lancers will be brought home from South Africa as soon as its services can safely be dispensed with. 2nd Lieut. G. G. M. Tyrrell has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

7th Hussars will winter at Aldershot. Capt. Wormald left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the steamship Britannic, on passage home.

10th Hussars.—Capt. Sir J. Milbanke, V.C., left Cape Town on Oct. 21 in steamship Tagus. Private M. Johnson has been granted the medal for distinguished conduct in the field.

13th Hussars.—Capt. J. H. Tremayne (adjutant) is discharged to duty in South Africa.

16th Lancers.—Lieut. Van der Byl left Cape Town on Oct. 11 in the Kinfauns Castle.

17th Lancers.—Major Ricardo has been appointed second in command, vice Major Herbert, promoted to the command.

18th Hussars.—Capt. Levenson, who has been serving with so much credit in the expedition to Kumasi, has been invalided home, and sailed in the Bornu on the 10th inst.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The best shooting unit at Okehampton during the season was S Battery R.H.A.

Col. Rainsford-Hannay left Cape Town on Oct 6 in the steamship Britannic conveying sick and wounded officers.

Lieut.-Col. Saltmarsh, on his return from South Africa, has been appointed to command the R.A. at Sheerness.

Lieut.-Col. E. W. Fleming, who has been acting D.A.A.G. on the Headquarter Staff during the manoeuvres on Salisbury Plain, rejoins his Brigade Division at Ipswich.

Major G. F. Herbert (21st Battery R.F.A.) is discharged to duty in South Africa.

Major C. C. Owen (66th Battery R.F.A.) is reported seriously ill at Middelburg (enteric).

Major Knox (R.F.A.) left Cape Town on October 16 in charge of the steamship Englishman.

Majors Sandilands and Kelner, R.F.A., left Cape Town on Oct 6 in the Britannic on passage home.

Major Lawrie C. E. Lawrie, D.S.O., arrived at Southampton on the 18th in charge of the Montrose, Transport No. 93, conveying invalids from South Africa.

Capt. (Lieut.-Col.) H. E. J. Brake, D.S.O., Commandant 2nd Batn. Central Africa Regiment, has been invalided to England from the Gold Coast, where he has been serving with the force under Sir J. Willcocks.

Capt. R. E. Home (16th Co. R.G.A.) is discharged to duty in South Africa.

Capt. G. C. F. Buchan, 65th Battery, R.F.A., of Kelloe, Edron, Berwickshire, who died of enteric fever at Bloemfontein on May 21, aged 33, left personal estate in England and Scotland valued at £211,982 2s. 10d.

Cpts. Overton and Powell, R.F.A., left Cape Town on Oct. 11 in the Kinfauns Castle.

Lieut. Hon. B. J. Russell, R.F.A., arrived at Plymouth on Oct. 18 on board the hospital ship Dunera.

Lieut. Hay, of the Dublin City Artillery, who has been given a commission in the regular service, joins the Royal Garrison Artillery. He has been only a few months an officer of the Dublin City Artillery.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The 46th Company of the Royal Engineers moved into the new huts at Bulford on Monday, and they will remain stationed there until the end of the month, when they are to return to Tidworth House.

The appointment of Chief Engineer, Military Works in India, is to carry the substantive rank of Colonel.

Lieut.-Col. Rochford Boyd, R.E., who has been invalided home from South Africa, where he went to join the field force several months ago, is to resume his former post of commander of troops and companies at Aldershot, the present holder of the appointment, Lieut.-Col. Friend, having received instructions to join the Sirdar's staff in Egypt.

Lieut.-Col. F. J. Aylmer, V.C., on vacating his appointment as A.A.G. Madras, has been appointed to the Military Works Department in the Punjab.

Major Sinclair left Cape Town on Oct. 6th in the Britannic on passage home.

Major Brooke is reported wounded in the leg near Bloemhof.

Major H. E. S. Abbott has been appointed Superintending Engineer, Rawul Pindi, and Major G. M. Porter commanding R.E., Sind.

Lieut. Douglas arrived at Plymouth on Oct. 18 on board the hospital ship Dunera.

Lieut. H. L. Meyrick has been discharged to duty, South Africa.

Corpls. C. Hyde and F. Kirby, Lance-Corpl. W. Edwards, and Sappers G. Redding, A. Webb, J. Austin, C. Collins, T. Costin, J. Crisp, B. Fearnley, and T. Pearce, have been awarded the medal for distinguished conduct in the field.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Col. Gordon Lennox left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman.

Coldstream Guards.—Lieut.-Col. Maxse left Cape Town on Oct. 17 for England in the Norman.

Royal Scots (1st).—Major Bode has been appointed second in command of the 2nd Batn., vice Major Hallett, promoted to the command. He was promoted into the regiment in April, 1898, from the Middlesex Regiment.

Royal Lancaster Regiment (4th).—Capt. J. H. Lloyd, who has been Acting Brigade-Major on Salisbury Plain, rejoins the 1st Batn. 2nd Lieut. Milward left Cape Town on October 16 on passage home in Englishman steamship. Capt. Barker (4th Batn.) left Cape Town in the Norman on Oct. 17.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—The new 3rd Batn. moved on Thursday from York to Bradford Major (Lieut.-Col.) Wilkinson, Inspector-General Gold Coast Constabulary, has been invalided to England.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Capt. Williams is ordered to join the 3rd Batn at Malta on promotion from the East Surrey Regiment.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—Capt. Lascelles left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman. Capt. Wright left Cape Town on Oct 6 in the Britannic, invalided. Capt. Waddington joins the 3rd Batn. at Gibraltar, on promotion from the Royal Munster Fusiliers. Capt. Hill is transferred on promotion from the 1st Batn. to the 4th Batn., and Capt. Hibbert from the 1st Batn. to the 3rd Batn. Capt. the Hon. A. S. FitzGerald, 7th (Militia) Batn., has been selected for duty at the Regimental Depot, Hounslow. Mrs. Donald, wife of Lieut.-Col. Donald, is anxious to send out plum puddings for Christmas to the non-commissioned officers and men of the 2nd Batn. now in South Africa. She asks all those interested in the regiment to send subscriptions to her at Woodville, Camberley.

King's Regiment (8th).—Major Campbell, Adjut., 3rd Volunteer Batn., has passed the tactical examination qualifying for the rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

Lincolnshire Regiment (10th).—The 3rd (Militia) Batn. has arrived at Manchester from Salisbury Plain and taken over duty. Lieut.-Col. Roberts left Cape Town on Oct. 15 in charge of transport Lake Erie.

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—A county meeting was held at Exeter on Oct. 18 by the Lord-Lieutenant to consider what steps should be taken to celebrate the services of Gen. Buller and other Devonshire officers and the men of the Devonshire Regiment. Lord Clinton presided, and among other speakers were the Earl of Idlesleigh, Earl Morley, the Mayors of Exeter and Plymouth. It was decided to start a subscription list to give a welcome to the officers, present them with swords of honour, give commemorative plate to the two battalions of the Devonshire Regiment, place a memorial to the fallen in the cathedral, and later on erect a group of statuary or a statue of Gen. Buller.

Suffolk Regiment (12th).—Major Shadwell completes to-morrow his term of appointment as D.A.A.G. Punjab. Capt. Brett left Cape Town on Oct. 15 in transport Lake Erie on passage home.

East Yorkshire Regiment (15th).—Major Sladen, D.A.A.G. Colchester, has passed the tactical examination qualifying for the rank of Lieut.-Colonel. Capt. Unett left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Britannic on passage home.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Capt. Staes joins the 1st Batn. in India on restoration to the establishment.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—2nd Lieut. Hunt left Cape Town on Oct. 15 on passage home in transport Lake Erie.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—Lieut. Rowan-Hamilton left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman.

Lancashire Fusiliers (20th).—2nd Lieut. Luker left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Britannic on passage home.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers (23rd).—Capt. Gabbett is reported as "slightly improved." Major Owen Thomas, of Bryndu, Anglesey, formerly of the 3rd (Volunteer) Batn. of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, who has been in command of a squadron of Brabant's Light Horse, arrived last week at Rhosgoch Station. He was received by a khaki-clad procession of horsemen, who escorted him to Llanfechell and Cemaes, where he was presented with an address of welcome. Lieut. Kyrke has returned to duty.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (27th).—The 4th Batn. reached Omagh on Oct. 18, on return from five months Militia training at Aldershot.

Gloucestershire Regiment (28th).—The 3rd Batn. moved on Oct 18 and 19, and not as announced in a previous notice. Capt. Connor left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Britannic on passage home.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th).—Cpts. Bucknall and Hobson arrived at Plymouth on Oct. 18 on board the hospital ship Dunera.

East Surrey Regiment (31st).—The 4th Batn. moved from Birr to Dublin on Oct. 16. Lieut. A. E. O'Meara (3rd Batn.), has been appointed for duty with the 1st Royal Home Counties Reserve at Aldershot.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd).—2nd Lieut. Kirk arrived at Plymouth on Oct. 18 on board the hospital ship Dunera.

West Riding Regiment (33rd).—Col. F. C. Wemyss has been appointed to the honorary colonelcy of the 3rd Batn., with which battalion he served for 32 years, 12 years as colonel commanding. Col. Wemyss was born at Pontefract, where his father, the late Gen. Wemyss, colonel of the Leicestershire Regiment, was at the time on the staff. Major E. L. Cordes, second in command of the 3rd Batn. forming the Boer prisoners' guard at Simons Town, has been granted the honorary rank of lieutenant-colonel, and Lieut. D. M. Jenkins has been given a vacant company command in the battalion. Col. Cordes got his company 16 years ago, and only obtained field rank in February last. Capt. Jenkins' promotion has been very rapid, as he only received his first commission three days before the battalion was embodied at Halifax in January last. Capt. Goldie left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Britannic, invalided. Capt. Whitaker, who went from Dover to the front, has been selected for the adjutantcy of the Herts Volunteers at Great Berkhamsted.

Royal Sussex Regiment (35th).—Corpl. P. Hoad and Lance-Corpl. C. C. Neville have been granted the medal for distinguished conduct in the field.

Hampshire Regiment (37th).—Capt. Boucher (on passage home) and Qrmr. Andrews (invalided) left Cape Town in the Britannic steamship on Oct. 6.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th).—2nd Lieut. Anderson (3rd Batn.) left Cape Town on Oct. 16 on passage home in steamship Englishman.

NAVAL AND MILITARY MEMORIALS,

Brasses, Crosses, Graves'ones, Monuments, Tablets, Windows, Fonts, Pulpits, Reredoses, Standards, Mosaics, &c., of the highest class, designed, executed, and erected by

THOMAS PRATT & SONS,

Ecclesiastical Art Workers,

MEMORIAL GALLERY, 24, TAVISTOCK STREET (facing Covent Garden), LONDON, W.C.

Illustrations Free.

Old Military Flags netted and arranged for preservation.

Capt. Davidson left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman.

Dorset Regiment (39th).—Capt. A. L. Kitson is discharged to duty in South Africa.

S. Lancashire Regiment (40th).—Lieut. E. Robson and 2nd Lieut. W. V. Hume are discharged to duty in South Africa.

Black Watch (42nd).—Lieut. Harvey is appointed Adjutant of the 1st Batn.

Royal Berkshire Regiment (49th).—Col. Evans Gordon and Capt. Sir T. Pasley left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman. 2nd Lieut. Marton arrived at Plymouth on the 18th on board the hospital ship Dunera.

Royal West Kent Regiment (50th).—2nd Lieut. Parker left Cape Town on Oct. 15 on passage home in transport Lake Erie.

King's Shropshire Light Infantry (53rd).—Capt. Markham is ordered to join the 2nd Batn. (85th) in India on promotion.

Middlesex Regiment (57th).—Capt. Haviland arrived at Plymouth on Oct. 18 on board the hospital ship Dunera. Lieut. C. D'O. A. C. Bowers is discharged to duty in South Africa.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—Capt. C. A. G. Clarke (4th Batn.) has been selected for Adjutant of the Queen's Westminster R.V. on increase of establishment. Capt. R. P. Cobbold left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman.

Wiltshire Regiment (62nd).—Lieut.-Col. Carter arrived at Plymouth Oct. 18 on board the hospital ship Dunera.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—Capt. Crichton will join the new 4th Batn. on an early date on promotion. Capt. B. A. Wright is invalided home from Kumasi.

Royal Berkshire Regiment (66th).—Major McClintock has been appointed second in command of the 1st Batn. (49th) at Gibraltar.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Lieut.-Col. Woodland arrived at Plymouth on Oct. 18 on board the hospital ship Dunera.

Highland Light Infantry (71st).—Capt. Jarvie (4th Batn.) left Cape Town on Oct. 6th in the Britannic on passage home. Capt. S. Scrase-Dickins, who has been Acting Brigade-Major on Salisbury Plain, rejoins the depot of the 2nd Batn. Lieut. Graham and Lieut. C. R. C. Mayne are invalided home from Kumasi.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—Colour-Sergt. D. Nelson, Sergt.-Drummer G. Lawrence, Corpl.-Piper K. McLeod, and Lance-Corpls. S. Dryden and W. C. H. Hodgson have been awarded the medal for distinguished conduct in the field.

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (76th).—Capt. Cobb is posted to the battalion in India, on restoration to the establishment.

Middlesex Regiment (77th).—Major Longe, from the depot at Hounslow, is under orders to embark for South Africa to rejoin headquarters.

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—Capt. Adlercron, 1st Batn., has arrived home from South Africa, having fortunately made a perfect recovery after having been shot through the brain in a skirmish near Vredfort.

Royal Irish Rifles (83rd).—Capt. Rosborough, 6th (Militia) Batn., has been selected for service with the Central Africa Rifles.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (87th).—Lieuts. Kentish and Holmes arrived at Plymouth Oct. 18 on board the hospital ship Dunera.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st).—2nd Lieut. Henderson left Cape Town in the Britannic on Oct. 6 invalided.

Derbyshire Regiment (95th).—Capt. Pennell, V.C., left Cape Town on Oct. 21 in the steamship Tagus, on passage home. Capt. Mackinnon is invalided home from Kumasi. 2nd Lieut. James left Cape Town on Oct. 15 in the transport Lake Erie on passage home.

Royal West Kent Regiment (97th).—Capt. Montgomery-Campbell left Cape Town in the Britannic steamship on Oct. 6, invalided.

Leinster Regiment (100th).—Capt. Mather will proceed to the West Indies to join the 2nd Batn. (109th), on promotion.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—Lieut. (local Capt.) R. H. Monck-Mason and Capt. W. D. Beannish (3rd Batn.) are invalided home from Kumasi.

Royal Dublin Fusiliers (102nd).—Major F. P. English is discharged to duty in South Africa.

Rifle Brigade.—Lieut.-Col. Metcalf and Lieut. Blewitt arrived at Plymouth on the 18th in the hospital ship Dunera, invalided from South Africa. Capt. Sir G. Grogan is transferred on promotion from the 1st to the 4th Batn. Lieut. K. C. S. Foy (7th Batn.) has been appointed for duty with the 2nd Royal Rifles Reserve at Parkhurst.

Army Service Corps.—Qmr. Evans left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Britannic, invalided. Lieut. Lord Graham (attached) left Cape Town on Oct. 21 on passage home in steamship Tagus.

Army Ordnance Department.—Major Sherwood left Cape Town for England on Oct. 11 on board the Kinfauns Castle.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Lieut.-Col. Irvine left Cape Town in the Britannic on Oct. 6, invalided. Major Reade sailed from Cape Town on Oct. 11 in the Kinfauns Castle. Lieut. H. Simson has been discharged to duty, South Africa.

West India Regiment.—Lieut. Willis (1st Batn.), is invalided home from Kumasi. Capt. Stewart, who has been serving with the West African Regiment in the Ashanti Expedition, has been invalided to England, and sailed on the 10th inst. Pte. W. Brown, 1st Batn., has been granted the medal for distinguished conduct in the field.

Army Veterinary Department.—Veterinary Surgeon-Lieut. Love left Cape Town for England on Oct. 11 on board the Kinfauns Castle.

Royal Irish Reserve Regiment moves to Athlone to be stationed, and the corps replaces the 3rd Batn. Highland Light Infantry, which has left that centre. The detachment of the Suffolk Regiment at Shorncliffe also moved to Guernsey, to join the 3rd Batn. of the regiment.

Staff.—Major-Gen. Hutton, Major-Gen. Wavell, and Capt. Viscount Fincastle, V.C., left Cape Town on Oct. 17 for England in the Norman. Two colonels of the Indian Staff Corps will be placed next month on the unemployed supernumerary list, viz., Cols. C. C. Brownlow, on Nov. 20, and J. G. Kelly, C.B., A.D.C., on Nov. 28. Col. Hegan left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Britannic on passage home.

Indian Staff Corps.—Col. Duff left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman. Capt. (local Major) C. J. Mellish is invalided home from Kumasi.

Reserve of Officers.—Major Fraser left Cape Town on Oct. 11 in the Kinfauns Castle. Major Tremayne, Capt. Bonham-Christie left Cape Town on Oct. 15 on passage home in transport Lake Erie. Capt. J. R. Beech left Cape Town in the Norman on Oct. 17.

Remount Depot.—Major Lloyd left Cape Town on Oct. 15 on passage home in transport Lake Erie.

Militia.

Kent Militia Artillery.—Major Lord Athlumney left Cape Town on Oct. 17 in the Norman.

Much credit is due to the Militia battalions now being disembodied. They have served for several months with admirable spirit, and have reached a high standard of efficiency. Moreover, their conduct and demeanour have been generally excellent. It is interesting to note that this is the seventh occasion upon which the Militia has been embodied for permanent duty in the last 150 years. The first occasion was in 1758-63, during the Seven Years' War; the next in 1778-83, during the War of American Independence; in 1792-1816, for 24 years, during the long war with France; in 1854-56, during the Crimean War; in 1857-1861, during the Indian Mutiny and China campaigns; in 1885, after the death of Gordon; and in 1899-1900. On each of these occasions the Militia has done its duty well, and proved itself a reliable force.

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.

£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400
(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT £100 to £185
(Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315
(Chelsen, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

Yeomanry.

Warwickshire Yeomanry.—Lieut.-Col. Alston is appointed second in command of the Warwickshire Yeomanry Cavalry in succession to the Marquis of Hertford, appointed to command the regiment.

Volunteers.

A cadet corps has been formed at Stonyhurst College, numbering 60 members at the outset. The corps is attached to the 1st V.B. East Lancashire Regt., under Lieut.-Col. Henry J. Robinson, V.D.

The decision to increase the 5th (Princess Beatrice's Isle of Wight) V.B. Hampshire Regt. by the formation of a company at Totland Bay has been rescinded.

Col. Robert Weddell, V.D., commanding 1st V.B. Northumberland Fusiliers, is retiring at the end of the year. Lieut.-Col. Wilfrid Gibson, V.D., Herham, second in command, is mentioned as his successor. Col. Weddell entered the Berwick Rifles (now G. Company of the battalion) as a private.

Lieut.-Col. W. Whetherly, who on Monday last completed 10 years in command of the East London Engineer Volunteers, has been granted four years' extension of his command.

Capt. C. A. G. Clark, 4th Batn. King's Royal Rifles, has been selected for Adjutant of the Queen's Westminster Rifles, on the corps' increase of establishment.

Lieut. Varley, of the Honourable Artillery Company, has won the Rifle Championship jewel and the President's prize with 999 points out of a possible 1,120. Armr.-Sergt. Trask won the silver jewel with 956 points, and Sergt. Emery the bronze with 931.

OFFICERS' EXPENSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The letter from "Soldier Parent," published in your issue of the 20th inst., is only one of many that might be written upon a subject which bids fair to become a standing disgrace to the nation. It is most sincerely to be hoped that amongst the many and urgent calls for Army reform, the pressing question of "officers' expenses" will take a foremost place, and that something of a practical and far-reaching nature will be arrived at towards materially lessening the heavy and wholly unnecessary expenses to which officers (proverbially poor men) are put to, and over which there would appear very often to be little or no control exercised by those in authority. As an officer of nearly 30 years' service with two sons who have quite recently obtained their commissions in the Army, I can write with a certain amount of personal experience. I am well aware that the subject proposed to be dealt with is a delicate one to handle, and that there are many who see, or fancy they see, in the curtailment of regimental extravagance, mess entertainments, and institutions a corresponding loss of prestige and esprit de corps. "Tradition and the custom of war in like cases" goes a long way, no doubt, but surely it is time to look at the matter from a different standpoint of view. The drain on the commissioned ranks has been pretty severely felt, the result of the South African imbroglio, and although it would seem that so far the supply has equalled the demand, can we depend on it to meet still further calls in the near future? The Army, as a profession must be to many prohibitive by reason of the impossibility of living in it unless possessed of some private means, the pay of the junior ranks being quite inadequate to meet the items of expenditure, many of which are more or less compulsory, such as subscriptions and donations, the up-keep of an unnecessarily expensive uniform, the regimental polo club, drag, and other "calis" with which every military man is familiar.

I think the question is one that military members should bring forward in the House, and the authorities challenged as to what steps they propose taking towards ameliorating the present most unsatisfactory condition of things. The position of the British officer at no time has been more deserving of attention than it is now at the close of a struggle which has brought sorrow to so many an English home; the father, the brother, the son, have been taken, and who can say what lies ahead? I could, of course, write much in detail as to how I would suggest a practical solution of the difficulties that will arise in dealing with this matter of "officers' expenses." Sooner or later it must be faced, the sooner the better. At present I only wish to join issue with "Soldier Parent" in a protest against the existing order of things. Half measures and official fulminations from the War Office will not answer; the cost must be cut with regard to the cloth.

ANOTHER SOLDIER PARENT.

MR. ANTHONY HOPE is a novelist whose local colour is always of the best, and he is right in speaking of a military officer in his club as engaged in reading THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE. The statement appears in his serial "Tristram of Blent" in the current number of the Monthly Review.

CAPTAIN GALL'S SPECIAL PROMOTION CLASS

For ALL or ANY of the Subjects.

TERMS ON APPLICATION.

90a and 93, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.

Reviews.

THE GREAT BOER WAR.*

*That Dr. Doyle's book has many claims to appreciative esteem might be affirmed after a brief glance at its pages. To begin with, it is the first complete, succinct history of all operations down to date, and deals with the preliminaries of war, the inception of the struggle, and every episode to the penultimate snipings that we may hope foreshadow the end. But it is far more than a mere narrative; it is a well-reasoned record of momentous military events, a well-balanced verdict upon the much-disputed question of the conduct of the war. There can be no question of Dr. Conan Doyle's good faith, of his earnest desire to do the fullest justice to all. He writes generously, even tenderly, of mishaps and misadventures, and rises into impassioned eloquence when there is matter, and he finds abundant matter, to praise. There has been so much fault-finding, so much cheap criticism from self-constituted experts whose hasty utterances find an echo in the general disappointment and discontent, that it is pleasing to turn to these pages and read what Doyle says. He has realised, with large-hearted, broad-minded vision, how great were the difficulties of a campaign fought under entirely novel conditions by men handicapped from the outset with imperfect means, struggling ever to recover lost ground, to remedy misconceptions, to grapple with a crisis far greater than had ever been anticipated. So we have no worse judgment of Symons than that he suffered himself too readily to be locked up in Glencoe. Doyle finds in Sir George White the "one quality which is charming in an individual but may be dangerous in a commander—he was a confirmed optimist. Perhaps his heart might have failed him in the dark days to come had he not been so." Doyle's general summing-up of White is in the main admirable; he cannot blame him for the original "entanglement," for he had been but a week in the country when it came upon him, and he could not well alter the facts of the military situation. "He did his best, committed one or two errors, did brilliantly on one or two points, and finally conducted the defence with a tenacity and a gallantry which are above all praise." Again, in regard to Buller, he is by no means severe upon the Colenso disaster. He does full credit to the stoicism with which the general met the even more terrible withdrawal from Spion Kop, and his final operations for the relief of Ladysmith are characterised as "strategical movements largely conceived and admirably carried out. . . Buller set about his task in a slow, deliberate, pertinacious fashion. Let it be acknowledged that his was the hardest problem of the war, and that he solved it. The mere acknowledgment goes far to silence criticism." Doyle endorses the view so largely held that Buller through it all retained the extraordinary faculty for winning and holding the confidence of his men. They trusted him implicitly, and even after repulse joined issue again as steadily as though he had always led them to victory. No doubt they recognised in him the qualities that are dearest to our race—the obstinate refusal to accept a beating; but they knew also that he was their friend, that his first and last thoughts were for their welfare, and that if he had a fault it was pardonable in their eyes, namely, that he hated beyond everything to imperil men's lives more than could possibly be helped—the secret, indeed, of some of his want of success.

In dealing with other more or less unfortunate episodes Doyle is equally anxious to hold his hand and avoid too vigorous criticism. He has no bitter reproaches for Methuen. He points out that the close formation in which the Highlanders advanced at Magersfontein was essential to prevent straggling; but we may agree with him that, had the deployment occurred five minutes sooner, it is quite probable that the Boer position would have been carried. Here follows a most interesting digression comparing the "extreme bloodiness of modern warfare under some conditions and its bloodlessness under others." There were in all just a thousand casualties at Magersfontein, yet seven hundred of them occurred in a few moments, and the remainder during the whole day. The obvious conclusion is, that to press home frontal attack, column after column moving boldly across the open, must entail little short of annihilation. The warning may be recommended to our neighbours on the Continent who, to judge by the most recent manœuvres in France and Germany, have by no means laid this practical lesson to heart. Doyle too treats Gatacre gently, doing full justice to his fearlessness and tireless energy, but naturally animadverting upon the mistakes into which they led him. We are reminded that Gatacre was the first into the zareba of the Atbara—"a gallant exploit of the soldier, but a questionable position for the general. The man's strength and his weakness lay in this incident." Doyle sums up the whole case most fairly in a noble passage:—"It is not for the historian—especially for a civilian historian—to say a word unnecessarily to aggravate the pain of that brave man who, having done all that personal courage could do, was seen afterwards sobbing on the table of the waiting-room at Molteno, and bemoaning his 'poor men.'"

It is pleasant to turn from the dark to the pleasanter side, the revival of hope, the brilliant dawn of triumph, when the new leader, amply equipped by personal qualifications worthily supported by ample material and means, came upon the scene, and so soon changed the fortunes of the war. Within one fortnight Kimberley was relieved, Cronje captured, the two roads opened to Bloemfontein from the Modder and the Orange Rivers. Doyle bears glowing testimony to the power of "the single master-hand which had in an instant changed England's night into day." But here, however, he is rightly anxious that those who had aided so splendidly in the great achievement should have their share of the credit. "Kitchener, the organiser, French, the cavalry leader—to these two men, second only to their chief, are the results of the operation due." Nor does he omit Col. Henderson, who was head of Lord Roberts's Intelligence Department, but also his constant adviser in strategical matters; nor Col. Richardson, the chief supply officer, whose services, and those of the department he controlled, were invaluable.

Leaving the purely historical part of the work, we pass to the general criticisms with which it is largely filled: the views and strictures upon our military methods, the quality and temperament of our officers, the nature of our personnel, as organised, the defects of the existing matériel. It is not always possible to follow Dr. Conan Doyle in his conclusions. We may agree with him that our generals, "to their credit as men, but to their detriment as soldiers," showed very small powers of dissimulation throughout the campaign. There was often no secrecy, no "slimness," and this although the camps were honey-combed with spies. But we may demur to the sweeping assertion that "an over-elaboration of trifles and a want of grip of common sense and of adaptation to new ideas are characteristic failings in our Army," and think the criticism hasty and untenable. Dr. Conan Doyle, again, is rather too severe upon the cavalry, which he cannot admit "has justified its existence as cavalry." This may be in part borne out by the experience of the Boer War, but we should be foolish to convert all our cavalry into light horse men, trained to fight on foot as though the day for "shock tactics" was altogether over. We may yet have to meet a European enemy with cavalry of the old type, and should find ourselves at a disadvantage from a too hastily adopted change. No doubt the experience of the war tends largely to prove that the irregular action of untrained individuals acting more or less independently will be most formidable for the defence. Yet they would be useless for offence. Numbers cannot be moved and handled without previous organisation. A mob, however brave and well meaning, is still a mob and not an army. There must be some system, some subordination, some surrender of volition on the part of units to the central and controlling will, or confusion worse confounded, overwhelming defeat and disaster, must ensue.

SOME BOOKS ON SOUTH AFRICA.

The flood of South African literature shows diminution neither in quantity nor quality. It is true that some volumes are slight, and of little permanent value, but in the majority of them many useful things are found. Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., has added an extremely well-written book, which contains his later letters to the Morning Post and some others. Ian Hamilton's March (Longmans and Co.) includes more than its title would imply. It embraces incidents of the period from Mr. Churchill's departure from Natal to the battle of Diamond Hill. On his way to Bloemfontein he visited General Gatacre, and we are well pleased with the spirit in which he writes. He has always shown himself ready to appreciate the qualities and understand the difficulties of generals at the front. General Gatacre, he says, has been cruelly persecuted by people quite ignorant of the difficulties of war or of the conditions in which it is carried on in South Africa, and those who struggled back after the disastrous day at Stormberg were warm in their appreciation of his services. "No one could have got us out but him." In relation to which Mr. Churchill strikes a note of warning. If the War Office—he was writing in April—intended to break generals, not so much for incapacity as for want of success, it would not find men to fight for it in brigade and divisional commands. "The generals would not willingly risk the fruits of long years of service in damnable countries and perils of all kinds." "Besides, as an irreverent subaltern remarked to me, 'If you begin with Gatacre, where are you going to end? What about poor old —?' " Mr. Churchill's fortunes seem to have been a succession of adventures and escapes. He had escaped from Pretoria, and was now to escape in an adventure with McNeill's Scouts. He tells the story very well. They encountered an unexpected force, and had to retreat under a heavy fire to a sheltering kopje. As he attempted to mount, his horse p'unged, the saddle slipped, and the animal galloped away. For the second time in the war he ran for his life on foot from the Boer marksmen, but at last a friendly soldier gave him a lift, and he reached safety on a horse that was wounded to death. In the famous march of Ian Hamilton on the right flank of Lord Roberts's advance from Bloemfontein he saw operations which few others had the opportunity of describing, and when the force crossed over the front, and was on the left flank at Johannesburg, he was present at the battle of Florida or Doornkop. He then performed the bold feat of riding with his own messages and the General's detailed despatches through Johannesburg, at the time in possession of the enemy, to Lord Roberts's camp at Germistoun. He describes the events with great spirit, and has contributed one of the most readable narratives of the fighting that we have read.

Messrs. Methuen have published quite a library of books concerning the war, two on Ladysmith, two on Mafeking, another on the war from the Boer side, and one or two more. The Relief of Mafeking, by Filson Young, is a very interesting book by the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, noteworthy because it describes the march of Mahon's flying column. Incidentally Mr. Young refers to Magersfontein, and defends Lord Methuen from the things that have been said against him. He is disposed to rest the blame for the mishap on the rain and pitch-darkness, and contrasts the event with the attack made at Paardeberg on Feb. 18. At Magersfontein the casualties were about 900; on the sanguinary day of Paardeberg they were about 1,600. Mr. Young was with Lord Methuen in the operations of Boshof, to which justice has scarcely been done by correspondents. We would emphatically commend his excellent account of the march by which Mafeking was relieved. His correspondence well deserved to be republished.

The fifth edition of The Gunner's Pocket Book, by Lieut. A. C. Chew, R.G.A., is a compact little volume, brim full of information and interest to artillerymen. The thousand and one useful facts it embodies are set forth in concise style, while numerous diagrams illustrate the text. The book deserves to be as widely popular as ever.

PREVENTION OF ZYMOTIC DISEASES.—For greater security have the Drainage and Water Supply of your Town and Country or temporary Residence examined and certified by The Sanitary Engineering Company (H. Carter, C.E., Manager), 65, Victoria Street, Westminster.—Fee quoted on receipt of full particulars. Established 23 years. Telegrams: "Sanitation, London."

NEW WORK BY FRANK T. BULLEN.

Now Ready. Large post 8vo, 7s. 6d.

The Men of The Merchant Service:

Being the Polity of the Mercantile Marine for 'Long-shore Readers.

By Frank T. Bullen,

Author of "The Cruise of the 'Cachalot,'" "The Log of a Sea-Waif," &c.

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER & CO., 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

SOLDIERING IN CANADA.

RECOLLECTIONS AND EXPERIENCES.

By Lt.-Col. GEORGE T. DENISON,

Late Commanding the Governor-General's Body Guard. With Portrait. Extra Crown 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., LONDON.

MR. CONAN DOYLE'S HISTORY OF THE BOER WAR.

Just Published. With Maps. Large post 8vo., 7s. 6d.

THE GREAT BOER WAR.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of "The White Company," "Rodney Stone," "The Green Flag, and other Stories of War and Sport," &c.

Daily News:—"This Sketch of the War is a masterly performance. It is hardly possible to overpraise it. . . The experience, the artistic sense, and the creative powers of a great writer are seen in the achievement."

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER & CO., 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

The Great Boer War*. By A. Conan Doyle (Smith and Elder).

OETZMANN & Co.,
62, 64, 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, 77, & 79,
HAMPSTEAD ROAD, W.
(Continuation North of Tottenham Court Road.)
60 & 61, GRAFTON ST., DUBLIN; 75, UNION ST., RYDE.

Factories:

Eagle Works, HAMPSTEAD ROAD;
Albion Works, DRUMMOND STREET;
Stanhope Works, WILLIAM STREET;
Camden Works, HIGH STREET, CAMDEN TOWN, N.W.

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE

NOW PROCEEDING.

IMMENSE REDUCTIONS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS.

An Exceptional
Opportunity
Of Complete
Or Partial Furnishing
At Minimum
Cost.

All
Carpets
Made up
Free
of Charge.

SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED SALE CATALOGUE
(36 pages) POST FREE.

JEROME SACCONE,
LIMITED,

GIBRALTAR,
WINE, SPIRIT, & CIGAR
MERCHANTS

TO THE
ARMY & NAVY.

LONDON HOUSE:

15, COCKSPUR STREET.

Wine Shipped FREIGHT FREE to any port in the Mediterranean, and half-freight to India and the Cape.

Telegraphic Addresses:
"Saccone, Gibraltar." "Saccone, London."

SATURDAY REVIEW

OF

Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review
are treated only by Naval and Military men.

The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:

8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.

HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,
TREWS,

TARTAN PANTALOONS.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING
MILK

AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A PERFECT

UNSWEETENED

CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.

AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK

STEWARDS and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS,
ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this
good pure MILK most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.

WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.

Apply for particulars, Samples, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,

144, New Bond Street,
LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.

H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOX

*Appropriately arranged for everyday
as a lasting memento.*

PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

SHELTON & BALL,

Military and Court Tailors,
180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
(Opposite Burlington Gardens).

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).

THREE CHEERS FOR THE

RED WHITE
& BLUE
COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.

TRANSVAAL WAR.

DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT
THE FRONT A SUPPLY OF

BRAND'S
MEAT LOZENGES.

Sustaining and Invigorating.

In Hermetically Sealed Boxes, Convenient for the Pocket.

BRAND & CO., Ltd.,
MAYFAIR, LONDON.

... THE ...

Royal Navy List.

(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.

Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST

CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER

10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS

(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.

"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—Nautical Magazine.

Officers are earnestly requested to send
at once their special services to the Editor.

WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Advt. Dept.:—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)

THE Burton Brewery

COMPANY, LIMITED,

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.

BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.

Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO

Mr. E. RUGGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street,
Alexandria, Egypt.

"Ladysmith." Owing to the very numerous responses to Messrs.
Dickinson and Foster's appeal, space on the canvas of this Memorial picture is now limited, and Officers who should appear in it are asked to communicate personally or by relatives at once.

N.B.—Another Painting confined to the Relief Force is in progress, as to which please apply 114, New Bond St., W.

Notices.

THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

ALL EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.	TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year... .. £1 8 0	One Year... .. £1 12 6
Six Months... .. 0 14 0	Six Months... .. 0 18 3
Three Months... .. 0 7 0	Three Months... .. 0 8 2

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid
in advance.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
will be forwarded on application.

BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS.—
Price 5s, not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.

ALL BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1900.

THE COMMAND OF THE SEA.

IT was with just that touch of dramatic effect which we expect from the League that Mr.
Seymour Trower launched his startling query on Saturday last. To ask the people of England on the eve of the anniversary of Trafalgar, "Have we lost the command of the sea?" was what our Transatlantic cousins call "smart" and our brother, the Boer, "slim." And yet the coup has not been made nor the alarm created which was obviously intended. By this time the Executive Committee of the League have probably recognised that they have made a tactical mistake. The moment was well chosen, the mine was fully charged, only a spark seemed to be wanted, but the fuse was the wrong one, and the result was a fizzle. It is a great pity from a public point of view, because it must be admitted that there is cause, if not for alarm, at least for apprehension, and an outcry like this which seems to be without sufficient justification must lessen the weight of those which are made later. It was probably considered necessary by the Executive of the League to exaggerate the case they presented in order to attract public attention. But in their letter they have laid the colours on too thickly, while the accusation of incompetency which they have brought against Mr. Goschen and his advisers for the last five years has so little justification that it is only calculated to alienate support. Of the five points mentioned in Mr. Trower's letter there is only one worth consideration. It is true that our ships have not been completed as quickly as they ought to have been, but it is by no means proved that this is due to the incompetence of the Board. Moreover, it by no means follows that because there has been this delay in completion of ships, therefore we should lose our position of maritime supremacy if it were now called in question.

What is perhaps still more unpardonable in the letter is that its statements are historically inaccurate. For, if there is one thing more than another that the League has properly insisted upon our countrymen acquiring, it is the knowledge of naval history and its lessons. Yet here we have Mr. Trower virtually asserting that there has never been any time since Trafalgar until now at which our supremacy afloat has been in danger. This argues a lamentable ignorance of notorious and most instructive facts relating to the progress and development of our Fleet. We have a strong belief in the power of the League to be a useful factor in the maintenance of our naval position, and for this reason we see with regret statements made or action taken, tending to diminish its influence. Unfortunately several of its theatrical schemes of exploitation and advertisement, produced with the best intentions, have had exactly the opposite effect to that which was intended, and now we fear their appeals meet with very much the same reception from the public as did the cry of the boy who had shouted "Wolf!" too often.

It is just as well, since we have felt it advisable to express our regret that the League should have issued such a misleading manifesto, to emphasise our point of agreement with Mr. Trower. There can be no question that there has been most deplorable delays in the construction and completion of many of our ships of war, and those who know the facts will not deny that if this delay continues to occur our position from the point of view of imperial defence may become one of peril. It is an axiom that the integrity of the Empire depends essentially upon our ability to maintain our naval supremacy if it be challenged. If we cannot get the ships completed according to programme then we are drifting toward troublous times. Mr. Goschen acknowledges this, and he has intimated that he has been unable, with the machinery at his disposal, to oblige the contractors to fulfil their pledges. It would seem necessary, then, to augment or improve that machinery, and apparently this can only be accomplished with Parliamentary sanction. At present, in theory, our contracts contain a penal clause which is to operate in case of failure. But, as a matter of fact, no penalties are inflicted because of the difficulty of assessing the measure of responsibility. This system having completely failed, is it not time to try some other? It is ridiculous to assert that our resources for shipbuilding, gun-making, and the like have been exhausted, when no less than half a dozen foreign men-of-war have been built and equipped while the national ships remain in various stages of incompleteness. Either the demands of the foreigners are less stringent than our own, or we are trying to get our material below market price. Probably both causes are at work. The Admiralty believes itself bound to accept the lowest tender, and the price it pays is probably only sufficient to pay the manufacturers when they merely put in the work to keep the plant going. Every business man must be acquainted with this class of contract, and where time is of little account it probably suits both parties. But time is of the essence of the national bargain where warships are concerned, and it is surely worth considering whether celerity of production should not be compensated for by a premium paid in addition to the contract price. This appears to us to be the real solution of the problem which presents itself to the Admiralty, and as the public have never yet been known to begrudge money for the Navy we see no reason why it should not be tried.

CORSICA AND BIZERTA.

THE visit to Corsica and Bizerta which has been paid by M. de Lanessan and General André, the French Ministers of Marine and War, has been an interesting, and, in some ways, a significant event. It has long been anticipated that the French would shrink from no expenditure in their efforts to create in these places strong offensive and defensive positions. For years back Corsica has been regarded as of vital importance by French governments, and the arsenal which the Italians have created at Maddalena Island, at the northern end of Sardinia, is always regarded as a danger by Frenchmen. In regard to Bizerta, the time has gone by since we regarded the fortification of the place as an act against which we might reasonably protest. If there had been any hesitation on the part of the French Government in strengthening these places, it would have been swept away by the readiness of the legislature to vote, not only the money that was asked, but a large sum in excess. It was, indeed, chiefly to investigate the value of various defensive positions with reference to the expenditure of this money—6,000,000 francs—that the two Ministers made their journey. The Departments of War and Marine are, in France, in close relation in regard to all matters of coast defence, and the voyage of the Ministers is in no way remarkable.

Upon arriving at Ajaccio they were assured by the Military Governor that the navy and army were co-operating most heartily in their efforts. The Prefect, in welcoming the Ministers at a dinner, declared that Corsica had still no defence save the vaillante poitrine of her children—a rampart which, he said, however strong it might be, could not suffice, and the island demanded sufficient protection from the mother country. "Corsica counts upon you, Messieurs les Ministres, to realise at length the work of coast defence." General André replied that the visit would certainly not be without profit, while M. de Lanessan assured his hearers that good use would be made of the credit voted by the Chamber. A complete inspection of Ajaccio was made, and included a visit to the jetty of the citadel, which is to be lengthened. Afterwards, the Ministers proceeded—General André in the St. Louis, and the Minister of Marine in the Charlemagne, with the Prefect of Corsica in the Bowet—all in a very dignified manner—to Bonifacio, where the torpedo-boats towed the boats of the battleships, conveying the visitors and many naval officers, through the narrow opening into the port. An inspection of the citadel was made, and it was decided that the roadstead was too restricted and the place unsuitable to be made a naval station, and that Bonifacio must remain merely as a headquarters of the mobile defence. Undoubtedly the defences have been neglected, and Ajaccio, Bastia, and Bonifacio have all claimed the attention of the two Ministers. In the same state the Ministers then proceeded to Porto Vecchio, but their survey appears to have been disappointing, for they came to the conclusion that Ajaccio alone could be the centre for the defence and victualling of the island. The squadron next escorted the Ministers to Bizerta, where they visited the arsenal of Sidi-Abdallah, and examined the building slip which is being constructed there, as well as the plans for the works contemplated. They also visited the batteries of Saint Jean and the Kébir fort, as well as the defences of the right bank, including the battery of Chreck ben Chabane. An interesting feature of their visit was the appearance of a boat's crew of natives in naval uniform, but wearing the fez. M. Albin Rozet asked some time ago that the natives should be utilised, mainly to act as stokers, and the experiment has been made during the last twelve months. The men are now employed in the mobile defence of Bizerta, thus making possible an economy of French seamen for shore work at the station. Evidently the visit of the two Ministers may be regarded as a landmark in the great development of Bizerta, which has been in progress for some years.

The intervention of the French in Corsican affairs is now of long standing. French statesmen have watched the island jealously, and in the middle of the last century, though they had no disposition to annex it, they were determined that it should fall from the hand of Genoa to that of no other Power. Louis XV. exercised a species of magnanimity in his foreign policy, and was prepared to assist Genoa to retain the island, and it might never have been French at all, but for the fact that the acquisition of it seemed necessary to secure France from attack in the Mediterranean. Otherwise Paoli might even have succeeded in making his country a free and independent State. In the end, Genoa pawned Corsica for a sum equivalent to £80,000, and Charles Bonaparte, the father of Napoleon, spoke out boldly in favour of resistance. France, by that time, had resolved upon annexation, but the conquest of the island was not completed until 4,000 men had been killed and almost 6,000 men had died from wounds or sickness. The British occupation 1794-96 was merely an episode, and Corsica, though it still maintains many national characteristics, is now essentially French.

Navy Notes.

The paragraphs which have appeared in several papers to the effect that the Admiralty are about to reorganise the Reserve Squadron are incorrect in many particulars. The foundation for these stories we pointed out some weeks ago to be the decision of the Admiralty to give the Reserve Squadron three training cruises a year instead of two. Hitherto it has been the custom, although not regularly observed, to call the squadron out in the spring, and again for practice during the manoeuvres. It is now proposed to call it out also in the autumn, a decision which, if carried into effect, cannot fail to increase the mobility and effectiveness of this division of defence. But there is no foundation for the statement that a new squadron is to be created, or that the ships of the First Reserve are being supplied with a larger proportion of stores and victuals than is usual. It is quite possible also that some further changes will be made in the composition of the Reserve Squadron by the substitution of more modern vessels for those that are becoming obsolete. This, however, is entirely in accordance with the practice which has obtained for several years.

There have been rumours also with regard to an increase in the number of executive officers which might be held to imply an intention on the part of the authorities of entering another batch of supplementary lieutenants. What amount of truth there may be in this we are not prepared to say, for it is not to be disputed that at the present time if we are weak at all in personnel it is in regard to lieutenants. But we see nothing to justify a further increase of the supplementary officers. At the present time, if we desired to raise the fleet from a peace to a war footing, we could not be in a much better position as regards the supply of officers than we are. We should certainly have a larger number to draw upon than we could possibly require, even if we manned every available ship. But in peace time we cannot expect to use our reserves, and the unfortunate mistake of not entering a sufficiency of cadets when the Navy was so largely increased is responsible for the shortage in lieutenants. The wiser policy inaugurated by Sir Frederick Bedford, and others, is rapidly placing us in a better position, and it cannot be long before things will right themselves in this respect. To make another emergency entry of officers now would only complicate the situation later on.

The outcry which is raised in some quarters about the scarcity of certain ratings appears to us to be equally uncalled for. Recruiting for the Navy in almost every grade was never brisker than it is at present, and the proof of this is to be found in the higher qualifications demanded. Whether we look at those for the boys or the Marines in one direction, or at those demanded for the engine-room, from artificers and stokers, in another, we find demonstration of the increased popularity of service in the fleet. It may be that in one or two of the specialised artisan classes some little difficulty is still experienced, but in no case is this sufficient to have an effect one way or the other upon the efficiency of the fleet. It has been alleged that the grievances of the men connected with dietary and meal hours has had a deterrent effect upon recruiting. Such is not the case; first, because a well-founded belief exists on the lower decks of our men-of-war that their complaints are being inquired into and will be remedied; and secondly, because our blue-jackets are the very best recruiting agents. Their appearance in our streets is quite sufficient to falsify any statement that they are insufficiently or improperly fed.

The transfer of the command of certain small craft, torpedo boats and other tenders at the home ports to chief warrant officers, and the similar change carried out in the machinery department where the engineers are being relieved by engineer artificers, has been the subject of considerable comment in the Press. Much of this comment is beside the mark, owing to the circumstance that the writers have apparently been misinformed, or have misinterpreted the situation. As a matter of fact it has been found unnecessary to keep commissioned officers attached to vessels which are infrequently employed, and quite as convenient to send a lieutenant and an engineer to one of them if she is wanted for service. At first it was thought that the Admiralty were about to deprive some of the senior lieutenants and engineers of billets which they naturally look upon as a reward for long service. It was feared, too, that it was the thin end of the wedge, and that a general supersession of executives and engineers by warrant officers would follow. It would be very inexpedient and unwise, moreover, if, by any new rule, opportunities were taken from the young officers who are now placed in command of torpedo boats for gaining experience in handling these small craft. It has been truly said that the work in the torpedo boats has, so far as the young executive officer is concerned, fully compensated for the loss of masts and sails. It would, indeed, be far better to put midshipmen and assistant engineers in charge of these vessels than to pass them over to warrant officers, who, however well qualified for the work, could not profit by it to anything like the same extent. It has been suggested, indeed, that the selection of chief gunners or chief boatswains for such commands may enable the Admiralty to promote to the rank of lieutenant a limited number of these officers. Whatever may be thought of the claims of warrant officers to promotion to the rank of lieutenant in special cases, there can be no two opinions as to the substantial injustice of finding desirable billets for the "rankers" at the expense of the senior lieutenants who have hitherto commanded the majority of tenders on home service as well as abroad. An independent command of any sort is naturally regarded as a prize by the lieutenants, especially by those whose prospects of promotion are poor. Promotion from the ranks in the Navy, if it is to come at all, should mean the selection of young petty officers, and not the elevation of elderly men towards the close of their service. For, if promotion from the ranks has any meaning, it means that capable young men shall be enabled to rise to the quarter-deck, just as commissions can be won in the sister service.

Judging by the precedents of recent years, it may be fairly assumed that the Admiralty will issue the South African War medal to the crews of all ships that were engaged in the blockade of Delagoa Bay. In the Zulu and Egyptian campaigns medals, without clasp, were freely bestowed upon officers and men who took an indirect part in the operations. In the present case the medal, without clasp, has been fully earned by several of the ships' companies on the Cape station, and this has already been officially recognised by the order of the Admiralty that all stokers engaged on the blockade shall receive tropical pay between the dates December 1, 1899, and March 31, 1900. This recognition of the hard work that devolved upon the engine-room department has been greatly appreciated in Sir B. Harris's squadron. The Admiralty have also expressed their appreciation of the work so admirably performed by the Delagoa Bay Squadron in the search for contraband of war goods. Their Lordships are careful to add that the award of tropical pay is not to create a precedent. Sir R. Harris has been obliged to direct that exceptional economy be exercised in the consumption of coal by the ships of his squadron, owing to the Welsh strike. All full power and passage steam trials are suspended.

The Daily Graphic has published what it describes as an impressionist picture of Trafalgar, written some years after the battle by an old officer who was on Nelson's flagship. Evidently our contemporary has been taken in, for it is quite obvious that this "very curious narrative" was never written by a seaman. They do not talk on board ship about the "short shrill chirp" of the boatswain's call, nor can the man who used that expression have ever heard the hands turned up in the morning. A seaman, too, of that period would not have described the appearance of the enemy's fleet as "compact and serried as a jungle," nor would he have spoken of vessels "standing the same way," or "dodging the enemy," or "mingling in their line." It would be interesting, we are sure, to all students of history if the Daily Graphic would tell us the name of the officer of the Victory who spoke of "the white ensign of St. George, the beautiful tricolour, and the gorgeous banner of Castile and Leon." It may be said, of course, that everybody will understand that this account is a fictitious one, but we fail to see what good purpose can be served by pretending that it was written by a naval officer. An impressionist view or not, we cannot recognise it as a true picture of the battle.

"Olim" writes:—The Navy League has earned marks, some good, some bad, during their course of existence. An anonymous society gains something possibly in power of affecting public opinion, but anonymous publications have their drawbacks. The secretary of the society can from this hypothesis only write in terms generally approved by those who back him. The courteous expressions employed in reference to his French and Spanish wreaths round Nelson's monument are all to his good, and have met with approbation from those interested, and earn a good mark. The unsound ideas of strategy, fathered by the League in reference to our Naval force in China, wipe out the good and a heavy bad mark is graven deep. The proposition that detaching a force 12,000 miles or more is a strengthening of the country's position seems to be a contradiction in terms; as well might it be said that the retention of an army 250,000 strong at the Cape of Good Hope was a reinforcement to the normal strength of the nation. The members of the Navy League must study maps on an enlarged scale if they wish to avoid in future strategical traps for the unwary.

The story telegraphed from Homburg to a morning paper, and reproduced in an evening paper yesterday, to the effect that Mr. Goschen had inspected Kiel Naval Dockyard, and after visiting his father, who was ninety-five years old, had proceeded to Leipzig, is a pure invention, or a case of mistaken identity. Mr. Goschen has not left England, and his father died more than thirty years ago.

The members of the Royal Navy Club, 1765-85, dined at the Whitehall Rooms, Hôtel Métropole, on the 22nd inst., to commemorate the battle of Trafalgar, October 21st, 1805, and the battle of Camperdown, October 11, 1797. Admiral Sir Robert More Molyneux, K.C.B., presided, and the guest of the evening was the Right Hon. Lord Brassey, G.C.M.G., K.C.B. There were present:—

Admirals Pelham Aldrich, Sir Cyprian A. D. Bridge, W. B. Bridges, H. Cleveland, B. F. Clark, H. C. Carr, Sir E. C. Domville, Noel S. F. Digby, A. L. Douglas, C. C. Drury, Hon. Sir E. R. Fremantle, E. St. John Garforth, Sir Anthony H. Hoskins, J. G. J. Hanmer, F. A. Herbert, Rt. Hon. Sir J. C. D. Hay, Sir W. R. Kennedy, R. G. Kinahan, C. Johnstone, Sir W. Luard, G. D. Morant, J. F. L. P. Maclear, Sir Erasmus Ommanney, T. Saumarez, Sir Noel Salmon, V.C., Sir R. Tracey, Guy O. Twiss, T. Le Hunte Ward, Sir W. J. L. Wharton.

Captains G. L. Atkinson, A. Blenmerhassett, John Burgess, P. W. Bush, H. Cochran, Orford Churchill, W. E. Darwell, R. B. Farquhar, G. D. Clayhills Henderson, W. W. Hewitt, W. des Vœux Hamilton, R. W. Hope, C. D. Inglis, E. P. Jones, K. B. King, C. K. Kennedy-Purvis, Horatio F. Kemble, W. Osborne Moore, Clayton Mitchell, H. J. May, C.B., C. J. Norcock, Horatio Nelson, Edmund S. Poë, A.D.C., Arthur S. Phillpotts, M.P., G. E. Patey, D. McN. Riddle, C. O. Rising, R. H. S. Stokes, W. Spratt, P. K. Smythies, E. W. Slade, C. R. Wood, S. M. Eardley-Wilmot, H. H. Washington.

Commanders W. V. Anson, O. de B. Brock, Lambton L. Bevan, G. L. B. Bennett, R. E. Berkeley, C. E. Carey, J. Caulfield, C. D. Dormer, J. D. Daintree, E. L. Fitzherbert, Douglas Forsyth, Wm. Grove, M. J. Harrison, A. Haggard, Mark Kerr, E. D. Law, H. D. Law, E. C. Moore, W. H. Nicholson, N. C. Palmer, C. N. Robinson, H. W. Savory, H. C. Sayce, E. A. Salwey, A. Hayes-Sadler, Cyril Tower, A. W. Waymouth, Lionel Wells, and Fleet-Paymaster E. M. Roe, Secretary.

About

LEMCO

the Soldier's Mainstay.

Lemco is the original Liebig Company's Extract, the only meat extract manufactured under the supervision of J. v. Liebig and his successors. Every jar bears his signature in blue.

Her Majesty's Government has ordered for the front enormous quantities of Lemco. The entire product of thousands of selected bullocks has been supplied in special regulation tins. See the name "Lemco" (the manufacturers' initials) on every jar of

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT.

Navy Personal.

Admiral of the Fleet the Earl of Clanwilliam had the honour of dining with the Queen at Balmoral Castle on Monday last.

Admiral Sir Alexander Buller was the naval representative, on Friday in last week, at the meeting in the Castle of Exeter, convened by Lord Clinton, Lord-Lieutenant of Devon, to consider the best means of celebrating the return to the county of General Sir Redvers Buller, of Crediton. On the previous day Sir Alexander Buller visited the transport Dunera at Plymouth to meet Commander Spencer de Horsey, returning wounded from South Africa, and who had previously served under the Admiral in China.

Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson's appointment to the China command, to relieve Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Seymour, as soon as his, Sir Harry's, period of service in the Channel Squadron expires, is not likely to occur as predicted, as the present Commander-in-Chief in China is to remain on that station until the affairs of China are on a better footing, and it would be inconvenient to remove him while delicate foreign complications exist. Sir Harry Rawson will undoubtedly be offered another appointment, though not immediately after leaving the Channel Squadron, and one will probably be found him nearer home.

Rear-Admiral Lewis Beaumont's transfer from the Pacific to the Australia station as Commander-in-Chief, is an unexpected re-adjustment of the foreign commands. As Rear-Admiral Beaumont is to leave Esquimalt immediately we presume that is with a view of meeting the Royal Arthur in sufficient time to proceed in her to Fremantle, Western Australia, for the embarkation of the Earl of Hopetoun on December 5 next, as it would be more desirable for the new Commander-in-Chief to convey His Excellency to the seat of government than arrive on the station after the Governor-General had assumed administration. With Rear-Admiral Beaumont's large experiences as a gunnery officer, naval attaché, private secretary to the First Lord (Lord Northbrook), whom he accompanied to Egypt on a special mission in 1884, and Director of Naval Intelligence, Australia is fortunate in securing such a valuable officer as Commander-in-Chief.

Rear-Admiral Andrew Bickford's appointment as Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific station will be viewed with satisfaction throughout the naval service, in which his ability and unvarying geniality have secured him numerous friends.

Rear-Admiral Edwin Pollard suggested on Saturday last, at a meeting in Norwich of the Norfolk Patriotic Association, that a roll of honour should be raised to all Norfolk men who had served in South Africa, the Dean having offered one of the Cathedral chapels as a South Africa chapel. The gallant admiral's suggestions would involve covering one side of the Cathedral with about 4,000 names. As an alternative it was suggested that a granite plinth should be erected in a suitable place, and a committee was formed to discuss such a desirable object.

Rear-Admiral, now Sir William, Dyke Acland, whose accident in the summer prevented his attendance during the recent illness of his distinguished father, the late baronet, was, we are sorry to say, unable to attend the funeral at Oxford on Friday in last week.

Captain Alban Tate, of the Pactolus, was detached from the Channel Fleet at Berehaven last week, to Oporto, in honour of the visit of their Majesties the King and Queen to unveil the statue erected in memory of the famous navigator Alfonso Henriques, a Prince of Portugal.

Captain the Hon. Edward Dawson had the honour of dining with the Queen at Balmoral Castle on Saturday last.

Captain Casper J. Baker commissions the Blake on Tuesday next at Devonport, to convey officers and men to Malta to recommission the Renown.

Captain Francis R. Pelly, of the Psyche, arrived at New York on Monday last to receive from the police authorities a defaulter who had absconded from Bermuda, and left immediately after embarking the delinquent for that island, but without saluting the flag of the United States, whose battery was prepared to return the compliment. The omission has not been allowed to pass unnoticed, but we have no doubt of Captain Pelly's ability to explain the circumstances to his Commander-in-Chief.

Captain Frederick S. Inglefield commissions the Glory at Portsmouth on Thursday next, and exceptional efforts are being made to have her ready for the pennant on that day, in order that her departure for China shall in no way be delayed.

Captain Frederick L. Campbell and the officers of the Indefatigable did not forget Trafalgar Day, although they were cruising in the Antilles. A floral anchor was placed by their direction at the base of Nelson's Column in Trafalgar Square on Sunday last.

Captain Sir Edward Chichester, Bart., Principal Transport Officer in South Africa, embarked in the Union Castle steamship Dunvegan Castle on Wednesday last for England. General Sir Redvers Buller is also coming home in the same vessel. Both officers are "men of Devon," and it was hoped that they would have disembarked at Plymouth, but it has been decided to take the vessel direct to Southampton.

Captain John E. Blaxland, of the Thunderer, is to pay-off that vessel at the expiration of the coming cruise of the Reserve Squadron and commission the Hood in her place.

Captain Arthur J. Horsley paid off the Europa on Tuesday last at Portsmouth, and is undoubtedly glad to be clear of a vessel that caused such a large amount of trouble during her recent voyage to Australia. An engineers' expert recently remarked that her boilers would be better on the "scrap heap." It is reported that they are to be consigned to that receptacle for rubbish, after giving more trouble to her engineer officers than those of any modern vessel in the service.

Captain John Casement, of the Amphion, arrived at St. Vincent, Cape de Verde, on Monday last, and left the following Wednesday for Monte Video, en route for the Pacific station.

Captain Arthur W. Prothero, of the Arrogant, will not be able to leave Devonport in that cruiser until 29th prox., as she will only be out of the dockyard hands about that date.

Captain Alfred W. Paget, of the Astræ, who was detached, without any announcement thereof, from the Mediterranean Squadron to convoy the Janus to China, arrived at Hong Kong with the latter vessel on Sunday last.

Captain Colin R. Koppel has been selected flag-captain to Rear-Admiral Andrew K. Bickford, the newly-appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific station, and thus obtains a sea-going command before attaining the age of thirty-eight. His gallant and veteran father was ten years younger at the corresponding period of his naval career.

Commander Ernest C. Troubridge, of the Pelorus, will be ready to leave Devonport about 14th prox.

Commander John de M. Hutchison, of the Lion, commemorated Trafalgar Day by a display of flags and garlands on board the Implacable, auxiliary to that training-ship. The Implacable, originally the French two-decker, Duguay Trouin, of seventy-four guns, was one of four line-of-battleships captured by Captain Sir Richard Strachan, of the Cæsar, off Cape Ortugal, on November 4, 1805, thirteen days after the battle of Trafalgar.

Commander Spencer de Horsey, late of the Monarch, who was badly wounded in the ankle during the operations near Pretoria on July 4, arrived at Southampton on Friday in last week in the transport Dunera. Although making favourable progress, he is obliged to continue the use of crutches. He has proceeded to his father's residence in the Isle of Wight.

Commander Murray Parks, of the Coquette, who distinguished himself while serving in the Phœbe from 1893-96 on the Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa station, and for which he received early promotion, is to commission the Blonde at Devonport, on 20th prox., to relieve the Magicienne in the same station.

Commander H. Evan-Thomas, Chief of the Signal School at Portsmouth, is to command the Pioneer when commissioned on 15th prox., to relieve the Hebe in the Mediterranean station. His appointment is in accordance with the intention of the Admiralty to place Commanders instead of Captains in the Pioneer class of cruiser.

Lieut. Allan F. Everett, Flag Lieut. to Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson, commanding the Channel Fleet, is to relieve Commander H. Evan-Thomas in the Signal School at Portsmouth, and will undoubtedly prove an excellent successor to that officer after nearly two year's experience in his present important appointment under such a distinguished flag officer.

Inspector of Machinery John Mayston, relieved from Hong Kong, and Engineer E. J. Rosevere, relieved from the Assaye, at Bombay, arrived home on Saturday last by the P. and O. steamship Victoria.

Fleet Paymaster Henry Dawson, of the Majestic, relinquishes that appointment to join the Glory when commissioned on the 1st prox. as flagship for the China station. His cricketing ability is not forgotten in the Far East.

Fleet Paymaster William O. Bedford, who has served throughout the present commission of the Renown, is reappointed for a further period of service in that flagship.

ROYAL MARINES.

Colonel A. B. Crosbie, Royal Marines, who is about to be promoted Major-General, first saw active service in China, when in 1868 he was landed at the occupation of Yangchow. Afterwards he was mentioned in despatches for the part he took in the attack and capture of various walled villages. In the Ashanti War of 1873 he was in command of the Royal Marines, and fought in the battle of Ordahsu and the capture of Kumasi. Two years later he commanded the Marines of the Active in an expedition up the Congo, and was mentioned in despatches and received the brevet of Major.

Colonel Townley W. Dowding, R.M.L.I., relieves Colonel Adolphus B. Crosbie as commandant at the dépôt. Both officers were specially promoted captain for their services in South and West Africa during successive commissions of the Active, commodore's ship on that station, and are the only ones in the Royal Marine force who have been accorded this special recognition.

Lieut.-Colonel George T. Onslow, R.M.L.I., relieves Colonel Townley W. Dowding, R.M.L.I., in the important and lucrative appointment of Inspector of Marine Recruiting. As he has recently been on special service in South Africa, and was previously commended for important services with the Camel Corps in Egypt, his selection is a proper reward for a great deal of hard work.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition, 1900.
Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

THE CHINA CRISIS.

OPERATIONS OF ALLIES.

The Secretary of State for India has received the following telegram from Lieut.-Gen. Sir Alfred Gaselee. It is dated Oct. 14 from Sunglintien, six miles in a southerly direction from Chochow:—

"Country round is quiet and people are friendly. The Chinese regular forces are retiring. Ample supplies are available. Local governments appear to be making every effort for suppression of Boxers. Thirteen Boxers' heads were hanging at gate of Chochow when our troops entered the place."

Major-Gen. Lorne Campbell, who is co-operating from Tien-tsin with the expedition under Sir A. Gaselee against Pao-tung-fu, reports from Tien-tsin on Oct. 13 that his force reached that place on the 13th at noon, all well, after throwing a bridge across the Grand Canal. He adds:—"Country all quiet; troops in excellent health; supplies procurable."

The Secretary of State has also received from Major-Gen. Lorne Campbell the following further telegrams:—

"Force arrived this morning Wangchiaofu, Oct. 14. Owing to excessive rain, march difficult for first portion. Country people friendly, produce ample supplies. Oct. 15, Menan-hsien.—After forced march 22 miles occupied walled town Menan-hsien. Captured en route 20 Boxer horsemen, large quantities of mules and ponies. Troops marched splendidly. Ample supplies. Health of troops excellent. Oct. 16, Changchiawo.—Arrived all well. 2,000 Chinese troops with cavalry retreated in a southerly direction on our approach. No opposition. Lieut. King, who had been despatched to communicate with French general officer in command, left Menan-hsien at 2 p.m. yesterday, returned here 5 p.m. to day, carrying orders, having covered 80 miles on one horse."

The following despatch from Peking, dated the 18th inst., has been received in Paris:—

"Pao-tung-fu was taken by General Bailloud's column some time before the arrival of the international column from Peking. The conduct of our troops was exemplary. Those forming part of the international column were particularly well received by the inhabitants, who complained of pillaging on the part of the German soldiers. All the villages after Lu-Kiao-Kiao displayed the French colours. Cho-Chau, which was occupied by 200 of Li Hung Chang's soldiers, was evacuated at the mere request of the French captain."

A despatch from Tien-tsin, dated the 19th inst., received in New York, states that according to reliable though unofficial reports, the advance guard of the allies entered Pao-tung-fu on the 17th inst. The city was practically deserted and offered no resistance. A British column captured 17 men belonging to the Chinese Imperial troops at Menan-hsien on the 16th inst. They formed part of a force of 2,000 which was sent to disperse the Boxers in that region. The captives asserted that they killed 200 Boxers, and that they were returning to Pa-chau when they were fired upon and dispersed by the French. The British confiscated their arms and horses, and then released them. Runners report that there are many burning villages in the path of the German and French columns.

The Secretary of State for India has received the following telegram from Major-Gen. Lorne Campbell:—

"Arrived at Renchussien Oct. 18. Orders received from French general to proceed to An; prevented by unbridged river, 120ft. wide, 4 or 6ft. deep; could not comply. Chinese informed me An unapproachable for troops of all arms owing to large morass. River and land columns ordered to proceed to An, in the latter case by a circuitous course, via Renchinshoren, Laayanghsien. Early in the morning Chinese Imperial troops received news of our approach; retired in a southerly direction."

The Hong Kong-Singapore Artillery have left Peking to return to Hong Kong. Admiral Seymour and Admiral Remey have arrived at Shanghai.

The Secretary of State for India has received the following telegrams from Sir Alfred Gaselee:—

"Hamel Camp, Anshu, Oct. 18.—Expect to arrive at Pao-tung-fu to-morrow with the converging columns of allied troops from Peking and Tien-tsin. No opposition, Chinese troops having withdrawn and no Boxers having been met. Health of troops in Peking column excellent. Have not yet heard from Campbell regarding Tien-tsin column. Supplies of grain and forage abundant on payment. Transport good, especially army transport carts from India."

"Pao-tung-fu, Oct. 20.—Allied forces under my command arrived yesterday. To-day British, German, French, Italian guards posted at gates. All the generals with small escorts went through town, after which arranged for allotment of quarters for occupation. I shall keep most of the British troops in camp for the present. I am waiting for orders from Field-Marshal regarding future disposition. Most of the inhabitants remaining in city. No signs of hostility. Supplies procurable, but not abundant. Mr. and Mrs. Green, one child, and Miss Green are here. After great sufferings and many escapes from death, on October 16 they were handed over to French advance force and most kindly treated by Commandant Drude. They are in their hospitals owing to Mr. Green's ill-health. Ladies and child seem to be well."

He has also received from Major-Gen. Lorne Campbell the two following telegrams:—

"Arrived at Maochiao Oct. 17. 2,500 Chinese Imperial troops retreated before us. 100 surrendered, but producing proof that they had been sent by Li Hung Chang to suppress Boxers (were) released with arms. Information received that Pao-tung-fu occupied by French. In consequence of destruction of Maochiao (by) Chinese Imperial troops, supplies rather difficult to procure here, but as only four miles distant from river column ample supplies obtained. After a very difficult 17 mile march arrived at walled city, Kaoyang-hsien, half an hour after three in the afternoon, Oct. 19, having built bridge over river. Troops excellent. Marching well."

Orders have been given at Aldershot for a draft of gunners and drivers, with sergeants, corporals, bombardiers, and collar-makers, to be prepared by the Horse and Field Batteries at Aldershot for service in China. The draft is to leave Aldershot on Tuesday for Woolwich, where it will be mobilised and despatched.

CASUALTIES IN CHINA.

Welsh Fus.—2nd: 3109 Sgt. Hammerton, died enteric Peking, Oct. 17; 3807 Fisher (? cause), Tungchow, Oct. 22.

TRAFALGAR DAY.

Although the Nelson monument was not decorated this year so far as the actual column was concerned, there were, as the list which we give below shows, a very large number of wreaths deposited about the base and pedestal. These wreaths were as a rule, if not in every case, deposited with the Navy League, which undertook to arrange them round the statue. A rather interesting point has been raised in this connection as to whom belongs the credit for having instituted this custom of decorating the Trafalgar column. Generally it is assumed to lie with the Navy League, but it is also claimed for the Excellent, and certainly some years ago a wreath was sent from Whale Island and placed at the foot of the monument on Trafalgar Day. A notable feature of the occurrences at Liverpool was a procession of volunteers, detachments of officers and men from the great steamship lines, many representatives of commercial organisations and boys from the training ships and charitable societies, headed by the Lord Mayor, which shortly after midday proceeded to the monument for the purpose of depositing a wreath there. The Lord Mayor made a patriotic speech, in which he referred to the benefits conferred upon us by the victory at Trafalgar and the lesson inculcated. At Portsmouth the Victory was decorated as usual, and celebrations also took place at Douglas, in the Isle of Man, at Norwich, and elsewhere. At Bristol, the local branch of the Navy League commemorated the occasion by distributing the prizes in the competition by the boys of the local schools for the best essay on naval history. It is stated that in Bristol alone over 2,000 boys had written essays, the masters of the schools encouraging the movement in every way. There can be no question that this work of interesting the youth of the country in the business of the Navy and the lessons of its history is not the least useful of the functions of the League. In the colonies there were also a number of celebrations, and in Montreal Lord Strathcona unveiled the old Nelson monument, which, it will be remembered, had been disfigured, and which has been renovated by the members of the local branch of the Navy League.

WREATHS ON THE PEDESTAL.

South side.—"To the immortal memory of Nelson, a tribute from the Navy League."

East side.—"To the memory of Nelson, from the Bristol Branch of the Navy League."

North side.—"To the memory of the brave French and Spaniards who fell at Trafalgar." (Tied with French and Spanish colours.)

West side.—"To the memory of Nelson, from the Liverpool Branch of the Navy League."

WREATHS AT THE CORNERS OF COLUMN.

S.E.—"To the memory of Nelson, from the Torquay Branch of the Navy League."

N.E.—"To the memory of Nelson, from the Windsor and Eton Branch of the Navy League."

N.W.—"To the memory of Nelson, from the Harrogate Branch of the Navy League."

S.W.—"To the memory of Nelson, from the Plymouth Branch of the Navy League."

WREATHS AT THE BASE OF MONUMENT.

Anchor, tied with ship ribbons, from the officers of the Indefatigable, West Indies Station. Manx Tribute, "This wreath is sent by loyal Manxmen in honour of Britain's greatest hero, of her greatest sea-fight, and in commemoration of the fact that Lieut. Quillam, a Manxman, bravely rigged up a jury gear and with it steered the Victory at the Battle of Trafalgar." Chaplet of yellow chrysanthemums and autumn foliage from the Rottingdean Branch of the Navy League. Wreath from the Tonbridge School Branch of the Navy League. Wreath of chrysanthemums, tied red, white, and blue ribbons, from Miss Robins, daughter of the late Capt. Thomas Lowton Robins, who was signal midshipman on board H.M.S. Victory, Oct. 21, 1805. Laurel wreath, tied with blue ribbon, from Miss Yule and Mrs. Byrne, daughters of the late Commander John Yule, Lieut. of the Victory, who fought the main deck at the battle of Trafalgar. Laurel wreath, tied with red, white, and blue ribbons, from Mrs. I. E. G. Farmer, granddaughter of Lieut. Yule, who fought on the Victory with Nelson at the Battle of Trafalgar. Wreath, "To the memory of Nelson from the Sydenham Branch of the Navy League." Picture from the First London Branch of the Navy League. The picture, painted some years ago by the President of the Dudley Gallery and his two sons, W. and N. Severn, represents a powerful British fleet about to weigh anchor. The signal "Weigh" has just been hoisted on the Admiral's ship. Floral star, "To the immortal memory of Nelson, from Abbotsholme School." Chaplet of evergreen from the West Downs School Branch of the Navy League. Chaplet of bay leaves, tied red, white blue ribbons, "In grateful memory of Nelson from Miss La Pénitère, granddaughter of Capt. La Pénitère, who brought home the despatches from Trafalgar." Enormous anchor of white chrysanthemums, virgin lilies, and lilies of the valley, from the Brighton and Hove Branch of the Navy League. Wreath of white flowers, "To the imperishable memory of Admiral Lord Nelson, this wreath is inscribed by Evangeline Nelson Humphrey Davy, great granddaughter of Lady Nelson." Laurel anchor from Lady Broke Middleton. Anchor of laurel and white chrysanthemums, tied with red, white, and blue ribbons, "To commemorate Trafalgar Day from Town of Aldershot." Laurel wreath, tied blue ribbon, "In memory of Trafalgar; honour as large as waves shall break to Nelson's peerless name," from Miss E. Moorhouse. Anchor, white lilies, chrysanthemums, chain of scarlet geraniums, "To the memory of Lord Nelson from the two surviving daughters of Lieut. Daniel Harrington, who served under him on board the Victory at the Battle of Trafalgar." Floral shield, "The fleet of Britain is her all in all," from the Third London Branch of the Navy League. Wreath from Mr. Robert Sayer. Chaplet of artificial roses, violets, ferns, &c., "To the memory of Nelson," from the Malta Branch of the Navy League. Floral trophy from the readers of the Gentlewoman. Floral trophy from the Observer.

THE FORCES OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Will you allow me to correct a couple of inaccuracies in your, always excellent, journal of July 7, under the heading "The Forces of New South Wales"? 1. The Union Volunteer Regiment and the Irish Rifles are not two separate corps. The Irish Rifles form portion of the (8th) Union Volunteer Regiment. 2. The Railway Volunteer Corps is now non-existent; it was disbanded some time ago. I observe that you state in same issue (July 7) that Lieut.-Col. H. P. Airey, D.S.O., the commander of the N.S.W. Bushmen's Corps in South Africa, "has not served either in the Army or Royal Marine forces." Col. Airey joined the 101st Regiment as an ensign in 1861, and left it as a lieutenant in 1866. Besides serving with the New South Wales contingent in the Sudan he was attached to the Imperial forces in the Burmese Expedition, 1886-87 (severely wounded, mentioned by Government of India, mentioned in despatches, D.S.O., brevet of major). The coloured supplement accompanying your issue of July 7 is, it must be owned, an excellent one.

T. C. REID,
Editor Australian Army and Navy Journal,
Sydney.

THE Executive Committee of the Army Temperance Association, with the approval of Field-Marshal Lord Roberts, V.C., Chairman of the Council, have decided to send Mr. Clare White, Secretary, to South Africa, to organise the work of the Army Temperance Association, where there are over 10,000 members at the present moment. He will sail on the 30th inst. in the Dunera, and will visit Cape Town, Durban, Mafeking, Johannesburg, Ladysmith, Bloemfontein, and Pretoria, and on his return will visit the troops at Cairo, Malta, and Gibraltar. The Council hope that this Association, which Lord Roberts has so much at heart, will not be allowed to suffer in any way from want of funds, and they earnestly appeal to those interested in Temperance work in the Army to give their support to the Council in assisting them to organise and develop the work which has become so popular and of such paramount good in the Army. Contributions should be sent to the Hon. Conrad Dillon, Hon. Treasurer, 47, Victoria Street, S.W.

FOR THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH "Epps' Glycerine Jujubes" always prove effective. They soften and clear the voice, and are invaluable to all suffering from cough, soreness, or dryness of the throat. Sold only in labelled tins, price 7d. and 1s. 1d. James Epps and Co., Ltd., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

ORBIT BRAND TOBACCO.

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos

in Bond for Export.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died.)

CAROLINA, Oct. 13 and 14.

7th D.G.—WOUNDED: 2717 Leary.
3rd Huss. (attd. 8th Huss.).—KILLED: 2758 Langston. WOUNDED: 3106 Kelly.
8th Huss.—KILLED: 1413 Chubb. WOUNDED: 4224 Holland.
14th Hussars.—KILLED: 3854 Keegan, 223 Mears. WOUNDED: 2611 Tuckfield, 4044 Rice, 16 Bodden, 3193 Bray, 3053 Simpson, 4054 Gibbons, 153 Upton.
16th Lancers.—KILLED: L.-Cpl. 4263 Moore; Pte. 4174 Bagnall. WOUNDED: Sgt. 2178 Tyler; L.-Cpl. 3654 Jackson; Ptes. 3351 Reilly, (4141 ?) Leich.
R.H.A.—"M" Batt: WOUNDED; Bombr. 2945 Martin; Cpl. 70721 Calman; Sh.-Sm. 76473 Sargent*; 15701 Lycett, 30965 Holman, 76130 Creme, 85991 Garreghy.
Between CAROLINA and BETHEL, Oct. 15-19.
4th D.G.—WOUNDED: 5114 White.
6th D.G.—WOUNDED: 3463 Bannon, 3289 Evans, 2834 Pitman.
7th D.G.—WOUNDED: 4289 McKibben.
1st R.D.—WOUNDED: 3534 Sgt. Vermeulen (accidentally).
2nd Drag.—KILLED: 4186 Cpl. Ponker, 4002 Valentine. MISSING: 3433 Lumell.
6th Drag.—KILLED: 2nd Lieut. Swanston, 3878 Dow, 3536 Gardiner. WOUNDED: Capt. Yardley (attd.) Lieuts. Paterson and Harris, Sgt. 3282 Blevin*, Cpls. 3492 Fagan, 5030 Grattage (and missing); 5033 Garlick*, 3310 Marshall, 4046 Harris, 3151 Bissett, 3946 Brooks, 5139 Stinchcomb, 3952 Gold, 4014 Banks, 3401 Steele (and missing).
9th Lancers.—WOUNDED: 2942 Brundle.
10th Huss.—KILLED: 4100 L.-Cpl. Mullion. WOUNDED: 3480 Turner.
Kitchener's Horse.—KILLED: Sgt. Hunter. WOUNDED: 3352 Mowbray, Crowder. MISSING: 3216 Buckley, 4458 Sheppard.

NEAR FAURESMITH, OCT. 19.

Imp. Yeo.—30th Co.: KILLED: 4159 Thomas, 4172 Greatorex (?).
Seaforth Highlanders.—2nd: KILLED: 2997 Pagett, 5685 Stewart. WOUNDED: Lieut. Anstruther, 1768 A. Smith, 2894 Carnow, 6235 Wilson.

JAGERSEONTEIN, OCT. 13 and 16.

S. Lancers.—3rd: KILLED: 3343 Cantello.
Seaforth Highlanders.—2nd: KILLED: Col.-Sgt. 2284 Bremner, Sgt. 2093 Henderson, Ptes. 5542 Gemmel, 4416 Farrell, 4337 Gorman, 3225 Catchpole, 3368 Mitchell. WOUNDED: Lt. Hall, Sgt. 2575 Sutherland, L.-Cpls. 3552 McNab, 5432 Dick*, Ptes. 6137 Patterson, 3033 Brown*, 4583 King*, 4980 Lawrence, 1063 Scott, 3563 Simpson, 3606 Semple.
Town Guard.—KILLED: Wallace. WOUNDED: Engler, Cunningham, Dunn.
Police.—KILLED: Constable Row.

MISCELLANEOUS.

9th Lancers.—3475 Williams, wounded, Blowhof, Oct. 16; 2742 Stolle, accidentally wounded, Tweefontein Oct. 18.
16th Lancers.—4499 Hatherley, wounded, Blowhof, Oct. 16.
17th Lancers.—563 Greenwood, killed, 4513 Wilson, wounded, Blowhof, Oct. 16.
Imp. Yeo. 3rd Batn.: Lieut. Crocker, 803 Yeoman, wounded, Weltevreden, Oct. 20; 485 Sgt. Brown, wounded, Nooitgedacht, Oct. 17. 5th: Capt. Wood, 1300 Edwards, killed; Capt. Davison, 1251 Cpl. Farmer, 3164 L.-Cpl. Dodd, 7334 Lorg, 7308 Durose, 1287 Cooper, 1317 Royle, wounded Weltevreden, Oct. 20; 7212 Harrington, killed; 3314 (? 3255) Poad, wounded, Nooitgedacht, Oct. 17. 14th. Lieut. England, wounded, Reitz, Oct. 17. 1st Co.: 227 Morris, wounded, near Winburg, Oct. 18. 13th: 1304 Richards, wounded, Roodeval, near Zeerust, Oct. 15. 19th: 8458 Cpl. Addie, killed; 8485 Jardine, 8419 Dunn, wounded, Fredrikstad, Oct. 17.

Mtd. Inf. (Queensland).—Rose, reported killed Jan. 1, was wounded only. N.S.W.: 209 Sh.-Sm. McLean, wounded, near Rhenoster River, Oct. 18.
C.M.R.—2963 Thomas*, 3070 Stocker, 2415 Wyld, L.-Cpl. Kelly, 485 Sgt.-Maj. Pearce, 126 Kenned, wounded, Wedgedraai, Oct. 19.

O.R. Col. Police.—467 Sgt. Whale (late Dia. Fields H.), missing, Reitz, Oct. 13.

Irregular Horse.—Brabant's: Nelson reported died disease, Queenstown; is alive and serving with regt. Kitchener's: 4087 Vinters, wounded, Zandfontein, Oct. 18. Diamond Flds.: Woodcock, 1105 Compston and Thompson, wounded, Wedgedraai, Oct. 19. Marshall's: Allen, Neel, killed; Laing, McTavish, 699 Trollip, Cpl. Allen, wounded; L.-Cpl. Forbes, Howell, Peters prisoners, near Fredrikstad, Oct. 18.

Bushmen.—N.S.W.: 834 Squire, wounded, Nooitgedacht, Oct. 17; 655 Argyle, wounded, Roodeval, near Zeerust, Oct. 15; Sgt. Bennett, killed, Riecherstochan, Oct. 16; 158 Sgt. Lassetter, killed, Buffelshoek, Oct. 23. S. Aust.: 172 Brickwood, wounded, near Heilbron, Oct. 19.

R.F.A.—4th Batt.: 33077 Hall, wounded, Weltevreden, Oct. 20; 23299 Saniford, killed; 2523 Blowers, wounded, Nooitgedacht, Oct. 17. 44th: 17107 Larkins, wounded, Hoopstad, Oct. 19. 88th: 79439 Sgt. Spragge, wounded, Zeerust, Oct. 22.

R.E.—Maj. Broke; 2856 Hart, wounded, Wedgedraai, Oct. 19. 1st Div. Tele. Batn.—4386 Hamilton, accidentally injured, Kroonstad, Oct. 21.

Cape Pioneer Rly. Regt.—533 L.-Cpl. Davies, wounded, Klip River, Oct. 18.

Warwick Mtd. Inf.—5910 L.-Cpl. Metcalfe, killed, America Siding, Oct. 23.

Suffolk Mtd. Inf.—4435 Cutting, wounded, Bloemhof, Oct. 16.

Scots Fus.—Lieut. Alford, prisoner, near Frederikstad, Oct. 18; 4904 L.-Cpl. Begbie, wounded; 5901 Nolson, missing, Fredrikstad, Oct. 17. Vol. Co.: 7580 Agnew, wounded, Fredrikstad, Oct. 17.

Welsh Fus.—5799 Flynn, missing, Fredrikstad, Oct. 17. Worcester.—2nd: 3588 Jenkins was killed May 20, not missing, as previously reported.

W. Riding Mtd. Inf.—4214 Bevan, wounded, Tweefontein, Oct. 18.

E. Lancers.—3rd: 9683 Clarkson, reported died meningitis, Capetown, May 26, should have been 8952 E. Clarkson.

N. Lancers.—2271 White, killed; 3514 Maguire*, 4429 Ashworth, 4293 Griffith, wounded Nooitgedacht, Oct. 17. 2nd: 3571 Fisher, 2996 Brooks, wounded, Weltevreden, Oct. 20.

Northampton.—2nd: 2148 Knight, wounded, Oct. 18; 5230 Stean, accidentally drowned, Oct. 19, Zeerust.

Berks Mtd. Inf.—4868 Clarke, accidentally wounded Hoopstad, Oct. 21.

Manchester.—1st: Unsworth, died Ladysmith, June 3; number should be 7051, and not as previously reported.

Gordons.—1st: 57 Meldrum, killed; 2nd Lieut. Cameron, wounded, Doornkop, May 29.

Irish Fus.—1st: 4032 Frazer, 5058 McKenzie, reported killed Nicholson's Nek, Oct. 30, 1899, were taken prisoners; now doing duty with regiment.

Munster Fus.—6339 Reynolds, wounded, Christiana, Oct. 19; 1993 Cpl. Connor, L.-Cpl. McCarthy, 6367 Scanlon, 2778 Mahoney, 2770 Collins, wounded, Wedgedraai, Oct. 19. Mtd. Inf.: 2997 Nills, wounded, Zeerust, Oct. 20.

Vict. Cont.—718 L.-Cpl. Horne, wounded, Tuli, Oct. 21.

Queenstown R.V.—Bland, Pailser (? Parker), wounded, Senekal, Oct. 20.

P. A. Vol. Gds.—80 Lischinsky, wounded, Serfontein Oct. 18; L.-Cpl. Darcy, 758 Pearce*, wounded, Van Wyks Rust, Oct. 20.

R.A.M.C.—Lieut. and Qrmr. Glover, accidentally injured, Harrismith, Oct. 16.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

2nd Drag.—4251 Reid, dysentery, Klip Drift, Mar. 1; 2830 Watmore, Kroonstad, Oct. 23.

14th Huss.—27 Turtle, Kroonstad, Oct. 20.

Imp. Yeo.—10th Batn.: 6071 Keene, Nooitgedacht, Oct.

17. 18th Batn.: 7001 L.-Cpl. West, Mafeking, Oct. 22. 7th Co.: 2213 Record, Harrismith, Oct. 21. 9th: 628 Ridsdale, Rustenburg, Oct. 17. 13th: 1251 Cpl. Farmer, wounds, Buffelshoek, Oct. 22. 16th: 7211 Roan, Mafeking, Oct. 22. 19th: 8406 Stoko, Krugersdorp, Oct. 18. 46th: 11096 Sgt. Foy, Kroonstad, Oct. 19. 48th: 2487 Mortimer, Johannesburg, June 13. 54th: 9588 L.-Cpl. Berry, accidentally self-administered poison, Lindley. 60th: 16458 Hollamby, Pretoria, Oct. 19. 61st: 11242 Madden, pneumonia, Gwanda, Oct. 18. 70th: 12580 Grey, Victoria Oct. 15.

Irregular Horse.—4th N.Z. Rough Riders: 1057 Sorenson, killed, near Zeerust, Oct. 18. I.L.H.: Ashman, killed, Fredrikstad, Oct. 17.

B.S.A. Police.—371 Marshall self-inflicted wounds, Manzingama, Sept. 29; 481 Sgt. Lockyer, Buluwayo, Jan. 21.

Irregular Horse.—Loch's: 150 Franklin (? disease), Kroonstad, Oct. 16. Roberts's: 4616 Kimsley, Johannesburg, June 13. Strathcona's: Sgt.-Maj. Elliott, dysentery, Pretoria, Oct. 17.

Mtd. Inf.—Canadian: Capt. Pearse, tuberculosis, Pretoria, Oct. 17. N.S.W.: 10 Cpl. Allen, Pretoria, Oct. 18. Thorneycroft's: 62402 Wilder, pneumonia, Maritzburg, Oct. 17; 7424 Warne, ptomaine poisoning, Standerton, Oct. 17. N.Z.: 853 Scott, Pretoria, Oct. 19.

R.H.A.—"M": 29830 Holman, wounds, Pretoria, Oct. 15.

R.F.A.—28th Batt.: 22297 Fullbrook, Vryburg, June 7. 64th Batt.: 7633 Mills, dysentery, Mooi River. Oct. 22. 82nd: 68990 Longden (? cause), Johannesburg, June 22.

R.E.—1st Div., Tele. Batn.: 4386 Hamilton, injuries, Kroonstad, Oct. 22.

Gren. Gds.—2nd: 3076 Hale, Leribe, Oct. 19.

Coldstream Gds.—1st: 8533 Humphrey. 2nd: 1870 Hevey, Middleburg, Oct. 19.

Scots Gds.—1st: 9834 Geraghty, pneumonia, Pretoria Oct. 18.

W. Surrey.—2nd: 5544 Dunn, wounds, Feb. 25.

E. Kent.—3rd: 5716 Martin, accidentally drowned, Kroonstad, Oct. 7.

Warwick.—6th: 3811 Bliss, dysentery, Bloemfontein, Oct. 19.

R. Fus.—5th: 9061 Guest, Maritzburg, Apl. 2.

Lincoln.—2nd: 6581 L.-Cpl. Collishaw, Rustenburg, Oct. 13; Vol. Co.: 6627 Thompson, Pretoria, Oct. 23.

Devon.—1st: 4699 Hayward, pneumonia, Lydenburg, Sept. 13.

Bedford.—2nd: 6541 Abbis, Thaba 'Nchu, Oct. 19.

Scots Fus.—1st: 2507 Mitchell, pneumonia, at sea, Mar. 14.

Welsh Fus.—1st: 5429 Fitzpatrick, Pochefstroom, June 21.

K.O.S.B.—Vol Co.: 6984 Robertson, killed accidentally on train, Bieszespoort, Oct. 21.

Cameronians.—4th: 6545 Harvey, Boshof, Oct. 20.

Dorset.—2nd: 4501 Clarke, Newcastle, Oct. 18.

Welsh.—3rd: 7554 Sgt. Venner, tubercle lungs, Wynberg, Oct. 16. Vol. Co.: 7364 J. Jones, tubercle lung, Bloemfontein, Oct. 19.

Berks. 2nd: 4598 McQuade, Johannesburg, June 6.

Yorks L.I.—3695 Starr, Boshof, Oct. 17; 4770 Topham, disease not known, Pretoria, Oct. 21.

Shrops. L.I.—1669 Childow, Apl. 4; 5362 Rourke, Apl. 6; 2165 Newnes, Apl. 6, Bloemfontein.

Middlesex.—2nd: 2821 Renardson, typhilitis, Newcastle, Oct. 17.

K.R.R.—3rd: 4801 Vanie, syncope, Standerton, Oct. 18.

Wilts.—2nd: 4986 Hitchman, Pretoria, Oct. 19.

Durham L.I.—1st: 7020 Woods, Standerton, Oct. 17.

Seaforth.—2nd: 6261 Robb, Modder River, Feb. 11.

Gordons.—1st: 3836 McDougall, Apr. 24; 3816 McCalum, May 24; 3482 Bowtan, May 14, Bloemfontein; 3404 Graham, wounds, Bushman's Kop, May 2; 2885 Taylor, hemiplegia, Bloemfontein, Oct. 21.

Irish Rifles.—2nd: 7184 Tricks, Oct. 18; 7192 Becker, Oct. 23, Brandfort.

Arg. and Suth.—1st: 6442 Luke, disease, Bloemfontein, Apr. 14.

C.I.V.—558 Hutchings, 330 Cameron, at sea on Aurania.

Canadian Regt.—4272 Haines, June 6; 7118 Whitley, June 19. (both ? disease), Johannesburg.

A.S.C.—8206 L.-Cpl. Badley, Pretoria, Oct. 17.

R.A.M.C.—13091 Hunter, dysentery, Pretoria, Oct. 20.

Yeo. Hosp.—Huxley, pneumonia, Pretoria, Oct. 17.

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

YEOMANRY AND MILITIA OUTFITS,

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

The Gazettes.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Oct. 23.

2nd Dragon Guards.—Corpl. John Porter, from 2nd Dragoons, to be 2nd Lieut., on augmentation.
4th Dragon Guards.—Christian names of 2nd Lieut. Charles Alfred Holford are as now described, not as stated in the Gazette of Aug. 14.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

9th Batn.—Sergt. George H. Ardagh to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Sept. 19).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

Promotion to Capt. of Lieut. G. H. Stobart post-dated to Oct. 1, vice W. Thwaites, appointed Divl. Adjt. Lieuts. to be Capt's.—A. E. B. Fair, vice J. C. G. A. Hankey (Oct. 6); R. A. Birley, vice J. Dally (Oct. 12). Supp. Lieut. C. D. Balfour to be Lieut. on augmentation (Sept. 1).

2nd Lieuts. E. W. Browne, A. H. Symes-Thompson, and W. K. E. Jameson to be Lieuts. (Oct. 22).

2nd Lieut. W. H. J. Barber-Storkey, from Forfar and Kincardine Artillery, to be 2nd Lieut.

Capt. J. O. G. A. Hankey to be Divl. Adjt., on augmentation (Oct. 6).

Appointment of Capt. J. Dalby as a Divl. Adjt. is dated Oct. 12, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 5.

Royal Garrison Artillery.

Capt. J. W. Kempsen resigns his commission.

Capt. J. E. L. Bruce seconded for service with Native Mountain Artillery, India (Oct. 5).

Supp. Capt. A. G. Norris to be Capt., on augmentation (Oct. 10).

2nd Lieut. R. F. Finlay to be Lieut. (Oct. 22).

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Brevet-Capt. H. H. Hart, on completion of five years' service as a regimental Lieut.-Col., placed on half-pay (Oct. 22).

IRISH GUARDS.

To be 2nd Lieuts.—2nd Lieut. Hon. C. M. P. Brabazon, from Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery, in succession to Lieut. W. E. Loid Oxmantown, promoted; Lieut. G. Brooke, from 3rd Batn. Hampshire Regt., vice H. R. Bruce, seconded.

LINE BATTALIONS.

Liverpool Regt.—Temp. appointment of Capt. B. St. J. W. Hastings as Adjt. is confirmed (Nov. 2, 1899).

Devon Regt.—2nd Lieut. Richard P. Lewis, from 14th Middlesex V.R.C., to be 2nd Lieut., vice H. W. Cumming, killed in action.

King's Own Scottish Borderers.—Lieuts. to be Capt's.—A. J. Welch, vice J. B. T. Pratt, deceased (June 24); D. D. Gunn, vice E. Q. Roberts, killed in action (July 30). Promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. H. V. C. Turnbull antedated to May 4, vice T. P. Wingate, seconded for service on Staff. 2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.—E. W. Macdonald, vice H. D. N. Maclean, promoted (June 9); H. W. Todhunter, vice G. M. Hannay, promoted (June 23); C. F. Kennedy, vice A. J. Welch (June 24).

Hampshire Regt.—Capt. H. W. Tompson to be Adjt., vice Capt. M. de Montmorency, resigned appointment (Aug. 20).

Oxford L.I.—Capt. R. Fanshawe to be Major, vice R. Eccles, promoted (Sept. 2).

Derbyshire Regt.—Lieuts. to be Capt's.—J. St. H. Morley, vice P. W. Anderson, seconded (July 11); J. F. Ritchie, in succession to Major and Brevet-Col. G. G. Cunningham, D.S.O., appointed to staff; B. G. V. Way, vice J. F. Ritchie, seconded for service in South Africa (July 13). Promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. R. McE. Porter antedated to July 11, vice L. St. H. Morley.

Royal Munster Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. C. F. Aspinall seconded for special service in West Africa (April 21).

West India Regt.—2nd Lieut. A. F. J. Cox from 3rd Batn. East Lancashire Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. P. E. Prideaux, promoted.

COL. LUMSDEN'S CORPS.

Capt. H. Chamney to be Second in Command, with temp. rank of Major in Army (April 30).

Lieut. C. L. Sidey to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (April 30).

Frank S. McNamara (April 30) and Gerald E. Thesiger (June 1) to be Lieuts., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army.

STAFF.

Appointment of Lieut. F. J. Gosset, Royal Berkshire Regt., to command an Amoured Train, graded as Staff Lieut., is from Nov. 14, 1899, to March 23, not as stated in Gazette of July 10.

Appointment to Staff made in South Africa confirmed.—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. T. E. Stephenson, Essex Regt., to be a Major-Gen. on Staff (instead of Brig.-Gen. on Staff, with temp. rank of Brig.-Gen., as notified in Gazette of Oct. 5) to command an Infantry Brigade, and to have the local rank of Major-Gen. whilst so employed (Feb. 23).

Appointments to Staff of Lines of Communications made in South Africa confirmed.—Lieut.-Col. S. Hughes, Royal Canadian Rifles, to be a Special Service Officer, graded as A.A.G. (Dec. 1, 1899); Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. W. T. Adair, R.M.L.I., to be an Asst. Insp.-Gen. (March 14); Capt. H. B. Strange, R.A., to be an Asst. Director of Transport (Aug. 16); Major J. C. MacDougall, Royal Canadian Regt. of Infantry, to be a D.A.A.G., vice Lieut.-Col. C. E. Wynne, A.S.C., vacated on promotion (May 26); Lieut.-Col. R. L. Milne, D.S.O., to be a D.A.A.G. and Staff Officer to an Asst. Insp.-Gen., vice Capt. de V. Carey, Worcester Regt. (July 4); Capt. F. H. Macnamara, 5th Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers, to be an Asst. Provost-Marshal, graded as a D.A.A.G. (July 17); Capt. R. M. Foot, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, to be a Brig. Major, vice Capt. L. L. Pile, East Lancashire Regt., vacated appointment (July 16).

To be graded as D.A.A.G.'s.—Major A. F. Tarbet, C.M.G., 3rd Batn. South Lancashire Regt., whilst a Railway Staff Officer, from March 21 to April 4; Capt. A. G. Toyle, Somerset L.I., whilst a Railway Staff Officer (April 6); Major F. W. G. Tothill, R.A., whilst a Station Commandant (May 5); Major S. D. Gordon, I.S.C., whilst a Railway Staff Officer (March 8); Capt. B. M. Bateman, R.A., whilst Staff Officer to an Asst. Insp.-Gen. of Remounts (May 22); Major H. J. McLaughlin, Reserve of Officers, whilst employed in Remount Dept. (Feb. 12); Major H. H. Smythe, Royal Scots Fusiliers, whilst a D.A.A.G. and Staff Officer, from Oct. 26, 1899 to Dec. 25, 1899, and whilst a Station Commandant from Dec. 26, 1899; Capt. J. A. Tupman, R.M.L.I., whilst employed under an Asst. Insp.-Gen. (since vacated) (Mar. 28); Capt. T. B. Wood, R.A., whilst Staff Officer to an Asst. Insp.-Gen., vice Capt. C. V. C. Hobart, D.S.O., Grenadier Guards, invalided (April 6); Lieut.-Col. M. W. Bayly, General Staff, New South Wales, whilst a Special Service Officer, from Dec. 3, 1899, to July 25.

To be graded as Staff Capt's.—Capt. L. L. R. Samson, 6th Batn. Lancashire Fusiliers, whilst a Railway Staff Officer (April 13); Capt. W. P. 24th Middlesex V.R.C. (Army Post Office Corps) (April 1); Capt. P. E. B. F. Smith, 4th Batn. South Stafford Regt., whilst a Railway Staff Officer, from March 22 to April 1; Capt. R. A. Gordon, Royal Scots, whilst a Railway Staff Officer, from March 27 to April 6; Lieut. C. L. Taylor, South Wales Borderers, whilst attached to Hdqrs. Lines of Communication, from Feb. 7 to Feb. 26.

To be graded as Staff Lieuts.—2nd Lieut. H. G. Sotheby, 4th Batn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, whilst a Station Staff Officer, from March 20 to April 11; Lieut. P. J. Preece, 24th Middlesex V.R.C. (Army Post Office Corps) (May 30).

Officers employed with Army Transport graded as D.A.A.G.'s.—Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. F. I. Maxse, D.S.O., Coldstream Guards; Major J. T. Johnston, R.A.; Capt. and Brevet Major C. F. S. Vandevel, D.S.O., Scots Guards (now Major Irish Guards) (Jan. 20); Major A. W. Money, R.A. (Feb. 4); Major A. L. Gordon, I.S.C.; Capt. and Brevet Major D. Baker, I.S.C. (Feb. 7); Capt. C. J. Perceval, R.A., S. J. Gervais, South Stafford Regt., W. G. Lyddon, R. H. Mansley, R. O. Marton, J. H. Massie (Jan. 20), and C. De Sasmaraz, R.A. (Jan. 23), Hon. W. P. Hore Ruthven (Master of Ruthven), Scots Guards (Jan. 24), H. B. Strange, H. E. T. Kelly (Jan. 25), F. H.

Metcalfe (Jan. 27), and W. V. J. C. Elwes, R.A., (Jan. 29), C. H. F. Binstead (Feb. 1). W. C. Knight (since appointed a D.A.A.G.), J. M. Camilleri (Feb. 6), F. J. Moberly, D.S.O., W. E. E. Lloyd, H. H. Cobbe, R. C. O. Cragh (Feb. 7), and H. McN. Patterson, I.S.C., from Feb. 7 to Feb. 25, not as stated in Gazette of July 10; A. P. Luscombe, Royal Australian Arty. (March 6); A. O. L. Kindersley, 3rd Batn., Highland L.I. (March 25); W. H. Sutcliffe, Cape Garrison Arty. (April 20); Major F. G. Myburgh, Cape Garrison Arty. (April 30); Capt. M. J. de Bathe, 6th Batn. Royal Warwick Regt. (from April 30 to Aug. 31), Capt. C. E. Hutton, 4th Batn. Derbyshire Regt. (May 18); Capt. and Hon. Major H. F. Woodgate, 3rd Batn. South Wales Borderers (May 20); Capt. G. C. Dwyer, R.A. (May 30); 2nd Lieut. G. W. J. C., Earl of Cardigan, 11th Hussars (Aug. 29).

Officers employed with Army Transport graded as Staff Capt's.—Lieuts. E. H. E. Colten, R.A., (Jan. 20), H. R. M. Bourne, Royal Scots (Feb. 1), W. F. Smith, C. C. Newham, A. St. J. Cooke, C. R. Harbord, W. A. Light, W. T. Barry, K. E. Nangle, R. J. T. Stewart, and F. D. Russell, I.S.C. (Feb. 7th); Lieut. (now Capt. Hon. J. F. Gathorne-Hardy, Grenadier Guards (March 2); Lieuts. G. E. Kemmis-Betty, 4th Batn., Royal Lancashire Regt. (now 2nd Lieut. A.S.C.) (March 16); A. H. Marindin, Royal Highlanders (April 29); C. E. Kidger and W. A. Tindall, Cape Garrison Arty. (April 30); G. M. Shipway, Gloucester Regt. (July 30).

Officers employed with Army Transport graded as Staff Lieuts.—2nd Lieuts. P. H. Hay-Coghlan, (Jan. 20), and A. H. Saner, R.A. (March 30); Lieut. A. C. Ferguson, 3rd Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers (now 2nd Lieut. A.S.C.) (April 26); 2nd Lieut. L. Herepath, West Riding Regt. (May 10).

Capt. H. B. de V. Tupper, 6th Batn. Liverpool Regt., to be an Asst. Staff Officer, graded as Staff Capt. from July 10 to Aug. 6.

Indian Staff Corps.—Col. G. Simpson, C.B., to be Major-Gen. (Oct. 7).

Army Pay Dept.—Major J. M. Sherrard, Staff Paymr., granted substantive rank of Lieut.-Col. in Army; Capt. A. G. Smith, Paymr., granted substantive rank of Major in Army (Oct. 21).

Army Veterinary Dept.—Vet.-Lieut. R. L. Cranford to be Vet.-Capt. (Oct. 22).

Half-Pay.—Major A. H. Coles, D.S.O., from retired pay, to be Lieut.-Col.

BREVET.

Lieut.-Col. G. L. Garstin, I.S.C., to be Col. (Sept. 3). Capt. and Brevet-Major C. H. P. Carter, C.M.G., Royal Scots, Commandant Southern Nigeria Constabulary, to be Lieut.-Col., in recognition of his services with Central Division and Benin Territories Expeditions (Sept. 19).

To be Majors.—Capt. F. B. Pearce, West Yorkshire Regt., Deputy Commissioner and Vice-Consul, British Central Africa Protectorate, in recognition of his services during the operations against the Chief Kwabla; Capt. H. J. Madocks, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, in recognition of his services in Uganda; Capt. J. W. V. Carroll, Norfolk Regt., in recognition of his services during operations on Niger, 1897-8 (Sept. 19).

MEMORANDA.

Col. F. S. F. Stokes, on completion of his period of service on staff, placed on half-pay (Sept. 2).

Capt. R. M. Barrington, half-pay, retires on retired pay.

Capt. M. S. Williams, half-pay R.A., retires from the Service receiving a gratuity.

Qrmr. and Hon. Lieut. H. J. Gill, Loyal North Lancashire Regt., granted hon. rank of Capt. (Oct. 22).

RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

Capt. Arnold A. C., Earl of Albemarle, Lieut.-Col. City of London Imperial Vols., to be Lieut.-Col.

Capt. H. B. Collins, Clyde Div. R.E. (Vols.), to be Capt.

INDIA OFFICE, Oct. 23.

The Queen has approved of following promotions among officers of Staff Corps and Indian Medical Service, admissions to Staff Corps, and appointments to Indian Army Reserve of Officers made by the Government of India:—

WATSON'S PRISM BINOCULAR GLASS.

Ordinary Field Glasses entirely superseded.

SUPERB
DEFINITION.

COMPACT
AND FLAT.

Entirely new System of Construction, giving immense field of view and high magnification. Magnification, 7 diameters, £7 15s. 0d. Magnification, 9 diameters, £9 0s. 0d. In best silver case. Field Glasses and Telescopes of every description from £2 2s. 0d.

For full particulars send for Catalogue No. 6 post free on application to
W. WATSON & SONS, Manufacturing Opticians to H.M. Government, 313, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON, W.C., and 16, Forrest Road, EDINBURGH, ESTABLISHED 1833

JONES & WILLIS

43, GREAT RUSSELL ST., LONDON, W.
(Opposite British Museum).
79, EDMUND ST., BIRMINGHAM; and LIVERPOOL.

Memorial Brass Engravers.

CHURCH FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS. ARTISTS IN STAINED GLASS.

INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

Majors to be Lieut.-Cols.:—Substantive Col. in Army N. F. FitzG. Chamberlain, J. P. W. Spankie, Brevet Lieut.-Col. S. C. F. Peile (Aug. 9); Substantive Col. in Army B. Duff, C.I.E. (Aug. 17).

Cpts. to be Majors:—M. Cowper, W. H. Lewin, H. F. Loch, L. E. Elliott, J. J. Cronin, E. Grey, G. Rippon, C. B. Templar, C. S. de B. Martindale, Brevet Major T. Quin, J. Jackson, W. A. Watson, G. C. Cawood, E. C. Thwaytes, A. G. Peyton, A. E. Couper, Brevet Major A. H. G. Kemball, H. L. B. Acton, A. Hamilton, P. Malcolm, Brevet Major J. W. G. Tulloch, J. S. Melville, F. C. Grant, C. Jackson (Aug. 11).

To be Capt.:—Capt. E. H. S. Boxer, from Dorset Regt. (dated June 24, 1900, to rank from Aug. 8, 1894).

2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—V. Percy-Smith (Nov. 4, 1899), J. C. Loch (June 4), R. A. Lyall, G. N. S. Keene, A. M. Graham (July 2), H. P. M. Lord (July 22).

Promotion of 2nd Lieut. J. H. Watson to Lieut., antedated to Nov. 5, 1898.

To be 2nd Lieut.:—2nd Lieut. J. E. Home, from Unattached List (dated June 12, 1900, but to rank from July 29, 1898).

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

Promotion of Col. G. W. R. Hay, M.D., Bombay Establishment, to Surg.-Gen., antedated to April 1).

Lieuts. to be Cpts.:—J. G. P. Murray, S. Anderson, F. H. G. Hutchinson, J. L. Marjoribanks, A. Fenton, J. A. Dredge, R. W. Knox (July 28).

INDIAN SUBORDINATE MEDICAL DEPT.

BENGAL ESTABLISHMENT.

To be Senior Asst.-Surg., with hon. rank of Capt.—Senior Asst.-Surg., with hon. rank of Lieut., G. Wilson (June 15).

To be Senior Asst.-Surg., with hon. rank of Lieut.—First Class Asst.-Surg. W. Eates (June 15).

INDIAN ARMY RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

Infantry.—Albert W. E. Acres and Edward T. Every-Miller to be 2nd Lieuts. (Aug. 17).

The Queen has approved of the retirement from the Service of undermentioned Officers:—

Indian Staff Corps.—Major-Gen. A. Clark-Kennedy (Sept. 30); Major-Gen. J. Cook, C.B. (Oct. 7); Major C. Jackson (Aug. 12); Capt. E. de S. Smart (Oct. 23).

Indian Medical Service.—Lieut.-Col. E. C. Russell, Bengal Establishment (Aug. 27).

Indian Subordinate Medical Service.—Senior Asst.-Surg., with hon. rank of Capt., C. A. Hellein, Madras Establishment (July 21).

The Queen has also approved of the resignation of his commission by undermentioned officer of the Indian Reserve of Officers:—2nd Lieut. F. C. D. Burton, cavalry (June 11).

WAR OFFICE, Oct. 23.

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Cornwall and Devon Miners (W. Div.).—Supy. Lieut. R. H. Thompson to be Lieut. on establishment.

Devon (W. Div.).—Lieut. J. F. B. Moody resigns his commission.

Donegal (S. Div.).—Kenneth S. Robertson (Oct. 11) and Robert W. Woodhouse (Oct. 12) to be 2nd Lieuts.

Limerick City (S. Div.).—Supy. Lieut. E. T. Gelston to be Lieut. on establishment (Oct. 1).

Londonderry (S. Div.).—Ralph H. D. Wight to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 5).

Mid-Ulster (S. Div.).—Supy. Capt. Y. R. P. Barges to be Capt. on establishment (Sept. 28).

ROYAL ENGINEERS (MILITIA).

Western Div. (Submarine Miners).—2nd Lieut. R. B. T. Rye to be Lieut. (Oct. 1).

INFANTRY.

3rd Batn. Royal West Surrey Regt.—Cuthbert E. L. Bowen to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 10).

3rd Batn. Royal Lancaster Regt.—Geoffrey F. Hastings to be 2nd Lieut. 4th Batn.: Percy de L. Temple to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 17).

5th Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. A. E. P. Littleton resigns his commission on account of ill-health (Oct. 24).

5th Batn. Royal Warwick Regt.—2nd Lieuts. I. H. G. White and T. J. Longworth to be Lieuts. (Oct. 12).

6th Batn. Royal Fusiliers.—Cecil P. Rawlins to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 19).

6th Batn. Liverpool Regt.—John A. Dearden to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 2).

4th Batn. Norfolk Regt.—Capt. E. L. Rowe resigns his commission.

3rd Batn. East Yorkshire Regt.—2nd Lieuts. H. A. Willows, E. N. Giltat, J. L. Fisher, T. E. Bennett, C. Wade, and J. A. H. Britton to be Lieuts. (Oct. 11).

3rd Batn. Bedford Regt.—Herbert G. J. Williams to be 2nd Lieut. (Sept. 30). 4th Batn.: 2nd Lieuts. J. F. R. Pixley, F. J. R. Peel, G. E. Mills, H. M. Gosling, I. M. M. Phillips, G. C. Sladen, and J. W. Henry to be Lieuts. (Sept. 12).

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regt.—2nd Lieuts. F. E. Wheeler and W. H. Hawkes to be Lieuts. (Oct. 15).

3rd Batn. Yorkshire Regt.—Rodney H. Duff to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 11).

3rd Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. M. B. Rimington to be Lieut. and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieut. G. F. E. Cotton to be Lieut. (Sept. 4).

3rd Batn. South Wales Borderers.—Supy. Lieut. E. Southey to be Lieut. on establishment.

3rd Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.—Thomas F. M. Thackeray to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 17).

4th Batn. Gloucester Regt.—Charles E. Lemboke to be 2nd Lieut. (Sept. 15).

3rd Batn. East Surrey Regt.—2nd Lieut. G. P. C. Strutt to be Lieut. (Oct. 13).

4th Batn. Border Regt.—2nd Lieut. W. G. H. M. Verdon to be Lieut. (Oct. 15).

3rd Batn. Oxford L.I. Supy. Capt. G. F. Paske to be Capt. on establishment; Richard H. Young to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 2).

5th Batn. Manchester Regt.—Humphrey Wallis to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 22).

3rd Batn. Gordon Highlanders.—Lieut. E. Napier to be Capt. and to be seconded whilst serving in South Africa; Capt. and Hon. Major John E. Park, from 3rd V.B. to be Capt. (Oct. 5).

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Rifles.—Lieut. J. P. Ewing to be Capt. (Oct. 13). 4th Batn.: 2nd Lieuts. E. M. G. McFerran, P. S. Murray, W. D. Deverell, E. J. Fraser, and F. M. Watney to be Lieuts. (Oct. 15).

4th Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers.—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. G. Rowan-Hamilton retires on account of ill-health, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform; 2nd Lieut. I. S. Robertson to be Lieut.; 2nd Lieuts. L. A. Jones and F. G. Brown to be Lieuts. and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieuts. E. D. Galbraith, B. S. J. McMurray, W. H. Whyte, A. L. P. Jesson, J. C. Heys Thompson, and H. V. Gerrard to be Lieuts. (Sept. 24).

5th Batn. Rifle Brigade.—Robert B. Gosset to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 22). 7th Batn.: Major A. B. Williams granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Stafford.—Capt. H. S. Hill resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank, and wear uniform of regt.

Yorkshire Dragoons.—Supy. Lieut.-Col. (Hon. Col.) A. F. G. B., Earl of Scarborough, to be Lieut.-Col. on establishment.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

1st Argyll and Bute.—2nd Lieuts. B. Allan, J. M. Campbell, and W. A. Stewart to be Lieuts.

1st City of London (E. Div. R.G.A.).—Capt. A. W. F. Langman, granted hon. rank of Major.

1st Cornwall (W. Div. R.G.A.).—Francis F. Oats to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd Durham (W. Div. R.G.A.).—Capt. and Hon. Major R. Laverick resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps.

1st Edinburgh (City).—2nd Lieut. A. M. McIntosh to be Lieut.

1st Gloucester.—Lieuts. W. C. Swayne and A. Ogilvy to be Cpts.

1st Lanark.—Capt. and Hon. Major E. Service to be Major. Lieuts. A. D. Cuthbert and D. T. Easton to be

Over Two Thousand Prizes

amounting to Hundreds of Pounds in cash will be given for the largest collections of

BOVRIL ADVERTISEMENTS

published in newspapers, periodicals and magazines during November.

FIRST PRIZE		£50 Cash
FIVE PRIZES		each £10
FIFTY		£1
THOUSAND		5s.

One Thousand 2oz. bottles of Bovril.

For full particulars see large advertisements or send stamped addressed envelope to Bovril, Limited, Old Street, London, E.C.

Bovril, Ltd., recommend VIROL for the young.

Capt. Lieut. J. V. Dunn to be Capt. and to remain seconded. Lieuts. J. Russell and W. R. Brown to be Capt.

7th Lancashire (Manchester).—Capt. F. H. Coghill granted hon. rank of Major.

2nd Northumberland (W. Div., R.G.A.).—T. C. Robson and R. Huggup, jun., to be Lieuts.

Tynemouth (W. Div., R.G.A.).—Hon. Col. R. S. Donkin resigns appointment of Hon. Col. to corps.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (VOLUNTEERS).

1st Aberdeen.—Walter P. Crombie to be 2nd Lieut.
2nd West Riding of Yorkshire (Leeds).—2nd Lieuts. N. Greaves, W. W. Johnson, and H. E. Aykroyd to be Lieuts.

Tyne Div. (Submarine Miners).—Christopher Arnison to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 13).

RIFLE.

Queen's R.V. Brigade (Highland Bata.) Royal Scots.—James C. C. Broun and David H. Huie to be 2nd Lieuts.
6th V.B.: Capt. W. A. R. M. McRae resigns his commission.

5th (Irish) V.B. Liverpool Regt.—Lieut.-Col. R. Carruthers resigns his commission.

4th V.B. Devon Regt.—Frederic Day to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. Suffolk Regt.—Charles P. Beevor to be 2nd Lieut.

4th V.B. Cheshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. F. Ashton to be Lieut.

3rd V.B. Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Henry C. Blake and John H. Brennan to be 2nd Lieuts. (Aug. 18).

1st Lanark.—Lieut. J. C. Paterson and 2nd Lieut. J. Grant to be Instrs. of Musketry, vice Capt. R. Carswell and W. Auld, who vacate appointments.

4th V.B. East Surrey Regt.—Major A. N. L. Burne granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

2nd V.B. Duke of Cornwall's L.I.—Cyril C. Lord to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd (Cumberland) V.B. Border Regt.—Capt. F. S. K. Shaw, Hampshire Regt., to be Adj. on formation of bata. (July 23).

Cadet Corps attached to 3rd V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Hon. Capt. S. Hudson to be Capt. (July 1).

5th (Isle of Wight, Princess Beatrice's) V.B. Hampshire Regt.—2nd Lieuts. F. Nicholson and J. H. M. Whitehead to be Lieuts.

2nd V.B. South Stafford Regt.—Albert W. Blockley to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. South Lancashire Regt.—Supy. 2nd Lieut. T. M. Broadbent to be 2nd Lieut. on establishment.

2nd V.B. Welsh Regt.—Lieut. T. B. Boucher to be Capt.

1st V.B. Derbyshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. W. C. Bluck resigns his commission.

1st Nottingham (Robin Hood).—Lieut. R. Barber resigns his commission.

1st V.B. Royal Berkshire Regt.—Capt. F. J. Morland resigns his commission.

1st Hereford.—2nd Lieuts. R. Masefield, H. S. H. Bickham, P. Anthony, E. A. Mahir, W. Ainslie, C. W. Janvyn, J. N. Macmillan, and E. W. Caddick to be Lieuts.

Cadet Corps (St. Paul's School, West Kensington) attached to 2nd (South) Middlesex.—Hon. Capt. C. H. Bicknell to be Capt. (Nov. 1).

21st Middlesex.—Lieuts. M. H. Lowther-Clark and H. W. Shearnsmith to be Capt.

2nd London.—Robert C. Boothby to be 2nd Lieut.

Cadet Corps (Marlborough College) attached to 2nd V.B. Wiltshire Regt.—Edward J. Mann to be Capt.; John F. L. Hardy to be Lieut.; Arthur H. Wall to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. North Stafford Regt.—2nd Lieuts. R. T. Johnson, V. H. Goss, H. Clive, J. A. Bakewell, F. W. Knight, L. V. Solon, J. Cadman, and R. L. Johnson to be Lieuts. (Oct. 3).

5th V.B. Durham L.I.—Lieut. J. A. Dover to be Capt. (1st Ross Highland) V.B. Seaforth Highlanders.—Lieut. J. H. Bisset to be Capt.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Oct. 24.]

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Oct. 26.

2nd Life Guards.—Gen. F. A. Lord Chelmsford, G.C.B., from Derbyshire Regt., to be Col., vice Gen. R. W. P., Earl Howe, G.C.V.O., C.B., deceased (Sept. 27).

2nd Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. R. C. Lawrance resigns his commission.

16th Lancers.—2nd Lieut. J. B. R. Russell resigns his commission.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

2nd Bata.—Lance-Corpl. Thomas B. Unwin, M.B., to be Medical Officer with temp rank of Capt. (May 28).

7th Bata.—Sergt. Arthur H. V. Williams to be Lieut. with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (June 23).

9th Bata.—Capt. T. R. F. B. Hallows, Major Reserve of Officers, resigns his commission. Lieut. F. H. Fernie to be Capt. with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (Sept. 19).

13th Bata.—Lieut. C. M. Robin to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (May 29). Sergt. R. Woodhouse (June 1), Corpl. G. Benson (June 6) to be Lieuts., with temp rank of Lieut. in Army. Qrmr. Sergt. T. H. Montgomery to be Qrmr. with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (June 6).

15th Bata.—Trpr. John M. Fremantle to be Lieut. with temp rank of Lieut. in Army (July 16).

17th Bata.—Name of Sergt. Henry T. Munn, who was promoted Lieut. in Gazette of Oct. 16, is as now described, not as therein stated.

18th Bata.—To be Lieuts., with the temp. rank of Lieut. in Army:—Corpl. C. H. FitzGerald (June 13), Sergt. H. E. Edleman (July 9), Trpr. G. H. S. Fowke (Aug. 21).

19th Bata.—Temp. Capt. K. F. Machlachlan, Adj., resigns his commission; Capt. C. W. G. Richardson, I.S.O., to be Adj. (Sept. 1).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Garrison Artillery.—2nd Lieut. H. Clarke is seconded for service with Native Mountain Artillery, India (Oct. 19).

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Retirement on half-pay of Brevet Col. St. G. C. Gore, on completion of five years' service as a regimental Lieut.-Col., which was notified in Gazette of July 3, is cancelled.

In consequence of promotions of Brevet Col. J. W. Thurburn and Brevet Col. St. G. C. Gore to substantive rank of Col. in Army, promotions of undermentioned officers antedated:—Lieut. Col. W. J. Mackenzie to July 16, 1899; H. S. Andrews-Speed to Aug. 6, 1899; P. T. Buxton to Sept. 20, 1899; J. C. Tyler to Sept. 25, 1899; J. C. Campbell to Oct. 1, 1899; J. A. Ferrier, D.S.O., to Oct. 4, 1899; J. D. Fullerton to Oct. 27, 1899; G. T. Jones to Nov. 3, 1899; W. D. Conner to Nov. 15, 1899; W. D. Lindley to Dec. 10, 1899; E. H. Bethell to Dec. 15, 1899; F. W. T. Attree to Jan. 1, Hon. M. G. Talbot to Jan. 24, A. L. Mein to Feb. 18, J. Burn-Murdoch to March 1, S. A. E. Hickson, D.S.O., to March 29; G. C. P. Onslow to April 9, W. F. H. Stafford to April 14, A. H. Kenney, C.M.G., to May 6; Major A. H. Van Straubenzee to July 16, 1899; Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. J. R. L. Macdonald, C.B., to Aug. 6, 1899; Majors E. W. Walton to Aug. 9, 1899; W. J. D. Dundee to Sept. 20, 1899; A. W. Roper to Sept. 25, 1899; J. E. O'H. Hamilton to Oct. 1, 1899; G. M. Heath to Oct. 4, 1899; W. du C. Luard to Oct. 27, 1899; W. G. E. Cordue to Nov. 3, 1899; J. M. Wade to Nov. 15, 1899; W. J. Bythell to Dec. 10, 1899; B. R. Ward to Dec. 15, 1899; W. R. Stewart to Jan. 1, G. S. McD. Elliot to Jan. 24, C. Godby to Jan. 25, J. W. Pringle to Feb. 18, H. V. Kent to March 1, E. Houston to March 29, J. S. Purvis to April 1, C. E. Salvesen to April 9, H. Bonham-Carter to April 14, C. S. Rose to May 6; Captains H. G. K. Wait to April 1, F. M. Close to April 14, L. W. S. Oldham to May 5, S. D'A. Crookshank to May 6, W. H. Beach to June 6.

Major F. Rainsford-Hannay to be Lieut.-Col., vice Brevet-Col. H. H. Hart, placed on half-pay (Oct. 22).

Capt. A. R. Reynolds to be Major, vice F. Rainsford-Hannay (Oct. 22).

Third Impression. Now Ready, Price 1s.

How We Escaped from Pretoria

By CAPT. A. HALDANE, D.S.O., 2nd Batt. Gordon Highlanders.
With three Portraits and two Plans of the Staats Model School, Pretoria.
Price 1s.

The Army and Navy Gazette says: "The reader follows the brilliant story with breathless interest from the first page to the last."

The Athenæum says:—"The best work of adventure to which the war has as yet given rise."

The Spectator says: "Many histories of the war have been, or will be written, but there is one which will always stand out in vividness and vigour from the rest—the story which tells how Captain Haldane and his friends 'escaped from Pretoria.'"

The Daily Mail says: "It takes its place at once among the permanent records."

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

LAZENBY'S

ECONOMIC, CONVENIENT & PORTABLE

SOUP SQUARES

These squares are prepared in 13 Varieties (MULLIGATAWNY, JULIENNE, GRAVY, &c.) and should find a place in every store-room, being invaluable for making soup at short notice or improving stock. They will keep good any reasonable length of time, and are packed in neat boxes containing 6 & 12 Squares.

ONE 6^p SQUARE
WILL MAKE A PINT & A HALF
OF STRONG NUTRITIOUS SOUP

SOLD BY ALL THE LEADING GROCERS & STORES.
Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the Squares, please communicate at once with the Manufacturers.
E. LAZENBY & SON, LTD., 18 Trinity St., LONDON. S.E.

LAZENBY'S

13 VARIETIES.

SOUP SQUARES

The Indian
Army.

Important.

The Publisher of the "Army and Navy Gazette" begs to announce that, beginning on January 5, 1901, Coloured Military Types of the INDIAN ARMY will be issued Monthly as Supplements to this Paper. Full particulars and list of Plates will be sent post free on application.

ORDERS for the series should be sent in at once, accompanied by Money Order for (Inland) 4s. 4d., or (India and Abroad) 5s., made payable to the PUBLISHER.

"Army and Navy Gazette" Offices
3, York St., Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Capt. F. H. C. Bourne, on promotion from Lieut., granted pay and allowances from April 9, not as stated in Gazette of Aug. 28.

Lieut. R. H. Macdonald to be Capt., vice A. R. Reynolds (Oct. 22).

COLDSTREAM GUARDS.

Capt. R. Whitbread, from 3rd Batn. Durham L.I., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. E. T. H. Hanbury-Tracy, promoted.

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Scots.—Corpl. Herbert D. Carlton, from the Imperial Yeomanry (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. W. D. Shaw, deceased.

Royal West Surrey Regt.—2nd Lieut. P. F. Coë resigns his commission.

Royal Warwick Regt.—Corpl. Henry J. Dresser, from Imperial Yeomanry, to be 2nd Lieut. on augmentation.

Royal Irish Regt.—2nd Lieut. Hugh G. Gregorie, from Imperial Light Infantry (nominated by the Governor of Natal), to be 2nd Lieut., supy. to establishment (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Oct. 27).

Lancashire Fusiliers.—Capt. A. J. Allardye to be Adjt., vice Capt. R. B. Blunt, whose period of service in appointment has expired (March 15).

Worcester Regt.—Lieut. F. St. J. Tyrwhitt, from City of London Imperial Volunteers (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. W. R. Chichester, promoted.

Border Regt.—Qrmer. and Hon. Capt. J. King placed on retired pay.

Royal Highlanders.—Lieut. D. Campbell, from 3rd Batn. to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. W. J. St. J. Harvey, appointed Adjt.

Oxford L.I.—Capt. C. E. G. M. Fairtlough to be Major, vice F. J. Eveleigh, promoted Lieut.-Col. on half-pay (Sept. 27).

Yorkshire L.I.—Pte. Sydney H. Little, from City of London Imperial Volunteers (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., supy. to establishment.

Shropshire L.I.—Corpl. Wilfred G. A. Vallance, from Imperial Yeomanry (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. E. B. Luard, promoted.

Wiltshire Regt.—To be 2nd Lieuts.:—2nd Lieut. A. F. Gilpin, from the Canadian Local Military Forces vice P. A. McCutchan, deceased. Pte. C. B. V. Cary-Barnard, from Col. Lumsden's Corps (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), in succession to Lieut. S. H. Shaw, seconded.

Connaught Rangers.—Lieuts. to be Capt.:—T. H. Falkiner, in succession to Major J. S. M. Lenox-Conyngham, Adjt. 3rd Batn. (July 1); W. A. White, vice W. S. Sarsfield, seconded (July 24). Promotions to Lieuts. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts. antedated:—A. F. Lambert to July 1, vice T. H. Falkiner; H. A. Wilson to July 24, vice W. A. White.

Gentlemen, nominated by authorities of Universities and Colleges, to be 2nd Lieuts. (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Oct. 27):—

Royal Warwick Regt.—Trpr. Charles W. C. Crooke, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. D. A. L. Day, promoted.

Liverpool Regt.—Trpr. George H. S. Steer, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. F. J. Austin promoted.

Lancashire Fusiliers.—Trpr. Robert J. G. Stoker, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. E. C. Brierley, promoted.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Trpr. John C. Farmer, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. E. T. Le Marchant, promoted into Royal Fusiliers.

Worcester Regt.—Robert T. Allan, on augmentation; Arthur P. Harrison, in succession to Lieut. H. A. Lang, promoted.

Wiltshire Regt.—Trpr. George F. Manning, from British South Africa Police, in succession to Lieut. H. P. Rogers, promoted.

Manchester Regt.—Claude Martin, Supy. to Establishment.

STAFF.

Appointments to staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. F. W. Panzera, Harwich Div., Submarine Miners, R.E. (Militia), to be a D.A.A.G., from Dec. 23, 1899, to July 6, 1900. Capt. A. P. W. Williams, Hampshire and Isle of Wight Artillery, to be a D.A.A.G., vice Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. F. W. Panzera, locally employed (July 7). Major C. E. M. O'Brien, East Lancashire Regt., to be President of Military Tribunal, Johannesburg, graded as a D.A.A.G. (June 2).

To be Members of Military Tribunal, Johannesburg, graded as Staff-Lieuts.:—Lieut. C. G. E. Hughes, Cheshire Regt. (June 2); Lieut. E. C. Da Costa, East Lancashire Regt. (June 5).

Capt. F. O. Carr, Imperial Yeomanry, is attached to A.S.C., graded as a D.A.A.G. (Aug. 16).

Lieut. G. M. Shipway, Gloucester Regt., attached to A.S.C., graded as a Staff Lieut. (since appointed to Army Transport), (July 28).

Capt. (temp. Lieut. in Army) G. H. B. Fletcher, 3rd Batn. Derbyshire Regt., to be a Railway Staff Officer, graded as Staff Lieut. (Sept. 6).

Qrmer. and Hon. Lieut. T. Curtis, A.S.C., to be graded as Staff Lieut. whilst employed at Army Hd.-Qrs. (May 26).

Capt. W. R. N. Madocks, R.A., to be A.D.C. to Col. (local Lieut.-Gen.) I. S. M. Hamilton, C.B., D.S.O., Commanding Mounted Infantry Division (July 4).

Lieut. W. J. S. Rundle, 6th Dragoon Guards, to be A.D.C. to Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. T. C. Porter, Commanding a Cavalry Brigade (Sept. 6).

School of Gunnery.—Capt. Hon. M. R. C. Ward R.A., to be an Instr. (Oct. 10).

Brevet.—Lieut.-Cols. to be Cols.:—T. Perrott, R.G.A. (Oct. 12); J. A. Lambert, Reserve Regiment of Dragoons.

Reserve of Officers.—Lieut. E. C. Arnold, Capt. 7th Batn. Royal Fusiliers, to be Capt.

Army Medical Reserve of Officers.—Surg.-Capt. Mackay to be Surg.-Major.

WAR OFFICE, Oct. 26.

MILITIA.

Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to accept the voluntary offer made by the 4th Batn. Devon Regt. to serve at a station out of the United Kingdom.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Oct. 27.]

To ADVERTISERS.—The Mohawk Cycle Company inform us that, as a direct result of their advertisement in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, they have received orders for the supply of cycles to the 144th Battery, Royal Field Artillery, now stationed at Clogheen, Ireland. We may add that this is no solitary instance of the value of this paper as an advertising medium, as many others could be quoted. Advertisers should note.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

ROYAL CAMBRIDGE ASYLUM FOR SOLDIERS' WIDOWS.

For widows of soldiers who have served not less than 14 years and married with leave while serving. Comfortable home with large garden. Furnished room for each inmate, 7s. a week, and coal allowance. Number in Asylum 71. Election by subscribers.

COMMITTEE APPEAL for more SUBSCRIPTIONS to meet current expenses. For particulars apply to Secretary, 5, York Street, St. James Square, S.W.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN OF GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grocers, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employons, London."

TO MILITARY OFFICERS RETIRING.—A firm of brewers are prepared to treat with one conversant with canteen and mess supplies.—Address, "Canteen," c/o Deacon's Advertising Offices, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

TO LET, FURNISHED, seven-roomed COTTAGE, Glendower, Strensall, York.—Apply, Mrs. Rowley, Strensall.

THE LONDON SOLDIERS' HOME.

BUCKINGHAM GATE, S.W. Close to Wellington Barracks. Near Waterloo and Victoria Stations. Founded by MISS DANIELL, 1890. Refreshment Bar. Sleeping Cubicles. Baths. Temporary Married Quarters. Reading Room. Game and Smoking Room. Baggage Room, &c., &c.

UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS, NOVEMBER.

Notes on the Evolution of Cavalry.—continued. Lieut.-Col. F. N. MAUDE, late R.E.
Shakings. L. G. C. L.
Frederick the Great.—III. The Period of Peace before the Seven Years' War. The Military and Civil Administrations of Frederick. Outbreak of the Seven Years' War. The Campaign of 1756. WILLIAM O'CONNOR MORRIS.
Our Own Mandarins. T. MILLER MAGUIRE, M.A., LL.D.
The Peace Constitution of the Volunteer Force. Lieut.-Colonel EUSTACE BALFOUR
Some Remarks on this Year's Special Training of the Volunteers. C. B.
Mounted Infantry. Major R. H. CARR-ELLISON, The Royal Dragoons.
The Artillery in Natal.—Colonso. Captain C. HOLMES WILSON, R.F.A.
Notes on Artillery Fire. A REGIMENTAL OFFICER.
The Art of War before and after the Renaissance Period. H. E. MALDEN, Vice-President Royal Historical Society.
Field Engineering for Home Defence.—Part II. Captain R. F. DORRIS, R.E.

ARMY ALTERATIONS

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date. Subscription—5s. 6d. per annum, post free. One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.
ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE. With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations. BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer, Ashton-under-Lyne.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA,

SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS

TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate. "Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd, Batn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wilt's Regiment, August, 1898."

Watch and Clock Makers.

Report. "I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best if not the very best, in the Discovery and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., R.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.

ESTABLISHED 1803.

Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.

Paid-up Capital, £300,000.

Invested Funds over £1,500,000.

M. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

APSLY PELLATT & Co.
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing Cross, London, W.C.
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

BOURNEMOUTH, BOSCOMBE.—To LET a comfortably FURNISHED HOUSE for winter (13 rooms and usual offices); best residential position, adjoining new Cliff Gardens, south aspect, well sheltered, and sanitation perfect. Any reasonable offer entertained.—E1,355, Directory Office, Boscombe.

BOURNEMOUTH, WEST.—For Summer or Winter residence; comfortable apartments in a pleasantly situated house; close to pine woods and sea; healthy position; fine view; near shops; excellent cooking and attendance; reasonable terms.—Address, M., Myrtle Villa, Alum Chine Road, Bournemouth.

INVALID or CONVALESCENT OFFICERS received at The Bournemouth Hydro. Airy site overlooking Sea. Sea-water, Turkish Baths. Massage. Billiards. Gymnasium. Resident Physician.—Apply, Secretary.

LEE, KENT. Well-furnished, Detached House to be Let for Six Months or longer. Six bed, bath (h. and c.), three reception (two large), and billiard rooms, usual offices; sanitation perfect; good garden; terms moderate to careful tenant.—Address, M. C., 31, Lombard Street, London, E.C.

MILITARY TYPES.—Collectors in search of copies of 1st and 2nd Life Guards types issued with THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE are requested to communicate with 019, c/o ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

The Navy.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 18.

ROYAL MARINE LIGHT INFANTRY.

Lieut. F. A. Nelson to be Capt., vice Doig, deceased (Aug. 14).

Lieut. F. J. W. Cartwright to be Capt., vice Curteis, deceased (Sept. 20).

Promotions to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts. are antedated:—H. M. Howard to Nov. 27, 1899, in lieu of Major Swanton, extra-regimentally employed; H. D. E. O'Sullivan to Dec. 3, 1899, vice Armstrong, seconded; F. E. C. B. Chichester to Dec. 5, 1899, vice Curtoys, promoted; F. J. W. Harvey to Jan. 16, in lieu of Major Raitt, extra-regimentally employed; A. P. Grattan to Jan. 28, vice Edwards, seconded; J. A. M. A. Clark to Feb. 1, vice Orlebar, seconded; N. F. E. G. Sampson-Way to Feb. 10, vice Hailes, promoted; R. Cator to March 1, vice Trotman, promoted; J. W. Dunstan to March 15, vice Cox, promoted; W. T. C. Jones to March 16, in lieu of Major Drury, extra-regimentally employed; J. P. Shine to April 1, on increase of establishment; A. S. Morse to July 2, vice Tupman, Supy.; W. Esson to July 15, vice Lloyd, killed in action; J. C. H. Rigby to July 17, vice Strouts, killed in action; C. J. Thoroton to July 17, vice Rigby, seconded; P. W. Simmons to July 23, vice Robertson, killed in action.

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 19.

George C. Avery, B.A., has been appointed Naval Instr. (Oct. 8).

ROYAL MARINE LIGHT INFANTRY.

Lieu.-Gen. G. F. Munro placed on Retired List on account of age, under provisions of Order in Council of Nov. 29, 1881 (Oct. 19).

Major-Gen. G. H. T. Colwell, C.B., to be Lieut.-Gen., vice Munro, retired (Oct. 19).

Col.-Commandant A. B. Crosbie, A.D.C., to be Major Gen., vice Colwell, promoted (Oct. 19).

Col. Second Commandant T. W. Dowding (from Supy. List) to be Col. Commandant on the Establishment, vice Crosbie, promoted (Oct. 19).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 22.

In accordance with provisions of Order in Council of Feb. 22, 1870:—Capt. R. R. Neeld has been placed on Retired List of his rank, at his own request (Oct. 10).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Acting Sub-Lieut. L. C. Holmes confirmed as Sub-Lieut. (Jan. 2).

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 22.

Royal Marine Light Infantry.—Lieut. J. C. Deed to be Capt., vice Crocker, seconded (Oct. 10).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 23.

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. A. H. Thacker to be Lieut. (Oct. 6); Asst.-Engr. F. G. Haynes to be Engr. (Oct. 2).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 25.

Staff Engrs. advanced to rank of Fleet Engr.:—Walter Brown (Oct. 8); Arthur John Johns (Oct. 9); John William Agnew (Oct. 16).

Royal Naval Reserve.—The following gentlemen have been appointed Sub-Lieuts.:—Walter H. Cooper (Oct. 11); William D. Hopcraft, John H. Boden, Arthur E. W. Handcock, Albert A. W. Edwards, William A. Ussher, Hew R. Stevenson, Charles L. K. Barrett, Frank S. Monteith (Oct. 19).

Acting Sub-Lieut. Albert W. Gamlen has been confirmed as Sub-Lieut. (July 23, 1898).

Sub-Lieut. William B. Knagg to be Lieut. (Oct. 23).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 19.

Commanders.—H. Orpen to Blake (Oct. 30); A. G. H. W. Moore to Renown (undated).

Lieutenant (R.N.B.).—J. D. Andrews to Excellent, for one month's course of gunnery (Oct. 27).

Midshipman.—W. W. Sillem to Magnificent (Oct. 12).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 20.

Lieut. R. A. Hornell to Victory, for Petrel (Oct. 6).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 22.

Captains.—C. J. Baker to Blake (Oct. 30); C. R. Keppel, D.S.O., to Warspite (Nov. 1).

Commanders.—J. de C. Hamilton to Defiance (Nov. 1); T. D. W. Napier to Victory, for Petrel (Oct. 6).

Lieutenant (R.N.B.).—D. Simmonds to Excellent, for a month's G. course (Oct. 27).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 23.

Commander T. R. L. Sheppard, to Renown (N.), (undated).

Lieutenants.—E. M. Phillpotts (as 1st), H. R. Veale, for special G. duties at Malta, R. F. Parker (T.), G. M. Paine, B. L. Majendie, G. M. Keane, Hon. C. A. Ward, H. K. Kitson to Renown (undated), H. G. Jackson to Blake, lent for G. duties (Oct. 30); T. Nesbitt, R.N.B., to Excellent, for one month's re-qualifying course; J. M. Pearson, R.N.B., to Excellent and Vernon, for short course G. and T. (Oct. 27); H. G. Sherbrooke to Glory to join on arrival on China station (undated).

Sub-Lieutenants.—H. de Burgh to Renown, G. P. Legard to Glory (undated).

Acting R.N.B.—E. B. White, N.B. de la C. Cornwall, C. E. D. Trelawney, and J. H. Lyons to Excellent and Vernon, for short course G. and T.; V. R. d'A. Campos to Vernon and Excellent, for short course T. and G.; H. D. Watts-Russell to Cambridge and Defiance, for short course G. and T. (Oct. 27).

Midshipmen.—A. H. M. Burton, H. D. Collins to Renown, H. L. Sheppard, C. B. Prickett, E. O. B. S. Osborne, J. C. Davis, L. D. O. Bignell, S. P. B. Russell, C. P. Talbot to Glory, to turn over from Centurio before that ship leaves station (undated); C. J. Keigwin, R.N.B., to Excellent and Vernon, for short course G. and T., F. C. Hooper, R.N.B., C. E. Daniel, R.N.B., to Cambridge and Defiance, for short course G. and T. (Oct. 27).

Naval Cadets.—R. J. Harris, E. T. R. Chambers to Renown (undated).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 25.

Commander.—C. E. E. Carey to Glory (Nov. 1).

Lieutenants.—J. B. Mason to Condor (as 1st) (Nov. 1) H. Winthrop to Pembroke (Oct. 27) for Condor (Nov. 1); J. D. C. Wallace to Majestic (Sept. 15) and to Condor (Nov. 1); B. A. Hornell to Repulse (Oct. 25); E. H. Rymer to Crescent, for Quail, in command (undated); A. H. Gordon to Sparrow, in command (Nov. 15).

Sub-Lieutenant.—C. C. Ennals to Crescent, for Quail (Oct. 24).

Midshipmen.—T. F. P. Calvert, T. S. L. Dorman, A. D. C. Cooper-Key, J. F. O. Patterson, C. V. L. Norcock to Glory (Nov. 1), appointments to Renown cancelled.

Naval Cadet.—E. H. Dennistoun to Glory (Nov. 1) appointment to Renown cancelled.

ONE word of welcome to the Australian Army and Navy Journal, a new Service paper, published in Sydney, which, according to its manifesto, "has come to stay." We cordially endorse the idea, and we wish the new venture success.

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.50.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MONTON.

THE BEST PEN.

The "CALTON" Stylographic Pen is the best because it is the simplest, most durable, holds more ink, does not leak, and can be carried in any position. Sent complete for 3/-, post free. Cased in silver, Hall-marked, 10/6. All kinds repaired.

"JEWEL" FOUNTAIN PEN, with 16-ct. Gold Nib, Iridium-tipped, chased holder, 5/- Mounted, 7/6.

DEPT. A. G. JEWEL PEN CO., 102, FENCHURCH ST., LONDON, E.C.

BLAND & SONS

"CAPE" GUN

(IMPROVED MODEL.)

A New Combination Rifle and Shot Gun.

Left Barrel Rifled .303 bore.

Right Barrel 20 or 28 bore, for Shot or Ball.

A Perfect Battery in itself, and serviceable for any part of the World.

AS SUPPLIED TO

H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,

Whose Expedition to the North Pole

WAS FULLY EQUIPPED BY THIS FIRM.

T. BLAND & SONS,

No. 2, King William St., Strand, W.C.

(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)

Works:

41, 42, & 43, Whittall St., Birmingham.

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.'S

Overcoats for Winter.

Newest Styles, Fashionable Materials.

Overcoats for Winter.

In all sizes. Ready for Immediate Use.

Overcoats for Winter.

Cut by our own Cutters, and made in Best West-end Style at Moderate Prices for Cash Payments.

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.,

12, 10, & 8, BROOK STREET, . . .

. . . HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

THE DE VERE, THE PRINCE OF WALES, THE BROADWALK.

(Opposite Kensington Palace.)

Lift. Electric Light. Everything up to date

Tariff on application.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE),

QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE. Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff. Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS. For Tariff, address MANAGER.

"SCOUT"

PUTTIE & LEGGINGS

(Clark's Patent, 1914-1899.)

SUPERBLY ALL OTHERS

The Best, Simplest

and most Effective

Article in the market.

FOR MILITARY AND

SPORTING PURPOSES

THEY ARE UNEQUALLED

No loops used.

Straps are self-adjusting. Inside portion of calf is smooth for saddle.

Price 25s. per pair

Best blocked plating

Descriptive particulars

application to Patent-

Thomas H. Clarke, Military Boot

Maker, Fermy, Co. Carl.

A THING THAT EVERYBODY WANTS and EYES

BOY LIKES.

A BOOT HERE THAT WILL BE ALWAYS FINE

This is absolutely secured by wearing

WOOD'S Automatic

Revolving Heel Pad.

Sold all over the World in millions.

Doubles the Durability of Boots, prevents Sclabing, makes the Wearer Silent and Safe, as Grass Lawn, reduces Fatigue to a minimum, prevents Slipping. Perfect everywhere. Can be fixed while you wait. Patented everywhere. Ladies, 1s. 3d. Gents, 1s. 3d. Improved Quality. Sold by Boot Makers and Rubber Dealers, or sent free from the Makers. Send paper size of heel required.

REVOLVING HEEL CO., D. 23, NELSON, LANC.

The "C.I.V."

The Publisher begs to remind readers that he still has copies of the Plate of the "CITY IMPERIAL VOLUNTEERS," which was issued with the "Army and Navy Gazette" some time ago, on sale, Price 6½d. (halfpenny stamps) post free, securely packed in postal tube. Speedy application is necessary.

Address:—THE PUBLISHER, 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM, P.S.C.

(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),
35, HEREFORD SQUARE, S.W.
 (one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station Metropolitan and District Railways).

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

During the last three years all the candidates prepared by Col. Needham for this Examination have obtained Commissions.

WOOLWICH AND SANDHURST EXAMINATIONS.

At the late Examinations (June, 1900), the following Four of Col. Needham's pupils were successful:—

WOOLWICH.....A. G. Bolleston.....8088
 SANDHURST.....P. W. von B. Malcolm.....6022
 ".....G. G. Symons.....6531

"University Candidate: A. L. Prince.

Prospectus and List of Successes sent on application.

HOVE, SUSSEX.

PREPARATION for all ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITY EXAMINATIONS.

MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,

Late the Border Regiment, assisted by Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late E.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

At the last SIX Examinations SEVENTY THREE PUPILS have been SUCCESSFUL, and the FIRST PLACE on the whole List has been taken FOUR TIMES.

SUCCESSSES.

Place.	Name.	Marks.
FIRST (Cavalry) ...	*B. Hamilton-Stubber	1692
2nd (Infantry)	*W. P. H. Hill	1873
2nd (Artillery)	*W. E. Delves-Brough-	1542
17th (Infantry)	*C. C. Clifton	1622
28th (Infantry)	*B. G. Clarke	1522
65th (Infantry)	*E. E. C. W. Wilmer	1330
8th (Cavalry)	*O. K. Chance	1356
(Colonial Candidate) ..	*C. D. Macklem	1308
(Artillery)	*E. T. F. Hood	1187
(Infantry)	*O. F. Lloyd	1179
(Infantry)	*F. H. Span	1147
(Infantry)	*J. C. W. Anderson	1132

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5862
Infantry	L. Aylmer	5851
Infantry	K. O. Goldie	5653
University	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.

ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY, and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.

No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.
 Capt. M. M. M. FESTING.

Resident and Non-resident Pupils received. Prospectus with List of Successes on application. Officers Coached by Correspondence.

THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.

LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C., and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.

ASSURANCES AND LOANS

can be effected by

MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS

in Government Service,

on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business

Annual Revenue exceeds	£1,100,000
Bonus Additions Declared exceed	£26,750,000
Accumulated Funds exceed	£26,400,000
Claims Paid exceed	£17,000,000

HART AND SON,

60, Artillery Place, Woolwich,

(Established 100 Years), has

FOR SALE

Nearly New

REGULATION UNIFORMS for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices.

Gold and Silver Dress

BELTS, SABBETACHES, and SASHES for Sale or on Hire.

All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver Lace, &c., bought for cash.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,

AND

MR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.

(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge),
 ECCLEFECHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
 prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and Non-Resident, for

ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVERSITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.

Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of many years' successful experience.

Careful Individual Attention. Strong Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer. Competent Military Instructor.

SUCCESSSES, 1900.

Woolwich.—None sent up.

Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only Candidate.

Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy.

TRINITY, CAMBRIDGE; Entrance, also PREVIOUS EXAMINATION—J. Cundell.

A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare; and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.

LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION.WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and UNIVERSITIES.

MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.

Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PREPARES a limited number of PUPILS.

RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.

The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.

RECENT SUCCESSSES.WOOLWICH.

G. F. Farran8001 marks.....Dec. 1898.

W. Burrell Hayley9228 ".....Dec. 1899.

The only pupils sent up.

SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.

Viscount Ingestre7th Cavalry Cadetship.

C. M. TrumanCavalry Cadetship.

E. P. GrantInfantry Cadetship.

G. Winne FinchInfantry Cadetship.

B. H. LeathamInfantry Cadetship.

G. E. HawesInfantry Cadetship.

C. A. AntrobusInfantry.

B. H. PisonInfantry.

H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh Infantry.

B. NeaveInfantry.

G. WahabIndian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

SANDHURST, WOOLWICH, INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SERVICE, and UNIVERSITIES.MR. J. J. GREVATT

(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY, for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.

A Barrister on Staff assists Candidates for DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW. Prospectus with list of successes on application. WORK WAS RESUMED AUGUST 15, 1900.

57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

EPSOM COLLEGE.

NEXT TERM BEGINS JANUARY 18, 1901.

Public School for all Classes.

Successes this summer:—London Matriculation, 16 passed; Intermediate and Preliminary Scientific, 14 passed; Higher and Lower Certificates 40 passed.

Separate Junior School.

APPLY, THE BURSAR.

Educational.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE & TRAINING FARMS, HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.

Full information from the Director at above address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria Street, Westminster.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, ASPATRIA, Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

Publications.

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Camps, and Examinations.
 Now Ready, 5th EDITION.

OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIDE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memos, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Book.

Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.

By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.

3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS.

Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables, Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

Wm. Clowes and Sons, 13, Charing Cross, S.W., and A. & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.

Of whom Reprint-Books, and Blocks may be had. Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.

SIXTH THOUSAND.The Officers' Memorandum Book for Peace and War.

By Gen. Sir RICHARD HARRISON.

Price 3s. 6d.

Can be obtained from the Army and Navy Co-operative Society, Limited, 105, Victoria Street, S.W., or of the Publishers.

SIMPIN, MARSHALL & CO., Limited, 4, Stationers' Hall Court, E.C.

WORKS ON GEOMETRY.

By JOHN S. RAWLE, F.S.A., Late Examiner to the Science & Art Department.

PRACICAL PLANE & SOLID GEOMETRY,

Approved by the Science and Art Dept., &c.

MORE THAN 600 DIAGRAMS. 250th THOUSAND.

To Prepare Candidates for the Army, Navy, &c.

Price 1s. Bound in Cloth, 2s.

Class-Sheets for Practical Geometry. Price 1s. Practical Geometry Test Papers. Price 4d. Freshand Drawing Test Papers. Price 1s.

London:

SIMPIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & Co. Ltd.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH

AND

MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.

(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge),

Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors,

PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITIES at

CEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;

For Resident Pupils, Station, Barnes, S.W.R. Telegrams, "Exercitus, London." Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and

7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT (150 yards from the Station), for Promotion Candidates and Day Pupils.

Telephone, "217, Kensington." List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed, will be sent on application.

TURKISH & ARABIC.SCHOLARSHIPS. REWARDS.

Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S principal successes at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish, held on April 5, 1899, were Colonel E. Stephenson, commanding officer of the Essex Regiment, QUALIFIED INTERPRETER at FIRST TRIAL, with 667 marks, and on October 18, 1899, Major H. A. Curtis, B.A., QUALIFIED with 643; and in Arabic, on Oct. 20, 1896, Capt. H. E. Cook, B.A., who "passed" with 502.

FIFTEEN other officers were also exclusively prepared by him and passed as QUALIFIED INTERPRETERS in Turkish with high marks.

Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.

NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU.

STANI. RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.

Distance offers no hindrance to success.

Intending Candidates should begin work early.

Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.

Shipping.

INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA, QUEENSLAND, BURMAH, PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, LIMITED.BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to
CALCUTTA.	ZANZIBAR.
MADRAS.	MOMBASSA.
COLOMBO.	BRISBANE.
RANGOON.	BATAVIA.
MAURITIUS.	ROCKHAMPTON
BOMBAY.	TOWNSVILLE.
KURACHEE.	MARYBOROUGH
BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH, EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House, Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square, Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock House, Billiter Street, E.C.

P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA, CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICES.

P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS to GIBALTAR, MARSEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN, BOMBAY, KURACHEE, CALCUTTA, CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.

P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TICKETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.—For particulars apply at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

BIBBY LINE

TO

MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMB RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA

(via Tuticorin).

LANCASHIRE	Tons. Liverpool. Marseilles.
CHESHIRE*	4244 Dec. 13 Dec. 20.
DERBYSHIRE*	5775 Nov. 1 Nov. 8
	6635 Nov. 17 Nov. 24

These marked * are twin-screw steamers. These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.

Every possible comfort for first class passengers only.

This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,

26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and

10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.

ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,

138, Leadenhall Street, London.

C. HOWARD & SONS,

45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1, CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.

ARMY TAILOR AND MILITARY OUTFITTER.—F. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.

BREECHES MAKERS AND MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.

GUN AND RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W., PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. 303 Rifles a speciality.

MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN. Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., EDINBURGH (late 27, North Bridge).

MILITARY TAILORS AND BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.

HOTEL DIRECTORY.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining, Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.

DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.

DUBLIN.—SHELBOURNE HOTEL. First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.

EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate. An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.

LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.

PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL AND QUEEN'S HOTEL.—Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

RIGHT-HAND	LEFT-HAND
------------	-----------

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE
RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2128.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRIOR 6D.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—	PAGE
The Changes at the War Office - - -	1061
Annexing the Transvaal - - -	1061
The War Office, the Army, and the Empire - - -	1062
The Glamour of the Stoke-Hole - - -	1072
The United States Navy - - -	1073
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes - - -	1063
Army Personal - - -	1065
Navy Notes - - -	1073
Navy Personal - - -	1075
Navy Foreign - - -	1076
Letters to the Editor—
The Reserve of Officers - - -	1066
Articles—
An Unexpected Camp - - -	1066
War Summary - - -	1067
The Canadian Forces - - -	1068
The Entry of the C.I.V.'s - - -	1070
Casualties in South Africa - - -	1077
Casualties in China - - -	1078
The Armies in China - - -	1078
The Gazettes—
Army - - -	1079
Navy - - -	1082
Regimental Intelligence - - -	1069
Reviews - - -	1070
Obituary - - -	1068
Naval Intelligence - - -	1082

THE CHANGES AT THE WAR OFFICE.

THAT Lord Lansdowne must leave the War Office was a conclusion long since arrived at by the common sense of the nation, although it does not appear to have been Lord Salisbury's view. The Premier is staunch to his friends, and it was known that he would not consent to sacrifice Lord Lansdowne to popular clamour. Till Lord Salisbury went to Balmoral there is every reason to believe that he would have made no change at the War Office; but, after all, the responsible chief Minister of the Crown must yield to the Crown—to the Sovereign, that is to say, who is the supreme and final authority in the Constitution. Her Majesty is the soundest as well as the oldest statesman we have; her instinct is even stronger than her trained intelligence, and the Queen knew that in the present temper of the public it would be unwise, even unseemly, to retain Lord Lansdowne in his post. To uphold him, albeit he was unfairly assailed, would be cruel kindness, for he would still continue the target of dissatisfaction not yet expended. Lord Lansdowne, who has shown himself throughout a painstaking and indefatigable public servant, has been made the scapegoat of a system, one which is wider and deeper than that which has its seat and functions in Pall Mall, and includes the whole business of British constitutional government. He must bear his share of the blame as one of those at the helm, but the blame for our military shortcomings must be spread over a much larger area and period of time than the War Office and the recent crisis. The outgoing Commander-in-Chief, speaking at the Cutlers' Feast, put his finger on the true cause of all this evil. It may be stated in the one word "Budget." A fixed and rigid annual expenditure, arrived at by both sides of the House, and accepted almost as final, forbade peremptorily any increase in the Army vote. No matter how urgent the demand, how obvious the necessity, how perilous the refusal, not another sixpence could be obtained. Lord Wolseley tells us that he pointed out in the clearest and strongest language the crying needs of the Service: numbers insufficient, guns obsolete, storehouses half empty—all those terrible deficiencies that were soon to bring us within an ace of crushing disaster. His answer was always the same:—"Quite so; but where is the money to come from?" No Government, not even the last, with an overwhelming majority, dared ask for the funds which the specialist deemed essential to make the country safer, even where the Government perfectly agreed. This is the pass to which party politics has brought us, and will again, unless a remedy is applied.

Lord Wolseley struck the key-note at the Cutlers' banquet. The only safeguard against the repetition of this dangerous, this culpable neglect of portentous warnings, is to allow the expert who knows, and whose just representations have been ignored, to appeal from the Executive to the people, who hold the real power. When the expert has given his opinion that certain changes, certain additions, are essential to the safety of the Empire, the Cabinet should be compelled, before it denied him to put his proposals for what they are worth before the nation at large. Lord Wolseley was content then, to leave the whole matter to the good sense of the British people. Had such a course been followed of late, and not merely at the outset of the Boer war, but long previous, during past years when Army estimates were continually curtailed and urgent services cut down, we should have escaped much heartburning and disappointment. We have here the the kernel and essence of true Army reform—something far more tangible, more fruitful of good, than the vague denunciations of a sorely-taxed department, which has in the main worked well. But the country must speak its will; it must insist on being called into council, on having the decision between the experts who recommends and the mere opportunist who, misusing temporary power, withholds. Pressure may be necessary to secure this safeguard. The Government may not willingly yield to outside criticism of its acts even from its real masters. The principle is of more importance than a change in the men charged with Army administration. If it had been accepted in the past, it would have spared Lord Lansdowne many unhappy hours, for the public voice would have given its mandate and silenced all passing political quibbles. Mr. St. John Brodrick, the new man called now to a difficult and onerous task, would be strengthened and supported by it. There is, however, reason to hope that the new Secretary of State for War comes in fully imbued with the relative importance of things. He knows the War Office well, and will not be led astray by the foolish philippics of those who denounce it as "a chaos"—a most erroneous impression. Its condition is by no means chaotic; it suffers from too much order, too fixed and stereotyped routine. But what is wanted now is no tinkering with machinery, no mere changes in procedure—except towards simplification and directness—nor even a better "system"—that hollow, lifeless expression so glibly used and yet having little meaning and value. We want the stuff, the substance, the men, the material; these are the essentials of a fighting force, offensive or defensive, and compared to their provision by Government impelled and controlled by the national will War Office re-organisation falls into the second place. Mr. Brodrick himself lays too much stress upon the will-o'-the-wisp "system"; but he has also, to judge from his platform utterances, a clear idea of the chief aim and object of Army reform, and that is "to give the Empire an Army fit for its needs."

ANNEXING THE TRANSVAAL.

ON the 25th ult. the annexation of the Transvaal to the British Empire, already announced by proclamation in the field after the crushing of Botha's army, was formally proclaimed at Pretoria with all the pomp and circumstances of an imposing ceremony. By this final act the crown has been set upon the great work which Lord Roberts, in an hour of serious national peril, was sent to South Africa to accomplish. Not the least interested among the spectators, as the victorious troops, 6,000 strong, led by General Tucker, marched past and saluted the Royal Standard in the main square of the Transvaal capital, were Lethorodi and the other leading Basuto chiefs who witnessed the pageant, and who sent from the ground a message conveying the expression of their deep loyalty to the Queen. The attitude of the Basuto warriors throughout the varying fortunes of the earlier months of the war was, under the wise tutelage of Sir Godfrey Lagden, at all times admirable, and the thought that suggested the presence of their chiefs at Pretoria to witness the concluding act of the war in the Transvaal was happy and statesmanlike. Sir Godfrey Lagden accompanied the chiefs back to their territory, but, if report speaks truly, he will soon change the sphere of his duties from Maseru to Bloemfontein, to administer the affairs of the Orange River Colony as its Lieutenant-Governor.

Leniency having failed to impress the Boers with a sense of British magnanimity, and proclamations having fallen upon dull ears, the character of Lord Roberts's mode of dealing with recalcitrant burghers, and with acts of deliberate treachery, whether in the field, the homestead, or the town, has at length essentially changed. The Commander-in-Chief, in his despatch of the 26th ult., referring to General Barton's action of the previous day with the "ubiquitous" De Wet, in which the British loss was greater than was at first supposed, stated that three Boers who held up their hands in token of surrender, and then treacherously fired on our men, were captured, tried by court-martial, convicted, and sentenced to death. Lord Roberts confirmed the sentence, and on the following morning the men were shot. For many months past, and from various quarters, acts of similar treachery have been reported by Lord Roberts and his lieutenants, as occurring both during the heat of battle, and at the way-side farms, where women, with offers of refreshment, have lured our unsuspecting men under the rifles of Boers concealed within. Neither remonstrance nor warning to commandants or burghers has had any deterrent effect. On the contrary, such acts have increased in frequency, causing the loss of many gallant men, and if the adoption of the severest measures of repression has at length been forced upon so humane and considerate a [general as Lord Roberts, the responsibility must be laid upon those who, in a hopeless cause, still ruthlessly prolong this desolating guerilla war.

It cannot be said that the record of the past week shows any improvement, nor is there much likelihood of material improvement while De Wet, Louis Botha, and the irreconcilable Steyn are in the field, and the mission of Mr. Kruger to Europe still awaits its issue. It is true that De Wet has again been brought to bay, and has been severely handled from both north and south, but he himself slipped away once more with his accustomed adroitness. His commando, said to number some 3,000 men, was scattered in all directions; in other words, it dispersed to reassemble again at some pre-arranged rendezvous. De Wet is now beyond question the most formidable of the guerilla leaders. For some days he had been threatening General Barton's camp in the neighbourhood of Frederikstad. To rid himself of the annoyance, Barton attacked him on the 25th ult. with half the 1st Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers, and three companies of the 2nd Batn. Royal Scots Fusiliers, with guns and mounted troops. The Boers suffered heavily, fighting being at such close quarters that the Fusiliers got in with the bayonet. Several prisoners were taken, and the enemy scattered. They no doubt rallied again soon afterwards, as they retreated in a south-easterly direction and attempted to recross the Vaal at Rensburg Drift, between Venterskroon and Parys. Here they were headed by General C. Knox's column on Saturday, and again beaten off with further heavy losses, including two guns and three waggons, another ammunition waggon being blown up. Darkness and a heavy storm stopped the pursuit. General Knox is reported by Lord Roberts to have had no casualties in this engagement.

In addition to this heavy fighting with De Wet, many minor incidents have occurred in various places. Jacobsdal was, on the 25th ult., the scene of a serious mishap, due to the treachery of the inhabitants, who had admitted some 200 Boers into their houses during the night. At break of day a destructive fire was opened on the little garrison of Cape Highlanders and Cape Artillery as they slept in their tents. They lost fourteen killed and thirteen wounded out of a total of fifty-two, before reinforcements reached them from Modder River. Large quantities of ammunition containing soft-nosed bullets were found, and the houses that had harboured the enemy were destroyed. Lord Methuen and Colonel Douglas are constantly on the move between Zeerust and Rustenburg, but the Boer force near Zeerust appears to be irrepressible, as after every dislodgment it returns again to its position. Lord Kitchener, who is apparently in command at Lydenburg, recently made a successful night march from there, and surprised a laager near Krugerspost. Several small commandos still haunt the districts to the north in the direction of Pietersburg. Six hundred Boers held the village of Philippolis in the extreme south from the 18th to the 24th ult., but failed to capture the garrison of thirty-nine men, who held a little fort to the west of the place. The entry of the enemy was effected treacherously, as at Jacobsdal, and all persons implicated have been removed beyond the border. At about the same time a party of fifty cavalry was ambushed between Springfontein and Philippolis; the railway near Norval's Pont was torn up; the telegraph wires round Bloemfontein cut; a goods train derailed near Jagersfontein Road Station; and the line south of Edenburg blown up. On the 23rd ult. a convoy was heavily attacked by a superior force near Hoopstad. It was saved, but the escort when retiring had to put out of gear and abandon two galloping Maxims, besides having twenty-nine casualties. Ventersburg having become a centre whence numerous raids on the railway have recently been directed, the place was cleared of the enemy on Tuesday by General Hunter, who met with only slight opposition, but lost a gallant officer, Major J. Hanwell, Royal Field Artillery, who fell mortally wounded. General Rundle has had some sharp fighting while marching from Vrede to Harrismith. On Sunday a party of ninety British at Geneva Station, south of Kroonstad, was captured, and afterwards released. The mail train from the south was looted and fired at the same time, the Boers making off unmolested on the approach of an armoured train. In Natal also raiding has recently taken place, and the railway has been damaged at Waschbank, the station being burned.

Great unrest exists throughout the central and western districts of the new colonies, and the enemy show a general tendency to move towards the west and south, and to raid beyond the borders. More than one skirmish has taken place on the Orange River. Four laagers are posted to the east of Vryburg, which is threatened once more with investment, and the commandeering of burghers who have returned to their farms goes on extensively. General Botha declines to surrender so long as any of his followers wish to continue the struggle, and both Viljoen and Steyn are absolutely defiant. The danger of the situation is that the movement unless promptly checked will probably spread still further, but we shall continue to hope and believe that plans are being matured by Lord Roberts that will effectually crush the guerilla bands before long.

THE WAR OFFICE, THE ARMY, AND THE EMPIRE.

THERE are many Daniels coming to judgment in the great cause of Army reform, and the latest is Mr. H. O. Arnold Forster, M.P., who in a preliminary page of his "The War Office, the Army, and the Empire," sets forth his claims to speak on military matters. He tells us he has been "a careful student of all questions connected with the Services" for the last twenty years. He has had no experience of actual war, "but of soldiers I have seen something. . . . I have marched with infantry regiments and ridden with the artillery. . . . I know our camps, barracks, and arsenals"; in fact, he has devoted much time and research to an intricate and voluminous subject. It cannot be admitted that he has mastered it, however excellent his intentions. His little book bristles with inaccuracies and misconceptions, and he is often led into wrong conclusions by the little knowledge which is proverbially dangerous. The present system of short service and Army Reserves is Mr. Arnold Forster's bête noir. He points out that the Reserve is no Reserve, that the Reservists take the place of the men actually serving, and "to send an army into the field exhausts the whole organised resources of the country." The first statement is incorrect, because, roughly, no more than 50 per cent. of the Reserve were thus incorporated at the outbreak of the Boer war, and thus the second also falls to the ground. A strange illusion blinds Mr. Arnold Forster and others. They talk of the men actually serving, the recruits, as though they were mere rubbish. "When the Army was mobilised, 80,000 men of the First Class Army Reserve were found to have taken the place of 100,000 incompetent soldiers" in the ranks. This is misleading throughout. The Reservists were only gradually called up; the men with the colours were not "incompetent"; no one who is incompetent can remain in the Service. They were no more than immature, but they were of sound stuff, improving hourly in quality, and the proof thereof is to be seen in the fact that the greater part of these 100,000 "incompetents" have since gone into the field. Mr. Arnold Forster overlooks the advantage of the system, that a fine force of seasoned soldiers is held by a light, cheap lien ready to serve again when required. No doubt the word was a misnomer; the "Reservist" should rather have been called the man on conditional furlough. Lastly, Mr. Arnold Forster's analogy between the Boer and the Crimean war will not hold water. The army sent to the east in 1854 was all in front, so to speak; there were in fact, no men behind. Now we have the 100,000 "incompetents," who were no more incompetent physically than Mr. Arnold Forster, and who have been since so largely drafted to South Africa.

Again, as regards the Militia and Volunteers, Mr. Arnold Forster is very much at sea. He charges the War Office—the Government, that is to say, which is really responsible; but he attacks the War Office as though it raised its own votes and spent its own money as it pleased—with neglecting to give this "crowd" the organisation equipment necessary to transform it into an army. The result was that "directly the (Boer) war came it was instantly evident that as they existed, and as the War Office had chosen to make them, they were not available for war purposes." What does Mr. Arnold Forster mean? What had the Militia and Volunteers to do with external war? They are constitutionally for home defence. Even if they had been a mere "crowd"—which was not the case, for the brigade organisation existed and also equipment, if only the Government would have approved of the expenditure—they could not have gone to the front except by their own goodwill, as many did—all honour to them. To complain that money has been squandered on these two forces because they were not kept for work which by statute is not theirs is hardly logical. In another direction Mr. Arnold Forster has overlooked the aid which the Militia has given, that is with its Army Reserve, 30,000 men specially enlisted for service with the regular Army who have all joined it; another correction, by the way, of the view that the whole Reserve was exhausted when the Boer war was called out.

Mr. Arnold Forster's criticism throughout is generally destructive. He finds fault freely with existing institutions, but makes few suggestions as to their improvement. We wait in vain for him to tell us what will replace the short service system; a system which may be faulty, but which had its origin in the wishes of the classes that supply recruits, and who would not listen on any other terms. He is very severe upon the absence of any "known or accepted principle," in our existing military organisation; "we are never told," he says, "what is to be done with our Army, or how large our Army should be." The answer is that with our constantly increasing empire there can be no stability upon either point. Who could foresee the increased burthen that has followed the occupation of Egypt? Now we are involved in new responsibilities in far Cathay which will entail further drafts upon our military strength; South Africa will require a large regular army for years; it may be necessary to increase the army in India at any time. These demands are, moreover, liable to variation by political changes of policy according to which party is in power. The blame, if blame there be, for this want of a clear understanding of our needs rests with the governing authorities and not with the departmental executive. Mr. Arnold Forster, as a member of the Legislature, should put the cap on his own head. It is the Legislature, the occupants of the front benches, on both sides, who have been forever tinkering with the Army, putting down, adding, changing and disturbing the conditions, varying the strength of the Army's establishments, so that no continuity of policy for purpose has been possible who are responsible. The outcry for Army reform is natural enough at this crisis. Our Army is undoubtedly insufficient for the duties that are or may be imposed upon it, and every sensible person will hail with delight the present agitation to set matters right. What is imperfectly understood, however, is the true incidence of blame. The burden of fault-finding is laid upon the War Office, and the War Office is doubtless imperfect in many respects, but the real culprits are the British public themselves, who, through their chosen representatives, have declined to realise that our military institutions have never been on an adequate and substantial footing. Given sufficient material to work with, the War Office machinery will turn out as good an article as that of any other nation in the world. No diatribes will compensate for original deficiency; and that those exist, and have existed year after year, is written in the Army Votes so niggardly accorded, and so manifestly defective in most essentials.

Army Notes.

It is plain that an "ovation" in London is no longer possible. It is not dignified, and it is dangerous to give leave and licence in future to the myriads of myriads which packed the streets to work their will in a saturnalia which filled the hospitals with more than 1,000 cases, and utterly destroyed the effect and order of the reception of the City Imperial Volunteers by the City into which they made an unimpressive appearance in dribbles of "units," sore hustled and ricocheted off the agitated admirers who did their level best to degrade the march of honour into an orgie, with a margin of free fights all along, and a conspicuous display of the utter inefficiency of Volunteers as a compelling force or power in dealing with the people in its might. There are more people in London than there are in all Scotland. What would be thought of the authorities who summoned all the inhabitants, Highland and Lowland, to flock to Edinburgh to do honour to the Highland Brigade, or to some other well-deserving embodiment of the services of the regiments of which North and South are justly proud, and lined the streets from the Caledonian Station to Holyrood with Volunteers and police to keep the line of march? The superintendent of police who told the reporter of the Daily Telegraph that London was too big for such gatherings as that of Monday might have said that they were also too risky. We do not care to accept as absolutely just the criticisms of those foreigners whose breasts are not warmed by the faintest spark of the glowing fires which not only burned but "ragged" in the hearts of the patriotic multitude; but no English gentleman would, we think, care to invite a foreign friend to accompany him to the Marble Arch, to Apsley House Gate, to St. James's Street, Temple Bar, or Fleet Street, to look at the spectacle of misrule, disorder, and excitement, and to ask him for a candid opinion of what he thought of the behaviour of the mob. It might have been far worse, but it was bad enough. It is no comfort to be told that mobs in Paris and in Berlin would be more dangerous.

A correspondent, who signs himself "X" in a letter to the Times, has taken strong exception to Lord Wolseley's presence at Mr. Winston Churchill's lecture on South Africa, and still more at the Commander-in-Chief's chivalrous defence of his own cloth. Lord Wolseley's words will be welcomed with acclaim by his comrades in the Service, and they deserve to be written in letters of gold. "I am glad," he said, "that the lecturer has done ample justice to a class whom some writers have found fault with—the British officer. I believe the British officer to be not only the finest specimen of humanity, but the finest fighting man in the world. As a leader of men, take him for all in all, he is not to be beat in any army in the world." Of the justness of this appreciation, which comes from quite the best living authority, there can be only one opinion. But it does not please "X," who seeks to controvert it by "sorrowfully" protesting against the spectacle of the head of the Army coming forward at a public gathering to take up the cudgels on behalf of his own people. He compares Lord Wolseley with a Lord Chief Justice who ventured to give his views upon a case still sub judice and before he had heard both sides. The Commander-in-Chief did not pose as a judge; he was champion and advocate, just as the Lord Chief Justice would be if the character of the whole bar was impugned and lampooned. The attitude taken up by "X" is very much to be deprecated. There can be no analogy between a criminal trial and the question whether British officers are good or bad, or have done well or ill. The public at large does not want to put our officers on their trial, and the general feeling is, with Lord Wolseley, unanimously in their favour; for all agree that there is nothing much against them—very much the reverse.

Mr. Winston Churchill, many-sided and versatile as ever, has come out now as a public lecturer, and has landed himself into a front place. Whenever he chooses, he may fill his pockets at a business which is known to be very profitable, especially on the other side of the Atlantic. He has all the qualities needed for holding an audience—eloquence, fire, a sense of proportion and of the matter that will interest his hearers. His début at the St. James's Hall, on the 30th, was brilliant, and his lecture, as the first vivid story heard of some of the most exciting episodes of the war, was very warmly received. His own adventures from capture to escape had indeed "all the features of a stirring romance." To many the narrative, drawn from personal observation, of the fight for Spion Kop was the most enthralling, although the subsequent operations that led up to the relief of Ladysmith were admirably told. We must not omit Mr. Churchill's account of the indignation expressed by Buller's men when the London papers reached them, and they read that Ladysmith had been "automatically relieved" by Lord Roberts's advance into the Orange River State.

One of the points that seems to have much exercised a certain section of critics is the absence of any organised staff of the Army. It is not quite clear what these critics want: a Staff Corps or a General Staff on the German lines. There might be advantage in the latter if it were possible in our Service which calls men to all quarters of the globe at almost any time, but the necessity for this so-called organised staff must be proved on better arguments than those adduced in Mr. Arnold Forster's new pamphlet, which is dealt with more at length elsewhere. He says "the hasty organisation of the various staffs of the Army in South Africa was scandalous in itself and detrimental to the interests of the Service." He is anxious that the higher commands should be "assigned in peace to those likely to exercise them in war." Then he goes on to detail the original staff of the Natal Field Force and of what he calls the South African Field Force, respectively. Thus he takes exception to the general appointed to command in Natal, Sir George White, on the grounds that he was no more than Quartermaster-General at the War Office. A more inept objection could not well be made. White had been doing just what Mr. Arnold Forster desires, commanding troops in peace time and also in war. From 1885 to 1898 he passed from Brigadier to Major-General, and thence to Commander-in-Chief in India, having been engaged the whole time in the active command of troops. We may pass over the Military Secretary, who was a personal staff officer, a distinction which may be lost on Mr. Arnold Forster, and we come to the chief general staff officer, Ian Hamilton, who was no more than Commandant at the School of Musketry at the outbreak of the war, but who had filled the highest staff appointments in India, who had served through the first Boer war, who was a personal friend of White's, and whose latest services speak for themselves. Major Adye, A.A.G., had been on the staff of Ireland as well as at Headquarters. The chief artillery officer had been constantly on the regimental staff as an instructor of gunnery and commandant at Okehampton, where he had gained the reputation of being one of the best informed of modern artillerymen. There is little in the foregoing to justify Mr. Arnold Forster's strictures that these were "scratch arrangements."

There is even less force in his condemnation of Buller's staff. Buller himself was actually in command of the largest body of English troops collected in one spot, namely Aldershot, and pending the arrival of Sir A. Hunter, who never joined him, he took out with him as chief staff officer the man he had at his elbow, Colonel Wynne, D.A.G. at Aldershot, who had been uninterruptedly upon the staff since 1886, and in posts of the highest importance. Colonel Miles, at first A.A.G., and afterwards chief staff officer, had also been constantly upon the staff. He was A.A.G. at Aldershot for five years, and he was Buller's chief staff officer at the manoeuvres of 1898, when the numbers of Buller's Army Corps were quite 25,000, and the work in hand was just that likely to give the best practical staff experience. It is needless to carry this protest further, nor is it easy to understand what is desired in the "permanent organisation" of the staff. It would be a mischievous thing really to keep staff officers always in the same command, at the same kind of work. The demands made upon our officers are very various, and the best staff officer is undoubtedly the man who has had the widest experience. Not one word that carries weight has been heard against the general staff in South Africa, which has been recruited always from the best men available, and happily their name is legion.

The circular memorandum issued from Army Headquarters in India on the subject of "The Care of Horses in the Mounted Arm" is an important document, and shows that Sir Power Palmer has a very keen sight into things military. He begins by insisting that all cavalry commanders should pay particular attention to checking waste of power in horses on all occasions, and particularly on parades and manoeuvres. He takes as text the too well-known record of wastage in South Africa, when good horsemasters were few and adverse causes many for impairing the strength and fitness of horses in the field. No doubt the quality of the remounts originally furnished to our cavalry and mounted infantry was not without its bearing upon their endurance under peculiar trials. We have heard repeatedly that they are not sufficiently high-bred, and this, which is after all a digression, will no doubt be suitably dealt with ere long. The point does not bear further upon the Indian circular than showing the necessity for the utmost care in husbanding horseflesh on all occasions. This must be done not only by raising the stamp of animal used, but by lightening the dead-weight he carries, and still more by saving him on all occasions from excessive fatigue. In these matters the circular may be quoted at length.

Sir Power Palmer, according to the Pioneer, calls special attention to the following points. At drills and exercises every opportunity for dismounting should be taken when halted for even a few minutes, and horses on a march or when returning from a field-day or engagement should be always led. Where officers are present orders to this effect can be carried out; but, as the memorandum lays down, the necessity of saving the horses must be impressed on non-commissioned officers and men when on patrol and other detached duties, and on orderlies. "Orderlies are often seen sitting for a considerable time on their horses waiting for orders; this practice should be stopped and men punished if they disregard orders." Again, when scouting parties or patrols are halted in open country, only the vedettes should remain mounted: the remainder can ease their horses and yet be ready to remount at the shortest notice. The practice, it is said, of everyone remaining in the saddle had much to do with crippling the cavalry in South Africa. Such neglect seems perfectly inexcusable; for every cavalry officer must know from the experience of the hunting field how careful men are to save their horses there, even when the object is mere amusement. Attention is also directed to the waste of power at reviews, inspections, and assemblies of troops by all arms falling in an unnecessarily long time before the arrival of the reviewing officer. The Commander-in-Chief in India now lays down the following rule which all officers should in future bear in mind:—"The troops to parade on, or in rear of the parade line ten minutes before the time fixed for the review or commencement of operations. Mounted troops to dismount (cavalry six horses' lengths in rear of the parade line), and infantry to pile arms and fall out until the approach of the reviewing officer is signalled; when all should smartly fall in and dress on the markers. Infantry as well as cavalry will be grateful for this order, as it is the common practice to keep troops standing for an hour, in order that everything may be ready for the general when he appears on the ground. Finally, the memorandum lays down that cavalry regiments should march independently to the rendezvous when an assembly of troops is ordered; that on the general line-of-march opportunity should be taken to increase and diminish the front; and that when returning to the lines with heated horses, the squadrons should be marched at open files; and, when moving along a road, files should march on each side, leaving the centre for traffic. If these directions are followed our cavalry will certainly save much wastage of horseflesh hereafter.

A good deal of hostile criticism has been passed upon the British cavalry in South Africa, by none more pointedly than by Dr. Conan Doyle. How far this criticism may be just must be left to the decision of authoritative expert opinion. But through the Service it is very generally felt that the late régime under Sir George Luck, as Inspector-General of Cavalry, did not make for the fullest efficiency. We have been more and more forcibly reminded that the wrong ideals were set up, that the methods of training adopted were not those calculated to make cavalry most useful in the field. An immense amount of hard work was insisted upon, and very properly. In this, Sir George Luck did much to raise the tone and make it plain to all who were inclined to play at soldiering that it would not be permitted in the cavalry. But some of the work enforced was very much in the wrong direction. The extensive manœuvres by cavalry alone, and the long-distance rides, no doubt gave officers increased knowledge of the country and tested their powers of endurance, but they told very injuriously upon the regimental horses. It cannot be forgotten that a disastrous breakdown occurred in many regiments at the end of Luck's various cavalry manœuvres. There was one famous case in the Eastern Counties, when more than half a regiment was dismounted. Other cases were numerous in which a large percentage of the horses of a regiment spent the winter in hospital recovering from the excessive strain put upon them. Again, as regards training, the points in which the cavalry have shown themselves most defective, namely, scouting and reconnaissance, have been those most largely neglected in recent years. It is no use crying over spilt milk; we should rather look for the remedy that is imperatively needed. It is clear that cavalry training must be put on an entirely new footing, and entrusted to some strong, capable general officer who has had ample experience.

The question whether or not military training is to become an established feature of our Universities has been debated with no little heat in many circles during the past six months, and the discussion has not passed altogether unnoticed at those centres of learning. At a Congregation which was held at Cambridge last week, the following motion was put forward and passed:—"That a syndicate" (which was named) "be appointed to consider what steps, if any, it is desirable to take towards the organisation of instruction in military subjects in the University that the syndicate have power to confer with the War Office, and with such other bodies and persons as they may think fit; and that they report to the Senate before the division of the Lent Term 1901." Much influence, however, will have to be brought to bear upon the University authorities before any steps can be taken in this direction; for, despite the keenness of "outsiders," the older heads governing Colleges are by no means so ready to commit themselves to so radical a change in the course of University education; for the introduction of military tuition would naturally entail the appointment of a complete staff of specialists as tutors—retired Army officers, perhaps, who had passed direct from public schools to Woolwich or Sandhurst, and had taken no 'Varsity degree. As the matter stands at present, we are informed by a resident at Cambridge, and an enthusiastic upholder of the ancient manners and customs of the University, a degree of some kind is a very necessary qualification for a tutorship. The University, he says, has been the home of peace and culture for six centuries, and to make it the seat of military learning would be the first blow at its lofty ideals. On the other hand, be it remembered that Cambridge University was founded "for the study of learning and knowledge, and for the better service of Church and State," and the State needs an army. Moreover, there can be small doubt that an undergraduate passing into the Army sets out on his career with his mind enlarged and equipped with greater knowledge of the world than can be obtained at the public schools and the Military Academy and College. For here all move in the same groove, all are destined for the same calling, whereas at the University a man meets students of every known subject, destined for professions as varied as the plumage of a peacock, and it is through this extended horizon of life the University man more than compensates for the years' start which the Sandhurst or Woolwich cadet obtains over him. This clinging to ancient usage is perhaps natural on the part of the heads of the 'Varsity, though it is probable they must eventually yield, and, like all other ancient institutions, move with the times, or go under.

A military correspondent of The Times this week, in an article on officers' expenses, says that the remedy for high mess bills and general regimental extravagance is entirely in the hands of the Commander-in-Chief, who has only to consign to half-pay a few culpable colonels and a slack general or two and the whole matter would be put right. An officer, who commanded a crack regiment at Aldershot not a hundred years ago, relates that a commander-in-chief who came down to a field-day, took lunch at the mess, and expressed something more than astonishment when, in answer to his request, for a glass of champagne, he was told that the wine was not allowed at mess luncheons in pursuance of orders received a short time previously from the Horse Guards, which were enforced by a strong reprimand on account of the extravagance permitted in the regiment. It seems very doubtful whether the military correspondent is right in saying that regimental expenses were much less formerly than they are at present. At the time of the Crimea war, the expenses in such regiments as Lord Cardigan's were on the same scale as the fancy prices for commissions, and with the large growth of millionaire bourgeoisie and manufacturers who have deer forests, salmon rivers, well filled stables, hunt packs of hounds, have grouse, pheasant, and partridge shooting of renown, and palatial town houses, it is not easy nowadays to draw a hard-and-fast line across the mess-bills of young cavalry officers. There is, however, one great obstacle to a wholesome reform in the matter of regimental expenses. Generals must abandon their indifference and interfere with regimental arrangements, especially in India, where one officer for a time put an end to polo clubs; and perhaps the War Office will presently stiffen its back and insist upon a regulated scale of expenditure, and assist officers by supplying mess and anteroom furniture, glass, crockery, and cooking utensils, with free rations or an allowance for them, keeping up the band, and ceasing from the incessant changes of uniform and the like, which fall so heavily on the regimental officers.

Lord Rosebery, in an interesting speech in the House of Lords, towards the end of the session, expressed a wish that Lord Wolseley would appear in his place and give expression to his opinion respecting the policy of the Government in relation to the Army. It might be suspected from the absence of the Commander-in-Chief that he did not altogether approve of the manner in which military questions were handled at the War Office; and at the Cutlers' feast on Thursday night at Sheffield, Field-Marshal Lord Wolseley left no doubt about his sentiments on the matter:—

"Without finding fault with the Constitution of this country, Lord Wolseley said, he might point out that conditions must continually arise—as long as our present military organisation continued—when a man like himself, charged with the purely military side of affairs, might feel it necessary to bring before the Government the fact that the Army was not strong enough, or that its guns were old, or that our fortifications were defended by obsolete artillery, and many other things which were not what they ought to be, and be told: 'No doubt you are quite right, these things are very desirable, but we have not got the money to provide them.' That was the very common answer of all Governments. As he was drawing near to the time when he would cease to be Commander-in-Chief, he would say that the only complaint he had was that he regretted very much, in the interests of the Army and of this great Empire, that when a man in the position of a Commander-in-Chief or any other high position in the Army declared that he deliberately felt it was necessary to make certain changes in regard to Army matters, or laid before the Cabinet certain proposals essential to the safety of the Empire that that opinion deliberately come to by an expert on the subject, was not, for what it was worth, made known to the nation at large."

That was plain enough.

We might do worse than take example from the Germans in revising our Army Medical Service. Not only does this essentially military nation maintain an efficient medical establishment in time of peace, but they have also a medical reserve of great excellence. By this means, says a contemporary, on the outbreak of war, every civilian doctor on the establishment knows the exact post assigned to him, and without further instruction can proceed thither at once. This certainly sounds a scheme of the highest possible wisdom, but the organization of it all must be perfect, otherwise a terrible muddle would ensue, when the Reserves were called up. Perhaps the idea of civilians being thus summoned for service in time of war may savour of conscription—or "compulsory volunteering" as it is termed. Yet it cannot be doubted that a nation that can rely in war-time on having the necessary number of medical men in excess of that required on a peace footing—each unit, too, having its place allotted beforehand—is to be envied. It was good to see so many of our own countrymen offering their services to the Government this time last year; but how far more satisfactory if each Volunteer—whether doctor, or vet., or whatever he might have been—had known his post, when the Reserves and Auxiliaries were embodied.

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1081.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1083.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1083.

Army Personal.

Prince Christian Victor Albert Ludwig Ernest Anton, whose sad death from enteric at Pretoria was announced on Monday, was the eldest son of Prince and Princess Christian, and, therefore, grandson of Her Majesty the Queen, and was born at Windsor Castle on April 14, 1867. He received his education at Wellington College and Magdalen College, Oxford, which he left to enter the Royal Military College at Sandhurst. He received his commission in 1888, and was appointed second lieutenant in the King's Royal Rifle Corps. Two years later he was promoted to be lieutenant, and in 1896 became captain with the brevet rank of major. His war service had been considerable. He served with the Hazara Expedition in 1891 as orderly officer to Major-General Elles, commanding the forces. He was mentioned in despatches, and received the medal and clasp. He was in the Miranzai Expedition of the same year with the 1st battalion of his corps, and was present at the engagements at Sangar and Mastan. The next year he was in the Isazai Expedition. When it was found necessary to despatch a force to Ashanti against King Prempeh in 1895 his Highness volunteered his services, and was made aide-de-camp to Major-General Sir Francis Scott, who commanded the expedition. For his share in the Ashanti Expedition Prince Christian Victor received the star and promotion to the brevet rank of major. He also served with the Soudan Expedition under Sir Herbert (now Lord) Kitchener in 1898 as staff officer to the troops on board the gunboats flotilla. He took part in the bombardment of the forts of Omdurman, and was present at the battle of Khartoum. For his services he was mentioned in despatches, and given the Fourth Class of the Osmanieh, the British medal, and the Khedive's medal with clasp. Prince Christian Victor was gazetted in October last for special service in South Africa. He took part in many engagements before the occupation of Pretoria, and was appointed an extra aide-de-camp to Lord Roberts in August of this year. In the profession of his choice, the late Prince was the keenest of the keen, and on leaving for the front a year ago, he is believed to have expressed a wish that in the event of his death he should be buried in South Africa. His Highness was an enthusiastic cricketer, and frequently in former years captained a team of the Windsor Home Park Cricket Club. Besides the distinctions mentioned above, Prince Christian Victor was also a Knight of Justice of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England, a Grand Cross of the Bath (conferred in 1890), and a Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order (1898). A few years ago he received the honorary freedom of Windsor.

The late Prince was buried on November 1 at Pretoria. Simultaneously, memorial services were held at Crathie Parish Church, in presence of the Queen, at St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle—where the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Christian, and other members of the Royal family were present—and at the Chapel Royal, St. James's, where the congregation included the Duke of Cambridge, Lord Salisbury, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, the Lord Chancellor and Lady Halsbury, and many members of the Diplomatic Body.

Lieut.-General Sir Edward Hopton, K.C.B., whose tenure of the Lieut.-Governorship of Jersey will shortly expire, has had a distinguished career. He entered the Army in 1854, and served for thirty years in the Connaught Rangers (the old 88th Foot). He first saw active service in the Crimea, where he was severely wounded. Then he was in India throughout the Mutiny, being present at Lucknow and Calpee. Just twenty years later he was again on active service—in the Kaffir and Zulu wars of 1877-8-9. He was promoted Colonel in 1885, and from then unto 1890 he commanded the 87th Regimental District at Armagh. He was afterwards for three years unemployed, but from 1893-95 he commanded an infantry brigade at the Rock, whence he took up his present post in 1895. Sir Edward Hopton has received medals for the Crimea, Mutiny, and South Africa ('77-'79), and is a J.P. for his native county, Hereford.

Major-General H. J. Hallows is the recipient of a sword of honour, which was presented to him by the inhabitants of Jamaica, together with a complimentary address, on his leaving the island, after serving there as officer commanding the troops for a period of five and a-half years. A diamond crescent was presented to Mrs. Hallows, and a string of pearls and pendant to Miss Hallows at the same time. General Hallows administered the Government six times during his tour. The sword bears the following inscription:—"Presented to Major-General Henry Jardine Hallows by the inhabitants of Jamaica as a token of their esteem and appreciation of his action as officer commanding the troops and when administering the Government of the colony."

Major-General the Hon. R. A. J. Talbot, C.B., and the Hon. Mrs. Talbot, accompanied by Captain Gaistford, A.D.C., arrived in Cairo on October 17 from England.

Colonel and Mrs. Richardson offer to entertain six sick or wounded officers at a time for a fortnight or three weeks' visit, till Christmas. They would have separate bedrooms and the use of a sitting-room and billiard-room. As Mrs. Richardson has had hospital training and has been nursing in Bloemfontein, she would take every care of convalescents, and see that any medical orders are carried out. Anyone wishing to take advantage of this most kind offer is requested to communicate with the Secretary, R.A. Institution, Woolwich.

Lieut.-Colonel Alderson, who has been appointed Brigadier of the 2nd Mounted Infantry Brigade in place of Brigadier-General Ridley, has had previous experience in South Africa. He served there under Sir Evelyn Wood in 1881, and also in North Mashonaland in 1896, when Sir Frederick Carrington was conducting operations. For his services on this occasion he was promoted Lieut.-Colonel by brevet. During the Egyptian campaigns of 1882 and 1884-5, Colonel Alderson was actively engaged. He received the British medal, Khedive's star, and the Royal Humane Society's medal for saving life in the Nile at Dongola.

Lieut.-Colonel W. G. Crole Wyndham, C.B., who has been selected to command the Guard of Honour at the inauguration of the Australian Commonwealth, is a Staff College graduate, and has been twenty-five years in the Service. Entering the Army in 1875, he first saw active service with the King's Dragoon Guards in the Zulu War of 1879, and subsequently in Baker Russell's flying column (medal with clasp). He served throughout the Nile Expedition with the Light Camel Corps, and took part in the operations of the desert column (medal, clasp, and Khedive's star). He also served in Kitchener's campaign with the 21st Lancers in 1898, and was present at Omdurman as second in command of the regiment, which for its services on this occasion was rewarded with the title of "Empress of India's Own." He was then mentioned in despatches, received the C.B., British medal, and Khedive's medal with clasp.

Lieut.-Colonel P. Saltmarsh, who is appointed to the command of the Royal Artillery at Sheerness, has been connected with the siege train service in South Africa. He entered the Army in 1873, and took part in the Afghan War of 1878-9, for which he holds the medal. He became Lieut.-Colonel in 1898, and was in command at Chester until the present war at the Cape.

Major E. St. Cyr Pemberton, the unsuccessful Parliamentary candidate for the Cricklade Division of Wiltshire, has but recently retired from the Royal Engineers. He was for a time employed in the Intelligence Department.

Captain A. H. Wood, of the 2nd Batn. Cameronians (the old 90th L.I.), who is one of the officers selected to accompany the guard of honour to Australia, is a son of Sir Evelyn Wood. Captain Wood entered the Army in 1896, was promoted Lieut. in July, 1898, and reached his present rank only last June. He saw service in the campaign on the N.W. frontier of India, under the late Sir William Lockhart in 1897-98, with the Tochi Field Force and Tirah Expeditionary Force, whilst in the 2nd K.O.Y.L.I. (medal with two clasps).

Captain P. H. Whiston, R.A.M.C., the medical officer to the Australian guard of honour, served with the Dongola Expeditionary Force in 1896, including the engagement of Firket and the operations at Hafir (mentioned in dispatches, British medal and Khedive's medal with two clasps), and in the operations of 1897 (4th class Osmanieh, clasp), and in 1898 (Battle of Khartoum, mentioned in dispatches, clasp). He is L.R.C.P., M.R.C.S., L.S.A.

Captain J. W. Yardley, who has been severely wounded in South Africa, entered the Army in 1882. He served with the Inniskilling Dragoons under Sir Charles Warren during the Bechuanaland expedition of 1884-5, and was promoted Captain in 1888.

The freedom of the city of St. Andrews is to be presented to Captain Meiklejohn, Gordon Highlanders, who received the Victoria Cross for bravery at the battle of Elandslaagte, where he was wounded in six places.

Lieut. Viscount Cole, 7th Hussars, who has also been selected to go to Australia this month, entered the Army in 1898, and was promoted Lieut. in October, 1899. He has seen no active service.

YESTERDAY afternoon we had a party out gathering wood under McNeill, Second-Lieut. N.A. of that ilk. They returned soon after dark, and were stopped by the 2nd Coldstream outposts, who wanted to blindfold them and take them to brigade headquarters. There were not enough handkerchiefs to go round the fifty men, ten mules and four drivers, so McNeill sacrificed his sergeant, who paddled off with bandaged eyes to interview the officer in charge. After due consideration the party was brought in unharmed. The order says that "all strangers" are to be treated as above. To treat as strangers people who have been living alongside one for nine months is to put a liberal construction on the word. But Skeff is of a sociable turn of mind and likes visitors in the night watches.—Household Brigade Magazine.

WE are requested to state, for the information of members of the City Imperial Volunteers, that the London Stereoscopic Company are preparing a Souvenir Album, containing photographs of events in connection with the return of the corps, for presentation to the Lord Mayor, who hopes that every man of the C.I.V. will have his photograph included. The London Stereoscopic Company, therefore, invite every member of the corps to make an appointment to have his photograph taken free of charge at 54, Cheapside, or 106, Regent Street.

SPECIAL ARMY ORDER.—The Commander-in-Chief desires to express to the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the City of London Imperial Volunteers his high appreciation of the patriotic services rendered by the corps. The gallantry and soldierlike qualities displayed by all ranks in South Africa have afforded him much gratification, and he offers them, on behalf of the British Army, a cordial welcome home.—WOLSELEY, F.M.

GIBRALTAR.—BRISTOL HOTEL.—First-class. Situated in the centre of the town. With a garden. Every modern comfort and best sanitary arrangements. Quiet situation.

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION. SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:—

LIFE. { War Risks, World-Wide. } Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch.
ACCIDENTS & DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence Abroad. } The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.
BURGLARY, &c.
Special Quotations for Messes.
Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums.
Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.
Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.
Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT.

AN UNEXPECTED CAMP.

There are few sweeter little towns in the German Empire than Malmedy, which is within rifle shot of the Belgian frontier, on the southern edge of the bleakest upland it has been my fortune to cross—the so-called “Hohe Venn,” or, as we might translate it, the “High Fen or Bog.” The uniforms in the streets were all Prussian, but the people of the place were French in speech and French in sentiment. A strategical railway runs to Malmedy, in connection with the general German system, but it stops short here for fear of extending too much encouragement to those on the other side of the frontier. Only three or four more miles of track would have placed this line in connection with the Belgian system, and so on to the rest of Europe; but in Germany, when frontier railways are built those consulted are soldiers, and not merchants.

“Enfin, Monsieur, que voulez vous, nous sommes Français—we have always been French, and we wish to remain French—is that strange?” It was a worthy tanner of Malmedy who put the question, and without desiring to invite a charge of lèse majesté, I ventured to answer that for my part I confessed to a certain partiality for my mother-tongue as against any other. “Before the French War we were happy enough—the Government did not worry us with petty persecution; but since 1870 we are compelled to send our children to German schools—they must learn only German—and if we want our children to know their mother-tongue we must hire private French tutors, and we do!”

Then the good tanner waxed more and more indignant, and told me that since the war Malmedy had come to like German officials less and less, and that last year the German general commanding the camp near by had been blackballed at the club, and had consequently removed his headquarters to another town. “It was not politic, du point de vue de la commerce, but what will you, Monsieur—we are men, and we have feelings, and, after all, there are some things we prize more than money.” I told him it was refreshing for an American to hear such sentiments—but what camp was he referring to near here?—I had heard of no camp. “Monsieur has not heard of the great camp?—ah, no—all things military are treated like secrets.” Then he told me that a few miles from here—so near to the Belgian border that artillery projectiles crossed without difficulty—the Germans had built extensive barracks, and that in this coming summer arrangements had been made to accommodate 55,000 men, including light and heavy artillery.

“Ah, mais c'est pour de bon—this is not for mere exercises,” said the tanner, when I smiled incredulously. “This is to be a permanent camp, and fortified like another Metz. Already there is a railway connecting the camp with the nearest railway station, Sourbrodt, and no one is allowed to visit the camp without a permit. Les Prussiens are very crafty, voyez vous.”

“But what do they want of a fort here?” I queried. “That is what we ask. Is it likely that Belgium will invade Germany, or perhaps Luxembourg? That would be a belle histoire!” Listen to me, Monsieur. I feel what is coming. The Germans pretend that they fear a breach of neutrality on the part of Belgium. That is blague—nonsense. Germany is preparing to swallow up Belgium as well as Holland—that is why they mass their forces at this point. Non, Monsieur, they do not do things for nothing. Last year thirty soldiers deserted—ran away into Belgium—it is difficult to keep them here so close to the border. It is expensive. They are very closely watched; they get very little liberty. The camp is surrounded with wire fences, and the sentinels are close one to the other. Everything possible is done to keep the men in camp—the Government bribes them by offering them on Sundays three mugs of beer and two segars so that they may not apply for leave of absence.”

This rather took my breath away. I looked up my Baedeker, who usually tells everything worth knowing, but though Malmedy was mentioned, there was no reference either to the great military camp or the little military railway from Sourbrodt. I began to think the tanner had been playing upon my credulity, but as it was not far off I shouldered my knapsack and trudged away through Weismes and Robertville, two more French-speaking villages. The fact of a huge military camp may be successfully ignored by every paper and every guide-book of Germany, but it cannot be concealed from the neighbouring peasants, who have to furnish supplies to the troops, and so I had no difficulty in steering my way to its neighbourhood.

The country is high and undulating, reminding me somewhat of the Aldershot neighbourhood. There was much pine forest and gorse—evidently a land of scant agricultural value. No good road led up to it. A stranger might have passed within a mile of its edge and not suspected that he was within the limits of a soldier city—a miniature Metz. Approaching, as I did, on foot from the south, I first passed through a forest of pine and emerged upon a line of wire fence, behind which were several rows of long, low buildings made of corrugated iron. But for the German sentinel, I might have imagined myself in one of the new mining towns of South Africa. I was inclined to walk into this strange city, but the sign “Eingang Verboten” warned me that I had better be satisfied with the outside. And so I walked about and had some chat with the people of the neighbourhood, who apparently were very much impressed with the importance of what was here in progress.

The immediate boundaries of the barrack-yard appeared to me to be about two-thirds of a mile in each direction. Of course, being on military ground of this nature it would not have been proper to have made photographs, sketches, or notes, but from the best recollection I can muster I recall four rows of tin sheds, each row containing seven sheds, and each shed with twenty windows facing north, and as many facing south. In this calculation I assume the observer to be approaching the camp from the south, from the village of Bütchenbach. Now, then, I calculated roughly 6ft. as the space between windows, and consequently each shed as about 120ft. long, and this figures out that there was about 840ft. of shed in each of the four rows. From this I concluded that each row of sheds could accommodate about 1,700 men, and that these first four rows, therefore, could accommodate about 6,000 men, or two full regiments on a war footing. After these first four rows followed four more rows, longer than the first four—five sheds to each row. My calculations placed one company of 250 men in each of these sheds, and consequently five companies, or 1,250 men, to each row, or 5,000 men to the four rows. These added to those already counted makes 12,000 men in the first eight rows of huts.

Altogether I saw barrack room for about 25,000 men, to say nothing of elaborate stabling for cavalry and artillery horses. To the westward of the camp were several powder magazines, well guarded. The officers have a comfortable mess in the midst of a pine grove at the eastern end of the camp. At every point the utmost neatness prevailed, as everywhere else in the German Army; but I could not help pitying the men forced to pass a winter in this inhospitable neighbourhood. It is a glorious place for high fresh air, about 3,000ft. high, but a picture of horrible loneliness—nothing, as far as the eye can see, but moor, and bog, and forest, and pines, and coarse grass. For the moment it is not intended that 55,000 men should congregate here all at once—the idea is to work slowly and not alarm the neighbourhood too suddenly. There will be seventeen regiments here between May and October, but they will relieve one another somewhat after the manner of the regiments ordered to summer camps at home. If this camp were erected merely for the purpose of drilling men there could be no criticism from beyond the frontier; but in this case the ground selected for the massing of these men is inconvenient from the German administrative point of view, and can only be regarded as having been selected by way of a mailed fist shaken towards the west.

The little narrow gauge railway was nearly completed on the occasion of my visit—Easter, 1900; it lacked about 100yds. I walked along its entire length, three or four miles I should think, and had abundant occasion to admire the thoroughness with which it was constructed. This is no field railway put together for a summer, but a substantial road made to last for so long as locomotives run. The gradings have been made very easy by extensive cuttings. The ballasting is excellent, as good as on any of the great roads. The culverts and crossings—every detail of the construction is of the most durable nature. No one is allowed to ride upon this road save those in government employ, and as there are no omnibuses or cabs in this wilderness there is not much encouragement for tourists excepting those who are tramping for their health. It is an open secret that the German parliament has voted ample funds for the fortification of this ground—money which might have been more wisely expended in making the harbour of Kiao Chow fit for shipping. However that is bordering on political discussion—a thing which I abominate.

What do the people in the neighbourhood think of all this fortification? They do not like it. Last summer a big shell went on the loose northward, and smashed into a house about five miles away at Kaltenherberg, which means “cold shelter.” Three of the family were killed and the house was wrecked. This sort of thing makes people nervous. It is worse than a runaway automobile. The government take all the precautions possible—they block all the neighbouring highways during rifle firing, and make travellers curse for many hours at a time—but nowadays when big guns carry clean across one kingdom, it takes mighty good target practice to prevent people getting nervous when the danger flag is up. At least that is what they say at this part of the German frontier.

THE RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE “ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE.”

SIR,—A curious feature of this campaign has been the re-employment of the Reserve of Officers. This reserve was formed for the great part about five years ago by compulsory retiring a large number of comparatively junior officers on, as a rule, any pretext. A considerable hardship was inflicted on a number of men who, for the most part, have had to struggle on for a long time on very small retaining fees (for it would be ironical to call them pensions). Strictly speaking, they should only have been called up in cases of national emergency. But now they have been made to serve to supplement the paucity of officers on the active list, and are in the anomalous position of being put at the bottom of their lists, and possibly under the command of those who were once their juniors. Surely those who may elect to remain permanently (as the recent augmentations, say in the Artillery, may render necessary) should be put back in their proper places in the list and a strange and anomalous state of affairs ended.

OLD GUARD.

THE Home District Military Society held their first meeting for Kriegspiel of the season at 5 o'clock on Nov. 2, at the Royal United Service Institution, when Major-Gen. Turner, C.B., the Inspector-General of Auxiliary Forces, was chief umpire, assisted by Col. Lonsdale-Hale, late R.E. The following was the general idea:—“An invading army (Blue) landed at Hastings and marched on London. To threaten its communications a Red force moved from Portsmouth.” The officers of the Queen's Westminsters and London Scottish were the combatants.

AUSTRALIAN CONTINGENT.—The following detachments have been selected from the troops at Aldershot to represent the Army at the forthcoming ceremony in Australia:—1st King's Dragoon Guards and 7th Hussars, each one subaltern, two sergeants, one trumpeter, and 21 rank and file. The Royal Regiment of Artillery, one subaltern, three sergeants, one trumpeter, and 52 gunners and drivers, with two guns and ammunition waggon, all from the 10th Battery. The Royal Engineers, one captain and one subaltern, six sergeants, and 48 rank and file, drawn from the Telegraph Battalion, Bridging Battalion, Ballooning Section, and Field Companies. The 2nd Highland Light Infantry, one captain, one sergeant, one bugler, one piper, and 21 rank and file. These will represent the infantry, and will be accompanied by the band, consisting of the bandmaster, band sergeant, pipe major, and 34 rank and file. Capt. A. H. Wood (2nd Scottish Rifles), now doing duty with the Army Service Corps, has been appointed adjutant of the force.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos

in Bond for Export.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Oct. 27.

Reports from various quarters indicate the continuance of a spirit of active hostility among the Boers, both in the Transvaal and in the Orange River Colony. Cape telegrams of Oct. 26 report an attack on Jacobsdal, near Kimberley, which was only repelled after severe fighting. The garrison, chiefly composed of Cape Town Highlanders, lost 14 killed and 20 wounded.

It is announced that ex-President Steyn and the members of his late Executive are now in Fouriesburg, and have declared that town the capital of the "Orange Free State."

A Reuter despatch of Oct. 19, from Johannesburg, gives details of the disaster to a reconnoitring party of the Rifle Brigade on Oct. 3, near Vlakfontein.

From Mafeking comes news that on Wednesday a combined attack was made on the Boer position near Zeerust by Lord Methuen, General Douglas, and Lord Erroll. The enemy were dislodged and scattered, and 39 prisoners and 20 waggons were captured.

Monday, Oct. 29.

In a despatch from Pretoria, Lord Roberts gives an account of the ceremony of proclaiming the annexation of the Transvaal on the 25th, which he says passed off most successfully. Mr. Vorstmann, the Agent of the Dynamite Company, under pressure of cross-examination before the Concessions Committee, gave some interesting particulars as to payments made by the company to Dr. Leyds and others as bribes to secure their influence, so that the dynamite monopoly might be preserved to the company. Evidence was also given showing that the company supplied the burghers with split and soft-nosed bullets, and that Gen. Botha received shares in the monopoly.

Gen. Barton had an encounter with De Wet on October 25. The Boers were scattered in all directions, suffering heavily, while we captured many prisoners. The losses on our side, however, were also heavy. Capt. Baillie and 12 men of the Royal Scots Fusiliers being killed, and three officers and 25 men wounded. Three Boers, who held up their hands in token of surrender, and then treacherously fired on our men, were fortunately captured. They were immediately tried by court-martial, convicted, and sentenced to death. Gen. Methuen dispersed a party of Boers near Zeerust on the 25th, six of the enemy being killed, while Gen. Kitchener captured a Boer laager near Lydenburg. A party of Prince Alfred's Volunteer Guards fell into a Boer ambush a few days ago, between Springfontein and Philippolis, and all but seven were captured.

Tuesday, Oct. 30.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram of Oct. 27, says that Gen. Barton reports that the Boers suffered more heavily than he at first knew in the action of last Thursday. More of their dead were left on the ground, and there are now 30 of their wounded in his hospital. The fighting was at close quarters, and the bayonet was used. There is evidently an increasing disposition on the part of Boers possessing property to co-operate with us in securing the establishment of peace now that they find that guerilla warfare is visited with heavy punishment. Telegraphing on Sunday night (Oct. 28), Lord Roberts reports that Gen. C. Knox had a most successful day on Oct. 27 against De Wet's force during its retreat. After his defeat by Gen. Barton on Thursday De Wet endeavoured to recross the Vaal, but finding the drift blocked he pushed in the direction of Lindique, along the north bank of the river. Knox caught him at Rensburg Drift. The Boers tried to escape south-east, but were headed by Le Gallais's mounted troops and then made for Parys. They lost considerably and left two guns and three waggons in the hands of our troops. Another of their ammunition waggons was blown up by a shell from one of our batteries. Darkness and a heavy storm stopped pursuit. The British had no casualties. A small party holding Holfontein Siding were surprised on the morning of Oct. 28 by some Boers, who were only able to capture a few rifles and some ammunition before they were driven off by troops from Ventersburg and Kroonstad. Lord Roberts reports the affair at Jacobsdal on Thursday, in which the Cape Highlanders suffered so severely. He says the inhabitants admitted the enemy into their houses during the night. The Boers were driven off by troops from the Modder River post. The houses of the treacherous inhabitants have been destroyed. In three of them were found large stores of ammunition, all with soft-nosed bullets. The Boer commandant Bosman was killed.

Mr. Chamberlain has telegraphed to Lord Minto expressing the satisfaction with which the Imperial Government has learned of the arrangements for welcoming the members of the Canadian Regiment on their return. Their splendid services in South Africa have won the admiration and gratitude of the whole Empire, and the memory of their indomitable courage and resolution will ever live in the annals of the British Army.

Wednesday, Oct. 31.

Very little news. A Reuter despatch from Vryburg says that four Boer laagers have been located in the neighbourhood of that town. All the officers and men taken prisoners at Philippolis on Oct. 22 have been released.

Thursday, Nov. 1.

Lord Roberts, telegraphing from Johannesburg on Tuesday evening, says that in consequence of the numerous attacks that have been made lately on the railway near Ventersburg, Gen. Hunter drove the enemy out of Ventersburg that morning. He met with slight opposition, and had a few wounded; but Major Hanwell, of the Royal Field Artillery, was, it was feared, mortally wounded. The death of this officer was confirmed later from Cape Town. On Monday Lord Methuen marched from Buffelshoek, and Gen. Douglas from Zeerust to Makokloof. They captured three prisoners and six waggons.

A Reuter telegram from Pretoria, dated Oct. 20, says that the negotiations with Gen. Botha have failed. Mr. Steyn refused to see the bearer of the flag of truce.

A Laffan telegram from Pretoria states that Gen. French has reached Heidelberg. He accounted for 100 of the enemy during his march, besides capturing a great quantity of cattle and stores.

Friday, Nov. 2.

Lord Roberts, in a despatch of Wednesday from Johannesburg, says that General Rundle left Vrede a fortnight ago for Harrismith, but his report, dated from nine miles west of Harrismith, was only received on Tuesday. He was at Reitz on the 19th and at Bethlehem on October 21, just in time to prevent our sick and wounded from being sent off to Lindley by order of the Boer Commandant. Bethlehem is now occupied by a British garrison. The enemy were driven out of two strong positions near Bethlehem, our casualties being three killed and 17 wounded. Among the latter was Lord G. R. Grosvenor, of the Scots Guards. General Rundle's force was engaged daily with small parties of Boers, numbering from 30 to 150. He found it necessary to burn the farm of Mathias Wessels, as one of his messengers was treacherously fired at from the verandah of the house. Mrs. Wessels is a sister of Commandant-General Botha.

Reuter despatches coming from Pretoria by rail to De Aar state that the Eleventh Division has been broken up. The Guards Brigade is to return home shortly. A number of Australian troops have left Pretoria on their return home. They were addressed by Lord Kitchener, who said all their commanders had testified to the magnificent spirit and fighting qualities they had displayed. The Commander-in-Chief was sorry to lose them, but very glad to be able to allow them to go, though there was still much work to be done in the field before the task that had been undertaken in South Africa could be completed.

On Oct 23 Gen. Paget captured near Pienaars River 26 Boer prisoners and 25,000 head of cattle.

A Boer commando of 150 men on Sunday captured an outpost of 90 men near Geneva in the vicinity of Kroonstad, and afterwards stopped and looted a mail train from Cape Town. They made off on the approach of an armoured train from Geneva. The men of the outpost were subsequently released.

Before the Concessions Commission in Pretoria, some remarkable revelations have been made about the wholesale bribery of leading Transvaal officials and members of the Raad by the Dynamite Company.

A consignment of gold in bars, of the value of 2,000,000 marks, has been seized at Cuxhaven on board the Bundesrath, and placed in the custody of the North German Bank.

COOKERY IN SOUTH AFRICA.—Have you tried this: "Trekhoos stew à la guerrier"? I think you won't like it. "Take a trek-ox belonging to another battalion. Kill it, if not already dead, and cut it into eight more or less equal parts. Boil these in black mud over a green wood fire—fruit trees are the best—for 45 minutes. Allow it to stand in a dusty place for one hour, and serve lukewarm." It is a very favourite dish here.—Household Brigade Magazine.

FOLLOWING closely on the announcement made last week that the Victoria and St. George's Rifles would represent the Volunteers of the United Kingdom, and form a guard of honour to the Duke of York, at the forthcoming opening of the first Australian Parliament, comes the news that the 4th Batn. Norfolk Regiment has been selected to perform a similar office on behalf of the Militia. The old East Norfolk Militia thus receive some slight recompense for having meritoriously performed a dreary duty at Colchester for the past six months, whilst many other militia battalions were earning laurels at the seat of war.

It is stated that the military authorities in London have at present no knowledge as to the date of the departure from South Africa of the Guards, who, following the usual practice, will be the first of the regular forces to return to England. Their return is not expected for a considerable time, as one of the leading officers is about to leave England to join his brigade. Some difficulty is anticipated in providing accommodation for the men when they come back, as large numbers have joined the regiments at home since the commencement of the war. Quarters will, it is stated, have to be found for a brigade of the returning Guards at Aldershot.

THE Egyptian Gazette says: "It will, we fear, be some time yet before the mischief wrought in the Soudan by years of misgovernment can be effectually got over, and the inhabitants of those once rich provinces restored to some semblance of their former well-being and prosperity. We are informed that the total number of newhouses built at Khartoum during the past two years has been only forty, but in this number is not included, of course, those constructed at Government expense. This, more than anything else, is a proof that the poverty of the major part of the inhabitants of that city must still be great." Sir Rudolf Slatin's appointment to be the new Governor-General of the Soudan will no doubt tend to the rapid recovery and development of the province.

THE War Office have published the following:—Statements have appeared in the Press to the effect that Col. Girouard, as Military Director of Railways in South Africa, has placed in America large orders for railway material and rolling stock. Nothing was known at the War Office as to the alleged orders, and a telegram of inquiry was therefore sent to the Commander-in-Chief in South Africa. Lord Roberts replies as follows:—"Pretoria, Oct. 21, 1900.—Referring to your telegram, No. 4,499, of the 19th inst. No orders have been placed by Girouard in America. I believe Wernher, Beit, and Co., acting for various mining firms, have, owing to inability of English houses to complete orders in time, placed a portion of their order in America."

THE LIFE ASSURANCE OF OFFICERS.—The Atlas Assurance Company have received a telegram from Lord Roberts asking on what terms the leading offices would be prepared to renew policies on the lives of officers now in Africa, urging that the matter was one of importance to many and that the war is practically over; and that Professor Simpson, who is inquiring into diseases of the Army, particularly enteric and dysentery, is of opinion that the prospective extra risk is small compared with last year. There was a considerable outcry last year against British life offices for charging an extra of £5 5s. per cent., but the statistics of the war, as was demonstrated in the article from an actuarial correspondent published in The Times of September 1, show that about 10 per cent. of the officers have been killed or have died. The fair inference is that an extra of £10 10s. per cent. would not have been more than sufficient. The leading companies, however, have now agreed to charge an extra of £2 2s. only for the next 12 months, showing that they fully appreciate the reduction of risk referred to in Lord Roberts's telegram.

FOR REGIMENTAL CANTEENS AND MESSES.

GRAVINA

is a desirable and economical addition to the kitchen supplies of the Mess-room.

GRAVINA is a gravy powder, particularly useful for making a gravy for joints. By its aid many appetising hot dishes can be made from scraps of cold meat, or odds and ends of game, poultry, &c.

GRAVINA is one of the varieties of the popular

EDWARDS'

DESICCATED

SOUP

and it is the one specially recommended for gravy. When, however, a hot soup is required without labour, one or other of the soup preparations is more suitable, and will be found much more supporting, and in every way preferable, to the usual coffee or cocoa supplied to men on night guard, or after an arduous day's duties.

List Prices for 1lb. Tins.

Gravy, 1/10; Brown Soup, 1/3; White Soup, 1/3; Tomato Soup, 2/6.

Can be obtained of most Grocers and Stores.
Manufactured by

FRED. KING & Co., London & Belfast

Obituary.

NAVY.

Lieut. George Worth (retired) died at Southsea on the 13th ult., at the age of 54. He joined as Naval Cadet, 1860; became Sub-Lieutenant 1867; Lieutenant 1870; and retired in that rank, 1890, without seeing any war or special service.

ARMY.

Col. Henry Thomas Halahan.—The death is announced, at 64, of Col. H. T. Halahan, who served with the Buffs in China, in 1860, at the action of Sinho and the capture of the Tangku and Taku Forts, and later in the Zulu campaign. He became Colonel in 1887, after 30 years' service.

Lieut.-Col. Henry Charles Barton Gray.—The death is announced of Lieut.-Col. H. C. B. Gray, commanding the 2nd Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, at the age of 48. Lieut.-Col. Gray joined the Welsh Regiment in 1871, and became Captain in 1881, and Major in 1891. In March of the present year he was gazetted to the command which he held at the time of his death.

Lieut.-Col. Armar Graham Lowry, late 8th (The King's) Regiment, died at his residence, Farlough Lodge, near Dungannon, county Tyrone, on the 24th ult. Born in August, 1836, he received his first commission in the 41st (the Welsh) Regiment, Nov. 11, 1853, and his Lieutenancy Aug. 11, 1854. He served with that regiment through the whole of the Crimean campaign, during which trying period he never missed a duty and carried the colour of the regiment at both Alma and Inkerman, at which latter engagement the officer who carried the other colour and four other officers of the regiment were killed. He was promoted Captain Sept. 8, 1855, being then 19 years of age. Col. Lowry sold out of the 41st in June, 1859, and within two years he re-entered the Army as an Ensign in the 1st West Indian Regiment, obtaining his company for the second time June 8, 1867, at the age of 31. Exchanging into the 8th King's, he obtained his brevet of Major, and retired with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel in 1881. Col. Lowry had the Crimean medal, with clasps for Alma, Inkerman, and Sevastopol, and the 5th Class of the Order of the Medjidieh.

Lieut.-Col. Francis Charles Gavegan, who died in London on October 29, served with the 49th Regiment in the Eastern campaign of 1854, including the battle of the Alma, the siege of Sevastopol, the sortie of October 26, and the battle of Inkerman. He was shot through the body while carrying his commanding officer (the late Major Dalton), who was mortally wounded, from the battlefield at a time when the regiment was hotly engaged with the enemy. For these services he received the medal with three clasps, and the Turkish medal. From February, 1862, to September, 1863, he served on the Gold Coast, and for a time was in command of the troops at Cape Coast Castle. In 1863 he commanded a detachment against the Krobbos during the operations on the West Coast, and received the thanks of the Governor for his services. In the same year he also served against the Ashantis. In 1864 he returned to the West Coast and served in further operations against the Ashantis. In 1882 Lieut.-Col. Gavegan served in Egypt with the 1st Battalion Berkshire Regiment and was present at the surrender of Kafr Dower, for which he received the medal and Khedive's Star. He became Lieut. in 1861, Capt. in 1865, Major in 1877, and retired with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel in 1884.

Major Peter Forbes, formerly Quartermaster of the Highland Light Infantry, and subsequently of the Highland Light Infantry Militia, died on Oct. 24, at Harlesden. He served at the siege of Sevastopol and in the expedition to Kertch. During the Indian Mutiny he took part in several actions, including the capture of Gwalior, and he was at the forcing of the Umbeyla Pass in 1868. Major Forbes was in his 71st year.

Major Joseph Hanwell, who was killed near Ventersberg Road, was in his 40th year. He joined the Royal Artillery in 1881, and was in command of the 39th Field Battery, having attained the rank of Major little more than a year ago. His only previous war service was in Burma in 1886.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

THE CANADIAN FORCES.

(WITH COLOURED SUPPLEMENT.)

The most extensive military organisation in our colonies and dependencies is that of the Dominion of Canada, and during the war with the South African Republics the Canadian volunteers who have taken part have given ample proof of their military spirit and efficiency. The local forces of the Dominion are administered by a Minister of Militia and Defence, with a permanent department, which is a branch of the Civil Government, and the forces are always under command of a colonel or superior officer on the active list of the Imperial Service, with the rank of major-general. There are eleven military districts, and the permanent force comprises two troops of Royal Canadian Dragoons, three batteries of Royal Canadian Artillery, and four companies of Royal Canadian Infantry. There is also the Governor-General's Body Guard, and the mounted forces of the Active Militia include eight corps of Hussars and Dragoons, besides certain independent squadrons. The Canadian Artillery comprises seventeen batteries, and there are garrison regiments and companies in various parts of the Dominion, as well as corps of infantry to the number of nearly a hundred battalions, and engineers, &c. The permanent corps are enlisted for three years continuous paid service, and are officered from the Military College, Kingston, while the Active Militia are raised by enlistment also for three years, but the ballot can be resorted to, since, by the Act of 1886, every Canadian between the ages of eighteen and sixty is liable to serve. Within the last ten years the actual force has ranged between about 30,000 and 35,000 men, and there is a Militia Reserve comprising about 200,000 men who have undergone training in past times. The North-west Mounted Police is another force not directly connected with the military department.

"Who could have believed, a few years ago," said Sir Wilfred Laurier, when the first contingent of Canadians departed for South Africa, "that the scattered provinces of British North America would have reached such a point of development to-day, that they would be able and willing, cheerfully willing, to cement with their blood the unity of the Empire in its most distant part?" The splendid force commanded by Colonel Otter has, in fact, been gathered from British Columbia to the Atlantic coast, from settlers in the Rocky Mountains and in the Far West, from Ontario and the maritime provinces, and from the old families of Quebec, while Lord Strathcona's special Canadian Corps has been formed chiefly of hardy men from the north-west, all familiar from their boyhood with life in the saddle, everyone of them a good shot, and many of them with actual experience of Indian warfare. The Canadians, as Lord Minto said when he bade them farewell at Quebec, were upon historic ground, surrounded by celebrated battlefields, and in an atmosphere full of the traditions of two great nations who had then joined hands in loyalty to the Queen-Empress.

It is, of course, impossible to recount all the fine service of the Canadians in South Africa. They first came into prominent note in connection with Colonel Pilcher's brilliant raid, when the infantry and a battery were engaged on January 1 at Sunnyside. The Canadians with General Smith-Dorrien had a great part in the operations which brought about the surrender of Cronje. They fought their way across Paardeberg Drift under a heavy fire in the sanguinary battle of February 18 in magnificent style, and were at the point of honour in giving the coup-de-grace to the Boer general, when they "clinched the matter—a gallant deed worthy of our Colonial comrades"—as Lord Roberts said. The Canadians marched on Bloemfontein and fought at Poplar Grove, and in other actions, and they advanced to Thaba 'Nehu and displayed great gallantry in the engagement at Houtnek, and in many actions of the advance, while the Mounted Rifles were well employed in the operations against De Wet south of Bloemfontein. The Canadians were again prominent in the general advance, and had also the great satisfaction of sharing in the relief of Mafeking, for when Colonel Mahon joined hands with Colonel Plumer near that place, he found the Canadian battery, which had been sent down by Sir Frederick Carrington from Rhodesia, and had made a forced march to reach the place. The Canadians have done much other fighting in the campaign, and can, indeed, point to a very proud record.

AN interesting service took place on October 30 at the chapel of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, where the first part of the Burial Service was solemnised for a former adjutant, the late Col. Gray, who entered the army in 1871, and was appointed to the Royal Dublin Fusiliers. He became adjutant to his regiment in 1879. He joined the Welsh Regiment in 1891, and in 1896 was appointed adjutant to the Royal Hospital, Chelsea. In 1898 he rejoined the Welsh Regiment in India on becoming second in command. He was promoted to be lieut.-colonel, and appointed to the 2nd Battalion of the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers in March, 1900. He was given the command to take his regiment to China, when illness came upon him, and he was ordered to England in the hope that the ravages of the Indian climate might be cured, but neither the voyage home nor subsequent treatment availed, and he passed away in the early hours of Sunday morning, October 28, leaving a young wife, three children, and a large circle of friends to deplore his loss. The funeral service was military, the old Chelsea pensioners lining the way from the entrance-gate, the band of the Duke of York's School playing a funeral march as the coffin passed, draped with the Union Jack, helmet, and sword of the deceased, and beautiful wreaths and crosses from the officers and friends.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS AND BRASSES

Morris & Sons

239 Kennington Rd. London, S.E.

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPELL & CO. LTD. EXETER
4 & 5 DUNCANNON ST. LONDON.
(Opp. CHANCERY CROSS.)
DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

HART, SON,
PEARD, & CO. LTD.
Metal Workers.

— SPECIALITÉ —

Memorial Brasses.

88-91, DRURY LANE,
LONDON, W.C.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards.—Lieut.-Col. Calley left Cape Town on Oct. 25 in the Dilwara on passage home.

6th Dragoon Guards.—Major A. C. Hamilton has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

5th Lancers.—Major Little left Cape Town on Oct. 25 in the Dilwara on passage home.

6th Dragoons (Carbineers).—2nd Lieut. A. W. Swanston, who is reported as having been killed between Carolina and Bethel on Oct. 15, was seeing active service for the first time.

9th Lancers.—Lieut. S. R. Theobald has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

13th Hussars.—Major Smithson and Lieut. Lambert left Cape Town in the Nubia on Oct. 15, invalided.

16th Lancers.—Lieut. Vander Byl arrived at Southampton on Oct. 28 in the Kinfauns Castle.

17th Lancers.—Lieut. the Hon. W. R. Wyndham has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

18th Hussars.—Capt. E. C. Haag has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

19th Hussars.—Lieut. Franks left Cape Town in the Nubia on Oct. 15, invalided.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Capt. Overton and Powell (R.F.A.), arrived at Southampton on Saturday in the Kinfauns Castle.

Major E. N. Briscoe has been appointed Governor of H.M. Prison, Borstal, vice Capt. Eardley Wilmot, promoted Governor of H.M. Prison, Parkhurst.

Major Cunliffe-Owen (66th Battery, R.F.A.), progressing favourably, Middelburg.

Capt. H. E. F. Kelly (R.F.A.), who was severely wounded last July, is returning home in the hospital ship Nubia.

Capt. McMeekan (R.G.A.) is returning home in the Dilwara, which left Cape Town on Oct. 25.

Lieut. A. C. Russell (Ammunition Column) has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut.-Col. Aylmer, V.C., has, on the termination of his period of employment on the Staff, been posted to the Military Works in the Punjab Command.

Major Abbott, Executive Engineer, Simla, proceeds to Rawal Pindi to act as Superintending Engineer, vice Lieut.-Col. Thurburn.

Major G. M. Porter proceeds to Karachi as C.R.E., Sindh District, on the termination of his present temporary employment at the Calcutta Mint.

Capt. C. G. Falcon has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Lieut. W. S. Douglas was accidentally slightly wounded whilst destroying arms at Harrismith on Aug. 10.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Capt. Ruggles-Brise left Capetown on Oct. 25, on passage home in the Dilwara. Lieut. Sir R. M. Filmer, 3rd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Coldstream Guards.—2nd Lieut. A. C. Heywood, 2nd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Scots Guards.—Lieut. Shelley left Cape Town on Oct. 24 in the Dunvegan Castle on passage home.

Irish Guards.—2nd Lieut. the Hon. Claude M. P. Brabazon, third son of the Earl of Meath, has been transferred to the 1st Batn., from the 135th Field Battery at Sheffield.

Royal Scots (1st).—Lieut. E. H. Bellingham has been discharged to duty in South Africa. 2nd Lieut. Ward left Cape Town on Oct. 24 in the Dunvegan Castle on passage home.

East Kent Regiment (3rd).—2nd Lieut. V. J. D. Palmer has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Capt. de Bathe left Cape Town on Oct. 24 in the Dunvegan Castle on passage home. Lieut. Clarke left Cape Town on Oct. 15 in the Nubia, invalided.

Liverpool Regiment (8th).—Lieut. Chaffey 5th Batn., is returning home in the Dilwara, which left Cape Town on Oct. 25. Lieut. Lardner left Cape Town on Oct. 15, invalided, in the Nubia.

Lincolnshire Regiment (10th).—Lieut. Morant left Cape Town on Oct. 25, in the Dilwara on passage home.

CAPTAIN GALL'S SPECIAL PROMOTION CLASS

For ALL or ANY of the Subjects.
TERMS ON APPLICATION.

80a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—Lieut. W. B. Dart has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Suffolk Regiment (12th).—Lieut.-Col. Townley has been granted an extension of 12 months in command of the 2nd Batn.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Major A. R. Lloyd has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—2nd Lieut. R. V. Hunt and Lieut. V. W. H. Young has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Yorkshire Regiment (19th).—Capt. Maitland is returning home in the Dilwara, which left Cape Town on Oct. 25. Capt. E. S. Bulfin have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Lancashire Fusiliers (20th).—Lieut. R. S. Allen has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Scots Fusiliers (21st).—Capt. W. L. D. Baillie was killed at Frederickstad on Oct. 25. Capt. D. H. A. Dick and 2nd Lieut. J. Elliot were wounded on the same occasion. Capt. Baillie was in his 29th year. He joined his regiment in 1894, became captain last February, and the present was his first war experience. Lieut. H. S. L. Alford has been released, and has rejoined the British forces at Mafeking. Lieut. E. H. Finch is reported killed at Frederickstad.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers (23rd).—Capt. H. Delmé-Radcliffe and Lieut. F. H. Nangle are reported as wounded at Frederickstad on Oct. 24. Lieut. W. Best (slightly wounded) is doing duty. 2nd Lieut. H. V. Kyrke has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut. Griffith is returning home in the Dilwara, which left Cape Town on Oct. 25. 2nd Lieut. Bayley left Cape Town on Oct. 15 in the Nubia, invalided.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—Lieut. W. A. G. Williams has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th).—Capt. Monro is returning home in the Dilwara, which left Cape Town on Oct. 25. Mrs. Walter Browne, College Green, Worcester, is forwarding a case of Christmas presents to the 2nd Batn. on Nov. 15. The usual gifts are asked for, but especially plum puddings (in square tins), mince-meat, tobacco, and the like, or money wherewith to buy them.

Border Regiment (34th).—Lieut. Beaty-Pownall is dangerously ill (dysentery).

Hampshire Regiment (37th).—Lieut. G. Brooke has been discharged to duty in South Africa. 2nd Lieut. Falkner left Cape Town on October 25 in the Dilwara, on passage home.

Loyal North Lancashire Regiment (47th).—Lady Farren, Bealings House, Great Bealings, Woodbridge, would be most grateful to any friends of the regiment who would send her tobacco, pipes, plum puddings, &c., by November 9, or money to purchase them. This battalion, under Colonel Kekewich, was in Kimberley throughout the siege. The 1st Batn. will probably spend their second Christmas in South Africa.

Northamptonshire Regiment (48th).—2nd Lieut. S. A. Thompson has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal West Kent Regiment (50th).—Capt. Dalison left Cape Town on October 15 in the Nubia, invalided.

Yorks. Light Infantry (51st).—Lieut. Gatacre left Cape Town on Oct. 24, on passage home in the Dunvegan Castle.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—Major Prince Christian Victor died in Imperial Yeomanry Hospital, Oct. 29.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—Capt. J. E. T. Orlinton has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Lieut. S. M. Rolandson (4th Batn.) has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—Capt. A. F. Egston has been discharged to duty in South Africa; Capt. McEwen left Cape Town on Oct. 24 in the Dunvegan Castle, on passage home.

Royal Irish Rifles (83rd).—Lieut.-Col. Haggard (1st Batn.) will be placed on half-pay on Oct. 28, on completing four years in command of the battalion. Lieut. C. Nelson has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut. Wright left Cape Town on Oct. 15 in the Nubia, invalided.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (87th).—Major Hill left Cape Town on Oct. 25 in the Dilwara on passage home. Lieut. H. J. Atkinson has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st).—Capt. A. B. Cunningham and 2nd Lieut. J. Ramsay have been discharged to duty in South Africa. Capt. Macdonald and Lieut. Macarthur left Cape Town on Oct. 15 in the Nubia, invalided.

Seaforth Highlanders.—Lieuts. C. B. Chamley and C. P. Doig have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Derbyshire Regiment (95th).—Lieut. F. A. C. Wright has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—Capt. MacPherson left Cape Town on Oct. 15, in the Nubia, invalided. Lieut. R. Jackson has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Dublin Fusiliers (102nd).—Capt. H. J. Kinsman has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. H. M. Biddulph 2nd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Army Service Corps.—Major E. C. Thring, and Lieut. E. C. J. Macnulty have been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut. F. B. Lord has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Army Ordnance Department.—Major Sherwood arrived on Oct. 28 at Southampton in the Kinfauns Castle. Capt. W. Hutchings has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Army Veterinary Department.—Major Day has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Vet.-Surg. Lieut. Love arrived at Southampton on Oct. 28 in the Kinfauns Castle.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Major Reade arrived at Southampton on Oct. 28 in the Kinfauns Castle. Major J. W. Jerome is reported injured from a fall from horse at Reitz—left forearm fractured. Capt. F. McDowell and Capt. W. E. Hardy have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Indian Medical Service.—Capt. G. H. Frost has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Indian Staff Corps.—Capt. Moberley left Cape Town on Oct. 25 in the Dilwara on passage home.

Staff.—Brig.-Gen. Little left Cape Town on Oct. 25, on passage home in the Dilwara. Major-Gen. Creagh, C.B., is confirmed as a district commander of the second class in India in succession to Major-Gen. Sir E. R. Elles. The following postings have been made:—A.A.G.'s, Col. Plowden and Major Wadson to the Bombay command; D.A.A.G.'s, Capt. Fowler and Sullivan to the Punjab command; Major Coleman and Capt. Thomas to the Madras command, the former continuing to officiate as A.A.G. Col. Christopher, Commissary-General, Punjab command, has been appointed Commissary-General-in-Chief, in succession to Major-Gen. Hobday, who vacates on Nov. 7. Major Gretton left Cape Town on Oct. 15 in the Nubia, invalided; and the following on the 24th in the Dunvegan Castle on passage home:—Gen. Sir R. Buller, Major-Gen. Sir H. Chermiside, Cols. Miles, Stopford, and Parsons; Lieut.-Col. Wood, Majors Philips, Chichester, Jones, and Schofield, Capt. Sackville-West, Stewart, Boger, Cayzer, Trotter, G. Paget, and Balfour, Lieut. Howard, Lieut. and Qmr. Grimbly. Major Robertson arrived at Southampton on Oct. 28 in the Kinfauns Castle.

Army Chaplains' Department.—The Rev. D. H. Burton left Cape Town for England on Oct. 25 in the Dilwara.

Reserve of Officers.—Major Fraser arrived on Oct. 28 at Southampton on board the Kinfauns Castle. Capt. Hon. E. S. St. Aubyn (in charge), and H. K. Stewart (on passage home), left Cape Town in the Dunvegan Castle on Oct. 24.

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR.

ROSE'S LIME JUICE WHISKY

LIQUEUR

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the Island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO

Cherry Whisky,
Cherry Brandy,
Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—

HUNTSMEN,
COLFERS,

and SPORTSMEN

generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants
Price 54s. per Case of 1 Dozen Quarts, Carriage Paid.

A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.,
41, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

Militia.

Major-Gen. A. E. Turner, Inspector-General of Auxiliary Forces, proceeded last week on inspection duty to Preston, Lancashire, and returned to the War Office on Monday, Oct. 29.

H.M. the Queen has been graciously pleased to accept the voluntary offer made by the 4th Bn. the Devonshire Regiment to serve at a station out the United Kingdom.

Yeomanry.

Ninety-three members of the Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry, which has been selected to represent the Yeomanry of this country at the inauguration of the Australasian Commonwealth, having applied for places in the contingent of two sergeants and 27 men, 41 of the number were ordered to parade at Trowbridge on Saturday, when the commanding officer, Col. Walter Long, M.P., made the selection. The men forming the contingent will receive Army rates of pay. Addressing them, the colonel said he was proud that the premier Yeomanry regiment in England had been selected to send a contingent. They would take part in perhaps the most interesting and important ceremony of our time. Col. Long being unable to go, Major F. Pleydell Goddard, of Swindon, will command the contingent.

The office of the Imperial Yeomanry has been removed from Cleveland House, St. James's Square, to 10, Great George Street, Westminster.

Volunteers.

The official Volunteer year ended on Wednesday, and at the many headquarters throughout the country returns will be at once prepared for the War Office, showing the numbers of efficient on the regimental rolls, upon which the payment of capitation grant and other allowances will be based. As corps will be allowed to include in their efficiency statements this year the officers and men doing duty with the City Imperial Volunteers and the Volunteer service companies in South Africa, while at home many corps have increased in strength and some new corps have been formed as a consequence of the prevalent war enthusiasm, it is confidently anticipated that the 1899-1900 returns will show the force to be larger in numbers than in any previous year, while the number of efficient will have more than proportionately increased. The returns for 1898-99 showed 229,854 enrolled Volunteers, of whom 223,921 were efficient for whom the capitation grant was drawn; and 20,114 officers and sergeants were qualified as proficient for the extra grant. The largest return hitherto made by the Volunteer force was in 1895-96, when there were 236,059 on the rolls and 229,034 efficient.

THE ENTRY OF THE C.I.V.'s.

[BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

There are several points in connection with the home-coming of the C.I.V.'s that deserve more than passing notice. It is, in the first place, perfectly plain that the Metropolitan Volunteers cannot be depended upon to keep the streets against a London crowd. They scout the notion that they had accepted this duty; they only paraded, we are now told, to do honour to their comrades on their return. Yet there must have been some assurance that they meant to serve along the route, or other and better precautions would have been taken. The police, both City and Metropolitan, could do no more than they did, for they were on duty to a man; but the ordinary guardians of the streets are confessedly unequal to restrain such excessive crowds as turn out on special occasions. The question at once arises, why were not the services of the regular troops requisitioned? It is absurd to say that there were none available. Three or four cavalry regiments at least could have been brought up from Aldershot, and there were the usual squadrons of Household Cavalry in the Knightsbridge and Albany Street Barracks. Infantry could have been called in, from 5,000 to 10,000 at least; enough to form a barrier for the greater part of the route. The only conclusion possible is that the nature and extent of the probable demonstration were not properly appreciated. It was, of course, the duty of the Corporation and the organisers of the reception to foresee this, and to ask for the necessary protection. But the authorities themselves cannot be exonerated from all blame, for they could hardly be unaware of what might be expected. The result of it all is that the triumphal entry of the C.I.V.'s degenerated towards the end into a disorderly farce. The heroes whom we desired to honour straggled into the City of London in twos and threes, anyhow, and were hustled and hunted from Temple Bar to St. Paul's, thence again to the Guildhall (approached by a narrow cul de sac, which made ingress and egress most confusing), and on to the banquet on the Hon. Artillery Company's ground till they were utterly sick of the whole show. They had been on the road since eight in the morning when they disembarked at Southampton; from 1 p.m. till 7.30 they were "on view," marching most of the time, and when they reached the great marquee where lunch, as it was absurdly named, awaited them, they were famished and utterly worn out.

It was my fate to attend the banquet, and I was not sorry, despite some personal inconvenience. The demeanour of the C.I.V.'s was an interesting study. They came in with the air of men entitled to their refreshment: they tackled the food set before them in the business-like way of old campaigners, they drank to each other, but soberly, and when they had enough they wanted to go away. The toast-master behind the Lord Mayor cried, "Silence for Grace!" The C.I.V.'s took it their own way, for no sounds were audible, and rose to a man to sing "God Save the Queen," which they carried through verse by verse utterly regardless of the protests of the wretched toast-master. Presently my Lord Mayor gave the Queen's health, and now his henchman struck up the National Anthem, but no one followed him in the tune. The C.I.V.'s had sung it once, of their own accord, and for their own good pleasure; they did not mean to do it again. But about now the C.I.V.'s Adjutant, Captain Bailey, of the Guards, who had eaten his fill, was quietly slipping away, when his men espied him and bade him farewell with loud cheers, and the chorus of "He's a jolly good fellow." They did not care for the speeches, which for the most part they did not hear, and it was not until their own beloved chief, Mackinnon himself, addressed them that they deigned to listen, but standing, for all had put on their hats and kits and were already on the move. What wonder? Their relatives and friends were waiting outside and they had not as yet exchanged a word with them. Colonel Mackinnon himself did not meet Mrs. Mackinnon until he found her in her seat at the banquet, and it was the same with Colonel Cholmondeley. Lord Albemarle had come home sick, ahead of the corps.

So much for the reception and the banquet; the shouting is all over, the rifles have been handed in to store, the corps is to be disbanded. Nothing remains but the notable record that the Volunteer Force has of right taken its place among the regular troops of the British Army. The lesson will not, must not, be lost. It must be utilised in the coming reorganisation of our military institutions, for it has been established beyond all doubt that our citizen soldiers are ready and willing to share in wars beyond sea. We have here the germ of a valuable system which will produce substantial fruit now that Army Reserves available for any service are to be found in the Volunteers.

Reviews.

ARMY REORGANISATION.

The Blackwood for November opens the ball with a paper on "Army Reorganisation," which is to be followed next month by the complement, on the training of the Army and on redistribution with reference to training and mobilisation. Ardent reformers will not be pleased with the assertion, which will probably be found thoroughly justified, that any real measure of reform would take for its elaboration from five to ten years, because as the writer says, we cannot pass from our present state to a condition of complete perfection. The first condition of the proposed reform or reorganisation is to adopt an offensive policy—not one of aggression, but a policy which will secure the co-operation of the home Army with the forces maintained by the Colonies, so as to include all countries and places over which the Union Jack floats all over the world. Hitherto the establishment sanctioned by Parliament has only provided for the defence of our own shores, coaling, and Colonial stations, and for the Army in India. The change will require an increase of the establishment and in the number of recruits required every year. The latter will be nearly doubled, and not less than 80,000 men must be provided annually, with a like number of recruits for the Militia, and the business of recruiting must become national. The old military agency of recruiting will no longer serve; all the great departments of State should, as far as possible, actually second the efforts of the War Office. Every civilian official should be instructed to co-operate with the military agencies in attracting recruits. A permanent committee should be appointed in every county under the Lord-Lieutenant to deal with the supply, and the officer commanding the regimental district should become a member and Deputy-Lieutenant for the county. The War Office must keep its promises. The home which it professes to supply to young men joining the ranks must be provided, and funds must be forthcoming to furnish the requisite means for the training, physical and moral, of the soldier, whilst the nation itself must welcome back to civil employment the soldiers who have completed their term of service. There is, Blackwood thinks, plenty of raw material to furnish 160,000 recruits a year. We hope he is right. Legislation is required to deal with the matter, and, unless it be carried out on national lines, failure must result. For the Militia, thorough elementary training is needful for officers and men, and barracks should be provided for the Militia regiments, to enable them to train during the winter, so as to be able to join the battalions in the annual training. The authorities mean, according to the writer, to do away with the Militia Reserve, and to close the entry of officers into the regular Army through the Militia, which will cease to feed the regular Army, and will be dealt with as a separate force. And it is suggested that the Secretary of State for War should delegate to the Lords-Lieutenant of counties some of his powers, and that county committees should be formed for the Militia with the officer commanding the regimental district as an ex-officio member. He should completely control the auxiliary forces within the area of his command, and be responsible for the number of recruits and the training. The barracks needed should be built by the county authority, clothing, arms and equipment being regarded as a military matter, the action of the Treasury in cutting down estimates ceasing to be legitimate when national interests are concerned. The 128 battalions should be maintained at a strength of four companies, ready to join the territorial regiments within a month after mobilisation, when eight more companies should immediately be raised from the Reserve. The difficulties of officering the Militia may be met by resorting to the old plan of giving power of nomination of commissions to the Lord-Lieutenant and opening a branch at Sandhurst for their instruction, when they would become eligible for Militia staff appointments and transfer to the Line. Dealing with the Volunteers, Blackwood proposes a radical change in a conservative sense. The number of the Volunteer force must be limited to a proper proportion to the numbers of the regular Army and the Militia, and the capitation grant should be abandoned for some other form of subsidy, so that the production of a certain number of efficient who are not up to the physical standard and are under age, should not entitle payment as if for efficient. Let the force be recognised as a partially paid Volunteer auxiliary, taking its place in the third line of Imperial defence with opportunities of joining the fighting line under certain conditions, whilst people unwilling to serve in the Militia or Volunteers, should be obliged to contribute to the county funds for the maintenance of these forces. The Army for many years past has been required to perform its duties with an establishment much below what is necessary for efficiency. The assumption of a defensive policy has led to the subordination of establishments to the desire for economy, and no single regiment, battalion, or battery at home has

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.
£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400
(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT - - - £100 to £185
(Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315
(Chelsen, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILLIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

ever been efficient for war. Men under 20 years of age and those annually required for India must not be borne on the establishment of the home Army, and the terms of service should be modified, so that service up to 20 should be counted as boy service, and service after 20 should be for seven years with the colours and five years with the Reserve. So it will be possible to arrange that the first five years will be spent abroad, and that at the end of the time the men should be brought on the home establishment. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach must by this time become accustomed to dealing with such very large figures in prospect that he will not object to the proposal to pay every soldier a shilling a day and free ration, with a 1d. a day for every year of good service, and 1s. 9d. a day to men in their ninth year of service. At the end of five years we should, according to the writer in Blackwood, have 40 battalions of seasoned troops at war strength—40 battalions to be supplemented after mobilisation by 52,000 Reservists, and 128 half-battalions of Militia as a first and second line of a home Army for offensive or defensive action. For the full exposition of this scheme, we must refer our readers to Maga. It will be observed that the writer carefully avoids any question "of reforming" the head and front of all the offending, according to the numerous and inveterate bands who, in season and out of season, cry, "Down with it! Down with it!" but never are good enough to tell us what is to be built upon the ruins, and what body is to act in lieu of a Secretary of State and his military advisers in Pall Mall.

THE EGYPTIAN QUESTION.

England, Egypt, and the Sudan, by the late H. D. Traill, D.C.L. (Constable and Co.), is a volume of some note upon a well-worn subject. All those who have followed the developments of the question, know Dr. Traill's views. He has little patience with French pretensions, and none with the arguments of those who would advocate a proximate withdrawal from Egypt. It is not possible to read his treatise, which is really a survey of our relations with the country, without seeing how a course of progressive education has gone on among statesmen and writers on the Egyptian question. Lord Palmerston regarded the Suez Canal as a "bubble scheme" from a commercial point of view, taken up on political grounds and in antagonism to English interests and policy. It is obvious that the Minister had no conception of the conditions which would yet arise. Again, when it became necessary for us to occupy the canal in order to protect it from the Arabists, M. de Lesseps telegraphed to Arabi, "Jamais les Anglais n'y pénétreront, jamais, jamais!" But he also was wrong. The singularity of the canal is that it is not internationalised, nor even fully neutralised, but, in the words of Lord Granville, it possesses that neutrality which attaches by international law to the territorial waters of a neutral state, in which a right of innocent passage for belligerent vessels exists, but no right to commit any act of hostility. Dr. Traill is, of course, full of admiration for the high-souled heroism of Gordon, and, therefore, of condemnation for the government which did not support him. He dismisses as contemptible the French assumption of any right to possess Fashoda and the Bahr-el-Ghazal. In regard to our repeated promises to withdraw from Egypt, Dr. Traill offers the remark that Ministers may propose, but that the people dispose, as the solution of the serious questions that have arisen, and may again arise, out of our retention of Egypt. France, which has given repeated assurances that she had no intention of permanently occupying Tunis, cannot decently object, for she has made Tunis her own, and is establishing a naval arsenal at Biserta, notwithstanding declarations of her intentions to the contrary. Again, says Dr. Traill, the conditions of Africa have vastly changed since we went to Egypt, and now it would be difficult to withdraw from a country that would immediately become a prey to the territorial greed of others. His volume is a capable and luminous exposition of the views we have sketched. The motive for the publication of the book at the present time is not quite apparent.

THE SUCCESSORS OF DRAKE.

Mr. Julian Corbett's new volume takes up the theme which he dealt with so ably in his Drake and the Tudor Navy. The Successors of Drake (Longmans and Co.) is a volume wherein he shows his deep insight into a period which hitherto has been imperfectly understood. It has been assumed, rather than proved, that we should look to the years immediately following the Armada as the beginning of Imperial expansion. Mr. Corbett, however, shows that the queen herself had no sympathy with the expansive movement. She was willing enough to share the plunder of buccaneering expeditions, which roused the ire of the Spaniards, but beyond that she was not prepared to go, and a curb was put upon the operations of her seamen. Drake understood very well the strategic conditions, and was prepared to carry the war into the enemy's country, and Raleigh—who does not appear at all favourably in Mr. Corbett's pages—was the literary exponent to whom we are chiefly indebted for our knowledge of the seamen's view. But the successors of Drake directed their efforts amiss, and the Spanish silver fleet was a will-o'-the-wisp which diverted their attention from the real strategic work of the war. Mr. Corbett's book is of particular value at the present time, because it deduces from history a clear demonstration of the fact that a primary necessity for a country like ours is an army thoroughly efficient and ready at every point. So much might have seemed obvious, but it is surprising how difficult it is for such truths to impress themselves upon a national mind. It was the want of an army that balked all the efforts of our seamen who endeavoured to strike a blow at Spain. In this way does Mr. Corbett insist upon the limitation of maritime power, which, he says, did not produce the expected result, because the army was wanting. The seamen were soldiers also, and probably would have used an army well, as, indeed, Mountjoy and Carew did in Ireland. Mr. Corbett's book is an extremely valuable addition to the history of the times, and is full of lucid information and of ripe judgment, marked equally by erudition and by the ability to group facts, and to give them their right proportion. The illustrations are good, and the volume should be widely read.

Literary.

SOLDIERING IN CANADA.

RECOLLECTIONS AND EXPERIENCES.

By Lt.-Col. GEORGE T. DENISON,

Late Commanding the Governor-General's Body Guard
With Portrait. Extra Crown 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., LONDON.

This Day, Price One Shilling.
GUIDE TO OBTAINING

A CAPTAIN'S PROFICIENCY CERTIFICATE FROM THE SCHOOL OF INSTRUCTION.

By Lieut. B. S. INCE, p.e. (Special Certificate), 3rd V.B. Essex Regiment.

London: WM. CLOWES & SONS, LTD., 13, Charing Cross, S.W.

NEW AND CHEAPER IMPRESSION.
2 vols. 8vo, 16s. net.

STONEWALL JACKSON AND THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR.

By Lieut.-Col. G. F. R. HENDERSON.

With an Introduction by Field-Marshal the Right
Hon. Viscount WOLSELEY, K.P., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., &c.

With 2 Portraits and 33 Maps and Plans.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

MR. CONAN DOYLE'S HISTORY OF THE BOER WAR.

Just Published. With Maps. Large post 8vo., 7s. 6d.

THE GREAT BOER WAR.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of "The White Company," "Rodney Stone," "The Green Flag, and other Stories of War and Sport," &c.

Daily News:—"This Sketch of the War is a masterly performance. It is hardly possible to overpraise it. . .
The experience, the artistic sense, and the creative powers of a great writer are seen in the achievement."

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO., 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED FOR REVIEW.

November Magazines.—The Monthly, English Historical, Pall Mall, Edinburgh Review, Macmillan's Longman's, Harper's, Cornhill, Blackwood's, Century, United Service, Humanitarian, National Review, Nineteenth Century, Antiquary, Genealogical.

Modern Broods; Rue with a Difference (Macmillan).
Veterinary Manual for Horse-owners (Everett). Napoleon—the Last Phase (A. L. Humphreys). The War Office, the Army, and the Empire (Cassell). The Maritime Codes of Italy (Eppingham Wilson). A Forest Officer (Methuen). The Flower of the Flock; The Journal of a Jealous Woman (Nisbet). General Gurko's Advance Guard, 1877 (Kegan Paul). War and Policy (Constable).

Parcel of Christmas Cards (Raphael Tuck),

HAMLEY'S OPERATIONS OF WAR.

The publication of a new issue of Sir Edward Hamley's Operations of War may be described as quite a notable event. The book is famous—so famous, indeed, that it is unnecessary to commend it again. It embraces a most remarkable and suggestive study of military operations, throwing a flood of light upon them from the events of history. Messrs. Blackwood have just published a second impression of the fifth edition in two divisions to meet the requirements of Army examinations. The first division contains Sections I. to III., dealing with the modern conditions of war, the conditions which precede the opening of a campaign, and other matters, while the second division includes Parts 4, 5, and 6 of Hamley's work. The whole may be procured in one volume as originally published. The new issue contains all the maps and plans and is in a most convenient and useful form. Many thousands of copies of the book have been sold, and the new issue will no doubt command wide popularity.

SHORTER NOTICES.

We have received Volume XLII. of the Transactions of the Institution of Naval Architects, edited by George Holmes, the secretary of the Institution (Sotheran and Co.). The volume yields in interest to none of its predecessors, for it contains a number of highly valuable papers, amongst them those of Admiral FitzGerald on the "Japanese Navy," of Capt. Russo on "The Rolling of Ships," of Mr. H. B. Wortley on "The Practical Results of some Innovations in Shipbuilding," of Professor Bryan on "The Action of Bilge Keels," and of Signor Schanzer on "Mysterious Fractures of Steel Shafts," besides a great many more which we have not space to note, but which are well known to all interested in naval architecture. The Institution is to be congratulated on the good work it is doing.

Fort St. George, Madras. By Mrs. Frank Penny (Swan, Sonnenschein and Co.). This volume is a short history of our first possession in India from the time when the fort was established by Francis Day in 1639 up to the present time. We have found it full of interest, though a little compression might have been better. Mrs. Penny has had access to the records of Fort St. George, and has made good use of them. The fort was strengthened and partly rebuilt by Governor Master about 1678, when hostile operations on the part of Sivaji were expected. The church is now full of monuments of men who have helped to make the history of Madras, including Francis Hastings, Sir Thomas Monro, Sir Henry Ward, Sir Alexander Campbell, and many more. At one time Elihu Yale, best known in connection with Yale College in America, was governor of the Fort. It capitulated to the French in 1746, and was besieged by Lally in 1758, after which time its history was no longer that of a fortified training station but of a military garrison. Abundant interest will be found in Mrs. Penny's well-compiled pages.

Should I Succeed in South Africa? by a Successful Colonist (Mr. Fred Darrell) (Simpkin, Marshall and Co.), should be read by all who contemplate trying their fortunes in that country. Mr. Darrell holds out high hopes for those who are prepared to work and make a living honestly. "The land is hard, but it blossoms like a rose in answer to labour. The rock is harder than flesh and blood, but brains can devise a way of forcing its doors asunder, and its hidden riches are then poured forth in profusion." The little book is full of hints that should be of value, and among them is a suggestion that it would not be well to leave England before January, 1901.

Gordon's Campaign in China, by Himself, with a short account of the Tai-ping Rebellion by Col. R. H. Vetch, C.B. (Chapman and Hall), is a timely publication, and only needs to be known to be appreciated. It was written by Gordon for the professional papers of the Corps of Royal Engineers, 1871, which were not then published for sale. It was a very happy thought to reprint the short paper.

We have also received Silent Victories, by Mrs. Josephine E. Butler (F. Burfoot, Lewisham), a narrative of spiritual work among soldiers in South Africa; and the Imperial Reciter, edited by Alfred H. Miles (S. H. Bousfield and Co.), which is full of good things, both grave and gay.

Col. Sir Edward T. Thackeray, V.C., has compiled a volume of biographical notices of some 34 deceased officers of the Royal Bengal Engineers, many of whom, as Lord Napier of Magdala, Sir Henry Durand, Sir John Cheape, and others, attained the highest positions as soldiers, administrators, and men of science. The first intention, says the Times, was to include in the volume the names of several distinguished officers now living, but it was found that the book would have assumed unduly large proportions. The work, which will be published early next month by Messrs. Smith, Elder, contains portraits of Lord Napier of Magdala, Major James Rennell, F.R.S., Col. Richard Baird Smith, Major-General Sir H. M. Durand, and Col. Sir John Bateman-Champain.

ST. PAULI

(BREWERY: BREMEN)

LAGER OR PILSENER BEER.

SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER IN THE MARKET.

ANNUAL EXPORT, 12,000,000 BOTTLES.

Supplied to all the Principal LONDON Clubs,

The Messes of the British and German Navies, &c., &c.

AGENTS IN—

EUROPE:

ALDERSHOT.
ATHENS.
CHATHAM.
CONSTANTINOPLE.
GENOA.
GIBRALTAR.
LISBON.
MALTA.
NAPLES.
PORTSMOUTH.
PLYMOUTH.

ASIA:

ADEN.
BAGHDAD.
BANGKOK.
BOMBAY.
BUSHIRE.
CALCUTTA.
CEYLON.
HONG KONG.
KARACHI.
MADRAS.
MAURITIUS.
NOVA GOA.
PENANG.
RANGOON.
SHANGHAI.
SINGAPORE.
TEHERAN.

AFRICA:

ALEXANDRIA.
BEYROUTH.
BONNY.
CAIRO.
MASSOWAH.
MOMBASA.
SUAKIM.
SUZ.
PORT SAID.
TANGIERS.
AMERICA:
ANTIGUA.
BARBADOS.
DEMERARA.
JAMAICA.
MONTEVIDEO.
ST. LUCIA.
TRINIDAD.

And all the Principal NAVAL and MILITARY Stations.

The ST. PAULI BREWERIES CO., Limited
8, Great Winchester Street, London, E.C.JEROME SACCONE,

LIMITED,

GIBRALTAR,
WINE, SPIRIT, & CIGAR
MERCHANTS
TO THE

ARMY & NAVY.

LONDON HOUSE:

15, COCKSPUR STREET.

Wine Shipped FREIGHT FREE to any port in the Mediterranean, and half-freight to India and the Cape.

Telegraphic Addresses:

"Saccone, Gibraltar."

"Saccone, London."

... THE ...

SATURDAY REVIEW

OF

Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review are treated only by Naval and Military men.The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:

8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.

HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,
TREWS,

TARTAN PANTALOONS

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING MILK

AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A PERFECTUNSWEETENED*CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.

AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK

Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS

ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this

good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.

WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.

Apply for particulars, Samples, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,144, New Bond Street,
LONDON, W.TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.

H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOXAppropriately arranged for everyday
as a lasting memento.

PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

SHELTON & BALL,

Military and Court Tailors,

180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

(Opposite Burlington Gardens).

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).

THREE CHEERS FOR THE

RED
WHITE
& BLUE
COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.TRANSVAAL WAR.DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT
THE FRONT A SUPPLY OFBRAND'S BEEF TEA TABULES.To be had of ALL CHEMISTS, GROCERS, and STORES. In boxes of 12, price 2s. 3d.One tabule with boiling water makes a cup of savoury and nutritious Beef Tea.BRAND & Co., Ltd., Mayfair, W.

... THE ...

Royal Navy List.

(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.

Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST

CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER

10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS

(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.

"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—Nautical

Magazine.

Officers are earnestly requested to send
at once their special services to the Editor.WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.Advt. Dept.:—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)

THE

Burton BreweryCOMPANY, LIMITED,

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.

BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.

Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO

Mr. E. RUGGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent;
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street, Alexandria, Egypt.

"Ladysmith."

Owing to the very numerous responses to Messrs. Dickinson and Foster's appeal, space on the canvas of this Memorial picture is now limited, and Officers who should appear in it are asked to communicate personally or by relatives at once.

N.B.—Another Painting confined to the Relief Force is in progress, as to which please apply 114, New Bond St., W.

TEACHER'S

"HIGHLAND CREAM"
SCOTCH WHISKY.

QUALITY UNRIVALLED.

WM. TEACHER & SONS,

Glasgow, London, and Manchester.

Notices.

THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

All EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.		TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year...	£1 8 0	One Year...	£1 12 6
Six Months ...	0 14 0	Six Months ...	0 16 6
Three Months ...	0 7 0	Three Months ...	0 8 6

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid in advance.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE will be forwarded on application.

BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—Price 5s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.

All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

With this number is presented a Coloured Plate of the Canadian Forces.

On December 1 will be issued a Coloured Plate showing Types of Forces in the Smaller Colonies.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1900.

"THE GLAMOUR OF THE STOKE-HOLD."

AS a writer on naval affairs, Mr. Rollo Appleyard is new to us, but this does not especially detract from such value as his article in a recent issue of the Fortnightly possesses. He is a dealer in figures, and with figures much juggling can be effected, as we know. He seems to belong to that growing class of fairly capable civilian writers which dabbles in blue book statistics and Parliamentary returns. The receipt for this kind of magazine article is becoming familiar. Take a few pages of reliable statistics, mix them carefully with personal bias, let them stew in their own juice, and serve with sensational sauce. In plain words, the alarmist naval article is now so common that many an old journalist has caught the trick. Of Mr. Appleyard we know nothing except his pastoral name, and it may be that his object in penning this somewhat pessimistic but amusing article is elintensy patriotic. Up to a certain point his arguments are sound enough. We are, and have been for some time past, short of stokers, engine-room artificers, and engineer officers. The system of training our stokers is defective, since it involves taxing the chief engineer of every newly commissioned ship with some 25 to 30 per cent. of virtually untrained stokers and artificers. These men and petty officers have to be taught every salient detail of their work in sea-going men-of-war. That system is confessedly bad, and may prove actually dangerous to the country at the outbreak of a serious maritime struggle. But Mr. Appleyard does not know his subject well enough to be able to dwell upon this important point, much less to indicate a remedy. He is chiefly concerned to argue upon the short-handedness of the engine-room, both in men and officers, and, in his eagerness to be sufficiently sensational to achieve the glories of print, he exaggerates. Except that the facts are distorted in this way we have no serious fault to find with the writer. It may be that such articles do more good than harm, that they help to direct attention to the joints in our armour. Here, to be sure, is one of the joints, but the weakness is not quite so serious as Mr. Appleyard imagines. Granted that the Navy is short of stokers, artificers, and engineer officers in the junior ranks; it still requires laborious study and thought and knowledge to prove the extent of the deficiency. Our expert Manning Committees have examined these weaknesses and reported upon them in considerable detail. Does Mr. Appleyard assume, we wonder, that the exhaustive reports of such committees are totally and wantonly ignored by successive Boards of the Admiralty? It is very easy, for example, to make the bold assertion that the fleet requires 1,594 engineer officers, but is it quite credible that the Admiralty would be content to make such trifling additions to the lists as are contemplated were there an actual deficiency of 633 officers? In the same free and easy way Mr. Appleyard asserts that we ought to have 37,320 stokers (the critic is precise) as against the 21,473 shown in the latest returns. To man every efficient warship in the fleet we should have, according to Mr. Appleyard's calculations, engineers, artificers, and stokers to the number of 43,076, whereas we have in all but 25,457, or a deficit of 41 per cent! This is a serious accusation to hurl against the Admiralty, even in the name of patriotism. The more discreet patriot may be inclined to pause, and ask himself if the Lords of the Admiralty are quite such short-sighted persons as Mr. Appleyard represents them to be. There is, we quite admit, a deficit, but the precise extent of it is not so easily to be determined. One reason why the deficiency may appear greater than is actually the case is, that in time of peace naval stokers are worked in three watches. The routine of a man-of-war in the piping times of peace obliges officers to employ stokers on certain kinds of work that might be entirely neglected in war. The stoker has to attend certain drills, he has to clean his mess place, to polish bright work, and to keep his clothes in good order. All these matters might be ignored in actual war, and the stoker put in to watch and watch, without, perhaps, putting excessive strain upon his robust frame. Even in war time, our ships would not often be steaming at full speed, or at very high speed. Under easy steam it might be possible to work the engine-room staff in two watches. We do not assert with any dogmatism that this would be done, but it is precisely the sort of inner detail which civilian critics totally ignore. They count the ships and the men, and draw their bald conclusions. They rush impetuously in where engineer officers of some experience fear to tread. There are plenty of naval engineer officers, active or retired, who have proved themselves quite sufficiently skilled with their pens to write movingly of their grievances. Yet hardly one of these officers has alluded to a glaring dearth of stokers. There is, indeed, no reserve of stokers worth mentioning. The stoker is eligible for the coastguard, but once there loses his speciality and is merged into the general body of "boatmen," &c. The pensioner list is probably too old to be of much use in war. The number of stokers in the Reserve would, indeed, as Mr. Appleyard contends, merely suffice, if utilised for the purpose, to provide engine-room complements for the twenty-eight reserve merchant cruisers. This leads him on to assert that it will be impossible to obtain volunteers for the engine-room in war, "The glamour of the stokehold" is declared to be an insufficient inducement. "Depend upon it," he writes, "patriotism draws a mighty distinction between a musket and a coal-shovel." His proposed remedy is to tap the home and colonial labour markets during peace; but we are under the impression that the Admiralty have made considerable efforts already to obtain more stokers in the United Kingdom. We agree with Mr. Appleyard, however, that there should be a considerable reserve of stokers; that the number of officers is too small; and that the system of training stokers is a faulty one. It is not of much use to argue that such and such a ship would steam better if provided with twenty-five per cent. more stokers. The engine-room complement of a modern warship in our Navy already comprise about twenty-six per cent. of the whole ship's company, and the proportion can only be increased at the expense of the combatants proper. But this is another detail which appears to have escaped the attention of Mr. Appleyard.

THE UNITED STATES NAVY.

THE report of Rear-Admiral Melville, chief of the United States Bureau of Steam Navigation, is a very remarkable document. The amalgamation of the executive and engineering branches of the American Navy has not given the results that were expected, although it is fair to remark that Admiral Melville has not lost confidence, and thinks that the Navy Department is to blame for want of promptitude in the matter. It would obviously be impossible to create in the course of a few months expert engineers from the body of executive officers, however intelligent these might be. Admiral Melville strikes an anxious note of warning. So serious is the situation that he would not have been surprised had a series of calamitous events occurred during the past year, owing to the insufficiency of the present force of expert engineers. He thinks a remedy would be found if all executive (or, as Americans call them, "line") officers, below the navigators of ships, were compelled to alternate duty in the engine room with duty on deck, and if quarterly reports were made on the ability they show. The engineer warrant officers appear to be ambitious, and the Admiral thinks they should be kept in their place and not be encouraged to hope that they may some day constitute a full-fledged engineer corps. He does not deny that the events of the past year have brought only discouragement to those most deeply interested in a successful outcome of the new law concerning the personnel. But, as we have said, he attributes the real blame to the Navy Department.

In the dilemma that had arisen, it is recommended that the younger executive officers should be detailed as additional assistants to the chief engineers engaged in inspection work and that the cadets at the Naval Academy should have complete primary instruction giving a sure foundation for subsequent practice in engineering, some of the time now devoted to the old seamanship being given up to it. A number of executive officers have had charge of the machinery of vessels during the past year, and, while their lack of experience has not led to the best results, there has been no carelessness nor lack of attention to the work. "With steam engineering as a line duty, this is pleasant to those who formerly had its entire control, and whose greatest fear might naturally be supposed to be that no efficient engineer officers would succeed them, and that the machinery departments of ships would eventually be controlled by men of a more purely practical education (machinists) incapable of maintaining that constant stress towards increased efficiency found so needful to advance, or of retaining the proud position of steam engineering of the United States Navy at the head of the marine world."

Another matter dealt with in the report is the proposed consolidation of the Bureaus of the United States Navy Department. Admiral Melville is entirely opposed to this change, and he points out that in every large shipbuilding establishment there are different departments under highly trained chiefs, while the nominal head has no pretence to expert knowledge regarding all the branches of the establishment. The Secretary of the Navy is himself in that position, and no man can ever possess the combined education and ability to become an expert in every branch. Admiral Melville, in short, believes that if any attempt is made to consolidate the Bureaus of the Navy Department, nothing can result but confusion, greatly decreased efficiency and greatly increased expenditure.

Navv Notes.

Lord Selborne, who has been selected as First Lord of the Admiralty, is the eldest son of that great lawyer and statesman Sir Roundell Palmer, who was twice Lord Chancellor. Lord Selborne has been Under-Secretary at the Colonial Office during the Administration of Mr. Chamberlain, and it is well known that the Secretary for the Colonies has the highest opinion of his abilities. The evidence taken by the South African Committee showed that Lord Selborne was, for an Under-Secretary, treated with unusual confidence. He is in his 42nd year, and is married to a daughter of the Prime Minister.

Captain Francis Pelly's reported omission to salute the United States flag on arriving last week at New York in the Psyche is undoubtedly incorrect. It appears that he in no way failed to pay the customary compliment to that nation, which, however, was accepted as a recognition of French nationality by a vessel of war of that Republic, then lying in the waters of our Trans-atlantic brethren—an error on the part of our Continental neighbour's representative that is unusual. Captain Pelly's proceedings were undoubtedly complicated by a thick fog prevailing at the time, thereby causing a misconception of his intentions while entering the port.

The late Admiral Sir Charles Middleton, who flourished in the days of Lord Nelson, was credited last week by a daily paper with holding the portfolio of Ministerial Lord of the Admiralty, while on the active list, at the time of the Battle of Trafalgar. This was adduced as a reason for similarly replacing the present holder of that important office. Our contemporary was, however, wrong in such a statement, as Charles, Lord Barham, represented the Admiralty in the Cabinet of that period, and Admiral Middleton was his Naval colleague at Whitehall.

Captain Gerald Langley, of the Nile, having left the Hamoaze to proceed next week to Portland to join the Reserve Squadron, the Commander-in-Chief at Devonport will, for at least a month, be without a flag-captain. Though apparently of no great importance, it really implies that the port admiral has no officer of proper seniority to undertake minor inspections of ships, preside at ordinary inquiries, and carry out other staff duties, without calling on the captains of the scientific establishments, dockyard, or fleet reserves, or training-ship, whose time is well occupied in performing their own important duties. It is somewhat inconsistent that while the general officer in command at Devonport has a chief of the staff and lesser luminaries to assist him, the naval Commander-in-Chief has, virtually, only a personal staff, as his flag-captain may, at any moment, have to proceed to sea, and will in future be absent three months in each year when the Reserve Squadron assembles for that number of evolutionary cruises. The ten tenders and the accountant staff that were recently transferred to the port guardship from the general depot now revert, temporarily, to that establishment during the Nile's absence. This inconvenience can be easily remedied.

The Admiral Superintendent of Naval Reserves assembles the Alexandra, Australia, Benbow, Camperdown, Collingwood, Colossus, Galatea, Howe, Melampus, Nile, Sans Pareil, Severn, Rodney, Thunderer, and Trafalgar, at Portland on Tuesday next for a month's cruise. Considering the paucity of opportunities for junior flag officers to command a division of a squadron, and acquire the necessary experience of that position in fleet manœuvring, it would be advantageous if a Rear-Admiral were appointed with Sir Gerard Noel, as there are to be eleven battleships and four cruisers under his command, and some of the former class are fitted as flagships.

The selection of names for the new vessels of this year's shipbuilding programme is excellent, combining, as it does, the revival of old ship names with, in many cases, a territorial connection, such as we have frequently urged upon the authorities. The Queen as a ship name dates back at least six centuries, and the Prince of Wales, although not of such great antiquity, is not without precedent in olden days. As battleship names these two can hardly be improved upon, but with a correspondent, we quite agree that it would be well now to restore the name of Nelson in a more modern vessel to the line of battle. Apparently the authorities also intend adding to the "Navy List" some of the names of counties which have appeared in the past. We have already the Kent and Essex, Bedford and Monmouth, and now to these are added the Cornwall, Suffolk, Cumberland, Lancaster, Donegal and Berwick. All these names have appeared before, and to nearly all of them interesting stories attach. It is a little uncertain, however, whether they were originally introduced in connection with localities or with persons of distinction connected with the Navy. Pepys, who is mainly responsible for them, seems to suggest that the latter was the reason. In any case the actions in which most of the old ships bearing such names were engaged are deserving of commemoration, while the revival cannot fail to extend the interest of the country in its Navy. The names the second-class cruisers are to bear, Challenger and Encounter, have been borne by vessels in quite recent times. Everybody remembers the cruise of the Challenger for scientific purposes, and the exploits of the Encounter in China are as household words in the Navy. The sloops will be called Odin and Merlin. The Odin we took from a Dutch prize, and Merlin dates back to Queen Elizabeth's days.

The connection of the Royal Mathematical School of Christ's Hospital with the Navy is very ancient, and in years gone by the officers of the navigating branch were very largely supplied from this source. Since, however, the master line was abolished it became necessary to find some other branch of the Service with which to keep up the connection, and this has been successfully achieved, as a recent report issued from the school tells us. The number of Mathemats at any time between January, 1882, and October, 1900, has never exceeded fifty-five, and for some years past has been less than twenty, and a consideration of the last fifty-five boys on the Royal Mathematical School Register, who have been removed or discharged, shows that five obtained Naval cadetships, three took engineer studentships, five became assistant clerks, seventeen joined the merchant service, one obtained a scholarship at the Naval School, Eltham, one was removed to the Latin School, and one will compete for a clerkship in November next. Since January, 1882, twenty-one boys have obtained assistant clerkships, nine engineer studentships, eight naval cadetships, while more than seventy have joined the merchant service, and of these latter two at least have obtained commissions in the Royal Navy, while a large number are members of the Royal Naval Reserve. Nor have the Mathemats come out badly in the competitions for the Navy. In June, 1898, Mr. R. Haves passed in first as an assistant clerk, and in November of the same year Mr. C. F. Webber succeeded in the same way. In November, 1889, Mr. Fenn passed in eighth at the examination for assistant clerks, and in June, 1897, Mr. Cutfield took the thirteenth place in the same examination. The highest place taken by an engineer student appears to have been that of Mr. Briston, who passed in tenth in April, 1896. In the circumstances above detailed it seems extraordinary that the list in the Mathematical School is not more closely filled. A fairly large number of nominations are open to the sons of Naval and Marine officers, the children of officers who have specially distinguished themselves, or of widows having a special claim. There was a time when, by the action of the Charity Commissioners, it seemed possible that the long connection between the school and the Navy might be terminated, but owing mainly to the energy and perseverance of Mr. T. W. Lambert, the Director of Greenwich Hospital, the old rights were restored, and it is quite as well that the value of the school in the direction we have pointed out should be brought under the notice of naval men.

The Chesney Gold Medal, founded in memory of Sir George Chesney, and to be awarded from time to time by the Council of the Royal United Service Institution to the author of "an original literary work treating of naval or military science, and having a bearing on the welfare of the British Empire," has just been given away for the first time. Captain A. T. Mahan, of the United States Navy, the well-known writer on naval history, has the honour of being its first recipient, and it has been awarded him in consideration of the three great works of which he is the author, "The Influence of Sea Power on History," "The Influence of Sea Power upon the French Revolution," and the "Life of Nelson." It is particularly interesting that the first Chesney gold medal should have been given to a writer from whose works we draw such an entirely different lesson to that which the famous allegory "The Battle of Dorking" was intended to teach the general public. But although the late General Chesney did not, so far as we are aware, come under the influence of Captain Mahan, and had not attained to the conception of the value of sea power which it has more recently received, we feel certain that he would as little have questioned the propriety of the judgment of the Council of the Institution as will the countrymen at large. We may regret that the medal should not have gone to one of our own naval and military writers, but remembering that Captain Mahan has done more than any other living man to awaken the citizens of the Empire to a sense of their responsibility, and to the fact that its very existence depends upon Britain's supremacy at sea, it must be ungrudgingly acknowledged that he has been most deservedly selected for this special honour.

A correspondent, appropos to the suggestion that the Duke of Norfolk should become the First Lord of the Admiralty, relates the following anecdote. It was at the time of the late Shah's visit to this country, and when, that potentate being at Portsmouth, the flagship of the Channel Squadron was prepared for a visit should he desire to go on board. A lieutenant was in charge of the main or battery deck, with instructions to admit only those with passes. Presently a mortal in plain clothes appeared. "Who the deuce are you, sir?" queried the lieutenant; "some newspaper beggar, I suppose. Out you go!" The mortal thereupon beat a hasty retreat to the upper deck; but, instead of going aft, went forward, and on the fore-castle encountered the chief boatswain, who, true to the oral traditions of his race, gave the intruder some good "round ones." The flag-captain happened to be near the chief boatswain, and, although he was moderate in his expressions, did not fail to display his usual temper. Fortunately the Admiral from the poop witnessed the dilemma, and sent one of his staff to extricate the individual in plain clothes. The stranger, then young, was a nobleman and one of the officers of State, none other than the Duke of Norfolk himself. Our naval readers will be able to place names to the remainder of the dramatic personæ.

Here is another story about the visit of the Shah in 1873. The Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth was directed to entertain his Majesty at luncheon. The Port Admiral, remarkable for self-importance, pomposity and exclusiveness, could find the eatables, but the question arose: where was the function to be held as there was no ballroom in Admiralty House nor any apartment spacious enough, while a Shah could not be put under a canvas tent. "My Lords," importuned on the subject, allowed £200 for the purpose. The Port Admiral had a wily and astute officer on his staff who saw that this was a favourable opportunity of obtaining a frequently-asked for, and as often refused, ballroom at the official residence of his chief by the conversion of the temporary apartment for the Shah's luncheon. Twenty-seven years ago the expenditure of stores and labour was not so closely watched as in the present year of grace, otherwise the salon du Roi at Admiralty House, Portsmouth, would not have come into existence quite so easily.

A REUTER telegram from Gibraltar says that the sham fight which was held on Wednesday, Oct. 31, the scheme embodying the general defence of the Rock, resulted in the success of the defence under Major-Gen. Slade. The searchlights played for several hours and eventually detected the enemy, which was represented by torpedo vessels. The telegram adds that the operations clearly showed that any hostile fleet would be sighted and destroyed on its approach.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each, or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Messrs. T. & Co., Importers, 40, Strand, London, or of Agents.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE TEOFANI'S HIGH-CLASS CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition, 1900.

Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

Navy Personal.

Captain H.R.H. the Duke of York has graciously consented to become President of the Royal Naval Benevolent Society in the vacancy caused by the death of H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

Admiral Charles Rowley on Saturday last presided at the distribution of prizes at the Royal School for Daughters of Officers of the Royal Navy and Royal Marines, St. Margaret's, Islworth, and was able to inform the supporters of the Institution that the report of the Oxford examiner was most satisfactory, and discipline had been creditably maintained.

Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Stephenson, Extra Equerry to the Prince of Wales, arrived in London on Tuesday evening from the Continent, in attendance on H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson leaves Berehaven with the Channel Fleet under his command on the 12th inst., for Gibraltar.

Rear-Admiral (retired) Frederick W. Hallows, who served in the Naval Brigade before Sebastopol 1854-55, will preside, on the 15th inst., at the annual dinner of the Crimean Veterans residing at Portsmouth and near that port. The chair has, on previous anniversaries, been filled by that gallant and distinguished general, Sir George Willis, but he, unfortunately, is too ill to meet his old naval and military friends in this last year of the nineteenth century.

Captain Edward H. Gamble, of the Cæsar, arrived at Gibraltar on Monday last to embark the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Civil Lord of the Admiralty for Malta, and will leave for the latter port in the course of the week.

Captain Frank H. Henderson, of the Hermes, left Bermuda on Sunday last for Devonport, after being only twelve months in commission. In consequence of the defective state of this vessel's propelling machinery, she will, in all probability, be paid off, and her officers and crew transferred to another cruiser.

Captain H. T. May, of the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, joins the Committee of the Royal United Service Institution, in place of Captain the Hon. Walter Stopford, who recently commissioned the Pallas. It is hoped that Captain May will take advantage of his proximity to the lecturing theatre in Whitehall, and deliver lectures on professional subjects, in addition to those he undertakes in his official position at our principal naval educational establishment.

Captain Frederick G. Stopford, of the Pearl, left Halifax, N.S., on Saturday last to pay off that cruiser at Devonport, after being three years in commission.

Captain the Hon. Walter Stopford, of the Pallas, left Portsmouth on Friday of last week for the North America and West India station, to replace the Pearl.

Captain Sir Alfred Jephson, who died in London on September 13 last, left estate valued at £16,205.

Captain John G. M. Field, of the Marathon, left Shanghai on Monday last for Trincomalee to rejoin the East India Squadron, from which he was detached when complications arose in China.

Captain Alban Tate, of the Iactolus, has rejoined the Channel Fleet at Berehaven, after his recent visit to Oporto and Lisbon, during which he was honoured with the presence of their Majesties the King and Queen of Portugal on board his command.

Captain (retired) Edmund B. Van Koughnet, Divisional Transport Officer at Natal, is returning home, and has been presented with a piece of plate by the mercantile and shipping community at Durban.

Captain Hugh P. Williams, of the Sybilie, left Plymouth on Wednesday last with a torpedo-boat for the Cape of Good Hope.

Captain Henry R. P. Floyd, of the Fearless, arrived at Portsmouth on Friday in last week to pay off that vessel.

Commander Scott H. W. Gray, recently invalided from the Halcyon, in the Mediterranean, is a patient in the Royal Naval Hospital, Plymouth.

Commander P. Vaughan Lewes, of the Hazard, arrived at Devonport on Friday in last week to pay off that vessel after an eventful commission in the Mediterranean. During that period he was promoted to his present rank, a sub-lieutenant was given a lieutenant's commission and awarded the distinguished Service Order, and the medical officer was specially promoted Staff-Surgeon and decorated with the Victoria Cross, for the daring and gallantry displayed by them respectively during the Cretan insurrection, 1898. Such rewards among a small complement of officers is exceptional, but they richly deserved them.

Commander Oliver Young, the only Naval representative in the new Parliament, is about to proceed to the South of France and Italy.

Commander J. D'Arcy Irvine (retired), has been transferred from the Naval Pensions List for Lieutenants, to that of the Travers Pension. He was awarded the former in 1882.

Commander Duke A. Crofton, the Senior Commander, and Lieut. F. W. Loane, the Senior Lieut., on the Active List, both retire. The former after thirty-seven years' service, eighteen of which were in his present rank, and the latter with nearly thirty-one years' service, including twenty-two in the rank he now holds. As Commander Crofton's retirement is not compulsory, he must have joined the Service prior to attaining the age of thirteen. He obtained Commander's rank at the comparatively early age of thirty-two, and was not more than twenty when promoted Lieutenant by meritorious examination at the Royal Naval College.

Staff Commander Richard J. Rogers, Assistant Staff Captain at Devonport, relieves Staff Captain J. B. Johnson, Queen's Harbour-master of Plymouth Sound, on the compulsory retirement of that officer during the current month.

Commanders (retired) Willoughby Still and Ford E. W. Lambert are granted Greenwich Hospital pensions for retired Lieutenants.

Lieut. (senior) Arthur Halsey, of the Philomel, who for nearly a year has been attached to the Field Force in South Africa, arrived at Durban on Friday in last week with the remainder of the Naval Brigade he has so gallantly commanded, and for which he is worthy of special recognition. Of his own ship's company twenty-five of thirty-three, and of the men from the Tartar eighteen of twenty-nine, returned with him to rejoin their respective ships, thus showing a loss of thirty per cent. of the original force. The good people of Durban heartily acclaimed their arrival, and the Town Council entertained them prior to embarkation.

Paymaster Thomas G. B. Wonnall, promoted from the Halcyon, arrived home on Monday last by the P. and O. steamship Parramatta from the Mediterranean to join the Blonde when commissioned on 20th inst.

Chief Engineer W. D. Choape, paid off from the Barracouta at Simon's Town, is returning home in the transport Dilwara, instead of taking passage in the Scylla.

ROYAL MARINES.

Lieut.-General Arthur French, R.M.A., Major-General W. P. Wright, Colonel W. Campbell, R.M.A., Lieut.-Colonel Parkins Hearle (retired), and Majors H. G. Cotterill, L. C. Peters, and H. Neville White have undertaken to form a committee to decide at a future period on the form of memorial to officers and men of the Royal Marine Force who were killed, or died of wounds or from disease, during the campaigns in South Africa and China.

Lieut.-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel William T. Adair's selection for the appointment of Assistant Adjutant-General of the Royal Marine Force is undoubtedly well merited, both by his professional qualifications and recent services in South Africa; but it is unusual for the two senior officers on the staff at the Admiralty to belong to the Light Infantry Division. The A.A.G.'s post has been held by an officer of the latter branch for the past seven years, excepting the short period of the current year in which Major James H. Bor, R.M.A. performed the duty, and three years more will probably elapse before an artillery officer may expect the appointment or ten years since one of that division occupied it.

Major R. F. Percy and Lieut. Percy Molloy embarked in the Glory at Portsmouth on Thursday last. Lieut. T. B. A. Leahy, R.M.A., now in China, joins her when she arrives on that station.

Captain J. D. N. Wyley, R.M.A., embarked in the Blake on Tuesday last, in command of detachments for the Mediterranean station, and will relieve Captain John Brough, R.M.A., of the Rupert.

Captain R. D. Beith relieves Major A. E. Marchant, of the Monarch; and Lieut. G. Y. Russell, R.M.A., fills the vacancy in that vessel caused by the invaliding of Lieut. W. S. Poë, R.M.A., invalided in July last.

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd. 23, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

About

LEMCO

the Soldier's Mainstay.

Lemco is the original Liebig Company's Extract, the only meat extract manufactured under the supervision of J. v. Liebig and his successors. Every jar bears his signature in blue.

Her Majesty's Government has ordered for the front enormous quantities of Lemco. The entire product of thousands of selected bullocks has been supplied in special regulation tins. See the name "Lemco" (the manufacturers' initials) on every jar of

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT.

Navy Foreign.

In the Rivista Marittima, of October, is contained the official account of the Duke of the Abruzzi's expedition to the Polar regions, accompanied by portraits of the Duke himself, of Captain Cagni, who accomplished the "Farthest North," and of some other officers. Our readers will be glad to be informed of this fact. It will be remembered that Nansen's achievement took him to latitude 86 deg. 14 min. Unfortunately the Duke of the Abruzzi, owing to a severe frost-bite, was compelled to submit to the amputation of the extreme phalanges of two fingers of his left hand, and thus had to leave the command in the hands of Captain Cagni. That gallant and enterprising officer, accompanied by three men whose names deserve to be recorded—Canepa, Petigax, and Fenouillet—proceeded with sledges, and attained a northern latitude of 86 deg. 33 min. approximately in the 65th degree of East Longitude. They discovered that Petermann Land, which Payer thought he saw, does not exist. The story given by the Rivista Marittima is full of interest, and is a record of enterprise, endurance, and hardship cheerfully borne, of which the Italians may be proud.

Once again does the heading "The Invasion of England" attract our attention. It is the title of an article by Captain Vignot, in the Marine Française of October 15, with an object lesson. In February, 1692, Louis XIV. conceived a new project for a descent upon England, which ended by the burning of his fleet at La Hogue. Tourville's fleet was to set sail on April 20, and twenty ships from Toulon, commanded by D'Estrées, was to transport the invading force under command of Marshal de Bellefonds. The troops were to embark at La Hogue, where, at a bad time of the year, 300 transports, seventy ships of the line, 18,000 infantry, 4,000 horses and guns, munitions, and stores were to be assembled. Seamen were wanting, not all the ships were ready, and D'Estrées failed to arrive. But no choice remained to Tourville; the royal orders had left him no discretion at all. The ships were to leave Brest on the appointed day, even if the English should prove to be in superior numbers outside, and Tourville was to engage his adversary in whatever strength they might be, and to pursue them to their ports; and if he should be unsuccessful, he was to save the army as well as he could. He was to fight with tenacity—opiniâtre le combat—so that even if he were at a disadvantage the descent of the troops might still take place. Captain Vignot says these blind orders marked the abandonment by France of her attempt to command the sea. If Tourville had been left to act at his own discretion, "England would have been invaded, France would probably have remained the great naval Power of the West, there would have been no Nile, no Trafalgar, no Fashoda." This is an historical judgment which must be taken for what it is worth. It is intended to attract attention to the subject once more, and Captain Vignot says that there are two schools in France—one comprising those who would concentrate effort entirely upon an invasion of England, the other consisting of those who advocate more extended effort and an attack upon our colonies and commerce. He proposes to discuss the merits of the two policies later on.

An anonymous writer in the same publication is quite convinced that the argument which has arisen concerning the Boiler Committee has brought about the retirement of "Lord" Goschen. According to this authority, Mr. Goschen's "mistake" in this matter outweighed all the good he has done for the British Navy. Apparently the writer's opinions are deduced from the speech of "Sir" Arnold Forster in the House of Commons, which is said to have had a profound effect upon the British public. These remarks show how easy it is even for men who know their subject to fall into errors in regard to the affairs of other countries than their own.

It is interesting to learn that the French Government has been at great pains to facilitate telegraphic communication between officers and men serving with the expeditionary corps in China and their friends at home. Telegrams are transmitted at one-half the usual tariff, the condition being that they shall relate to family affairs and shall be transmitted in a collective telegram through the office in Paris to the Commander-in-Chief in China. For every ship special telegraphic addresses have been arranged, distinct in each case for officers, warrant officers, petty officers and seamen, and in the same way for the various branches of the military forces. Moreover, the telegraph company have decided that sailors and soldiers, as well as their relatives and friends in France, may make use of telegraphic addresses previously arranged, these sharing the benefit of the half-rate fee, and being registered without charge. The official telegraphic addresses have been published in the usual channels for such communications.

The Danzer's Armee Zeitung of Vienna gives a very interesting account of combined naval and military manoeuvres which took place on the Danube, twenty kilometres below Komorn, at the end of August, the Danube flotilla and the 66th Brigade of Infantry taking part. The southern force—which included five battalions of infantry, a squadron, a battery and bridging troops, protected in its operations by the monitors Szamos and Körös, with a sloop—was to attempt to cross the river at Nyerges Ujfalu and at Gran, while the 66th Brigade made a demonstration of crossing in the neighbourhood of Duna Alamas and Zsitato. The northern army had despatched a battalion of chasseurs and part of a squadron with the monitors Maros and Leitha and a torpedo boat as an observing force, and the monitors took the initiative by steaming up the river, and, discovering the ships of the enemy, opened fire at a range of 5,000 metres. A battery of the southern forces established on the hill to the south of Neszmely thereupon began to shell the northern monitors, but these were cleverly manoeuvred, and, discovering no signs of an attempt to cross the river at that place, retired towards Gran under fire from the shore. Another engagement took place in which the Szamos, the leading ship of the southern side, by threatening to ram, obliged the Leitha to present her bows, and, coming under a heavy fire from the shore, and being attacked by superior forces afloat, she was adjudged out of action. The same took place in the case of the Maros and the torpedo boats; and the northern flotilla being thus destroyed, the southern troops commenced to cross the Danube at half past three in the morning. The operation was completed at 9 a.m.

The Kronstadtski Viestnik says that the Russian battleship Kniaz Potemkine Tavritchesky, which was launched at Nikolaieff on October 9, displaces 12,585 tons, and that she is practically identical with the Tri Sviatitelia (Three Saints). She was put in hand in September 27, 1897. Her armament comprises four 12-in. breech-loaders, fifteen 6-in., fourteen 3-in., and sixteen 14-in. quickfirers, as well as five submerged torpedo tubes, of which one is in the bows and two are on each broadside.

We have not hitherto found space to refer to the launch of the Spanish armoured cruiser, Cataluña, which took place at Cartagena on September 24. The vessel is a sister of the Maria Teresa, Oquendo, and Viscaya, which were lost in the battle of Santiago, but has some improvements. She displaces 6,709 tons, and is 348ft. long with 61ft. beam, and 21ft. 6in. draught, and engines developing 15,000 horsepower with forced draught, to give a speed of 20 knots. The cruiser will be well protected, and have a principal armament of two 11in. and ten 5.5in. guns. Wood has been very little used in the construction.

It is impossible to forecast the policy of the Spanish Government in relation either to naval or military matters. The late Government—or at least many of its members—hoped to put the sea and land defences upon a firm footing, and to re-constitute the forces which have remained in an unsatisfactory state since the war with the United States. The naval programme of the Cabinet which has just resigned proposed the building of not less than eight battleships of 12,000 tons, four armoured cruisers of 8,000 tons, and 100 various torpedo crafts. We understand that it was contemplated to confide a great deal of the work to French yards, and that the establishment at La Seyne demanded a period of ten years within which to complete that which it was to have undertaken, payment being spread over a period of twenty-five years. It is now likely that this extensive scheme will be abandoned.

The re-organisation of the Turkish Navy is not quite easy to accomplish. The Mahmoudieh, which is to be rebuilt by Messrs. Ansaldo at Genoa, has been unable to leave the Golden Horn. She was about to put to sea, when it was discovered that her boilers were quite incapable of maintaining adequate pressure of steam. Most of the tubes were found to be defective, and the old ship had to be docked. Yet, four months ago, the Mahmoudieh and several of her sisters were to have left for the Italian port.

THE Union-Castle liner, Britannic, which left Cape Town on Oct. 6 with officers and men on passage home, arrived at Southampton on Monday with Col. Rainsford-Hannay, R.A., in command. The list of officers expected by her appeared in our "Regimental" columns last week.

BOER COURAGE.—About Boer courage there is no doubt, if it is called for in its natural place—not to face a bayonet charge. We have been too prone to sneer at their reluctance to stand up before what correspondents, airing their French, call "l'arme blanche." I don't think the British farmer, out fowling, would be thought the worse of if he bolted before a boy who made at him with a gun, a bayonet at the end of it, although he had half a dozen bullets inside his own. Every man should get his due. The Boers never said they could fight in the open—it was not their way. They had fought behind a boulder ever since they took the country from the Kaffir, and boulders are a necessity to them, just as "line or column" is to us. So long as we played the game and attacked the boulders, Boers were a match for us. It was no disparagement to their bravery that they always ran away, but they had killed a hundred or more of us and sent away their ponies and their guns first.—From "The War Operations in South Africa," by a military contributor, in Blackwood's Magazine for November, 1900.

OUR SOLDIERS UNDER FIRE.—"Linesman," writing in the November Blackwood, describes the demeanour of the rank and file under fire. He says:—"I have seen soldiers make more fuss over the upsetting of a perambulator than they did over the shouting of those grim messengers from the far-off kopje. Some slept, others lay grumbling at the spoilt dinner, a few took a mild interest in the destination of the shells, and laughed a little when they fell and burst in a totally different spot to what they had expected, or laughed a good deal when they fell and did not burst at all, as often happened. It was not an action, it is true, but it was 'being shelled,' and shelled at one's very front door; so surely one had a right to look for a blanched face or two, or even a nervous manner in some of the younger soldiers. These shells did not even kill the usual dog, and when they ceased (and the Boer gunners were, no doubt, counting the heaps of slain through their field-glasses) the hungry shelterers trooped back to their 'dixies,' and wasted not a thought upon them, until the 'Maconochie' had vanished, and there was nothing else to think of. Then came Colenso. What finer frolicking ground for all the human emotions could be invented for all save one—the thrill of triumph? Hope, anger, fear, mortal terror, grief, bitter disappointment, humiliation, despair—were there not grounds for them all and room for each? When had a great British army, complete in equipment, primed with health and confidence, led by a famous general—when had such an invincible machine ever failed before? Yet when did beaten men ever walk more calmly back from disaster than did those shattered brigades from that death-dealing river-bank, with the sun eating out of their very senses above, and their legs failing from fatigue beneath them? A joke during such an Inferno? I heard many, and many a grumble too, best sign of all, and many a regretful reference to the beer they knew they couldn't get and the beef they very strongly felt they ought to get. Brave men with hearts aright, not untouched by the horrors jostling you on every side; not unmoved even when poor Bill, next man to you, 'oh'd' forth his soul suddenly and awfully with a bullet in his brain; not unmindful of the tragedy you were acting, or of 'what they would say at home,' but brushing it all aside in the hope that a defeat cheerfully taken might be no defeat at all. You were right, many an illusion born of barrack-room life was chased and beaten that day; you learnt to know each other, and your officers learnt to know you so well during those hours of agony, that instead of 'My men,' many a one was fain to whisper 'My children.'"

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died.)

Near BETHLEHEM, Oct. 26.

Imp. Yeo.—WOUNDED: 1st Batn: 11603 Carrabin, 7th Co: 2251 Illaley.

Gren. Gds.—2nd: WOUNDED: 2517 Bowler, 4671 Deysworth, 4328 Wedme, 2455 Furniss.

Scots Gds.—2nd: KILLED: 2422 Holmes, 2175 Houston. WOUNDED: 2nd Lieut. Lord Grosvenor; Sgt. 528 Robertson; L.-Cpl. 1682 Crossthwaite; Ptes. 1942 Dendy, 8307 Healey, 6919 Colvey, 2681 Perkins, 9747 Morrison, 1735 Pocock.

Worcester.—1st: KILLED: 5901 Hill. WOUNDED: Cpl. 5084 Moore; L.-Cpl. 2582 Soley.

JACOBSDAL, Oct. 25.

Cape Town Highrs.—KILLED: Sgt. 767 Acres; Cpls. 850 Barlow, 918 Pringle; Bugler. 469 Clark; Ptes. 1080 Kennedy, 1016 Kennedy, 1211 Hendry, 1006 Pope, 1065 Kirkwood, 1085 Poitill. WOUNDED: Cpl. 78 Ralston; Ptes. 1107 Baker, 1068 Bell, 369 Digue, 1005 Moore, 710 Small, 1049 Armstrong, 1001 Manners, 1110 Newstead, 1083 McConaghy, 1143 Carter, 999 M. McKenzie, 918 O. McKenzie, 821 Loxton, 733 Marting, 1225 Simpson.

P. A. O. Cape Arty.—KILLED: 404 Rodger.

FREDERICKSTAD, Oct. 19-25.

Marshall's Horse.—WOUNDED: Lieut. Mullins; Ptes. Walker, McLelland.

L.L.H.—KILLED: 752 Simpson. WOUNDED: Sgts. 163 Wileman, 225 Wellsted; Cpl. 476 Carson; Tprs. Walker, Beale, Johnson, Milling, 825 Bowden.

R.F.A.—78th Batt.: WOUNDED: 21738 Montgomery, 76242 Funnell.

R.G.A.—6th Co. (E.D.): WOUNDED: 31156 Hamlet.

Scots Fus.—KILLED: Lieut. Finch; Cpl. 2742 Muir; Ptes. 2940 Clarke, 2436 Holland, 5015 McGavin, 6267 McCulloch, 6274 Moore, 3105 Kenzie (? 5739) O'Connor. WOUNDED: 2nd Lieut. Bruce; Col.-Sgt. 958 Taylor; Sgts. 2009 Lavie, 5199 Lever; Cpl. 4390 Mallon; L.-Cpl. 3109 Rowberry; Ptes. 1133 Robertson, 1446 Cooper, 6077 Campbell, 5276 Boland, 3732 Finlay, 1123 Birse, 3789 McAllister, 5975 King, 2579 Sims, 4174 McDonald, 5495 Powell, 2584 Quin, 1828 Hart, 5390 Duncan, 2987 Tandy, 2344 Hunt, 3471 Watt, 3217 Quinn, 726 Watt, 3271 Brighton, 3237 Steuart, 2846 Fleet, 5842 Johnstone, 1719 Thompson, 3857 Bendle, 2652 Roach, 5868 Nelson, 2832 MacAdams, 2658 Johnston.

Welsh Fus.—KILLED: L.-Cpls. 3049 Morris, 5156 Underwood; Ptes. 3824 Thomas, 2084 Foley, (2096?) William, 1232 G. Jones, 1787 W. Evans, 3826 R. Jones, 5729 Thomas, 5743 Barnett, 3288 W. Jones, 6015 Lockett, 862 Godfrey. WOUNDED: Capt. Delmé-Radcliff; Lieuts. Nangle Best; Cpls. 5645 Eynon, 5800 G. Jones, 1019 Richardson; L.-Cpls. 2353 Bat son, 5197 Taylor; Ptes. 1913 Williams, 3610 Hancock, 2863 Morris, 6001 Dury, 2710 Manus, 5667 Cross, 3165 Hampton, 5997 Fernalow, 3773 Staddon, 2311 George, 1812 Gelder, 1311 Parry, 5984 Dawson, 2280 Lewis, 5193 Pegg, 2794 J. E. Jones, 2499 Williams, 3561 J. H. Smith, 4087 Davis, 4072 Willock, 1630 Phillips, (? 2666) Roberts, 2351 Fisher, 3387 Morgan, 2610 J. Smith, 1028 Riley, 5533 Radfern, 1264 Lloyd, 5553 J. Evans, 3138 Aston, 2524 Edwards, 2336 Leak, (? 2311) J. Jones, (? 989) Matthews, 6121 Savage, 3414 D. Smith, 3088 Humphries, 2282 Manning. MISSING: Ptes. 3331 J. Evans, (? J. Edwards, 6026 Richards.

A.S.C.—WOUNDED: 9945 Healy.

MISCELLANEOUS.

12th Lancers.—3280 Allen, 3875 Howarth, missing, believed prisoners, Rustenburg, Oct. 6.

17th Lancers.—4477 Cowan, wounded, Kroonstad, Oct. 21.

18th Huss.—4216 L.-Cpl. Thomas, wounded, Krugersdorp, Oct. 1.

Imp. Yeo.—6th Co.: 1047 Sh.-Sm. Myatt, wounded, Tigerkloof, Oct. 28. 8th: 5129 Fielding, accidentally wounded, Harrismith, Oct. 28. 23rd: 2719 Jones, 2654 Crowther, wounded, between Vaal River and Hoopstad, Oct. 23. 41st: 4672 Whitfield, wounded, Tigerkloof, Oct. 28. 44th: Capt. Rickards, wounded, Krugersdorp, Aug.

31; previously reported as Capt. Richards, 31st Batt. R.F.A. 51st: 13016 Conlie, missing Kaffirskraal, Oct. 24. 52nd: 13174 Webster, wounded, Kaffirskraal, Oct. 24. 73rd: 13525 McAllister, killed; 13558 Radford, missing, Kaffirskraal, Oct. 24. 74th: Carrigan, wounded, Hoopstad, Oct. 23. 78th: L.-Cpls. 16075 Sprunt, 16079 Morgan, 15805 Duncan, wounded, Phillipolis, Oct. 27.

Irregular Horse.—Loch's: 170 L.-Cpl. von Wiedt, wounded, Taaiibosch, Oct. 24. Marshall's: Lieut. Forbes, Ptes. Howell, Peters, released, now at Mafeking. Roberts's: 1231 Lowch, wounded, Oct. 22.

Cape Police.—121 Cpl. O'Connell, 901 Thomas, 517 Chadborne, 810 Fentham, killed: Ralan, 242 Brown, 310 Thornley, 359 Blair, 1152 Peachey, wounded; between Vaal River and Hoopstad.

O. R. Col. Police.—491 Anderson, 464 Sgt. Whale, missing*, have rejoined, Harvey, wounded, Vlok (late Roberts's H.), prisoner, Luckhoff, Oct. 21; Macpherson, wounded, Bethulie, Oct. 29; F. A. Stuart, reported missing was killed in action, Oct. 13.

C.M.R.—2654 Grant, 3027 O'Hassel, 3394 Miller, killed, Lieut. Rolfe, wounded, nr. Hoopstad, Oct. 23.

Mtd. Rifles, Can.—2nd: 326 Weaver, missing, nr. Wonderfontein, Oct. 22.

Mtd Inf., Queensld.—301 King, wounded, Oct. 25.

Bushmen, N.S.W.—1163 Ball, wounded, Lichtenburg, Sept. 28; Capt. Brown, 883 L.-Sgt. Tebbutt, 540 Cairnes, 361 Edmonds, wounded; 1318 Sgt. Watt, missing, Kaffirskraal, nr. Zeerust, Oct. 24. N. Z. 4th (Roughriders): 1458 Pile, 1297 Kerr, wounded, Kaffirskraal, nr. Zeerust, Oct. 24.

R.F.A.—83rd: 25652 Act. - Bombr. Coughtrey, wounded, Oliphant's River, Oct. 23.

R.G.A.—74662 Minter, wounded, Kaffirskraal, nr. Zeerust, Oct. 24.

R.E.—Lieut. Douglas, accidentally wounded whilst destroying arms at Harrismith, Aug. 10.

R. Scots.—3rd: 7223 Para, accidentally injured, Vredefont, Oct. 23.

Liverpool.—1st: 3736 McVey, 3144 Morris, 4852 Stanley, reported missing, are in hosp., Pinetown.

Suffolk.—3877 Skippings, reported missing Jan 6, is now with his batn.

Leicester.—Mtd. Inf.: 4058 L.-Cpl. Elliott, wounded, Vredefont, Oct. 24.

Scots Fus.—2nd: Lieut. Finch killed, Oct. 21; Capt. Baillie, killed; Capt. Dick, 2nd Lieut. Elliot, wounded, Oct. 25, Fredrikstad; Lieut. Alford released, now at Mafeking.

S. Staff.—1st: 5700 Harvey, 5739 Whittall, 5840 Frankland. 4th: 5776 Mannion, reported missing, have rejoined.

S. Lancs.—1st: 4111 Sgt. Chapman, wounded Springfontein, Oct. 26.

Yorks. L.I.: 4702 Marshall, missing, has rejoined (with 19th Brig).

Manchester.—2nd: 5382 Tonge, accidentally wounded, Harrismith, Oct. 27.

N. Staff.—4th: 5915 Elkington, killed; 6080 Sheratt, wounded, Frazerburg Road, Oct. 25.

York and Lanc.—1st: 6121 Finnerts, wounded, Wakkerstroom, Oct. 27.

Irish Rifles.—2786 Galt, 2547 Hutchinson, 2931 Hickey, missing, have rejoined.

Arg. and Suth.—1st: Capt. Glasford, wounded, Rustenburg, Oct. 27.

Leinster.—1st: 2336 Hingerton, missing, Standerton, Oct. 9; 3080 McMill, missing, Vrede, Oct. 4.

P.A. Vol. Gds.—534 Hatcher, reported missing, was wounded Johannesburg.

R.A.M.C.—Maj. Jerome, injured, fall from horse, Reitz, Oct. 17.

All officers and men taken prisoners at Phillipolis, Oct. 22, have been released.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

6th D.G.—Sec.-Lieut. Calvert, killed nr. Bethel, Oct. 19.

4th Huss.—3733 Goodson, Pretoria, Oct. 24.

18th Huss.—4668 Dineen, killed, Kwaggasboek, Oct. 9.

Imp. Yeo.—Sgt. Bamford, pneumonia, on Nubia, Oct. 19.

3rd Co: 5601 Sgt. Reeves, wounds, Vrede, Oct. 12. 10th:

841 Bell, Deelfontein, Oct. 27. 16th: 7210 Hodgetts, Kroonstad, Oct. 27. 38th: 4956 Sgt. Eldridge, Pretoria, Oct. 24. 71st: 12793 Peck, Victoria, Oct. 25. 76th: 16129 Willmott, Ladybrand, Oct. 24.

Bushmen.—N.S.W.: 75 Montgomery, wounds, Zeerust, Oct. 27. Queensld.: 147 Lynd, wounds, Buffelspruit, Oct. 24. Tasm.—81 Lette, Pretoria, Oct. 18. Vict: 535 Bolding, Pretoria, Oct. 24.

Irreg. Horse.—Brabant's: 9363 Canning, cerebral hemorrhage, Rondebosch, Oct. 23; Sanders, Germiston, Oct. 28; 526 Calles, Johannesburg, Oct. 28. Kitchener's: 4157 Jackson, Johannesburg, June 14. S.A.L.H.: 874 Sgt. East, ptomaine poisoning, Cape Town, Oct. 25.

Mtd. Inf.—Vict: 26 Jones, inflammation intestines, Kroonstad, Oct. 24.

Kroonstad, Oct. 24.

Rhodesian Vols.—Greenwood, Gaberones, June 1, cause unknown.

B.S.A. Police.—Tpr. 1170 Ross, Magalapsye, Nov. 2, 1899. Gr. 913 Chrystal, disease and date not given, Oliphants Pit, between Bulawayo and Tuli.

R.H.A.—"I" Batt.: 67212 Parry, Pretoria, Oct. 22. "J" 93789 Vally, syncope, Kroonstad, May 18. "O": 62479 Read, dysentery, Pretoria, Oct. 23. "Q": 70064 Sgt. Livermore, Bloemfontein, May 20.

R.F.A.—Maj. Hanwell, killed in action, Ventersburg, Oct. 30; 46283 Goodyer, Cape Town, Oct. 29. 8th Batt.: 10107 Bloxham (? disease), Bloemfontein, May 4. 16th: 32245 McMillan, Middelburg, Oct. 25. 78th: 83359 Phillips, Chieveley, Mar. 11.

Cape Garr. Arty.—875 Wall, pneumonia, Cape Town, Oct. 26; 648 Forrester, pneumonia, Greenpoint, Oct. 29.

Amm. Col.—12th Brig.: 62835 Hutchinson, Bloemfontein, Oct. 27.

P. O. Corps.—568 Layzell, drowned whilst bathing, Cape Town, Oct. 27.

Coldstream Gds.—2nd: 2457 French, Pretoria, Oct. 23; 8436 L.-Cpl. Wills, nephritis, Johannesburg, Oct. 28.

E. Kent.—2nd: 3629, Haines, Pretoria, Oct. 22.

Lancaster.—4th: 7038 Costello, Naauwpoort, Oct. 27.

Northumberland Fus.—2nd: 2993 Brewis, Bloemfontein, Oct. 26; 5141 Doyle, killed, Hartbeestfontein, Sept. 5.

Warwick.—3rd Mtd. Inf.: 4835 L.-Cpl. Becett, Bloemfontein, Oct. 26.

Liverpool.—1st: 7727 Roper, Pretoria, Oct. 24.

Norfolk.—5213 Spooner, Springfontein, Oct. 27. 2nd: 981 Scott, heart disease, Kildonan Castle, Oct. 3.

Lincoln.—2nd: 2303 Wright, Glen, May 4; 3424 Beck, Bloemfontein, June 7.

Devon.—2nd: 5028 Cpl. Worth, pneumonia, Standerton, Oct. 24.

W. Yorks.—2nd: 5326 Schulze, Rustenburg, Oct. 26.

E. Yorks.—2nd: 4070 Tobin, heart disease, Winburg, Oct. 25.

Bedford.—2nd: 3692 Whybrow, Thaba N'Chu, Oct. 24.

Vol. Co.: 7836 Valentine, Thaba N'Chu, Oct. 26.

Yorks.—1st: 1696 Dixon, injuries, Johannesburg, Oct. 22.

S.W. Bords.—3679 Band-master Blakeley, heart disease, Kimberley, Oct. 28. 2nd: 3753 Ricketts, Johannesburg, June 9. 3rd: 7056 Woyt, intestinal disease, Hoopstad, Oct. 27; 6089 Probert, rheumatic fever, Kimberley, Oct. 23.

K.O.S.B.—1st: 5078 Puntton, wounds, Paardeberg, Feb. 23.

Inniskillings.—1st: 6476 McCormick, drowned Newcastle, Oct. 24; 640 McGarry, septicaemia, Newcastle, Oct. 29.

Gloucester.—1st: 4523 Vines, rheumatic fever at sea, Sept. 4.

Worcester.—6th (Attd. 2nd Batn.): 1978 Cpl. Hook, lightning, Rietfontein, Oct. 24.

Welsh.—1st: 4284 Murphy, killed Paardeberg, Feb. 18.

Oxford L.I.—1st: 5357 Trinder (? cause), Norvals Point, Mar. 27; 2137 Coleman, pneumonia, Cape Town, May 18; 3603 Tideley, May 3; 5918 Churn, May 10; 3230 Wilson, dysentery, May 14; 2781 Barton, June 19; 4610 Clecher, June 15, Bloemfontein; 3951 Huckins, Springfontein, May 20.

Derby.—1st: 6397 Guy, Krugersdorp, Oct. 25.

Northampton.—2nd: 1458 Robinson, Mafeking, Oct. 27.

ELKINGTON & CO., LTD.

Goldsmiths, Silversmiths, and Court Jewellers.

THE ORIGINATORS AND PATENTEES OF ELECTRO PLATE.

ELKINGTON PLATE

Is the Finest Quality of Table Ware the World can Produce.

CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

Special Designs for Presentation Services prepared and submitted Free of Charge.

London Showrooms:

22, REGENT ST., S.W.; 73, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

9, Parker Street, Liverpool; St. Anns Square, Manchester;

22, Blackett Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne; St. Vincent Street, Glasgow.

Manufactory: Newhall Street, Birmingham.

Actual Manufacturers,
supplying the Public Direct.

Tea Pot, 2 Pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 3s.
Solid Silver, £10.

Cream Jug.
Elkington Plate, £1 14s.
Solid Silver, £3 15s.

Sugar Basin.
Elkington Plate, £2 4s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £5 5s.

Coffee Pot, 2 1/2 pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 6s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £10 10s.

Antique Fluted Tea and Coffee Service.

Elkington Plate, £10 8s. Solid Silver, £29 10s

Berks.—2nd: 2293 Sgt. Weaver, Johannesburg, Oct. 23; 5864 Bassett, Germiston, Oct. 21; 2078 Roland, dysentery, Springfontein, Oct. 28.
 W. Kent.—3766 Sgt. Canty, wounds, Kroonstad, Oct. 17.
 2nd: 4376 Dorman, pneumonia, Bavarian, Mar. 30.
 K.R.R.—1st: 8013 Atkinson, Ladysmith, Feb. 27.
 Manchester.—2nd: 5022 Ward, 28th; 4074, Greenwood, 30th; 6019 Kavannah, Sept. 1, Bethlehem.
 N. Staff.—2nd: (? 3240) Critchlow, Springfontein, Oct. 27. Vol Co.: 7125 Barker, Norvals Pont, Oct. 25.
 Durham L.I.—7135 Gilbey, Standerton, Oct. 24.
 Gordons.—2nd: 137 Stuart, wounds, Lydenburg, Sept. 8.
 Irish Rifles.—2nd: 3392 Crowe, bronchitis, Greenpoint, Oct. 27.
 Leinster.—1st: 2540 Devery, Bethlehem, Oct. 25; 5379 Coughlin, Bethlehem, Sept. 28.
 Munster Fus.—1st: 4417 McCarthy, wounds, Greenpoint, Sept. 24; 6009 Connors, dysentery, Pretoria, Oct. 26.
 Dublin Fus.—1st: 6879 Hudson, dysentery, Kimberley, Oct. 28.—2nd: Sgt. Wilson, pneumonia, Maritzburg, Oct. 27.
 C.I.V., Mtd. Inf.—2nd Co.: 1457 Say, Pretoria, Sept. 23.
 Kimberley Regt.—810 Richards, drowned, Vaal River, Oct. 22.
 A.S.C.—5348 Evans, Pretoria, Oct. 24. 10th Co.: 9104 Richards, Pretoria, Oct. 26. 38th: 9600 Wheeler, Pretoria, Oct. 25.
 Nursing Reserve.—Sister West, Pretoria, Oct. 20.

CASUALTIES IN CHINA.

Orlando—R.M.L.I.: Sawyer, Po/8526, died Sept. 2, from gunshot wound received during siege.
 Wei-hai-wei.—R.M.L.I.: Horne, Po/8816, died from enteric at Peking.
 Welsh Fus.—3658 Griffiths, died enteric, Oct. 24, no place given.

THE ARMIES IN CHINA.

When the march on Peking began, the critics had grudgingly to confess that, so far from the worst, the British-Indian Army was far and away the best. The Russian and Japanese transport broke down. Both nations had provided themselves with light carts—each drawn by a single horse—but neither the Russian nor the Japanese animals were strong enough to pull the laden vehicles along the heavy roads at the pace at which the armies marched. Time after time the Russian and Japanese baggage came into camp 12 hours late. When we reached Peking it was 24 hours late. All along the line of march from Tien-tsin lie the bodies of abandoned horses. In addition to being unequal to the task required of them the Japanese horses were abominably vicious. They were all stallions, and even intense fatigue could not cure their kicking and biting propensities. Even their drivers were half afraid of them.

ALLIES' DEFECTIVE TRANSPORT.

Their transport system being bad it followed that the commissariat of the Japanese and Russians also broke down. The Japanese soldier is allowed 2lb. of rice a day and a little tea, but during the march even these small rations were not regularly forthcoming, and the men had to live on water-melons, squashes, roast maize, and such local produce as they could pick up from the fields and villages. The same remark applies to the Russians, who were, perhaps, even worse off than the Japanese, for, being Europeans, they could not live on the watery food that sufficed to keep the Asiatics alive. As far as I could see the Russian rations, for officers and men alike, consisted only of black bread and tea or coffee, the bread being baked in small field ovens carried on carts. On occasions when the carts were delayed behind, the Russians had to go without their meal, and subsist on such dry crusts as they happened to carry in their haversacks.

The American force was very small, consisting only of a field battery and two regiments of infantry.

Their transport consisted of a certain number of pack mules and about 30 waggons, and enormous vehicles drawn by six animals. On the march the transport always arrived in time to enable the men to get their food before night set in, but the train was not large enough to carry all the soldiers' baggage, the consequence being that the American force was deprived of proper clothing and bedding.

The French were able to send up to Peking only a force about 600 or 700 strong. It arrived in Tien-tsin apparently totally unprovided with transport, and had to get along as best it could with the aid of impressed Chinese coolies. I did not find out how the French managed for food, but considering the fact that the French Marines slew and ate the Chinese pigs that abounded in every deserted village, I imagine that they were as badly off as either the Japanese or Russians.

ADVANTAGES OF PACK MULES.

The British-Indian transport on the march from Tien-tsin to Peking was provided with both pack mules and boats. The latter were loaded up with eight days' supplies, and were poled and towed up the river by Chinese coolies. So well was this boat column managed that, although moving up a winding river against a very heavy current, it almost invariably, at the end of each day's journey, reached a point not far from the British camp, so that the men had access to their rations. On occasions when the boat column was delayed our soldiers were always able to fall back on the food they carried in their haversacks or on mules. I might add here that the Japanese also had a large number of boats, but they were never able to keep up. Our pack mule transport was perfect, and was the admiration and envy of the foreigners. Long training in Burma and on the North-West frontier has taught our officers how to load and manage a large transport train. The system of regimental transport may not admit of that centralisation which the precise love, but in the actual wear and tear of a campaign it prevents rather than invites confusion. On the march to Peking, while the transport of other armies blundered in the rear or got lost in the darkness, our regimental mules were never out of touch with their respective regiments. They did not stick in the mud, and if by chance a mule threw off its load, the incident did not delay the march of the men and animals behind. The mule was simply drawn aside, and while the load was being readjusted the rest of the transport moved steadily on. That is the advantage pack animals have over carts over bad and narrow roads.

But it was not only during the march to Peking that our transport organisation showed itself superior to that of other nations. The British-Indian army has scored all along the line in a broader and more general sense. On my return from Peking I spent two days at Tien-tsin, two days at Sinho and Tangu, and have now been four days at the Taku bar, where the fleet of warships and transports of all nationalities is lying. I want to be scrupulously fair, but must say that so far the British are the only people who are landing and forwarding their troops and stores methodically and without confusion. The man who thought of organising the Punjab Coolie Corps deserves the thanks of the nation. As each transport arrives at the Taku bar, the muscular Punjabis—none of whom, mind you, have ever worked cargo before—transfer the stores to lighters with marvellous energy and rapidity. As soon as a ship is cleared the lighters are towed by shallow-draught steamers to Sinho. There it is decided whether the lighters are to be unloaded or sent on to Tien-tsin. But wherever the operation of discharging cargo is carried on the work is done quickly and precisely. Neither in the British quarter at Tien-tsin nor at Sinho are to be seen unsightly heaps of boxes and bags strewn about in the hopeless confusion which prevails in the Russian, Japanese, French, American, Italian, and even German locations.

To arrive at Sinho after witnessing the chaos that reigns at Tangu is a revelation. At first sight, indeed, one wonders whether this is really the point chosen for the disembarkation of the British-Indian army. Sinho consists of a large iron shed, a few wooden huts, and two masonry buildings. The river bank, which ought to be piled high with stacks and stacks of boxes and bags, lies bare and empty. Everything has been sent on to Tien-tsin by rail or river. Nothing is allowed to accumulate. The Viceroy of Sinho is Col. Swan—a man whose reputation as an organiser must by this time not be Indian only but European, for every now and then a foreign officer, Russian, perhaps, or French, rides over from Tangu to see how the English are getting on, and finds to his surprise that they have nothing to get on. I imagine that some of the newly-landed Russians must believe that either there is no English army at the front at all, or that we feed our troops on air.

Col. Swan's work at Sinho, however, would be in vain were he not ably seconded at the Taku bar by Capt. Elderton, R.I.M., the Marine Transport Officer. No one who has not actually seen it can conceive the difficulties under which the business of transferring men, animals and cargo from the transports to lighter draught vessels is carried on. At times the sea gets up so rough that it is dangerous to lower boats; yet the heavy lighters and river steamers, all of them large enough to knock a hole in a ship's side if badly handled, are lashed alongside the transports as quickly and easily as if the operation was being performed in the still waters of a harbour. It is Capt. Elderton's business to decide when and how each transport is to discharge its freight. He has at his command only a few lighters and a couple of shallow-draught steamers, yet it is not often that any regiment has to wait for more than a day for its disembarkation orders. As I write I can watch, swivelling at their anchors, four foreign transports, two Italian, one German, and one French. None of them has been here fewer than four days, and all of them are crowded from stem to stern with soldiers, leaning idly over the rails and cursing their fate, while they watch the Indian transports being rapidly cleared. The Italians are worst off. They have absolutely no means of getting ashore unless they use their ship's boats, and land is not in sight from the bar. I learn that the British have offered to lend them a few lighters. Our allies ought to be grateful. But for the offer, I verily believe the Italian contingent—and what is it doing here anyway?—would never set foot on shore.—Times of India.

It is proposed to quarter about 20 officers and 300 men of the Canadian contingent at Hounslo on their way home from South Africa.

The annual Staff College dinner took place at Simla on Oct. 12, Sir Edwin Collen presiding. The Commander-in-Chief and Major-Gen. P. T. Maitland, I.C.S., C.B., were the only guests. The following officers were present:—Major-Gen. Elles; Cols. Peacocks, Balfe, Stawell, and Greenfield; Lieut.-Cols. Hawkin, Lomax, and Capper; Major Stanton; and Capt. Kenny, Nicholson, Dowding, Coffin, Clayer, Holloway, and Dyer.

SOLDIERS home from the war give lamentable accounts of the failure of the Parcel Post, says a contemporary. On arriving at Cape Town to take ship many of them found an accumulation of precious parcels that should have reached them up country, and were now damaged or otherwise useless. Letters fared better only by comparison. Relatives of men at the front are now regularly receiving through the Dead Letter Office letters posted as far back as June.

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters, YEOMANRY AND MILITIA OUTFITS,

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

The Gazettes.

TUESDAY EVENING.

Commission signed by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Isle of Man.

7th (Isle of Man) V.B. Liverpool Regt.—Second Lieut. F. G. Callow to be Lieut. (Oct. 15).

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 2.

1st Life Guards.—Lieut. Leopold G. M., Lord Brooke, from 7th Batn. King's Royal Rifle Corps, to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to F. H. W. Carden, promoted.

2nd Life Guards.—Lieut. F. H. Ripley, from 3rd Batn. Royal Lancaster Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. H. S. B. Surtees, promoted.

6th Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. D. A. W. Ker, from 5th Batn. Royal Irish Rifles, to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. W. G. Home, promoted.

4th Hussars.—Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. Hon. F. R. W. Eveleigh-de Moleyns, D.S.O., placed on temp. half-pay on account of ill-health.

11th Hussars.—Major Hon. O. V. G. A. Lumley to be Lieut.-Col., vice Lord E. B. Talbot, retired (Sept. 29).

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

4th Batn.—Capt. H. C. Dugdale to be Second in Command, with temp. rank of Major in Army; Lieut. L. G. Gisborne to be Capt. with temporary rank of Capt. in Army; Trpr. Kenneth R. N. Spier to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. (May 17).

10th Batn.—Surname of Trpr. M. B. Bovill, promoted Lieut. in Gazette of Oct. 2, is as now described, not as therein stated.

11th Batn.—Temp. Major K. R. Balfour, Second in Command, and temp. Capt. F. J. Dalgety, Adjnt., resign their commissions.

14th Batn.—Temp. Lieut.-Col. A. M. Brookfield resigns command of batn.; Temp. Major Hon. H. V. Duncombe to command batn., with temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. in Army (Sept. 15th); Capt. Hon. T. A. Brassey resigns his commission; Lieut. D. H. McLean to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (Aug. 16th); Lieut. F. Summers resigns his commission (Sept. 19th).

16th Batn.—Brevet Lieut.-Col. H. M. Ridley, Major Reserve of Officers, resigns command of Batn. (Sept. 27th); Lieut. H. P. de Winton resigns his commission.

17th Batn.—Lieut. F. A. Bellville resigns his commission.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Surname of Capt. F. H. C. Burne is as now described, and not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 26th.Qrmr. and Hon. Capt. G. G. Gibson retained as a Supy. to establishment, under provisions of Article 103A, Royal Warrant, May 30, 1899 (Oct. 25).
Superintending Clerk Thomas L. Whitehead to be Qrmr., with hon. rank of Lieut., vice Hon. Capt. G. G. Gibson.

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

Appointment of Capt. R. M. Daniel, from Glamorgan Artillery, and from Lieut. British South African Police, to a 2nd Lieutenantcy, was notified in Gazette of Sept. 11, is cancelled.

2nd Lieut. B. R. W. Beor, from 1st Glamorgan V.A., to be 2nd Lieut.

Capt. H. Ramsden to be Divl. Adjnt., on augmentation (Nov. 1).

Royal Garrison Artillery.

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. C. M. Western, on completion of five years' service as a regimental Lieut.-Col., is retained as a supy. to establishment, under provisions of Article 103A, Royal Warrant, May 30, 1899. (Nov. 1).

Major J. R. H. Allen to Lieut.-Col., vice Brevet-Col. C. M. Western (Nov. 1).

Lieuts. seconded for service in Indian Ordnance Dept.:—W. B. Walker (July 21), R. L. Bouchier (Aug. 5).

William W. Maxwell (Univ. cand.), to be 2nd Lieut.

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Warwick Regt.—2nd Lieut. P. F. Browne resigns his commission.

Liverpool Regt.—Capt. M. S. Adye resigns his commission.

Suffolk Regt.—2nd Lieut. P. E. Sinnett resigns his commission.

East Lancashire Regt.—Lieut. B. H. C. Boileau seconded for service in Army Pay Dept. (Oct. 14).

Royal Berkshire Regt.—Capt. R. N. Gamble, from Lincoln Regt., to be Major, vice E. H. Burnley, promoted.

Middlesex Regt.—Christian names of 2nd Lieut. Norman Weber Cosby are as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 3.

Royal Irish Rifles.—Lieut.-Col. C. Haggard, on completion of his period of service in command of a Batn., placed on half-pay (Oct. 28).

Royal Eastern Reserve Regt.—Appointment as Capt. of Capt. W. H. Scales, Reserve of Officers, antedated to July 10.

STAFF.

Lieut.-Col. M. W. Saunders, from R.A., to be A.A.G. for R.A. in India, and to have substantive rank of Col. in Army (July 13).

Major N. W. Barnardiston, Middlesex Regt., a temp. D.A.A.G. at Hdqrs., is confirmed in that appointment (Oct. 9).

Appointment of Col. A. E. W. Goldsmid as Commandant at Naauwpoort, dated Feb. 20, which appeared in Gazette of June 19, cancelled.

Appointment of Col. A. E. W. Goldsmid as an A.A.G. for Transport, Field Force, South Africa, antedated to Feb. 20.

Appointments to Staff made in South Africa confirmed:

—Capt. and Hon. Major J. FitzR. Bagot, Westmoreland and Cumberland Yeomanry Cavalry, to be Chief Press Censor, graded as an A.A.G. (July 25); Capt. and Brevet-Major J. G. King-King, Royal West Surrey Regt., graded as an A.A.G. whilst acting as Chief Staff Officer to Colonial Division (May 12); Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. F. I. Maxse, D.S.O., Coldstream Guards, graded as an A.A.G. whilst Commissioner of Police, Pretoria (June 7); Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. P. W. J. Le Gallais, 8th Hussars, graded as an A.A.G. and granted local rank of Col. whilst in command of Mounted Troops, Hunter's Force; Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. W. F. H. S. Kincaid, R.E., to be an A.A.G., vice Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. (local Col.) P. W. J. Le Gallais, 8th Hussars (Aug. 24); Capt. (now Major) A. Long, A.S.C., to be a D.A.A.G., vice Major E. R. O. Ludlow, A.S.C., invalided (March 27); Capt. F. R. F. Boileau, R.E., to be a D.A.A.G., vice Capt. J. M. Vallentin, Somerset L.I., appointed a District Commissioner (June 27); Capt. J. Puckle, A.S.C., to be a D.A.A.G. (Deputy-Asst. Director of Supplies), Army Hdqrs. (Aug. 25); Major A. P. G. Gough, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, to be a D.A.A.G., vice Capt. R. N. Gamble, Lincoln Regt., invalided (Aug. 26); Capt. A. H. S. Hart, East Surrey Regt., to be a Brigade Major, vice Major B. J. C. Doran, Royal Irish Regt. (July 14); Lieut. H. E. Spencer, Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry, graded as a Staff Capt. whilst commanding Mounted Infantry Depot, Bloemfontein (May 10).

To be Railway Staff Officers:—Major W. H. Edwards, graded as a D.A.A.G. (Aug. 12). Capt. E. Christain, Royal Scots Fusiliers, graded as a Staff Capt. (July 13).

Lieut. A. St. L. Fetherstonhangh, Royal Scots Fusiliers, graded as a Staff Lieut. (June 23); Lieut. C. D. M. Harrington, Derbyshire Regt., graded as a Staff Lieut. (July 31); Lieut. G. H. Whitehouse, 4th Batn. South Stafford Regt., graded as a Staff Lieut. (Aug. 11); Lieut. F. A. M. Welsh, Royal Irish Fusiliers, graded as a Staff Lieut. (Aug. 20); Lieut. R. O'B. Taylor, I.S.C., graded as a Staff Lieut. (Aug. 31).

To be graded as Staff Lieuts. whilst attached to A.S.C.:—Lieut. A. B. Lemon, Bedford Regt., from May 20 to June 10; 2nd Lieut. E. J. Norwood, Royal Irish Regt. (June 13); Lieut. A. P. Frankland, Suffolk Regt. (Aug. 15).

Appointment to Staff of Lines of Communication made in South Africa confirmed:—Capt. A. L. Powell, 19th Hussars, to be a Station Staff Officer, graded as Staff Capt. (Aug. 28).

Appointments made to Staff of China Expedition with effect from dates of assuming duty:—

GOLDSMITHS & SILVERSMITHS COMPANY,

Show Rooms 112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.) LTD.

Supply the Public at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, Saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

INSPECTION INVITED OF THE LARGEST, CHOICEST, AND MOST ARTISTIC STOCK IN THE WORLD OF

Awarded
Nine Gold Medals.Awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honour.

MILITARY STATUETTES,

PRESENTATION

PLATE,

CANTEENS,

&c.

ESTIMATES FREE.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
and Special Mess Spoon, Fork, and Cutlery List POST FREE.

RACE & POLO CUPS,

MESS-TABLE

PLATE,

CENTRE-PIECES,

&c.

DESIGNS FREE.

GOODS FORWARDED
ON APPROVAL.

MAGNIFICENT STOCK of DIAMOND ORNAMENTS, HIGH-CLASS JEWELLERY, SOLID SILVER CLOCKS, WATCHES, and DRESSING-BAGS.

Repair of Mess-Plate a Speciality.

GOLDSMITHS & SILVERSMITHS COMPANY, Ltd., Show Rooms: 112, REGENT ST., W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Co.)

Telephone: 3726.

[The Goldsmiths' Alliance Ltd. (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, E.C., is transferred to this Company]. Telegrams: "Argennon. London."

To command Expedition: Col. (local Lieut.-Gen.) Sir A. Gaselee, K.C.B., I.S.C., A.D.C. to the Queen.
To be A.D.C.'s to Col. (local Lieut.-Gen.) Sir A. Gaselee, K.C.B.:—Capt. B. T. Pell, Royal West Surrey Regt.; Lieut. R. A. Steel, I.S.C.
To be D.A.G.:—Col. (local Major-Gen.) E. G. Barrow, C.B., I.S.C.

To be A.A. and Q.M.G.:—Lieut.-Col. G. H. W. O'Sullivan, R.E.

To be D.A.A. and Q.M.G.:—Capt. I. Philipps, I.S.C.

To be D.A.Q.M.G. for Intelligence:—Capt. E. W. M. Norie, Middlesex Regt.

To be P.M.O.:—Col. J. T. B. Bookey, I.M.S.

To be Col. on Staff for R.A.:—Col. (temp. Brig.-Gen.) H. Pipon, C.B., R.A.

To be Brig.-Major, R.A.:—Capt. T. L. Coxhead, D.S.O., R.A.

To be Col. on Staff, R.E.:—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. W. T. Shone, C.B., D.S.O., R.E.

To be Brig. Major, R.E.:—Major J. G. Day, R.E.

To be Supt. of Army Signalling:—Capt. G. C. Rigby, Wiltshire Regt.

To be Provost Marshal:—Capt. R. B. Lowe, D.S.O., I.S.C.

1st Infantry Brigade.

To command Brigade:—Col. (local Major-Gen.) Sir N. B. Stewart, Bart., I.S.C.

To be D.A.A.G.:—Capt. T. Jermyn, I.S.C.

To be D.A.Q.M.G.:—Capt. H. T. Brooking, I.S.C.

2nd Infantry Brigade.

To command Brigade:—Col. (local Major-Gen.) O'M. Creagh, V.C., I.S.C.

To be D.A.A.G.:—Capt. J. M. Stewart, I.S.C.

To be D.A.Q.M.G.:—Capt. J. A. Houson-Craufurd, I.S.C.

3rd Infantry Brigade.

To command Brigade:—Col. (local Major-Gen.) A. J. F. Reid, C.B., I.S.C.

To be D.A.A.G.:—Capt. A. Nicholls, I.S.C.

To be D.A.Q.M.:—Capt. H. Hudson, I.S.C.

4th Infantry Brigade.

To command Brigade:—Col. (local Major-Gen.) J. T. Cummins, D.S.O., I.S.C.

To be D.A.A.G.:—Capt. F. C. Colomb, I.S.C.

To be D.A.A.G. for Imperial Service Troops:—Capt. H. D. Watson, I.S.C.

To be D.A.Q.M.G.:—Capt. F. T. Williams, I.S.C.

Cavalry Brigade.

To command Brigade:—Col. (local Major-Gen.) G. L. B. Richardson, C.B., C.I.E., I.S.C.

To be D.A.A.G.:—Major F. W. P. Angelo, I.S.C.

To be D.A.Q.M.G.:—Capt. V. B. Fane, I.S.C.

Lines of Communication and Base.

To be Officer Commanding:—Col. (local Major-Gen.) L. R. H. D. Campbell, I.S.C.

To be D.A.A. and Q.M.G.:—Major J. C. Swann, I.S.C.

To be P.M.O.:—Lieut.-Col. H. FitzL. P. F. Esmonde-White, I.M.S.

To be Special Service Officers for Imperial Service Troops, graded as D.A.A.G.:—Majors J. G. Turner and H. V. Cox, I.S.C.

To be Special Service Officers for Imperial Service Troops, graded as Staff Capt.:—Capt. W. L. Conran, C. M. Crawford, C. W. Tribe, and E. M. Hughes, I.S.C.; Lieut. W. A. Stokes, R.E.

To be Special Service Officers:—Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. E. F. H. McSwiney, D.S.O., I.S.C.; Majors H. E. F. Gould-Adams and N. W. H. Du Boulay, R.A. Major T. P. England, Royal Fusiliers; Capt. C. M. Ducat, I.S.C.; H. R. Davies, Oxford L.I.; and G. S. F. Napier, Oxford L.I.; C. H. Selwyn, E. H. Cole, M. E. Willoughby, G. de S. Barrow, Hon. H. D. Napier, F. Tweddell, F. Rennick, and J. W. Orchard, I.S.C.; E. C. Pottinger, R.A.; W. A. Harrison, R.E.; W. D. McSwiney, 7th Dragoon Guards; G. H. G. Mockler, and C. G. W., Hunter, I.S.C.

Ordinance College:—Capt. C. R. B. Owen, R.A., resumes appointment of Instr., vice Major E. V. Elwes, Reserve of Officers, vacated appointment (Oct. 1).

Indian Staff Corps:—Col. A. L. McNair transferred to Unemployed Supp. List (Oct. 12).

BREVET.

Officers to be Cols.:—Lieut.-Cols. G. D. C. Gastrell, I.S.C. (Oct. 3); R. W. P. Robertson, R.G.A. (Oct. 29); H. V. Hunt, R.F.A. (Nov. 1).

MEMORANDA.

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. E. Balfe, I.S.C., Judge Advocate-General in India, granted substantive rank of Col. in Army (Dec. 20, 1899).

Officers placed on retired pay:—Lieut.-Col. and Col. A. C. F. FitzGeorge, C.B., half-pay (Nov. 1); Lieut.-Col. and Col. Arthur C., Duke of Wellington, half-pay (Oct. 28).

Officers of the R.A.M.C. granted local rank of Col. whilst P.M.O.'s of Divisions in South Africa:—Lieut.-Cols. J. D. Edge, M.D. (Oct. 21); W. Donovan (Oct. 22); R. W. Mapleton, M.B. (Sept. 30); J. A. Gormley, M.D. (Jan. 2); W. A. May (March 10).

Lieut.-Col. W. B. Allin, M.B., R.A.M.C., granted local rank of Col. whilst P.M.O. of a Divn., and P.M.O. of Field Army, Natal (Nov. 25, 1899).

Lieut.-Col. W. L. Gubbins, M.B., R.A.M.C., granted local rank of Col. whilst P.M.O. of a Divn., and P.M.O. at Pretoria (Dec. 23, 1899).

Officers of R.A.M.C. granted local rank of Col. whilst in charge of General Hospitals in South Africa:—Lieut.-Cols. O. G. Wood, M.D. (Oct. 12, 1899), J. C. Dorman, M.B. (Nov. 20, 1899), J. F. Williamson, M.B. (Feb. 17), B. W. Somerville-Large (Jan. 4), R. T. Beamish (Feb. 5), and J. G. MacNeece (Jan. 29); Major W. T. Swan, M.B. (June 12).

Major R. S. Curtis, R.E., granted local rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst performing duties of Director of Telegraphs, Field Force, South Africa (Aug. 2).

Capt. P. Holland-Pryor, I.S.C., granted local rank of Major whilst Asst. to Military Governor of Bloemfontein (Aug. 21).

Officers granted temp. rank of Major whilst serving with West African Frontier Force:—Capt. H. R. Beddoes, Royal Dublin Fusiliers (March 28); Capt. A. McClintock, Seaforth Highlanders (May 1); Capt. H. Bryan, Manchester Regt. (Aug. 22).

Capt. J. H. E. Holford, 7th Hussars, granted local rank of Major whilst employed as D.A.A.G. with Ashanti Field Force (Sept. 1).

Lieut. R. H. Wilford, West India Regt., granted local rank of Capt. whilst employed as Company Commander in West African Regt. (April 1).

Lieut. R. H. Monck-Mason, Royal Munster Fusiliers, granted temp. rank of Capt. whilst employed with West African Field Force (Aug. 24).

Reserve of Officers:—Lieut. R. C. Smith resigns his commission.

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Clare (S. Div.):—Arthur L. N. Biddulph to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 29).

Donegal (S. Div.):—Hill Motum to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 10).

Dublin City (S. Div.):—Capt. H. W. Brereton is removed from the Militia, her Majesty having no further occasion for his services (Nov. 3). 2nd Lieut. P. R. Peebles to be Lieut. (Oct. 21).

Forfar and Kincardine (S. Div.):—Lieut. R. W. Duff seconded whilst extra A.D.C. to Right Hon. J. A. L. Earl of Hopetoun, K.T., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., Governor-General of Commonwealth of Australia (Oct. 5).

Duke of Connaught's Own Hampshire and Isle of Wight (S. Div.):—2nd Lieuts. W. C. Harrild and A. G. Dalgley to be Lieuts. (Oct. 19).

Londonderry (S. Div.):—Capt. and Hon. Major W. Quin retires under para. 78 Militia Regulations, with permission to retain his rank, and wear prescribed uniform on retirement.

West of Scotland (S. Div.):—Lieut.-Col. (Col. retired pay) J. Younger retires under para. 77 Militia Regulations.

INFANTRY.

5th Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers:—Mervyn Lloyd and Ian M. Bonham-Carter to be 2nd Lieuts. (Oct. 23).

4th Batn. Lincoln Regt.—Henry B. Cooke, reappointed Lieut.

3rd Batn. West Yorkshire Regt.—Lieut. C. B. F. Bennett resigns his commission (Nov. 3); Herbert T. Cliff to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 23).

3rd Batn. East Yorkshire Regt.—Henry H. Earle Oct. 17) and Arthur C. H. S. Wingrove (Oct. 18) to be 2nd Lieuts.

3rd Batn. Leicester Regt.—Seconding of Capt. P. R. Fuller, announced in Gazette of Aug. 28, should have borne date Sept. 5, not as therein stated.

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regt.—Supp. Capt. Hon. E. B. L. H. Stopford to be Capt. on Establishment (Oct. 18).

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.'S Overcoats for Winter.

Newest Styles, Fashionable Materials.

Overcoats for Winter.

In all sizes. Ready for Immediate Use.

Overcoats for Winter.

Cut by our own Cutters, and made in Best West-end Style at Moderate Prices for Cash Payments.

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.,

12, 10, & 8, BROOK STREET, . . .

. . . HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

Military Types.

A Complete List of the Coloured Military Plates which have been issued with this Paper will be sent post free on application.

Offices: 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.O.

EVERITT'S PATENT Trousers Press and Stretcher.

PRICE

25/-

PRICE

25/-

Three of the great advantages of this Press are:—

Simplicity.

Effectiveness.

Portability.

By the novel arrangement of the top bars and screws, a pair of trousers can be taken out or replaced in less than a minute. When the pressure is applied the top board bends, thereby ensuring an equal pressure on all parts of the trousers, thus making it the ONLY PERFECT PRESS on the market. It is specially constructed for convenience of travellers, requiring, when folded the space of about 2 inches, and can be opened for use in half a minute.

Will take from One to Eight Pairs of Trousers, and any pair can be removed without disarranging the remainder. To be obtained of all High-Class Tailors, and The Stores, or direct from the Patentee:

HARRY EVERITT, Tailor, 14, Maddox St., Regent St., London, W.

If the Blood is Diseased the Body is Diseased and Enfeebled. Keep your Blood Pure and the Health of the System will follow.

Clarke's Blood Mixture

THE WORLD-FAMED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RESTORER,

is warranted to Cleanse the Blood from all Impurities from whatever cause arising. For Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Sores of all kinds, Eczema, Scourvy, Scurfula, Bad Legs, Glandular Swellings, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real Specific for Gout and Rheumatic pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the Blood and Bones.

As this Mixture is pleasant to the taste and warranted free from anything injurious to the most delicate constitution of either sex, from infancy to old age, the Proprietors solicit sufferers to give it a trial to test its value. Clarke's Blood Mixture is sold by all Chemists throughout the world. Price 2s. 9d. and 11s. per bottle.

Thousands of Testimonials of Wonderful Cures from all parts of the World.

Proprietors: The Lincoln and Midland Counties Drug Co., Lincoln.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS OR SUBSTITUTES.

3rd Bn. Cheshire Regt.—Phillip Toohey to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 17).

3rd Bn. East Surrey Regt.—Colin Burton to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd Bn. West Riding Regt.—John A. Savage to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 17).

3rd Bn. Northampton Regt.—Appointment of R. D. Ward to be 2nd Lieut., announced in Gazette of Oct. 9, is cancelled at his own request.

3rd Bn. Royal West Kent Regt.—Lieut. E. M. A. Wakefield to be Capt. (Sept. 25).

4th Bn. Shropshire L.I.—Bertram L. Williams to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 2).

7th Bn. King's Royal Rifle Corps.—Lieut. C. R. Tidswell is seconded whilst acting as A.D.C. to Major-Gen. R. S. R. Fetherstonhaugh, commanding 6th Infantry Brigade, Aldershot.

3rd Bn. Wiltshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. P. S. Rowan to be Lieut. (Oct. 22).

6th Bn. Royal Irish Rifles.—Capt. and Hon. Major J. C. Thornhill to be Major (Oct. 22).

4th Bn. Connaught Rangers.—2nd Lieuts. A. J. D. Thomson and B. M. Byrne to be Lieuts. (Sept. 25).

4th Bn. Leinster Regt.—2nd Lieut. J. Godley resigns his commission.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Royal North Devon (Hussars).—2nd Lieut. E. A. V. Stanley resigns his commission.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

2nd Durham (Seaham) (W. Div., R.G.A.)—George H. Drake to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Gloucester.—Surg.-Major J. S. Carleton to be Surg.-Lieut.-Col.

1st Lincoln (W. Div., R.G.A.)—John F. Buckley to be 2nd Lieut.

Cadet Corps attached to 1st Worcester.—Edward C. Bullock (Capt. 1st Worcestershire V.A.) to be Capt.; Bernard Middleditch (2nd Lieut. 1st Worcester V.A.) to be Lieut. (Oct. 15).

ROYAL ENGINEERS (VOLUNTEERS).

1st Durham.—2nd Lieut. W. E. Furneaux to be Lieut. 1st Lancashire.—Capt. and Hon. Major F. J. Pilcher to be Major; Lieut. C. H. Burton to be Capt.

1st West Riding of Yorkshire (Sheffield).—Lieut.-Col. J. E. Bingham vacates command, and appointed to Hon. Colonelcy of Corps.

Fourth Div. (Submarine Miners).—Major F. G. Ogilvie retires under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank, and to wear uniform of Corps on retirement (Nov. 1).

Engineer and Railway Volunteer Staff Corps.—Henry W. Williams to be Lieut.-Col. (Sept. 15).

RIFLE.

Queen's R.V. Brigade (Highland Bn.) Royal Scots.—David G. Rose and Alexander Taylor to be 2nd Lieuts. Rev. A. Fleming to be Acting Chaplain.

2nd (Prince of Wales's) V.B. Devon Regt.—Capt. H. E. Cridland resigns his commission.

Cadet Corps (Bath College) attached to 1st V.B. Somerset L.I.—Hon. Lieut. F. N. Gammidge to be Lieut. (July 1).

Cadet Corps (King Edward's School, Bath) attached to 1st V.B. Somerset L.I.—Hon. Lieut. C. K. Mason to be Lieut. (July 1).

3rd V.B. West Yorkshire Regt.—Lieut. G. Elin resigns his commission.

5th V.B. South Wales Borderers.—2nd Lieut. J. R. A. Davis to be Lieut. (Nov. 3); John W. Marshall and David Davies to be 2nd Lieuts. (Nov. 2).

1st (City of Bristol) V.B. Gloucester Regt.—Charles W. Wales to be 2nd Lieut. 3rd V.B.—Rev. E. J. Houghton to be Acting Chaplain.

4th V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Ralph C. E. C. Gregg and Clement N. Doyle to be 2nd Lieuts.

2nd V.B. South Stafford Regt.—Lieut. N. G. Harries resigns his commission.

1st V.B. South Lancashire Regt.—Percy N. Avery to be 2nd Lieut.

Cadet Corps (Derby School) attached to 1st V.B. Derbyshire Regt.—Hon. Capt. R. T. McCallum resigns his appointment.

1st Nottingham.—Henry S. Barnsdale to be 2nd Lieut. Cadet Corps (Nottingham High School) attached to 1st Nottingham.—George D. Wallis to be Lieut.

Cadet Corps (Cookham Dean) attached to 1st V.B. Royal Berkshire Regt.—Rev. Septimus C. Thicke to be Lieut.

5th (West) Middlesex.—Charles N. Slaney to be 2nd Lieut.

9th Lanark.—William J. Mackinnon, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut.

5th (Deeside Highland) V.B., Gordon Highlanders.—Robert Bruce to be 2nd Lieut.

19th Middlesex.—John F. Webb to be 2nd Lieut.

VOLUNTEER MEDICAL STAFF CORPS.

London Companies.—Harry Fulham-Turner to be Surg.-Lieut.

[Where not otherwise mentioned the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Nov. 3.]

MESSRS. BEWLAY AND CO., LIMITED, have opened new premises at 90B, Regent Street, for the convenience of their West End customers.

THE Queen has forwarded through Col. Sir Fleetwood Edwards her annual subscription of £50 to the Army and Navy Pensioners' Employment Society, of which her Majesty is patron.

THE AUSTRALIAN GUARD OF HONOUR.—The detachments which are being selected from the Household Cavalry, V Battery R.H.A., and the Grenadier, Coldstream, Scots, and Irish Guards for embarkation for Australia as part of the Duke of York's guard at the Inauguration of the Australian Commonwealth will be inspected by Major-Gen. Trotter at Wellington Barracks next Thursday. The General will afterwards go to Guildford to inspect the detachment of the Queen's Royal West Surrey Regiment, which is to join the guard. The troops at inspection are to be dressed as for the embarkation, now arranged for the 12th, in the White Star liner Britannic.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

RYDE, I.W.—YOUNG PRIEST (M.A. Oxon.) and wife are looking out for a Bachelor or young married couple to live with them for a time; high ground, good house, every convenience.—Address, M.A., care ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, W.C.

TO BOOKBUYERS and Librarians of Free Libraries.

THE NOVEMBER CATALOGUES of valuable Second-Hand Works and New Remainders, offered at prices greatly reduced, are now ready, and will be sent post free upon application to W. H. SMITH and SON, Library Department, 186, Strand, London, W.C.

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

THE Board of Management of the ROYAL NATIONAL HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION at Ventnor are about to appoint a GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT. Candidates must be unmarried and must have had some experience in management and administration. Age not less than 30 nor more than 50. The selected candidate will be required to enter on his duties early in December. Yearly salary £250 with Board and Residence. All further information may be obtained on application to the Secretary. Applications should be sent in at once accompanied by copies of three testimonials, showing recent career, addressed to "The Chairman of the Board," 34, Craven Street, Charing Cross, London. Personal canvassing is prohibited.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN of GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grocers, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employers, London."

TO LET, FURNISHED, seven-roomed COTTAGE, Glendower, Sirensall, York.—Apply, Mrs. Rowley, Sirensall.

THE LONDON SOLDIERS' HOME. BUCKINGHAM GATE, S.W.

Close to Wellington Barracks. Near Waterloo and Victoria Stations. Founded by Miss DANIELL, 1890. Refreshment Bar. Sleeping Cubicles. Baths. Temporary Married Quarters. Coffee Room. Game and Smoking Room. Reading Room. Baggage Room, &c., &c.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE), QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE. Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff. Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS. For Tariff, address MANAGER.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

THE DE VERE, THE PRINCE OF WALES, THE BROADWALK.

(Opposite Kensington Palace.)

Lift. Electric Light. Everything up to date. Tariff on application.

HART AND SON,

60, Artillery Place, Woolwich.

(Established 100 Years), has

FOR SALE

Nearly New

REGULATION UNIFORMS for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices.

Gold and Silver Dress

BELTS, SABRETACHES, and SASHES for Sale or on Hire.

All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver Lace, &c., bought for cash.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

No. 285, NOVEMBER, 1900.

Cabinet Government or Departmentalism? By J. A. R. MARRIOTT.
Lessons of the War: (1) "Place the War Office in Commission." By the Right Hon. LORD THRING. (2) Suggestions from the Front. By Lieut.-Colonel CHARLES A. COURT. (3) Our Belated Battleships. By ARCHIBALD S. HURD.
The Religious of China. (Concluded.) 3. Buddhism and Christianity. By the Right Hon. Professor MAX MULLER.
The Lake-Dwellers. By the Rev. Dr. JESSOFF.
Extravagance in Dress. By LADY GUENDOLEN RAMSDEN.
Voice Culture. By Mrs. WALTER CREYKE.
French Canada and the Empire. By J. G. SNEAD COX.
The Van Eycks. By W. H. JAMES WEALE.
Electroengineering Women—An American Appreciation. By ELIZABETH L. BANKS.
The Cradle of the Human Race. By SAMUEL WADDINGTON.
Army Manoeuvres in France. By H. SOMERS SOMERSET.
The Casualties of War and of Industry. By F. HARCOURT KITCHIN.
The Vulgarising of Oberammergau. By L. C. MORANT.
The Gael and his Heritage. By FIONA MACLEOD.
The Newspapers. By SIR WEMYSS REID.
The Administrative Reform Association: List of Members.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON and CO., Ltd.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 1021. NOVEMBER, 1900.

Price 2s. 6d.

ARMY REORGANISATION: THE HOME ARMY.—DOOM CASILE: A ROMANCE. By NEIL MUNRO.—AN AUTUMN DAY'S SPORT NEAR PEKING. BRIGHTON'S SISTER-IN-LAW. By HENRY LAWSON.—OUR SOLDIERS. By "LINESMAN."—LORD JIM. By JOSEPH CONRAD. CONCLUSION.—THE CINQUE PORTS.—THE RIVAL "FOREIGN DEVILS." By COL. H. KNOLLYS.—A BUDGET OF NEW BOOKS.—WAR OPERATIONS IN SOUTH AFRICA.—MUSINGS WITHOUT METHOD: THE VANITY OF THE ENLIGHTENED CITIZEN.—THE HAPPY FAILURE OF REFORM.—HOW TO WRITE FOR THE MAGAZINES.—ON THE MOVE WITH BULLER.—AFTER THE ANNEXATION.—THE NEW PARLIAMENT.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA,

SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate. "Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd. Bn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wiltshire Regiment. August, 1896."

Watch and Clock Makers.

"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., R.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.

LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C.,

and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.

ASSURANCES AND LOANS

can be effected by

MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS

in Government Service,

on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business

Annual Revenue exceeds	£1,100,000
Bonus Additions Declared exceed	£6,750,000
Accumulated Funds exceed	£8,400,000
Claims Paid exceed	£17,000,000

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LTD.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.

Established 1853.

Chairman—C. R. RIVINGTON, F.R.S., J.P., D.L.

Paid-up Capital.....£200,000

Debentures and Debenture Stock.....£207,230

REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.

W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.

REVERSIONS AND LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the

EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand.

Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

A MEDICAL MAN, residing in beautiful pine district of Surrey, has VACANCY for RESIDENT PATIENTS. Can provide suite of rooms, with bath-room, &c., on first floor, facing south, and overlooking large shady garden. House stands high on 40ft. of gravel, and is surrounded by pine woods; splendid neighbourhood for all chest complaints and rheumatic affections; every care and comfort; young society; billiard room; suitable as a permanent home for a chronic invalid with attendant.—Address, "Consultant," care Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

BACHELORS' ROOMS.—CRANBOURN MANSIONS (London Hippodrome), close to Piccadilly and Chiswell. A few well-fitted, beautifully decorated, combined BED-SITTING-ROOMS to be LET in this magnificent building.

FURNISHED OR UNFURNISHED. Lift, electric light, lavatory (h. and c.) to each room, liveried attendant, telephone, and all modern conveniences. Particulars of the Estate Managers, Messrs. Brownell and Taylor, 9, Warwick Court, Holborn, W.C.

BOURNEMOUTH, BOSCOMBE.—To LET a comfortably FURNISHED HOUSE for winter (13 rooms and usual offices); best residential position, adjoining new Cliff Gardens, south aspect, well sheltered, and sanitation perfect. Any reasonable offer entertained.—"Carro," Glen Road.

CHELTHAM.—TO BE LET.—Moderate-sized, WELL-FURNISHED HOUSE; 3 reception rooms, 5 bed and dressing-rooms, fitted bath-room, garden, pleasant sunny position; rent low.—Apply, Engall, Cox and Co., Auctioneers, Cheltenham.

EXCHANGE.—A LIEUTENANT in the MADRAS INFANTRY wishes to EXCHANGE with an officer in an English Regiment serving at home.—Apply to "Lieutenant," care of Grindlay and Co., 54, Parliament Street, S.W.

FOR SALE.—AN INVALID BATH CHAIR, large size, nearly new, cost 17 guineas; no reasonable offer refused. Also BED BEST, quite new, cost £2 10s., would take 30s. Both may be seen by appointment.—Mrs. FLETCHER, 18, Crowhurst Road, Brixton, S.W.

PARENTS GOING ABROAD and Others.

CHILDREN RECEIVED in pretty country home of Gentlewoman who is a trained nurse, and has been governess.—Miss North, Green Arbour, near Dunmow, Essex.

STAFF COLLEGE, 1901.—OFFICERS joining the STAFF COLLEGE course should apply for FURNISHED or UNFURNISHED HOUSES to Messrs. Sadler and Baker, Estate Agents, Camberley, Surrey.

SWAINE and ADENEY,

WHIP MANUFACTURERS

to the Queen, the Princess of Wales, the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family.

PRIZE MEDALS, 1861, 1862; PARIS, 1878, 1889; VIENNA, 1873; CHICAGO, 1893.

185, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

The Navy.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 25.

Royal Marine Artillery.—Sergt.-Major (Warrant Officer) Albert Baker to be Qrmr., with hon. rank of Lieut., vice Hill, retired (Oct. 17).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 26.

Royal Marine Forces.—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. W. T. Adair, R.M.L.I., is appointed A.A.G. (Nov. 1).

Royal Marine Light Infantry.—Major C. G. Matson is permitted to retire at his own request on a gratuity (Nov. 1).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 29.

In accordance with provisions of Order in Council of Feb. 22, 1870, Commander D. A. Crofton placed on Retired List at his own request, with permission to assume rank of Capt. (Oct. 15); Lieut. F. G. T. Cole placed on Retired List, with permission to assume rank of Commander (Sept. 1).

In accordance with provisions of Orders in Council of Feb. 22, 1870, and Nov. 28, 1887, Lieut. F. W. Loane placed on Retired List, with permission to assume rank of Commander (Oct. 20).

Acting Engr. H. H. Ricketts confirmed in rank of Engr. (Mar. 7).

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 30.

Sub-Lieut. J. G. M. McHardy promoted to Lieut. (Sept. 15).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 31.

With reference to notice in Gazette of Oct. 30, date of retirement of Lieut. F. W. Loane should be Oct. 19, not Oct. 20, as therein stated.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 1.

Royal Naval Reserve.—Lieut. G. Alfred Lee placed on retired list of his rank, at his own request (Oct. 25).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 26.

Commanders.—J. F. Parry to President, for service at Admiralty (Oct. 20); W. B. Fawckner to Glory (N) (Nov. 1).

Lieutenant.—F. W. Hunan to the Vivid for Spartan (N) (Oct. 31).

Sub-Lieutenants.—E. R. Jones to Crescent for Columbine (N) (Oct. 25); T. B. Scott, H. N. Key, C. C. Johnson to Alexandra, for disposal (Oct. 31).

Engineers.—F. E. Lamb to Terrible, H. M. Wall to Vivid, for service in Reserve (Oct. 25).

Chaplain and Naval Instr.—Rev. T. W. Robinson to Renown (undated).

Fleet Surgeons.—L. H. Kellett, M.A., M.B., to Renown; H. Todd to Blake (undated).

Surgeons.—R. Hill and G. E. Duncan to Renown; C. J. Matthews to Blake (undated); E. F. Mortimer to Canopus (Oct. 26).

Fleet Paymasters.—E. H. Banks to Glory (Nov. 1); J. W. Chester to Diadem (Oct. 25).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 27.

Lieutenants.—J. O. Graham to Royal Sovereign (undated); J. G. de O. Coke to Victorious for Conflict, in command (Oct. 26); E. R. Morant to Australia (Nov. 1); A. W. Lewis to Colossus (Oct. 22); H. Blackett to Collingwood, (as 1st); G. C. Cayles to Benbow (as 1st); C. P. Metcalfe, C. K. McCallum to Sans Pareil, G. E. Cave to Trafalgar (as 1st), (Oct. 1).

Midshipmen.—G. F. A. Mulock, A. P. Watts to Magnificent, F. A. Chapman to Diadem, C. G. Robinson to Hannibal, P. J. Holyar to Jupiter, H. J. Kennard to Repulse (Oct. 31).

Surgeons.—H. J. Chater to Sparrow (Nov. 15); G. A. S. Bell to Blanche, H. P. Turnbull to Duke of Wellington (Nov. 20); H. R. A. Denny to Magnificent (Nov. 15); T. S. Hartley to Condor (Nov. 1); J. G. Corry's appointment cancelled.

Staff Paymaster.—S. E. Elliott to Minerva (Oct. 30). Paymaster.—R. C. Baker appointed secretary to Rear-Adm. A. K. Bickford, Commander-in-Chief Pacific (Nov. 20).

Assistant Paymaster.—W. R. Hodder to Warspite, as secretary's clerk (Nov. 20).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 29.

Captain.—R. H. Bacon, D.S.O., to President, addl., for study at R.N. College (undated).

Commander.—H. Evan-Thomas to Victory, addl. (undated).

Lieutenants.—P. H. H. Thompson to President, addl. (Nov. 1), and to Katoomba (Dec. 13); H. E. J. Grant to Colossus (G), (Nov. 1).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 30.

Lieutenant.—G. V. C. Knox to Warspite as Flag Lieut. to Rear-Adm. A. K. Bickford (Nov. 30).

Sub-Lieutenant.—V. S. Rashleigh to Pembroke for Sturgeon (Oct. 13).

Inspector of Machinery.—G. A. Haddy to Niobe (Oct. 30).

Staff Surgeon.—J. Sugrue, M.D., to Vernon (Oct. 27). Surgeon.—E. F. Mortimer to Canopus (undated).

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 31.

Lieutenant.—F. D. Arnold—Forster to Vernon (Nov. 1).

Engineers.—G. C. Nicolson to Pembroke for Sturgeon (Oct. 18); G. Attwood to Pembroke for Mermaid (undated).

Staff Surgeon.—J. M'Elwee, M.D., to Pioneer (Nov. 15).

Surgeon.—A. H. H. Vizard, M.B., to Boscawen for Agincourt; H. J. Rogers, B.A., M.B., to Northampton (Nov. 15).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 2.

Captain.—F. S. Inglefield to Glory (Nov. 1).

Lieutenant.—J. G. M. M'Hardy to Canopus, on promotion (Sept. 15).

Midshipmen.—P. F. Newcombe, C. R. Dane to Empress of India; G. B. de la P. Nugent to Repulse, temp. (Nov. 1).

Assistant Engineers.—B. D. MacQueen to Magnificent (Nov. 1); C. E. Russell's appointment is cancelled.

Naval Instructors.—F. M. Broadbent, M.A., to Glory; G. C. Avery, B.A., to Prince George (Nov. 1).

Surgeons.—E. C. Oridland, M.B., to R.M. depot, Deal M. H. Knapp to Wildfire (Oct. 31).

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.50.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MOROS.

THE BEST PEN.

The "CALTON" Stylographic Pen is the best because it is the simplest, most durable, holds more ink, does not leak, and can be carried in any position. Sent complete for 3/-, post free. Cased in silver, Hall-marked, 10/6. All kinds repaired.

"JEWEL" FOUNTAIN PEN, with 16-ct. Gold Nib, Iridium-tipped, chased holder, 5/-. Mounted, 7/6.

DEPT. A. G. JEWEL PEN CO., 102, FENCHURCH ST., LONDON, E.C.

THE NEW STRAP LEGGING. LATEST STYLE.

DENNISON'S PATENT, No. 6785. Stohwasser and Winter's Licence.

SHOOTING. RIDING. WALKING. HUNTING. MILITARY. IMPERIAL YEOMANRY VOLUNTEERS. LORD LOCH'S OWN IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

Extract from the "SHOOTING TIMES".

"We have recently given this Legging a severe trial through some of the roughest going in the kingdom, and can recommend it to Sportsmen as extremely comfortable, and a most shapely improvement on the older forms of Gaiters."

"PAUL MALL EAST, CHAIRING CROSS."

"The Denton Patent Strap Leggings have given complete satisfaction, and I am convinced that they are the most comfortable Leggings for Riding and Shooting."

LEWIS H. LLOYD."

Order through your Saddler, Bootmaker, or Outfitter.

Sole Manufacturers, WALLACE, BAILEY & WILKINS, 176, Long Lane, Bermondsey, LONDON, S.E.

MARTELL'S THREE STAR,

THE WELL-KNOWN GENUINE BRANDY.

PICKERING'S "KHAKI-BLANCO"

For cleaning and renovating "Khaki" Accoutrements, Helmets, Shoes, etc.

Everybody knows the merits of Pickering's Blanco for whitening all articles of Buckskin Leather, or White Canvas, and now Pickering's have met the want of the day by introducing "Khaki-Blanco," a similar preparation to Blanco, but of a "Khaki" colour; it is prepared in a most careful manner to ensure an Evenness of Colour, and contains nothing at all injurious to any "Khaki" article to which it may be applied. "Khaki" cleaned regularly with this article keeps a good colour and always looks like new.

White belts and other military equipment, buckskin and canvas shoes, etc., can be made khaki colour by the application of "Khaki-Blanco," and this will in no wise interfere with their being re-whitened with Blanco at any future time.

SOLD BY ALL THE USUAL DEALERS.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS—

JOSEPH PICKERING & SONS, Sheffield.

HEERING'S COPENHAGEN CHERRY BRANDY

Purveyor by Appointment to the Royal Danish and Imperial Russian Courts and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales

ESTABLISHED 1818.

Peter J. Heering

SOLD THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

A REVOLUTION IN FURNISHING BY MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

Mr. LABOUGHERE writes in "TRUTH".

"NORMAN & STACEY have introduced in their business an ingenious safeguard against the risk of loss to his widow or family through the death of the hirer. THEY GIVE AN INSURANCE UPON HIS LIFE, so that if for instance a man gets £200 worth of Furniture on the hire-purchase system, and dies when instalments to the amount of £100 have been paid, not only does the furniture become the property of his representatives, BUT THE £100 IS ALSO REPAID TO THEM."

N.B.—Cash buyers are also given a Free Life Insurance Policy equal to the amount they have spent.

NORMAN & STACEY, LD., 118, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.

Moderate Prices. Free Delivery Town or Country. Call and view Stock before furnishing locally.

ARMY ALTERATIONS

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date.

Subscription—5s. 6d. per annum, post free. One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.

ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE. With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations. BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer, Ashton-under-Lyne.

REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GRIND

NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING.

Black Handle - 5s. 6d. Pair Ivory Handle.

Ivory Handle - 7s. 6d. In Russia Leather Case - 2s.

Kropp Duplex

Strop - 7s. 6d. Kropp Strop Paste.

Write for Pamphlet 'Shaver's Kit or Outfit' post free.

Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT & Co., London, W.

The "C.I.V."

The Publisher begs to remind readers that he still has copies of the Plate of the "CITY IMPERIAL VOLUNTEERS" which was issued with the "Army and Navy Gazette" some time ago, on sale, Price 6½d. (halfpenny stamps) post free, securely packed in postal tube. Speedy application is necessary.

Address:—THE PUBLISHER, 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM, P.S.C.

(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),
35, HEREFORD SQUARE, S.W.
 (one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station Metropolitan and District Railways).

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

During the last three years all the candidates prepared by Col. Needham for this Examination have obtained Commissions.

WOOLWICH AND SANDHURST EXAMINATIONS.

At the late Examinations (June, 1900), the following Four of Col. Needham's pupils were successful:—

WOOLWICH.....	A. G. Rolleston.....	8038
SANDHURST	P. W. von B. Malcolm.....	6022
"	G. G. Symons.....	6531

University Candidate: A. L. Prince.

Prospectus and List of Successes sent on application.

HOVE, SUSSEX.

PREPARATION for all ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITY EXAMINATIONS.

MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,
 Late the Border Regiment,
 assisted by
 Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late B.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

At the last SIX Examinations SEVENTY THREE PUPILS have been SUCCESSFUL, and the FIRST PLACE on the whole List has been taken FOUR TIMES.

SUCCESSSES.

Place.	Name.	Marks.
FIRST (Cavalry) ...	*B. Hamilton-Stubber	1692
2nd (Infantry).....	*W. P. H. Hill	1873
2nd (Artillery)	*W. E. Delves-Brough-	1542
	ton
17th (Infantry)	*C. C. Clifton	1622
28th (Infantry)	*E. G. Clarke	1522
65th (Infantry)	*L. E. C. W. Wilmer	1330
8th (Cavalry)	*O. K. Chance	1356
(Colonial Candidate) ..	*C. D. Macklem	1308
— (Artillery)	*E. T. F. Hood	1187
— (Infantry)	*O. F. Lloyd	1179
— (Infantry)	*F. H. Span	1147
— (Infantry)	*J. C. W. Anderson	1132

* First Trial.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5862
Infantry	L. Aylmer	5851
Infantry	K. O. Goldie	5653
University.....	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.

ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY, and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.

No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.

Capt. M. M. FESTING.

Resident and Non-resident Pupils received.
 Prospectus with List of Successes on application.
 Officers Coached by Correspondence.

EPSOM COLLEGE.

NEXT TERM BEGINS JANUARY 18, 1901.

Public School for all Classes.

Successes this summer:—London Matriculation, 16 passed; Intermediate and Preliminary Scientific, 14 passed; Higher and Lower Certificates, 40 passed.

Separate Junior School.

APPLY, THE BURSAR.

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Camps, and Examinations.

Now Ready, 5th EDITION.

THE OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIDE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memos, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Book.

Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.

By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.

3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS.

Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables, Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

WM. CLOWES and SONS, 13, Charing Cross, S.W., and A. & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.

Of whom Refill-Books, and Blocks may be had.
 Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,

AND

MR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.

(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge),
 ECCLEFECHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
 prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and Non-Resident, for

ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVERSITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.

Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of many years' successful experience.

Careful Individual Attention. Strong Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer. Competent Military Instructor.

SUCCESSSES, 1900.

Woolwich.—None sent up.

Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only Candidate.

Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy.

TRINITY, CAMBRIDGE; Entrance, also PREVIOUS EXAMINATION—J. Cundell.

A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare; and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.

LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION.

WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and UNIVERSITIES.

MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.

Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PREPARES a Limited Number of PUPILS.

RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.

The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.

RECENT SUCCESSSES.WOOLWICH.

G. F. Farran.....	8001 marks.....	Dec. 1898.
W. Burrell Hayley	9228	Dec. 1899.

The only pupils sent up.

SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.

Viscount Ingestre	7th Cavalry Cadetship.
C. M. Truman	Cavalry Cadetship.
E. P. Grant	Infantry Cadetship.
G. Winne Finch	Infantry Cadetship.
B. H. Leatham	Infantry Cadetship.
G. E. Hawes	Infantry Cadetship.
C. A. Antrobus	Infantry.
R. H. Pippin	Infantry.
H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh	Infantry.
R. Neave	Infantry.
G. Wahab	Indian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

ELMSLEA, TOTTENHAM, MID-DESEX.

An Examination will be held in DECEMBER next for filling up five vacancies in this School, for which fatherless girls between seven and ten years of age, whose parents were members of the Church of England and in good circumstances, are eligible. The girls board at Elmslea and attend the Tottenham High School for Girls. Both board and education are gratuitous.—For further information apply to the Clerk to the Drapers' Company, Drapers' Hall, Throgmorton Avenue, E.C.

SOLDIERS' DAUGHTERS' HOME, HAMPSTEAD.

Patron: Her Most Gracious MAJESTY The QUEEN.

Chairman: LIEUT.-GENERAL LORD DE ROS.

Vice-Chairman: MAJOR-GENERAL D. WILKINSON, C.B.

CONTRIBUTIONS are earnestly solicited to enable the Committee to maintain the number of girls in the Home at 180.

Post Office orders and cheques to be made payable to C. R. LOW, Secretary, 5, Robert Street, Adelphi, W.C.

Educational.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE & TRAINING FARMS, HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.

Full information from the Director at above address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria Street, Westminster.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, ASPATRIA, Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

BRIGHTON—Crescent House School.

A. H. THOMAS, M.A., Oxon.

(Late 2nd Master O.M.C.).

OFFERS A SOUND GENERAL EDUCATION to Boys preparing for PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND NAVY.

Reduced Fees offered to Sons of Officers serving in South Africa.

RUSSIAN.

PROF. A. OGANJANOFF.

Graduate of the Odessa University.

Tuition on Easy Modern Method.

Moderate Terms.

Address: 40, Lisle St., Leicester Square, LONDON, W.

TURKISH & ARABIC.

SCHOLARSHIPS, REWARDS.

Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S principal successes at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish, held on April 5, 1899, were Colonel E. Stephenson, commanding officer of the Essex Regiment, QUALIFIED INTERPRETER at FIRST TRIAL, with 667 marks, and on October 18, 1899, Major H. A. Curtis, B.A., QUALIFIED with 643; and in Arabic, on Oct. 20, 1896, Capt. H. E. Cook, B.A., who "passed" with 502.

FIFTEEN other officers were also exclusively prepared by him and passed as QUALIFIED INTERPRETERS in Turkish with high marks.

Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.

NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-STANI, RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.

Distance offers no hindrance to success.

Intending Candidates should begin work early.

Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Colonel Russell, R.E. (ret'd.), and Staff,
 CLAVINIA, WEYMOUTH.

Prepare for this and other Military Examinations.

Postal Tuition for May Promotion Examination.

For prospectus and successes apply as above.

SANDECOTES SCHOOL, PARKSTONE, DORSET.

A High-class School, at Moderate Fees, for the Daughters of Gentlemen, where the aim is to train girls to be practical, refined, womanly women. Every care and comfort for delicate children. Large grounds; tennis and fives courts; playing fields. Pupils prepared for the University and other Examinations. Head Mistress, Miss Sophie M. Smith (National Sciences Tripos, Cambridge), assisted by a highly qualified staff. Two entrance Scholarships for competition in Dec. for girls under 12 and 15 years respectively.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUNTMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1, CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.

ARMY TAILOR AND MILITARY OUTFITTER.—F. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.

BREECHES MAKERS AND MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.

GUN AND RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W., PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. 303 Rifles a specialité.

MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN, Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., EDINBURGH (late 27, North Bridge).

MILITARY TAILORS AND BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.

HOTEL DIRECTORY.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining, Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.

DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.

DUBLIN.—SHELBOURNE HOTEL. First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.

EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate. An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.

LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families.—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.

PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL AND QUEEN'S HOTEL.—Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH

AND

MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.

(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge).

Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors, PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITIES at

CEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;

For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.R. Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."

Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and

7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT (150 yards from the Station), for Promotion Candidates and Day Pupils.

Telephone, "217, Kensington."

List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed, will be sent on application.

SANDHURST, WOOLWICH, INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SERVICE, and UNIVERSITIES.

MR. J. J. GREVATT

(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY, for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.

A Barrister on Staff assists Candidates for DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.

Prospectus with list of successes on application.

WORK WAS RESUMED AUGUST 15, 1900.

57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

Shipping.INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA, QUEENSLAND, BURMAH, PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.*BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, LIMITED.*BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to

CALCUTTA.	ZANZIBAR.
MADRAS.	MOMBASSA.
COLOMBO.	BRISBANE.
RANGOON.	BATAVIA.
MAURITIUS.	ROCKHAMPTON
BOMBAY.	TOWNSVILLE.
KURACHEE.	MARYBOROUGH
BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH, EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVIA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House, Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square, Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock House, Billiter Street, E.C.

P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA, CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICES.

P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS to GIBRALTAR, MARSEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN BOMBAY, KURACHEE, CALCUTTA, CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.

P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TICKETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.—For particulars apply at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

BIBBY LINE

TO

MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMB RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA (via Tuticorin).

Tons.	Liverpool.	Marseilles.
CHESHIRE*.....	5775	Nov. 1 Nov. 8
DERBYSHIRE*.....	6635	Nov. 17 Nov. 24
LANCASHIRE.....	4244	Dec. 13 Dec. 20

Those marked * are twin-screw steamers. These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.

Every possible comfort for first class passengers only.

This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,

26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and

10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.

ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,

138, Leadenhall Street, London.

C. HOWARD & SONS,

45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Pantaloon,
Polo Breeches.
11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.

F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.

Established over 80 Years.

ALL BUT NEW
OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,
for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of

LEWIS MOSES,
65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,
at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms and apparel purchased.

The Madras Times.
PUBLISHED TWICE DAILY.
MORNING EDITION.—The only morning daily
paper of the capital of Southern India.
EVENING EDITION.—Being despatched by the mail trains, this edition circulates throughout
the South of India, from Orissa to Cape Cor-
morin, and the Nizam's Dominions, Ceylon,
Burma, the Straits Settlements, &c.

THE MADRAS TIMES
WEEKLY AND OVERLAND EDITION.
For Weekly Subscribers, and for despatch to
the United Kingdom, Russia, Germany, France,
America, South Africa, Burma, the Straits Settlements, China, Japan, and Australia, the MADRAS
TIMES (Weekly and Overland Edition) is the best weekly newspaper in Southern India. Post
free £1 5s. per annum.
AGENTS IN LONDON FOR ADVERTISEMENTS, &c.:
Messrs. HENRY S. KING & Co., Cornhill.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and
VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete,
and single Articles in condition equal to New
at one-third original cost.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD.

E. WHISTLER,
11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND
BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.
Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S
The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach,
Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations,
Bilious Affections.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA
The Physician's Cure
for Gout, Rheumatic
Gout and Gravel; the
safest and most gentle
Medicine for Infants,
Children, Delicate Females, and the Sickness of Pregnancy.

Sold Throughout the World.
N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,
Naval and Military Outfitters,
WEST END BRANCH—
19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.
Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard. Do. 5810 Avenue. Telegraphic Address—"Realistic, LONDON."
New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements
(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)
BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.
REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.
Infantry, 35s. 6d. Cavalry, 38s. 6d.
ON APPROVAL.

The Pioneer

(Established 1865).

This leading Indian paper has long held the acknowledged position of being in the very forefront of Indian journalism. Its circulation extends all over the Indian Empire, and is wider than that of any other two daily papers in the country.
Subscription to Europe, America, and the
Colonies, £6 10s. per annum, post free.

THE PIONEER MAIL

(Established 1874)

Is published weekly in time for the English Mail, and contains a summary of Indian news for Anglo-
Indians in Europe.
Subscription to Europe, America, or the
Colonies, £2 8s. per annum, post free.

For scale of charges for advertisements address—
GENERAL MANAGER,
PIONEER PRESS, ALLAHABAD, INDIA.
Or the London Office,
13A, COCKSPUR STREET, PALL MALL, S.W.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage,
Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES,
BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.

The Warehouses, having been built expressly for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature
during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities.

JOHN HANES, Manager.
Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

BLAND & SONS'

"EUOPLIA"

BALL AND SHOT GUN.

A WEAPON OF PRECISION
Shooting Conical bullets up to 100 yards with the accuracy of any rifle; and shot with the pattern
and penetration of a shot gun.
In 12, 16 and 20 Bore. Weight of 12 Bore
about 7lbs.

AS SUPPLIED TO
H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,
Whose Expedition to the North Pole

WAS FULLY EQUIPPED WITH ARMS
AND AMMUNITION BY THIS FIRM.

T. BLAND & SONS,
2, King William St., Strand, W.C.
(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)

Works:
41, 42, & 43, Whittall St., Birmingham.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE
INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL
INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED
FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL
S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.

ESTABLISHED 1803.

Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.
Paid-up Capital, £300,000.
Invested Funds over £1,500,000.

E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

RICHARD DICKESON
AND COMPANY,
WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND
PROVISION IMPORTERS.
LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, Mansell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVER: Market Lane and Queen Street,
ALDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street.PLY-
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse. PEN-
BROKE DOCK: Tremeryk Street. GIBRA-
LTAH: City Mill Lane. CAPE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street. FORT ELIZABETH:
Lenkett's Warehouse, Ruffine Vale. DURBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street. Agencies at
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c., &c.

Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire.
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price Lists
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest.
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Canteen
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

OLD ARTIFICIAL TEETH BOUGHT.

Persons wishing to receive full value should apply to the manufacturing dentists,
Messrs. BROWNING.
If forwarded by post, value per return.
Chief Office: 133, OXFORD STREET (opposite
Berners Street), London.
Established 100 years.

The Rangoon Times

Is the Most Popular Daily Newspaper in
BURMA. Conducted on Independent
Lines. Has a large Circulation throughout the Province, and is a Splendid
Medium for Advertising.

THE WEEKLY RANGOON TIMES

Is published on every Homeward Mail day, giving an excellent summary of the week's news.

THE RANGOON COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER.

Published every morning, is a Favourite
Medium with Business Men for Advertising Purposes.

10, MERCHANT STREET, RANGOON.

The Times of India

OVERLAND WEEKLY EDITION.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
One Year, including postage £1 10s. 6d.
Half Year " " " " " " 10s. 6d.
Quarter " " " " " " 5s. 6d.
Per Copy " " " " " " 8d.

Re-posted from our London Office 1d. additional each Copy.

ADVERTISEMENTS WILL BE RECEIVED
At the "TIMES OF INDIA" Office, Bombay,
OR AT THE
LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.
Where all Orders from all parts of Great Britain and the Continent for the DAILY and WEEKLY EDITIONS of the "TIMES OF INDIA" should be addressed.

Advertisement Rates on Application.

LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.

EPPS'S
GRATEFUL-COMFORTING.
COCOA
BREAKFAST-SUPPER

MOUSELL BROS.

FURNITURE REMOVERS
AND STORERS,

Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, S.W.
AND WALHAM GREEN, FULHAM.
BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT
BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.
LEAMINGTON.—Windsor Street.
MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.
LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.
LIVERPOOL.—Bronte Street, Russell Street.
EXETER.—London Inn Square.
GLOUCESTER.—Depository, and Van and Wagon
Works, Commercial Road.

SECOND-HAND
UNIFORMS
BOUGHT AND SOLD.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UNI-
FORMS in all conditions at from one-fifth
original cost, or sells the same on commission.
Mufti clothing also purchased.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2129.—VOL. XLI.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRICE 6D.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—	PAGE
Personal Responsibility at the War Office -	1085
The Ebb and Flow of War -	1085
Tried in the Fire.—I. -	1086
The Naval Gazettes -	1096
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes -	1087
Army Personal -	1089
Navy Notes -	1098
Navy Personal -	1099
Letters to the Editor—
Competitive Examinations -	1091
South African Rewards -	1099
Articles—
War Correspondents -	1089
War Summary -	1091
Guns at the Paris Exhibition- -	1094
Casualties in South Africa -	1101
Casualties in China -	1102
The Gazettes—
Army -	1102
Navy -	1106
Regimental Intelligence -	1093
Reviews -	1095
Obituary -	1092
Naval Intelligence -	1106

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY AT THE WAR OFFICE.

IT is not often that the effects of an evil policy are so swiftly and rudely experienced as has been exemplified at the War Office in the removal of the Marquess of Lansdowne. That act was, however, but the logical consequence of the change in the status of the Commander-in-Chief inaugurated by Mr. Balfour in 1895, although, very probably, neither he nor others who favoured the new arrangement had any suspicion of what might result from it. For some years there has been a demand on the part of the public for personal responsibility. It dates from the eighties, when the War Office and Woolwich Arsenal were assailed with charges of favouritism and corruption by disappointed inventors, and searching investigations were held, to satisfy Parliament and the country, as to the truth or falsehood of the allegations. The satisfactory result was the complete vindication of the departments attacked, but there remained, and has until now survived, the public demand that the high officials who superintend the Departments of the State shall be held personally responsible to the country for the results of their administration. Before 1895, the Commander-in-Chief being then the sole recognised adviser in things military of the Secretary of State for War, personal responsibility for the measures adopted on his advice rested upon him. In 1895, when the Commander-in-Chief became merely one adviser among several of the Secretary of State for War, personal responsibility shifted, as it were automatically, to the shoulders of that high official, and on him, therefore, the eyes of the nation have since been fixed. No sooner had war broken out in South Africa than it became patent to the country that, as regards military matters, the people had been kept living in a fool's paradise, and that a great war had been sprung upon us for which we were utterly unprepared. By prodigious efforts, for which it claims and deserves great credit, the War Office has brought the regular war to a successful issue, although the pacification of the conquered territory is apparently still remote. But the want of preparation has neither been condoned nor forgotten. Personal responsibility had been instinctively laid by the country upon the War Minister, and his resignation became inevitable. This, Lord Lansdowne, to his credit, he it said, at once perceived, and he placed his resignation in the hands of the Prime Minister. It will thus be seen that the direct result of the change of rule in 1895 has been to saddle the Secretary of State for War with a personal responsibility in the eyes of the public, for which he is not qualified, which is unreal, and, as we shall presently see, in respect of which he cannot be effectually punished in case of failure.

Another equally direct outcome of the same vicious change has been the position of almost enviable independence conferred by it on the outgoing Commander-in-Chief. Lord Wolseley, on whom, in the nature of things, effective personal responsibility should have rested, is enabled, on relinquishing his appointment, to wash his hands of the whole affair, and to declare plainly in public that Governments, whether of one party or the other, habitually declined to face the Treasury when any considerable increase in expenditure would result from following the advice of the Commander-in-Chief. Not only, moreover, has the responsibility of the Commander-in-Chief been destroyed, but all responsibility has ceased to exist. While the country has held Lord Lansdowne personally responsible, and has successfully demanded his removal from the War Office, he has in reality had no responsibility apart from the rest of the Cabinet. Accordingly, the Prime Minister, acting no doubt under the wise counsels of the Sovereign, feeling that, under existing constitutional conditions, expulsion from the Cabinet would be an injustice, has simply transferred Lord Lansdowne from the War Office to that for Foreign Affairs. The matter of responsibility is thereby brought down almost to a reductio ad absurdum. Responsibility for the want of military preparedness, when distributed among the various members of the Cabinet, sat lightly enough on each while the Cabinet lasted, and now that it has gone its responsibility has gone with it. It is true that in the main the new Government is the same as the old, but the country has had sufficient confidence in it to return it to power with an increased majority, and consequently no very serious attack can be made upon it on account of shortcomings antecedent to the war.

And now as to the future. It may safely be affirmed that unless the new Commander-in-Chief be given his true and proper status as the sole military expert adviser of the Secretary of State for War, with personal responsibility in respect of measures carried out on his recommendation, the same baneful results may be looked for again and again. The country should, through its representatives, insist that this shall be done. There is nothing like publicity in such matters, as secured by means of free Parliamentary debate, even for the Cabinet itself, which is often too pusillanimous to face an opposing Chancellor of the Exchequer. The defence of the Empire is too serious a matter to be jeopardised by the supposed exigencies of party Government. The requirements of the military services must, in all cases, be laid before Parliament in the form of annual estimates prepared to show the expenditure involved. Let the justification for the demands be the Commander-in-Chief's report, prepared by him after consulting the War Minister concerning Imperial matters, and his military colleagues touching Imperial defence, and with a full sense of his own responsibility. Let it, then, be the function of the War Minister to explain the estimates by the light of such report, after due consultation with the Commander-in-Chief as to the several items. The House of Commons would then know the whole case; personal responsibility would rest on the proper shoulders; and it would rarely happen either that really necessary funds were refused by Parliament or that divergence in view between the War Minister and the Commander-in-Chief would be intruded upon the House.

THE EBB AND FLOW OF WAR.

LORD ROBERTS, in a despatch from Johannesburg on Monday, stated that there were unmistakable signs that the Boers were getting disheartened; also that food was scarce, and ammunition still scarcer. We should be glad to think that, as a consequence of the state of things above described, the end of the guerilla war was at hand, but the disheartening of the Boers has proved to be a process slow in the extreme, and disappointing in the result, until now, at the eleventh hour, the very decided defeat at Bothaville has inflicted a serious blow. But ever since the tide of success turned against the enemy, they have taken their defeats with the utmost stoicism, their mobility enabling them, almost always, to prevent absolute rout by timely retreat, and to turn up again with as bold a front as before, and in unexpected quarters. The bulk of those still in arms are, no doubt, irreconcilables, many of them rebels from Cape Colony and Natal, many, again, foresworn burghers who by taking up arms a second time have made their case desperate, with a residue of foreign mercenaries still clinging to the Boer cause. Such men would form an attentive and receptive audience for ex-President Steyn when he encouraged them to keep up a hopeless struggle by deceiving them with his unblushing mendacities. So long as the guerilla bands can replenish their bandoliers we may expect them to keep the field. Possessed of rifle ammunition, whether for Mauser or Martini-Henry, they can without difficulty by looting keep up their simple commissariat, and can commandeer the best horses the farmers possess. The continued hostility of commandos acting in widely separated quarters and possessing no train, affords strong evidence that the enormous quantities of ammunition known to have been imported by the Republics in anticipation of war with Great Britain, have been systematically distributed over the entire country against the time when the tactics of the war would degenerate into predatory raiding by guerilla bands. To deprive the enemy of their reserves of ammunition is, therefore, a matter of the first importance, even though it should entail a house-to-house search within the borders of the new colonies, as well as in all suspected places in Cape Colony and Natal. It is of equal importance to close all possible channels by which fresh supplies of ammunition might reach the hostile bands from outside.

The chief areas of disturbance at present lie in the southern districts of the Orange River Colony, and to the north of a line extending some 300 miles from Zeerust by Pienaars River Station to Lydenburg. Of the two, the southern area is the more disturbed, and a decided tendency is shown there to push across the Orange River and rekindle the flame of rebellion along the northern border of Cape Colony. Perhaps the most unpleasant and unsatisfactory incident of the week has been the reoccupation by the enemy under Hermanus Steyn of Ficksburg, near the Basuto border. The place has been looted and natives shot, and the Union Jack has been torn into shreds. The enemy dominate the district, and a commando of some 1,400 Boers is reported to be close to Ladybrand. While Wepener and Ladybrand have been garrisoned by British troops, Ficksburg has been left, owing to the difficulty of maintaining garrisons in so mountainous a district, at the mercy of marauding bands. The strategical importance of Wepener and Ladybrand is, however, shared by Ficksburg, all three being stations on the Basuto border, and from Ficksburg the roads radiate to Ladybrand, Winburg, Senekal, and Bethlehem. Troops will doubtless now be despatched to avenge so great an insult to the British flag within sight of the ever-watchful Basutos, and to effectually occupy the place, thus completing the chain of strong posts along the eastern border. Marauding bands are reported from various places. They continue to raid the country within a few miles of Bloemfontein, but are without artillery. It is reported that the enemy are making a practice of attacking pickets, and being so well mounted it is impossible for our troops to get within effective range. We can achieve no very marked results until we attain the required degree of mobility to enable us to cope decisively with the Boers. The 21st Brigade under General Bruce-Hamilton, returned to Kroonstad on Monday from a punitive expedition to the Ventersburg district where the enemy were said to be some 1,600 strong, with guns. Koffyfontein, a town twenty-five miles south-east of Jacobsdal, has been the scene of another plucky defence. It was attacked on the 26th ult., but the garrison under Captain Robertson, of the Kimberley Light Horse, being well posted and entrenched, repelled the assault and held their position until relieved on Saturday. Food supply is becoming a difficulty at Jagersfontein, Fauresmith, and Philippolis, as numerous small commandos infest the neighbourhood. The enemy are also reported in some numbers near Lindley and to the west of Kroonstad. General Kelly-Kenny's small columns under Colonels White and Barker have had slight engagements in the southern part of the Orange River Colony. On the 26th ult. Reddersberg, which in April last was the scene of the capture of five companies of British infantry, was raided by 300 Boers, and the garrison of thirty men taken prisoners. Thus in all parts of the south and west of the colony the guerilla bands at present roam and plunder at pleasure. They have also begun to surge over the border, a commando having been reported near Petrusville, a few miles south of the Orange River. Probably as a counter-move on our part General Settle has been despatched to the south from Kimberley.

North of the Vaal also, but few days pass without some stirring incident. Lord Roberts on the 2nd inst. reported that Lord Kitchener had made a night march from Lydenburg and surprised Schoeman's laager in Steenkampsburg at dawn, and then pushed on for Schalk Burgher's laager at Rooi Kranz. The Boers trekked to the north, leaving much ammunition behind them. General Paget, who had moved to Rustenberg to interpose between Delarey and De Wet, was engaged on the 1st inst., south-west of the Magato Pass. Plumer's mounted troops co-operated, and with great gallantry drove the enemy from two strong positions. General French on the 2nd inst. was at Springs, having marched some two hundred miles since he left Barberton, clearing the country. He lost 1,500 trek oxen between Machadodorp and Springs, and it was believed in consequence that these long rapid marches, trying in the extreme for both men and animals, would be discontinued, in favour of small mobile columns of mounted troops to move about the several districts, based on the chief towns which, effectively garrisoned, would form depôts for supplies. The arduous marches of British columns, undertaken ostensibly to clear districts of the enemy's presence have hitherto been almost barren of results. No sooner has a column swept through the country than the enemy reappears from the rear. A notable achievement was performed on the 1st inst. by General Smith-Dorrien, operating from Belfast. He started by different routes on a night march two columns, one of which he commanded in person, to surprise a laager at Witkop. The surprise was complete, but the fruits of victory were denied to the force which, drenched and almost frozen by storms that resembled a blizzard, was unable to press home the attack, and had to retire. The columns were then assailed with great boldness, and at close quarters, by the enemy, who, for their temerity, suffered heavily.

As we are going to press good news comes to hand dashed with fresh serious losses. A notable success has been won by Lieut-Colonel Gallais, but unhappily at the cost of his own and other valuable lives. It is a fine episode: the unceasing pursuit, the surprise, the hardly fought engagement at Bothaville, which, at the end of five hours, ended in a substantial defeat. What Le Gallais began so well General Charles Knox completed with his brigade and De Lisle's mounted infantry, the net gain being seven guns, a hundred prisoners, and many Boers slain. Steyn and De Wet were engaged, but, as usual, got away, this time "in great haste."

The hospital ship Nubia, from Natal, reached Southampton on Tuesday, Nov. 6, having called at Cape Town on Oct. 15. Major Burke, R.A.M.C., was in charge; a list of the invalids on board has already appeared in our columns.

TRIED IN THE FIRE.—I.

"BY their deeds ye shall judge them." The time has come now for passing judgment upon the patronage exercised by the military authorities last year in filling commands and the higher staff appointments in South Africa. A good deal of capital has been made out of the alleged favouritism at the War Office which led to the selection of men unfitted for responsible posts. Out of this has grown much clamour for the better recognition of merit as the only proper channel for advancement, the truth of which dictum no one can of course deny. It would hardly be difficult to prove, nevertheless, that in most cases merit, so far as it had been verified, was the basis of choice, and this can best be proved by examining the constitution of the higher staff in detail. It can easily be shown that the best available, as well as the most prominent, persons were as a rule selected. If they have not always acted up to the expectations of their superiors and friends, the blame is rather to be sought in erring humanity than in those who trusted and believed in them.

It seems like ancient history to go back to that dark period before the war, when few really saw what was ahead of us, and a very general impression prevailed that we should never come to blows with the Boers. Little more than a twelvemonth ago the claims of men to the chief command, should there be war, were keenly debated. The choice undoubtedly lay between the two leading generals, Sir Redvers Buller, who was appointed, and Lord Kitchener, who had a very strong backing. At that time there was no question of Lord Roberts, for the expeditionary force that would probably be sent out was not quite a Field-Marshal's command. When Buller was nominated it may be asserted, without fear of contradiction, that public opinion generally endorsed the appointment. That Lord Kitchener had recently won substantial fame did not entitle him, as many thought, to the further magnificent opportunity that was supposed to be opening in South Africa; it was only right that another, older, equally distinguished, and equally capable general officer should have his chance. No one, in fact, questioned the wisdom and justice of naming Buller to the command. No one now can fairly blame him for not being more immediately and more decidedly successful. The situation which faced him on arrival at Cape Town would have tried the greatest commander of any country and any age. All this has been thrashed out again and again, and need not be reaffirmed. Buller's record, and more particularly in the closing scenes, is an ample vindication of his appointment.

Sir George White stands next among the early selections, and it is well to recall one or two points in connection with his appointment to the command in Natal. He went out ahead of Buller to fill a great gap, to stand in the breach, so to speak, to head the handful of men hurriedly gathered in from India and elsewhere, to resist the invasion of Natal now imminent. While surely was wisely chosen; he was strongly backed and recommended both by his own previous deeds and the high opinion held by those who had seen him at work. Foremost among them was Lord Roberts, under whom he had served on many hard-fought fields, and who believed in him implicitly. It is difficult to see what better choice could have been made. Failing Buller, who was actually wanted for the bigger job, or Sir Evelyn Wood, who was of too high rank technically for the Natal command, the men who stood nearest White were Sir Francis Grenfell and Lord Kitchener. Grenfell at the time was doing excellent work—the civil post of Governor in Malta—and it is no secret that Mr. Chamberlain, as Colonial Secretary, was loth to let him go, even at the summons of his own legitimate business, war. Kitchener was barred, not merely by his employment in the Soudan, but by something more than a vague suspicion that he would not work well with, and under, Buller. Of the men remaining, many were already named to divisional commands in the Army Corps: Methuen, Clery, and Gatacre; and none of these, gauging them by subsequent services, could well have competed with White. One general only seemed especially fitted for the command, and he was shut out by hostile influences, vague, mysterious, impalpable, as we have every reason to believe them, but which have still to be probed. Among the many “regrettable incidents” of the Boer war, not the least was that which deprived our active army in the field of the services of Sir William Butler. A soldier of wide experience on this very South African field, and gifted by common repute with many of the best qualities of leadership, it is possible that Butler would have done better than White; but, after all, this is pure conjecture.

Coming now to the three divisional generals just mentioned above. Their selection for command is perhaps more open to question, but there is no reason to suppose that, even in Lord Methuen's case, social and other influences were at work to advance them over more meritorious candidates. Whatever verdict may be eventually passed upon Lord Methuen—and that must be left to the fully-informed, dispassionate historian—it cannot be denied that he had substantial claims to selection. It was not his fault that he was a peer, nor has his rank ever been suffered to militate against his strenuous study and practice of his profession. “Paul” Methuen had been a hard-working officer from the very first; he had been adjutant of a battalion of Guards, a staff officer of the Home District, its commander; he had accepted active service wherever he could find it; he had spent much time and labour in the observation of other armies; he was always to the fore at Volunteer reviews, eager and willing to help on the staff or in command. His general reputation as a soldier was undoubtedly good at the time of his departure for South Africa; what has happened since could not have affected the judgment of those who pulled the wires of military patronage. Take Clery next. We may compare the general of whom little is heard to the nation without history. Sir Francis Clery has plodded steadily through the campaign without playing to the gallery or earning much recognition from the reporters, whether of his own cloth or the Press. He has reached the terminus of his military career, as he must shortly be retired, and it will serve no purpose to balance his claims to credit. In his case, however, as in Methuen's, there is no doubt that he was esteemed at the outbreak of the war one of the best of our general officers, with many good all-round qualifications for command. He, too, had served through every grade from adjutant of a regiment to Deputy-Adjutant-General of the Army, had been constantly on the staff in South Africa and Egypt, and he had commanded an Aldershot brigade. More, he had long been associated with the higher education of officers—that special training which is said to be such a desideratum and (but erroneously) to be largely deficient. Clery's work on “Minor Tactics” was long the best text-book on the subject, the chief guide to knowledge of the drill regulations, out of which regimental officers learnt much, and many so-called experts about all they knew, of field movements. It was a foregone conclusion that Clery would receive a high post whenever a large army took the field. Last of all, Sir William Gatacre, whom all critics, save honest, chivalrous Dr. Doyle, have so bitterly condemned; he had great things to his credit, much staff service, active commands, Chitral, the Atbara, Omdurman. It would have been stigmatised as a gross omission had he been left out of the men chosen, for even though some found fault with certain Egyptian episodes, the fact remained that he was greatly distinguished for energy and fierce resolve to get the last ounce out of his men, while his skill as a tactical leader was never questioned. Gatacre's chief sin, after all, was failure—which he shares with the greatest in his profession—and few really would have forecast it of him at the outset of the Boer war.

There remain three officers who come within the highest category of original appointments; the chief artillery officer, the cavalry commander, and the chief of the staff. Little has been heard of General Marshall, the first; his has been mostly unseen work, but of the most valuable description, and when all the facts are known he will, no doubt, take rank amongst the best modern artillerymen. The name alone of the second will testify to his abounding worth. Few reputations rest on a more solid basis than that which General French has achieved in South Africa. It is known that there were many candidates for the post of chief cavalry leader, some of them subsequently tested with results that showed French immeasurably their superior. Never was patronage better bestowed than in his selection for command. Last of all, Sir Archibald Hunter—who was especially picked out for Chief of the Staff, and who was so long limited to narrower functions by the Ladysmith “entanglement”—has more than justified, and has largely added to, the esteem in which he was so justly held.

Other divisional generals, the brigadiers, and principal officers of the General Staff must be dealt with on another occasion.

Army Notes.

“Admiral” writes us offering some pertinent suggestions for the final settlement of the vexatious Boer resistance. He says: “I think most men are agreed that the time has arrived when the tedious guerilla warfare being so fitfully waged should be brought to a close. Two very simple—yet withal practical—suggestions, with regard thereto, were lately brought to my notice by a cavalry officer. It is quite possible the points raised may interest your readers, and the general idea itself may prove not beneath the attention of those who desire this result. My friend suggests, firstly, that by December 10 next, those burghers who possess farms should report themselves as ‘present.’ They should thereafter remain upon them for a fixed period of months, unless permitted to be absent for a short time, on military pass system. Those agreeing to this should be (1) left in possession of their farms, (2) receive a certain amount of compensation for any damage already done to them, and (3) have any previous ‘sins’ (in fair fight) forgiven them. But from these concessions oath-breakers should alone be exempted. The burghers should be made to thoroughly understand that frequent visits will be made to their farms during the period fixed, and the penalty for their absence—on such occasions—when found without a pass should be death, or such punishment as may be awarded by a duly constituted court. On the other hand, those who do not report themselves as present on their farms by, say, December 10, shall have their farms confiscated and render themselves liable, if caught, to death, or such punishment as may be awarded by a duly constituted court. The same alternatives to be offered to those burghers owning town houses.”

Contemptuous silence would be the only treatment for Mr. W. T. Stead's most monstrous and altogether unwarrantable attack upon the British Army. But if no protest is raised by the Service papers, it might be thought that silence gives consent, and judgment, for want of indignant rejoinder, would go by default. Fortunately, Lord Roberts has had the first word, and in his circular, addressed to the British public through the Press, has cut the ground from under Mr. Stead's feet. The British people will know how to discriminate between the two men: the upright, chivalrous commander, speaking out of the fulness of his own knowledge, and the writer who has no support for his aspersions but the evidence of a single “British officer,” who has not the courage to give his name. It is impossible not to believe Lord Roberts when he records, “with the most absolute truth, that the conduct of this (South African) Army, from first to last, has been exemplary. Not one single case of serious crime has been brought to my notice—indeed, nothing that deserves the name of crime. There has been no necessity for appeals or orders to the men to behave properly. I have trusted implicitly to their own soldierly feeling and good sense, and I have not trusted in vain. They bore themselves like heroes on the battlefield, and like gentlemen on all other occasions.” Lord Roberts goes on to talk of the “malicious falsehoods” circulated in the Transvaal and Orange Colony in anticipation of the invasion—stories altogether disproved by the splendid behaviour of our men. Such testimony as this will surely put Mr. Stead out of court.

We publish the following from a general officer, but without endorsing his views:—“These official appeals to save soldiers from their friends, and the entreaties to the public to refrain from tempting them to get drunk on their arrival from South Africa, seem to me a confession of want of discipline. Our men did not get drunk when they returned from the Crimea. When my regiment embarked for India there was not a single drunken man, and when we returned, after ten years' absence, there was no appeal from commanding officers to the people; and yet we are told that the soldier of to-day is a more respectable, self-respecting man than the man of the last generation was! The warnings in question do not look like it.”

One thing appears to have been settled by the recent war. Our Army Corps organisation will probably be abandoned. It was adopted, no doubt, in imitation of the German plan, and is a symmetrical and satisfactory arrangement for European warfare. But it will not serve for operations abroad. It is now stated authoritatively that the division is the largest tactical unit that can be conveniently employed in the field. A first objection to the Army Corps is the impossibility of embarking it intact, and to embark and sail somewhere is a first step in our offensive warfare. The first Army Corps called into existence last October twelvemonth fell to pieces the moment its constituents landed in South Africa. No doubt pressure of circumstances led to this, but it is also certain that as a unit the corps was too clumsy and too big. We saw, therefore, that all reinforcements as they followed out went in the shape of divisions, and Lord Roberts worked with the divisional unit throughout. With the disappearance of the Army Corps, corps troops will go. The infantry divisions will have their own small proportion of cavalry and artillery, but we may look for independent divisions of the former, and the artillery probably will be grouped in much the same way.

There is a general anxiety to know how far lyddite bears out its character as a destructive agent in war. On this question the evidence of Major Hamilton-Gordon, R.F.A., as set forth in “The Proceedings of the R.A. Institution,” is quite worth quoting:—

“Opinion in the Natal army undoubtedly inclines towards the view that the Boers despise it; statements made by prisoners, the rapidity with which on some occasions we have seen the enemy retire when lyddite was bursting in the trenches, and the effect produced on the wounded, as reported by the Boer doctors, all strengthen the belief that those who have once experienced it will not face lyddite from howitzer shells a second time. But this is probably as much due to the steep angle of descent of the howitzer trajectory as to the actual detonation of the shell. The whole strength of the Boer resistance lies in their complete reliance on the advantage of cover, to which they rightly attach great importance, but without which they can do little or nothing. When they find that neither in the front line in their deep-cut trenches, nor in reserve behind the steepest kopje, nor even in laager in the snug ravine half a mile back, nothing but the heaviest bombproofs, can protect them from this searching fire, their backbone is gone and their power of resistance is greatly reduced. Even a few scattered shell dropped behind a line of kopjes will remind them that cover—their fetish—has failed them, and will have a great moral effect. For searching the reverse slope of a large steep hill, it might be advisable to provide howitzer batteries with a few shrapnel shell. The Boers are as much afraid of our 15-pr. shrapnel as anything else, but they are well aware of its flat trajectory, and know how to get cover from it. A shrapnel shell, with a steep angle of descent, would therefore be useful for searching long, steep reverse slopes, even though its remaining velocity might not be great."

Mr. C. Oman (salvis titulis), Fellow of All Souls', has felt himself constrained to offer a few remarks on what he considers the curious mental attitude of Sir Herbert Maxwell towards the British officers who fought at Waterloo in his recent account of the battle. The majority of the veterans of 1815, Mr. Oman says, were gravely dissatisfied with the conduct of certain of their allies on the 16th, 17th, and 18th of June, and he sets to work in a very elaborate fashion by the aid of the evidence of eye-witnesses and of the official statistics of the Dutch Belgian Government to show that Sir Herbert's analysis of the conduct of the Dutch Belgians is replete with erroneous figures, mis-statements, and false inferences. His conclusion is that Thackeray's account in Vanity Fair of the custom of "Regulus Van Cutsum" was founded on genuine tradition. The Dutch Belgians had no heart in the business. They were under the spell of the Napoleonic tradition, and many had served under the eagles of the Emperor. The Netherlands have always been among the most stubborn fighters the world has seen when the cause was good in their eyes, and at Waterloo they were by no means enthusiastic. Mr. Oman has thrown down his glove in the Nineteenth Century, and Sir Herbert Maxwell will have some trouble in meeting the challenge successfully, though he may cite the Duke's compliments to Trip on his side.

A correspondent, who writes from Edinburgh, says that he thinks the troops of King George under the "Butcher Cumberland" must have been much better able to deal with an enemy in a mountainous country than our soldiers of to-day are, as the former were able to follow and defeat the Highlanders in their own land, and were never "ambushed" or taken prisoners, nor were they ever unable to pursue the clansmen after the latter were put on the run no matter where they were. The only "ambush" he knows of was Helen Macgregor's, but that was in "Waverley." Our experiences have been very different—for the results were real—and "cavalry have been especially unfortunate." We might commend to our correspondent's attention the different conditions under which war was waged in those days and now.

Once more it would seem that the force of circumstances is too strong for the most general and the most resolute of commanders. Lord Roberts has been obliged to disappoint the expectation of the country and his own desires, and to postpone the date of his possible return to some uncertain day in the year to come; so that he will see another Christmas and another New Year's Day far away from home, spared, the country hopes and prays from any sorrow, such as that of which he heard when he sat foot upon the fated shore of South Africa. It is fortunate that the Commander-in-Chief, on whose actions and conduct depends the honour of the Army, and in whose hands, firm and strong, is placed the security of Imperial interests at the Cape, is not one who is to be coerced by any pressure or expression of irresponsible opinion to resort to acts which are supposed by angry and terrified critics at home to be likely to terrorise the enemy in the field, by the means which excited indignation when applied by the Powers of who partitioned Poland, or by the Sultan who is responsible for the massacre of Armenians. Lord Roberts is not likely to imitate the policy of General Weyler in Cuba; but he has been obliged to concentrate in districts removed from the scene of the guerillas, the inhabitants who were likely to give aid to the enemy, or who had been guilty of treacherous artifices, or of connivance at the destruction of the communications of the Army.

There will be many reports of interest to be furnished to Indian Army Headquarters when the China Expeditionary Force returns to this country, says the Pioneer. For example, we shall learn then, if indeed not before, how the sepoys acquitted themselves with the '303 rifle, as this is the first campaign in which an Indian force has had the Lee-Metford. Again, in the matter of ambulances, which play such an important part against an uncivilised enemy, it will be interesting to learn how some of the new patterns answered the test. One of them was Major Kay's collapsible dhooli-stretcher, whilst another invention also on its trial is the "patent automatic folding dhooli," invented by Brigade-Surgeon Amesbury, late Indian Medical Service. Two of these automatic stretchers were sent originally with the Expeditionary Force, and they were probably used in the earlier actions of the war. Much may depend upon the reports furnished of these new and easily handled stretchers, both the Kay and the Amesbury. If they are a success, the Government of India may at last get a "sealed pattern" for general use on service.

The following cutting from the North China Daily News of September 1, has been sent to us—

"It is not easy to learn much in detail of the Wei-hai-Wei Regiment at the front. It is represented here by the recruits on the mainland, and by a number of wounded on the Island. Its casualties have been fairly heavy; of the 16 officers and non-coms. at the front, one has been killed and three were wounded; of the men some five were killed and 16 wounded. These figures reach only to the taking of Tien-tsin. With the Peking Relief Force, 100 of the men, three officers and two non-coms. went under command of Capt. W. H. Dent. There has been a good deal of prejudice against the regiment exhibited in one way and another, largely born of the conviction in many minds that the Chinese are no good anyway. Certainly these prejudices do not appear to have been justified so far. They fought bravely and well under the walls of Tien-tsin; let it be remembered that they fought with our troops and on the side of civilisation and humanity at a time when these abstractions have few friends among the Chinese. It has often been remarked that the Chinese only needed leaders, and the brief history of the Wei-hai-Wei Regiment confirms this judgment. For its history is brief, extending only over a period of a year and a half. Surely they must have been sanguine indeed who are disappointed with its conduct now. When men will follow their officers up a long straight street swept by bullets—as No. 4 Company followed Capt. Watson—they cannot be hopeless as soldiers. The regiment that can furnish a man to escort an ammunition mule to the firing line who will hold on to his charge while his officer and the mule are shot, only to perish himself, is not an altogether useless regiment. Europeans who said the conduct of this man after Capt. Ollivant had been killed—shot through the forehead as it now appears—speak of a merited V.C. Exaggeration? Granted, take off a handsome discount and what remains? Valour and devotion to duty limited only by death. Honour to whom honour is due. From the inception of the idea of the regiment difficulties of the gravest kind were anticipated. But the experiment was made and the results have been such that it may be confidently affirmed that the authorities will shortly acknowledge the Chinese Regiments an integral portion of our Colonial forces. When the regiment reached Tient-sin stories were circulated that some of the men had attempted to loot a foreign house, and that four of them had been shot on this charge. The tale was told with so much detail, and with such verisimilitude, that I gave it currency in this paper, desiring to give an impartial account of what had occurred. It is a pleasure to be able to put on record on the best authority that the story is fictitious. 'It is entirely untrue that any men of the Chinese Regiment have ever been shot for looting, though many poor chaps have given their lives or life's value in our cause in a most plucky manner,' writes Major Bruce, who, by the way, is himself recovering from his serious wound."

The strength of headquarters of the Chinese Regiment which proceeded to the front, says our correspondent, was 14 officers, 8 British N.C.O.'s, 363 rank and file, under command of Lieut. Colonel H. Bower, with Major C. D. Bruce second in command, the first detachment arriving at Tien-tsin on June 24. Up to August 14, the date of the relief of Peking, one officer and 12 men had been killed or died of their wounds; two officers, one British N.C.O., and 19 men wounded. The detachment which proceeded with the Peking relief column was commanded by Captain A. A. S. Barnes. Lieut. Colonel Bower was appointed joint governor of the native city of Tien-tsin after its capture on July 14; and Major Bruce having been severely wounded on July 6, Captain W. M. Watson assumed command of the regiment.

VIEWS AND OPINION OF THE PAST WEEK.

Times, Saturday, Nov. 3.—Correspondence: Home Defence and Irregular Riflemen, "Custos," Lonsdale Hale, Conan Doyle.

Times, Monday, Nov. 5.—Sir E. Ashmead-Bartlett, M.P., on the Change at the War Office. Field-Marshal Lord Roberts appeals to British public not to demoralise returning troops. Excellent Retrospect of the Boer War.

Times, Tuesday, Nov. 6.—Correspondence: Officers Expenses. South African Hospitals Commission—Evidence of Mrs. R. Chamberlain.

Times, Wednesday, Nov. 7.—Appreciation of African Native Regiments, Dr. Gray, P.M.O. of B.C.A. Protectorate.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE has hitherto not possessed any Volunteers, but Lord de Ramsey has taken the matter up, and permission has been granted by the War Office for a battalion to be formed.

THE War Office informs us that the title and postal address of the representative contingent proceeding to Australia for the inauguration of the Commonwealth will be:—The Imperial Representative Corps, Sydney, New South Wales.

THE 2nd Batn. Welsh Regiment (commanded by Lieut.-Col. F. S. L. Penno) have accomplished a feat which is believed to be unique. For the seventh successive year this smart battalion has carried off the Bombay Gymkhana Rugby Challenge Cup. The tournament is open to the whole of India, and was to begin at Bombay on Oct. 1, and ended on the 6th. In the first round the old 69th Regiment (now the 2nd Welsh Regiment) met and beat the 1st Batn. King's Shropshire Light Infantry by 32 points to nil. In the second round the 69th beat the Bombay Gymkhana by five points to nil. In the third and final round the 69th defeated the 1st Batn. West Yorkshire Regiment, from Kurrachi, by 17 points to nil. The total, then, to the credit of the 2nd Batn. Welsh Regiment is 54 points, whilst not a single point was scored against them. This is an achievement of which the battalion may well be proud.

It was announced on Tuesday, Nov. 6, that the following candidates qualified at the recent competitive examination for admission to the Staff College:—Capt. C. G. Stewart, D.S.O., R.A.; Capt. L. W. P. East, D.S.O., and H. L. N. Beynon, R.G.A.; Capt. R. F. G. Bond and Lieut. J. R. Chancellor, D.S.O., R.E.; Capt. H. St. C. Wilkins, 1st Royal West Surrey; Capt. R. F. Uniacke, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, and Capt. H. W. R. Senior, C. Ratray, and A. M. S. Elsmie, I.S.C. Owing to the war in South Africa the numbers competing were less than usual; and this, with the restriction as to the numbers of R.A. and I.S.C. officers, reduced the successful competitors to 10, leaving 22 vacancies to be filled by nomination. The following have been selected to fill 16 of the vacancies:—Capt. J. S. Cayza, 7th Dragoon Guards; Capt. J. Vaughan, 7th Hussars; Lieut. V. R. Brooke, 9th Lancers; Lieut. A. Symons, 13th Hussars; Maj. C. H. de Rougemont, R.H.A.; Capt. F. Lyon, R.F.A.; Capt. G. F. MacMunn, D.S.O., R.G.A.; Capt. J. A. S. Tulloch, R.E.; Capt. and Adj. C. P. A. Hull, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers; Brevet-Major A. E. Haig, 1st K. O. Scottish Borderers; Capt. G. Meynell, 1st Shropshire L.I.; Capt. H. R. Cumming, 1st Durham Brigade; L.I.; Brevet-Major G. H. Thesiger, 2nd Rifle Brigade; Capt. and Adj. the Hon. G. H. Morris, 3rd Rifle Brigade; Capt. C. F. Moores, A.S.C.; and Capt. S. Geoghegan, I.S.C.

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1105.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1107.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1107.

Army Personal.

A report has reached us, which may be taken for what it is worth, but which we give, feeling that it is backed up both by fitness and by probability. It is to the effect that Lord Kitchener is to be appointed Under-Secretary of State for War. It is well-known that great efforts have been made to find him a place in Pall Mall, and no military post is actually vacant. As a matter of fact, Kitchener will be more useful on the civil side than anywhere, and as but little party work falls upon the representative of that Department in the Lords he will not be so strange to political warfare as in the Commons. The appointment would be hailed with great satisfaction by the public, as a blow struck at the preponderance of civilian clerkdom in the War Office.

The idea of adding to the military character of the War Office has already found expression in the appointment of Lord Stanley to be Financial Secretary, in succession to Mr. Powell Williams. Lord Stanley cannot be called a great soldier, for his service with the Army is limited to ten years in the Grenadier Guards. But since his retirement from the regular Service he has constantly held a commission in the Militia, and is now honorary colonel of the 2nd V.B. Loyal North Lancashire Regiment (the old 47th). Lord Stanley has, as everyone knows, more recent claims in regard to military experience. He went out with Lord Roberts as private secretary, and soon afterwards became Press Censor at Headquarters, a difficult and invidious task which he appears to have discharged without gaining universal unpopularity. The significance of his appointment now to the War Office is that he will hold the purse-strings, and from his practical knowledge of men and things will be the more inclined to take a more professional view of matters under consideration. His intimate personal relations with Lord Roberts should also tend to smooth working in the office.

Mr. Arnold Forster, M.P., has achieved his ambition and takes office at the Admiralty, although many think he would have preferred a post at the War Office. He has, no doubt, made a close and continuous study of both branches of our Service, and he has ever been fruitful of suggestions for improvement. He has now an opportunity of trying his 'prentice hand on the somewhat difficult task of constructive administration.

Another soldier, as he may fairly be called, though no more than a Militiaman, is Viscount Cranborne, Lord Salisbury's eldest son, who has been serving in South Africa as officer commanding the 4th Batn. Bedfordshire Regiment, and who is now on his way home. Lord Cranborne's appointment to the Foreign Office as Under-Secretary of State will not perhaps bring him into touch with military matters; but his influence as a practical soldier cannot be without weight in the Government.

General Lord Chelmsford, G.C.B., has been appointed to the colonelcy of the 2nd Life Guards, in succession to the late Earl Howe. Lord Chelmsford served in the Grenadier Guards, and also commanded the old 95th Regiment. He has for some time past held the colonelcy of the Sherwood Foresters, which appointment is now vacant.

With reference to the appointment of Lord Roberts to the colonelcy of the Irish Guards we may point out, for the benefit of those who affirm that there is no precedent for a non-Guardsman receiving a Guards full colonelcy, that Lord Clyde was for some years colonel of the Coldstream Guards, though he had passed all his regimental service in a line regiment.

Major-General Alexander Walker, C.S.I., who succeeds Lord Roberts as Colonel Commandant Royal Artillery, entered the Bengal Artillery in December, 1856; became Lieut. in 1858; and Captain in 1865. In this rank he served throughout the Bhootan Campaign of 1865-66, and earned the medal and clasp. He was promoted Major in 1874, and Lieut.-Colonel by brevet in 1881. He reached the substantive rank of Lieut.-Colonel in January, 1884; Colonel by brevet July, 1885; and Major-General in December, 1894. General Walker is the senior artilleryman of his rank on the establishment. His C.S.I. dates from 1893.

Prince Francis of Teck, Generals Brocklehurst and Howard, Colonels Ward and Hobbs are returning home in the Tantallon Castle.

Many complaints reach us that the "Manual of Field Engineering" is out of print, and copies of it are almost impossible to obtain. This is the hand-book prescribed for examinations for promotion, and it is in constant demand. The War Office, or the School of Military Engineering, or whatever authority may be concerned in the publication of this much-needed volume, will, it is hoped, bestir themselves in bringing out a new edition.

Colonel A. C. F. FitzGeorge, C.B., the third son of the Duke of Cambridge, and formerly equerry and private secretary to his Royal Highness, has also been placed on the retired list, after a service extending from December 23, 1864, to November 2, 1900. Colonel FitzGeorge had served in the 37th Foot, in the Rifle Brigade, and in the 11th Hussars, and had seen considerable staff service. He was aide-de-camp to Lord Napier of Magdala while Commander-in-Chief in India from April, 1870, to September, 1875, was attached to the staff of the Prince of Wales in India in 1875-76, was an extra aide-de-camp to the general officer commanding at Aldershot from 1883 to 1886, and was private secretary to the Commander-in-Chief from July, 1886, to October, 1895.

The war still takes its toll of our most gallant and promising young soldiers. Universal regret will be felt at the sad news reported last night of the death of Lieut. Colonel Le Gallais. His Army service has been short and barely reaches to a score of years, but it has been of the best, and he had already richly earned Lord Roberts's encomium:—"As a most gallant and capable cavalry leader. Le Gallais was brought up in the very best of schools, the 8th Hussars, where he served side by side with Mahon who relieved Mafeking, and who was adjutant when the regiment was commanded by that excellent officer Colonel J. A. St. Quentin. Le Gallais was appointed to the Egyptian cavalry a year or two ago, and took part in Wingate's action which finally disposed of the Khalifa. Very early in the Boer campaign, he was specially selected for employment in South Africa and has been constantly engaged in active operations, and his career has closed with his finest and best achievement.

Captain Francis J. Engelbach, of the Buffs, who was killed in the same engagement, had been constantly engaged in active service, although his whole service does not extend beyond six years. He was with the Chitral Relief Force in 1895, and was specially selected for employment in West Africa, where he saw a good deal of stiff fighting.

No less distinguished was the third casualty—Lieut. William A. G. Williams, of the South Wales Borderers (24th), who had also seen much service in the Niger Territories, both at Benin, and in the Siam Expedition, when he gained the D.S.O.

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:

LIFE. { War Risks, World-Wide.
ACCIDENTS & DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence
BURGLARY, &c. { Abroad.

Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch.

The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.

Special Quotations for Messes.
Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums.
Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.
Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT.

'WAR CORRESPONDENTS.'

It is an unhappy name—"War Correspondents," uncouth, ill-chosen; but it is now well understood of the people. We have been accustomed of late to that style and title for the gentlemen who "go a-colonelling" for the great newspapers as correspondents in war time, and who have assumed or have had the name given to them. No matter where they may be—in the battle's van or at the base of operations—they are all "war correspondents," for they are somehow or other "with the Army," and write of its doings to newspapers. There is a prevailing belief, or impression, that the special writer who wrote to newspapers from battlefields was first heard of in the Crimea, and that, Topsy-like, he "grewed" on the soil, nurtured in the trenches before Sebastopol on shot and shell, a hardy winter annual, like one of the orchids that were to be seen as the snow melted on the slopes of Inkerman. But there were venturesome penmen who contributed to papers from camp and quarters long before 1854, what time editors and proprietors found they could purchase news and brains in the market. The "war correspondent" was not "recognised" in the Crimea by the military authorities; he had no privileges—not even those of a camp follower. He had neither leave nor licence from anyone. But then he had no badge—he had no number. As I am writing now of the period, I may cite my own experiences as illustrations of the throes attendant on the genesis in 1854, when "suffering was the badge of all our tribe." One raw February morning in the memorable year I waited on Lord Hardinge at the Horse Guards in Whitehall with a letter from Mr. Delane. I was informed that I would be taken in charge by Brigadier Bentinck, who was in command of the Guards, and that a passage would be provided for me in one of the transports as far as Malta. I had an interview with the Brigadier next day at Whitehall. I went down to Southampton the day the Guards left London, and proceeded on board the transport with my baggage and General Bentinck's order. My reception was not cordial. The officer on duty exclaimed, "The Times reporter! Well! I never! I would as soon have the devil on board." He is dead and gone long ago, and the devil's alter ego and he were very good friends later on. But he was soon relieved of my presence, for before the transport hauled out from the quay, Lord Hardinge requested Bentinck to explain that the Government considered it undesirable that I, as Times correspondent, should be allowed to accompany the Guards to Malta. With much regret, he had to ask me to resign my cabin. So I did. I arrived at Malta as soon as the Guards. The manner of doing it is a detail. At Malta I renewed relations with the Brigadier, but he "had no instructions" about me. When I asked the authorities how I was to get on with the Army, I sounded the depths of conjecture in vain. Had it not been for a friendly sailor in command at the dockyard I could never have accompanied the advance guard of the Army, but I sailed with Sir George Brown and his Headquarters Staff, on board the Golden Fleece for Gallipoli, as a sort of stowaway, with the 2nd Batn. Rifle Brigade.

I was a fly in amber indeed. On the voyage I was an object of the utmost interest to the General. He could never understand how I got there. At Gallipoli, Major, now General Sir Collingwood Dickson, G.C.B., whose acquaintance I was fortunate enough to make, gave me quarters and I fed promiscuously. When the Guards pushed on to Scutari, I went after them and pitched a miserable little pocket handkerchief tent on the flank of the Grenadiers, but coming back from a ride one evening there was no sign of my tent. The Italian servant I had hired at Gallipoli told me a party of soldiers had taken it away, "by orders of the General." I transferred my base of operations to Misseris' Hotel at Pera, and when the advance northwards began I managed to secure a passage to Varna in the P. and O. Himalaya, with Lord Cardigan and part of the Light Brigade. Landed at Varna, I was made welcome by the Consul for some days, picked up a couple of Turkish ponies, and when the Light Division marched to Aladyn I moved off to there and pitched my tent between the lines of the Rifle Brigade and the 7th Fusiliers. Still, I was a mere hanger-on. So far so good. The future was menacing. What was I to do en rase campagne? I had been fortunate in my friends, but how was I to get to Silistria? I made friends, dined at various messes, and hired a cook, but I had to send to Varna for meat, &c., and I was reminded often that I and my horses would starve "if we could not draw rations." From London came assurances that all would come right by-and-by. When the Light Division moved off from Aladyn I was left alone on the field till I could procure carriage for my tent. The Guards were marching up to occupy the ground. At the head of the column rode H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge and his staff. His eye caught the solitary tent. "Find out who that is and what he is doing there." The A.D.C. cantered back. "The Times reporter!" cried the Duke. "Why, what the deuce is he doing here? I would as soon see the ——" (the same one as the Guards officer mentioned) "in my camp." Meantime, my men had brought the horses, and my tent was down and packed off in an hour to Devno—where the cholera presently made havoc among the troops. To Sir de Lacy Evans I owed my passage from Varna to the Crimea. But there was no place for my horses on board the London. I landed at Old Fort without tent, baggage, or kit of any sort, but just ere I left Varna I received a note from Mr. Filder, Commissary General, to inform me that he had orders to furnish me with Captain's rations—self and servants, and forage for two horses, to be paid for at market price to the Commissary officer—the only official recognition I ever had. After the tent in which I was "harboured"—that is the word—by my kindly friends at Headquarters was blown away in the great gale of November, I took possession of a garret-like room in Balaclava over a Tartar stable. The soldier servant I had been lent was recalled to his battalion; and in the depth of winter, a serjeant of sappers and two privates appeared at my den with an order signed by Sir R. Airey, Q.M.G., to the effect that my lovely quarters were "required for her Majesty's service."

So far, in fact, was I free from all official control, and absolutely and helplessly at the mercy of the temporal power of the authorities. So absolute was the determination of the latter at the same time to ignore me altogether, that once on a time when I had written something about the position ere the first bombardment of Sebastopol opened, on October 17, Lord Raglan, whose house was within 200 yards of my tent, sent a private friend, Mr. Romaine, the Judge Advocate, to point out the serious offence I had committed by mentioning that a certain windmill inside our lines had been converted into a magazine for the storage of ammunition. The Times which contained the letter arrived at Headquarters after the bombardment had failed. When I wrote the letter I was informed by everyone that we would be in Sebastopol on the evening of the bombardment. Lord Raglan and the generals entertained the same belief. I said, "I am willing to forward all my letters to Headquarters. But then I must announce the fact. One of the gentlemen, Mr. Prevost Battersby, whose name frequently appeared in the Morning Post, has contributed an article to the National Review for November, which indicates temperately and fairly the inconveniences and the faults which have sorely afflicted correspondents at the Cape, and which have fallen still more heavily on the shoulders of newspaper proprietors at home. The public have become familiar with the names of many of the correspondents, for of late they have been printed by the papers. Some of these names are owned by men who have become veterans in the field, and whose literary exploits have been of the most remarkable brilliancy, and of the utmost value to the public. Their names are not legion. On the other hand, as Mr. Battersby and other gentlemen have found out, persons in their profession or occupation have to make them acquainted with strange bed-fellows, and to be associated with very undesirable companions. Beggars cannot be choosers. Papers of infinitesimally small circulation have sent out representatives, and no discrimination has been exercised by the War Office in licensing correspondents. Mr. Battersby sets forth his own case before he proceeds to deal with the suggestions to which I shall come presently. The attitude of the military authorities in this connection is too, inconsistent. He obtained permission from the War Office with considerable difficulty to represent a London daily paper in South Africa, and on arriving there, instead of finding the number of correspondents severely restricted, he met representatives of unheard-of foreign journals, of American monthly magazines, of social weeklies, and millionaires masquerading as journalists, and mere literary gobemouches under the cloak of the Press. But scarcely had the campaign begun before the press censor informed a whole host of papers that they would require two reporters in place of one. "Throughout," he says, "we suffered from the vacillation of the censor, his too-conspicuous inclinations, edicts of one week, and edicts of one week which were rescinded the next." The military objection to the ignorant, irresponsible character of correspondents' criticism is entirely the fault of the War Office, which should require credentials of fitness and refuse licences if they are not satisfactory. Mr. Battersby considers that only the big dailies, illustrated weeklies, and recognised agencies should be allowed licences. The censor at present has to deal with men who may be as complete strangers to habits of discipline as they are to those of good manners, with a preference for the views of the private soldier in the matters of strategy whose conception of their duty includes the bribing of telegraph and signalmen, and who have a craving for news rather than for honour. In that state of mind the correspondent of the Morning Post advocates a drastic measure—to cut off the correspondent from the telegraph altogether! The wire has an evil influence. It leads to bribery and corruption of subordinates, and to the use of a most uncertain class, which has come into being since my days—the despatch rider. Of the miseries of a correspondent who has to choose between proximity to the enemy and the touch of the telegraph wire, he draws a striking sketch. And if one has, after lying out a night with a lonely picquet, had the chance of seeing the fight, it may be dark ere he can find the telegraph, and when he gets there the censor may put a stop upon him by one of his incomprehensible edicts. It would need more space than the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE can afford to give the details of Mr. Battersby's gravamina. But they are numerous, and some of them weighty. To get full value for a correspondent his hand must be free, and he must be set free from the daily importunity of the telegraph. Are the public then to be without telegraphic news of the war? No. But the newspaper correspondent is not to be the agent for cable despatches. He is to be the historian concentrating his powers on a review of operations, and furnishing thoughtful records in the shape of letters, of course, to the paper he represents. A man of military knowledge, of literary power, and habits of discipline must be appointed, with official recognition, with access to the official mind without being unduly influenced thereby, whose daily despatch should be distributed from the War Office to every newspaper that paid its share for the cost of the message. The censor has put his closure on all that is possible of splendid and exciting venture. The old days which were the correspondent's glory will never come again. The desperate rides of such a man as Archibald Forbes, Mr. Battersby thinks, are not ever likely to be repeated in the interests of a newspaper. The daily papers have been practically reduced to a common level by Lord Roberts's despatches. There will be no longer need of telegraphic agencies at the front and their dangerous connecting link, the despatch riders—large consumers of forage and often the biggest horse thieves in camp. If the War Office does not see its way to appoint a staff correspondent to accompany every column, it might consent to entrust the use of the telegraph to the agencies only. Without giving any reasons for the conclusion to which I have arrived from the perusal of these suggestions, I may state at once my opinion that whatever may be the decision of the War Office for military correspondents in the field, there cannot be any grounds for supposing that newspaper proprietors would go to the expense of employing gentlemen to write letters. They have had a trying experience in South Africa. The actual expenses of a correspondent, according to Mr. Battersby, must have been considerable. One of these gentlemen might have to employ a dozen despatch riders, each of whom had to be mounted and have spare horses and baggage, and to find food and forage for the whole stud. In addition, he might require three or four light carts at the front; twice as many black boys to look after them and assist in stealing horses; and a heavy waggon to assist in carrying stores with the baggage train. The picture of a correspondent's life at the present day causes me unfigned thankfulness that I had no badge and no censor half a century ago.

W. H. RUSSELL.

CONNOISSEUR'S SMOKE
TEOFANI'S
HIGH-CLASS
CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition, 1900
Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

THE sergeants of the 21st Middlesex V.R.C. have invited the whole of the C.I.V.'s of their battalion to their annual dinner, to be held at the Agricultural Hall on Saturday, the 17th inst. Of the large number sent to the Lord Mayor's Own from the Finsbury Rifles, some 56 have returned to England.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Nov. 3.

A Reuter telegram from Cape Town says that Lord Roberts will return home via Durban in the Canada about Nov. 20. Many Boer refugees are returning to their commandos from Lorenzo Marques. Gen. Knox reports the capture from De Wet of three guns and a number of prisoners. Nearly 60 prisoners were captured as the result of an engagement with the enemy by Bruce Hamilton's and Hunter's force. Major Hanwell was unfortunately killed.

Monday, Nov. 5.

Kitchener, commanding at Lydenburg, made a night march and surprised Schoeman's laager in Steenkampsberg. Much ammunition was captured. Numerous minor engagements are reported by Kelly-Kenny, Plumer, and other small column commanders. Lord Roberts publishes an appeal to the British public not to "treat" returning soldiers. He characterises the behaviour of his men in the field as beyond all praise.

Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Lord Roberts, in a despatch of Nov. 3 from Johannesburg, says that one of the two guns captured from De Wet on Oct. 27 was a Krupp, the other belonged to the "U" Battery. Gen. Barton made a reconnaissance through the southern end of Gatrand on Nov. 2. Very few Boers were seen, but several much-needed trek oxen were captured, and a wagon taken by the enemy last week was recovered. An expedition by Gen. Smith-Dorrien from Belfast to surprise a Boer laager at Witkop the night of Nov. 1, succeeded in surrounding the Boers, but the inclement weather prevented the success from being followed up, and when our troops withdrew the enemy followed with great boldness. Their losses were heavy; the British casualties were an officer and a man killed, two officers and 12 men wounded, and one man missing.

The Paris Municipality agreed on Monday to offer a reception to Mr. Kruger.

Wednesday, Nov. 7.

Lord Roberts, in a despatch of Monday from Johannesburg, says that while there are unmistakable signs that the Boers are getting disheartened, and that food is scarce and ammunition still scarcer, Mr. Steyn is doing his utmost to encourage his countrymen to keep up a hopeless struggle by deceiving them with false accounts of their successes. On Oct. 22 he told Delarey's burghers that De Wet had seized the railway bridge at Norval's Pont, that 5,000 Dutchmen had risen in Cape Colony, and that Mr. Kruger had gone to Europe to get intervention, failing which the Transvaal would be sold to the highest bidder. A slight engagement took place on Nov. 3 with a few Boers near Reddersburg. The British casualties were an officer and four men wounded.

The Dutch cruiser Gelderland, with Mr. Kruger on board, arrived at Jibutl on Monday afternoon. The ex-President was in excellent health, and expressed delight on hearing of successful Boer raids. Preparations are being continued at Marseilles by the Boer Independence Committee to give Mr. Kruger a great public reception.

Reuter despatches from Bloemfontein and Maseru contain details as to the operations of Boer marauding bands in that portion of the Orange River Colony. A commando of 1,400 men is reported to be near Ladybrand.

From Kimberley it is reported that Koffyfontein was relieved on Saturday.

Thursday, Nov. 8.

The capture by a small party of Boers, nine miles from Kimberley, of a military traction engine drawing trucks loaded with stores is reported.

Gen. Settle's column, 3,000 strong, after operating in the neighbourhood of Bloemhof and Hoopstad, has arrived at Kimberley, and left again immediately by rail for the south.

A Reuter despatch of Nov. 1 from Pretoria, which has been delayed in transmission, describes the ceremonies at the funeral of Prince Christian Victor, which took place on that day with full military honours.

Friday, Nov. 9.

Boer bands are reported to be in the neighbourhood of Bloemfontein, and refugees are daily coming into the town. There has been no ploughing, though splendid rains have fallen, as the farmers are uncertain whether they will be able to reap the crops.

A Reuter despatch from Pretoria says that in order to deal with Boer raiders Gen. Baden-Powell will shortly try an experiment which, if successful, will be generally adopted. Two strong patrols will enter a disturbed district and immediately construct a strong bomb-proof fort, which will be provided with three months' supplies. A strong party, unhampered by baggage, will then patrol the surrounding country, returning to the fort when ever necessary.

Lord Kitchener is about to proceed to Natal on a tour of inspection.

A Reuter telegram from Kimberley reproduces from the Kimberley Advertiser an interesting account of the gallant defence of Koffyfontein for nearly a month by Capt. Robertson, of the Kimberley Light Horse, and a garrison of 50 miners, against two strong Boer commandos.

Lord Roberts reported Friday evening, dated:—

"Johannesburg, Thursday, 3.30 p.m.
"Colonel Le Gallais surprised the Boer forces on Monday night three miles south of Bothaville. He was heavily engaged for five hours, the enemy's strength being about 1,000. Charles Knox followed Le Gallais with De Lisle's Mounted Infantry, and completely defeated the enemy. We captured one 12pr. ('Q' Battery), one 15pr. (14th Battery), four Krupp guns, one Pom-Pom, and one Maxim, with all their ammunition and wagons, and 100 prisoners. Twenty-five Boers were left dead on the field, and 30 wounded. Steyn and De Wet were with this force, and left in great haste. The enemy were pursued for some miles in a southeasterly direction, when they broke up in small parties. Our casualties were:—

"KILLED.—Col. Le Gallais, 8th Hussars; Capt. F. Engelbach, of the Buffs; Lieut. W. A. Williams, S.W. Borderers, and eight men.

"WOUNDED.—Seven officers and 26 men.

"I deeply regret the death of these three officers, all most promising. Le Gallais's is, indeed, a very serious loss. He was a most gallant and capable cavalry leader.

"The fighting must at one time have been at close quarters. 'U' Battery, R.H.A., under Major P. B. Taylor, was in action at a range of 400 yards. Among the wounded prisoners is De Villiers, Steyn's secretary, and amongst the dead a Boer doctor with Red Cross on his arm, rifle in hand, and bandolier half emptied.

"On Tuesday a party of Boers attacked a post of mounted troops near Honeynest Kloof, and wounded one man.

"The Modder River camp was fired into yesterday, and two of our men were wounded. The Boers had one killed and 14 wounded. White's and Barker's columns are doing good service in the south-eastern province of the Orange River Colony, breaking up the small parties of Boers who have been trying to incite the burghers in that part of the country to rebellion.

"Douglas, on Tuesday morning, surprised a laager south of the road running from Zeerust to Rustenburg. He captured seven prisoners and several wagons.

"Boyes, while conveying a convoy from Harrismith to Vrede, was opposed by a small party of Boers on Tuesday. Two Boers were killed. We had one of the Manchester Mounted Infantry wounded.

"Smith-Dorrien reports having been engaged with the enemy some miles south of Dalmanutha on Tuesday. He drove them to the east of the Komati River. Casualties not yet reported."

Casualties in the Field Force, South Africa, reported during the month of October, 1900, and total casualties reported since the beginning of the war, up to and including the month:—

	Officers.	N.C.O.'s & Men
Killed in action	302	2,902
Died of wounds	89	893
Prisoners who have died
in captivity	3	90
Died of disease	155	6,115
Accidental deaths	4	145

Total deaths in S. Africa 553

Missing and prisoners (excluding those who have been recovered or have died in captivity) 7

Sent home as invalids 1,422

Total, S.A. Field Force 1,982

46,026†

Total reduction of the Military Forces through war in South Africa:—

Deaths in South Africa 553

Missing and prisoners 7

Invalids sent home who have died 4

Invalids sent home who have left the Service as unfit

564

12,205

12,769†

* This total includes a number of men reported "missing" who subsequently rejoined, but whose return has not yet been notified.

† Of these 208 have died, 1,030 have been discharged from the Service as unfit, and 948 are in hospital.

‡ The difference between these two numbers is due to the fact that the great majority of the men invalided home have recovered and rejoined for duty (see note *).

NOTE.—This return is now issued monthly.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each, or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Bewlay & Co., Importers, 49, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacco-nists.

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE"
SIR,—I read the letters that appeared in your issues of October 20 and 27 last respecting "Officers' Expenses" with the utmost interest, and thoroughly endorse the opinions therein expressed, and most sincerely hope they will receive the recognition they deserve when "Army reform" is tackled in earnest. The heading of my letter is also, in my opinion, one worthy of great consideration. The South African War has conclusively shown that a high standard of mathematical and classical knowledge is not an absolute necessity for men to possess, in order to enable them to make good soldiers and good officers; on the contrary, men of only average educational ability, but possessed with an abundance of common sense (a very important factor) have proved that they possess all the attributes that are calculated to make good and efficient officers.

I should like to know how many of those who have "caught the eye" of Lord Roberts in South Africa for their meritorious and soldier-like abilities, and have been granted commissions in consequence, could pass the competitive examination for Sandhurst or Woolwich.

For the last 30 years thousands of young public school candidates, and others in every way fit, physically and otherwise, to make good officers, have been lost to both Services by their competitive examinations, and it is an admitted fact that the work that has enabled the successful ones to pass in (more particularly, perhaps, for Sandhurst) is, comparatively, of very little service to them in their future calling, but replaced almost entirely by the work inherent to their profession.

Competitive examinations, as at present, will never, to my mind, bring out those soldier-like qualities so essential to an army in the field, but incline rather to glut the Services with bookworms, who are more often than not men who, from physical unfitness as boys, have been unable to participate in the healthy recreation of their school games, whereby they give their minds to study which enables them to out many a good man from the service of his country who, taken all round, would lick them into fits when it came to sheer hard campaigning.

I most earnestly hope the day is not far distant when a substantial number of marks will be given in all Service examinations for physical qualifications and proficiency in certain public school games and the gymnasium. That there should be some sort of examination goes without saying, but that it should be of such a nature as to keep really serviceable men from a glorious profession of which they might become great ornaments is, to say the least of it, a lamentable pity.

STILL ANOTHER SOLDIER PARENT.

MESSRS. RICHARD DICKESON AND Co., of Dover, London, Dublin, Portsmouth, Aldershot, South Africa, &c., have secured the contract for the supply of groceries and provisions to the whole of the canteens in the Dublin District for the ensuing twelve months.

FOR REGIMENTAL CANTEENS AND MESSSES.

GRAVINA

is a desirable and economical addition to the kitchen supplies of the Mess-room.

GRAVINA is a gravy powder, particularly useful for making a gravy for joints. By its aid many appetising hot dishes can be made from scraps of cold meat, or odds and ends of game, poultry, &c.

GRAVINA is one of the varieties of the popular

EDWARDS'

DESICCATED

SOUP

and it is the one specially recommended for gravy. When, however, a hot soup is required without labour, one or other of the soup preparations is more suitable, and will be found much more supporting, and in every way preferable, to the usual coffee or cocoa supplied to men on night guard, or after an arduous day's duties.

List Prices for 1lb. Tins.

Gravy, 1/10; Brown Soup, 1/3; White Soup, 1/3; Tomato Soup, 2/6.

Can be obtained of most Grocers and Stores.

Manufactured by

FRED. KING & Co., London & Belfast.

Obituary.

NAVY.

Capt. Henry Knox Leet, who died at his residence, London Road, Croydon, on the 4th inst., was born in March, 1832, and was a son of the late Rev. Edward Leet, for many years Rector of Dalkey, County Dublin. He was one of five sons, four of whom served in the Army and one in the Navy. Capt. Leet joined the Navy as Naval Cadet in 1847, and served for many years on the West Coast of Africa for the suppression of the slave trade. On the outbreak of the war with Russia, 1864, he served as mate of the Neptune, flagship of Admiral Corrie in the Baltic. In 1855 he was appointed senior officer of six mortar vessels proceeding to the Black Sea, and was actively engaged during the siege of Sebastopol, and at the last bombardment was placed in command by Admiral Lord Lyons, the Commander-in-Chief, was specially mentioned in the despatches of the day. He afterwards served as lieutenant of the Valorous, employed in the blockade of Kinburn and Odessa. At the close of the war he was decorated with the Legion of Honour and Medjidie, Baltic, Turkish, and Crimean medals with clasps, and was promoted to Lieutenant on Sept. 22, 1855. He afterwards served as Senior Lieutenant of the Cormorant during the war with China, 1857-60, when she contributed so materially to the capture of the Pei-ho Forts, by cutting the cables and leading the attack. He was specially mentioned in despatches for his gallant conduct on this occasion. He was engaged on shore at the storming and capture of the city of Namtow, in 1859, was again mentioned in despatches. He was then appointed to command the Firm on the same station, and mentioned in despatches relative to the destruction of twelve piratical junks, for which service he received the written approval of the Admiralty. He afterwards commanded the Slaney, and again received the written approval of the Admiralty for the successful destruction of fourteen heavily armed piratical junks in May, 1859. At the close of the war received the China medal with clasps. He next served as Senior Lieutenant of the Royal Sovereign till promoted to Commander on April 11, 1866, and then served as Inspector and Commander of Coast Guard from 1867 to 1870. In Oct., 1870, he was appointed to command the Thistle, in which vessel he served on the China station, being senior officer at Tien-tsin during the winter of 1871-72. He afterwards served as Senior Officer in Japan. In 1873 he was appointed Captain of the Princess Charlotte and Senior Officer at Hong Kong, which post he held till superseded on optional retirement April 11, 1874. On leaving the station he received the written thanks of the Commander-in-Chief for his valuable services during the time he served on the China station. Capt. Leet was awarded the Distinguished Service Pension, Nov. 6, 1897.

Assistant-Paymaster Arthur Hodson (retired) died suddenly in the office of a London assurance company on the 3rd inst., aged 56. He reached that rank in 1856, and retired in 1870. Was clerk of the Bombay when that vessel was burnt off Monte Video in 1864.

ARMY.

Major-Gen. Sir Charles Taylor Du Plat, K.C.B., died on Friday last at his residence, Ashley, Winchfield, Hants. Sir Charles Du Plat was the son of Brig.-Gen. G. C. G. Du Plat, R.E., a Knight of Hanover, and Pauline, Countess Hardenberg. He was born in 1822, and was, therefore, 78 years of age. Educated at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, he entered the Royal Artillery as long ago as 1841 and served in that corps for just on 40 years. He became Lieut. in 1842; Captain in 1848; Major in 1860; Lieut.-Colonel in 1862; and Colonel in 1867; retiring on full pay in 1880 with the rank of Major-General. He saw no active service. Since 1854—that is to say, for a period of about 46 years—Sir Charles Du Plat had been closely connected with the Court. In that year he was appointed Equerry to the Prince Consort, and he acted in that capacity until the death of his Royal Highness in 1861. From that time onwards he attended the Queen as Equerry-in-Ordinary until 1893, when he became an Extra Equerry, an office which he still held at the time of his death. He had the first-class of the Prussian Order of the Red Eagle and the Grand Cross of the Ducal Saxon Order of Ernestine and of the Royal Saxon Order of Albrecht. Sir Charles Du Plat was twice married—first, in 1855, to Maria, daughter of Sir William C. C. Dalvell, seventh baronet, who died in 1867, and, secondly, in 1897, to Ann Bennett, elder daughter of Mr. J. S. Forbes. The Court Circular contained an expression of the Queen's regret at the General's death. The funeral took place on Nov. 6, at Winchfield, Hants. Her Majesty sent a representative and expressed a wish that as many members of her household as possible should attend. The Queen also sent a wreath made in the Royal gardens at Frogmore, to which an autograph memorial card was attached. The Prince of Wales was also represented. A party of Royal representatives, military officers, and personal friends and relatives were present at the ceremony. Among them were Major-Gen. Sir John McNeill, V.C., who represented the Queen and took with him her Majesty's wreath, Major-Gen. Sir Arthur Ellis, representing the Prince of Wales, Col. the Hon. W. Carington and Col. Davidson, equerries to the Queen, Sir Fleetwood Edwards, Gen. Slade, Lord Cheylesmore, Admiral of the Fleet Sir E. Commerell, Gen. Eaton, Mr. Ludovic Goetz, and Gen. Rideout, R.A.

Lieut.-Col. G. J. Sutton Jones, I.S.C., whose death is announced, joined the 57th Foot from the Militia in 1878; became Lieut. in 1880; Captain in 1889; Major in 1898; and Lieut.-Colonel commanding the Bhopal battalion from April of last year till his death at Indore on Oct. 30. He saw service in the Zulu War of 1879 with "Clarke's Column," for which he received the medal with clasp.

Lieut.-Col. Francis Mackenzie Salmond, retired full pay 21st (Royal North British) Fusiliers, died on the 1st inst., at Bristol, from fractured base of the skull, the effect of a fall down a flight of stairs, owing to his excessive short sight, on the afternoon of the previous day. He was the son of the Hon. Jas. Salmond, resident Councillor of Penang and Malacca, and was born at Penang in March, 1841. He obtained his commission from Sandhurst Military College in December, 1858, and was appointed to the Royal Scots Fusiliers. He obtained his Lieutenancy in 1862, his company in 1873, and his Majority in 1881. He was promoted Lieut.-Colonel, unattached, in 1889, and retired on full pay in 1891. Lieut.-Col. Salmond was well known throughout the Service for his constant efforts to improve the shooting and judging distances of the Army. He was Musketry Instructor of his battalion from 1870 to 1873. He was Adjutant of the Scottish Borderers Militia at Dumfries. Was appointed Captain Instructor at the School of Musketry, Hythe, in 1878; D.A.A.G. North British (now Scottish) District at Edinburgh in 1880. In 1884 he was appointed Assistant Inspector and D.A.A.G. for Musketry at Hythe. He was a member of many successive War Office Committees on Musketry, Small Arms, Ranges, Range-Finders, &c. He had made a speciality of range finding, and had only recently designed and invented "The Distance Indicator," a small ring dip, which, being attached to the rifle indicated, with the aid of a very simple mental calculation, the approximate range of any ordinary object up to a reasonable distance. This very simple and portable gauge is so cheap that a large number were taken out to South Africa. Among others the C.I.V.'s had some, and the inventor was awaiting the reports on the results obtained by his patent in the field when he met with his death as above related. He had also just completed an improved "distance indicator" to be fitted to a telescope for longer ranges. Both are applicable to sporting rifles also. Lieut.-Col. Salmond was married to the youngest daughter of the late General Hart, whose "Army List" is so well known, and she survives him. A son, 2nd Lieut. F. W. Salmond, was recently appointed to the Royal Field Artillery from one of the Australian contingents. The Service has lost an able officer, who was much beloved for his amiable disposition and earnest, unassuming character.

Lieut.-Col. Alan Coddington Batten, I.S.C., whose death is announced, was second in command of the 15th Bengal Lancers, to which post he was appointed in February last. Col. Batten joined the Army in 1875; became Captain in 1886; Major in 1895; Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel in 1896. He served in the 34th (Cumberland) Regiment till his transfer to the Indian Service in 1879. He saw active service in the Jowaki Afreedee Expedition of 1877-78 (medal with clasp), Afghan War of 1878-80 (mentioned in despatches). He accompanied Sir F. Roberts in the Candahar march (medal with two clasps and bronze decoration). He was with the Chitral Relief Force in 1895 as Brigadier Major 2nd Brigade, and was present at the storming of the Malakand Pass (despatches, medal, clasp, and Brevet of Lieut.-Colonel).

Captain William Lyon Dennistoun Baillie, whose death in action on Oct. 25 is reported, was the only son of the late Mr. George A. F. Baillie and nephew of the late Sir William Baillie, of Polkemmet, Linlithgowshire. He joined his regiment in 1894, and became Captain last February. His relatives received a telegram from the War Office on Oct. 30 stating that the following message had been sent by Gen. Barton:—"Please convey to relatives of Capt. Baillie, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers, killed in action on Oct. 25, my deep sympathy and admiration for his most gallant conduct."

Lieut. James Cavendish Browne, 2nd Company Imperial Yeomanry, who is reported killed in action at Vrede, was the second son of the Rev. H. G. Cavendish Browne, rector of Bredon, near Tewkesbury, and was related to Lord Kilmaine and Viscount Frankfort de Montmorency. Lieut. Browne was a well-known member of the Royal Gloucestershire Hussars and was one of the first to volunteer for the front. He went out with the Gloucestershire company, but was transferred to the Glamorganshire as sergeant, and eventually to the Wiltshire as Lieutenant.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
* AND BRASSES *
Morris & Sons
239 Kennington Rd. London S.E.
Established 50 years

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPELL & CO. LTD. EXETER
44 & 5 DUNCANNON ST. LONDON.
CHANCERY CROSS. DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

MEMORIAL BRASSES
MARBLE & OTHER TABLETS,
Stained Glass Windows.
DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES FURNISHED BY—
Founded COX, SONS, BUCKLEY & CO., 1887.
18, Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, London.

JONES & WILLIS
LONDON.
43, Gt. Russell St.,
Opp. Brit. Museum,
and HORNSEY.
BIRMINGHAM.
79, Edmund St.
and
LIVERPOOL.

MEMORIAL BRASS
ENGRAVERS.
TABLETS IN . . .
MARBLE, STONE, & ALABASTER.
STAINED GLASS .
MEMORIAL WINDOWS.
CHURCH FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.

MILITARY MEMORIALS IN "LATTEN" BRASS OR MARBLE, &c.—Special Illustrated Military Price List on application to GAWTHORP, 16, Long Acre, W.C., and 19, Castle Street East, W., London, Craftsman in Metals to H.M. the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Patronised by the War Office, Lord Wolseley, Sir Francis Grenfell, the Guards, Cavalry, and most Regiments of the Line. See Memorials to Officers killed at Glencoe, Deliel's Drift, Kimberley, Wagon Hill, Ladysmith, Magersfontein, Omdurman, Khartoum, Khyber Pass, Crete, &c., and in the Boer War of 1880-81.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards.—Lord Brooke, who has just had a year's service in the 7th King's Royal Rifle Corps (Barnet Militia), and has served in South Africa on the staff of Gen. French, has been given a commission.

2nd Life Guards.—Lieut. F. Ripley, son of Sir F. Ripley, who has been given a commission, is at the front with the Royal Lancashire Militia.

Household Cavalry.—The Composite Regiment, which was to leave Cape Town in the Hawarden Castle on Nov. 6, is expected to arrive about the 27th inst., and the squadrons will return to their regiments in London and Windsor.

1st (King's) Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. W. H. Collins has been appointed to the Australian Guard of Honour.

3rd Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. J. Arathoon has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

6th Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. B. Armytage has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys).—Capt. C. W. M. Feilden is discharged to duty in South Africa.

6th Dragoons (Carbineers).—2nd Lieut. C. R. Terrott and Lieut. C. Amphlett have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

7th Hussars.—Capt. Wormald, 7th Hussars, on his return from service in South Africa, has been appointed Adjutant of the regiment at Aldershot.

11th Hussars.—The command vacated by Lord E. Talbot, M.P., has been given to Major the Hon. O. V. G. Lumley; the regiment is now in Egypt. Capt. Fitz Gerald left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided.

13th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. C. E. Jenkins has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

15th Hussars.—Capt. Battine, who is under orders to join the China Expeditionary Force as Field Intelligence Officer, was formerly in the 7th Dragoon Guards. He became Lieutenant in 1890, and Captain in March, 1897. He exchanged into the 15th Hussars in February of this year.

16th Lancers.—Lieut. Upton is reported convalescent at Wynberg.

17th Lancers.—Lieut. Fletcher left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided.

18th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. D. W. King is discharged to duty in South Africa.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Col. L. W. Parsons, who returns from South Africa in the Dunvegan Castle, has been appointed Col. on the Staff to command R.A. on Salisbury Plain.

Col. Eustace and Col. Davidson (R.H.A.) are returning home in the Avondale Castle, which left Cape Town on Nov. 1.

Major White-Thompson (R.H.A.) and Lieut. J. F. Shewell (R.G.A.) left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided.

Captain Atlay left Cape Town in the Scot on Oct. 31 for England.

Capt. F. Barker has been appointed Adjutant of the 7th Brigade Division Royal Field Artillery, and has joined at Aldershot for duty.

Lieut. C. A. R. Scott (R.F.A.) has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

2nd Lieut. C. E. Vickery, 42nd Battery, R.F.A., is discharged to duty in South Africa.

2nd Lieut. E. S. Armstrong has been posted from No. 26 Company, Southern Division (Gibraltar) to No. 18 Company, Southern Division, R.G.A. (Aden). 96th Battery, R.F.A., moved from Birmingham to Preston Nov. 2.

Maxim gun detachments are being organised at Woolwich for service in China with the 1-pounder Vickers-Maxim guns, which are arriving from the manufacturer's works at Erith for the purpose. The officers and men selected for service with the gun referred to are, pending embarkation, undergoing instruction in the manipulation of the weapon. The detachment will consist of five officers and 120 non-commissioned officers and men, R.A., who will embark at the Royal Albert Docks in the Peninsular and Oriental s.s. Java on the 10th inst., for service in China. The officers proceeding for this duty are: Captains H. J. Cotter, 21st Company, R.G.A., J. R. Wilson, 90th Battery, R.F.A., F. B. D. Broadrick, 97th Battery, R.F.A., E. G. E. W. Russell, Y Battery, R.H.A.; and Lieut. I. W. G. H. Salmond, R.H.A.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut.-Col. H. Finnis, Major H. Mullaly, and Capt. F. W. Watling have received thanks of the Government of India for their valuable services in drawing up, as members of a specially-appointed committee, a comprehensive scheme for guarding the railway lines and bridges in India in case of emergency. The lessons of the war in South Africa brought this subject directly under the notice of the local authorities, and the report of these officers was the outcome.

Major W. R. Morton has fully qualified as interpreter in both the Arabic and Turkish languages at the first trial at the recent examination of officers in foreign languages held by the Civil Service Commissioners on October 16 and 17. This achievement is quite unique and unprecedented in the annals of scholastic work either in this country or abroad, and it is rendered the more remarkable by the circumstance that his instructor remained in London while he himself was quartered at Mooltan in the Punjab, and, therefore, the whole of the instruction had to be imparted by correspondence. The period occupied for both languages was three years.

Capt. N. M. Hemming, who has only just joined the Home District for duty, is to embark for Indian service about the end of this month.

Capt. J. E. Clauson, has been appointed secretary to the Colonial Defence Committee at the War Office, in the place of Major Nathan, appointed Governor of the Gold Coast.

INFANTRY.

Brigade of Guards.—Capt. Sir F. E. W. Hervey-Bathurst, Grenadier Guards; Lieut. the Hon. G. V. Baring, Coldstream Guards; 2nd Lieut. Lord Falconer, Scots Guards; and 2nd Lieut. R. C. A. McCalmont, Irish Guards, have been nominated as the officers for the company of Foot Guards forming part of the guard for the Duke of York at the inauguration of the Australian Commonwealth.

Coldstream Guards.—Capt. Hanbury-Tracy has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Irish Guards.—The regimental offices which have hitherto been at the Horse Guards, Whitehall, are to be moved next week to St. George's Barracks. A grant of £500 towards the expense of forming an officers' mess and a band and band allowance at the rate of £140 per annum have been approved. 2nd Lieut. the Hon. C. M. P. Brabazon has been transferred from the 135th Battery Royal Field Artillery.

Royal West Surrey Regiment (2nd).—Lieut. B. T. Churcher, now at the Guildford depot, is appointed to the guard of honour to the Duke of York in Australia. Lieut. R. J. K. Mott (2nd Batn.) is discharged to duty in South Africa.

East Kent Regiment (3rd).—Capt. R. F. Pearson, 1st Batn., has been appointed temporary Instructor in Topography at the Royal Military College.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Capt. F. C. Turner and S. C. Ferguson have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—Capt. G. F. Hibbert has been posted to the 3rd Batn., on promotion.

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—Capt. C. S. Warwick is discharged to duty in South Africa.

Somersetshire Light Infantry (13th).—Capt. S. H. Woodhouse and 2nd Lieut. T. C. Spring (4th Batn.) have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

West Yorkshire Regiment (14th).—A telegram dated Nov. 5, from the General of Communications at Cape Town, stated that there was no truth in the Press reports that Capt. Appleton of the 4th Batn. had been shot by a sentry. Lieut. G. S. Constable (4th Batn.) has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Capt. H. W. Coates (4th Batn.) and Lieut. A. B. Lemon (2nd Batn.) have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Yorkshire Regiment (19th).—The following is an extract from the diary of a Volunteer Sergeant with the "Green Howards," or 19th Regiment, at the front:—

"We four sergeants turned into a house at Bloemfontein and asked for tea, and got it. It was rather a novel experience—for the first time in two months we sat down in chairs in a house. The woman who made our tea has two sons, prisoners in our hands at Cape Town. They had been fighting against us, and she was terribly afraid they had been, or would be, shot. They think we shoot all our prisoners. We reassured her on this point, telling her they were all right, provided they made no attempt to escape. She said they wouldn't do that, as they preferred being prisoners to fighting. She presented each of us with a box of matches—quite a valuable present, too. I noticed she took the sovereign given her in payment to the light, and looked very hard at it. We asked her what was wrong with it. She said she had to make sure it had no whiskers on it. (Evidently didn't think much of Kruger's coinage.)"

Royal Scots Fusiliers (21st).—Lieut. Elliott has improved, though still seriously ill.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—Lieut. J. Gething (3rd Batn.) has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th).—Lieut. C. Leigh (1st Batn.) has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Scottish Rifles (26th).—Capt. R. Oakley (1st Batn.) now at the Hamilton depot, with a draft of his regiment from the depot, has been ordered to join the remainder of the Cameronian detachment for the Rifle company of the Australian guard at Chatham.

Worcestershire Regiment (19th).—Lieut. H. A. Lang has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

East Surrey Regiment (31st).—Lieut. C. E. Currie (2nd Batn.) is discharged to duty in South Africa.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd).—Lieut. A. P. Williams-Freeman has been ordered to join the Australian Guard of Honour.

West Riding Regiment (33rd).—2nd Lieut. Herapath left Cape Town for India in the Umfuli on Oct. 27.

Border Regiment (34th).—Lieut. G. E. Warren has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Dorset Regiment (39th).—Major W. R. Arnold, Lieuts. W. A. C. Fraser and F. W. Radcliffe, and 2nd Lieut. F. S. Bowring, have been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut. Goodden (3rd Batn.) left Cape Town on Oct. 29 invalided.

S. Lancashire Regiment (40th).—The following extract is taken from the orders of the 3rd Batn.:

"Two patrols of the 3rd P. W. V. (South Lancashire Regiment), were attacked by the enemy, when scouting in the neighbourhood of Jagersfontein Road, Orange River Colony, on Oct. 13. 2nd Lieut. Hanbury and Private Cantello were killed, and Private Morrison was wounded. The following is an extract from Battalion Orders published on the 14th:—'Casualties.—The commanding officer deeply regrets to announce to the battalion the death of 2nd Lieut. E. M. Hanbury, who was killed in action on Saturday, 13th inst., when commanding a patrol of "B" Company (Mounted Infantry), in the vicinity of Jagersfontein Road. 2nd Lieut. Hanbury joined this battalion on Nov. 2, 1898, and had by his kind and cheerful disposition as well as by his conscientious performance of duty endeared himself to all ranks. He had only this month received a notification of his appointment to a 2nd lieutenantancy in the 2nd East Yorkshire Regiment. Circumstances, however, prevented him leaving this battalion for a time, and he has now met his death serving with it in the fearless performance of his duty. The commanding officer also regrets to announce the following casualty:—5543 Private Thomas Cantello, "B" Company (Mounted Infantry), killed in action when on patrol duty near Jagersfontein Road on Oct. 13, 1900; 6826 Private John Morrison was wounded on the same occasion."

Welsh Regiment (41st).—Lieut. W. A. G. Moor has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Highlanders (42nd).—Lieut. Walker (1st Batn.) left Cape Town for India in the Umfuli on Oct. 27.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (43rd).—Col. Eveleigh left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided.

Loyal North Lancashire Regiment (47th).—Lieuts. Berkeley and G. Hesketh have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Berkshire Regiment (49th).—Major McClintock left Cape Town on Oct. 31 in the Scot, on passage home.

King's Royal Rifle Corps (60th).—Lieut. G. K. Pringle has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

North Staffordshire Regiment (64th).—2nd Lieut. G. Hume-Kelly has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

York and Lancaster Regiment (65th).—Capt. J. E. Forster (3rd Batn.) is discharged to duty in South Africa.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Capt. H. R. Cumming has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—Capt. Haldane left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided. Capt. K. Dingwall (2nd Batn.) has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

NAVAL AND MILITARY MEMORIALS,

Brasses, Crosses, Gravestones, Monuments, Tablets, Windows, Fonts, Pulpits, Reredoses, Standards, Mosaics, &c., of the highest class, designed, executed, and erected by

THOMAS PRATT & SONS,

Ecclesiastical Art Workers,

MEMORIAL GALLERY, 24, TAVISTOCK STREET (facing Covent Garden), LONDON, W.C.

Illustrations Free.

Old Military Flags netted and arranged for preservation.

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—Lieut. J. Campbell (1st Batn.) has been discharged to duty in South Africa. 2nd Lieut. A. Macintosh has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (87th).—Lieut. Cole-Hamilton left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided. Lieut. M. B. C. Carbery (1st Batn.) has been detailed to join the Australian Guard of Honour.

Leinster Regiment (100th).—Major W. Seton has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—Capt. J. R. O'Meagher has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Dublin Fusiliers (102nd).—2nd Lieut. E. V. M. Shelly (5th Batn.) is discharged to duty in South Africa.

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. MacLachlan left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, on passage home; Capt. H. D. Moss (2nd Batn.), and H. D. Marshall (5th Batn.) are discharged to duty in South Africa.

Army Service Corps.—Capt. Denny and Lieut. (Qrnr.) Blake left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided; Capt. E. W. Brooke has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Army Ordnance Department.—Lieut.-Col. Butcher left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided.

R.A.M.C.—Major Bateson, Lieuts. Bruce and Glover, left Cape Town on Oct. 29 in the Orcana, invalided. Lieut.-Cols. P. H. Johnstone, A. F. Harvey, and Major S. F. Freyer, have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Indian Medical Service.—Col. Davis, Indian Medical Service, is appointed Principal Medical Officer, British Contingent, China Expeditionary Forces, vice Col. Bookey, invalided.

Staff.—Major-Gen. Downing, R.A., and Capt. E. Wood, left Cape Town on Oct. 31 in the Scot, on passage home. Lieut.-Col. Hegan returned last week from South Africa, where he was A.A.G. in the division commanded by Gen. Tucker. On Monday he resumed command of the cavalry depôt at Canterbury.

Army Chaplains' Department.—Rev. L. O. Warren is discharged to duty in South Africa.

Indian Staff Corps.—Major Ryder and Capt. G. de H. Smith left Cape Town for India in the Umfuli on Oct. 27.

Remount Department.—The Government of India are said to have sent home a recommendation that the appointment of Superintendent of the Presidency Remount Depot at Calcutta should be held to qualify for promotion to the brevet rank of colonel, and they further suggest that Lieut.-Col. C. V. B. Kuper, R.A., who has held the appointment since June, 1897, should be the first to benefit by the arrangement should it be approved by the military authorities at home. Col. Kuper has given 26 years to the Service. He became Captain in 1883 and Major in 1891. Capt. Hughes left Cape Town on Oct. 31 in the Scot, on passage home.

Militia.

The following disembodiments took place on Nov. 7: Suffolk Militia Artillery, at Ipswich; Antrim Militia Artillery, Carrickfergus; Cork Militia Artillery, Donegal; Militia Artillery, at Letterkenny; Hants and Isle of Wight Militia Artillery, Dublin City Militia Artillery, Limerick City Militia Artillery, Mid-Ulster Militia Artillery, at Dungannon; Falmouth Division of Submarine Miners Royal Engineers, the Harwich Division Submarine Miners Royal Engineers, as well as the Plymouth, Portsmouth, and Thames Division of Submarine Miners Royal Engineers, at Plymouth, Gosport, and Gravesend respectively. The Clare Militia Artillery will be disembodied at Ennis on the 16th inst.

5th Batn. K.R.R. (6th) moved from Nenagh to Templemore on Nov. 1.

Lieut.-Col. F. H. Fairtlough, commanding the 3rd Queen's (Royal West Surrey), has been granted five years' extension of his appointment from the 23rd ult.

Volunteers.

The following officers of Metropolitan Volunteer Corps passed the recent course at the School of Instruction and were awarded certificates of proficiency, viz.:—2nd Lieut. S. G. Beach and A. G. Bartholomew, of the 5th Middlesex Rifles; 2nd Lieuts. B. M. Robertson-Macdonald, J. A. Hay, W. G. Hayter, and R. F. Bayford, of the 14th Middlesex (Inns of Court) Rifles; 2nd Lieuts. J. S. F. Bacon and S. Read, of the 20th Middlesex Rifles; 2nd Lieut. F. S. Hammond, 21st Middlesex Rifles; and 2nd Lieut. P. F. Mordant, 2nd V.B. Royal Fusiliers. Of these officers Lieut. Hammond received special mention.

CANTEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd. 23, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

MISS HICHENS, Cert. Med. Rubber and Hospital Trained Nurse. VISITS PATIENTS' morning. RECEIVES from 2 to 6 p.m., or by appointment.—(First Flat), No. 5, Vernon Place, Bloomsbury Square, W.C.

GUNS AT THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

The study of guns is an absorbing one to either man or boy, and the Times article of October 24 on the magnificent show of big guns in the Paris Exhibition reflects the enthusiasm of one who, if not an expert, yet writes armed with the knowledge and experience of actual warfare. The wild theories of the non-expert as to the many miles range of modern guns of high velocity is naturally absent, and, instead, we get formidable weapons of the war. It is not untrue that a high velocity gun may be made, by means of excessive elevation, to range ten or even fifteen miles, but what the projectiles may be and what damage they will do—or not do—are matters beyond the ken of the sensationalist writer.

The qualities possessed by any gun of a given weight are affairs of compromise, and there is a sharply dividing line between the French and the British artillery. A French naval gun of 12in. calibre and weighing 46 tons is supplied with a projectile weighing 644lbs.; a British naval gun of identical calibre is supplied with a projectile of 850lbs. weight. In accordance with natural law, the pace at which the lighter shell leaves the gun is much higher than is the case with the heavier projectile, but the bursting charge of the British shell is 80lbs., whilst the French burster is at most 58lbs. Again, although the lighter shell commences its flight at high velocity, it loses impetus more rapidly than does its heavier rival, and at distances from 4,000 to 2,000 yards not only is the crushing and penetrating power in predominance with the heavier shell, but the havoc wrought by its larger bursting charge is incomparably greater. Nevertheless, M. Claudinon, a French expert, publicly belittled the system of British heavy guns, but there are those who with equal theoretical experience dispute his obiter dicta on this abstruse point.

After penetrating power, imparted to the projectile by a well designed barrel, two other qualities have to be considered—viz., rapidity of fire and the life or endurance of the inner surface of the barrel. In direct proportion as the velocity of the projectile increases, so will the rapidity with which the exposed portions of the lining tube perish; hence, if propellants of equal heating powers be used, the French gun will have a shorter—if a merrier—life than its Britannic competitor. Manufacturers in various countries are making longer and heavier guns than are now in general use, but none of the newest designs were exhibited in Paris, by either of the three great firms, British, French, or Austrian, the only three exhibitors of armament of the largest class. In smaller classes, on the other hand, many makers exhibit guns of the most recently-developed types. British visitors gaze anxiously on the Vickers-Maxim of small calibre, whose congeners are supposed to have been issued during the few months preceding the war to the Boers. But this gun after repeated trials was not accepted by the Royal Navy. An unwarranted scare as to the superiority of the Boer guns, wherever derived, over the ordinary field-battery guns of our service has caused much military misreading. At the outbreak of war we were short of guns in number, and failed to put early into the field guns fit to contend with the 15-centimetre guns supplied from Creuzot to the Transvaalers; nor, in the early stages of the war, were our troops supplied with the 14in. quick-firing gun above mentioned, with which the Boers were armed. The practical mobility effected by bullock teams and large bodies of human labourers with the 5-ton Creuzot gun of nearly 6in. calibre was a startling revelation, and the results might have been disastrous if skilfully and rapidly equipped ship-guns had not formed a timely expedient in the hands of the handiest of men. Rapidity of fire is of extreme value under certain circumstances, but a rapidity on paper, or on a range, may be a misleading guide in the field, when economy of ammunition is of great moment, and effect is gained by observation of results.

Between the largest bona fide quick-firing gun and the machine gun of various types using small arm ammunition, there are many gradations. It is hardly just to call any gun over 6in. calibre a quick-firing gun, for the projectile of that weapon weighs 100lbs.—a great weight to be man-handled; any larger gun must have gear to lift its projectile. The armament that we have been employing during the Boer War has been as heterogeneous as the troops. Both show lack of previous organisation. Sixteen different types of artillery have made their appearance in this one campaign; each required its own special ammunition. Such a mixture should have been avoided, and precautions must be taken to prevent the recurrence of confusion utterly inexcusable in the armament of a mechanical and manufacturing nation. The types of guns should be co-ordinated in clearly marked groups; the supply of guns slightly varying in calibre to the same force must be jealously avoided.

The collection in Paris has given fair opportunity for our artillery experts to concentrate their ideas before the necessary construction of great quantities of new type artillery is put in hand.

CONFIDENTIAL reports are to be sent in on all officers of the Reserve of Officers serving with Regular units in the present emergency.

AN IMPROVED TARGET.—A new target has been designed which, if adopted at rifle ranges, is likely to meet with much acceptance from riflemen who follow up shooting continuously. The new invention, says the Newcastle Chronicle, is the work of a local Infantry Volunteer, who has himself been a shooting member of his corps for many years. The targets at Bisley have not only to be pierced, but this fact has also to be known to the markers in the trench before the targets are pulled down and examined. Mostly, the marking at Bisley is good; but every year there are very many cases of challenging when the firer thinks he has hit and the target does not go down. It is quite possible for the small bullet to go through the canvas without the marker below either hearing the sound or seeing the hole; hence the disputes, and possibly those who do not care to challenge sometimes lose points. It is with a view to finding a remedy for this that the new target has been devised. A hit on any part of this target ensures its disappearing below, which at once assures the shooter that he has made a hit. The target is held in position by a bolt which is attached to a steel plate, one-third the size of a canvas target, and fixed in the rear of the centre of the target. Four thin steel plates are cut and fitted on the iron sliding frame to form a funnel, the wide end to cover the target in the rear, and the narrow end to cover the target will draw the bolt and allow the target to drop into the marker's trench. The same target could be used up to any distance. A rope is fixed to the bottom of the target and brought through a ring or runner in line with the bottom of the target when in position, so that by pulling the rope in the trench the target comes up again after being patched. The discs for marking are at once both simple and effective. These are fitted on to the iron frame like flaps, two on either side and worked by the marker by means of handles which are entirely out of sight at the firing point. It is confidently anticipated that the trenches, which are now carried well back to allow the marker to see the bullet hole, would not need to be near so roomy, as the target by going down tells of itself when there has been a hit. The device is an admirable one, and is the result of much patience and forethought.

PREVENTION OF ZYMOTIC DISEASES.—For greater security have the Drainage and Water Supply of your Town and Country or temporary Residence examined and certified by the Sanitary Engineering Company (H. Carter, C.E., Manager), 65, Victoria Street, Westminster.—Fee quoted on request full particulars. Established 23 years. Telegrams: "Sanitation, London."

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.

£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400

(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT - - - £100 to £185

(Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315

(Chelsea, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

Reviews.

NAPOLEON: THE LAST PHASE. By Lord Rosebery.*

"Will there ever be an adequate Life of Napoleon?" The first line of this remarkable volume asks a question which the rapid "scamper"—arrested every minute by some passage of absorbing interest and literary power—we have made through the volume would induce us to answer ere we came to "the end," in a volume which places the name of Lord Rosebery in the very front rank of the writers of this century. It would not be possible, in the time and space at our disposal, to give a just criticism or account of the book of the year, but we would ask our readers to take our advice, to get it at once, on trust, for if ever there was a volume full of human nature it is that of which the name appears at the head of this scanty notice. "Napoleon," says Lord Rosebery, "carries human faculty to the farthest point of which we have accurate knowledge. Alexander and Cæsar are too remote for precise comparison. But Napoleon lived under the modern microscope. Till he had lived, no one could realise that there could be so stupendous a combination of military and civil genius, such comprehension of view, united to such grasp of detail, such prodigious vitality of body and mind." "No name represents so completely and conspicuously domination, splendour, and catastrophe. He was wrecked by the extravagance of his own genius. No less powers than those which effected his rise would have achieved his fall." Lord Rosebery asks another question at the end of this book, "Was Napoleon a great man?" If by great he intended the combination of moral qualities with those of intellect, "great" he certainly was not. But that he was "great" in the sense of being extraordinary and supreme we can have no doubt. If "greatness" stands for natural power, for predominance, for something human, beyond humanity, then Napoleon was assuredly great.

THE QUARTERLIES AND SOME MAGAZINES.

The most important article in the Edinburgh Review—and a very important one it is—is upon the war in South Africa. The point enforced is that we were unprepared, and that our military system was not one to enable us to be prepared. We have based our organisation upon the German system, while ignoring the essential German condition, which is that a rigid territorial organisation should automatically evolve regiments, brigades, divisions, and army corps. Germany requires a powerful army at home, while British conditions demand that one-half of the Army shall be abroad. That division has never been properly maintained; makeshift measures have often been adopted, and the military organisation has been subjected to unsparing criticism, with the result that general distrust of the War Office has penetrated the Army. The system upon which rewards and decorations have been bestowed has fostered the idea that regimental duty was a thing to be somewhat avoided, and the "star" system has grown through the improvising of expeditionary corps, with staffs appointed ad hoc, the numerous posts being eagerly sought. The effect has been to the loss of the sense of scale in military operations, and personal gallantry has often been extolled at the expense of military capacity. "It is of the essence of the German military system that it could bring such a man as Von Moltke to the forefront as an organiser and as a director of war. If we have a Von Moltke, it is certain that he will live and die in obscurity. Our system has no place for him. The successful leader of some petty expedition against savages would soar over his head." This drastic criticism is carried into the South African War, and the reviewer says that the authorities made a colossal error in their underestimate of the force required at the beginning. "The initial errors in the South African campaign could never wholly be remedied; beyond a general idea that the invasion of Natal and Cape Colony must be averted, there was no reasoned plan of operations." We have not space to follow this downright critic in his trenchant remarks on the plan of "an offensive campaign on four widely separated lines that led to three serious reverses within six days and involved a total loss of nearly 5,000 men." But we must remark that Sir Redvers Buller's explanation of his course of action in proceeding to Natal throws a somewhat different complexion upon the matter.

*London: Arthur L. Humphreys.

CAPTAIN GALL, Late Northumberland Fusiliers.
AND
CAPTAIN H. C. KING, late of 6, Clifton Gardens, W.
90a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.,
Prepare Pupils for
ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS.
Individual Attention Guaranteed. Lists of Successes and Terms on Application.

Although the Reviewer has much to say about military incapacity, he is enthusiastic in his praise of the British soldier and the regimental officer. The Edinburgh also contains a very interesting article on the sick and wounded in South Africa, in which it is pointed out that the medical organisation was to meet the needs of 50,000 men, and had to cope with three times the number. Civil and Colonial aid enabled a marvel to be accomplished in the early part of the war, when communication by rail with the base was easy, but later on the system inevitably broke down. The Reviewer insists that room should be found for civilian aid at the base, and not at the front, and that a proper system should be worked out, and he makes some suggestions from the example of the Colonists. Another interesting article, among many, is on "China and International Questions," in which it is urged that the moment for pacification seems favourable.

The Quarterly Review deals with "Federation in South Africa," and urges that what is wanted is not constitution-making, but industrial development and the settlement of fresh Anglo-Saxon colonists, and that the impulse to federate must come from within and not from without. English patriotic poetry is the subject of another interesting article. In the light of the scenes which accompanied the reception of the City Imperial Volunteers, it is, perhaps, not possible to give adhesion to the statement that the temperament of the Englishman is "shame-faced and undemonstrative." It might have been so in former times, when Shakespeare could fuse national and personal interests in lines which ring as true to-day as they did when they were penned, and when Drayton, long after the event, wrote his famous "Ballad of Agincourt." But it is scarcely true in these days, when the strong accents, or "thumps," of Mr. Rudyard Kipling, in what the Reviewer calls his banjo-meter, have set a crowd of imitators singing. Some of the examples of the modern "lyric cry" given in this article—not a few of them sung at a British Empire League concert—are truly appalling in their regardlessness of grammar, good taste, and even common sense. An article upon the Chinese crisis enforces the view, which is now receiving confirmation, that the interests of the three Great Powers are directly opposed to the open declaration of a partition of China. We would draw attention also to an article upon "Malaria and the Mosquito," in which high praise is given to Major Ross, a surgeon in the Indian Medical Service, for the patient zeal which crowned his weary work with brilliant success. Anopheles, the mosquito, is still with us in marshy districts, but his breeding place has been drained, his numbers are reduced, and the malaria parasite has been exterminated. This is the course which may yet become possible in more malarious countries.

The only article to which we can draw attention in the English Historical Review is that of Captain Mahan on Nelson at Naples. It is largely in the nature of an argument with Mr. F. P. Badham, and is at the same time a further attempt to vindicate Nelson from the charges that have been made against him. It is particularly interesting, as embodying the gist of the journal of Micheroux, lately published at Naples, though Captain Mahan has grave doubts of Micheroux's truthfulness, and does not receive the authorities as worthy of credence without corroboration. Nelson, he says, is being tried in the light of biased opinion, and he contends that the testimony is altogether inadequate, and that Nelson's unblemished record, and his distinct affirmation that the rebels came out of the castles under the opinion that the treaty could not be carried into execution without the approbation of the Sicilian King, should hold good against the allegations of denouncers.

Mr. Murray's Monthly Review has already established itself, and for its independent articles and the excellent form that is given to the publication it deserves very much praise. There are three leading articles, the first showing that "Militarism" presents no dangers under the British constitution; the second dealing with national character, and strongly rebutting the assertions to the discredit of British officers made by Mr. Richard Harding Davis; and the third occupied with the Imperial expansion of Mr. Cecil Rhodes, who is somewhat curiously styled "an instrument of the Divine will"—a statement which will surely surprise no one more than Mr. Rhodes himself. Mr. de Martens, Russian Privy Councillor, rightly insists that the claim of the Chinese to national and independent existence must be respected, while Mr. A. R. Colquhoun contributes a most interesting article on the Trans-Siberian-Manchurian Railway, in which he shows conclusively that the first purpose of that line was not to pour so many thousand troops across Asia every day, but that it went in advance of the settlers, and has been justified by success. The immigrants to Siberia in 1893 were 61,435, and in 1899 233,981, and in the course of these seven years 19 million acres of State land have been transformed into immigration lots. At the present time it is possible to travel from London to Vladivostok in 21½ days, 11½ of these being occupied in the journey from Moscow to Stretensk. This is a low-speed calculation, and Mr. Colquhoun says that it will yet be possible to travel from London to Yokohama in 18 days, as compared with 34 days by the Suez Canal and 25 by the American route. Mr. Ralph Neville, Q.C., has an article on "National Defence," which is quite of the "hedgerow" class, shows little grasp of the essentials of the question and has some unjustifiable remarks on British officers. We shall refer elsewhere to Professor Laughton's article upon the Naval Exhibition at the Hague.

The United Service Magazine continues its excellent plan of giving several historical articles. There is a further instalment of Col. Maude's "Notes on the Evolution of Cavalry," with the third part of Mr. O'Connor Morris's "Frederick the Great," and an interesting contribution on "The Art of War Before and After the Renaissance," by Mr. H. E. Malden. A most drastic and enjoyable article is that of Dr. T. Miller Maguire on "Our Own Mandarins." Dr. Maguire thinks that there is not an official in the Foreign Office to whom an able journalist would go for instruction on any Eastern question, and he fails to see that Horace, Ovid, and Euripides are one wit better as a training for diplomacy than Confucius, while from the moral point of view they may be a good deal worse. Dr. Maguire insists, and with reason, that the fate of nations depends on the sword, and never on anything else, and he tells us that the Chinese have made only one mistake—the colossal one of cultivating only the arts of peace. If they had put war in the forefront, they might now with impunity have laughed at "our very inferior Mandarins." In short, the article is an earnest plea for reform and reorganisation. There is a long and interesting article by Lieut.-Colonel Eustace Balfour on the constitution of the Volunteer force, which is full of suggestion, and an anonymous writer, dealing with Volunteer training, says that the better class of Volunteers returned from their camps greatly disappointed. He indicates many faults in the organisation. Major R. H. Carr-Ellison supports the view we expressed some time ago as to the advantage of attaching a battalion of mounted riflemen to each cavalry and infantry brigade. He would have such battalion fixed at four double companies each of 150 rank and file. Capt. C. Holmes Wilson has an admirable article on the artillery in Natal, and there is much interest in Capt. R. S. Sorsbie's paper on "Field Engineering for Home Defence."

We have also received the Pall Mall Magazine, in which a Staff Officer makes many suggestions in relation to plain clothes, furlough, cheap fares, amusements, passes, and commissions from the ranks, as tending to popularise the Army, while the same number contains an admirable illustrated article on Dunrobin Castle; Longman's Magazine and the Cornhill, both good and interesting numbers; Harper's Magazine, which is satisfactory, both pictorially and otherwise, and the Humanitarian and some other issues.

THE War Office have approved the issue of colonial allowances at the rates laid down in paragraph 290 of the Allowance Regulations for China and Hong Kong to officers and warrant officers other than those receiving India rates of pay, &c., serving with the China Expeditionary Force.

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR. ROSE'S LIME JUICE WHISKY LIQUEUR

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO

Cherry Whisky,
Cherry Brandy,
Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—

HUNTSMEN,

GOLFERS,

and SPORTSMEN

generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

Bottled in
Leith, Scotland.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants
Price 54s. per Case of 1 Dozen Quarts, Carriage Paid.

A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.,
41, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

OETZMANN & Co.
62, 64, 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, 77, & 79,
HAMPSTEAD ROAD, W.
(Continuation North of Tottenham Court Road.)
60 & 61, GRAFTON ST., DUBLIN; 75, UNION ST., RYDE.

Factories:

Eagle Works, HAMPSTEAD ROAD;

Albion Works, DRUMMOND STREET;

Stanhope Works, WILLIAM STREET;

Camden Works, HIGH STREET, CAMDEN TOWN, N.W.

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE NOW PROCEEDING.

IMMENSE REDUCTIONS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS.

An Exceptional Opportunity Of Complete Or Partial Furnishing At Minimum Cost.

All Carpets Made up Free of Charge.

SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED SALE CATALOGUE (36 pages) POST FREE.

JEROME SACCONE, LIMITED,

GIBRALTAR, WINE, SPIRIT, & CIGAR MERCHANTS

ARMY & NAVY.

LONDON HOUSE:

15, COCKSPUR STREET.

Wine Shipped FREIGHT FREE to any port in the Mediterranean, and half-freight to India and the Cape.

Telegraphic Addresses: "Saccone, Gibraltar." "Saccone, London."

SATURDAY REVIEW

OF

Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review are treated only by Naval and Military men.

The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:

8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.

HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,

KILTS, TREWS,

TARTAN PANTALOONS.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING MILK

AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A PERFECT

UNSWEETENED

CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.

AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK

Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS

ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.

WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.

Apply for particulars, Samples, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,

144, New Bond Street,

LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

Shells, Pompons, and other Relics Mounted in Novel, Artistic, and Useful Designs.

H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOX

Appropriately arranged for everyday as a lasting memento.

PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

SHELTON & BALL,

Military and Court Tailors,

180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

(Opposite Burlington Gardens.)

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).

Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).

Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,400).

THREE CHEERS FOR THE

RED

WHITE

& BLUE

COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.

TRANSVAAL WAR.

DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT THE FRONT A SUPPLY OF . . .

BRAND'S MEAT LOZENGES.

Sustaining and Invigorating.

In Hermetically Sealed Boxes, Convenient for the Pocket.

BRAND & CO., Ltd., MAYFAIR, LONDON.

... THE ...

Royal Navy List.

(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.

Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST

CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER

10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS

(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.

"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—Nautical Magazine.

Officers are earnestly requested to send at once their special services to the Editor.

WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, W.C.

Advt. Dept. :—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C. (Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)

THE Burton Brewery COMPANY, LIMITED,

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.

BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.

Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO

Mr. E. RUGGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent, or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street, Alexandria, Egypt.

Notices.

THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

All EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.	TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year... .. £1 8 0	One Year... .. £1 12 6
Six Months... .. 0 14 0	Six Months... .. 0 16 3
Three Months... .. 0 7 0	Three Months... .. 0 8 2

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid in advance.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE will be forwarded on application.

BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—Price 5s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.

All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED FOR REVIEW.

The Awakening of the East (Heinemann); The Story of the War in South Africa, by Capt. Mahan (Sampson Low); The Life of Lieut.-Col. John Houghton (Murray); A History of British India, by Sir W. W. Hunter (Longmans); The World-Wide Atlas (Johnston).

November Magazines.—Badminton; Northern Counties; Imperial and Colonial.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1900.

THE NAVAL GAZETTES.

ON Tuesday morning the Naval "Honours Gazette" for South Africa appeared in the papers, the promotions and appointments being appropriately dated on Trafalgar Day. There is no reason to doubt that this Gazette will be received with general approbation by the Navy, as fulfilling fairly and comprehensively the needs of the situation. It must be considered, of course, in connection with the rewards which have already been granted for services in South Africa, and, looking to the numbers to be dealt with both there and in China, it is not surprising if it has been found impossible to grant promotion and a decoration to the same officer. It is only fair that, the methods of rewarding officers being limited, these shall be made use of to as wide an extent as possible. Perhaps the most striking feature of the Gazette is its liberality as compared with some of those of a similar character which have appeared in past times. Every branch and department of the Service has been remembered, for we have no doubt that the warrant officers will find that they are not forgotten as soon as arrangements can be made to suitably reward them. On this subject we shall have something to say later on. Another seeming omission refers to the Transport Department, of which at present Sir Edward Chichester is the only representative. He could hardly have been left out, and we assume that presently this department, from Admiral Bouverie Clark downwards, will receive its adequate meed of recognition, for services so well rendered. The Navy—whether afloat, in connection with blockade and transport, or ashore, in its fighting capacity—has added a memorable chapter to its annals, one which may well take its place alongside any of the most glorious in the history of the sea Service.

Passing to the names of those officers who have been selected for recognition, it has been aptly said that their services present an epitome of the war. The Admiralty have very properly, by making Sir Robert Harris a K.C.B., expressed their disbelief in those rumours which found currency in the early days of the war. Of the new Companions of the Bath, Captain Chichester, as we have said, represents the work of the Transport Department, of which he was Principal Officer in South Africa. Captain E. P. Jones, late of the Forté, was the able commander of the Naval Brigade attached to Sir Redvers Buller's force. Captain R. C. Prothero and Major A. E. Marchant, of the Marines, commanded at the Battle of Graspan, the latter assuming command when the former was wounded. Captain J. E. Bearcroft, of the Philomel, has been in command of the Brigade with Lord Roberts, having accompanied the Field-Marshal from the time of his entering the Orange River Colony up to the final scenes in the Eastern Transvaal. With his men, Captain Bearcroft has only just returned to his ship, and it was but a week ago that we chronicled the farewell speech of Lord Roberts on the brigade leaving Pretoria. Captain W. B. Fisher, of the Magicienne, completes the list, and represents the blockading squadron, of which he has been for some time the senior officer at Delagoa Bay. The arduous and trying nature of the work which has fallen to the vessels operating on the coast, many of them short of hands, has been such as could not fail to receive due recognition at the hands of any seaman. It should not be forgotten that in addition to the six C.B.'s here mentioned, Captains Scott and Lambton received the same honour. The D.S.O.'s are five in number, and the officers receiving these rewards are Lieut. G. P. E. Hunt, the gunnery lieutenant of the Forté, who was with Captain Jones; Lieut. W. T. C. Jones, of the Marines, who was wounded at Graspan; Surgeon C. C. Macmillan, mentioned in despatches for his work at the Battle of Colenso; Lieut. W. J. Colquhoun, of the Victoria Navy, who was attached to the Doris, for service with the Naval Brigade; and Lieut. N. W. Chiazzari, of the Natal Naval Volunteers, who served under Captain Jones. This is a timely recognition of the patriotic assistance which has been rendered to the Regular Forces in this war by their colonial cousins. The promotions cover as wide a field in every respect as do the other rewards. Commanders W. L. Grant, of the Doris, and S. De Horsey, late of the Monarch, are promoted to captains; the former has commanded a detachment of guns operating in the Orange River Colony, and has been more than once mentioned in official telegrams from the front; the latter was badly wounded in the ankle near Pretoria, up to which time he had served with the brigade landed from his ship from the earliest period of the war. The lieutenants promoted to commanders are F. W. Melville, of the Forté, who has been with Captain Jones; A. Halsey, of the Philomel, who has been with General Clery's force in South Africa, and was highly commended by that officer in connection with a fight at Bushman's Spruit; H. W. James, of the Tartar, who commanded a battery of guns at the Battle of Colenso; and J. A. Ferguson, of the Barrosa, who has been with the guns in the Transvaal. These promotions, it is noted in the Gazette, as well as those of Captain A. H. Limpus and Commanders F. C. A. Ogilvie, F. W. Dean, and A. W. Heneage are to be additional to the establishment of captains and commanders. In the civil department, the services of Fleet-Surgeon Porter have been recognised by his promotion to deputy-inspector-general of hospitals and fleets, those of Staff-Surgeon F. J. Lilly by promotion to fleet-surgeon, and those of Surgeon E. C. Lomas to staff-surgeon. Doctor Porter landed with the Naval Brigade from the flagship when it was first sent on shore, and his services, especially on the field of Graspan, where he was well up to the front with his bearers, and did very fine service for the wounded, have been frequently mentioned in despatches. Doctors Lilly, of the Forté, and Lomas, of the Terrible, have also received special mention in connection with services in Natal. Mr. B. C. Allen, who has been promoted to paymaster.

The publication of the promotions and honours for the Navy in connection with the operations in China followed those of South Africa very quickly, appearing yesterday morning. Like the other, this list is fairly comprehensive, although its limitations in scope are open to criticism. It begins, as does that for South Africa, with the Commander-in-Chief, whose splendid work is fitly recognised by the G.C.B., a promotion which will be welcomed by the Admiral's brother officers specially, and by the country in general. The appointment of the Rear-Admiral to the K.C.M.G. is an honour well earned by energetic work of an equally trying, if not of such an active, nature as a seaman might reasonably desire. The four captains who have so ably distinguished themselves, Captains Bayly and Burke at Tien-tsin, Captain Callaghan in the relief of Peking, and Captain Jellicoe, who was wounded in the Seymour Relief Expedition, are awarded the C.B. Then follows a long list of commanders, lieutenants, and other officers, who get promotion, or distinction in the shape of the D.S.O. With very few exceptions, every officer whose name is mentioned in Sir Edward Seymour's despatches relative to the expedition which he personally led, has received a reward of one kind or the other. Two officers, unfortunately, Captain Doig, of the Marines, and Fleet-Surgeon Sibbald, have not lived to share in that recognition of services which they, equally with their brethren, so fully earned. Captains Johnston, Stewart, and Cradock have already received their honours, but all those officers mentioned by the latter for services at the storming of the Taku forts, are included in this list, as are also the two lieutenants—Mackenzie, of the Whiting, who gets a D.S.O., and Keys, of the Fame, who is promoted. There are also mentioned the officers whose names appear in the Vice-Admiral's despatch relating to the operations at Tien-tsin, and whose services were brought to his notice at various times by Captains Bayly, and Burke, and other officers. These include Commander Beatty, whose promotion puts him over the heads of more than two hundred of his seniors; Lieut. Luard, who took Lieut. Wright's place when that officer was wounded; Major Luke, who led the British attack on the Military College, and Mr. Gibbs. There are also a number of officers whose services are mentioned in connection with the capture of the native city of Tien-tsin, and of whom General Durward wrote with admiration for the splendid manner in which they led and handled their men. One or two names appear to have been added for services in connection with the relief column which went up to Peking under Captain Callaghan, but it is apparently uncertain whether there will be another Gazette in this connection. There are some omissions from the list, which we conclude are to be explained on the supposition that the Admiralty consider that in the ordinary course of things their names will be shortly before the Board for consideration. As in the case of the African Gazette, the list concludes with the promotions of Staff-Surgeons J. H. Thomas and Surgeons Browne and Hall, who have been attached to the brigade as medical officers, as well as Staff-Paymaster Alton and Assistant-Paymasters Rotter and Hargraves, all of whom have been mentioned in despatches.

Both in regard to South Africa and China a number of officers have been noted for early promotion, the midshipmen on qualifying for the rank of lieutenant. In the case of Africa, the list of subordinate officers includes, as far as we can trace, the names of all who have landed and been at the front. They are eleven in number, and with those of the Powerful who were at Ladysmith, bring the total up to twenty who are thus promised early promotion on qualifying for the rank of lieutenant. If, as would only have been fair to them, the midshipmen who had been landed in China were added to these, we might have hoped that we should have seen very shortly a welcome addition to the lieutenants' list of nearly a hundred young officers whose experience must have added to their fitness for fulfilling the duties of the higher grade. But this is, unfortunately, not to be the case. There were about sixty midshipmen landed and under fire in China, and the fact that the number is so large appears to have militated in their disfavour. Only eight are chosen out of all those who shared the perils and hardships of land service. The line has been drawn at those whose names have been mentioned by Sir Edward Seymour, a system of selection which in this case is surely unfair and uncalled for. As the Times says, in referring to this matter, "it is not as if these young officers were to be promoted at once; most of them have some qualifying service to perform, and all of them have to pass an examination. We may surely expect that this matter will be rectified in a supplementary honours list."

The most notable feature in both Gazettes is the announcement that the Queen has conferred the highest distinction for "conspicuous bravery or devotion to the country in the presence of the enemy" upon Mr. Basil J. D. Guy, who receives the Victoria Cross for an heroic action performed at Tien-tsin in July last. This young officer passed out of the Britannia at Dartmouth in May, 1898, and the Barfleur is his first ship in the Navy. The act of bravery for which he has been thus distinguished is reported in the despatch thus:—"Mr. Basil, J. B. Guy, midshipman, Her Majesty's ship Barfleur, for the great coolness and bravery he displayed in stopping with and attending to a wounded man under an excessively hot fire, eventually assisting to carry him in across a fire swept zone." The records of the Navy only show two previous instances in which this much prized decoration has been bestowed upon an officer of the rank of midshipman. Mr. E. J. Daniels at the Redan in the Crimea, received the V.C. for attending to and bandaging Captain Peel's arm when than officer was wounded, and Mr. G. D. Boyes, a midshipman of the Euryalus, received the V.C. for gallantry at the capture of a stockade in Japan in 1864, when he saved the colours from falling into the hands of the enemy. A midshipman of the Indian Navy, Mr. A. Mayo, for gallantry with his guns in the Indian Mutiny, also received the V.C. Of this young officer we have no further knowledge, but Messrs. Daniels and Boyes died before they could rise to higher ranks in the Service. In Mr. Guy's case the lustre shed on his career by the receipt of this decoration should be of the greatest value to him in the future. He has most deservedly won it, and we may hope that with the early promotion which must follow, he will reach the highest posts in the Service.

There remains to be mentioned the case of those young warrant officers and petty officers who have distinguished themselves in these operations. For the latter, promotion to warrant, or to some higher grade to that in which they are serving, will probably be sufficient reward, and in some instances has, we believe, already happened. With the warrant officers, the circumstances are different. In all probability to place them on the quarter deck would be neither to their advantage nor in accordance with their aspirations. To promote them to chief warrant officers, on the other hand, would be a hardship to the senior men on the list. What should be found for them is a suitable decoration, which would carry with it the recognition of their services which is desirable and necessary. The D.S.O. is a very proper honour for this purpose, but at present its statutes do not permit of its being conferred upon warrant or subordinate officers. With regard to this matter, there is every reason to believe that it is in process of rectification. It has always been a surprise to the Navy that neither the warrant nor subordinate officers were eligible for the Distinguished Service Order, an omission which is doubtless due to the fact that there are no subordinate officers in the Army, and that the warrant officers of the land Service come under a different category to those of the Navy. As there are both warrant and subordinate officers who have obviously deserved this decoration, we confidently expect to see this matter put straight very shortly. Although the announcement has not been made officially, it goes without saying that medals will be granted not only to those men of the Navy who were on shore, but also to those who, serving afloat, have materially assisted in bringing the operations to a satisfactory termination. There are many precedents which might be quoted to prove that neither in South Africa nor in China will the issue of a medal be illiberally restricted. Doubtless clasps will also be added for special actions or expeditions, and it might well be that some particular and striking distinction would be made in the case of the Peking Legation Guard.

Navy Notes.

The way in which the Ministerial changes affect the Navy is not calculated to have a very reassuring effect. All three of the political officials who have been connected with the Admiralty of late have been removed. Mr. Goschen will, it is believed, accept a peerage, and doubtless in the Upper House will still continue to give the country the benefit of his knowledge and experience in naval matters. Of his successor, we can say little at present, except that it may be hoped that he will, while he is new to the Admiralty, accept the advice of his predecessor, than whom there can be nobody who is better acquainted with the difficulties which beset the path of the First Lord. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, who has been most popular at the Admiralty, is promoted to the post of Financial Secretary to the Treasury, and as yet no successor has been appointed. Mr. Macartney must also be leaving, since his office as Parliamentary Secretary is now to be filled by Mr. Arnold-Forster. This gentleman is well known to our readers as an ardent naval and military reformer. Last week, in referring to his latest work, "The War Office, the Army, and the Empire," we had to point out that it "bristles with inaccuracies and misconceptions, and he is often led into wrong conclusions by the little knowledge which is proverbially dangerous." We have no hesitation in adding that if military men find him to know little about the Army, naval men are equally assured that he has much to learn about naval matters. In the Admiralty he will have an opportunity for educating himself to some purpose, while his mouth will be closed on the subject of Army reform. There are those, indeed, who do not hesitate to say that in this instance the Navy have been made to suffer for the sister Service, and that Mr. Arnold-Forster owes his appointment to a desire for shelving an inopportune critic. The removal of Mr. Macartney is a distinct loss to the Navy. Like Mr. Chamberlain, he has acquitted himself well, and has earned the respect and goodwill of all with whom he has been brought in contact. It will not diminish the difficulties of Mr. Arnold-Forster's position that he has to succeed such a very popular Parliamentary Secretary.

The Secretary of the Navy League, Commander Crutchley, R.N.R., supports the recent manifesto of the League in a very capable letter to the Press, taking for his text Mr. Chamberlain's boast that Britannia still rules the waves. To this he retorts that a similar optimism was displayed by the War Office prior to the South African war, and by the Cabinet also as to the military might of this country. "One department has admittedly broken down under the shock of war ashore. Why should similar causes fail to produce like effects in war afloat?" Commander Crutchley maintains that we have virtually completed only three battleships during the last thirty months, whilst France alone has completed five of equal tonnage in the same period. This is the only definite charge to which the Secretary commits himself, and it is serious enough to justify some uneasiness. From this subject Commander Crutchley turns to the alien difficulty in our merchant service, a matter which has but slight connection with the manifesto of the League. He usefully quotes from a recent speech by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in which the following passage occurred:—"As for the Navy, large sums have in recent years been spent in increasing it, until it is more powerful than ever." All question of relative strength, of the rapid growth of foreign navies, was here ignored by a Minister whose speeches are bound to influence public opinion. It is clearly most desirable that Ministers, if they speak about the Navy, should be careful not to mislead their audiences. But the Navy League manifesto has certainly been pitched in too high a key, and the letter of its Secretary will not altogether remove this impression. Admiral Close, indeed, complains that the League has not hesitated wantonly to attack the good faith of a friendly Power, and to pour contempt on a retiring Minister of the Crown, "who has proved one of the ablest and most patriotic administrators of naval affairs"—from which it is evident that the Trafalgar Day manifesto was not approved by all the branches of the Navy League.

The mishap which occurred on board the Thunderer last week has naturally aroused considerable curiosity and some anxiety. The ship was at target practice and firing her two heavy 10in. guns, and when the first was fired only a few fragments of the shell were projected, the remaining portions being left in the bore, only however, to be expelled from the breech when this was uncovered. A similar thing occurred when the second gun was fired, the projectile in this case also splitting up and coming to pieces. It is said that such an occurrence has never taken place before, and various explanations of the cause have been assigned, but we believe without any adequate authority. According to one suggestion, the bursting charge of the shell had become affected by the variations in temperature to which it had been subjected; another cause assigned is water in the breech chamber; and yet a third, the shifting of the projectiles in the bore owing to the rolling of the ship.

In a letter to the Times Admiral Sir John Hopkins suggests that one of the new battleships should be called the Nelson, and that the name of the immortal Admiral be no longer represented by an out-of-date cruiser, whose existence should either be wiped out, or the vessel re-named. We may suggest that by removing her engines and other iron and metal fittings, and adding a deck and poop to her present structure, she would become a useful training ship. The gallant Admiral also suggests that a first-class cruiser should be named the Volunteer, as he imagines some vessel bore that appellation in the past. We have hunted up "Navy Lists" as far back as 1826, but without success. Not even a Government hoy bore that name. There is no reason, however, why one should not in the twentieth century be so designated.

The Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth has directed that officers attending the Dockyard Church are to wear side-arms, although they may not at the time be on military duty in charge of men. This is evidently beyond the necessities of the Service, when their presence is purely optional. If they are not required to wear swords during public worship on board their respective ships there is no reason why they should be hampered with them when they appear of their accord at divine service in Portsmouth Dockyard. Unfortunately Sir Charles Hotham is given to extreme measures regarding uniform. We remember that while he commanded the Jaseur, in the sixties, he insisted on the officers keeping watch in full dress on the Queen's Birthday, when the ship was rolling heavily and only the "polluted shore" of West Africa to gaze on.

The corvette Wolverene that flew the broad pendants of Commodores Anthony Hoskins and J. Crawford Wilson on the Australian Station from 1876-82, and was afterwards presented to the New South Wales Government as a training-ship, was eventually sold to a private individual and found a resting-place on Stanley Beach, near Auckland, New Zealand. After lying there several years she was blown up with dynamite on September 11 last, and a loyal citizen and gun-maker, Mr. Oldbury, procured sufficient metal and wood from the old man-of-war to make two brass saluting cannon and carriages to mount them on. These are to be displayed at Auckland as relics of our Navy of a past age. Rear-Admiral Burges Watson and Captain William Marrack were respectively her last commander and senior lieutenant, both of whom are now on active service. The Rattlesnake, Jason, and Orestes, were sister ships. They did well under steam as well as under sail, and their successors, the "C" class corvettes, were not better vessels.

The regulation that officers joining their ships from half-pay should personally have to defray the expense of travelling bears very hardly at times. Recently, for example, Fleet-Paymaster Joseph Chater was appointed to the Diadem in place of Fleet-Paymaster E. H. Banks, transferred to the Glory, and had a very unenjoyable experience in taking up that appointment. He left Plymouth by steamer and rail for Bant, and then from that place to the Channel Fleet anchorage in Berehaven by coach. On arrival he found his ship about to proceed to Plymouth, a piece of information which might well have been placed at his disposal earlier. In this case, as in others of a similar nature, surely some concession should be made, as the amount Mr. Chater expended in reaching the Diadem could not have been insignificant.

ORBIT BRAND TOBACCO.

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos
in Bond for Export.

Navy Personal.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir J. Edmund Commerell and Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Stephenson attended the service in the Chapel Royal, St. James's, on Thursday in last week in memory of his Highness the late Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein, Major King's Royal Rifles.

Admiral Sir R. More-Molyneux, President of the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, represented the Navy at the Cutlers' Feast at Sheffield.

Admiral E. S. Adeane was elected last week to the Knightsbridge, St. George's Ward, of the new Borough Council of Westminster, and Rear-Admiral (retired) J. E. Bickford was elected to the Priory Ward of Hampstead. Rear-Admiral G. W. Hand (retired) was unsuccessful in one of the Hammersmith Wards.

Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick G. D. Bedford, Commander-in-Chief of the North America and West India station, left Halifax, N.S., on Tuesday last in the Crescent for Bermuda on his yearly visit to the Southern portion of his command.

Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson leaves Berehaven on Monday next in the Majestic, accompanied by the Channel Squadron under his command for Arosa Bay, Vigo, and Gibraltar, and is due at the last named port on the 28th inst. He will leave it on the 10th prox. on his return home to give usual Christmas leave to those serving with him.

Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Squadron, arrived at Malta in the Renown on Wednesday last, and on the following day entertained the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Civil Lord of the Admiralty at dinner on board his flagship, prior to their departure for Naples.

Vice-Admiral Charles G. Fane attains the age of sixty-three on Wednesday next, and Vice-Admiral Albert H. Markham that of fifty-nine to-morrow. Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson was fifty-seven on Monday last.

Rear-Admiral Thomas S. Jackson, Admiral-Superintendent at Devonport, has been elected President of the Dockyard Rifle Club, about to be established at that port.

Captain Frank H. Henderson, of the Hermes, arrived at Ponta del Garda, St. Michael, Azores, on Tuesday last en route for Plymouth, and saluted the Portuguese flag. The compliment was, however, not returned, as the forts are dismantled, and the local authorities apologised for such an unavoidable omission. Captain Henderson will pay off his present command at Devonport, and transfer the officers and crew to the Cambrian, a smaller vessel and not allowed a commander the same as the Hermes.

Captain O. Peploe Tudor has been appointed Harbour Master at Kingstown, by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in place of the late Captain the Hon. F. G. Crofton. His Excellency's selection is undoubtedly a desirable one, as Captain Tudor, although on the retired list, is still an active and most able officer, and in every way equal to the duties of such an important post.

Captain Edward H. Gamble, of the Cæsar, arrived at Malta on Monday last with the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Civil Lord of the Admiralty, and was to leave yesterday with them on their return home via Naples.

Captain Wilmot H. Fawkes, of the Canopus, who so ably carried out the duties of private secretary to Mr. Goschen, at the Admiralty, until he was appointed to his present command, has been selected in a similar capacity with Earl Selborne, who will shortly succeed the present First Lord. Captain Fawkes' promotion to flag-rank occurs in March next, but that should not leaer his retention of the appointment after becoming Rear-Admiral.

Captain C. H. Dare, of the Bellona, recently employed in protecting British fishermen on the coast of Iceland, returned to Sheerness from that duty on Saturday last, and is relieved in command by Commander Hubert Grant-Dalton, late of the Seagull.

Captain the Hon. Walter Stopford, of the Pallas, left Madeira on Friday in last week for Bermuda to join the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir F. G. D. Bedford, Commander-in-Chief.

Commander Lionel Wells, Chief of the London Fire Brigade, is, we are sorry to say, indisposed, and unable to attend to his important duties.

Commander P. Vaughan Lewes paid off the Hazard at Devonport, on Wednesday last. It is hoped that his navigating officer, Lieut. John Marshall, who took an important part in the operations against the Cretan insurrectionists in 1898, will not be forgotten by the Admiralty, as all the other executive officers of this vessel have been rewarded for their services during that unpleasant complication.

Commander Edward F. Inglefield, of the Swallow, arrived at Las Palmas on Sunday, and left on Tuesday last for Devonport and Sheerness to pay off at the latter port.

Commander John P. Rolleston, of the Archer, arrived at the coaling station, Thursday Island, Western Pacific, on Monday last, and left the following day to join the flag of the Commander-in-Chief of the Australian Station.

Lieut.-Commander Cyril Corbett from the Conflict, Lieut. Robert Bellis and Assistant-Engineer C. J. Greene from the Royal Sovereign, Assistant-Engineer A. F. Cock from the Andromeda, Midshipmen C. K. Hart and A. G. Sparrow from the Venus, and Lieut. H. J. Coles, R.M.L.I., from the Hibernia, invalided from the Mediterranean Station, arrived home on Sunday last in the P. and O. steamship Ceylon. Midshipman E. M. Palmer, left behind from the Astræa at Malta when she was sent to China, was also an invalid passenger on the same vessel.

Lieut. Allan F. Everett, flag-lieutenant of the Majestic, left that vessel on Friday in last week for Portsmouth to assume control of the signal schools on board the Victory. On the previous evening he was entertained at dinner by his late chief, Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson, commanding the Channel Squadron, who, in proposing his health, thanked him for the valuable services he had rendered him, Sir Harry, during the past two years.

Sub-Lieut. J. G. M. McHardy, of the Canopus, obtains promotion to Lieutenant after two years' service as junior commissioned officer, under clause 9 of the Royal Naval College Regulations for officers of his rank.

Fleet-Paymaster Henry Dawson remains in the Majestic instead of going to China in the Glory. The appointments that followed his intended transfer to the latter vessel are, therefore, cancelled.

Fleet Surgeon Alfred G. Delmege, M.D., Honorary Surgeon to the Prince of Wales, late of the Royal yacht Osborne, was compulsorily retired in September of last year, and is now granted the honorary rank of Deputy-Inspector-General of Hospitals, under Order in Council, April 1, 1881. This privilege is embodied in the present regulations for the retirement of medical officers, and may be applied in the case of any officer with twenty years' service. As Dr. Delmege had upwards of thirty years' full pay service when he retired, it is somewhat peculiar that the Admiralty should have taken twelve months to consider whether he should be granted a step in rank that virtually carries no advantage; unless the fact of not having served as Fleet Surgeon of a ship on a foreign station operated against him. He was appointed Staff Surgeon of the Osborne in 1887, and served twelve years in her.

ROYAL MARINES.

General Sir Henry Tuson obtains the Good Service Pension, vacant by the death of the veteran Royal Marine officer, General Sir Anthony Stransham. Independent of being the oldest officer and, with the exception of General F. J. Le Grand, R.M.L.I., the senior officer on the active list of the Royal Marine Force, his services during active operations abroad, as well as those on the staff and a headquarters, in every way entitle him to this award.

Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel John W. Robins obtains substantive promotion to the latter rank after waiting more than two years for advancement. Whatever reason may have induced the Admiralty to overlook this officer for such an unusual period, we believe that the Royal Marine Force will be glad to see that his claim is now recognised.

SOUTH AFRICAN REWARDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I see in this week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE a remark to the effect that the South African medal will be given to the crews of the ships employed on the blockade. Might I request space in your columns to point out to the authorities that the medal is surely equally due to the ships employed at St. Vincent? Though many miles away from the scene of operations, their duties were none the less arduous than those of ships actually in South African waters. Take, for example, the case of my own ship, Diadem. At the outbreak of hostilities we were lying at Blacksod Bay. One Sunday evening a signal was made at 4 p.m. to raise steam, and orders were received to proceed to St. Vincent. By 7 o'clock we were steaming out of the harbour in company with Niobe. We arrived at Gibraltar after dark one evening, and in less than 24 hours had coaled, provisioned, &c., the men working like niggers. On arrival at St. Vincent, a most desolate island, we found that our duties consisted of coaling transports. I'm sure any soldier who passed through these will witness to the cheerful way in which officers and men worked night and day, doing the duties, in a tropical heat, of the natives themselves. Many Atlantic liners, &c., were coaled in record time, the work being most arduous, especially as we had no facilities, and, I might add, that all hands always volunteered. Besides, after rescuing the Persia, we turned her men, baggage, and horses over to the Goth, and also coaled her in less than 16 hours. If these services rendered are exceptional—and I'm sure no one but a British sailor could do the same on the top of the disappointment of not being sent to the Cape, as was daily hoped for and expected—well, surely, they deserve the medal as much as the arduous blockade services. I might add that St. Vincent is in the Cape command.

DISAPPOINTED.

[The Furious is another case in point:—For weeks her crew slaved at the disappointing task of trying to float the transport, Denton Grange, which ran on the rocks at Las Palmas. Their efforts in this direction proving futile, they set themselves to salve the stores with which she was laden.]

HENNESSY'S THREE STAR BRANDY.

Genuine Brandy.
Bottled in Cognac.

THE CHINA DESPATCHES.

Tuesday night's Gazette contained a further batch of despatches with reference to the operations of the allied forces leading up to the relief of Peking. The principal despatch is that by Lieut.-General Sir Alfred Gaselee, commanding the British contingent. It is dated Peking, August 19, and describes the operations of the British forces in Northern China from July 27, the date on which he arrived at Tien-tsin, to August 14, the date on which Peking was entered. Sir Alfred says:—

"On my arrival at Tien-tsin I at once put myself into communication with the general officers commanding the American and Japanese forces, and soon came to a satisfactory understanding with them. We decided to collectively impress upon the allied commanders the absolute necessity of pressing forward towards Peking at the earliest possible moment, and happily our views were eventually accepted."

ADVANCE ON PEKING.

"At a conference held on August 3 it was arranged to commence the advance on the 4th, with approximately 20,000 men, viz.:—

10,000 Japanese with 24 guns.
4,000 Russians with 16 guns.
3,000 British with 12 guns.
2,000 Americans with 6 guns.
800 French with 12 guns.
200 Germans.
100 Austrians and Italians.

20,100 with 70 guns.

"The Chinese were believed to occupy a strongly-entrenched position near Pei-tsang, astride the Pei-ho. It was decided to force the position and push on to Yang-tsun, so as to secure the passage of the river at that important strategical point. The general idea was that the Japanese, British, and Americans should operate along the right bank of the river, the other allies along the left bank. It was then settled in direct communication with Gen. Chaffee, United States Army, and Gen. Yamaguchi, Japanese Army, that, as regards the left attack, i.e., that on the right bank of the river, the movement should be of a turning nature along the embankment marked A.....B in the sketch, the Japanese leading, followed in succession by the British and Americans. The turning movement to commence at 2 a.m. on the 5th. In pursuance of the above agreement the British troops moved from Tien-tsin to Hsi-ku on the afternoon of the 4th, and bivouacked. The British were followed by the Americans and Japanese. As arranged, in the early hours of the 5th inst. the turning movement commenced. At daybreak the column came under a heavy fire from the right front, and the action began with a vigorous forward movement of the Japanese against the entrenchments, supported on the right by the British. The brunt of the action fell on the Japanese, who attacked and stormed line after line in the most gallant manner. Our troops, in consequence of their position, scarcely fired a shot, and I readily accord to the Japanese the whole credit of the victory. Their loss was, I understand, about 300 killed and wounded, while ours was only 25. The Chinese rout was complete, and before noon they had entirely disappeared, having fled to the left bank of the river. The other allied forces were scarcely engaged at all, and practically had no loss."

CHINESE FLIGHT.

"After the victory at Pei-tsang we pushed on for a mile or two along the right bank, but, being stopped by inundations, were compelled to return to Pei-tsang, and cross over to the right (sic) bank, where we bivouacked for the night, covered by a strong outpost, two or three miles in advance. On the 6th inst. the whole of the allied forces marched on Yang-tsun by the right bank, with the exception of about six thousand Japanese, who continued to advance by the left bank. Owing to the direction taken by the several columns the British troops were leading along the direct road when we came in sight of Yang-tsun, the Americans being on our right flank. The enemy's main position was apparently along the railway embankment, with one flank resting on a village close to the Pei-ho railway bridge. It was at once arranged to attack this position with one Russian battalion on the left, the British troops in the centre, and the Americans on the right, whilst the 1st Bengal Lancers covered the extreme right flank. I thereupon directed the 1st Sikh Infantry to extend for attack, supported by the Royal Welsh Fusiliers and the 24th Punjab Infantry, the advance to be covered by the fire of No. 12 Battery Royal Field Artillery. The remainder of our troops were too far in rear to be utilised at the moment. The advance to attack was made in beautiful order over about 5,000 yards of level plain covered with high crops. At about half this distance the troops came under a hot shell and musketry fire, nevertheless, owing to the open order in which we worked, the British loss was comparatively small. The further advance was a rapid one, and the embankment was carried by a rush of the 1st Sikh Infantry and 24th Punjab Infantry. The Welsh Fusiliers, owing to the conformation of the ground, were rather wedged out of the assaulting line. This practically ended the fight, as the Chinese fled precipitately in all directions. The enemy's guns were in a retired position, and thus escaped capture. On the 7th inst. the allies halted to bring up supplies, and on the 8th the movement was continued. On the 9th, at Ho-hsi-wu, a squadron of the 1st Bengal Lancers caught up some retreating Tartar Cavalry, inflicting on them heavy loss, and on the 12th Tung-chao was occupied without opposition. At a conference held on that day it was decided to send forward strong reconnoitring forces on the 13th, to concentrate on a line about five miles from Peking on the 14th, and to attack on the 15th. The positions of the several forces were assigned, the British taking the extreme left. On the 14th, however, owing to the premature advance of a battalion of one of the allied forces, the intended concentration was abandoned, and the troops all hurried forward to assault the city of Peking."

BRITISH FIRST AT THE LEGATIONS.

"I have above endeavoured to give a connected account of the military operations preceding the attack on Peking, and I will now try to briefly relate what occurred on the 14th, so far as her Majesty's troops are concerned. Our forces on the night of the 13th were concentrated on the riversouth-east of Tung-chao, about 15 miles from Peking, with two guns, the 1st Bengal Lancers and the 7th Bengal Infantry about nine miles in advance as an observation force. At 2.30 a.m. on the 14th, hearing heavy firing in the direction of Peking, I caused the 'Rouse' to be sounded, and marched without delay towards the supposed scene of action. About 7 a.m. I reached the point held by my advanced force, and at once pushed on with the troops there available, directing the main body to follow after an hour's rest. About noon I got into touch with the Americans, who were on the south bank of the canal, and as they and the French were preparing to assault the Tung Tien Gate, I decided to push straight on and assault the south-east gate of the Chinese city, Sha-chia-men. Here I met with no opposition, and about 1 p.m. the British troops passed through the city wall. I then ordered the 1st Bengal Lancers and the 24th Punjab Infantry to march straight to the Temple of Heaven Park, which I wished to secure as a camping ground, and also as a protection to my left and rear, while with the rest of my available troops I pushed on through streets and alleys towards the water gate of the Tartar City, a point which I had learnt from a cypher message from Sir C. MacDonald would probably be most vulnerable. Our troops were much exhausted by the long march and intense heat, and were much scattered in groups, but they struggled gamely on without attempting to reply to the desultory and ineffective fire of the enemy. At a few minutes before 3 p.m. I, with a few officers of my staff and about 70 men of the 1st Sikhs and 7th Bengal Infantry, reached a point opposite the water gate. The British flag was still flying on that portion of the Tartar wall which we knew the Legations had occupied, but an ominous silence made us fear that the worst had occurred, and that the flag was only a ruse to lure us on, when suddenly, to our great relief, we saw a flag signal being made, 'Come up sluice street by water gate.' Our small party at once rushed across the almost dry canal and entered into the Legation zone through the water gate under the Tartar wall. As we crossed a hail of ill-aimed fire was directed on us from the Hata-Men Gate, but not a man was touched, and at 3 p.m. her Majesty's troops had the supreme gratification of finding they were the first to relieve the sorely pressed beleaguered garrison."

CHINESE RESISTANCE.

"Our loss during these operations was quite insignificant, which may be attributed to the fact that the enemy had never expected attack from this quarter, and had concentrated their defence on the eastern wall of the Tartar City, where the resistance was, I understand, of a most obstinate description. The operations I have described have, happily, not been attended with the loss that might have been expected; nevertheless, the troops engaged have been subjected to a severe strain on account of the intense heat, the want of good water, the heavy mud or dust which characterises the roads in this country, and, above all, the want of sufficient rest. The patient endurance and ardour of the troops has, however, more than compensated for these difficulties, and I am proud of the manner in which her Majesty's British and Indian troops have acquitted themselves."

In the course of the foregoing despatch several references are made to annexures which furnish details of the composition and disposition of the forces, &c. General Gaselee does not in the present despatch give the full list of officers who distinguished themselves, but the names are mentioned of a few who displayed great bravery at Yang-tsun.

THE CAPTURE OF TIEN-TSIN.

Preceding General Gaselee's despatch is one forwarded by Major-General Gascoigne, commanding in China and Hong Kong, from Major F. Morris, Welsh Fusiliers, commanding the North China Field Force. In his covering letter Major-General Gascoigne remarks that Major Morris's "small force was fortunate enough to have been the means of at any rate assisting to open out the relief of Tien-tsin." He adds:

"The reason this despatch was addressed direct to me was no doubt the fact that Major Morris had been detailed by me to command the force sent from Hong Kong, and it was only after he had left Hong Kong, and when all telegraphic communication with the north was interrupted, that I learnt that Colonel Dorward had been appointed to the command. Colonel Dorward had not joined at the time this despatch was written."

Two reports follow from Brigadier-General Dorward, the first giving particulars of a battle fought near Tien-tsin on July 9. In his second despatch, which is dated July 19, he says:

"On the afternoon of the 11th inst. I arranged with Gen. Fukushima, commanding the Japanese Forces, to carry out as soon as possible the capture of Tien-tsin City. Owing to our heavy losses during the daily bombardment of the settlements we considered this movement necessary."

The despatch concludes with the names of the officers and men who distinguished themselves during the operations.

HONOURS FOR THE NAVY.

FOR SERVICE IN AFRICA.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 9.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve of the following appointments to the Military Order of the Bath, the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and the Distinguished Service Order respectively, for services in China:—

G.C.B.—Vice-Admiral Sir Edward H. Seymour, K.C.B.
C.B.—Capt. E. H. Bayly, J. H. Thomas Burke, G. A. Callaghan and J. R. Jellicoe.
K.C.M.G.—Rear-Admiral J. A. T. Bruce.
D.S.O.—Lieuts. E. G. Lowther-Crofton, E. Charrington, C. Mackenzie, and V. E. B. Phillimore, and Engr. G. H. Cockey.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve of the Victoria Cross being conferred upon Midshipman B. J. D. Guy, for gallantry in endeavouring to save the life of an able seaman, J. McCarthy, while under fire during the attack on Tien-tsin on July 13.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 8.

The following promotions made for services in China:—

Commanders R. G. Fraser, C. D. Granville, D. Beatty, D.S.O., to be Capt.
Lieuts. T. W. Kemp, H. du C. Luard, A. R. Hulbert, H. W. Colomb, and R. J. B. Keyes to be Commanders.
The above promotions, as well as those of Capt. R. H. J. Stewart and Commander P. N. Wright, to be additional to establishment of Capt. and Commanders.
Sub-Lieuts. C. F. Ballard, C. C. Walcott, L. W. Braithwaite, M. E. Cochrane, and E. C. Kennedy to be Lieuts.

Staff-Surg. J. H. Thomas to be Fleet-Surg.
Surgs. R. H. J. Brown and J. F. Hall, M.B., to be Staff-Surgs.

Staff-Paymr. F. C. Alton to be Fleet-Paymr.

Assist.-Paymrs. C. J. E. Botter and H. J. Hargrave to be Paymrs.

All above promotions to date Nov. 9.

Majors J. R. Johnstone and E. V. Luke, R.M.L.I., to be Brevet Lieut.-Cols.

Capt. E. Wray, R.M.L.I., to be Brevet Major.

Dates of these Brevet promotions will be notified hereafter.

Lieut. H. J. B. Armstrong, R.M.L.I., to be Capt. (Nov. 9).

Commander W. O. Boothby has been noted for early promotion.

Midshipmen D. de C. A. Herbert, W. B. C. Jones, R. C. Mayne, C. C. Dix, G. Gipps, B. J. D. Guy, L. I. Shore, and E. O. B. S. Osborne are noted for early promotion on qualifying for rank of Lieut.

Assist.-Engr. A. E. Cossey to be promoted to Engr. on completing the necessary qualifying service.

FOR SERVICES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 6.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Most Honourable Order of the Bath in recognition of the services of undermentioned officers during the war in South Africa:—

To be ordinary members of the Military Division of the 2nd Class, or Knights Commanders:—Rear-Admiral Sir Robert H. Harris, K.C.M.G.

To be an ordinary member of the Military Division of the 3rd Class, or Companions:—Capt. Sir Edward Chichester, Bart., C.M.G., B.N.; Capt. E. P. Jones, R.N.; Capt. B. C. Prothero, R.N.; Capt. J. E. Bearcroft, R.N.; Capt. W. B. Fisher, R.N.; Major A. E. Marchant, R.M.L.I.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of the services of undermentioned officers during the war in South Africa:—

To be Companions:—Lieut. G. P. E. Hunt, R.N. Lieut. W. T. C. Jones, R.M.L.I.; Surg. C. C. Macmillan, M.B., R.N.; Lieut. W. J. Colquhoun, Victorian Navy; Lieut. N. W. Chiazari, Natal Naval Volunteers.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 5.

Promotions made for services in South Africa:—Commanders W. L. Grant and S. Y. De Horesy to be Capt.

Lieuts. F. W. Melville, A. Halsey, H. W. James, and J. A. Fergusson to be Commanders.

The above promotions, as well as those of Capt. A. H. Limpus and Commanders F. C. A. Ogilvie, F. W. Dean, and A. W. Heneage, to be addl. to establishment of Capt. and Commanders.

Lieuts. G. F. E. Nugent, E. F. C. Back, and J. E. Drummond are noted for early promotion.

Midshipmen T. F. J. L. Wardle, W. R. Ledger, W. W. Sillem, G. H. Long, H. S. W. Boldero, B. T. Dorn, J. A. G. Troup, R. B. C. Hutchinson, H. E. W. C. Whyte, G. L. Hodson, and R. E. W. Kirby, are noted for early promotion on qualifying for rank of Lieut.

Fleet-Surg. J. Porter, M.A., M.B., to be Deputy-Insp.

Gen. of Hospitals and Fleets.

Staff-Surg. F. J. Lilly to be Fleet-Surg.

Surg. E. C. Lomas to be Staff Surg.

Asst.-Paymr. B. C. Allen to be Paymr.

All promotions to date Oct. 21.

THE Staff College at Aldershot, which has been closed in consequence of so many officers having been sent to South Africa, will reopen on Jan. 15. Officer-instructors now at the front have been ordered to return home forthwith.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died.)

BELFAST (12 miles south of), Nov. 2.

5th Lancers.—WOUNDED: 4457 Hollifield, 3495 Timms.

Canadian Mtd. Rifles.—1st: MISSING: 203 Macdonald. 2nd: KILLED: Lieut. Chalmers; WOUNDED: Major Sanders, 248 Pratt, 235 Northway.

R.F.A.—84th batt.: WOUNDED: 14021 Sgt. Cruickshank.

Gordons.—1st: KILLED: 3925 G. Smith; WOUNDED: Capt. Greenhill-Gardyne, Sgt. 2008 Ross, L.-Cpl. 6384 Henderson, Ptes. 2023 Lloyd, 3759 Coile, 1643 Keating, 3031 Shaw, 5930 Hay.

Near MIDDELBURG.

18th Hussars.—KILLED: 4013 Read. WOUNDED: 4290 Stewart.

R.F.A.—53rd Batt.: WOUNDED: 5532 Meager*, 2696 Usher.

Devon.—1st: WOUNDED: 4647 Simmons.

Leicester Mtd. Inf.—WOUNDED: 3850 Mardon.

VENTERSBURG, Oct. 10.

R.F.A.—39th Batt.: KILLED: Maj. Hanwell. WOUNDED: 96632 Pepper, 60948 Shepherd, 42731 Jordan.

ACCIDENTALLY: 47984 Aughey, 60222 Kilcullen.

E. Kent.—3rd: WOUNDED: 5738 Newby, 5081 Warrington, 5873 Leary, 117 Solly.

Cameron Highrs.—WOUNDED: 2469 Turnbull.

Arg. and Suth.—4th: WOUNDED: 3847 L.-Cpl. Kennedy.

MISCELLANEOUS.

6th D.G.—3592 Sgt. Hyland, killed; 3993 Brudell, wounded, Oct. 22; 3574 Dove, missing, Oct. 24 (no place given).

7th D.G.—3748 Laird, Oct. 22, 4107 Gibbs, Oct. 20, wounded (no place given).

2nd Drag.—4L53 Hickey, 3983 Waterer, wounded, Oct. 19 (no place given); 3433 Lumell, reported missing Oct. 16-19, was wounded and left at Ermelo.

5th Lancers.—4981 Campbell, wounded Oct. 19 (no place given).

6th Drag.—3662 Shirley*, 3078 Divall, 3315 Cpl. Rogers, 5088 Fortune, 4064 Harris, wounded with French's force, Oct. 19; 5030 Grattage, 3401 Steel, reported wounded and missing Carolina-Bethel, Oct. 16-19, former was missing only, now rejoined, latter wounded only. 3586 Gardiner, reported killed Oct. 16, was wounded on that date and died of wounds 20th.

9th Lancers.—3907 Chapple*, Oct. 30; 4176 Webster, Oct. 22, wounded (place not given).

11th Huss.—3364 Gilbert (att'd. 8th Huss.), wounded, Carolina, Oct. 13.

12th Lancers.—4412 Cpl. Laker, wounded, Oct. 19 (no place given); 3280 Allen, 3875 Howarth, prisoners released Oct. 7.

18th Huss.—4533 Morcom, wounded, Elands Spruit, Oct. 10; 4643 Beatwell, wounded nr. Witpoort, Oct. 12; 402 Bee, wounded and prisoner, Vanwyksvlei, Aug. 21, since released; 4400 Cpl. Dunn, wounded Oct. 22 (no place given).

Imp. Yeo.—19th Batn.: 1016 Conti, missing, has rejoined. 4th Co.: 9951 Stiles, reported missing, Harri-smith, Aug. 4, was killed and buried by Boers. 17th: 2890 Sgt. Campbell, wounded Rensburg Drift, Oct. 27. 41st: 4674 Andrews, wounded Elands River, Oct. 29; 55th: 1003 Jameson, killed; 10075 Wright, Nov. 5; 9979 Lynch*, wounded, Nov. 1, Doorn River. 57th: (P 10426) McCall, missing, Elands Kop, Oct. 22. 76th: 14621 Bingham, accidentally injured, Ladybrand, Nov. 3. N.S.W. Lancers.—19 Sgt. Rose, 919 King, wounded, Oct. 19 (no place given).

Bushmen, S. Aust.—65 Millman, wounded, 95 Floan, injured, fall from horse, Oct. 31; 91 Cpl. Rickaby, wounded, Oct. 29, Kaffirskraal. N.S.W.: 72 Murray, killed, 26 Derrill, wounded, Kaffirskraal, Nov. 1; 788 West, wounded, Reitfontein, Sept. 23; 1318 Sgt. Watt, missing, has rejoined.

Mtd. Rifles, Border.—Farr, died pneumonia, Kroonstad, Oct. 23, should have been Sara.

Irreg. Horse.—Kitchener's: 9468 Sgt. Hertz, wounded, Vredesfort, Oct. 22; 3216 Buckley, missing, French's force, Oct. 16-19, was wounded and left at Ermelo; 9576 Compton, wounded, Carolina, Oct. 15. French's Scouts: Woodwyroh. Sgt. Ireland, wounded, Heidelberg, Oct. 27; 69 Sgt. Wallace, wounded, Oct. 20 (no place given). Nesbitt's: Porch, killed; Moore, Maphem, J. Scott, Schwartz. Slater, Scott, Chalmers, Sgt. Blisset, wounded, Philopolis, during siege. Roberts's: 947 J. Robeson, reported died enteric, Florida, June 6; rank should have been shown as Qr.-Mr.-Sgt., and not as previously reported.

O.R.C. Police.—Cpl. Newman, killed, Wentworth; Lyall, wounded, Phillipolis, during siege; 101 Met-lekamp (late Roberis's H.), 426 Kornell (late Brabant's H.), missing Petrusberg, Oct. 10, have rejoined; 304 Brett, reported dead, was wounded and missing; 96 Morrell, reported wounded prisoner, was missing only; both now rejoined.

Mtd. Inf.—N.S.W.: Capt. Gribben, accidentally injured, Rensburg Drift, Oct. 27. Bethune's: 1065 McDonald, 997 Hand, killed; 44 L.-Cpl. Berg, 214 Boddington, 660 Francis, 1032 Newman, injured by lightning, Blood River Camp, Oct. 31; 954 Somerville, wounded near Platrand, Oct. 29. Tasm.: 144 Gerrard, missing, Jacobsdal, Oct. 27.

Cape Police.—908 Thornton, killed; 904 Selsey, wounded; Sub-Insp. Harvey, Sgts. 32 Ball and Matthews, Cpl. 297 Rogers, Trprs. 1833 Vandermuellen, 90 Hastie, 903 Simon, 1868 Peachey, 902 Kelly, 899 Powell; 380 Picock, 777 Griffin, 166 Reynolds, 909 Price, 905 Nickson, 687 Henderson, missing, Hoopstad, Oct. 23; Dudley, wounded, Jan. 7, place not given.

R.H.A.—"A" Batt.: 70710 Davies, injured by train. "M": 30905 Fuller, 61664 W. J. Smith, wounded, Carolina, Oct. 13.

R.F.A.—73rd Batt.: 68189 Stone, wounded, Rensburg, Oct. 27.

Coldstream Gds.—2nd: 1173 Adams, reported wounded, Magersfontein, Dec. 11, 1899, was killed and buried by Boers.

Liverpool.—1st: 5333 Hoyles, wounded, near Witpoort, Oct. 12.

Yorks.—1st: 3953 Daley, wounded, Viljoen's Drift, Nov. 6.

Cheshire Mtd. Inf.—3 36 Bartram, 1601 Gregory, wounded, Kaalfontein, Oct. 30.

Welsh Fus.—1st: 3529 Sullivan*, accidentally wounded, Frederickstad, Oct. 29.

Worcester Mtd. Inf.—3910 Rowley*, wounded, Rensburg Drift, Oct. 27.

Welsh.—1st: 5882 Fiddler, killed, 6017 Davies, wounded, near Petrusville, Oct. 30.

Innskillings.—1st: 2226 Devenney, killed, 6033 Fitzgibbon, wounded, near Witpoort, Oct. 12.

Berks Mtd. Inf.—4321 Goodwin, reported killed, Dewetsdorp, Apr. 4, was wounded only.

W. Kent.—2nd: 2566 Sellings, killed, 22nd; 2660 Clarke*, 5079 Emmerson, 2786 Col.-Sgt. Grellier, wounded, 12th; 5108 Ashby, drowned, 9th; 5271 Langley, wounded, Oct. 6, near Frankfort.

Wilts.—2nd: 2475 L.-Cpl. Clifford, injured in railway accident, near Pretoria, Oct. 30.

Manchester.—2nd: Lieut. Baker, accidentally injured, near Vrede, Nov. 6; 6818 L.-Cpl. Sutcliffe, 2318 Robinson, missing, near Harrismith, Nov. 6.

Gordons.—2nd: 1253 Brunskill, 2281 McKay, wounded, near Witpoort, Oct. 12; 4445 F. Smith*, wounded, French's Force, Oct. 19.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

1st L.G.—Capt. Loughlin, hepatitis, Wynberg, Nov. 2; 1747 Moss, Johannesburg, June 14.

6th D.G.—3993 Corbett, Johannesburg, June 24; 4074 Watts, Oct. 26; 3662 Sherley, wounds, Oct. 20, Heidelberg.

2nd Drag.—4445 G. H. Smith, wounds, Heidelberg, Oct. 20; 4662 Graham, dysentery, Norvalspont, Nov. 5.

9th Lancers.—3570 L.-Cpl. Gower, Johannesburg, June 12.

10th Huss.—4472 Corless, killed, with French's Force, Oct. 19.

12th Lancers.—4067 Trendall, June 5th; 4581 Wallage, June 13, Johannesburg.

14th Huss.—3719 Hemens, Johannesburg, June 6.

17th Lancers.—3871 Roome, heart disease, Helvetia, Aug. 29.

Imp. Yeo.—19th Batn.: 13550 Kerr, gastritis, Kimberley, Nov. 2.

2nd Co.—Lieut. Cavendish Browne, Oct. 23; 231 Marden, Oct. 25, both killed Vrede. 28th: 14985 L.-Cpl. Tennant; 14983 Southbeer, both wounds, Johannesburg, Nov. 1. 30th: 4158 Bullen, heart disease, Maitland, Nov. 4. 37th: 4844 Dancer, Mafeking, Nov. 2. 48th: 2402 Harris, Pretoria, Oct. 28. 54th: 9586 Price, Howick, Nov. 3. 67th: 12498 Only, Victoria, Oct. 28.

Mtd. Inf.—N.Z.: 797 Watters, Johannesburg, June 22; 385 Cpl. Parker, killed, Thabanehu, May 1; 480 L. E. Smith, killed, Vet River, May 5, previously reported wounded.

Bushmen.—W. Aust.: 81 Roscoe, wounds, Johannesburg, Nov. 3.

Irreg. Horse.—Kitchener's: 4480 Glover, dysentery, June 3, Johannesburg; Douglas, Pretoria, Oct. 30.

Roberts's: 2182 Harvey, wounds, Luckhoff, Oct. 23; 4614 Kelly, Johannesburg, June 14. N.Z. Rough Riders: 678 Sanson, June 6; 666 Moffatt, June 15, Johannesburg.

Lovat's.—8745 Grant, Johannesburg, June 16. Driscoll's Scouts: Gumell, Lindley, Oct. 15.

Police.—B.S.A.: J. Williams, measles, Mafeking, Oct. 30. Transvaal: Tyndale, pneumonia, Pretoria, Oct. 22.

Cape: 1861 Linstrom, Venterstad, June 13; 341 Sgt. Ray, Dordrecht, Apr. 18. R.H.A.: 24029 Hara, June 7; 11444 Wickens, June 10. "G": 19186 Snelling, Oct. 31, all Johannesburg.

R.F.A.—66219 Gibbins, killed, Oct. 20 (no place given), 68990 Redfern, Johannesburg, June 22. 39th Batt.: 96632 Pepper, wounds, Kroonstad, Nov. 11. 43rd: 66375 Pearce, Smithfield, Nov. 4.

R.G.A.—5603 Davis, Johannesburg, June 5.

Elswick Batt.—716 Robson, Pretoria, Sept. 4, should read 7169 W. H. Robson.

Amm. Col.—14692 Morley, Johannesburg, June 13.

R.E.—385 Whiston, Johannesburg, June 4. 26th Co.: 912 J. Brown, Pretoria, Oct. 29.

Gren. Gds.—3rd: 2829 Carruthers, Pretoria, Oct. 29; 7860 Vowles, 7356 Lee, Johannesburg, June 10.

Coldstream Gds.—1st: 9167 Ford, Standerton, Nov. 6. 2nd: 2019 Matthews, dysentery, June 11; 2303 Gray, pneumonia, Pretoria, Nov. 1.

R. Scots.—1st: 6841 Dodds, Kaapmuiden, Oct. 23.

W. Surrey.—2198 Seymour, Elandslaagte, Mar. 21.

E. Kent.—3rd: 6186 Glover, Kroonstad, Oct. 31.

Lancaster.—3rd: 7070 Sgt. Poole, Kroonstad, Nov. 5.

Warwick.—2nd: 1214 Haywood, Johannesburg, June 13. 6th: 7261 Osborne, Bloemfontein, Oct. 30.

Vol. Co.: 2566 Forster, Johannesburg, June 8.

R. Fus.—2nd: 5776 Hunter, Apr. 6; 4710 Leggett, Apr. 14, Modder Spruit; 6901 Morgan, Apr. 18; 4287 Sgt. Mann, Mar. 13, both dysentery, Ladysmith.

Norfolk.—2nd: 2765 Underwood, Pretoria, Oct. 31; 4422 Knight, Springfontein, Nov. 5.

Lincoln.—2nd: 627 Spencer, Pretoria, Oct. 31; 1340 Beech, contusion, viscera, Wynberg, Nov. 2.

Devon.—2nd: 5587 Smale, 5565 Stone, both dysentery, Elands Laagte, Mar. 29.

Suffolk.—1st: 2951 L.-Cpl. Day, Bloemfontein, Nov. 1; 8366 Ward, Middelburg, Nov. 2.

Somerset L.I.—2nd: 671 Mays, Krugersdorp, Oct. 31; 4830 Heall, Modder River, Apr. 17; 2090 Druce, Smithfield, May 27; 3964 Horler, Maritzburg, May 11, last three from unknown causes; 5272 Thorne, Chieveley, Apr. 6; 2929 Stockton, Modder Spruit, Apr. 29. 4th: 5165 Sgt. Hyatt, injuries, East London, Nov. 3.

E. Yorks.—2nd: 6086 Tanner, Bloemfontein, Oct. 30.

Leicester.—1st: 5463 Marlow, Maritzburg, Nov. 6.

Lancs. Fus.—2nd: 1118 Browne, Apr. 9; 2741 Robinson, Jan. 28; both from sickness in South Africa.

Scots Fus.—2nd: 2789 Wilson, Maritzburg, Feb. 2, 5743 Hillcocks, Colenso, Mar. 7, both wounds; 2858 Yates, Modder Spruit, Apr. 23.

S. W. Borders.—2894 Mills, Johannesburg, June 12. 2nd: 6501 Briggs, pneumonia, at sea, Oct. 26.

K.O.S.B.—3835 Reilly, Johannesburg, June 13. 1st: 6529 Grant, Bloemfontein, June 5.

Cameronians.—2nd: 3649 Mitchell, dysentery, Mar. 21.

East Lancs.—1st: 5445 Rogers, dysentery, Bloemfontein, Oct. 19.

ELKINGTON & Co., LTD.

Goldsmiths, Silversmiths, and Court Jewellers.

THE ORIGINATORS AND PATENTEES OF ELECTRO PLATE.

ELKINGTON PLATE

Is the Finest Quality of Table Ware the World can Produce.

CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

Special Designs for Presentation Services prepared and submitted Free of Charge.

London Showrooms:

22, REGENT ST., S. W.; 73, CHEAPSIDE, E. C.

9, Parker Street, Liverpool; St. Anns Square, Manchester;

22, Blackett Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne; St. Vincent Street, Glasgow.

Manufactory: Newhall Street, Birmingham.

Tea Pot, 2 Pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 3s.
Solid Silver, £10.

Cream Jug.
Elkington Plate, £1 14s.
Solid Silver, £3 15s.

Sugar Basin.
Elkington Plate, £2 4s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £5 5s.

Coffee Pot, 2 1/2 pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 6s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £10 10s.

Antique Fluted Tea and Coffee Service.
Elkington Plate, 10 8s. Solid Silver, £29 10s

tein, Nov. 1; 1541 Robinson, malignant oedema, Johannesburg, Nov. 2.

E. Surrey.—5757 Goodwin, peritonitis, Vereeniging, Oct. 27.

D.C.L.I.—2nd: 3271 Mann, Pretoria, Oct. 26; 5422 Freeman, pleurisy, Johannesburg, June 25.

W. Riding.—1st: 711 Taylor, dysentery, Bloemfontein, Apr. 3.

Border.—7198 Jackson, Germiston, Oct. 31. 1st: 5465 Cooper, Ladysmith, Apr. 10; 5481 L.-Cpl. Davies, Modder Spruit, Apr. 30.

Sussex.—1st: 3101 Veness, drowned, Kroonstad, Nov. 3; 5409 Beeney, drowned, Lindley, Oct. 23.

Hants.—2nd: 2144 Sgt. Rawlings, Greenpoint, Nov. 6. S. Staff.—1st: 3925 North, apoplexy, Harrismith, Nov. 1.

Dorset.—2nd: 578 Short, Newcastle, Oct. 30; 3491 Stevens, Maritzburg, Apr. 1; 2879 Seates, 2930 Bridgen, both Apr. 6; 3343 Bentley, Apr. 15, last three Ladysmith; 2624 Hawes, Elandslaagte, Apr. 17.

Welsh.—1st: 6463 Rourke, Pretoria, July 7.

R. Highrs.—2nd: 4438 Gagan (? disease), Ladybrand, Nov. 2.

Oxford L.I.—1st: 5989 Wilks, pneumonia, Bloemfontein, Nov. 2; 2137 Coleman (? disease), Woodstock, Apr. 18.

Derby.—1st: 5261 Boswell, pneumonia, Johannesburg, June 26.

Northampton.—2nd: 3061 Worman, killed, Mar 31, previously reported wounded; 4845 Cpl. Beauchlerk, Rustenburg, Oct. 31.

Berks.—3898 Tyson, Pretoria, Nov. 1.

W. Kent.—2nd: 3098 Reed, congestion brain, Apr. 1; 4876 Dorman, pneumonia, Mar. 30; both at sea.

Yorks L.I.—2nd: 5356 L.-Cpl. Matthews (? disease), Bloemfontein, Apr. 10; 4418 Lee, dysentery, Pretoria, while a prisoner. Vol. Co.: 7446 Hardwick, Greenpoint, Nov. 3.

Shrops. L.I.—5864 Shuker, June 15; 5026 Edmonds, June 20, Johannesburg.

Middlesex.—2nd: 7277 Stack, Newcastle, Oct. 30; 1441 Williams, Dundee, Nov. 3; 3786 Hayes, Ladysmith, Apr. 28.

K.R.R.—2nd: 1758 Gray, malaria, Ceylon, Oct. 29; 9849 Faulder, disease, Greenpoint, Feb. 24. Vol.: Capt. Warren, dysentery, Modder Spruit, May 8.

Manchester.—1st: 3378 Finnigan, Modder Spruit, June 28. 2nd: 4307 J. Brown, Harrismith, Nov. 1. Vol. Co.: 7051 E. J. Unsworth, dysentery, Ladysmith, June 3, previously reported as 3957 J. Unsworth.

N. Staff.—2nd: 3798 Tapp, killed Waterval, Feb. 15; 2951 Mellor, Bloemfontein, Apr. 29.

York and Lanc.—1st: 2907 Kelly, Elandslaagte, 10th; 5810 Bennett, 6th; 4787 T. Smith, 9th; 2959 Poole, 19th; 1881 Hall, 19th; 2108 Young, dysentery, 23rd; 3075 J. Smith, Apr. 8; 3907 Goodall March 14, all Ladysmith; 2390 Cook, Charlestown, Nov. 5.

H.L.I.—1st: 2695 L.-Cpl. Valentine, Greenpoint, Oct. 31.

Seaforths.—2nd: 2575 Sgt. Sutherland, wounds, Jagersfontein, Oct. 29.

Gordons.—Vol. Co.: 467 Bennett, Johannesburg, June 9.

Irish Fus.—2nd: 2921 Loney, Cape Town, May 10; 6207 Keelan, Modder Spruit, June 17.

Connaught R.—1st: 2629 Comber, wound, Smaldeel, Nov. 3.

Leinster.—4437 Folley, Johannesburg, June 30. 1st: 1319 Kerwin, brain inflammation, Bloemfontein, Oct. 30; 5559 Connors, tubercle lung, Springfontein, Oct. 30; 3820 Kelly, meningitis, Harrismith, Nov. 4. 3rd: 6013 Slaven, dysentery, Alwal North, Nov. 4.

Munster Fus.—3rd: 1710 Donovan, accidentally killed, Elizabeths Rust, Oct. 22.

Dublin Fus.—2nd: 5741 Dwyer, Germiston, Oct. 31; 6297 Campion (missing, Dec. 15, 1899), 5918 Callaghan, 5987 M. Mahoney (both missing, Oct. 20, 1899), were killed in action.

R.B.—2nd: 6286 Pammett, drowned whilst bathing, near Hoopstad, Oct. 23.

C.I.V.—1512 Dyson, Pretoria, Oct. 25; 331 Ayles, Oct. 21; 203 Bruce, Oct. 26, on Aurania.

Rhodesian Regt.—Norman, fever, Charter, Rhodesia, Feb. 10; Lieut. Wilfred, killed, near Mafeking, May 16; Bozziwell, Gaberones, Mar. 8; 144 Hopper Kanya, Apr. 8; Morshead, Gwanda, Feb. 17, for last three no disease given; Cpl. Head, dysentery, Tuli, Mar. 7; Owen, meningitis Gwanda, Jan. 21; 456 Lees, wounds, Mafeking, Mar. 31. Vols.: Barry, 15, Cooke, Mar. 3. Bulwayo; Dane, Crocodile Pools, Apr. 11, no disease given; Gill, killed, Apr. 29, no place given.

Cape Town Highrs.—78 Ralston, wounds, Kimberley, Nov. 3.

A.S.C.—12490 Pinn, Johannesburg, June 22. 22nd Co.: 12882 Towles, peritonitis, Maritzburg, Nov. 1. 24th; 12172 Meads, pneumonia, Heilbron, Nov. 3. 28th: 11183 Ford, Johannesburg, June 11.

R.A.M.C.—8400 Watson, Johannesburg, June 17; 11431 Leary, found drowned, previously reported missing, 12726 O'Shaughnessy, dysentery, Pretoria, Oct. 31.

Imp. Bearer Corps.—Brooke, empyemia, Middelburg, Oct. 24.

St John's Amb.—1423 King, endocarditis, Newcastle, Oct. 30.

Army Pay Dept.—Maj. Sheppard, erysipelas, Bloemfontein, Nov. 6.

Enquiries as to casualties occurring in the Imperial Yeomanry should be addressed to the War Office and no to the Yeomanry Offices as heretofore.

NAVAL.
Powerful (late of), R.M.L.I. Po. 7152 Donaldson.

CASUALTIES IN CHINA.

R.H.A. Pom-Pom Batt.—34312 Beer, accidentally drowned, Shanghai Harbour; no date given.

R.G.A.—15th Co. (W.D.): 28807 Porter, died enteric, Wei-Hai-Wei, Oct. 27.

The Gazettes.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 6.

Royal Artillery.—Major-Gen. A. Walker, C.S.I. (late Bengal), to be Col.-Commandant, vice Field-Marshal Right Hon. F. S. Lord Roberts, V.C., K.P., &c., transferred to Irish Guards (Oct. 17).

6th Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. S. W. Webster to be Lieut. on augmentation (Oct. 3).

11th Hussars.—Capt. E. S. E. Harrison to be Major, vice Hon. O. V. G. A. Lumley, promoted (Sept. 29).

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

13th Batn.—Temp. Lieut. T. H. Montgomery, Qrmr., resigns his commission.

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

To be 2nd Lieuts.:—Trpr. Joseph M. Syer, from Canadian Local Military Forces (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 7); Alfred H. Edwards (Univ. cand.), from the Imperial Yeomanry (dated May 26, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 7); Lieut. E. H. Arkwright, from Yorkshire Artillery; 2nd Lieut. H. H. S. Vaughan, from Kent Artillery.

Royal Garrison Artillery.

Capt. C. W. Brownlow to be Major, vice J. R. H. Allen, promoted (Nov. 1).

Cpts. C. R. B. Owen (Oct. 1) and Hon. M. R. C. Ward (Oct. 10) seconded for service on Staff.

Capt. S. G. Horton, from half-pay, to be Capt., vice S. F. Alderson, appointed Divl. Adjt. (Oct. 22).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Scots.—Major L. F. Barton retires on retired pay; Capt. W. C. Olpherts to be Major, vice L. F. Barton.

Royal West Surrey Regt.—Promotions to Lieut. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts. are antedated:—C. F. Watson to May 7, vice A. W. Tufnell, promoted; J. Rainsford-Hannay to 23rd May, vice C. E. Wilson, seconded. 2nd Lieut. W. H. Alleyne to be Lieut., vice R. J. A. Terry, promoted into Manchester Regt. (June 9); Lance Sergt. Gerald Adams, from 12th Lancers (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be Second Lieut., vice C. F. Watson.

East Yorkshire Regt.—Lance-Corp. Andrew Nugent, from 10th Hussars (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be Second Lieut., vice E. M. Hanbury, killed in action.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Suppy. Lieut. J. B. Cockburn to be Lieut., vice O. S. Flower, promoted (Sept. 14); Lieut. J. B. Cockburn to be Capt., vice P. R. Mantell, promoted (Oct. 6); Capt. H. Osbert S. Cadogan to be Adjt., vice Capt. and Brevet-Major C. M. Debell, whose period of service in appointment expires.

Hampshire Regt.—Lieuts. to be Cpts.:—H. W. B. Millais, vice F. S. K. Shaw, seconded; G. H. Parker, vice H. W. R. Millais, seconded for service under Foreign Office; 2nd Lieut. L. C. Morley to be Lieut., vice G. H. Parker (July 23).

Royal Highlanders.—2nd Lieut. W. Stewart to be Lieut., vice W. J. St. J. Harvey, appointed Adjt. (Sept. 5).

Derbyshire Regt.—Corpl. Bernard W. Paul, from 2nd Life Guards (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. B. G. V. Way, promoted.

Royal Berkshire Regt.—Capt. H. L. Lee retires on retired pay (Nov. 7). Lieuts. to be Cpts.:—A. S. Turner, vice J. G. R. Walsh, seconded (May 25); P. W. North, vice H. L. Lee (Nov. 7).

Royal Munster Fusiliers.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Lieut. F. J. R. Hughes, from 3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regt., which appeared in Gazette of May 11 is cancelled.

West India Regt.—Lieut. E. V. Moore seconded for service with A.S.C. (Aug. 21); 2nd Lieut. G. W. Rolph, from 3rd Batn. Leicester Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. H. E. M. Hutchinson, promoted.

Royal Northern Reserve Regt.—Capt. C. B. Cameron, Reserve of Officers, to be Capt. (June 28).

Army Service Corps.—To be 2nd Lieuts.:—2nd Lieut. A. W. J. F. Abbott, from Royal Irish Regt. (May 1); Capt. G. D. F. MacCall, from 6th Batn. Manchester Regt. (May 2); Lieut. E. V. Moore, West India Regt., transferred on probation as a 2nd Lieut. (May 21).

STAFF.

Major A. W. Gay, R.A., to be a Brig. Major for R.A., vice Lieut.-Col. E. W. Fleming, R.A., vacated appointment (Nov. 1).

Capt. A. C. Bell, Scots Guards, to be A.D.C. to Right Hon. G. J., Earl of Minto, G.C.M.G., Governor-General of Dominion of Canada, and Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Prince Edward Island (Nov. 20).

Capt. Hon. C. H. C. Willoughby, 9th Lancers, to be Military Secretary to Right Hon. J. A. L., Earl of Hopton, G.C.M.G., Governor-General of Commonwealth of Australia (Nov. 8).

Appointments to staff of Lines of Communication made in South Africa confirmed:—Major W. Bertram, Reserve of Officers, to be a Station Commandant, graded as a D.A.A.G., from April 5 to April 20, and from June 30 to Sept. 16; Lieut.-Col. W. D. Gordon, Canadian Staff, to be Staff Officer at Base for Australian Contingents, graded as a D.A.A.G., vice Col. J. M. Gordon (Sept. 27).

Officers commanding Regts. of Mounted Infantry graded as A.A.G.s.:—Major and Brevet-Col. St. G. C. Henry, Northumberland Fusiliers; Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. (now Lieut.-Col.) T. D. Pilcher, Bedford Regt. (Jan. 27); Capt. (local Lieut.-Col.) H. de B. de Lisle, D.S.O., Durham L.I. (Jan. 30); Major (local Lieut.-Col.) N. Legge, D.S.O., 20th Hussars (Feb. 2); Major (local Lieut.-Col.) W. C. Boes, Durham L.I.; Capt. and Brevet Major (local Lieut.-Col.) E. G. T. Bainbridge, East Kent Regt. (Feb. 5); Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. W. H. Sitwell, Northumberland Fusiliers (from Feb. 25 to Aug. 31); Lieut.-Col. H. L. Dawson, I.S.C. (April 7).

Indian Staff Corps.—Majors J. G. Hunter (June 8), M. E. O'Donoghue (June 4), and M. T. Shewen (July 1), granted temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst serving as regimental Commandants, Indian Army.

Unattached List.—Lieut. A. M. Gillies, from the R.M.L.I., to be 2nd Lieut., with a view to his appointment to I.S.C. (Oct. 12).

Army Pay Dept.—Capt. A. E. B. Mangles, from Dorset Regt., is permanently appointed to Army Pay Dept., retaining his substantive rank (Jan. 21).

Brevet.—Officers to be Cols.:—Lieut.-Col. C. Haggard, half-pay (Oct. 28); Lieut.-Col. E. S. Evans, Royal Munster Fusiliers (Nov. 4).

MEMORANDA.

Lieut.-Col. and Col. C. F. Morton, half-pay, placed on retired pay.

Col. W. H. McNamara (April 17), and Col. J. A. Clery, M.B. (May 1), R.A.M.C., granted local rank of Surg.-Gen. whilst P.M.O., Lines of Communication, South Africa.

Col. J. F. Supple, R.A.M.C., granted local rank of Surg.-Gen. whilst P.M.O. at Base, Cape Town. (Nov. 18, 1899).

Col. T. J. Gallwey, M.D., C.B., R.A.M.C., granted local rank of Surg.-Gen. whilst P.M.O., Natal (Nov. 14, 1899).

Officers granted local rank of Col. whilst P.M.O.s of Divisions, Field Force, South Africa:—Lieut.-Cols. S. H. Carter, M.B. (April 15); O. Todd, M.B. (May 2); and G. T. Goggin (April 15), R.A.M.C.; Surg.-Lieut.-Col. J. Magill, M.D., Goldstream Guards (April 16); Major B. M. Skinner, R.A.M.C. (July 23).

Officers of R.A.M.C. granted local rank of Col. whilst in charge of General Hospitals, Field Force, South Africa:—Lieut.-Cols. M. D. O'Connell (April 20); A. Keogh, M.D., and H. Martin, M.B. (July 30). Majors T. R. Lucas, M.B. (May 1); H. J. Barratt (July 23); and S. Westcott (April 6).

Capt. J. E. Forster, 3rd Batn. York and Lancaster Regt., granted temp. rank of Lieut. in Army whilst serving with a Line batn. in South Africa (Sept. 12).

Rdgm. and Hon. Lieut. F. G. Hughes, Reserve of Officers (attached to 8th Hussars), granted hon. rank of Capt. (Nov. 7).

About

LEMCO

the Soldier's Mainstay.

Lemco is the original Liebig Company's Extract, the only meat extract manufactured under the supervision of J. v. Liebig and his successors. Every jar bears his signature in blue.

Her Majesty's Government has ordered for the front enormous quantities of Lemco. The entire product of thousands of selected bullocks has been supplied in special regulation tins. See the name "Lemco" (the manufacturers' initials) on every jar of

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT.

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Donegal (S. Div.).—Norman W. Wingate-Saul to be 2nd Lieut.

Dublin City (S. Div.).—Lieut. J. R. Hamlyn-Nott to be Capt. (Oct. 22).

Durham (W. Div.).—Lieut. A. J. Buchanan resigns his commission.

Forfar and Kincardine (S. Div.).—Leslie E. O. Davidson to be 2nd Lieut.

Tipperary (S. Div.).—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. A. F. Budden resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank, and wear prescribed uniform.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (MILITIA).

Thames Div. Submarine Miners.—John S. Marshall to be 2nd Lieut.

INFANTRY.

3rd Batn. East Kent Regt.—Lieut. T. A. Canelly resigns his commission on account of ill-health.

5th Batn. Royal Warwick Regt.—Supy. Major G. R. Powell to be Major on establishment (Oct. 18).

5th Batn. Liverpool Regt.—Francis J. Cary to be 2nd Lieut.

4th Batn. Suffolk Regt.—2nd Lieut. H. E. Thomas to be Lieut. and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieut. C. S. Wilson to be Lieut.

4th Batn. West Yorkshire Regt.—2nd Lieuts. H. W. Price, D. Grant-Dalton, and R. M. R. Lamb to be Lieuts. (Aug. 6).

4th Batn. Cheshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. J. A. Bean to be Lieut. (Sept. 30).

3rd Batn. Gloucester Regt.—Lieut. E. J. Samuel resigns his commission.

6th Batn. Worcester Regt.—Lieut. W. E. D. Bell to be Capt.

3rd Batn. West Riding Regt.—Capt. G. C. Goldie resigns his commission on account of ill-health.

3rd Batn. Dorset Regt.—Lieut. C. J. C. Johnston-Browne to be Capt. (Oct. 26).

3rd Batn. Oxford L.I.—Geoffrey Tylden to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 2).

4th Batn. Essex Regt.—Lieut. E. O. Warden to be Capt., and to remain seconded; Lieut. J. E. Hopgood to be Capt. (Oct. 22).

3rd Batn. Loyal North Lancashire Regt.—2nd Lieut. G. Pilcher to be Lieut. (Oct. 26).

3rd Batn. Royal West Kent Regt.—Capt. A. S. T. Griffith-Boscawen seconded as a member of House of Commons (Nov. 5).

3rd Batn. Shropshire L.I.—2nd Lieut. E. G. Ripley to be Lieut.; 2nd Lieut. P. C. Huth to be Lieut., and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieut. D. H. Leslie to be Lieut. (Oct. 29).

3rd Batn. Durham L.I.—Francis H. Fawkes to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 29).

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers.—Lieut. W. C. S. Wilson to be Capt. (Oct. 22); 2nd Lieuts. F. S. Brereton, F. R. Shackleton, G. W. Seymour, J. Millard, and L. H. T. Martin to be Lieuts. (Oct. 23).

4th Batn. Connaught Rangers.—2nd Lieut. M. I. M. Campbell to be Lieut.

6th Batn. Rifle Brigade.—Lieut.-Col. E. W. Purdon granted hon. rank of Col.; Major G. L. J. J. G. Nugent granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.; Capt. W. Murray and C. S. Robinson granted hon. rank of Major.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Ayrshire (Earl of Carrick's Own).—Robert D. Ferguson to be 2nd Lieut.

Yorkshire Hussars.—Edward A. D. Collins to be 2nd Lieut.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

1st Caithness.—Lieut.-Col. Sir John R. G. Sinclair, Bart., retired, lately Commanding, appointed to Hon. Colonelcy of Corps.

1st Cheshire and Carnarvon.—Capt. R. R. Greene to be Major; Lieut. T. C. Harrison to be Capt. 2nd Lieuts. J. Gibson, J. A. Green, V. H. Dickson, G. H. Hindley, and A. P. W. Blencowe to be Lieuts. Harold E. W. Ballance to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Cinque Ports (E. Div., R.G.A.).—Capt. A. M. Bradley to be Major. Lieut. F. Crundall to be Capt. 2nd Lieuts. J. G. Welch, A. E. C. Lane, D. Macdonald, C. E. Lart, W. B. Kennett, H. S. Cundell, W. A. H. Saul, and R. H. Messenge to be Lieuts.

2nd Cinque Ports (E. Div., R.G.A.).—Rev. E. Mortlock, M.A., to be Acting Chaplain.

3rd Durham (W. Div., R.G.A.).—Henry Moore, formerly Lieut., to be Qmr.

1st Fife.—William J. Woodhouse, to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Hampshire (S. Div., R.G.A.).—2nd Lieut. H. C. Veiner to be Lieut.

3rd Kent (Royal Arsenal).—Second Lieut. S. W. L. Aschwarden to be Lieut.

2nd Lancashire.—Capt. T. Parrington granted hon. rank of Major.

1st Norfolk (E. Div., R.G.A.).—Lieuts. G. B. Kennett, and P. Wiltshire to be Capt. 2nd Lieuts. P. G. Back, N. W. Howlett, D. S. Bayfield, E. L. Argyle, and E. S. Rogers to be Lieuts.

Tynemouth (W. Div., R.G.A.).—Capt. G. W. M. Bulman resigns his commission.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (VOLUNTEERS).

Cadet Corps attached to 1st Bedford.—Hon. Capt. G. J. R. Glünice to be Capt. (July 1).

1st London.—Capt. C. E. Dance to be supy. whilst acting as Adj. to corps.

1st Middlesex.—Bernard C. Page to be 2nd Lieut.

Electrical Engineers.—Supy. Major R. E. B. Crompton to be Lieut.-Col. and to command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations (May 11).

RIFLE.

Queen's R.V. Brigade, Royal Scots.—Auckland C. Geddes, jun., to be 2nd Lieut. (supy.). 4th V.B.; John W. Adams to be 2nd Lieut. (supy.).

1st V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt.—Capt. E. R. Cook resigns his commission. 4th V.B.: George F. J. Noonan to be 2nd Lieut.

Cadet Corps (St. John's, Westminster), attached to 2nd V.B. Royal Fusiliers.—Rev. William E. Lutyens to be Capt. (Oct. 22).

5th (Irish) V.B. Liverpool Regt.—Henry M. Bayer and Arthur Dranfield to be 2nd Lieuts. 6th V.B.—2nd Lieut. W. J. Shaw resigns his commission. 2nd Lieuts. J. Harrison, J. P. Thomas, W. J. Low, A. L. Radford and R. J. Hall to be Lieuts. 8th (Scottish).—Capt. and Hon. Major C. F. Bell, retired, late 2nd V. B. to be Lieut.-Col. and to command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations (Oct. 24).

4th V.B. Norfolk Regt.—2nd Lieut. W. H. M. Andrews to be Lieut.

2nd V.B. Lincoln Regt.—Lieut. J. L. Griffith to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. A. C. Howard to be Lieut.

Cadet Corps (Leys School) attached to 3rd (Cambridgeshire) V.B. Suffolk Regt.—James H. Hayes to be Capt. (Oct. 17). 4th (Cambridge Univ.) V.B.: Joseph Derek-Leslie to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. West Yorkshire Regt.—Acting-Chaplain Rev. W. E. Hancock, M.A., resigns his appointment.

2nd V.B. East Yorkshire Regt.—Surg.-Capt. A. F. A. Fairweather, M.D., to be Surg.-Major.

Cadet Corps (Bedford Modern School), attached to 3rd V.B. Bedford Regt.—Hon. Capt. Hugh W. Evans to be Capt. (July 1); Edward M. Langley to be Lieut.; Edmund R. Snape to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Arthur N. Bury to be 2nd Lieut. 2nd V.B.: 2nd Lieuts. C. C. G. Roberts and R. T. Ford to be Lieuts.; Edward S. Clark to be 2nd Lieut.

5th V.B. South Wales Borderers.—Allan M. Hutchins to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 3).

2nd V.B. Scottish Rifles.—Hon. Chaplain Rev. H. M. Hamilton, D.D., resigns his commission, with permission to wear uniform of batn.

4th V.B. East Surrey Regt.—Capt. W. G. Dunn resigns appointment of Instr. of Musketry; Capt. W. A. Spencer to be Instr. of Musketry, and to be seconded whilst holding appointment.

2nd V.B. Duke of Cornwall's L.I.—Lieut. G. S. Meadows to be Capt.

3rd V.B. West Riding Regt.—2nd Lieuts. N. B. Marriner, W. H. Hudleston, H. E. Ramsden, W. Pullan and H. K. Bracewell to be Lieuts.

LAZENBY'S

ECONOMIC, CONVENIENT & PORTABLE

SOUP SQUARES

These squares are prepared in 13 Varieties (MULLIGATAWNY, JULIENNE, GRAVY, &c.) and should find a place in every store-room, being invaluable for making soup at short notice or improving stock. They will keep good any reasonable length of time, and are packed in neat boxes containing 6 & 12 Squares.

ONE 6^p SQUARE
WILL MAKE A PINT & A HALF
OF STRONG NUTRITIOUS SOUP

SOLD BY ALL THE LEADING GROCERS & STORES.

Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the Squares, please communicate at once with the Manufacturers.

E. LAZENBY & SON, LTD., 18 Trinity St., LONDON. S.E.

LAZENBY'S

13 VARIETIES.

SOUP SQUARES

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO'S Overcoats for Winter.

Newest Styles, Fashionable Materials.

Overcoats for Winter.

In all sizes. Ready for Immediate Use.

Overcoats for Winter.

Cut by our own Cutters, and made in Best West-end Style at Moderate Prices for Cash Payments.

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.,

12, 10, & 8, BROOK STREET, . . .

. . . HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

WHEN BUYING = =
= = A CHEAP BICYCLE

look at the tyres. If they are not

DUNLOP TYRES

the machine is not cheap at any price.

THE DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD.,
ALMA STREET, COVENTRY; 160 to 168, CLERKENWELL ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

1st Cinque Ports.—Rev. Cecil W. Horsburgh, B.A., to be Acting Chaplain.

Cadet Corps attached to 1st Cinque Ports.—Hon. Capt. J. E. S. Tuckett to be Capt. (July 1).

3rd (Duke of Connaught's Own) V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Herbert T. Clover to be 2nd Lieut.

1st (Pembroke) V.B. Welsh Regt.—Lieut. W. L. Roberts to be Capt. 2nd V.B.: Joseph C. Rees to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Nottingham (Robin Hood).—Capt. P. M. Payne to be Instr. of Musketry on increase of establishment.

1st Middlesex (Victoria and St. George's).—Ernest O. Tagart to be 2nd Lieut.

Cadet Corps attached to 1st London.—Hon. Capt. A. H. Brown to be Capt. (1st July).

2nd V.B. Manchester Regt.—Arthur D. Hunter, to be Second Lieut.

1st V.B. (North Stafford Regt.).—Rev. E. Salt, B.A., to be Acting Chaplain.—2nd V.B.—Second Lieuts.:—A. E. B. Ind and A. O. Lasbrey to be Lieuts.

9th Lanark.—John Hurter, to be Second Lieut.

1st V.B. Gordon Highlanders.—Major C. S. Gordon granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Colonel.—6th V.B.:—William J. B. Walker, to be Second Lieut.

3rd (Renfrew) V.B. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.—Wallace A. Pride, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut.

19th Middlesex.—Supp. Lieut. C. P. Grindle to be Lieut. on establishment.

1st Tower Hamlets.—Philip M. North to be 2nd Lieut. (supp.); John F. F. Parr to be Surg.-Lieut.

2nd Tower Hamlets.—Daniel E. Watson and Walter J. Poole to be 2nd Lieuts.

MEMORANDUM.

Lancashire Volunteer Infantry Brigade.—Major (Hon. Lieut.-Col.) Hon. R. J. O. Jocelyn, retired pay, Reserve of Officers, vacates appointment of Brig. Major under para. 58b Volunteer Regulations (Nov. 1).

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Nov. 7.]

MEMORANDUM.

Consequent upon division of 1st V.B. Royal Lancaster Regt. into two V.B.'s, designated respectively the 1st and 2nd V.B. Royal Lancaster Regt., her Majesty has been graciously pleased to approve of following promotions and transfers of officers, with effect from Nov. 1, and of officers so transferred being considered to have received in the new batn. commissions of same rank and date as in consolidated one, viz.:—

1st V.B. Royal Lancaster Regt.—Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. A. H. Strongitharm to command under para. 55a Volunteer Regulations. Capt. and Hon. Major W. Gradwell to be Major; Lieut. A. H. Strongitharm, jun., to be Capt.

2nd V.B. Royal Lancaster Regt.—Major J. Allen; Capt. J. E. Willan (Hon. Major); J. W. Wearing, and F. B. Bell; Lieut. A. P. Bulfield; 2nd Lieuts. H. N. Clarke, W. H. Satterthwaite and J. Allen, jun.; Major J. Allen to be Lieut.-Col. and to command, under para. 55a Volunteer Regulations; Capt. and Hon. Major J. E. Willan to be Major; Lieut. A. P. Bulfield to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. H. N. Clarke and W. H. Satterthwaite to be Capt.

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 9.

3rd Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. H. R. Dyer, from 3rd Batn. North Stafford Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., on augmentation.

8th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. C. E. Soames to be Lieut., vice F. H. Wylam, killed in action (Oct. 14); 2nd Lieut. H. F. Partridge, from 3rd Batn. Wiltshire Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., vice C. E. Soames.

16th Lancers.—Lieut. S. T. Moore, from 3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., vice J. B. E. Russell, resigned.

20th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. F. A. H. Part, from 4th Batn. Royal Lancaster Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. K. M. Woolcombe, transferred to I.S.C.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

Major H. C. Morland, Reserve of Officers, resigns appointment of a D.A.A.G. (for Imperial Yeomanry).

1st Batn.—Sergt. R. G. M. Prichard to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (March 27).

7th Batn.—Capt. E. G. Hardy, Reserve of Officers, resigns appointment of Adjt.

10th Batn.—Lieut. E. R. Murray, from Lieut., to be Adjt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (Sept. 19).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Scots.—Brevet Lieut.-Col. C. H. P. Carter, C.M.G., from Supp. Capt., to be Capt., vice R. L. Macgregor, promoted (Oct. 17).

Royal West Surrey Regt.—2nd Lieut. F. J. Roberts, from 4th V.B. Durham L.I., to be 2nd Lieut., vice P. F. Coë, resigned.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Lieut. W. B. Garnett, from City of London Imperial Vols. and 24th Middlesex V.B.C., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. H. Rotherham, promoted (dated May 5, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 10).

King's Own Scottish Borderers.—2nd Lieut. G. H. B. Coulson to be Lieut., vice D. D. Gunn, promoted (July 30). Candidates recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa, to be 2nd Lieuts.: Sergt. C. Long, from Royal Highlanders and Lovat's Scouts, in succession to Lieut. A. J. Welch, promoted; Pte. Evelyn B. Stevens, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. D. D. Gunn, promoted.

Gloucester Regt.—Capt. S. Duncan, placed on retired pay.

Oxford L.I.—Lieut. L. F. Scott to be Capt., in succession to Major C. E. G. M. Fairtlough, Adjt. 3rd Batn (Sept. 27).

Derbyshire Regt.—2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—R. S. Popham, vice B. G. V. Way, promoted (July 13); W. B. Webb, to complete establishment (Aug. 20).

York and Lancaster Regt.—Capt. H. N. Byass to be Major, vice Brevet-Lieut.-Col. H. C. O. Plumer, promoted Lieut.-Col. on half-pay (Oct. 17).

Highland L.I.—Lieut. A. P. Boyd-Carpenter, from Imperial Yeomanry, recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa, to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. E. Armstrong, promoted.

Connaught Rangers.—Brevet-Col. L. Godolphin Brooke, Supp. Lieut.-Col., placed on half-pay (Oct. 26). 2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—H. T. Walker, vice W. N. S. Alexander, seconded (Aug. 1); G. Thompson, vice A. Delacombe, promoted into Royal Warwick Regt. (Aug. 22); Pte. Charles M. Ainslie, from Imperial Yeomanry, recommended by the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa, to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. T. H. Falkner, promoted.

Royal Munster Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. C. R. Rawlinson to be Lieut., vice C. A. D. Best, deceased (Oct. 21). Seconding of 2nd Lieut. C. F. Aspinall for special service in West Africa post-dated to July 4. To be 2nd Lieuts.:—Lieut. P. G. Barrett, from 3rd Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers, vice C. R. Rawlinson (dated April 21 but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 10). 2nd Lieut. T. T. Stubbs, from 5th Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, vice C. F. Aspinall.

Royal Scottish Reserve Regt.—Appointment as Capt. of Capt. G. H. A. Arnot, Reserve of Officers, antedated to Aug. 29.

Army Service Corps.—Capt. R. G. Mathew to be Major, vice T. J. O'Dell, promoted. Lieut. C. T. Lloyd to be Capt., vice R. G. Mathew (Aug. 1).

STAFF.

Lieut.-Col. R. C. G. Mayne, C.B., I.S.C., to be an A.D.C. to the Queen and to have Brevet rank of Col., vice Col. A. G. Hammond, V.C., C.B., D.S.O., I.S.C., placed on Unemployed Supp. List.

Lieut.-Col. G. C. Kitson, from Commandant of the Royal Military College, Kingston, Canada, to be a Military Attaché, and to have substantive rank of Col. in Army (Nov. 2).

Appointment of Capt. J. M. A. Graham, Royal Lancaster Regt., as A.D.C. to Brevet-Col. (local Brig.-Gen.) G. G. Cunningham, D.S.O., which appeared in Gazette of Sept. 11, 1900, cancelled.

Appointments to staff made in South Africa confirmed:—

Col. A. W. Morris, Commandant, Durban, to be a Col. on staff (March 15).

Col. J. M. Gordon, South Australian Military Forces, is attached to staff of Base Commandant, Cape Town, as Staff Officer for Australian Forces, and graded as an A.A.G. whilst so employed (Feb. 25).

Capt. and Hon. Major the Hon. T. H. A. E. Cochrane, 4th Batn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, to be an Assist. Provost-Marshal, graded as a D.A.A.G. (May 17).

Capt. E. I. Ward, A.S.C., is graded as a D.A.A.G. whilst employed as Senior Transport Officer, 8th Division (June 8).

To be graded as Staff Capt.:—Lieut. D. J. E. Beale Brown, 9th Lancers, whilst an Intelligence Officer (May 15); Major C. E. Heyworth-Savage, Royal Fusiliers, whilst an Intelligence Officer (July 12); Capt. R. M. M. Davy, Gloucester Regt., whilst a Railway Staff Officer (Sept. 1); Lieut. H. L. Knight, Royal Irish Fusiliers, whilst a Staff Officer, Eastern Lines of Communication (Sept. 14); Lieut. W. L. Gray, Brabant's Horse, whilst an Intelligence Officer (Sept. 20); Capt. F. C. Nisbet, Gloucester Regt., is graded as Staff Captain whilst a Railway Staff Officer, and not as stated in Gazette of Sept. 4 (June 8); Lieut. A. R. S. Lyon Campbell, Border Regt., is graded as Staff Lieut. whilst an Asst. Staff Officer for Baggage duties (Aug. 8); Lieut. R. H. Collins, Royal Berkshire Regt., to be A.D.C. to Brevet-Col. (local Brig.-Gen.) C. G. Cunningham, D.S.O., commanding a Brigade (July 13); Col. J. C. Barker is graded as a Brig.-Gen. on Staff whilst commanding Eastern Lines of Communication (Sept. 11); Major W. T. Furze, R.A., to be an A.A.G. for Transport duties (March 15); Major A. W. Money, B.A., to be an A.A.G. for Transport duties (May 12).

To be graded as D.A.A.G.'s:—Major A. E. W. Count Gleichen, C.M.G., Grenadier Guards, whilst Provost-Marshal under Military Governor of Pretoria, from June 30 to Aug. 19, and whilst Intelligence Officer, Eastern Lines of Communication, from Aug. 20; Captain J. F. Robertson, Connaught Rangers, whilst an Asst. Provost-Marshal (July 1); Capt. C. V. Gunning, Reserve of Officers, whilst a Remount Officer on Lines of Communication (Aug. 29).

Capt. J. A. Bell-Smyth, 1st Dragoon Guards, to be a Brig.-Major (May 1).

Major J. P. Du Cane, R.A., to be a Staff Officer Eastern Lines of Communication, graded as Brig.-Major whilst so employed (Sept. 11).

Lieut. F. D. Murray, Royal Highlanders, to be Signalling Officer to the Mounted Brigade, Natal Field Force, graded as Staff Capt. whilst so employed (Dec. 1).

Lieut. A. H. Marindin, Royal Highlanders, to be a Staff Officer Lines of Communication, graded as Staff Capt. whilst so employed (Aug. 30).

To be Railway Staff Officers, graded as Staff Lieuts.: Capt. D. D. Gunn, King's Own Scottish Borderers; Lieut. (temp. Lieut. in Army) R. J. Clarke, 1st V.B. Royal Berkshire Regt. (Sept. 10).

Capt. H. S. H. Prince Alexander A. F. W. A. G. of Teck, K.C.V.O., 7th Hussars, to be A.D.C. to Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. (local Brig.-Gen.) B. T. Mahon, D.S.O., 12th Lancers (May 4).

Capt. and Brevet-Major G. H. Thesiger, Rifle Brigade, to be A.D.C. to Major-Gen. (local Lieut.-Gen.) Hon. N. G. Lyttelton, C.B., Commanding a Division, vice Capt. Hon. H. Yarde-Buller, Rifle Brigade (June 27).

Appointments to Staff of the Lines of Communication made in South Africa confirmed:—Col. A. E. W. Goldsmid, A.A.G. for Transport, to be an Asst. Insp.-Gen., vice Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. W. T. Adair, R.M.L.I. (Sept. 14).

Capt. and Brevet Major W. I. Ryder, I.S.C., graded as a D.A.A.G. whilst employed as a Supply and Transport Officer (March 4).

Capt. C. R. Buckle, R.A., graded as a D.A.A.G. whilst employed with Army Transport (Aug. 10).

Temp. Lieut.-Col. C. R. Burn, Imperial Yeomanry, to be a Station Commandant, graded as A.A.G. from Sept. 14 to Oct. 9.

Lieut. J. Lewin, Imperial Yeomanry, to be an Asst. Press Censor, graded as Staff Capt. (Sept. 27).

Lieut. C. H. Gutsche, Cape Garrison Artillery, to be an Asst. to Commandant of prisoners of War, graded as Staff Capt., vice Capt. J. J. B. Proctor, Cape Garrison Artillery (Sept. 30).

Capt. J. H. Wynne, Royal Canadian Dragoons, to be a Staff Officer to prisoners of war, graded as Staff Capt., vice Lieut. W. J. P. Benson, City of London Imperial Vols. (Oct. 6).

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

OVERALLS A SPECIALITY.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

Brevet.—Lieut.-Col. H. S. Wheatley, I.S.C., to be Col. (Oct. 24).

MEMORANDA.

Major A. H. M. Edwards, 5th Dragoon Guards, granted local rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst employed as District Commissioner of Potehefstroom (June 26).

Major W. J. H. Bond, I.S.C., granted local rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst Chief Commissariat Officer with China Expeditionary Force (Oct. 16).

Capt. G. A. Cookson, I.S.C., granted local rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst second in command of Kitchener's Horse, South African Field Force (July 1).

Capt. (local Major) G. W. Treble, 24th Middlesex V.R.C., granted local rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst employed with Army Post Office Corps, South African Field Force (July 16).

Vet. Major C. Rutherford, Army Veterinary Dept., granted local rank of Vet.-Lieut.-Col. whilst performing duties of District Veterinary Officer, Natal (April 13).

Capt. G. H. G. Mockler, I.S.C., granted local rank of Major whilst Police Commandant, Tien-tsin City (Oct. 16).

Capt. W. Price, 24th Middlesex V.R.C., granted local rank of Major whilst employed with Army Post Office Corps, South African Field Force (July 16).

Capt. A. F. Gordon, Gordon Highlanders, granted local rank of Major whilst employed with Central Africa Regt. in West Africa.

Lieut. R. H. Monck-Mason, Royal Munster Fusiliers, granted temp. rank of Capt. whilst employed with West African Frontier Force, and not as stated in Gazette of Nov. 2.

C. E. H. Sutherland granted local rank of Lieut. whilst Asst. to Commissioner of Railway Police, South African Field Force (Sept. 11).

Officers granted temp. rank of Major in Army whilst serving with Imperial Representative Corps:—Major O. H. Fisher, 4th Batn. Norfolk Regt.; Major Fitz R. P. Goddard, Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry (Nov. 12).

Capt. and Hon. Major F. W. Harding, 1st V.B. Devon Regt., granted temp. rank of Capt. in Army whilst serving with Imperial Representative Corps (Nov. 12).

Officers granted temp. rank of Lieut. in Army whilst serving with Imperial Representative Corps:—Lieut. R. O. Sutherland, 4th Batn. Norfolk Regt.; Lieut. A. R. Davies, 1st Middlesex V.R.C. (Nov. 12).

2nd Lieut. W. F. Fuller, Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry, granted temp. rank of 2nd Lieut. in Army whilst serving with Imperial Representative Corps (Nov. 12).

[Where not otherwise mentioned the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Nov. 10.]

THE War Office has called upon the home military districts to report upon the arrangements improvised during the present war for obtaining information respecting the families of soldiers.

LISTS are being prepared and will shortly be issued showing in detail all stores required on mobilisation by Volunteer battalions allotted to the field army, and the source whence they can be obtained.

THE Secretary for War has approved a proposal for the formation of a cadet company of Rifle Volunteers at the Merchant Taylors' School, which is to be attached to the cadet corps of the London Rifle Brigade.

IN connection with the scheme for the re-armament of the Channel defences at Dover with modern heavy artillery, four more of the powerful 6in. quick-firing breech-loaders have been despatched from Woolwich. Their range is some ten miles. Others will follow.

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.45, and Saturday mornings at 2.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

A NUMBER of Militia subalterns lately doing duty with embodied units, are being posted to Reserve battalions, where the paucity of company officers is sorely felt.

HIS Excellency the Governor-General of Australia, the Right Hon. the Earl of Hopetoun, K.T., K.C.M.G., has become a vice-president of the Navy League, of which he has for some years been a supporter.

PROPOSED SOLDIERS' INSTITUTE.—The Church of England committee for the welfare of soldiers on Salisbury Plain and in its neighbourhood have issued an appeal for funds for the immediate erection of an institute at Bulford Camp. Permanent huts to hold 5,000 men are being rapidly completed and will be used this winter. But the War Office considers it impossible to erect at present any place of worship or recreation, except the small canteen and recreation room of each regiment. The department has, however, consented to set aside an excellent site of 1½ acre for a permanent church and institute, and is willing to subscribe £50 a year to the latter, provided that a hall is built which can accommodate 700 men for Divine service, until a permanent church is built by the Government. The committee is very anxious, therefore, to build an institute at once, especially as the hall in question would be in any case an essential part of such a structure, to be used for refreshment, recreation, reading and writing, and entertainment. The whole, as planned, is estimated to cost about £2,500, towards which subscriptions to the amount of £1,041 have already been received. Subscriptions marked "Bulford Soldiers' Institute" may be sent to the Bishop of Salisbury, Palace, Salisbury, or to the Rev. C. Arnold, Bulford Vicarage, Amesbury, Salisbury, secretary of the committee; or to any branch of the Wilts and Dorset Bank in the dioceses of Salisbury and Winchester.

ASPLEY PELLATT & Co.
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing
Cross, London, W.C.
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA
MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

DEATH.

HORNBURY.—On October 16, at Nicomekl, New Westminster, British Columbia, Major E. Montague Hornby for many years Adjutant of the Shropshire Militia, and formerly of the 99th Regiment, and 18th Royal Irish.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

TO BACHELORS.—CRANBOURN MANSIONS (London Hippodrome), close to Piccadilly and Clubland. A few beautifully decorated, combined BED-SITTING-ROOMS to be LET in this magnificent building, with valet and attendance. FURNISHED OR UNFURNISHED. Lift, electric light, lavatory (h. and c.) to each room, liveried attendant, telephone, and all modern conveniences. Particulars of the Estate Managers, Messrs. Browett and Taylor, 9, Warwick Court, Holborn, W.C.

BRIGHTON.—PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENT (as homelike as possible) for those requiring Medical, Surgical, and Nursing care. Medical baths, packs, massage, electricity. Own doctor can attend if wished, or their treatment carried out. Close to sea, overlooking private grounds. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO COMFORT, NURSING, DIET. For Terms address, Medical Sup., Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

EXCHANGE.—A LIEUTENANT in the MADRAS INFANTRY wishes to EXCHANGE with an officer in an English Regiment serving at home.—Apply to "Lieutenant," care of Grindlay and Co., 54, Parliament Street, S.W.

HUNTING BOX, Co. KILDARE.

TO LET.

CHARMINGLY SITUATED, within four miles of Salinas and five from Naas, standing on seven acres nicely planted within easy distance of three packs of hounds. House contains three sitting-rooms, three bedrooms, dressing-room, two servants' rooms, hot and cold bath; all newly painted and papered throughout. Conservatory off drawing-room, and new sanitation. Stabling for five horses, four roomy loose boxes, one stall, all well floored and ventilated; coach-house, two harness-rooms, extensive men's rooms, all newly done up. Would be let furnished or unfurnished for three hunting seasons consecutively. Further loose boxes would be constructed if required. Apply E. Chambers Hardman, 14, Molesworth Street, Dublin.

INVALID or CONVALESCENT OFFICERS received at The Bournemouth Hydro. Airy site overlooking Sea. Sea-water, Turkish Baths, Massage, Billiards, Gymnasium, Resident Physician.—Apply Secretary.

LOWESTOFT.—DETACHED RESIDENCE with sea view TO BE LET cheaply for winter months, contains dining and drawing-rooms, study, billiard room (full size), Housekeeper's room, servant's hall, 11 bedrooms, bath-room (h. and c.) pantries, cellars, &c. Tennis lawn, greenhouse, &c. Very compact, so large staff not required.—Apply, Titcomb, Lowestoft.

PARENTS GOING ABROAD and Others.

CHILDREN RECEIVED in pretty country home of Gentlewoman who is a trained nurse, and has been governess.—Miss North, Green Arbour, near Dunmow, Essex.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN OF GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grooms, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employons, London."

WANTED.—MAN COOK for OFFICERS' MESS of the third and fourth battalions Worcestershire Regiment (one mess).—Apply Mess President, Blenheim Barracks, Aldershot.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE),
QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE. Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff. Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS. For Tariff, address MANAGER.

P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA, CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICES.

P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS to GIBRALTAR, MARSEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN BOMBAY, KURRACHEE, CALCUTTA CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.

P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TICKETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.—For particulars apply at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

BIBBY LINE

TO MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMB RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA (via Tuticorin).

Tons. Liverpool. Marseilles.
DERBYSHIRE* 6635 Nov. 17 Nov. 24
LANCASHIRE 4244 Dec. 13 Dec. 20
SHROPSHIRE* 5789 Jan. 10 Jan. 17.

Those marked * are twin-screw steamers. These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.

Every possible comfort for first class passengers only. This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,
26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and
10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.
ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,
138, Leadenhall Street, London.
C. HOWARD & SONS
45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

A REVOLUTION IN FURNISHING

BY MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

Mr. LABOUCHERE writes in "TRUTH."

"NORMAN & STACEY have introduced in their business an ingenious safeguard against the risk of loss to his widow or family through the death of the hirer. THEY GIVE AN INSURANCE UPON HIS LIFE, so that if for instance a man gets £200 worth of Furniture on the hire-purchase system, and dies when instalments to the amount of £190 have been paid, not only does the furniture become the property of his representatives, BUT THE £190 IS ALSO REPAYED TO THEM."

N.B.—Cash buyers are also given a Free Life Insurance Policy equal to the amount they have spent.

NORMAN & STACEY, LD.,
118, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.

Moderate Prices. Free Delivery Town or Country. Call and view Stock before furnishing locally.

INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA,
QUEENSLAND, BURMAH,
PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.

BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, LIMITED.
BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to

CALCUTTA.	ZANZIBAR.
MADRAS.	MOMBASSA.
COLOMBO.	BRISBANE.
RANGOON.	BATAVIA.
MAURITIUS.	ROCKHAMPTON
BOMBAY.	TOWNSVILLE.
KURRACHEE.	MARYBOROUGH
BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH, EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House, Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square, Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock House, Billiter Street, E.C.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

THE DE VERE, THE PRINCE OF WALES, THE BROADWALK.

(Opposite Kensington Palace.)

Lift. Electric Light. Everything up date. Tariff on application.

THE LONDON SOLDIERS' HOME.

BUCKINGHAM GATE, S.W.

Close to Wellington Barracks. Near Waterloo and Victoria Stations.

Founded by Miss DANIELL, 1890.

Refreshment Bar.	Sleeping Cubicles.
Baths.	Temporary Married
Coffee Room.	Quarters.
Game and Smoking	Reading Room.
Room.	Baggage Room, &c., &c.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA,

SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS

TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate. "Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd. Batn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wilt. Regiment. August, 1896."

Watch and Clock Makers.

"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., R.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

Major-Gen. SIR STANHOPE WILLIAM JEPHSON, Bart., C.B. deceased.

PURSUANT to the provisions of an Act of Parliament (22 and 23 Victoria Chapter 35) intitled "An Act to further amend the law of property and to relieve Trustees."

Notice is hereby given that all creditors and persons having any debts claims or demands upon or against the estate of Major-Gen. Sir Stanhope William Jephson C.B. late of 24 Elphinstone Road Southsea in the county of Hants Baronet deceased (who died on or about the 20th day of June 1900) and Probate of whose Will was granted by the Winchester District Registry of the Probate Division of Her Majesty's High Court of Justice on the 18th day of August 1900 to Desmond Gerald Manners FitzGerald and Richard Mounteney Jephson are hereby required to send in particulars in writing of their debts claims or demands to me the undersigned on or before the 21st day of December next.

And notice is hereby further given that at the expiration of such time the said Desmond Gerald Manners FitzGerald and Richard Mounteney Jephson will proceed to distribute the assets of the said deceased amongst the persons entitled thereto having regard only to the claims and demands of which they shall then have had notice.

Dated this sixth day of November 1900.

GEO. COSENS PRIOR,

92 High Street Portsmouth,

Solicitor for the said Desmond Gerald

Manners FitzGerald and Richard

Mounteney Jephson executors.

ARMY ALTERATIONS

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date.

SUBSCRIPTION—5s. 6d. per annum, post free. One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.

ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE.

With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations.

BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer,

Ashton-under-Lyne.

The Navy.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 31.
Royal Marine Light Infantry.—Major and Brevet Lieut. Col. J. W. Robyns to be Lieut. Col., vice Onslow, appointed Inspector of Marine Recruiting; Capt. J. H. Abrahall to be Major, vice Robyns, promoted (Oct. 19); Capt. E. E. Chown to be Major, vice Matson, retired (Nov. 1); Lieut. P. Molloy to be Capt., vice Abrahall, promoted (Oct. 19); Lieut. H. J. Coles to be Capt., vice Chown, promoted (Nov. 1).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 2.
Engrs. C. E. Lecky (Sept. 1), P. Bingham (Sept. 15), H. J. Turner (Sept. 16), J. J. G. G. Percy (Oct. 1), and A. E. C. Deacon (Oct. 14) promoted to Chief Engr.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 3.
In accordance with Order in Council of April 1, 1881, Fleet-Surg. (retired) A. G. Delmege, M.D., M.V.O., has been allowed to assume rank of Deputy Insp.-Gen. of Hospitals and Fleets.

In accordance with Order in Council of June 29, 1900, Fleet-Engr. G. White has been placed on retired list of his rank, at his own request (Oct. 30).

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 7.
Acting Sub-Lieuts. confirmed in rank of Sub-Lieuts.: H. C. Hichens, Sept. 15, 1899; R. G. Hervey, Oct. 15, 1899; R. G. Stone, R. A. Hill, C. C. H. Maitland-Addison, H. D. Marryat, O. T. Hodgson, J. L. Forbes, Dec. 15, 1899.

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 2.
Commander.—F. W. Dean to Pembroke, for Albatross (Oct. 13).
Lieutenant and Commander.—P. W. Stopford to Pembroke, for Sturgeon (Oct. 13).

Lieutenant B.N.R.—W. N. Bagg to Repulse, for 12 months' training (Nov. 6).
Sub-Lieutenants, R.N.R.—W. L. Kelly to Pembroke, H. Calder to Colossus, R. M. Pope to Severn, A. C. L. Ellis to Nile, all for 12 months' training (acting) (Nov. 6).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 3.
Lieutenants.—W. G. A. Kennedy (1st), P. N. Pontifex, C. R. Blane to Pioneer (Nov. 15); G. D. Jephson to Niobe (Oct. 27); M. H. Wilding to Jupiter (Nov. 10); E. W. Denison to Alexandra (Nov. 2).
Sub-Lieutenants.—H. D. Marryat to Forte, H. C. Hichens to Rupert, R. G. Hervey, R. G. Stone, R. A. S. Hill, C. H. Maitland-Addison, O. T. Hodgson, J. L. Forbes to Alexandra (Nov. 6); G. Mackworth, M. H. Anderson (N) to Sparrow (Nov. 15).
Midshipmen.—G. H. Lang to Repulse (Oct. 18), V. P. Weston to Hannibal (Oct. 29).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 5.
Lieutenants.—F. W. Hanan to Pembroke (Nov. 8) and to Pioneer (N), (Nov. 15); E. L. Tomkinson, to Vivid, for Spartan (Dec. 19).
Assistant-Paymasters.—B. C. Allen to Blake, for voyage to Malta, R. A. Jinkin to Rodney (Nov. 5).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 6.
Commanders.—R. G. Gregory to Wildfire, for Dockyard Reserve (Nov. 5); C. R. de C. Foot to Hood, C. L. Vaughan-Lee to Empress of India (undated).
Lieutenants.—E. C. Carver to Magdala (G), L. Halsey (1st), F. R. M. White (G) to Rodney; E. A. Bushton to Resolution (Dec. 1). H. F. J. Rowley to Pembroke, for Blenheim (N) (Nov. 13). F. V. Lockey to Duke of Wellington, for Intrepid (Nov. 1). E. C. Lucas to Raven (N) (Nov. 15). W. R. G. Petre to Magdala, for torpedo boat in command (Nov. 5). W. P. Koe to Magdala; S. V. Ellis to Agincourt (Boscawen) (Nov. 14). F. Brandt to Vernon (T) (Nov. 6). R. G. Stokes-Rees to Highflyer (Sept. 15) and to Magdala, for Abyssinia (Dec. 1).
Fleet-Surgeon.—E. W. Luther to Hood, for Pembroke Dockyard (undated).
Staff-Surgeon J. H. Whelan, M.D., to Hood (undated).
Surgeons.—H. R. Gardner, M.B., to Hood; J. K.

Raymond, M.B., to Wildfire for Edinburgh (undated); A. J. Lawrie to Cambridge (lent); O. S. Facey, M.B., to Vivid; W. K. Hopkins to Wye (Nov. 6).
Assistant-Paymaster.—H. W. Woodward to Warspite, as secretary's clerk to Rear-Admiral Bickford (Nov. 5).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 7.
Captains.—H. Leah to Diadem; H. S. F. Niblett to Canopus (Nov. 9).
Commander.—G. C. A. Marescaux to Prosperine, in command (Nov. 1).
Lieutenants.—H. F. Cayley to Osborne, A. R. Macrorie, to Vivid, for Thrasher, in command (Nov. 15); A. W. Gush to Vivid, for B.N. Barracks (Nov. 21).
Midshipman.—W. R. D. Crowther to Repulse (Nov. 1).
Chief Engineer.—W. K. Williams to Duke of Wellington for Fearless, on paying off (undated).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 8.
Staff Engineer.—A. W. Gibbs to Duke of Wellington for Drake (Nov. 7).
Chief Engineer.—B. St. J. Raper to Vivid for Hazard (Nov. 7).
Assistant-Paymaster.—C. A. Parker to Black Prince (Nov. 13).

An examination will be held next month for filling up five vacancies at Elmslea, Tottenham, Middlesex, a school for which fatherless girls between seven and ten years of age, whose parents were members of the Church of England and in good circumstances, are eligible. It is thought that there may be at the present time an unusual number of such children in need of charitable assistance for their education and maintenance, and this school is very well adapted for the orphan daughters of officers in either Service.

FOR THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH "Epps's Glycerine Jujubes" always prove effective. They soften and clear the voice, and are invaluable to all suffering from cough, soreness, or dryness of the throat. Sold only in labelled tins, price 7½d and 1s. 1½d. James Epps and Co., Ltd., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

THE BEST PEN.

The "CALTON" Stylographic Pen is the best because it is the simplest, most durable, holds more ink, does not leak and can be carried in any position. Sent complete for 3/-, post free. Cased in silver, Hall-marked, 10/6. All kinds repaired.
"JEWEL" FOUNTAIN PEN, with 16-ct. Gold Nib, Iridium-tipped, chased holder, 5/-. Mounted, 7/6.
DEPT. A. G. JEWEL PEN CO., 102, FENCHURCH ST., LONDON, E.C.

A THING THAT EVERYBODY WANTS and EVERYBODY LIKES.

A BOOT HEEL THAT WILL BE ALWAYS EVEN

This is absolutely secured by wearing WOOD'S Automatic Revolving Heel Pad.

Sold all over the World in Millions.

Doubles the Durability of Boots, prevents Splashing, makes the Tread Silent and Soft as a Grass Lawn, reduces Fatigue to a minimum, prevents Slipping. Patented everywhere. Can be fixed while you wait. Prices Ladies, 1s.; Gents, 1s. 3d. Improved Quality. Sold by Boot Makers and Rubber Dealers, or post free from the Makers. Send paper size of heel required.
REVOLVING HEEL CO., D. 23, NELSON, LANC.

REVERSIONS AND LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the

EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand. Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LTD.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.

Established 1835.

Chairman—C. E. RIVINGTON, Fec., J.P., D.L.
Paid-up Capital.....£200,000
Debentures and Debenture Stock.....£207,230

REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.

W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.

WATSON'S PRISM BINOCULAR GLASS.

Ordinary Field Glasses entirely superseded.

SUPERB DEFINITION.

COMPACT AND FLAT.

Entirely new System of Construction, giving immense field of view and high magnification. Magnification, 7 diameters, £7 15s. 0d. Magnification, 9 diameters, £9 0s. 0d. In best sling case.

Field Glasses and Telescopes of every description from £2 2s. 0d.

For full particulars send for Catalogue No. 6 post free on application to
W. WATSON & SONS, Manufacturing Opticians to H.M. Government, 313, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON, W.C., and 16, Forrest Road, EDINBURGH.
ESTABLISHED 1837.

The Indian Army.

Important.

The Publisher of the "Army and Navy Gazette" begs to announce that, beginning on January 5, 1901, Coloured Military Types of the INDIAN ARMY will be issued Monthly as Supplements to this Paper. Full particulars and list of Plates will be sent post free on application.

ORDERS for the series should be sent in at once, accompanied by Money Order for (Inland) 4s. 4d., or (India and Abroad) 5s., made payable to the PUBLISHER.

"Army and Navy Gazette" Offices, 3, York St., Covent Garden, London, W.C.

"SCOUT" PUTTIE & LEGGINGS

(Clarke's Patent, 1914-1899). SUPERSEDE ALL OTHERS. The Best, Simplest and most Effective Article in the market.

FOR MILITARY AND SPORTING PURPOSES THEY ARE UNEQUALLED.

No loops used. Straps are self-adjusting. Inside portion of calf is smooth for saddle.

Price 25s. per pair. Best blocked pigskin.

Descriptive particulars on application to Patentee.

Thomas H. Clarke, Military Boot Maker, Fermanagh, Co. Cork.

HART AND SON,

60, Artillery Place, Woolwich.

(Established 100 Years), has

FOR SALE

Nearly New REGULATION UNIFORMS for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices.

Gold and Silver Dress BELTS, SABRETACHES, and SASHES for Sale or on Hire.

All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver Lace, &c., bought for cash.

THE Indian Sporting Times.

THE BRIGHTEST, SMARTEST, CHEAPEST & BEST PRINTED SPORTING PAPER IN INDIA. CIRCULATES THROUGHOUT INDIA, CEYLON, BURMA AND ASSAM.

The Only Sporting Paper in Western India. Covers every branch of Indian Sports, and contains the latest Home Sporting News. FORMS A UNIQUE ADVERTISING MEDIUM FOR SPORTING GOODS, &c. Published every Sunday. Subscription 10/- per annum.

Printed and Published at TIMES OF INDIA Press, Bombay. LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.

The "C.I.V."

securely packed in postal tube. Speedy application is necessary.

Address:—THE PUBLISHER, 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

The Publisher begs to remind readers that he still has copies of the Plate of the "CITY IMPERIAL VOLUNTEERS" which was issued with the "Army and Navy Gazette" some time ago, on sale, Price 6½d. (halfpenny stamps) post free,

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM,
P.S.C.

(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM
and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),
35, HEREFORD SQUARE, S.W.
(one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station Metropolitan and District Railways).

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

During the last three years all the candidates prepared by Col. Needham for this Examination have obtained Commissions.

WOOLWICH AND SANDHURST EXAMINATIONS.

At the late Examinations (June, 1900), the following Four of Col. Needham's pupils were successful:—

WOOLWICH.....A. G. Rolleston.....8038
SANDHURST.....P. W. von B. Malcolm.....6022
.....G. G. Symons.....6531
University Candidate: A. L. Prince.

Prospectus and List of Successes sent on application.

HOVE, SUSSEX.

PREPARATION for all ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITY EXAMINATIONS.

MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,
Late the Border Regiment,
assisted by
Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late R.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

At the last SIX Examinations SEVENTY THREE PUPILS have been SUCCESSFUL, and the FIRST PLACE on the whole List has been taken FOUR TIMES.

SUCCESSSES.

Place	Name	Marks
FIRST (Cavalry)	*E. Hamilton-Stubber	1692
2nd (Infantry)	*W. F. H. Hill	1873
2nd (Artillery)	*W. E. Delves-Brough-	1542
17th (Infantry)	*C. C. Clifton	1623
28th (Infantry)	*E. G. Clarke	1522
65th (Infantry)	*L. E. C. W. Wilmer	1830
8th (Cavalry)	*O. K. Chance	1356
(Colonial Candidate)	*C. D. Macklem	1308
(Artillery)	*E. T. F. Hood	1187
(Infantry)	*O. F. Lloyd	1179
(Infantry)	*F. H. Span	1147
(Infantry)	*J. C. W. Anderson	1132
* First Trial.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5862
Infantry	L. Aymer	5851
Infantry	K. O. Goldie	5653
University	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.

ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY, and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.

No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.
Capt. M. M. M. FESTING.

Resident and Non-resident Pupils received.
Prospectus with List of Successes on application.
Officers Coached by Correspondence.

EPSOM COLLEGE.

NEXT TERM BEGINS JANUARY 18, 1901.

Public School for all Classes.

Successes this summer:—London Matriculation, 16 passed; Intermediate and Preliminary Scientific, 14 passed; Higher and Lower Certificates, 40 passed.

Separate Junior School.

APPLY, THE BURSAR.

SANDECOTES SCHOOL, PARK-STONE, DORSET.

A High-class School, at Moderate Fees, for the Daughters of Gentlemen, where the aim is to train girls to be practical, refined, womanly women. Every care and comfort for delicate children. Large grounds; tennis and five courts; playing fields. Pupils prepared for the University and other Examinations. Head Mistress, Miss Sophie M. Smith (National Sciences Tripos, Cambridge), assisted by a highly qualified staff. Two entrance Scholarships for competition in Dec. for girls under 12 and 15 years respectively.

HOME SCHOOL FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.

Home School for the Daughters of Gentlemen in one of the healthiest suburbs of London. A thoroughly sound modern education is given to a limited number of young ladies, under the careful superintendence of an experienced lady principal, assisted by accomplished masters and mistresses (graduates).

Pupils are prepared for the London University examinations, Royal Academy of Music, &c., when desired.

References kindly permitted to His Grace the Archbishop of York, Sir William Howard Russell, the Rev. Canon Duckworth, Colonel Swinney, Judge Gates, parents of pupils, &c.

Address—
D. C. L., Elleray, Atkins Road, Clapham Park, London, S.W.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,
ANDMR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.

(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge),
ECOLEFFCHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and Non-Resident, for

ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVERSITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.

Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of many years' successful experience.

Careful Individual Attention. Strong Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer. Competent Military Instructor.

SUCCESSSES, 1900.

Woolwich.—None sent up.
Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only Candidate.
Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy.

TRINITY, CAMBRIDGE; Entrance, also PREVIOUS EXAMINATION.—J. Cundell.

A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare; and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.

LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION.

WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and UNIVERSITIES.

MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.

Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PREPARES a limited number of PUPILS.

RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science. The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.

RECENT SUCCESSSES.WOOLWICH.

G. F. Farran.....8001 marks.....Dec. 1898.
W. Burrell Hayley.....9228.....Dec. 1899.
The only pupils sent up.

SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.

Viscount Ingestre.....7th Cavalry Cadetship.
C. M. Truman.....Cavalry Cadetship.
E. P. Grant.....Infantry Cadetship.
G. Winne Finch.....Infantry Cadetship.
B. H. Leatham.....Infantry Cadetship.
G. E. Hawes.....Infantry Cadetship.
C. A. Antrobus.....Infantry.
R. H. Pipon.....Infantry.
H. A. D. Bookett-Pugh.....Infantry.
R. Neave.....Infantry.
G. Wahab.....Indian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

SANDHURST, WOOLWICH, INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SERVICE, and UNIVERSITIES.

MR. J. J. GREVATT
(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY, for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.

A Barrister on Staff assists Candidates for DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.
Prospectus with list of successes on application.
WORK WAS RESUMED AUGUST 15, 1900.

57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Colonel Russell, R.E. (retd.), and Staff,
CLAVINIA, WEYMOUTH,

Prepare for this and other Military Examinations.

Postal Tuition for May Promotion Examination.

For prospectus and successes apply as above.

Educational.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE & TRAINING FARMS,
HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.

Full information from the Director at above address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria Street, Westminster.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, ASPATRIA,
Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

Publications.

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Camps, and Examinations.

Now Ready, 5th EDITION.

— THE —

OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIDE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memoes, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Book.

Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.

By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.

3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS.

Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables, Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

WM. CLOWES and SONS, 13, Charing Cross, S.W., and A. & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.

Of whom Reprint-Books, and Blocks may be had.
Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.

NOTES ON NAVAL STRATEGY AND TACTICS.

By Lieutenant H. STANSBURY, R.N.

Price 1s. Post Free 1s. 1d.

Published by J. J. Kellier and Co., 33, King William Street, E.C., and 99, Victoria Street, S.W.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS

ARMS, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES
Engraved as Gems, from original and artistic designs.

NOTE PAPER and ENVELOPES brilliantly illuminated by hand in gold, silver, bronze, and colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 10.

HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.

All the New and Fashionable Note Papers.
BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS of FARE, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, INVITATIONS and BOOK PLATES, REGIMENTAL BAND CARDS.

A VISITING CARD PLATE
elegantly engraved and 100 CARDS printed for 4s. 6d.

RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1, CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.

ARMY TAILOR and MILITARY OUTFITTER.—P. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.

BREECHES MAKERS and MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.

GUN and RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W., PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. 303 Rifles a speciality.

MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN. Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., EDINBURGH (late 27, North Bridge).

MILITARY TAILORS and BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.

HOTEL DIRECTORY.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining, Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.

DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.

DUBLIN.—SHELBOURNE HOTEL. First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.

EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate. An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.

LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families.—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.

PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL and QUEEN'S HOTEL.—Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH

AND

MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.

(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge),

Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors.

PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and

UNIVERSITIES at

CEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;

For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.R. Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."

Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and

7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT (150 yards from the Station), for Promotion Candidates and Day Pupils.

Telephone, "217, Kensington." List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed, will be sent on application.

TURKISH & ARABIC.SCHOLARSHIPS. REWARDS.

Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S DOUBLE success at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish and Arabic, held on October 16 and 17, 1900, was with Major W. B. Morton, R.E., Qualified Interpreter at FIRST TRIAL in both Languages, with marks 656 and 643, and mostly prepared by correspondence from London at Mooltan, Punjab, India.

Also Colonel E. Stephenson Essex Regiment, Qualified Interpreter in Turkish, at First Trial, with 667 marks; Major H. A. Curtis, R.A., and FIFTEEN other officers with high marks.

Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.

NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-STANI, RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.

Distance offers no hindrance to success. Intending Candidates should begin work early.

Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.

Digitized by Google

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2130.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRICE 6d.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

	PAGE
Leaders—
Tried in the Fire.—II. - - - - -	1109
"Alarums and Excursions" - - - - -	1109
Furnishing Officer's Quarters - - - - -	1110
The Admiralty Board - - - - -	1120
The Naval Exhibition at the Hague - - - - -	1121
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes - - - - -	1111
Army Personal - - - - -	1113
Army Foreign - - - - -	1115
Navy Notes - - - - -	1121
Navy Personal - - - - -	1123
Navy Foreign - - - - -	1124
Letters to the Editor—
Young Officers - - - - -	1114
The British Officer - - - - -	1116
National Defence - - - - -	1116
South African Rewards - - - - -	1123
The Hospital Commission - - - - -	1124
Articles—
An Anomaly in Organization - - - - -	1112
Infantry Field-Service Equipment - - - - -	1112
The Tactical Training of Infantry - - - - -	1114
War Summary - - - - -	1114
The Victoria Cross - - - - -	1116
Our Foreign Contemporaries - - - - -	1124
Casualties in South Africa - - - - -	1125
The Gazettes—
Army - - - - -	1127
Navy - - - - -	1130
Regimental Intelligence - - - - -	1117
Reviews
Some Reviews and Magazines - - - - -	1119
Captain Mahan on the South African War - - - - -	1119
"The Thin Red Line" - - - - -	1119
Obituary
Naval Intelligence - - - - -	1130

TRIED IN THE FIRE—II.

LAST week we dealt with the first and highest appointments made to the South African Army. We must take next the lesser Generals originally selected, and other commanders who were appointed as the strength and importance of the Army increased. Priority must be given to the Divisional Generals, some of whom, it is true, did not arrive or were as early employed as several original Brigadiers. The 4th Division, which was the first reinforcement constituted, was placed under Sir Charles Warren, a commander of whose fitness we may remind the general public it had no doubt whatever. Looking back to this time last year we cannot forget how many clamoured for his appointment, how many firmly believed in its sound wisdom and justice. To this extent the patronage department may be said to have acted in accord with the general feeling, and had anyone raised a question then of Warren's unfitness it would have been received with loud disapproval. For the 5th Division a commander was found upon the spot—it was entrusted to the young Guardsman who has since, by rearrangement of the divisions, done such excellent service with the 11th, under Lord Roberts's own eye. The selection of Colonel, now local Lieutenant-General, Pole-Carew has so admirably justified itself that there is no more to be said on the subject. His advancement to the substantive rank of Major-General is barely six months old, and his actual age is still less than fifty, so that we may safely predict for Pole-Carew many opportunities for further distinction. Rumour has already named him for the post of Military Secretary, in succession to Sir Coleridge Grove, so soon as Lord Roberts assumes the reins of office as Commander-in-Chief. The suggestion is plausible enough, having regard to the intimacy that subsists between the two men, based upon old association and a common esteem; nevertheless, there are those who think that General Ian Hamilton has an even stronger chance. It may be well to deal with this young General, another of those who have earned and richly deserved his present Chief's favour, although, in the first instance, he was chosen for South Africa by the War Office authorities and not by Lord Roberts. Some doubts arose at the beginning of the war as to Ian Hamilton's military qualities; the fear was expressed that he was too "go-ahead," too keen for conflict, and this view of his character seemed borne out in the earliest stages of the Natal campaign, when he was thought to have strengthened if not inspired with the forward strategy that brought on so much fighting immediately before the investment of Ladysmith. Were such opinions even just, which they are not, Ian Hamilton has since risen superior to them, and nowadays we cannot praise too highly the marvellous spirit, the uncompromising energy and dash he has exhibited at the head of his great division of three strong brigades of mounted infantry.

The remaining Divisional Generals, the leaders of the 6th, 7th, and 8th Divisions, may be counted as War Office selections. General Kelly-Kenny went from Aldershot, where he had but lately assumed command, and it may be frankly admitted that his appointment was not altogether approved outside the hallowed precincts of Pall Mall patronage. Yet here the doubters have shown themselves entirely wrong. Kelly-Kenny was early called upon in the advance from the Modder, and responded with a vigour and tenacity of purpose that placed him at once in the front rank of tactical leaders. His forced march to head off Cronje at Paardeburg was one of the most opportune movements in the whole campaign, and he handled his fine division with equal skill and determination in the whole advance to Bloemfontein. General Tucker, who has commanded the 7th Division continuously since his arrival from India, has further proved himself to be a sound practical soldier, thoroughly appreciated by his superiors. His selection for Divisional command no doubt originated in Pall Mall, but it was thoroughly endorsed by Lord Roberts, who had known him in India. Some doubts were expressed as to Sir Leslie Rundle's fitness as a leader of troops in the field, seeing that his experience heretofore had been with the artillery and in staff duties, notably as Chief of the Staff to Lord Kitchener. But Rundle unquestionably had the priceless gift of youth, and it has stood by him well in the fatiguing, long protracted operations in the eastern theatre of war, which he carried through with inexhaustible patience and determination. One other Divisional General to whom, in the rearrangement of commands, that numbered as the 3rd was entrusted, is Sir Herbert Chermiside, an officer who had earned considerable reputation in Crete, but who has had no great luck in South Africa. Whether opportunity was denied him, or whether his best qualifications are not those of troop leading, must still remain in doubt; all we know is that little was heard of him after the operations for the relief of Wepener.

Of the Brigadiers that first went out with the expeditionary force three have risen to divisional commands, Colville, Lyttleton, and Hildyard. Mystery still surrounds the services of Sir Henry Colville, and the exact reasons for his return to England some months ago have not been made public. The story goes that when questioned on his return he would give no explanation, except to say laughingly that he was supposed to have no brains. Yet his appointment to command the Guards Brigade at the outset of the war met with general approval, and he had done good work previously, especially in Uganda. Moreover, he has returned since to the brigade command at Gibraltar. Few amongst the many good men developed by the war have shown up better than Neville Lyttleton, although the full measure of his capacity was hardly appreciated at once, and he was better known as a hard-working office man with an extraordinarily retentive memory of persons and things than as a leader in the field. It was true that he had commanded a brigade in the campaign of Omdurman respectably, nay successfully, but the test was not deemed one of the highest, and many wondered "how he would do" in the greater trial. The answer is simple and unhesitating. He has shown himself strong in council, forward in action, a stout and trusty subordinate on whom full reliance could be placed in any situation. Some spoke rather sneeringly of Hildyard as no more than a professor, more useful in the closet than in the field, steeped to the fingers in science but unpractised in its application. Hildyard from first to last has given abundant proof of the injustice of such an opinion. His work has been of the very best; he has gained the approval of his superiors, the respect of his comrades, and the unstinting confidence of his men. The same in perhaps a lesser degree may be said of Barton, Fitzroy Hart, and Howard, each having good personal qualities of his own.

"ALARUMS AND EXCURSIONS."

SINCE August 26, when Sir Redvers Buller, in the decisive battle of Dalmanutha, routed and reduced to impotence the army of Commandant-General Louis Botha, no such crushing blow has fallen on the Boer commandos still in the field as the triple defeat of De Wet and Steyn on October 25 and 27, and on the 6th inst. To General Barton, who attacked the enemy near Frederickstad, belongs the credit of the first of these defeats. To the vigilant and intrepid Colonel Le Gallais, who headed the retreating De Wet at Rensburg Drift on the Vaal, and beat back his force with the loss of five guns, must be accorded the principal share in the second success, and the victory of the 6th, at Bothaville, the last and most remarkable of the series, belongs conjointly to the same bold cavalry leader, who never lost touch of his enemy, and to Colonel de Lisle who, with his mounted infantry, completed the rout. In this fight the guerilla leader lost eight more guns of various kinds, two of them being recovered British guns, and one hundred prisoners, besides twenty-five slain. It must, however, be confessed that the satisfaction we feel in recording a series of successes so brilliant is marred by the knowledge that they were won at the expense of several gallant lives, amongst whom was Le Gallais himself, of whom Lord Roberts, in his despatch of the 8th inst., justly says: "Le Gallais' is indeed a very serious loss; a most gallant and capable cavalry leader." Since the fight at Bothaville many British successes have been reported, the majority of which have been due to surprising the enemy under cover of night.

The intelligence arriving day by day affords evidence of increasing activity on the part of the British, and of their determination to give the guerilla bands no rest until they are finally crushed out or disappear. The number of incidents that occurred on the 6th inst. was remarkable. Besides the fierce fight at Bothaville with De Wet, there was an attack on a British post near Honeynest Kloof, south of Kimberley; a Boer laager was surprised by Colonel Douglas, south of the Zeerust-Rustenburg road; General Boyes taking a convoy from Harrismith to Vrede was opposed by a small body of Boers; and General Smith-Dorrien, when marching out from Belfast, had some stiff fighting south of Dalmanutha. Soon after starting he came in touch with the enemy, who hung around his force and finally occupied a strong position on the Komati River, but a wide turning movement compelled them to vacate it before evening. Strongly reinforced during the night, the enemy next day endeavoured to seize the lost position, but were prevented by the Canadian Mounted Rifles and two guns of the 84th Field Battery, which, after a gallop of two miles, succeeded in seizing it first. In the afternoon an event unprecedented in the war occurred. Some 200 mounted Boers suddenly charged to within seventy yards of the rearguard, until stopped by the Canadian Dragoons. An act so bold and so reckless can only be interpreted as one of desperation, the mounted burghers being neither armed nor trained for such attacks, and being, moreover, constitutionally indisposed to close-quarter fighting. During these operations the Canadians gained for themselves much well-merited praise for gallantry and straight shooting.

Sniping still goes on extensively, and on the 7th inst. Modder River camp was fired into and two men wounded. On the same date General F. Kitchener, moving out from Lydenburg, surprised a Boer laager by night, and his force getting to close quarters, a party of the 19th Hussars charged home amongst the enemy by moonlight and sabred many. Colonel Plumer, when covering the movement of General Paget's main column from Pretoria westwards, was, on the 8th, attacked by Delarey, who was repulsed, leaving sixteen prisoners in our hands. On the same date two parties of mounted infantry from Rhenoster and Serfontein made a night expedition and brought in cattle, corn, and two prisoners. A British convoy was attacked between Volksrust and Wakkerstroom, and in the far east sixteen Boers were captured when attempting to cross from Portuguese territory. Lord Methuen on the following day surprised Commandant Snyman and Vermaas between Ottoshoop and Lichtenburg, taking thirty prisoners, and on Saturday he captured a "pom pom." On the other hand a small British convoy was attacked on the 9th on the road to Christiana, and the waggons captured with part of the escort. Better fortune attended a police post near Vryburg, which was attacked on Saturday and repulsed the assailants with loss.

It will be apparent from the foregoing that this irregular warfare shows as yet no signs of abating. Fighting without plan, each for his own hand, the leaders of the marauding bands are moved by one desire only—namely, to inflict on the British as much expense and loss as possible. With such an enemy neither parley nor compromise is possible, and there is therefore nothing for it but the unceasing pursuit of the bands until by the processes of disintegration and waste they cease to exist. It is reported that some 500 a week have been accounted for during the past month, and it is estimated that about 15,000 Boers are still in the field. Whatever the total number may be, it is certain that in varying strength the bands overrun the entire country. In the extreme west they hover around Kimberley, threatening an attack. Within a few miles of Bloemfontein they defiantly raid the farms. They hold Ficksburg and its neighbourhood, and are found commandeering as far south as the Orange River districts, where two small columns under Colonels White and Barker are on their track. Further to the north in the same colony, in the area lying within Harrismith, Reitz, and Vrede, they are everywhere in evidence, and General Rundle has recently had sundry skirmishes there with small parties. A good haul was made on Sunday in the South-west Transvaal by Colonel Douglas after a successful march from the Zeerust district. He seized Ventersdorp, an extensive Boer depôt of supply, capturing twenty-one prisoners and large numbers of cattle and sheep.

Meanwhile, our military dispositions are changing to meet the situation created by the presence of guerilla bands acting independently in various districts. General French has been given command of the Southern Transvaal, with headquarters at Johannesburg. His division of cavalry, with which he has done such magnificent work throughout the campaign, has been broken up, and henceforth the regiments that composed it will act independently. The great strategic line from east to west is held by Generals Methuen, Paget, Lyttleton, Smith-Dorrien, and F. Kitchener, commanding respectively at Zeerust, Pretoria, Middleburg, Belfast, and Lydenburg. General Hildyard commands in Natal, and the western border is guarded by General Settle. In the Orange River Colony Generals C. Knox and Bruce-Hamilton are still chiefly concerned with the hunting down of De Wet and Steyn. General Rundle has command in the Harrismith district, while Generals Kelly-Kenny, Macdonald, and others between them hold the central and southern districts. A distribution of commands so extensive as this demands a very considerable force, and it need cause no surprise to learn that there is no prospect at present of large numbers of the troops returning home. The desire uppermost in many minds, no doubt, is that they might return, in view of the early reassembling of Parliament and the certainty that the financial burden of the country arising out of the war will be shortly increased; but until the enemy has completely disappeared from the field the military hold on the country cannot be relaxed. In this connection the rumoured desire of some 15,000 Boers to trek into German South-west Africa becomes extremely interesting. Such a movement would be welcomed by Great Britain as a potent means of bringing hostilities to an end by the removal of such Boers as are absolutely irreconcilable, and prefer, like their fathers, to trek again rather than submit to British rule.

FURNISHING OFFICERS' QUARTERS.

WHEN the reform of our Army system comes to be seriously taken in hand, the question of furnishing officers' quarters should not be lost sight of. For some time it has been impressed upon the country by the Press, aroused at length to a sense of the military necessities of the Empire, that the chief business of the War Office is to prepare for war, and that the primary condition of the Army, in fact its very raison d'être, is to be at all times, as far as possible, in a state of readiness to take the field. Since what is true for the whole is true also for its several parts, the immediate readiness for active service of the individual officer becomes a matter of great importance. Such, however, is not the view of his position hitherto brought home to the young officer on joining. On the contrary, he is obliged to embark in heavy expenses for furniture, which on the outbreak of war becomes practically useless, and, in many cases, has to be disposed of at a serious sacrifice. In the sister Service things are better managed in this respect. A naval officer, whether afloat or ashore, finds his quarters provided with the needful furniture. He is thus saved a large initial expense on commencing his career, and has to provide himself only with such an equipment as his active duties may require. It is true that he pays annually a small percentage on the first cost of the articles supplied by the Admiralty, but no objection could be raised against a similar arrangement for the Military Services.

Nearly twenty years ago this subject was reported on by a War Office Committee under the presidency of Lord (then Sir Garnet) Wolseley. Complete details, of the articles required, with the estimated cost, were prepared, and it was recommended that the quarters of all officers should be supplied at public expense with all essential articles of furniture, especially those that are of a heavy and more or less expensive character. Nothing, however, came of the Committee's recommendations. The first cost ran into many figures, and could not at the time be faced. Moreover, the supply of officers was then ample, and fortunate candidates, however pinched for means some of them may have been, made no demur to laying in the indispensable stock of impedimenta. The labours of that committee will not, however, have been spent in vain, if the more enlightened appreciation of our Army's requirements now existing, should cause the matter to be again brought to the front. We trust that such will be the case, and that it will be notified to the Army that after a certain date all young officers on joining any branch of the military services will be provided with all the articles of furniture necessary for the comfortable and appropriate equipment of an officer's quarters, for the use of which a certain small percentage would de rigueur be charged. This system, although commencing with a somewhat heavy initial expenditure of public money, would become, after a certain time, by means of the percentage charged, almost self-supporting, to say nothing of the direct saving in cost of transport that would result. A measure so practical as this could not fail to be an immense boon to officers, and one that would be thoroughly appreciated. Its extension to the whole body of officers would be a matter of time only. The first and chief desideratum now is to save young officers on joining the Service the heavy expenses for furniture which they have to incur. Lest, however, the relief thus given to them should foster a sense of grievance in their seniors, who would not at once participate, an annual money allowance might fairly be made to the latter for the depreciation of their own furniture until the quarters they occupied could be furnished from the public stores.

Army Notes.

Mr. Chamberlain's visit to the Mediterranean has brought to the front various questions connected with the two great British dependencies in those parts. At Gibraltar for years past there has been keen debate as to the question of resident population and its tendency to expand in a way inimical to the future safety of the great fortress. It has always been obvious to military experts that the presence of a large permanent community would prove extremely inconvenient in the event of a siege. Whether or not a siege of Gibraltar is feasible in these days of long-range artillery, firing such destructive projectiles, is not, of course, clear. Gibraltar might not be able to stand a long protracted investment, but it should at least be secure against a coup de main. It is on this account that it should be, and in theory is, always held as on a war footing. There is no better reason than this for the old-fashioned custom, so strictly preserved, of opening and closing gates at dawn and sunset, precautions that would be of little avail nowadays in keeping out the enemy. The real danger lies within, and the best precaution and the indispensable conditions for safety are in controlling and keeping down the native element. Mr. Chamberlain appears to have incurred some odium for emphasising these views, but the security of Gibraltar is of too much importance to the Empire to be sacrificed to local aspirations. The Rock is, before everything, a stronghold, a place of arms, and not a colony. One of the greatest mistakes ever made was to give it the latter title and character.

Malta has always been more difficult to manage because it has been still more pampered. For years it has enjoyed peculiar privileges, a freedom of speech and an independence of spirit that have at times degenerated into excess. The Maltese are a sturdy, industrious, well-meaning people, but they are apt to be turbulent, and they have been always allowed to have very much their own way. Their attitude towards the British Government, the supreme authority that is to say, has been one of toleration not submission, and their rulers, with their usual forbearance, have seldom attempted to impose their authority. The first real step towards vindicating British supremacy was taken a year or two back by Sir Francis Grenfell, under authority of the Colonial Office, when it was made law that English should be the official language in the island. Till then, strange to say, it had been Italian—not Maltese that is to say, but the language of a previous dominant race, who were not the real children of the soil. The change was bitterly resented by the Italian element, mostly foreigners like ourselves, and without an atom of our right to complain. All this was made very clear by Mr. Chamberlain, but it has not added to his popularity with certain sections in the island and on the Italian mainland. In another generation, no doubt, English will have entirely replaced Italian, and we may hope that strict regulations will enforce the study of the former in the schools. Some day the same wise course may be adopted in Egypt, where, as yet, French holds its own against English, and the best opportunities of acquiring the language of the dominant race is to be found in the schools of another nation, those of the well-known American Mission.

We have had a week of speechifying, and an abundance of talk about the war. We have first to thank Sir Redvers Buller for pointing out some difficulties in the recent campaign which had escaped the critics, so generally ready to condemn. One fact much overlooked was the superiority of the visual sense in the Boers. The enemy could, in fact, see quite two miles further than our men, and this was, of course, of immense service in working artillery. As is well known, the power of sight is the real measure of artillery usefulness, and we have here an explanation of the more effective fire so often seen on the Boer side. Again, it was, of course, felt in scouting, in which our people were so constantly handicapped, with often pernicious results. It may be ungenerous to remind Sir Redvers of the rather hard judgment he meted out in one of his despatches when he asked, "when would our officers learn to scout?" He may, perhaps, now attribute mistakes to imperfect means rather than ignorance. Again, Sir Redvers laid stress upon the advantage enjoyed by the enemy by speaking the Kaffir language, and thus gaining at any time the news of movements from the Kaffir kraals studded all over the country. It is pleasant to quote Sir Redvers's unhesitating opinion that no other nation on the globe could have carried the war through in the way that we have done.

One by one the miserable aspersions passed by irresponsible critics upon the British officer are being convincingly refuted. The chief and most noticeable of all is the abject apology made by Lord Rosslyn. It is impossible to believe that he would thus have climbed down, but for the very positive contradiction published by Lord Roberts. Now, in the face of the Commander-in-Chief's report that "the troops at Sanna's Post behaved in the most gallant manner," and the utter denial that any whisper of misconduct had reached him, there was nothing for Lord Rosslyn to do but acknowledge that his statements were unfounded. We may admit that they were based upon mere camp rumour, notoriously mendacious, but we cannot well exonerate a peer of the realm for giving the weight of his name and authority to such scandalous gossip. Now, however, it is sufficient to quote his own words, which are none too strong for the occasion. "For my part," writes Lord Rosslyn, "I owe the regiments whose honour my publication of a groundless report has called in question the deepest apology and the fullest reparation. I offer it to you, sir (the Prince of Wales) as Colonel-in-Chief—I offer it to the colonels of the various regiments—I offer it to every officer, non-commissioned officer, and man; and I sincerely trust that this unqualified apology will be accepted in the spirit in which it is offered."

Another calumniator, Mr. A. G. Hales, has also seen fit to withdraw his aspersions, which he endeavoured to do at the dinner given by the Anglo-African Writers Club this week. He does it very lamely, and no wonder, for it was not easy to go back upon such charges as he levelled against our officers. We shall not follow him further than to assert that they were ungenerous, ill-timed, and, for the most part, absolutely contrary to fact. It is idle to conjecture "what fly had stung" Mr. Hales, to use a French expression, when he enlarged so bitterly upon the incompetence, the unjustifiable swagger, the bee-haw manner, the lisp, and the eyeglasses, which are among the few of the most glaring defects in the picture he drew. It is enough now to accept Mr. Hales's later view that there was no man living who more honoured the British officer or his bearing in the presence of a foe than did he. It was at this same dinner that Lord Rosslyn appears to have been first brought to acknowledge the error of his ways.

Yet one more assailant has had the ground cut from under his feet. All who read Mr. Richard Harding Davis upon our officers imprisoned in Pretoria will be glad to note that the cudgels have been taken up this week by Mr. James Barnes, a brother American, a correspondent of the Daily Mail. Mr. Barnes declares, that either Mr. Davis is altogether wrong, or he is the one man in the whole world who has had the misfortune to meet the rare aves of the British Army. Every one of the points which Mr. Davis insists upon Mr. Barnes confutes; "their unsportsmanlike, ungentlemanly, and foolish manner; their rudeness and want of common courtesy to the fair sex; their wanton destruction of property," and so forth. Mr. Barnes is satisfied that these bitter accusations are born of obvious animus, and deeply regrets that a countryman of his should make such sweeping statements, which were also so misleading.

We have had many fragmentary contributions to the history of the war, but none of greater interest than the detailed account of the cavalry operations in Natal which appeared in the Times of the 14th. This excellent article, which bears authenticity on the face of it, may be commended to the critics who would have us believe that our cavalry have done little or nothing in the war. This is certainly not the fact with regard to the force so ably commanded by Lord Dundonald and Colonel Burn-Murdoch from the beginning of the campaign on the Tugela to the relief of Ladysmith. We know now how useful the cavalry were in protecting the right flank at the battle of Colenso, and how nearly their occupation of Hlangwane Hill went to changing the fate of the day. This was afterwards proved to be the true key of the position, and during a part of that disastrous day it had been won by the cavalry. Lord Dundonald's advance to Potgieter's Drift paved the way to what many still think would have been a success, and there can be little doubt that had his brilliant raid towards Acton Homes been supported history would have had a different story to tell. Again, Lord Dundonald's effective reconnaissance of Hussar Hill just before the final advance on Ladysmith, had a most important bearing on the result. Then the cavalry, by circling round the rear of the enemy's position, greatly assisted the capture of the Cinglo and Monte Christo Hills. The cavalry also did fine service in completing the clearance of Natal. They were always alert and enterprising, scouting the country between Ladysmith and the Drakensberg, and again in covering the advance on the Biggarsberg, and the final demonstrations on Laing's Nek.

Officers' expenses are a fruitful topic of discussion just now, and not unnaturally, with those whom the shoe pinches most severely. Paterfamilias, who has one or more sons in the Army, has a right to protest against undue extravagance, and any just complaints of this kind should receive attention. Anything approaching ostentation should be rigorously curtailed; excessive hospitality, too many balls and banquets and mess dinners should be forbidden; the regimental drag, the luncheon tent at race meetings, hunting and polo carried beyond mere amusement and made a serious business, should be discountenanced, for they have probably gone too far. But sumptuary laws are always difficult to enforce, and nothing tangible has resulted from the warfare so often waged against Army extravagance. The real remedy is not to be found in peremptory restrictions, which will, in all probability, be evaded, but in relieving officers of outlay which has been hitherto so unjustly laid upon them. Many of these are distinct grievances and they could be removed almost by a stroke of the pen. First, and before all, there is the question of outfit. Not only is the first purchase heavy because uniform and accoutrements are unnecessarily gorgeous, but change is continuous in the various articles of kit and always entail expense. There is no reason whatever why a full-dress uniform should ever vary. The relative merits of gold lace, and plain cloth, of distinctive ornaments, of cut and shape, of tailoring generally, have no bearing upon military efficiency, and might remain the same for years and years. The whole trend of modern military methods is towards simplicity of dress, and if this became the universal rule officers' pockets would benefit largely. In another column we have referred to the expense entailed upon officers by being obliged to buy furniture for their rooms, a burden from which naval officers in part escape, although they must pay rent for the articles supplied. The band, again, which is surely part of the public charges, is mainly kept up by the officers. Mounted officers and cavalry officers generally are heavily mulcted by being obliged to provide chargers, which they keep at their own risk, and must replace in case of accident. It is a constant complaint that suitable stables are not provided in barracks, and officers are constantly called upon to find accommodation outside. Yet more: officers must subscribe to the cricket and football clubs of the regiment; they must help to pay for the entertainment and amusement of their men; they must put their hands in their pockets to find prizes and rewards, and so on, and so on. What wonder then that the meagre pittance called pay, a salary at which a sixth-rate City clerk would turn up his nose, altogether falls short of an officer's needs? One thing is clear, if he must have a private income, as is at present the case, it is not entirely to spend it on display and sensual gratification.

The annual Report of the Inspector-General of Military Prisons, just published, supplies much food for thought. It reminds us, in the first place, that the method of inflicting imprisonment upon military offenders is in the hands of a civil department, and that although the chief official, Colonel Garsia, happens to have served in the Army it is a mere accident, and any day a change in staff may place the military prisons under a civilian pure and simple. It is as well, perhaps, that the War Office has entrusted the work in a large measure to others. Such parts of it as are controlled from Pall Mall are deplorably bad. Take the barrack and provost cells in which offenders may be detained for forty-two days. They are dark, ill-ventilated dens, a hundred years behind the civil prisons of the country. The continual protests of the inspectors have availed nothing against the cheese-paring economy which recoils from the expense of moving soldiers under sentence to the proper prisons because these are at some distance. Again, the accommodation in military prisons is still so inadequate that many soldiers, men who are to return eventually to the colours, are relegated to civil gaols, where they wear the felon garb, and are cheek by jowl with the commonest criminals. It is certain that such short-sighted economy tells most unfavourably upon the general character of the Service, and that would-be recruits are deterred from enlistment by the fear that they may be condemned for some purely military misdemeanour to imprisonment in a common gaol.

On the other hand, it is right to do full justice to the strenuous efforts made by Colonel Garsia and his colleagues to ameliorate the condition of soldiers under sentence in military prisons. Soldiers no longer wear a shameful prison dress, but their own uniforms; drill, gymnastics, the development of muscle are a regular part of the day's work; the labour imposed is industrial in character, the crank and oakum-picking are reserved for the punishment of the idle and disorderly, the dietary is nowadays on such a scale that a long term of imprisonment does not send the soldier back to duty emaciated and etiolated and unfit to bear arms. The régime is military as far as it can be made. All officials, governor, warders, and so forth, are military men, wearing their non-regimental uniform, and giving a soldier-like tone to the establishment. Much credit is, indeed, due to Colonel Garsia for his much-needed reform. It is to be hoped that more will follow from his further suggestions.

AN ANOMALY IN ORGANISATION.

A remarkable point of difference, which is apparently anomalous, exists between the organisation of the Army Service Corps, and that of the kindred service—the Army Ordnance Department. An officer who joins the Army Service Corps, and passes successfully the probationary period, remains in the corps for the remainder of his military career. Service with the Army Ordnance Department is essentially different. An officer, after performing a five years' tour of duty in it, is compelled, under the terms of the Royal Warrant regulating the department, to return to his regiment, which in most cases is now the Royal Artillery, for a period of two years, after which time he becomes again eligible for a further period of five years in the Army Ordnance Department. The ostensible reason for this alternation of service is that the officer should be kept in touch with the regimental life of the Army, its interior economy, its varying phases, and its progressive matériel. If this be advantageous for the Army Ordnance Department it is equally so for the Army Service Corps, which, from the nature of its duties is more closely connected, day by day, with the militant branches of the Army, especially in the field, than its sister service.

The chief end to be secured is the highest state of efficiency possible in the officers of both services, and there is a better prospect of securing that by uninterrupted service and practice in the officer's new career than by a service alternating between two different branches of the Army. This has apparently already become patent to the authorities, since, under an article subsequently added to the Royal Warrant, officers can be selected under certain conditions for permanent retention on the "directing staff," as the upper section of the department is styled. There is, moreover, a "permanent executive establishment" of Commissaries of Ordnance, forming the lower section, to carry on without interruption the necessary detail duties of the Department. This, again, is an unfortunate arrangement, its manifest tendency being to throw undue power into the hands of subordinates at the cost of efficiency in the members of the removable "directing staff."

In one respect there is an essential difference between the duties and the knowledge required in the two services, the Army Ordnance Corps being mainly concerned with artillery munitions of war requiring extended technical knowledge such as an artillery officer alone possesses. In this class of matériel there is constant change due to the advance of science, and the Army Ordnance Department must of necessity keep abreast of all such developments. The instruction of the individual officers of the corps must, therefore, be progressive, but the desired instruction would be far better imparted by attaching the officers for short periodical courses to the schools of instruction at Shoeburyness, Lydd, and Hythe, as well as to the various ordnance factories at Woolwich and elsewhere, or to the Ordnance College, than by sending them back to their corps. There they only take a languid and perfunctory interest in combatant duties for a period of two years, interfering seriously with their departmental education, making their new career uncertain and unsatisfactory, and conferring a doubtful boon on the fighting units they are compelled temporarily to rejoin. The system is well calculated to spoil the officers for both combatant and departmental duties. Moreover, an officer returning to the department for a second tour of duty may apparently be placed at the bottom of the grade in which he previously served, instead of filling the place he formerly vacated, a process destructive of his departmental prospects.

The accounts received during the South African War of the performances of the Army Service Corps, the creation of Sir Redvers Buller when at the War Office, have been all that could be desired. But little has been heard of the Army Ordnance Department, its functions being of a character that keeps it less in evidence and more retired from the front. We have no doubt, however, that had it failed we should quickly have been informed of the matter. Nevertheless, seeing that the success of the Army Service Corps has been so marked, it is certainly a matter for consideration whether its constitution in respect of continuous service should not be adopted for the Army Ordnance Department as well. The so-called "directing staff" of the latter would then be raised above the suspicion that it must, from its organisation, be itself "directed," or "nursed," by the permanent executive subordinate staff, which holds in its hands the traditions and details of the Department by virtue of continuity.

INFANTRY FIELD-SERVICE EQUIPMENT.

The following paragraph appeared the other day in a morning contemporary:—"The usual winter route-marching began at Aldershot yesterday, and the men of course carried their valises. 'Mobility' in a note to us on the subject says:—"The valise is the bane of the soldier. Yet this article of equipment has never been carried on any modern campaign. All valises taken to South Africa were stowed away at the port of disembarkation." The St. James's Gazette, of the 3rd inst., published a letter from "A Regimental Officer," who, writing from the Transvaal in September, made some scathing remarks on the equipment of the Infantry. He ventured to hope that "a few lines from one who had taken part in the campaign and tried to keep his eyes open may not be without interest. . . ." Among the points bearing on our military preparations which seemed to demand immediate and careful attention this writer included an improved "Active Service Kit" for the infantry soldier. His remarks on this subject which are worthy of being quoted at length, were as follows:—"The question of an improved active service equipment for the infantry soldier is one of vital importance. Who is responsible for the present cumbersome and utterly unpractical pattern, I do not know. It is scarcely an exaggeration to say that at present there is hardly a good or practical article in the whole of the clothing and equipment of the infantry soldier, except his shirt, socks, boots, putties, and 'British Coat Warm'; the last, by the way, an Indian article of clothing, most of which have been sent out here direct from India. The ammunition pouches are an absurdity, very cumbersome, and apt to bulge and open out, entailing loss of cartridges. The belts and straps are clumsy, stiff, and unpractical, laborious to put on and take off. To sum up, the whole equipment is ridiculous. A committee of practical soldiers has lately, by Lord Roberts's orders, set to consider the whole question. I have no doubt their suggestions will be sound and practical, and all I can add under this heading is, that if their recommendations are shelved, and the whole matter, as usual, referred to an incompetent and ignorant War Office committee it will amount to a national scandal."

The views embodied in the quotations we have made express the general feeling of the Army. Long before the outbreak of the South African War the faults of the present valise equipment—introduced in 1888—had become patent to military men, and a series of trials with modified equipments submitted to the War Office has been going on for a lengthened time. The inquiry was unavoidably set aside during the stress of the war, but it will be resumed on the return of the Commander-in-Chief, who, with the valuable experience he has gained in South Africa, will without doubt bring the matter to a successful and practical conclusion.

The above quotations attack the valise—"the bane of the soldier"—as an article of equipment in time of peace, when alone it is worn, and the pouches and straps as unsuitable for field service. The remedies for the evils that exist must be drastic. The present valise has come down to us from the old rigid and torturing knapsack. It is the third pattern of its kind, and should be the last. The only merit it could claim on its introduction was that it was detachable from the rest of the equipment. That merit is so well recognised that it is never worn in the field. It should now be abolished, and be replaced by a simple and inexpensive kit-bag, as in India. Our infantry in time of peace would then be equipped in this respect as in the field, and both efficiency and economy would result. Ammunition pouches have descended to us with many modifications, from the days of old Brown Bess, when the rate of firing was slow, ranges were short, and the number of rounds carried did not exceed sixty. The modern pouch has become bulky, because all conditions of fire have changed and more ammunition must be carried. Each pouch now carries fifty rounds, and it has reached its limit. It is also from its bulk uncomfortable, when—as so often happened in South Africa—men have to lie prone upon the ground for perhaps hours together. The pouch, too, must be swept away and be replaced by the bandolier with its 100 cartridges easily accessible. That will be a step in the right direction, although it will not of itself increase the number of rounds carried; that must be effected by other means. The removal of the pouches weighted with their ammunition will, however, take away about 7 lbs. dead weight, which is useful as a counterpoise to the rolled coat hanging at the waist-belt behind, and the discomfort even now due to the regulation method of carrying the coat will become intolerable. A wholly new method of carriage for coat and mess tin must be introduced, in which simplicity of strapping, ease in manipulation, comfort in wear, and generally practicability shall be combined. The working out of this problem is not easy, but we believe the difficulties are not insuperable.

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1129.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1131.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1131.

Army Personal.

Lord Raglan, who succeeds Mr. George Wyndham as Under-Secretary for War, is a soldier himself, and comes of a race of soldiers. His grandfather, the first Lord Raglan, a son of the fifth Duke of Beaufort, was the famous Crimean Commander-in-Chief, who had also distinguished himself in the Peninsular War and had lost an arm at Waterloo. The present peer was born in 1857, and joined the Grenadier Guards in 1876. He served through the second part of the Afghan War (1879-1880) as orderly officer to Major-General Sir R. Phayre. He accompanied the march from Quetta to the relief of Kandahar, and was mentioned in despatches for his valuable service. After the war Lord Raglan acted until 1883 as A.D.C. to Sir James Fergusson, who was then Governor of Bombay. Since he left the Army he has served with the Militia as Major and Hon. Lieut.-Colonel of the Royal Monmouth Engineers. The new Under-Secretary has always been devoted to the Army. "Soldiering" has not only been his profession but his recreation also. His selection has been hailed with great satisfaction by the Militia, in which he served with credit, and it is hoped that more justice will now be done to the old constitutional force of the country.

Major-General Sir Francis Scott, K.C.B., left Southampton on Wednesday in the Royal Mail steamer Trent for the West Indies, to resume his duties as commandant of the local forces and Inspector-General of Police at Trinidad, to which post he was appointed in 1897 as a reward for his services in the Ashanti Expedition. Sir Francis Scott has seen much active service. He entered the 42nd Highlanders in 1852, served throughout the Crimean War, Indian Mutiny, and Ashanti War (1874), and directed the operations against the Jebus on the West Coast of Africa in 1892, having been made Inspector-General of Gold Coast Constabulary in the previous year.

Major-General R. H. O'Grady Haly, C.B., D.S.O., has been granted a Good Service Reward. He took part in the Egyptian war of 1882, and was present at El Magfar, Kassassin, and Tel-el-Kebir. In the Hazara expedition of 1888, under Brigadier-General Channer, he received mention in despatches and was created a D.S.O. He has written on the Cataracts of the Nile, the Straits Settlements, Bechuanaland, and New Guinea, and from 1891 to 1896 was A.A.G., Belfast District. He received the C.B. in 1897, and a year later went on the retired list.

Major-General H. R. Abadie, C.B., has this week assumed the command of the troops and the Lieut.-Governorship of Jersey in succession to Lieut.-General Sir Edward Hopton. General Abadie has passed all his military life in the cavalry, though not always in the same regiment. He entered the 14th Light Dragoons as a cornet in August, 1858, and exchanged into the 17th (now Lancers) the following January, was promoted lieutenant in December, 1860, and seven years later exchanged into the 11th Hussars. He became captain in 1872, and a year later again exchanged—this time into the 9th Lancers. He became major by brevet in November, 1879, and substantive major in December of that year. He was promoted lieutenant-colonel to command the 9th Lancers in 1881, and placed on half-pay in 1887. He had become in the interval colonel in the Army (July 1, 1885), and in July, 1890, was posted to the command of the Armagh Regimental District. This post he held till he was removed to command the Cavalry dépôt at Canterbury in 1894. He was promoted major-general in November, 1897, and went on half-pay. From October, 1899, to June of the present year he temporarily commanded the Eastern District, which he left to proceed on special service to Sierra Leone. General Abadie's war service has been not inconsiderable. In the Abyssinian campaign he accompanied the transport train, and was present at the action of Arogee (mentioned in despatches) and at the capture of Magdala (medal). He served as Brigade Major in the Afghan War of 1879-80, and was with Sir Frederick Roberts on the march to Candahar. For his services during this period he was promoted major by brevet, and received the medal with clasp and bronze decoration, in addition to being twice mentioned in despatches.

Brigadier-General H. Pison, C.B., commanding the Royal Artillery with the British Field Force in China, though due to retire next month, has been granted an extension. He entered the Royal Artillery in 1861. When a captain, in 1879, he distinguished himself in Afghanistan, where he took part in the engagement at Charasiah, and afterwards in the operations round Kabul. He accompanied Lord Roberts in the march to Kandahar, and was three times mentioned in despatches during the year 1880. For his services he received the medal with three clasps and bronze decoration, and the brevet of major. He was promoted substantive major in 1882, lieutenant-colonel in 1890, and colonel by brevet in 1894. In 1896 he was appointed colonel on the staff of the Bengal District to command the R.A., which post he left this summer to proceed to China.

Colonel Henry de Courcy Rawlins, commanding the 26th (Scottish Rifles) and 71st (Highland Light Infantry) Regimental Districts, is about to retire from the Service. Colonel Rawlins joined the 90th Foot on April 23, 1873, when in his twenty-second year, was promoted a year later to the rank of lieutenant, and discharged the duties of Instructor of Musketry to his battalion for nearly two years. He received his company on October 11, 1879, a majority on May 30, 1883, and became lieutenant-colonel, with command of the battalion on December 15, 1894. Four years later he was promoted to colonel, and on April 3, 1899, succeeded the late Colonel J. R. Mechem in the appointment from which he is retiring.

Colonel J. A. F. Stewart-Mackenzie will next month complete five years' unemployment, and be retired on a pension. He was severely wounded in the Afghan war of 1878-80, when he succeeded in taking the 9th Lancers out of action at Killa Kasi. He afterwards took part in the operations round Kabul, and accompanied Lord Roberts in the march to Kandahar. On two occasions he was mentioned in the despatches.

Colonel F. O. Barrington Foote, who has been on half-pay since the beginning of September, has received an appointment for which he is eminently well fitted, that of Commandant of the Army School of Music, Kneller Hall, Hounslow. He takes up his new duties early next month in succession to Colonel F. Glennie, who has held that post during the past six years. Colonel Foote entered the Royal Artillery in January, 1869, was promoted to captain ten years later, major in 1885, lieutenant-colonel in 1895, and colonel by brevet in September, 1899. From February, 1873, to November, 1874, he was A.D.C. to the Governor of Madras; for six months in 1880 he was A.D.C. to the Viceroy of India, which post he left to take up duties on the Staff of the Inspector-General of Artillery. From August to December, 1882, he was on special service in Egypt.

Colonel Farquhar Glennie, who is leaving Hounslow, has served in two different infantry regiments. In July, 1860, he was appointed ensign in 9th Foot, and was promoted captain in 1873, exchanging the following year into the 24th Foot, now the famous South Wales Borderers. He became Major in 1881, Lieut.-Colonel in 1886, and Colonel in 1890. From 1892 he was on half-pay, until appointed to the School of Music in 1894.

Major N. W. Du Boulay, R.G.A., who has been appointed a special service officer with the China Expeditionary Force, is a Staff College graduate. He is not altogether a stranger to the Far East, for from 1890-94 he served as Staff Captain R.A., and in the conflict between Japan and China was attached to the headquarters of the Japanese army, receiving the war medal for his services. Ten years previously he took part in the Nile expedition, and fought at Abu Klea, El Gubat, Abu Kru, and Metammeh, being awarded then the medal, two clasps, and Khedive's star. From 1896-99 he was Brigade Major R.A. in the Western District.

His many journalistic friends—and their name W. D. is legion—will be glad to know that Major Jones, of the Wiltshire Regiment, who went out with Sir Redvers Buller as Press censor in October, 1899, has returned to England, and is in the best health and spirits. Major Jones has happily entirely recovered from the sharp attack of enteric fever to which he gave in on the day of the relief of Ladysmith, having fought hard against it so long as the decisive events were in progress. His was a delicate and difficult task, and he discharged it so as to earn very general approval from the war correspondents. Major Jones's watchword was to give fair-play to all, exactly the same measure to all, without prejudice, favour, or affection. If some of the older hands representing the greater journals at one time resented this, feeling that they deserved more special consideration than others, the principle was so honestly maintained that they could not quarrel with it really, and all alike will pay Major Jones a deep tribute of respect for his honourable and straightforward discharge of most onerous functions. Some adequate recognition of his meritorious services will surely follow; promotion and staff employment are what would probably be most to Major Jones's taste, and by no means too great a reward for his deserts.

Capt. A. F. Gordon, 1st Gordon Highlanders, who has been granted the local rank of Major with the Central African Regiment in West Africa, served in the Chitral Expedition of 1895, and the Tirah Campaign of 1897. He was present at the storming of the Dargai heights.

Captain F. H. G. Playfair has been selected by the Commander-in-Chief to fill the important appointment of "D.A.A.G. for Musketry" at Secunderabad, India. Captain Playfair's regiment is the Hampshire.

Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., in the course of his lecture on the war at Bradford on Tuesday night, said that he had discovered the name of the young officer who died in the endeavour to establish confidence in his men at Spion Kop, and to whose heroic conduct he had referred in previous lectures. The officer was Lieut. H. A. C. Wilson, son of the Rev. A. Wilson, vicar of St. Michael and All Angels, Chiswick. His men of the Middlesex Regiment were young, untried, and under fire of the Boer riflemen at 200 yards. Though wounded and begged to lie down, Lieut. Wilson walked up and down, speaking to his men individually and seeing to the sighting of their rifles until he at length fell dead.

A correspondent writes:—"It is an undoubted fact that the colonels of some cavalry regiments at Aldershot have ordered their new direct commission men to go and work with a crammer, while other (infantry) colonels have already employed a crammer to teach their 'subs.' These young officers often go astray for want of minor technical knowledge, and their utter ignorance of military law often prevents them from deciding whether a man should go to the guard-room or not, or what 'crime' should be put against him. Knowing nothing of tactics they cannot command a small body of troops on a field day—a thing they have often to do at once owing to so many of the senior officers being 'employed.'"

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:

LIFE. { War Risks, World-Wide.
ACCIDENTS & DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence Abroad.
BURGLARY, &c.

Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch. The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.

Special Quotations for Messes. Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums. Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.
Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT.

THE TACTICAL TRAINING OF INFANTRY.

[By a MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.]

At present the outline of the future training of the Army has been only traced in a more or less sketchy manner, but a large proportion of the officers trained in war could well fill in the details. The object, therefore, of this article is to put before the readers of this journal some few of the particulars in which it is easy to see that the peace training of infantry is defective. So far, therefore, the only "data" upon which a scheme of training can be built up consists of the reported intention of the War Office to insist upon a continuous course of instruction of ten months' duration, while the soldier is to be relieved of barrack duties, which, together with garrison "fatigues," have hitherto monopolised a large portion of his working hours.

Now, the first point which strikes one in this scheme is that the second in command of a battalion must in the future, whatever he was in the past, be an all-round instructor in the art of war. For the lieutenant-colonel, from the nature of his appointment, must still have a great deal of administrative and disciplinary work, and should, therefore, take over the battalion for manœuvres in a thoroughly efficient state from his senior major, as also at the periodical field-days, which must necessarily interrupt the field-training of the companies. But if, in future, the large numbers of so-called "employed" men are to be available for soldiering pure and simple, it seems obvious that at least three or four companies under their own officers and superintended by the senior major should, early in the spring, be told off for a general revision of their education in applied tactics. There must, of course, be interruptions, for soldiers ought not to specialise their training to such a degree as to lose ground by a withdrawal from their stereotyped course of instruction for the purpose of an occasional field-day with other units. And while the winter months, it may be supposed, will be utilised for a great deal of theoretical instruction, it would seem necessary to habituate the companies of every battalion in every form of route-march and outpost practices, which, with due regard to reasonable allowances for bad weather, can be carried out in this temperate climate, save in the three worst months of the year. For it is more than probable that, as in some stations ground is not now available for cross-country work, the Government will find some means of compensating landowners for the small amount of damage likely to ensue in manœuvring troops over grass lands. But, making every allowance for the hundred and one drawbacks which beset the garrisons of large towns at home, it must be candidly avowed that a great deal more might have been done in the past in the way of making the winter exercises of battalions more instructive. For instance, where troops of all arms are present, combined route-marches and time-marches are not the rule of life with the special object of accustoming the infantry to work with cavalry and artillery, save at Aldershot and the other big camps of exercise. Next, sufficient time is not spent over reconnaissance, outpost practice, the tactics of advanced-guard, and field-firing by battalions. Of course, the rudiments of these subjects are fairly well taught in the company field-training, but there to a very great extent the training stops short, and it is not uncommon to find outpost sections gravely ignorant, not only of the nomenclature of the art, but of the theoretical connection, which should be a sine quâ non between all units of the line or lines. The British officer, indeed, is not over-imaginative, and is somewhat prone to "scamp" manœuvre-training because he dislikes "playing at soldiers," seeing that in most years fighting is going on in some portion of our world-wide Empire. Again, the almost inherited dislike of soldiers to the use of entrenching tools has prompted the practice of this art in nooks and corners, where the tactical idea, which should inspire all field fortifications is non-existent. Next the annual inspection is, broadly speaking, a mere farce, and if the interior economy of a battalion is to be scrutinised in detail, it ought to be separated entirely as an inspection from the tactical tests. These last should be made to combine the whole series of military subjects taught, or supposed to be taught, in detail during the present period of field training.

In fine, the work of the year should be progressive and combined at the end of the station training of battalions in a series of practical tests of efficiency and mobility at the annual inspection; the final act of all being the searching probation projected in future at the autumn manœuvres.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Nov. 10.

Lord Roberts, telegraphing on Nov. 8 from Johannesburg, reports a great success gained over the Boers under Steyn and De Wet, three miles south of Bothaville, on the 5th. Col. Le Gallais surprised the enemy, who were about 1,000 strong, and a severe engagement ensued, lasting five hours. Col. De Lisle's Mounted Infantry then came up, and the enemy were completely defeated. The British took a 12-pr. of "Q" Battery, a 15-pr. of the 14th Battery, four Krupp guns, one "pom pom," and one Maxim, with all their ammunition and waggons, and 100 prisoners. The Boers left 25 dead and 30 wounded on the field. The enemy were pursued for some miles, when they broke up in small parties. The British casualties were relatively heavy—Col. Le Gallais and two other officers and eight men killed, and seven officers and 26 men wounded. Lord Roberts reports several minor encounters with Boer parties in various districts, and says that Gen. Smith-Dorrien reports an engagement south of Dalmanutha on Nov. 6. He drove them to the east of the Komati River.

Sir Alfred Milner has made an important speech at a meeting of the Loyal Women's Guild near Cape Town.

Monday, Nov. 12.

Lord Roberts, in a despatch of Nov. 8, from Johannesburg, says that Gen. C. Knox states that he takes no credit for the very successful engagement of Nov. 6, which was due, in the first instance, to the determination of Col. Le Gallais never to lose touch of the enemy, and, secondly, to the able way in which Col. De Lisle handled the firing line after Cols. Le Gallais and Ross had been wounded. Gen. Knox also reports that "U" Battery, under Major Taylor, served their guns in a magnificent manner. Gen. Smith-Dorrien reports that his two days' fight with the Boers near Belfast was very hard. The enemy were met soon after our force started from Belfast and hung about the front, flanks, and rear till the Komati River was reached, when they stood in a very strong position. From this they were driven out by a wide turning movement. Before next morning they were largely reinforced. The British casualties on Nov. 6 were six killed and 20 wounded. On the 7th the Boers tried to recover the position they had been driven out of on the previous day, but were prevented by Col. Evans, with the Canadian Mounted Rifles and two guns of the 84th Battery, galloping for two miles and seizing the position just in the nick of time. The rear on the return march was defended by Col. Lessard with the Canadian Dragoons and two Royal Canadian guns. No praise is too high for the devoted gallantry shown by these troops in keeping the enemy off the infantry and convoys. In the afternoon some 200 mounted Boers suddenly charged the rearguard to within 70 yards, when they were stopped by the Canadian Dragoons. During the fight 16 Canadians fell into the hands of the Boers, who treated them kindly and released them after they had removed their own dead and wounded. The British casualties on Nov. 7 were two killed and 12 wounded.

A Kroonstaad telegram of Nov. 9 says that the prisoners and guns taken near Bothaville arrived at Kroonstad that day. The enemy's laagers were plentifully supplied with provisions, including an abundance of tinned meats. Steyn and De Wet left everything behind in their flight. Many blankets and saddles discarded by the Boers have been found. Philippolis was reoccupied by the British on Nov. 8, after four hours' fighting.

Gen. French has left Pretoria for Johannesburg with two brigades to take over the command of that district.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE TEOFANI'S HIGH-CLASS CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition, 1900
Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

The Gelderland, with Mr. Kruger on board, left Jibuti on the afternoon of Nov. 9, for Port Said. Mr. Kruger is to land at Marseilles.

Tuesday, Nov. 13.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram from Johannesburg of Saturday afternoon (10th), says that Lord Methuen surprised Commandants Snyman and Vermaas between Ottoshoop and Lichtenburg on Friday morning. Three dead Boers were found, and 30 prisoners and several waggons were captured. The British had no casualties. A place named Nigel, near Heidelberg, held by a detachment of the 3rd King's Royal Rifles, was unsuccessfully attacked on Friday by the Boers, who retired after an hour's fighting. Lord Roberts also reports the occupation of Philippolis by the Seaforth Highlanders on Nov. 8, and describes a successful surprise carried out by Col. F. W. Kitchener from Lydenburg on the night of Nov. 7, resulting in the rout of the enemy, who are said to have lost heavily. Col. Plumer, while covering the movements of Gen. Paget's column with his mounted troops on Nov. 8 was attacked by 400 of Delarey's men, who were beaten, leaving behind two killed and 16 prisoners.

Gen. Smith-Dorrien reports that the British wounded who were left in the hands of the Boers after the recent fight near Belfast, and afterwards brought back in our ambulances, speak highly of the kindness with which they were treated. They were informed, while with the Boers, that Commandant Henry Prinsloo and Gen. Joachim Fourie had both been killed, and Gen. Johann Grobelaar wounded in the action. This is confirmed from other sources.

A Reuter telegram states that Gen. Bruce Hamilton, advancing from Kroonstad, has found the position at Doornkop, where the Boers were said to be entrenched, evacuated.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram of Nov. 12, from Johannesburg, says that Gen. Rundle reports skirmishes with small parties of Boers in the Harrismith, Reitz, and Vrede districts. The Boer commandos appear to be acting independently, with no particular object except to cause us as much annoyance as possible. Gen. Paget reports that a patrol of Queensland Bushmen captured six of the enemy near Pienars River on Sunday, Nov. 11.

Gen. Douglas's column arrived at Ventersdorp on Sunday on its way to Klerksdorp, after a very successful march from the south of Zeerust. There was little opposition at Ventersdorp, where 21 prisoners and large numbers of cattle and sheep were captured. Ventersdorp, adds Lord Roberts, has been a large depot of supplies for the Boers, but all this will now be cleared out.

Wednesday, Nov. 14.

Lord Roberts reports sundry skirmishes with small parties of Boers in the Harrismith, Reitz and Vrede districts. Paget reports that a patrol of Queenslanders captured six Boers near Pinaar's River. Douglas's column arrived at Ventersburg on the 13th on its way to Klerksdorp, after a very successful march from south of Zeerust. Many captures had been effected.

Thursday, Nov. 15.

The policy of silence is maintained at the front and there is no news of any of the operations now proceeding. Botha, it is reported, has thought better of his refusal to surrender.

Friday, Nov. 16.

Lord Roberts, in a despatch of Nov. 14 from Johannesburg, reports the capture on Nov. 8 of sixteen Boers trying to cross from Portuguese territory at Namuhash, a place at which the Boers have been trying to get ammunition brought into the Transvaal. On Nov. 10 Lord Methuen, while on the march to Lichtenburg, came across a body of Boers, who took to flight, and in the pursuit our troops captured a "Pom! Pom." A police post near Vryburg which was attacked on Nov. 10 killed several Boers and captured two wounded prisoners, one of them a field cornet.

YOUNG OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE".
SIR,—By a recent Army Order the young officers who are commissioned from Sandhurst in December next are to proceed to Hythe in January 8, 1901, to go through a course of musketry. As these officers will have only had rather over a fortnight's leave, it is presumed that they will receive the usual travelling allowance for their journey. The order is, however, silent on this subject. It is to be hoped that the War Office is alive to the very general desire of the public that the expenses of young officers in joining the service should be diminished rather than increased.

November 14.

A PARENT.

PAY AND ALLOWANCES TO EMBODIED MILITIA-MEN ON FURLOUGH.—During the furlough season the provisions of paragraph 14 (f) of Army Order 203 of 1899 will be suspended, and embodied Militia-men will be allowed to take furlough under the conditions applicable to the Regular Forces.—Army Order.

Army Foreign.

The return of the Fourreau-Lamy mission was greeted with great satisfaction in France, and the President of the Republic, the Minister of War, the Minister of Public Instruction, and the scientific societies were represented at the arrival of the officers and men. The officers were Captains Reibell and Rondeney, of the Saharan Rifles, three lieutenants of the Algerian Rifles, a doctor, and a native officer, with 250 Spahis and Native Rifles. General Percin said that the late Captain Lamy had brought to his flag other contingents, and had led them to a victory which was necessary for the security of the French possessions on the Congo and for the cause of civilization. The mission had completed the programme of expansion which had been pursued for twenty years in West Africa, and the military operations had been a complete success. Though news of the expedition had long been wanting, it was known that under chiefs like Fourreau and Lamy, France "would not have to deplore such acts as those which had made the French heart sad, and which deprived you of the help upon which you had a right to count." After this reference to the Voulet-Chanoine affair, he complimented the officers upon the skill with which they had directed their force by astronomical observations, and concluded by saying that their military work had broken the spell which closed the routes of the Sahara to France, and that the junction of the Algerian troops with the contingent of Captain Joalland and the Senegalese had destroyed the power of a new Mahdi who, after having destroyed the Crampel and Bretonnet missions, was devastating French possessions. Much regret was expressed that Captain Lamy had fallen, but after his death Captain Reibell had completed the victories by an energetic pursuit. From Bordeaux the Senegalese and Spahis were despatched to Mar-saïles, where they were again fêted.

The French papers lately published a very remarkable account of the notorious Voulet-Chanoine affair, and of the murder of Colonel Klobb, extracted from the diary of Lieut. Pallier. The diary relates the movement of the column from July 8 to 26 in much detail. It appears that the first intimation that Voulet had of the approach of Colonel Klobb was by a letter conveyed by four native riflemen on July 10. The letter contained the information that the Colonel was coming to take command of the Mission, and ordered Voulet to halt and wait for him with Chanoine. The two passed the night in conference, and instead of obeying the order, the column was marched south on the 11th from Boulton, Lieut. Pallier being sent ahead with provisional orders for an attack upon Tessaoua. It is not necessary to describe the various movements of Voulet and Chanoine. At 8 p.m. on the 12th, the former received a second letter from Colonel Klobb, expressing surprise that his order had not been obeyed. On the evening of the 13th, the Colonel was within a distance of six kilometres, and early the next morning Voulet, taking precautions to protect his rear, marched some few miles and halted. At 7.15 Colonel Klobb's column approached within a few hundred yards, when Voulet sent him a pencil message that he would fire upon him if he continued to advance. Colonel Klobb, with Lieut. Maynier, thereupon came forward, calling out, "Tirailleurs de Tombouctou, ne tirez pas; c'est votre colonel le Tombouctou." But the Timbuctoo Rifles had been withdrawn by Voulet, and firing began as Klobb and Maynier continued to advance. Voulet then ordered a volley, which was badly delivered, but Colonel Klobb and Lieut. Maynier fell, the former with three bullets in his head. The body of the unfortunate officer was afterwards buried without any honours. Voulet had harangued his native soldiers, telling them that he proposed to take to the bush, and to live like a native chief; but there were many defections, and in the end Voulet and Chanoine were almost alone. The natives concerted a movement to rejoin Lieuts. Pallier and Joalland, and when Voulet and Chanoine saw what was happening, the latter galloped after them and fired upon them with a revolver. The fire was returned and he was shot dead and his body mutilated. Voulet was then informed by the native Rifles that they would not shoot him if he retired from the village; but on the morning of the 17th, having passed the night alone, he presented himself at the camp and fired at the sentinel. The alarm was given, and Voulet fell mortally wounded. Thus, according to the diary of Lieut. Pallier, ended the two desperate men who had murdered their superior officer. The publication of this diary shadowed the gratification felt at the return of the Fourreau-Lamy Mission, to which Voulet's column belonged.

The Revue du Cerele Militaire, in an article upon the fighting and marching formations of German infantry under artillery fire, remarks that French officers are, in general, too narrow-minded. Most of them are so much engrossed in the work of their own arm of the service that they know little of the others. This is partly due to the system of training, and to garrison life which rarely fosters the co-operation of the various arms. It thus happens that many young officers know only the tactics of their own branch of the service. For them the combat opens with masses of cavalry with flashing swords, advancing madly towards the enemy, and disappearing in a tumult on the flanks; then the thunder of long lines of guns exhausting themselves in an interminable cannonade, and lastly the infantry, preceded by lines, more and more dense, of skirmishers, marching towards the enemy, and finally securing a victory. The Revue remarks that this is a conception as false as it is dangerous, since in battle any arm of the service may be concerned indifferently with any one or all three of the other arms, and the present training does not prepare for that. Artillery officers have absolute confidence in their guns, but they act as if troops would operate in country as flat as a billiard table, though in practice this is far from being the case. Evidently our excellent contemporary has been a little alarmed by certain episodes of the recent manoeuvres and the criticisms which have been made upon them.

Major Mott, the United States Military Attaché, who was present at the French manoeuvres, has given expression to his feeling of satisfaction with all he saw. He came away with a golden opinion of the infantry, and says they are not merely splendid marchers, but keep up their spirits in trying circumstances, and are as ready in supplying their own wants as any soldiers he has ever met. The cavalry struck him as being quite different in their methods from what he was familiar with at home. Americans regard cavalry as the eyes and ears of the forces, and expect them to act as mounted infantry, while the French still employ masses of cavalry and regard charges as still perfectly feasible. Major Mott thought the horsemanship of the French officers excellent. They have been described as poor riders, he says, but they demonstrated the contrary in the fine display they made round Chartres. He was also very much pleased with the artillery. The new gun appeared to him to be a most efficient weapon, and to involve a new method of working which is a vast improvement on the old style. "The French artillerymen know their business, too, and their prompt and effective manœuvring, combined with rapid serving of the guns, is simply admirable." Another point that impressed him was the use made of motor-cars though he does not think that they would be of great value on rough American roads, and over the enormous tracts of country which might have to be traversed in the United States.

It is understood that the question of army re-organisation in the United States will now be taken up officially, the Presidential election being over. It is generally agreed that a material increase is necessary, and a force of at least 75,000 will be asked for. Without a larger active army it will be impossible to hold the Philippines or to continue the foreign policy upon which the American Government has embarked. General Brooke, commanding the Department of the East, has presented a report on the subject of reorganisation, in which he deplors the condition of the artillery, and especially of the coast artillery, which, he says, is getting worse every day. Large sums of money have been spent upon modern guns, and these are in danger for want of being properly cared for. Indeed, they have rusted and deteriorated to such an extent that it is greatly feared that some of them have already gone too far to be saved. If this statement is true, the United States Military Department must have pursued a very short-sighted policy.

The new Spanish Premier, General Manuel de Azcarra y Palmero, is an officer of great distinction and much energy, widely respected in the country. It was chiefly due to his efforts, as Minister of War, that the Spanish army was increased and re-organised before the hostilities with the United States, and that a constant stream of soldiers was directed upon Cuba and Porto Rico. If other departments had been as efficient as that over which General Azcarra y Palmero presided, the task of the Americans would have been much more difficult. He is greatly esteemed in the Spanish army, and is known to be a man of vigorous intellect and prompt judgment. The new Minister of War is General Linares, who was in command at Santiago during the war.

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR. ROSE'S LIME JUICE WHISKY

LIQUEUR

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO

Cherry Whisky,
Cherry Brandy,
Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—

HUNTSMEN,
GOLFERS,

and SPORTSMEN

generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants.
Price 54s. per Case of 1 Dozen Quarts, Carriage Paid.

A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.,
41, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and o.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.

£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400
(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT - £100 to £155
(Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315
(Chelsea, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

CAPTAIN GALL, Late Northumberland Fusiliers.
AND
CAPTAIN H. C. KING, late of 6, Clifton Gardens, W.
80a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.,
Prepare Pupils for
ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS.
Individual Attention Guaranteed. Lists of Successes and Terms on Application.

Obituary.

ARMY.

Major-Gen. Andrew Hugh Bogle, who died at St. Margaret's, Twickenham, on Nov. 7, at the age of 71, joined the Bengal Artillery in 1848, and had a distinguished military career. In the Crimea, in 1855-56, he commanded a battery of Turkish field artillery, and received the 4th Class of the Medjidieh and Turkish medal. In the Indian Mutiny campaign he was present at the action of Keendoo Nulla, being mentioned in despatches, and was present at the recapture of Lucknow. He received the thanks of the Governor-General for gallantry and resolution, and was awarded the brevet rank of Major and a medal with clasp. In Abyssinia, in 1868, he commanded a battery of six mountain guns and four mortars. For his services in this campaign he received the medal, and was several times mentioned in despatches. He retired from the Army in April, 1882, as a Colonel, with the honorary rank of Major-General.

Capt. W. B. C. Hodge, 6th Batn. Imperial Yeomanry, who died on the 1st inst. of the wounds which he had received the previous day at Syferfontein, was formerly a Captain in the 12th Lancers. He joined the Imperial Yeomanry last February with the temporary rank of Captain in the Army.

Capt. Nicholas Marcus Lynch, 1st South Lancashire Regiment, who died of enteric at Mooi River on the 13th inst., was born in 1868. In 1887 he obtained his commission as 2nd Lieut. in the South Lancashire Regiment, and was promoted to Lieut. in 1889 and to Captain in 1894. From May, 1892, to December, 1893, he was employed with the Gold Coast Constabulary, in 1895 he was appointed Adjutant of a Volunteer corps, and in 1898 he was employed with the West African Frontier Force.

THE BRITISH OFFICER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In the current number of the Monthly Review Mr. Ralph Neville makes the following assertion:—"It may be safely predicted that no permanent improvement (in the regular Army) will take place so long as officers of the Army are content to be considered as a red-coated variety of an idle class" (p. 65). On Oct. 30 Field-Marshal Viscount Wolseley, when speaking at St. James's Hall, on the occasion of Mr. Winston Churchill's lecture, used the following words:—"I am very glad that Mr. Churchill has done ample justice in his description to a class with which, I am sorry to say, it has been the pleasure of some writers to find fault—I mean the British officer, whom I believe to be not only the finest specimen of humanity and the finest fighting-man in the world, but also, taking him as a whole, as a leader of men, one who is not to be beaten in any army in the world."

Will the nation accept, against the expressed opinion of the first soldier of the empire, endorsed by proofs innumerable, the mere assertion of an "ex-Volunteer," who, after arguing in favour of "universal military service," admits that his pride in soldiering succumbed to the affront of "being mistaken for an escaped convict on Dartmoor during the manœuvres many years ago" (p. 59), and to—as it may be inferred—"the caustic humour of his friends"? (pp. 61-62). Mr. Ralph Neville is one of the many who tilt at the British officer and teach the Army its duty. His paper on "National Defence" contains other statements which are open to refutation, and almost all that is sound in it is trite.

Nov. 6.

A. C. YATE.

LORD ROBERTS, as Hon. Colonel of the C.I.V.'s, has accepted an invitation to dine with the members of the United Service Club on his return to England.

RESERVISTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.—We have received the following from the War Office:—"A statement having appeared to the effect that instructions have been issued that Section "D" Reservists in South Africa will have to give an additional 12 months' service, it is notified that no such instructions have been issued. The terms of service of Section "D" Reservists, when once called up, are identical with those of other Army Reservists. The services of Army Reservists of all sections will be gradually dispensed with as soon as the military service in South Africa will admit."

NATIONAL DEFENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE"
SIR.—Lord Wolseley's candour (in his Sheffield speech) has fully explained to us what Lord Salisbury hinted as to the influence of the Treasury and its allies in starving national defence. If the British public, with its eyes opened, does not now take some means to stamp out this disease, like the plague, they will have only themselves to blame should it lead to national disaster, as it is so plainly calculated to do. That the complaint is of long standing the following comparison will show:—

LORD WOLSELEY AT SHEFFIELD.

November 1, 1900.

"Without finding fault with the Constitution of this country, he might point out that conditions must continually arise as long as our present military organisation continued, when a man like himself, charged with the purely military side of our affairs, might feel it necessary to bring before the Government of the day the fact that the Army was not strong enough, or that its guns were old, or that our fortifications were defended by obsolete artillery, and many other things which were not what they ought to be under a great nation like ours. He was listened to most attentively, but he was told, 'No doubt you are quite right; these things are very desirable, but we have not got the money to provide them.' That was the very common answer of all Governments. One might ask for these things. The Governments might believe in them, but still one did not get them."—Times Report.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.

1847.

"I am especially sensible of the certainty of failure if we do not, at an early moment, attend to the measures necessary for our defence, and of the disgrace, the indelible disgrace of such failure—putting out of view all the other unfortunate consequences, such as the loss of the political and social position of this country among the nations of Europe, of all its allies, in concert with and in aid of whom it has, in our times, contended successfully in arms for its own honour and safety, and the independence and freedom of the world. When did any man hear of the allies of a country unable to defend itself? Views of economy of some, and I admit that the high views of national finance of others, induce them to postpone those measures absolutely necessary for mere defence and safety under existing circumstances, forgetting altogether the common practice of successful armies in modern times, imposing upon the conquered enormous pecuniary contributions."—Letter to Sir John Burgoyne, Maxwell's "Life of Wellington," vol. 2, p. 364.

The punishment of our folly has been delayed longer than could have been expected, and has given us many chances of returning to sanity. But under not improbable circumstances (about which Lord Salisbury has warned us) this penny-wise, pound-foolish niggardliness in providing for our national insurance can scarcely fail to put an end to the British Empire. It will perhaps be a poor consolation to know that, after this warning, we shall, as a nation, have richly deserved our fate.

A. C. CHAMPNEYS,

GEORGE NUGENT BANKES,

Hon. Secretaries, Army League and Imperial Defence Association, 8, King Street, E.C.

Nov. 9.

No more applications for direct commissions in the West India Regiment or any other corps are to be forwarded to the War Office.

THE Hon. Conrad Dillon, treasurer of the Army Temperance Association, 47, Victoria Street, appeals for funds on behalf of this organisation. "When," he says, "it is borne in mind that the soldiers themselves contribute upwards of £10,000 a year to the temperance work in the Army, the sum of £700 received last year in subscriptions from private sources seems hardly an adequate response for a cause which is said to be so vital to the interests of the soldiers we wish to honour and help."

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

It was announced in Tuesday's London Gazette that the Queen had been graciously pleased to signify her intention of conferring the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned private, whose claim had been submitted for her Majesty's approval, for his conspicuous bravery in South Africa:—

"Pte. J. H. Bisdee, Tasmanian Imperial Bushmen.—On September 1 Pte. Bisdee was one of an advanced scouting party passing through a rocky defile near Warm Bad, Transvaal. The enemy, who were in ambuscade, opened a sudden fire at close range, and six out of the party of eight were hit, including two officers. The horse of one of the wounded officers broke away and bolted. Pte. Bisdee gave the officer his stirrup-leather to help him out of action, but finding that the officer was too badly wounded to go on, Pte. Bisdee dismounted, placed him on his horse, mounted behind him, and conveyed him out of range. This act was performed under a very hot fire, and in a very exposed place."

BADEN-POWELL'S POLICE.—The London recruiting office for the enrolment of troopers for the force of military police which is being raised by Gen. Baden-Powell for service in the Orange River Colony and the Transvaal opened on Wednesday, the 14th inst., for the receipt of applications for appointments in the new force. The applications, both personal and by letter, were very numerous; many were disappointed, however, the rule being that for the present written applications only will be entertained. If these are satisfactory, the applicants will be instructed to undergo examination. Personal application is, therefore, at this stage, useless. The Depot, which is in Westminster, is under the command of Col. Hoare and Capt. MacLaren. It is probable that sufficient qualified men will be forthcoming from the Volunteers and the Yeomanry to preclude the necessity of engaging others with no military experience.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS AND BRASSES

Morris & Sons 239 Kennington Rd London S.E.

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES J. WIPPELL & CO. LTD. EXETER 4 & 5 DUNCANNON ST. LONDON. CHANCERY CROSS. DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

HART, SON, PEARCE, & CO. LTD. Metal Workers. — SPECIALITÉ — Memorial Brasses. 88-91, DRURY LANE, LONDON, W.C.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards—Capt. Cookson left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Fort Salisbury for England.

2nd Life Guards—Capt. H. S. B. Surtees has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Horse Guards (Blues)—Capt. Lord Crichton and Lieut. the Hon. R. F. Molyneux left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home.

1st (Royal) Dragoons—Capt. Prince Francis of Teck left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys)—Lieut. J. L. McK. Hutchinson has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

5th Lancers—2nd Lieut. O. K. Chance has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

7th Hussars—Capt. Prince Alexander of Teck left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Fort Salisbury for England. Lieut. Kevill-Davies left Cape Town in the steamship Urmston Grange on Nov. 10, on passage home. 2nd Lieut. Brooke left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home.

9th Lancers—Lieut. Lord Charles Bentinck left Cape Town on Nov. 6, on passage home, in the Tantallon Castle.

10th Hussars—Major C. T. McM. Kavanagh has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

13th Hussars—Lieut. J. D. Lyons, reported wounded in the leg at Standerton on Nov. 8, is doing well.

16th Lancers—Lieut.-Col. E. G. Bethune, who has recently been promoted to the command of the regiment, is a Staff College graduate. He left recently the post of A.A.G. Burmah, to proceed on special service to South Africa.

17th Lancers—Lieut. R. Morritt has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

20th Hussars—2nd Lieut. Urquhart left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Brig.-Gen. H. Pipon, C.B., commanding R.A. with the British Field Force in China, who is due to retire under the age rules next month, has been granted an extension of time in his appointment.

Major Forestier-Walker left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Tantallon Castle on passage home. Major Finlay, Capt. Byron, Cape, and Skepwith, and Lieut. Newcombe, R.F.A., left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, for England.

Major Allen, 15th Co. Southern Division R.G.A., quite convalescent, embarked for home on steamship Assaye, Nov. 14.

Major Fasson and 2nd Lieut. Lowther, R.F.A., are returning home in the Nineveh which left for England on Nov. 8.

2nd Lieut. A. M. Addison, R.F.A., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut.-Col. Friend, R.E., formerly Commanding Royal Engineer at Alexandria, has been appointed Director of Works in the Soudan, in succession to Major Gorrington, D.S.O., and has left Cairo to take charge of his new duties.

Lieut.-Col. J. C. Campbell, R.E., has been appointed to succeed Col. G. R. R. Savage in command of the Royal Engineers in Ceylon.

Capt. Phillips left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home.

Capt. G. O. Bigge and Lieut. P. G. H. Hogge have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards—Lord Amptill has selected Lieut. the Hon. R. Lygon, 3rd Batn., as an extra aide-de-camp on his personal staff as Governor of Madras.

Coldstream Guards—Major J. M. Wingfield and Capt. Lord Newtown Butler, 1st Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home.

Royal Scots (1st)—Capt. Viscount Newport and 2nd Lieut. E. C. Hill-Whitson, 3rd Batn., have been discharged to duty in South Africa. Capt. the Hon. J. Campbell, 3rd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Lancaster Regiment (4th)—Lieut. Fayner left Cape Town in the Nineveh on Nov. 8, on passage home.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th)—Lieut. A. F. Douglas, 1st Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th)—2nd Lieuts. Hobson and Crooke (4th Batn.) left Cape Town on Nov. 7, on passage home in the Hawarden Castle.

Royal Fusiliers (7th)—Capt. Hibbert left Cape Town on Nov. 10, on passage home in the steamship Urmston Grange. Lieut. J. C. Cartwright and 2nd Lieuts. R. B. de la Motte, R. J. I. Hesketh, and E. R. Cheales, 6th Batn., have been appointed for duty at Aldershot with the Cheshire Regiment; 2nd Lieuts. N. H. Russell, H. N. N. Winter, and H. E. E. Pankhurst, 6th Batn., for duty at Colchester with the Norfolk Regiment.

Norfolk Regiment (9th)—Capt. Wilson, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 8 in the Nineveh, invalided.

Devonshire Regiment (11th)—2nd Lieut. J. N. Woolcome (1st Batn.) has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

West Yorkshire Regiment (14th)—Lieut. C. C. Bicknell, 2nd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th)—Lieut.-Col. Lord Cranborne, 4th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home.

Yorkshire Regiment (19th)—Capt. J. C. Rivis 4th Batn., has been selected for service with the Malay States Guides. 2nd Lieut. Kirkpatrick, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home.

Lancashire Fusiliers (20th)—2nd Lieut. Whigham, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home. 2nd Lieut. C. Brand, 2nd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Cheshire Regiment (22nd)—2nd Lieut. F. H. Mahony has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

South Wales Borderers (24th)—2nd Lieut. Dickenson left Cape Town on Nov. 8, on passage home.

King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th)—Capt. E. J. Dent left Cape Town for Madeira in the Tantallon Castle on Nov. 6. Capt. Critchley-Salmonson 3rd Batn., left Cape Town for England on Nov. 8 in the steamship Nineveh, invalided. Lieut. Sir W. Jardine has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th)—Special Divisional Order by Lieut.-Gen. Sir Leslie Rundle, K.C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., commanding 8th Division:—
"Harrismith, Sept. 6, 1900.

"The Ladybrand garrison, consisting of one company 1st Worcesters and two troops Imperial Yeomanry was surrounded and attacked on Sept. 1 by 3,000 Boers and nine guns under Fourie, who called upon the garrison to surrender. This they refused to do, and being well entrenched, gallantly held their own until the 5th inst., when reinforcements arrived, on which the Boers retired after having fired 320 rounds from their guns on the garrison, and kept up a constant rifle-fire day and night. The garrison held a mile and a half of front.

"On receiving the news of the investment being raised, the Lieut.-Gen. wired as follows to Col. Oakes, commanding 1st Worcesters, at Ficksburg:—"R. 32, Harrismith, Sept. 5, 1900. The whole division joins me in hearty congratulations on, and sincere admiration of, the plucky defence made by the Worcesters and Imperial Yeomanry at Ladybrand. They have gallantly upheld their motto, and set an example to the whole of us, of what infantry, well entrenched, can do against overwhelming odds. I beg you will convey above to the officer commanding the Worcesters at Ladybrand, and the Imperial Yeomanry there.

"I am publishing a special Divisional Order to-day with reference to the above, to be read at the head of every company, troop, and battery in the Division. Please wire me how the wounded are doing."

"The following reply has been received from Col. Oakes, Sept. 5, F. 5.—"Your R. 32 of Sept. 5 much appreciated. Name of officer commanding company of Worcesters at Ladybrand, Lieut. E. W. Moss. Further report of wounded not yet received."

"The Lieut.-General has the greatest satisfaction in publishing the above to the Division, and considers the Ladybrand garrison has shown that a small body of infantry, armed with magazine rifles, and with smokeless powder, even when unsupported by artillery, can, when properly entrenched, successfully withstand continuous shell fire, and the attacks of the enemy in greatly superior numbers.

"By order—G. E. Harley, Colonel,
"G.S.O., 8 Division."

"The above is to be read at the head of every company, troop, and battery in the Division."

East Lancashire Regiment (30th)—2nd Lieut. Thackwell, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home; Capt. J. McM. Roberts, 3rd Batn., is seriously ill with enteric, Brandfort, Nov. 9.

East Surrey Regiment (31st)—2nd Lieut. G. Parnell, 3rd Batn., is appointed for duty with the 1st Royal Home Counties Reserve Regt.; and 2nd Lieut. G. L. Watson, 3rd Batn., for duty at Chichester with the Royal Sussex Regiment; Lieut. R. D. de Q. Child, 3rd Batn., is to be appointed to a direct commission in the West India Regiment; Captain Wilson is appointed Assistant-Inspector of Army Signalling, Madras and Bombay commands, temporarily.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd)—Captain Pike, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 8 in the Nineveh, on passage home.

West Riding Regiment (33rd)—Captain Cobb, employed in British Guiana Police, rejoins the 2nd Batn. in Rangoon.

Royal Sussex Regiment (35th)—Major H. B. Scaife, 1st Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 8 in the Nineveh, invalided.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th)—Lieut.-Col. H. Savage has been granted an extension of command of the 1st Batn.

Royal Berkshire Regiment (49th)—Major W. K. McClintock, who has recently been appointed second in command of the 1st Batn. at Gibraltar, saw considerable service with that battalion, both in Egypt and the Soudan between 1882 and 1886. In the latter part of the previous campaign he acted as transport officer, and was present at the surrender of Kafr Dowar. In 1885 he fought in the Eastern Soudan, became Assistant Provost Marshal, and afterwards served in the Upper Nile operations.

King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry (51st)—Major H. Earle, D.S.O., 2nd Batn., left Cape Town in the Tantallon Castle, on Nov. 6, on passage home. Lieut. R. J. McMullen has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

King's Shropshire Light Infantry (53rd)—Major Reade left Cape Town on Nov. 8, in the Nineveh, on passage home. Capt. J. J. White has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Middlesex Regiment (57th)—2nd Lieut. B. C. Thompson, 2nd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut.-Col. G. R. Rushbrooke, 6th Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa. The fourth annual dinner of present and past members of the sergeants' messes, was held at the Horse Shoe Hotel, Tottenham Court Road, W., on the 9th inst. Representatives of the newly formed 3rd and 4th Batns. attended, this being the first occasion that these have been associated with their Army comrades. After dinner a smoking concert followed, and great enthusiasm was evoked by the reading of a letter from Lieut.-Col. Ballers, O.C. 3rd Batn., wishing the gathering every success.

King's Royal Rifle Corps (60th)—Lieut. Blundell, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 6, in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home.

Manchester Regiment (63rd)—2nd Lieut. H. G. W. Woodhouse, 2nd Batn., who died of wounds near Vrede on the 9th inst., joined his regiment on April 18 last.

About

LEMCO

the Soldier's Mainstay.

Lemco is the original Liebig Company's Extract, the only meat extract manufactured under the supervision of J. v. Liebig and his successors. Every jar bears his signature in blue.

Her Majesty's Government has ordered for the front enormous quantities of Lemco. The entire product of thousands of selected bullocks has been supplied in special regulation tins. See the name "Lemco" (the manufacturers' initials) on every jar of

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT.

North Staffordshire Regiment (64th).—Capt. G. L. Seckham, 3rd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa. 2nd Lieut. Llewellyn, 1st Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Capt. R. C. Saville, 2nd Batn., and Capt. F. Sitwell, 3rd Batn., have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Seaforth Highlanders (72nd).—Capt. Murray left Cape Town in the Nineveh on Nov. 8, on passage home.

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—Capt. E. Craig-Brown, Lieuts. J. Orr and A. B. Robertson have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Irish Rifles (83rd).—Capt. Brennan left Cape Town for England on Nov. 8 in the Nineveh, invalided.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st).—Capt. Campbell, 1st Batn., left Cape Town for England on Nov. 8 in the Nineveh, invalided. Lieut. A. Cunningham, 4th Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—Lieut. Bert, 2nd Batn., has died at Kasauli, from enteric fever.

Royal Dublin Fusiliers (102nd).—Capt. Cory, 2nd Batn., is reported dangerously ill at Pinetown. Major Sir F. Shaw and 2nd Lieut. R. Robinson, 5th Batn., have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Rifle Brigade.—Lieut. C. D. D. Brown, 7th Batn., is appointed for duty at the Curragh.

Army Service Corps.—Col. J. W. B. Parkin has this week completed 10 years' service as a regimental lieut.-colonel, and should, in the ordinary course, be retired. It is quite possible, however, that he may be retained as a supernumerary. Col. Parkin has given 27 years to the Service. It was during his tenure of the post of D.A.A.G. at Aldershot in 1898 that he reached his present rank by brevet, and for the past 12 months he has been officiating as A.A.G. temporarily in the same district. He has seen no war service. Major A. H. Thomas has been discharged to duty in South Africa. 2nd Lieuts. Welwood and Thomas left Cape Town on Oct. 6 in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home. Major Gilpin left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle. Lieut. Guthrie-Smith left Cape Town on Nov. 8 in the Nineveh, on passage home.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Surg.-Gen. Stephenson, Col. Galwey, and Major Babbie, V.C. left Cape Town on Nov. 6, on passage home, in the Tantallon Castle. Lieut.-Col. F. W. Trevor, is taken on the strength of the Dublin District. Major Harris left Cape Town for England on Nov. 8, in the Nineveh. Capt. W. A. Ward has joined the Home District for duty. Major J. G. Black, who is suffering from enteric at Newcastle, is reported as "improving."

Staff.—Major-Gen. Sir Edwin Collen, K.C.I.E., will probably remain in Simla till nearly the end of November, and will then visit various places in Rajputana and Central India before going to Calcutta. Gen. Sir F. Clery, Gen. Brabazon, Gen. Pole-Carew, and Viscount Valentia are passengers on the steamship Moor. Major-Gens. Howard and Brocklehurst, Col. Ward, Lieut.-Col. Hobbs, Majors Denison and Furse, Capt. Puckle, Harrison, Buchanan, Sheppard, Harper, Greenfield, and Lord Settrington left Cape Town on Nov. 6, in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home.

Indian Staff Corps.—Lieut. Coke left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home. Capt. W. E. Lloyd left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home. Capt. Cheyne left Cape Town on Nov. 8 in the Nineveh, invalided.

Army Chaplains' Department.—The Rev. F. Bethune N. Norman-Lee, M.A., F.R.G.S., Chaplain to the Forces, late Chaplain to the 6th Division Field Force, South Africa, has been selected by the Secretary of State, as Chaplain in charge of St. George's Church, Aldershot, and will take up his duties on Monday, the 19th inst. Rev. Canon Knox-Little left Cape Town on Nov. 7 in the Hawarden Castle, on passage home.

Army Veterinary Department.—Lieut.-Col. Rayment left Cape Town on Nov. 8 in the Nineveh, for England, invalided.

Remount Department.—Capt. Perry left Cape Town on Nov. 6 in the Tantallon Castle, on passage home.

Reserve of Officers.—Lieut.-Col. Brown left Cape Town for England on Nov. 10 in the steamship Urmston Grange, on passage home.

Volunteers.

Twenty out of 40 officers of the 3rd Lanarkshire Volunteers, the crack Glasgow regiment, on Nov. 13 tendered their resignations owing to Col. Morton having had his services prolonged for two years. He was due to retire this year, but the War Office granted an extension. He is said to have been long out of harmony with the officers, and his retention has caused the senior officers to resign. As the regiment is now officered by juniors, unless the War Office intervenes disbandment must follow.

The annual returns rendered to the War Office by the 19th Middlesex (Bloomsbury) Rifles, in respect of enrolled strength and efficiency for the official year which terminated on the 31st ult., show that the former was 1,048, of which number 1,002 (a record) are efficient, including 71 proficient officers and sergeants. In musketry the figure of merit is 89, and there are 174 marksmen.

The wave of military enthusiasm that has passed over the land has had a wonderful effect on the Volunteer force. Not only is the total number of Volunteers on the roll likely to be vastly increased, but the proportion of efficient thereto will in all probability be unprecedented. It seems that the year 1895 to 1896 has hitherto been the record one, but the 229,034 efficient that were then reported, and the 223,991 of last year, will be altogether eclipsed by this year's return. In addition to the great increase in numbers in metropolitan and other corps, fresh battalions have been formed, notably in Huntingdonshire, where formerly none existed.

THE Lads' Drill Association has made great strides in the 18 months during which it has been established. Its object is twofold: "To encourage the systematic teaching of military and physical drill in all schools" and "to establish the formation of cadet battalions and corps throughout the country." Both the Education Department and the War Office have been approached with a view of the two Departments conferring, and the former Department have taken up the matter enthusiastically. The idea is that the training of boys in military and physical drill would inculcate habits of obedience, smartness, and respect for authority, would quicken their sense of national and civic duty, and would, moreover, be of great physical benefit to them. Lord Meath is president of the Association, and the secretary is Major W. Elliot, 44, Harrington Gardens, S.W.

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.45, and Saturday mornings at 2.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

A cup of Bovril now and then
Is relished by all kinds of men.

The Wonderful Success of Bovril and its almost universal use are due to its unique sustaining and stimulating properties, the facility with which it is prepared, and the great variety of ways in which it can be used to advantage.

Choice lean beef is recognised as one of the most nourishing of foods, and Bovril contains in the highest form of concentration ALL the essential principles of the finest Beef that the world produces. It consists not only of the stimulating extracts (of which Beef Tea and ordinary beef extracts consist alone), but, what is of vastly more importance, of the albumens and fibrines which constitute the vitalising and sustaining features of beef.

Hence Bovril is a valuable substitute for regular meals when these cannot readily be obtained; an invigorator and fortifier of the system against the changes and inclemencies of the weather; a protector against the ravages of disease; and a strengthener in convalescence.

Reviews.

SOME MAGAZINES AND REVIEWS.

The Nineteenth Century, which has reached us rather late, is a very important number. It bears very strongly the impress of that "Administrative Reform Association" which the magazine has successfully inaugurated. Mr. Marriott deals with "Cabinet Government or Departmentalism." He traces a strong tendency, deduced from the action of Lord Salisbury in holding the offices of Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary—a condition which no longer prevails—towards the departmentalism which he favours, and he regards the change as a reversion to a former type. Mr. Marriott's attitude will be understood from the question he puts: "Is the principle of Cabinet solidarity and mutual responsibility worth contending for?" There is a symposium upon the war, in which Lord Thring leads off with a proposal that the War Office shall be placed in commission, by which he means that there shall be a Military Board analogous to the Board of Admiralty, consisting of the Secretary for War, the Commander-in-Chief, and the heads of military and civil branches. If this were done his lordship believes that the purging of the War Office from its defects would be almost automatic. Lord Thring imputes to Sandhurst a dull and uninspiring routine, and censures the manner in which the cavalry candidate is left out in the cold, and incidentally there is a denunciation of regimental extravagance. Most valuable is Col. Charles à Court's article, embodying "Suggestions from the Front." It was not the numbers nor the armaments of the Boers, he says, that were under-estimated, for the forecast of the Intelligence Department was accurate; but that no one realised the magnitude of our task in its broader aspects, and in its relations to distance, area, difficulties of country, and the existence of a hostile population, and he proposes the creation of "a chief of the staff's office" as supplying a remedy. At the present time, as Col. à Court says with conspicuous truth, there exists no real policy, and no one can say what is the aim or object our military organisation desires to attain, nor whether we should have 100 battalions rather than 200. He is satisfied with the organisation of the infantry division; he would have a battery of guns answering to the Vickers-Maxims of the Boers with the divisional artillery; he thinks we want more engineers; and he has a good deal to say, in relation to the cavalry, of the extreme value of a mounted infantry arm. But we cannot follow Col. à Court in his very deeply interesting discussion of various points. The symposium is concluded by an article on "Our Belated Battleships," by Mr. A. S. Hurd, in which some striking facts are embodied. The only other article to which we can draw attention is that of Mr. Somers Somerset on the French Military Manœuvres, in which he confirms all that was said by the Times correspondent concerning the failure to carry out strategic exercises, and the extraordinary tactics which permitted men to attack in close formation across open ground. "So entirely incomprehensible did these tactics appear that I made the most diligent inquiries to assure myself that I was not dreaming; nor even when I had been assured that my suppositions had been quite correct could I bring myself to realise that a high European training could still adhere to tactics which had been so disastrously employed by the Khalifa."

We have received the first number of the Imperial and Colonial Magazine, which want of space forbids us to deal with, but of which we may say that it is varied in its home and colonial interests, and that it promises well for the future; and we have also before us an early number of the Northern Counties Magazine, in which there is a good deal of vigour and a great deal of interest, especially in an article upon Elswick. The October number of the North American Review is largely devoted to the claims of the rival candidates in the Presidential election.

CAPT. MAHAN ON THE SOUTH AFRICAN WAR.

With something of eager curiosity must every reader open the story of The War in South Africa, by Capt. A. T. Mahan, U.S.N. (Sampson Low and Co.). The gallant and accomplished author has written works of such far-reaching importance and world-wide influence that it is natural, perhaps, to look for a masterly treatise from his hand. Those who approach his new volume with such expectations are likely to be disappointed. They will find a brief and careful narrative, embodying some criticism, and with many flashes of the genius of its author. But, in the nature of the case, Capt. Mahan could not, perhaps, tell us much that is new. He wrote primarily for American readers, and they will learn a very great deal from his pages. The same will be true also of many Englishmen, but those whose business it has been to follow the events in South Africa will not find any great additions to their knowledge in these pages. Capt. Mahan has generous sympathy with our difficulties, and warm appreciation of the high qualities which our soldiers have displayed, but he has, perhaps, a still greater sympathy with the Boers, for he speaks in one place of the "mighty enginery" set in motion to crush their liberties. When he criticises, he does it with studious moderation. Occasionally the seaman flashes out, as where the gallant author contrasts the illusive movements of the Boers with the battle tactics which Clerk has attributed to the French in their naval operations, with the comment that "the mastery of the sea remained with the British, whose blindly headlong attacks with their ships resembled in much the free and often foolish exposure of their troops in the beginning of the present war; nevertheless, the temper is one which wins, nor is there any necessary incompatibility between a vigorous initiative and reasonable caution." The chief fault Capt. Mahan ascribes to the Boers is that they failed to recognise the condition arising out of their ultimate inferiority, and to appreciate the fact that it was only by rushing the campaign at the beginning that they had any chance of final victory. "Desperate conditions require desperate remedies," as Nelson said, and therefore the opening weeks of the war decided its character and issue. The fault which he finds in our strategic dispositions is that when we were on the defensive we advanced our front of operations to a point at which we could not secure our communications. We did so for political reasons, but, it must be observed, for adequate military reasons also. In regard to Ladysmith, Capt. Mahan points out that the position was clearly indicated for the defence. The narrative is lucid and accurate, and such criticism as it offers does not go outside the lines of official despatches. The concluding chapter, especially the part concerned with the advance from Paardeberg to Bloemfontein and Pretoria, is very slight. Capt. Mahan's volume will certainly command the suffrages, as it deserves to do, of a large number of readers, and perhaps nowhere does there exist in brief compass so well-written a narrative of the campaign.

"THE THIN RED LINE."

Amid the great outpouring, or rather veritable cataract, of literature concerning South Africa, it is quite refreshing to have, from the hand of Major Arthur Griffiths, a stirring story of the Crimean War. It may safely be said that what he does not know of the ways and lives of criminals is not worth knowing, and having himself fought in the actions of 1854 he has been able to make a most ingenious and readable compound of the two. The murder in a gambling hell in Paris is the beginning of a series of dramatic happenings, developed out of a thickening plot, with an adventures for its villain, that finds its revenges in the envoi. Although the story is historical, and pictures scenes at the Alma, Balaclava, and other actions in the Crimea, it is truly human in its reality and character. Cyprien Vergette, the adventurer in question, after wronging and deserting her husband, plunges into an ambitious career, which is marked in its progress by crime, and the gallant hero of noble birth, who rises from the ranks for his gallantry in the war, and the sweet heroine whose romantic life adds a charm to the book, are caught in the toils. But it would be doing injustice to Major Griffiths' ingenuity to leave the reader under the impression that he allows them to remain there. On the contrary all ends happily, and those who are led on, as all who open the book will be, from the first page to the last, will have enjoyed the many strange scenes in Paris, at Gibraltar, and in the Crimea, which it presents, and will, besides, have gained a very good idea of the operations of 1854-5. It is a capital story of adventure and crime which should have wide popularity.

BRIEF NOTICES.

To Blackwood's "English Classics" has been added Carlyle's Essay on Burns. It may be commended to students.

We have also received Caged! by Headon Hill (Ward, Lock and Co.), being the romance of a lunatic asylum, very full of incident and sensation; The Chase of the Ruby, by Richard Marsh (Skeffington and Son), a passable society story; and The Adventures of a Journalist, by Herbert Cadett (Sands and Co.), a readable tale of varied character.

The World Wide Atlas of Modern Geography, Political and Physical (W. and A. K. Johnston) is excellent in many ways. The maps—128 in number—are clear and accurate, and the number of minor plans included is surprising. There is, for example, one of Bombay (island and town) on the scale of one mile to an inch, and this is not an isolated example of the excellent things in the book. There is a complete index, and an admirable introduction by Mr. Scott Keltie. This is the fifth edition.

Prejudged, by Florence Montgomery (Macmillan and Co.), is a novel by the author of "Misunderstood." A gentleman of unprepossessing appearance impresses the lady with considerable distaste, and thus he is prejudged. But, as the experienced novel reader may divine, he is received into favour later on, and all ends happily. It is a light and readable story, though it may not add to the author's literary reputation.

Mr. Clark Russell's new story, The Pretty Polly (Chatto and Windus), if not one of his best, is still a very moving history, full of incident. The four boys who are sent afloat by their father are the heroes of many exploits, and make acquaintance with a marvellous submarine boat. The imagination of writers of sea stories must be sadly taxed to discover new sensations, but Mr. Clark Russell has hit upon a fresh idea, and has carried it out well. The thousands of readers whom he has delighted will welcome a new book from his pen.

Literary.

Tenth and Cheap Edition, Price 6d. IN A CONNING TOWER; or, How I took H.M.S. "Majestic" into Action.

BY
H. O. ARNOLD-FORSTER, M.P.,

Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty.

With original Illustrations.

"A vivid description of life in a man-of-war."—The Times, November 8, 1900.

"Remarkably clever."—Army and Navy Gazette.

"Terribly realistic and vividly portrayed."—Admiralty Gazette.

"A thrilling account of an imaginary battle at sea."—Leeds Mercury.

CASELL & COMPANY, LTD., and all Booksellers.

NOTICE.

THE FIRST EDITION OF

THE WAR OFFICE, THE ARMY, AND THE EMPIRE.

BY

H. O. ARNOLD-FORSTER, M.P.,

With a Preface by

LORD ROSEBURY, K.G.,

Is Already Exhausted. Second Impression
Just Ready.

Price 1s., or in Cloth, 1s. 6d.

CASELL & COMPANY, LTD., and all Booksellers.

JUST PUBLISHED. Beautifully printed in red and black and handsomely bound in leather, price 6s. With 14 Full-page Illustrations.

THE TALE OF A FIELD HOSPITAL

BY

FREDERICK TREVES, F.R.C.S.

"Mr. Treves' moving tale is not all of the horrors of war either; it has its humorous side also. Above all, it is superbly human and thoroughly English. Therefore it is one of the most refreshing of books."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Mr. Treves' book, with its many excellent photographs of the scenes amid which he lived and laboured in South Africa, is a welcome fresh addition to the already large library of publications about the war."—Morning Post.

CASELL & COMPANY, LTD.,

London, Paris, New York, and Melbourne.

NEW AND CHEAPER IMPRESSION.

2 vols. 8vo, 16s. net.

STONEWALL JACKSON AND THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR.

By Lieut.-Col. G. F. R. HENDERSON.

With an Introduction by Field-Marshal the Right Hon. Viscount WOLSELEY, K.P., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., &c.

With 2 Portraits and 33 Maps and Plans.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

NOW READY.

A list of the Coloured Plates forming the series of
TYPES OF THE INDIAN ARMY
which will be issued as supplements to this paper, commencing January 5, 1901.

ALSO READY.

A complete list of the
TYPES OF THE BRITISH ARMY
which have been issued with the
"ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sent Post Free on Application.

LONDON: 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.

ST. PAULI

(BREWERY: BREMEN)

LAGER OR PILSENER BEER.

SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER IN THE MARKET.

ANNUAL EXPORT, 12,000,000 BOTTLES.

Supplied to all the Principal LONDON Clubs.

The Messes of the British and German Navies, &c., &c.

AGENTS IN—

EUROPE:ALDERSHOT.
ATHENS.
CHATHAM.
CONSTANTINOPLE.
GENOA.
GIBRALTAR.
LISBON.
MALTA.
NAPLES.
PORTSMOUTH.
PLYMOUTH.ASIA:ADEN.
BAGHDAD.
BANGKOK.
BOMBAY.
BUSHIRE.
CALCUTTA.
CEYLON.
HONG KONG.
KARACHI.
MADRAS.
MAURITIUS.
NOVA GOA.
PENANG.
RANGOON.
SHANGHAI.
SINGAPORE.
TEHERAN.AFRICA:ALEXANDRIA.
BEYROUTH.
BONNY.
CAIRO.
MASSOWAH.
MOMBASA.
SUAKIM.
SUZ.
PORT SAID.
TANGIERS.
AMERICA:
ANTIGUA.
BARBADOS.
DEMERARA.
JAMAICA.
MONTEVIDEO.
ST. LUCIA.
TRINIDAD.AUSTRALIA:
ADELAIDE.
BRISBANE.
MELBOURNE.
PERTH.
SYDNEY.
NAPIER.

And all the Principal NAVAL and MILITARY Stations.

The ST. PAULI BREWERIES CO., Limited
8, Great Winchester Street, London, E.C.JEROME SACCONE,

LIMITED,

GIBRALTAR,
WINE, SPIRIT, & CIGAR
MERCHANTS

TO THE

ARMY & NAVY.

LONDON HOUSE:

15, COCKSPUR STREET.

Wine Shipped FREIGHT FREE to any port in the Mediterranean, and half-freight to India and the Cape.Telegraphic Addresses:
"Saccone, Gibraltar." "Saccone, London."THE SATURDAY REVIEW

OF

Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review
are treated only by Naval and Military men.The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:

8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.

HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,

KILTS, TREWS,

TARTAN PANTALOONS.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING
MILK

AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A PERFECTUNSWEETENED*CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.

AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK.

Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS

ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.

WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.

Apply for particulars, sample, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,

144, New Bond Street,

LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.*Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.*H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOXAppropriately arranged for everyday as a lasting memento.PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.*SHELTON & BALL,

Military and Court Tailors,

180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

(Opposite Burlington Gardens.)

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).THREE CHEERS FOR THE*RED*WHITE*& BLUE*COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.THORNHILL, PLYMOUTH.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION, OCTOBER, 1900.

CAPTAIN S. PRICE MUNRO

Announces the Following LIST of SUCCESSES gained by his Pupils at the above Examination:—

	Marks.
FIRST.—Mr. Donald Stuart, West of Scotland Art.	18,946
4th.—Mr. W. B. Duncan, Edinburgh Art.	15,330
6th.—Mr. J. H. B. Millar, Edinburgh Art.	14,104
11th.—Mr. F. Rashleigh, Cornwall and Devon Miners' Art.	12,879
15th.—Mr. P. J. B. Heelas, Cornwall & Devon Miners' Art.	11,772
17th.—Mr. E. Douglas-Jones, West of Scotland Art.	11,464
20th.—Mr. P. P. Budge, West of Scotland Art.	10,127
Thus ONE-THIRD of the total number of Vacancies for Royal Artillery were secured by Pupils of Thornhill.
5th.—Mr. R. L. Lloyd, 4th Royal Welsh Fusiliers	16,417
8th.—Mr. R. V. Barker, 4th Royal Welsh Fusiliers	15,710
11th.—Mr. C. H. Tempest-Whitehead, 4th Highland L.I.	15,508
17th.—Mr. G. B. Murray, 3rd Duke of Cornwall's L.I.	14,881
27th.—Mr. T. A. Welsh, 3rd Somerset L.I.	13,583
46th.—Mr. F. J. Richardson, 3rd Somerset L.I.	12,194

* Passed under Old Regulations.

WORK NOW IN FULL PROGRESS.

For Woolwich, Sandhurst, Militia Competitive, and all Army and University Examinations.TRANSVAAL WAR.DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT THE FRONT A SUPPLY OFBRAND'S*MEAT*LOZENGES.*Sustaining and Invigorating.

In Hermetically Sealed Boxes, Convenient for the Pocket.

BRAND & CO., Ltd.,MAYFAIR, LONDON.*THE Burton Brewery*COMPANY, LIMITED,

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.

BONDERS & BLENTERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.

Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO

Mr. E. RUDGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street,
Alexandria, Egypt.DAY & MARTIN, LIMITED.

GOLD MEDAL. PARIS, 1900.

POTCHEFSTROOM.

Messrs. DAY & MARTIN. Aug. 1, 1900.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been requested by a few comrades to testify
as to the remarkable qualities of your "dubbin" as supplied to the troops by H. M. Government.Not only for preserving our boots, but for applying to the feet to prevent blisters; as fat for cooking chupatties, and for burning as candles, it is found of great service to "Tommy Atkins at the front."You have our permission to make any use you think fit of this testimonial.

Hoping it may be of some use to you,

I beg to remain,

Yours truly,

A VOLUNTEER.

2nd Northants, Field Force, South Africa.

The original letter can be seen at the Offices of DAY
& MARTIN, LTD., Borough Road, London, S.E.DAY & MARTIN'S DUBBINIs Waterproof and absolutely the best Article for use on Shooting and Fishing Boots.Notices.THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.All EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.	TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year... .. £1 8 0	One Year... .. £1 12 6
Six Months... .. 0 14 0	Six Months... .. 0 16 6
Three Months... .. 0 7 0	Three Months... .. 0 8 6

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid
in advance.RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
will be forwarded on application.BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—
Price 5s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED FOR REVIEWA Century of Our Sea Story (Murray). The Law of Husband and Wife (Wilson). With Buller in Natal;
Out with Garibaldi; In the Irish Brigade; all by Henry.
With Rifle and Bayonet; In the King's Service, both by Capt. Brereton (Blackie). Parcel of Children's Illustrated Story-Books (Dean). Australia (Kegan Paul).
Parcel of Christmas Cards and Games (Faulkner).
The Handy Man (Fisher Unwin). Bailey's Hunting Directory, 1900-1901 (Vinton & Co.).Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1900.

THE ADMIRALTY BOARD.IT was an exceedingly happy notion on the part of the Times to publish at the present moment, and apropos Mr. Goschen's speech at the Guildhall, a table showing that the First Lord is indeed surrounded by naval officers
"fresh from the Service." The table is in every way most valuable, and should be informing not only to the interested civilian, but to many a naval man also who has not taken the trouble to keep his knowledge up to date. We trust it will be attentively scanned by those critics who seem to imagine that the Navy is ruled almost exclusively by fossilised admirals and clerks entirely out of touch with the Service. The table shows that Mr. Goschen has surrounded himself with men of varied experience in all departments of the active service at sea, but it is as well that we should remember that in such matters as this much depends upon the personality, the sentiments, and wishes of the First Lord himself. There must be few of the older men in the Service who do not remember when a very different state of things ruled at Whitehall. Mr. Goschen in kindly fashion alluded to Mr. Punch's cartoon of twenty-eight years ago, when he himself was portrayed as the man at the wheel in rough weather, cheerily greeted by the veteran humourist, "Hold on, sir, hold on; you will soon find your sea legs;" and he offered the same advice to Lord Selborne. But we cannot help thinking that when Mr. Goschen said that "the Admiralty is not a phantom Board," he must have had in his mind another cartoon of Tenniel's in which Mr. Childers was represented at the head of the Board surrounded by the ghosts of admirals in uniform. The Board was filled with phantoms so far as Mr. Childers was able to make it so, and he certainly did not consider, as Mr. Goschen has, that the Naval Lords are "the comrades and the colleagues of the First Lord of the Admiralty and his subordinates, to lighten and share his task, and to act as partners in the ubiquitous anxieties which he has to undergo, predominant partners in any success which may ever be achieved." The one-man control which Mr. Childers established no longer obtains, and for his share in bringing about the re-establishment of a Board such as we now have, the Navy will never forget its indebtedness to Mr. Goschen.

The table which the Times has published we cannot spare the space to reproduce, but we may point out some of its most striking features. It will be remembered that when the Board was reconstituted some months since, we then drew attention to the closeness of touch with the Service which had been kept by successive members since the passing of the great Naval Defence Act. Not only had we a succession of First Naval Lords who had come straight from important commands, but this was so also in the case of their colleagues. The continuity of this policy is shown in the table we have referred to, which notes that Lord Walter Kerr has come fresh from the command of the Channel Squadron, Admiral Douglas from that of the East Indies Squadron, and Admirals Wilson and Moore from the commands of important battleships in the Mediterranean. The Director of Naval Ordnance, like his successor that is to be, has been captain of the gunnery establishment at Portsmouth and previously in command of a battleship. The Admiral-Superintendent of Naval Reserves was but recently the second in command in the Mediterranean, and has now taken the First Reserve Squadron to sea. The Director of Naval Intelligence came direct from the command of a battleship, while the Deputy-Adjutant-General of Marines, Major-General Morris, filled the post of Colonel Commandant of Walmer Depot until he was called to the Admiralty. In minor, but highly responsible posts, we have the Assistant-Director of Torpedoes as lately afloat as 1899, the Assistant to the Admiral-Superintendent of Reserves coming straight from the command of the Squadron on the South-East Coast of America, while all three Assistant-Directors of Naval Intelligence have been filling important active service appointments within a few months. In a similar manner the recent sea service of the assistants to the Director of Naval Ordnance, and of the assistants to the Director of Naval Intelligence are traced in the table under consideration, these including no less than nine commanders and one lieutenant. There are also seven more marine officers employed at the Admiralty whose service afloat has been of recent date, thus manifesting in a manner beyond question the close touch which is maintained with the fleet.

It is possible and, indeed, extremely probable that the omission from this table of certain departments at the Admiralty will be the subject of comment, and, perhaps, criticism. So far as the Hydrographic and Transport departments are concerned, the circumstance that retired officers are mainly employed is a good reason for their omission. But with the Engineering branch this is not the case, and it would be interesting to see a similar table compiled in this connection. It is at least important that this branch should be closely in touch with the active service afloat, and we have no reason to suppose that it is not. There must be quite twenty or thirty naval engineer officers employed at the Admiralty, and as these officers have duties in connection with the provision of machinery for new ships, the necessity for their being fresh from employment in vessels at sea is obvious. Apart, however, from this aspect of the subject there can be no doubt that the administration of the Navy is in the hands of men who cannot fail to be aware of its needs and feelings. They will unquestionably be capable of assisting Lord Selborne to find his sea legs, or, in other words, to obtain that intimate touch with the active service afloat which is so essential to the efficient control of naval affairs. But something more than this is needed if the First Lord is to grapple successfully with those problems which are pressing for solution. Much will depend upon the support which Lord Selborne receives in the Cabinet when he makes those demands which must be made if we are to maintain our position of naval supremacy. We confess that we did not find in Lord Salisbury's speech at the Mansion House much assurance for confidence in this direction. For the moment, however, we must have patience and wait for the official announcement in connection with the Estimates which will enable the country to judge the Government's naval policy.

THE NAVAL EXHIBITION AT THE HAGUE.

THE great Exhibition in Paris, the intense pre-occupation of Englishmen in South African and Chinese affairs, and the notion that the Dutch might show some hostility to English visitors, have together doubtless been the cause, as Professor Laughton suggests in the Monthly Review, of the small amount of attention that has been devoted in this country to the Naval Exhibition at the Hague. Yet, the very close connection which has existed between England and the Netherlands, historically and commercially, should lend particular interest to this modest display of interesting things. Like the Naval Exhibition at Chelsea, the display at the Hague owed little to official help; but unlike it, those who organised and conducted it have been mostly civilians. The Queen of the Netherlands, who lent an annexe of the Prince of Orange's palace to the committee, consented to be the patron, and the Minister of the Navy to be the honorary president; but, otherwise, neither the official nor the naval element was strong. Professor Laughton compares the Exhibition to what was officially called the "Arts Section" at Chelsea, and it has had none of the attractive side-shows which were a feature there, and which contributed much to financial success. There has been nothing at the Hague to compare with the "Sons of Neptune," the sea fights, the model of the Victory, or the unhistorical panorama of Trafalgar.

It was, however, no small achievement to bring together under one roof portraits and memorials to the number of more than 2,300, drawn largely from private collections, which have never before been accessible to the public, and thus an unrivalled opportunity was presented to the naval student. He might see many portraits of the Tromps, De Witt, Ruyter, Evertsen, and many more Dutchmen whose names are well known in our naval history. More interesting even than these, were the portraits of the captains and less known admirals, many of whom were engaged against us in the Dutch wars, but whose names have scarcely appeared in our histories. When the birth of the independent Netherlands may be said to have been brought about, by the capture, in 1572, of the Briel, by the so-called "Water beggars," we know that they were commanded by Count Willem van der Mark. But how few have ever heard of Balthasar van Ripperda, Jacob de Rijk, or even the Vice-Admiral Van Treslong, who had a more effective share in the famous capture than Van der Mark himself. Professor Laughton remarks that Treslong belonged to a Dutch family which has given many of its members to the Navy, and stands out in Dutch history much as the Haddocks, the Parkers and the Harveys do in our own. Again, very little is known among us of the Dutchmen who fought against the Spaniards in 1588. The fate of the San Mateo is recorded, and we know how she was pounded by our shot at Gravelines, but she was captured by the Dutch under Pieter van der Does, after a stubborn resistance; and Professor Laughton journeyed to the Museum at Leyden to see her flag, which has been preserved, though not a fragment exists of an Armada flag captured by the English. Its colours have almost entirely faded, but the design remains—a crucifix, with the letters I.N.R.I.; while the inscription below, though frayed away, is said to have been Exurge Christe et judica causam tuam.

An exhibition which contains such interesting things as that at the Hague deserved wider support than it appears to have received. It may be, as Professor Laughton says, that the general public, whether Dutch or English, has not much practical enthusiasm for history. However that may be, there was no wild rush of visitors; and although the balance of profit was to go for the benefit of the "Prins Hendrik Stichting"—a benevolent refuge for old sailors—it is to be feared that the institution will benefit very little.

Navv Notes.

In most of the London papers, and in many of those in the provinces, there have been letters and articles in reference to the treatment of the midshipmen landed in South Africa and China, respectively, in regard to rewards. In several of these we notice a deduction from our remarks last week which seems to us wholly unwarranted. We had no intention of imputing to the Board of Admiralty injustice in this matter, since, so far as our information carried us, both sets of officers had been treated alike. We were under the impression, it is true, that all the midshipmen landed in South Africa had been mentioned in despatches, whereas it now appears that out of the thirty survivors of those landed the names of ten were omitted. The Admiralty, it is clear, had decided to treat exactly alike all those who had been recommended by their senior officers. But the incidence of this decision appeared to us to result in a difference of treatment which had an element of injustice in it. That this should be the case is no reflection upon the Board or upon the admirals respectively in command of the two squadrons from which the youngsters were landed. Now that we know that 75 per cent. of those landed in South Africa are noted as against only 10 per cent. of those landed in China, the position is different to that which we reviewed last week. It is not the case, as was supposed by many, that it was the number that frightened the authorities, and it is still possible, therefore, that if Sir Edward Seymour sees fit to increase the list of those recommended that the Admiralty will recognise the later additions.

In the Naval and Military Record a further mistake is made in this connection which should not go uncorrected. Our contemporary says "the eight (midshipmen) thus selected for reward are those who shared in the perils of Admiral Seymour's gallant attempt to reach Peking, and as this was the most hazardous enterprise of the entire operations the selection seems quite just." We have no desire to draw any comparison between the hazards of the various operations, none of which were, of course, so prolonged as those in South Africa. But it is an error to suppose that the eight midshipmen noted were with Admiral Seymour in his attempt to reach Peking. Two out of the eight, Mr. W. B. C. Jones, and Mr. E. O. B. S. Osborne, both of the Centurion, are the only midshipmen, out of twenty-five who participated in the expedition, who have been noted. The other six are drawn from the midshipmen who saw service at Taku and Tien-tsin. Four of them, Mr. E. C. Mayne, Mr. C. C. Dix, Mr. B. J. D. Guy, and Mr. L. H. Shaw belong to the Barfleur, and Mr. G. Gipps and Mr. D. de C. A. Herbert belong to the Orlando. Three of these latter are noted because they are mentioned in the despatches of Commander Cradock, and the others because they were brought to the notice of Admiral Seymour by Captain Bayly and other officers. It would be altogether unfair if the Service was led to believe that the eight midshipmen noted for service in China had been drawn from the flagship alone, and from those who accompanied the Admiral. The facts are altogether the other way.

The promotion to Fleet-Paymaster of Staff Paymaster F. C. Alton, for his services in China, is the grant of a step in rank from which no advantage accrues other than that when he relinquishes his present appointment as Secretary to Sir Edward Seymour he need not alter his uniform. This is, we believe, the first instance of an accountant officer being advanced to the highest grade of his branch on the active list without acquiring the requisite seniority. It carries, however, no increase of pay, nor will Mr. Alton be better off in other respects than if he were still a Staff-Paymaster. The case calls to mind that of the late Fleet-Engineer H. G. Bourke, who was similarly promoted in 1889, after the Caliope's escape from Apia Bay. But his advancement did carry the prospective advantage of becoming an inspector of machinery, whereas in this instance Mr. Alton must remain a Fleet-Paymaster until he is compulsorily retired sixteen years hence. It would seem only right that when a paymaster's services deserve special recognition, some substantial method of awarding it should be devised such as obtains in other branches of the Service.

The typhoon which struck Hong Kong on Saturday last appears to have been an exceptionally bad one. The sinking of the Sandpiper gunboat during its height might have been more disastrous than it fortunately was. Lieut.-Commander H. D. Wilkin appears to have displayed exceptional skill and daring in rescuing the officers and men of the ill-fated ship. The operation must have been most dangerous, as a furious sea was running, and large quantities of wreckage impeded action. In spite, however, of these drawbacks, Lieut. Wilkin was able to effect his purpose, and, with the exception of one man, the whole of the ship's company of the gunboat was saved. Lieut.-Commander Wilkin was awarded the D.S.O. in 1893 for his services in the River Gambia, while commanding the Widgeon. He may reasonably expect, therefore, that promotion will reward his gallant and successful achievement.

A correspondent writes:—"The officers of the Queen's Regiment have collectively presented to the officers' mess, H.M.S. Excellent, Whale Island, an interesting souvenir of the period when the Royal Navy and the regiment fought side by side. It is an engraving of Lord Howe's victory of June 1, 1794, and depicts, on the deck of the Queen Charlotte, Lord Howe's flag-ship, the death of Lieut. Neville, of the Queen's. The engraving is by D. Orme, date 1795, after a painting by M. Brown. It is to be regretted that no trace can be found of the original painting, which, the Britannic Magazine of 1796, on publishing a complete key to the picture, calls 'the magnificent historical picture, painted under the patronage of His Majesty and the Lords of the Admiralty.' The same magazine also states that the painting 'was inspected by their Majesties, who were particularly pleased with the portraits of the officers.' The Royal Navy and the Queen's have always been mindful of their comradeship in the 'brave days of old,' and the pleasing incident recorded above will tend to cement the mutual good feeling which exists between them."

A telegram from Newfoundland announces that fifty Colonial fishermen, forming the first contingent of the Naval Reserve, embarked in the Charybdis last week for a six months' cruise in the West Indies. This may be called the first step in the formation of a Reserve of men for the Navy furnished by the Colonies. The example of Canada will, we trust, be followed before long by other Colonies. In this connection may be noted the proposals which have been laid before the New Zealand Legislature for the provision of both a military and a naval Reserve. With regard to the latter, the Defence Committee appointed to consider the matter have recommended that negotiations be opened up by the Government of New Zealand with the Commonwealth of Australia and the Imperial Government with a view of ascertaining whether some satisfactory arrangements can be made upon the subject. The committee also recommend that the Australasian Squadron should be increased, proposing that the increased expense should be met by the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand jointly, on the basis of the existing agreement.

At the annual dinner last week Admirals the Hon. Sir Edmund Fremantle and Sir Richard Tracey, both of whom have had large experience of the Celestial Empire, and Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Knowles, Bart., were the guests of the Chinese Association. Sir Edmund Fremantle, in responding for the "Imperial Forces," spoke of the necessity for putting our house in order, and maintained that our Navy should be pre-eminent, which at the present moment was not the case, as it was considerably in arrear. We have not the Reserves we should have, and ships for the supply of ammunition, as well as others for machinery repairs, should be attached to each fleet.

A seaman named Summers, who was discharged from Haslar Hospital on September 10 apparently in the last stages of consumption, died at his own home eight days later. Mrs. Summers, his mother, who has written letters on the subject to the Portsmouth papers, makes some very grave charges against the hospital authorities, complaining of the treatment which her son received as a patient. We find it impossible to credit her assertions as to the insufficiency of the diet or quality of the food, but the circumstance of the unfortunate man's death on September 18 is not in dispute. It also appears to be admitted that the patient waited for a whole hour at the gates of the hospital on the day of his discharge, and, as the wind was keen, this lack of ordinary care may have contributed to his death. The facts should be investigated by a court of inquiry, if only because of Mrs. Summers's letters. Meanwhile, there may be much to be said on the other side, and it cannot be put in the form of letters to the newspapers.

In Byfleet Parish Church on Thursday in last week a marble and alabaster tablet was placed in memory of the late Commander F. G. Egerton, with the following inscription:—"In memory of F. G. Egerton, gunnery lieutenant of H.M.S. Powerful, who, while serving with the Naval Brigade in Ladysmith, was mortally wounded by a shell on November 2, 1899, and died that evening. This tablet is erected by some of his many friends in the Royal Navy."

Two interesting letters have appeared in the Times this week in connection with naval matters. Mr. T. G. Bowles writes on the subject of "The Fleet in Building and the First Lord in Making," while Sir John Colomb entitles his letter "The Navy and Hedgerow Defence." An apprehension lest the determination of the country to have an efficient Army should lead to its naval needs being ignored is at the back of both communications. Mr. Bowles catalogues nine matters in which reformation is required:—(1) The arrears in naval construction; (2) the abandonment of the two-Power standard for an output standard; (3) the brick-and-mortar policy, whereby money that should be spent on ships is sunk in the sea at Dover and other places; (4) naval training; (5) the introduction of inadequately trained boys of the seaman class; (6) raising the age of naval cadets; (7) the substitution of a college for a ship as the schoolhouse of these cadets; (8) the abolition of the masted training squadron; (9) the lack of sufficient training in the stoking of Belleville boilers given to men of the engine-room complement. With regard to these matters that the two first-named merit immediate attention will receive general support. Six of those that remain belong to the training problem, a solution for which is not easily to be discovered.

Sir John Colomb in his communication pertinently recalls the facts of thirty years ago, when Army reform was then as now made a political cry. What happened Sir John Colomb thus relates:—"A strong Minister, Mr. Cardwell, in obedience to public demand, took in hand the reconstruction of our military system. Another Minister, Mr. Childers, under cover of popular apathy in matters naval, was set to work to cut down the fleet as a set-off against increased outlay by the War Office, while the Prime Minister in dulcet strains sung the praises of the 'silver streak.' Principles of general policy which should ever control the aims and actions of the two great spending departments were ignored. The determining influence of naval power on military arrangements was forgotten or was too inconvenient at the moment to remember. The interests of the outlying Empire were deliberately neglected." The letter should be read—though it is a very long one—by everyone interested in the efficiency of the naval and military Services. If what happened thirty years ago is not to happen again, the question of the needs of the Empire must be treated as a whole. As Lord Wolseley said on April 27, 1888, "Before the military authorities were called upon to provide an Army, they ought to be informed clearly and distinctly what kind of an Army the country wanted; and if that were done, there would be no difficulty in providing the necessary force for the defence of the Empire." But before the country makes up its mind what kind of an Army it wants, it is essential for a true understanding of the question that it should take into consideration the views of its seamen on the subject.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos

in Bond for Export.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each, or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Bowley & Co., Importers, 49, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacconists.

Navy Personal.

Admiral of the Fleet the Earl of Clanwilliam returned to London on Saturday last from Aberfeldie, where he has resided since August last by the gracious permission of Her Majesty.

Admiral Sir N. Bowden-Smith, a former Commander-in-Chief of the Australian Station, spoke on Monday last at the annual meeting of the Milanese Mission in Westminster Church House, of the good work done in the Western Pacific, and the necessity for providing a new vessel to enable the missionaries to extend their labours among the natives of the islands in that large area. Many naval officers, like the gallant admiral, remember that old servant of the Mission, the John Williams, and may possibly be disposed to aid in obtaining a ship to replace her.

Rear-Admiral Sir Gerard Noel does not go farther north than Lamlash (Arran) or Belfast Lough—they are about fifty-five miles apart—during his present cruise. He disperses the vessels of the Reserve Squadron on Thursday next.

Captain Sir Edward Chichester, Bart., late Chief of the Transport Service at the Cape of Good Hope, who returned therefrom on Friday, in last week, in the Dunvegan Castle with General Sir Redvers Buller, arrived at his country seat in north Devon on Tuesday last, and was received with an immense display of good feeling and enthusiasm. The old town of Barnstaple and his estates of Youlton and Bratton were profusely decorated, and addresses of congratulation presented by the Mayor of the former and the tenants of the latter. The gallant officer, in his usual jovial and genial manner, replied in plain terms, and did not forget to speak of the daring and gallantry of his countymen of the sister service employed in South Africa. Sir Edward attains the age of fifty-one on Tuesday next.

Captain Edward H. Gamble, of the Cæsar, arrived at Naples on Saturday last from Malta with the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and on Tuesday he was, with the officers serving under his command, entertained by the right honourable gentleman at dinner at the Royal Hotel.

Captain Henry Leah, of the Diadem, left Plymouth on Wednesday last for Gibraltar, and will afterwards rejoin the Channel Squadron at Arosa Bay.

Captain Arthur A. C. Galloway, of the Scylla, with the paid-off crew of the Barracouta, arrived at Las Palmas on Saturday last, and left on Tuesday for Devonport.

Captain Frederick F. Fegan, of the Leander, arrived at Monte Video on Monday last, and left on Wednesday for St. Vincent, Cape Verd Island, and Chatham to pay off that vessel.

Captain Percy Scott, of the Terrible, maintains in his present command the reputation he established in the Scylla for precision of fire of his guns' crews. At the recent prize-firing of the Terrible, the crews of the 6in. quick-firing guns scored eighty hits in 104 rounds. This is an exceptional record, and redounds to the credit of the guns' crews, the gunnery lieutenant and his staff, and the prime mover in this important work—the captain.

Commander Clifton Selater, of the Condor, left Portsmouth on Tuesday for the Pacific Station to replace the Pheasant.

Commander Edward F. Inglefield, of the Sultan, arrived at Plymouth on Monday last from the South-East Coast of America, and left for Sheerness to pay off.

Commander Ronald R. M. Hall (retired) has been appointed Deputy-Governor of the Naval Prison recently established at Portsmouth. He was an experienced gunnery officer, and promoted from the Sultan from the latter post, but suffered by slow advancement. His old friends will be glad to hear that employment is provided him while still possessing activity of mind and limb.

Commander William O. Storey, of the Hearty, employed on fishery protection in the North Sea, has presented £500 to the Mayor of Lowestoft for endowing a cot, to be named after that vessel, in the local hospital. The amount was raised by the officers and ship's company under his command at various entertainments given by them on different occasions, and is a recognition of the goodwill shown to those on board by the inhabitants of Lowestoft.

Lieut. E. J. Newman, from the Monarch, and Midshipman Andrew Cunningham, from the Doris, arrived at Southampton on Saturday last in the Beaver Line steamship, Lake Erie, from South Africa.

Lieut. Sampson Sladen, late R.N., of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, is, we are sorry to say, seriously ill from lead poison, acquired from the fumes of burning tea cases, lined with lead, which he inhaled at a fire in a tea warehouse on 25th ult.

Surgeon Arthur K. Bankart, of the Osborne, who has been in medical attendance at Balmoral and Windsor during the past five weeks, was relieved at the latter Royal residence on Monday last by Sir James Reid, Bart., and returned to his duties on board the Royal yacht.

ROYAL MARINES.

General Sir Anthony B. Stransham, who died at Ealing on the 6th ult., left estate valued at £4,463.

Lieut.-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel Thomas F. D. Bridge obtains the appointment of A.D.C. to the Queen, vacant by the promotion of Major-General A. B. Crosbie. He is the senior of the substantive lieut.-colonels, and he saw considerable service in the Sudan during some of the hardest fighting. He is a younger brother of Vice-Admiral Sir Cyprian Bridge.

Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel J. W. Robyns, R.M.L.I., has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel. His principal war service was during the Zulu campaign of 1878-9, when he accompanied the Ekowe relief column, and fought at the battle of Gingihlovo and the relief of Ekowe. He afterwards served with General Crealock's column.

Major Alfred E. Marchant, recently awarded C.B., for his distinguished services in South Africa, arrived at Southampton in the transport Tagus on Friday evening in last week.

Captain Sydney Gaitskell, R.M.A., has been selected for the adjutancy of the 1st Devon Artillery Volunteers, at Exeter, of which Lieut. (retired) F. R. Carr R.N., an old gunnery officer, is senior major and hon. lieut.-colonel.

Lieut. Harold G. B. Armstrong, of the Barfleur, specially promoted captain for the recent operations in China, is the third officer of the infantry branch who has attained company rank since 1878, for service in the field or under fire. As he has only four years' service and is less than twenty-four years of age, he is far more fortunate than either Major-General A. B. Crosbie or Colonel Townley W. Dowding, who were similarly advanced. His elder brother, Captain St. George B. Armstrong, of the Naval Intelligence Department, attained his present rank by seniority before he was twenty-seven and with little more than eight years' service, having joined the corps at the comparatively early age of sixteen-and-a-half years. Their gallant father, Colonel W. G. Armstrong, served during a less seasonable period of promotion, having been nearly seventeen years a subaltern, and thirty-four years of age when promoted captain.

SOUTH AFRICAN REWARDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—It was with deep interest that I read the letter of "Disappointed" in your issue of the 10th inst. My brother was on board the Diadem during those times, and did his share in the defence of our Empire, but, with the remainder of the ship's company, would rather have gone, and hoped to be sent to the front. In a letter to me from Gibraltar, dated October 19, 1899, he wrote:—"We were packed off last Sunday night quite suddenly to the Rock, and from there I think we are going to St. Vincent. There is a rumour that we are going to the Cape. I hope we go and land a party for Kruger's benefit."

On October 28, writing from St. Vincent, he said:—"We arrived here a couple of days ago, after a lovely trip. Two transports came in last night to coal. We are going to cheer them out."

Again on November 27 he wrote:—"I think we stand a chance of going to the front yet, as we had a telegram from the Cape to-day, which stated that our bluejackets had lost a lot. We are all of one mind—want to go, but can't be spared. Troopers arrive, and we coal them—the coolies can't work hard enough. Afterwards we cheer—the band plays—then more cheers, and then we wait for the next. There are a lot of sharks about here, which follow the troopships carrying horses. We scare them away by exploding a few submarine charges of guncotton."

Possibly you can find space in your paper for this letter, as I think a medal should be awarded to the officers and men of the Diadem, in recognition of the services they cheerfully rendered for Queen and country. The duties carried out by them were equally as necessary as those carried out by the officers and men in South African waters. Reading "Disappointed's" letter recalled to me in a vivid manner the letters written by my brother, from which the above extracts are taken.

ALF. H. CLAYTON.

Holme Court, Isleworth, W.

A MEETING of the committee of the Royal Naval Fund was held this week to consider applications for grants to widows and dependent relatives of seamen and Marines. There were present Admiral Sir William Dowell (chairman), Sir George Hayter Chubb, Mr. G. T. Lambert, C.B., Mr. J. Gordon Langton, Lieut. Gerald R. Maltby, R.N., Mr. John Rice, R.N., Admiral Sir George Willes, and Major-General William P. Wright.

At the request of her Majesty's Government, Mr. Macartney will continue to hold the office of Financial Secretary to the Admiralty until the arrival of Mr. Arnold-Forster, whose immediate return from South Africa has not been possible.

ESTABLISHED 1789.

ROBERT LEWIS, 20, ST. JAMES' ST., LONDON, S.W.

CIGARS.

The Finest Selection of all the Leading Havana Brands.
Sole Agents for the Hoffman House Cigars.

CIGARETTES.

GOLD TIPPED, BALKAN SOBRANIE, and YENIDJE
NARGHILE BRANDS.

TOBACCO.

WINGFIELD LAWN TENNIS, GUARDS, and SANDRINGHAM
MIXTURES.

Telegrams: "Intimidat, London."

20, ST. JAMES' STREET, LONDON, S.W.

Telephone No. 3787, Gerrard.

Navv Foreign.

The German Emperor has taken a step that has given great satisfaction among the seamen of his fleet by awarding the military honour decorations to all who have served in the actions in China. Such a wide distribution of this reward for good service is unique, and was not expected. Those who were present at the capture of the Taku Forts, who were with Sir Edward Seymour, and at the defence and relief of Tien-tsin, have been nominated for the reward. They number 248, including the whole company of the Ilitis, forty-six of the Hertha, forty-two of the Hansa, twenty-two of the Kaiserin Augusta, and twenty-three of the Gefion. The nearest approach to this wide distribution of the decorations was in the case of the Marines under Lieut. Count Soden, who so gallantly defended the German Legation.

It is impossible to say what may be the future of the submarine boat, but there are many Frenchmen who entertain no doubts. Thus writes the Echo de l'Armée:—"In the midst of the sadness and the pre-occupation of the present hour, we must accept as a consolation and a hope the naval revolution which is brought about by the progress of submarine navigation. The genius of our inventors is about to endow France with a marvellous instrument of national defence, destined very probably to weaken the crushing superiority of England at sea, capable of shaking her plans of universal dominion, and troubling her also at home. Destruction, terror, and death may now march silently in the invisible depths of the ocean." France, it appears, does not aspire to command the seas. She has too many enemies ashore for that, and capricious Destiny "has written Trafalgar and Austerlitz on the same page." But at least she can strike a blow at England. "La France peut la poignarder sous le ventre." This benevolent intention, so elegantly expressed, comes easily from a Nationalist organ, and is worth recording.

A "Senatore," who is anonymous, but is understood to be Vice-Admiral Accinni, has contributed to the Rivista Politica e Letteraria an article of a despondent character upon the Italian Navy. Either Italy must consent to great sacrifices in order to increase her fleet, or she must renounce her position and abandon her defence. It is important that the fleet should be increased without delay, and the writer offers a plan. Ten battleships of 10,000 tons should be built at a cost of 240 million lire, 16 destroyers at 19 millions, and four auxiliary ships at six millions, while the Italia and Lepanto would be rebuilt at a cost of 16 millions, and the vessels in hand be completed by a vote of 50 millions. "Senatore" points out that if this sum is to be expended, even at the increased rate now admitted, the work could not be completed in less than 12 years, which he thinks is far too long a period, and he would expedite the building within the first four years, so that five battleships, two of the auxiliary ships, and the 16 destroyers should be completed. He therefore demands the addition of 51 million lire to the Budget in each of the first four years, and 27 millions in the succeeding years.

The Popolo Romano, discussing the argument of Admiral Accinni, in a later article, remarks that this preparation of building programmes, without regard to the financial exigencies of the country, does not seem altogether commendable, although the intentions of the distinguished writer are highly patriotic. The Popolo agrees with the Perseveranza that there can be no thought of a new loan, and that great difficulties attend the imposition of further taxation. It is thought that possibly something might be done in regard to the mercantile marine and sugar bounties, and some other matters that effect revenue and expenditure. The Popolo concludes that Italy will recognise what must be the solicitude of the Cabinet for the fleet, will welcome any solution of the difficulty, and will be willing to make sacrifices for this national cause.

Our readers are aware that the French Estimates of this year make large provision for improving the building and docking facilities and the defensive resources of the ports in the Channel and the Mediterranean. Further defensive works for the protection of the harbour are to be undertaken at Cherbourg, where the powder factory is to be removed, and coaling facilities are to be increased and the wet dock space is to be enlarged. At Brest there is to be a new building slip, the protected harbour is to be completed, a store is to be erected, and further provision is to be made for the mobile defence, and the construction of two large basins at Lannion, and of one in the commercial harbour is planned. There is also to be a torpedo establishment at Lézardrieux. At Lorient and Rochfort the coal storages are to be increased, and later on the western passage is to be dredged at the former port, while it is intended to increase the docking facilities at Rochfort. The dredging of Toulon harbour is to be continued, the Castignean docks are to be lengthened, and another basin is to be formed at Missiessy; while magazines, large electric light installations, and other provisions and facilities are contemplated. At Corsica and Biserta great defensive works are intended, and also many improvements in the arrondissements of Algeria, while at Dakar and Saigon the construction of the arsenals will be continued.

There was lately an article in the Yacht in relation to the inadequate supply of officers for the French Navy. The want is both in regard to executive and engineer officers, and there exists no reserve of any value to meet the extensive calls of a general mobilisation. It would seem urgent that some step should be taken to create a better state of things, for the increase of the material of the fleet has not been accompanied by a parallel development of the personnel. Our contemporary strongly urges an increase in the ranks of executive officers, and recurs to the old contention that a rank should be established between that of the lieutenant and the capitaine de frégate, or commander. The average seniority of the French lieutenant on attaining promotion to commander is now about eighteen years, and the Yacht maintains that it is essential, in order to give satisfaction, that the grade of capitaine de corvette should be created, to include 100 or 150 of the senior lieutenants, who are at least forty years of age, and have served for twenty-five years. The change is greatly favoured within the navy, except by young officers who have much confidence in their future, and by some seniors who are just on the point of being promoted.

The French Superior Council of the Navy, which was reorganised last April, recently met for the first time since the change. The meeting was under the Presidency of the Minister of Marine, and its members are Vice-Admirals de la Jaille, Gervais, Humann, Bienaimé, and Rear-Admiral Bayle. The Minister explained the reasons for the reorganisation of the Board and submitted several questions to it which are to be carefully investigated. He charged them especially to study, with the shortest possible delay, the best types of submarine boats and subsimmers to be put in hand. The Minister was greatly impressed with the trials of the Gustave Zédé when he was lately at Toulon. The Temps says that the trial was a perfect success, and describes the system of vision by means of the periscope. This is an instrument which enables a submarine boat to direct its course when submerged. It consists of a tube with reflecting mirrors, and is upon the principle of the old camera obscura. The field of vision is very restricted, but the eye becomes habituated to the use of the instrument, and, according to the Temps, it will enable the commander to steam under water with perfect confidence. When M. de Lanessan was on board, everything passed off very well, and the boat was under command of Lieut. Jobard, with whom the Minister had a long talk. That officer, according to the Temps, is a fanatique in submarine navigation, and a great admirer of the Zédé, like all others who have commanded her.

The recent visit paid by the French Ministers to Corsica and Biserta has caused much comment in Germany, where the proceedings were watched with much curiosity, and our article upon the subject has been translated by the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, the Hamburgischer Correspondent, and the Nationalzeitung.

OUR FOREIGN CONTEMPORARIES.

The recent celebration of the centenary of Moltke has drawn fresh attention to his many writings, which have been so carefully prepared for publication by the German General Staff. They are in three groups, the first being the "Military Correspondence," which includes three parts, the first of the devoted to them war of 1864, the second to official correspondence during the war of 1866, and the third (which is in three sections) to the Franco-German War. The second group includes a remarkable study of the work of the Chief of the General Staff in time of peace, and the third comprises the historical works, in two sections. The first section includes the history of the war against Denmark in 1848-49, and the second many critical observations upon the campaigns of 1809, 1859, 1864, 1866, and 1870-71. All these are published officially by Messrs. Mittler, as also the "Gesammelte Schriften und Denkwürdigkeiten," in eight volumes. Thus Moltke's works and his collected writings make a vast body of military literature, and are extremely valuable to students who know German. Some portions of them have been translated.

The Kriegstechnische Zeitschrift has published in its latest issue a very interesting paper upon photography for military purposes. Photography was used to some extent in the Crimean War, and in subsequent European campaigns, and, giving good results, has established itself as of great military value. The French Army has made much use of it. The employment of photography is treated in the Zeitschrift in regard chiefly to ballistics and the flight of projectiles.

Deutschlands Land und Seemacht is a new journal, but appears to be related to our old contemporary the Deutsche Heereszeitung. It is devoted to naval and military matters, both in Germany and abroad, and is illustrated. The second number has an interesting article on the Kaiser's Navy, and another on the manoeuvres at Stettin, with much else that is of interest. It seems to promise well.

The Boletín Demográfico Argentino, published officially at Buenos Ayres, under the authority of the Minister of the Interior, Dr. Felipe Yofre, contains a surprising amount of information concerning the population of the Argentine Republic—births, deaths, immigration, migration, with an abundance of other facts of great interest to those concerned with demographic statistics. The Boletín is a serial, and we do not appear to have anything quite like it in this country.

THE HOSPITAL COMMISSION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The evidence given by Mrs. Richard Chamberlain before the Hospital Commission brought to notice one point that seems to require explanation. It appeared that the general commanding the line of communications gave this lady permission to visit the hospitals without consulting—indeed, contrary to the wishes of—the principal medical officer, so far as can be inferred from her statements. This, I would submit, must have tended to impair the position, authority, and usefulness of the doctor. If the general commanding the line of communications could not trust his P.M.O. to deal with applications, under his orders, to visit the hospitals, surely the proper course would have been to have taken steps to have him replaced.

DISCIPLINE

It seems to be settled, says the Pioneer, that the 1st Gloucestershire Regiment, on their return to India when they are released from keeping guard over the Boer prisoners in Ceylon, will be posted to Rawal Pindi. The 1st Northamptonshire, which took their place at Allahabad a year ago when they sailed for Natal, will probably be moved back to Fyzabad; and the 1st Royal Scots Fusiliers from Peshawar, will come down to Allahabad.

A MEETING of the Royal Commission of the Patriotic Fund was held at the Commander-in-Chief's Levée Room, Horse Guards, on Thursday. There were present: H.B.H. the Duke of Cambridge (president), H.H. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, Earl Nelson, Lord Chelmsford, Lord Welby, Lord Pirbright, the Hon. E. F. Leveson-Gower, Sir George Hayter-Chubb, Sir Anthony H. Hoskins, Sir William Dowell, Sir Francis Mowatt, the Accountants-General of the Army and of the Navy and Colonel J. S. Young, secretary.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died.)

Near BOTHAVILLE, Nov. 6.

8th Huss.—WOUNDED: Lieut.-Col. Le Gallais*. Imp. Yeo.—6th Batn: WOUNDED: 1536 Hebson, 1467 McLanahan.
 Kitchener's Horse.—KILLED: Hepworth S. Brown. WOUNDED: 9651 Howarth, Woodhouse.
 R.H.A.—"U" Batt.: WOUNDED: Capt. Mair; 7546 Sgt. Cherry*; 31918 Bosomworth, 23469 Parkes; 72991 Cpl. Rogers, 19910 Belsham, 19521 Ruhl.
 E. Kent Mtd. Inf.—KILLED: Capt. Englebach. WOUNDED: 4272 L.-Cpl. Sedgwick; 5724 Fagg, 5749 Atkins, 3539 Wilkin, 3457 Benson.
 Suffolk Mtd. Inf.—WOUNDED: Lieut. Peebles; Col. Sgt. (? 4595) Mangles; Sgts. 210 Bilborough, 3009 Turner, Cpl. 8371 Fuller; Pte. 4925 Oliver.
 E. Yorks Mtd. Inf.—KILLED: 3340 Evans. WOUNDED: 3551 Holland.
 S. Wales Bordrs. Mtd. Inf.—KILLED: Lieut. Williams. Gloucester Mtd. Inf.—KILLED: 3741 Bryant.
 Worcester Mtd. Inf.—KILLED: 3731 Cpl. R. Smith; 4933 Norton. WOUNDED: 4153 T. Smith.
 W. Riding Mtd. Inf.—WOUNDED: Capt. Harris.
 Hants Mtd. Inf.—WOUNDED: Major Welch.
 Oxford L.I.—WOUNDED: Capt. Colville.
 Essex Mtd. Inf.—WOUNDED: 3827 Sgt. Raven.
 Derby Mtd. Inf.—WOUNDED: 3930 Scrimshaw.
 Middlesex Mtd. Inf.—WOUNDED: Lieut. Percy Smith.
 Durham L.I.—WOUNDED: Lieut.-Col. Ross.
 Gordons Mtd. Inf.—KILLED: 4760 Johnson.

MISCELLANEOUS.

8th Huss.—4263 L.-Cpl. Moore, killed; 2178 Sgt. Tyler; 3321 Beilly (P4141) Leech wounded with French's Force, between Carolina and Bethel, Oct. 16-19; previously reported as of 8th Huss.
 13th Huss.—Lieut. Lyons, wounded, Standerton, Nov. 8.
 Imp. Yeo.—15880 L.-Cpl. Smallwood; 15864 Oates; 15881 Savory, missing, have rejoined. 6th Batn.: Capt. Hodget wounded, Syferfontein, Oct. 31. 16th: Capt. Reynolds, wounded, Twii River, Nov. 1. 1st Co.: 9275 Stow; 4 Read, prisoners, near Winburg, Nov. 4. 5th Co.: 301 Cpl. Hughes, 414 Martin, wounded, Twii River, Nov. 1. 8th: 5056 Myers killed; 561 Prince wounded, near Reitz, Nov. 10. 29th Co.: 3642 Davies, 3608 Flint, wounded Reddersburg, Nov. 3. 31st: 8186 Cpl. Morgan, wounded, Schanz Kopp's, Nov. 4. 34th: 6354 Rhodes*, 66302 Cpl. Thornton, Nov. 7, 6370 Edwards, wounded near Vrede, Nov. 9. 35th: 6417 Trembart, 6449 Broome, 6382 Newman, wounded, Nov. 7, near Vrede. 45th: Lieut. Viscount Ennismore, wounded near Rustenburg, Nov. 7; Capt. Stannus, wounded Reddersburg, Nov. 3. 54th: 9512 Woods, wounded, Reddersburg, Nov. 3; 9531 L.-Cpl. Kelly, wounded near Rustenburg, Nov. 7. 66th: 12195 Burgoyne, killed; 12191 Cpl. Barker, wounded, Twii River, Nov. 1.
 Irreg. Horse, Brabant's.—1st: 9159 Perch, wounded, Winkels Drift, Nov. 6; Sgt. McLeod, wounded, Lindley, Oct. 23. 2nd: Reid, reported wounded, Wepener, Apr. 23, was killed in action. Kitchener's.—3131 L.-Cpl. Thompson, killed, Bourdillians, Nov. 7. I. L. H.—Machie, wounded, Frederickstad, Oct. 25; 584 Sgt.-Maj. Hardie, injured, railway accident, Kaapmuiden, Oct. 9. Strathcona's.—175 Bull, accidentally wounded, Frederickstad, Nov. 3. Vict. Bushmen.—94 O'Reilly, near Ottoshoop, Nov. 11; 252 Rickard, Wonderfontein, Nov. 9, wounded. S. Aust. Bushmen.—48 Johnson, wounded, Wonderfontein, Nov. 9; 1294 Richardson, 1163 Ball, wounded, Lichtenburg, Sept. 28. Lovat's.—8750 Henderson, wounded, Edenburg, Nov. 12; Surg. Hartley, wounded, near Phillipolis, Nov. 8; 8796 McDonald, wounded, Muzarab, Nov. 3. Diamond Flds.—1099 Sutherland*, wounded, Reit Vlei, 1090 Wallis, killed, Kromelenbog, Nov. 7. Loch's.—175 Cpl. Pringle, wounded, Taaibosch, Nov. 13. Roberts's.—2182 Harvey, previously reported died of wounds, Luckhoff, Oct. 22, was prisoner and quite well, Oct. 29.
 Police.—Cape: 806 Wilson, wounded, Honeyneest Kloof,

Nov. 6; 883 Huskinson*, Coughlan, wounded, Vryburg, Oct. 11.

Mtd. Rifles, Canadian.—1st: 203 McDonald, missing, has rejoined, and was wounded, Belfast, Nov. 5. Cape: 2387 Cpl. Bates, killed, Winkels Drift, Nov. 6; 3165 Pierce, wounded, Vryburg, Oct. 11.

Mtd. Inf., Bethune's.—1081 St. Austin, wounded, Oct. 1, no place given. W. Aust: 5 Clare, prisoner, has been released.

R.F.A.—38th Batt.: 49367 Milles, wounded, Honeyneest Kloof, Nov. 6. 43rd: 5282 Spittle, wounded, Rustenburg, Nov. 7. 52nd: 3759 Sgt. Bowles, wounded near Phillipolis, Nov. 8. 53rd: 2696 Usher, wounded, Lydenburg, Oct. 31. 66th: 88315 Sgt. Nurse, 29448 Bombr. Kilminster, 6473 Lucas, 83334 Robbins, 24530 Clark, injured railway accident, Kaapmuiden, Oct. 9. 78th: 98964 Bombr. Stear, wounded, Frederickstad, Oct. 25. Pom-Pom: 12265 Dickenson, wounded, Schanz Koppes, Nov. 4.

R.G.A.—17th Co. (W.D.): 15015 Hutchinson*, accidentally shot, Rhenoster, Nov. 12.

Amm. Col.—10th: Lieut. Hawke, 87860 Sgt. Clarke, 73540 Cpl. Rigby, 9305 Bombr. Archer, 77495 C Jones, 76835 Bombr. Bishop, 81415 Hollinrake, 79816 Connor, 78809 Davis, 83556 Holland, 27331 Thompson, 78314 Burnage, injured, railway accident, Kaapmuiden, Oct. 9. Liverpool.—1st: 3576 Neale, 3213 Sills, 4436 Boyle, previously reported missing, now reported killed, Aug. 23. Norfolk.—3rd: 4028 Howlett, accidentally injured, Kaffir River, Nov. 7.

Devon.—1st: 4647 Simons, wounded, Lydenburg, Oct. 31.

Somerset L.I.—2nd: 2642 Newton, wounded, Muzarab, Nov. 3; 2380 Hughes, wounded, Potchefstroom, Nov. 8. E. Yorks Mtd. Inf.—402 Sgt.-Maj. Haigh, wounded, Lindley, Oct. 23.

Leicester.—1st: 3850 Mardon, wounded, Lydenburg, Oct. 31.

Scots Fus.—2nd: 5689 Ferguson, wounded, Frederickstad, Oct. 25.

K.O.S.B.—7053 Waddin, accidentally wounded, Gethens Koppes, Nov. 11.

Cameronians.—2nd: 3236 Mathieson, 5423 McLaughlin, 875 Paterson, 1885 McLaren, wounded near Greylingstad, Nov. 6.

E. Lancs.—Mtd. Inf.: 3209 Cpl. Fitzgerald, wounded, Vereeniging, Nov. 9.

W. Riding.—3009 Sgt. Turner, wounded, near Bothaville, Nov. 5.

W. Kent.—2nd: 5329 W. Roberts, 5375 Harris, missing, Bethlehem, Oct. 19; 1745 Munday, 3431 Sgt. Montague, 5280 Hipkins, wounded, Frankfort, Nov. 6.

Shrops. L.I.—Sgt. 3431 Keigh, L.-Cpl. 5242 Avery. Ptes. 5442 Harrison, 2708 Walwin, 3389 Humphreys, 2321 Snowdell, 5690 Smith, 4446 Sedgwick, 2032 Pritchard, 1555 Richard, 1908 Webster, 2643 Hardwick, 2526 Brian, 5435 H. A. Moore, 5585 Ralichan, 3337 F. Moore, 1540 Williams, missing, Brakfontein, Aug. 18, have rejoined.

K.R.R.—1st: For 9673 Balemair, killed, Ladysmith, Jan. 6, read 9673 Bateman.

Wilts.—2nd: 5336 Carter, reported died wounds, Bethlehem, July 30, is alive and well, and now at Wynberg.

Manchester.—2nd: 2277 R. Hall (? 2677 T. Hall), wounded near Vrede, Nov. 6; 2837 Fishwick, wounded near Standerton, Nov. 12.

York and Lanc.—1st: 5160 Cpl. Watson, wounded, Wakkerstroom, Nov. 7.

Durham L.I.—3rd: 4878 Hanley, killed, 5263 Burness, wounded near Edenburg, Nov. 12.

Seaforths.—6333 Irvine, killed; 2716 L. Sgt. Pirie, 2897 Wilson, 1646 Haley, wounded, Rustenburg, Nov. 7; 2nd Lieut. Craik, wounded, Reddersburg, Nov. 8; 4861 Gemmell, 6229 Parsons, 5805 Lawson, 6263 Alexander, 4150 Peatson, 6449 Paton, wounded, Phillipolis, Nov. 8.

Irish Rifles.—2nd: 5883 Scott*, wounded, Dewetsdorp, Nov. 5.

Irish Fus.—5214 Cpl. Creighan, wounded, Blood River, Nov. 7.

Leinster.—1st: 5488 Cooke, wounded near Standerton, Nov. 12.

Canadian Inf.—8167 Lester, missing, place not stated, Apr. 30.

Duke of Edinburgh's O.V.R.—530 Davenport, wounded, Douglas, May 30.

P.A. Vol. Gd.—990 Turnbull, reported missing, has rejoined.

Welsh Border Brig. Bearer Co.:—13393 Act. St.-Sgt. Warwick, accidentally injured, Harrismith, Nov. 10.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

5th D.G.—3619 Saunders, accidentally killed, Volksrust, Nov. 7; 4681 Robinson, disease unknown, Newcastle, Nov. 8.

2nd Drag.—397 Powell, Wynberg, June 27.

5th Lancers.—3533 Pickard, dysentery, Pretoria, Nov. 7.

19th Huss.—4771 Wells, Pretoria, Nov. 4.

Imp. Yeo.—1st Co.: 226 Goodman, Winburg, Nov. 11.

32nd: 8980 Gregory, Boshof, May 19.

Irreg. Horse.—Orpen's: 80 Johnston, drowned, Hope-town, Feb. 14. I.L.H.: 605 Cribb, cervical vertebral (?), Bloemfontein, Nov. 7; 163 Sgt. Wileman, wounds, Johannesburg, Nov. 9. Brabant's: 1188 Herbert (? disease), Port Elizabeth, Nov. 7. Loch's: 143 Noad, dysentery, Kroonstad, Nov. 7; 2 Eady, Kroonstad, Nov. 10. N.Z. 4th (Roughriders): 1371 Botton, wounds, Kimberley, Nov. 10. Marshall's: 699 Trolly, wounds, Johannesburg, Nov. 6.

Mtd. Rifles.—Border: 421 Uhlmann, disease, Ladysmith, Jan. 30; 353 Cutcliffe, drowned, Durban, Aug. 11. Cape: Lieut. Rolfe, wounds, Kimberley, Nov. 13. Natal: 314 Thomas, Ladysmith, Jan. 24; 237 Cpl. Parkhill, Durban, Apr. 24, both disease.

Mtd. Inf.—S. Aust.: 10 Cpl. Klaffer, Wynberg, Oct. 11.

Thorneycroft's: 1759 killed Spion Kop, Jan. 24, previously reported missing.

Natal Carbineers.—833 Price, Mar. 16; 462 Moody, Jan. 10, both dysentery; 472 Birkett, Feb. 12, all Ladysmith; 596 Patton, Mar. 27; 571 Murray, appendicitis, Apr. 6, both Maritzburg; 358 Regt.-Sgt.-Maj. Bowen, Lidgetton, Mar. 28; 728 Goldstein, killed, Monte Christo, Feb. 16.

Police.—O.R.C.: 402 Lewishage Murray, killed, Daspoort, Nov. 7.

R.F.A.—14th Batt.: 31095 Shakleton, Maritzburg, Nov. 7. 19th: 74449 Plummer, aneurism, Newcastle, Nov. 12. 42nd: 8404 Blay, disease unknown, Lydenburg, Nov. 7. 82nd: 89097 Flavill, Florida, June 1.

Natal Field Arty.—16 Sgt. York, injuries, Sept. 5; 169 J. Smith, pneumonia, Sept. 2, both Dundee.

Cape Garr. Arty.—96 Henry Greenpoint, Nov. 7.

R.E.—23rd Co.: 2729 Stanton, dysentery, Lydenburg, Oct. 20. 26th Co.: 24908 Francis, intestinal obstruction, Pretoria, Nov. 4. 1st Div. Tele. Batn.: 2875 Petts, dysentery, Johannesburg, Nov. 9.

Gren. Gds.—2nd: 2454 Reid, Harrismith, Nov. 8. 3rd: 7140 Plum, tubercular cystitis, Wynberg, Nov. 10.

Coldstream Gds.—1st: 1492 Dunn, Standerton, Oct. 6.

Scots Gds.—1967 Smart, dysentery, place not stated, May 29.

R. Scots.—1st: 4211 Baxter, disease unknown, Nelspruit, Nov. 5; 6599 Watson, Germiston, Nov. 7. 3rd: 6480 Allen, Kroonstad, Nov. 11. Mtd. Inf.: 4556 Dickson, wounds, near Vrede, Nov. 12.

E. Kent.—2nd: 6112 L.-Cpl. Cooper, Kroonstad, Nov. 9.

3rd: 3133 Burke, dysentery, Kroonstad, Nov. 8.

Lanc.—2nd: 2950 Cowell, wounds, Vryheid, Nov. 7.

Northland Fus.—1st: 4967 Jeffs, Kimberley, Nov. 12.

R. Fus.—2nd: 3670 Hubble, disease not given, at sea, June 5.

Norfolk.—2nd: 5215 Turner, dysentery, Springfontein, Nov. 10. 3rd: 4224 Dyke, drowned while bathing Kaffir River Bridge, Nov. 7.

Devon.—1st: 1588 Arthurs, peritonitis, Lydenburg, Oct. 28. 2nd: 5584 Long, Standerton, Sept. 29.

Suffolk.—1st: 4945 Finch, Johannesburg, Nov. 8.

Somerset L.I.—2nd: 3699 Hasler, Kimberley, Nov. 9.

4th: 3476 Hopes, E. London, Nov. 7.

W. Yorks.—4th: 4432 Sgt. Hewitt, wounds, Cape Town, Nov. 8.

E. Yorks.—2nd: 3568 Col.-Sgt. Selth, nephritis, Harrismith, Nov. 12.

Leicester.—1st: 4127 Lord (? disease), Bloemfontein, May 10.

Lanc. Fus.—1475 Canter, disease unknown, Dundee, Nov. 9.

Welsh Fus.—2nd: 5544 Davies, Oct. 26; 3077 Thomas, Oct. 27; both dysentery, no place given.

ELKINGTON & Co., Ltd.

Goldsmiths, Silversmiths, and Court Jewellers.

THE ORIGINATORS AND PATENTEES OF ELECTRO PLATE.

ELKINGTON PLATE

Is the Finest Quality of Table Ware the World can Produce.

CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

Special Designs for Presentation Services prepared and submitted Free of Charge.

London Showrooms:

22, REGENT ST., S.W.; 73, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

9, Parker Street, Liverpool; St. Anns Square, Manchester;

22, Blackett Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne; St. Vincent Street, Glasgow.

Manufactory: Newhall Street, Birmingham.

Actual Manufacturers,
supplying the Public Direct.

Tea Pot, 2 Pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 3s.
Solid Silver, £10.

Cream Jug.
Elkington Plate, £1 14s.
Solid Silver, £3 15s.

Sugar Basin.
Elkington Plate, £2 4s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £5 5s.

Coffee Pot, 2 1/2 pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 6s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £10 10s.

Antique Fluted Tea and Coffee Service.
Elkington Plate, £10 8s. Solid Silver, £29 10s

S. Wales Bords.—583 [Cpl. Hyde, Johannesburg, Nov. 4.
Inniskillings.—1st: 3524 Murphy, fracture skull, Bloemfontein, Nov. 9.
Gloucester.—2nd: 5247, Hayes, Thaba, Nchu, Nov. 8.
E. Lancs.—Mtd. Inf.: 320 Cpl. Fitzgerald, wounds, Vereeniging, Nov. 10.
E. Surrey.—1st: Harper, peritonitis, Simla, Sept. 1.
Hants.—Vol. Co: 51 Sutton, Pretoria, Nov. 3.
S. Lancs.—1st: Capt. Lynch,; 4111 Sgt. Chapman, wounds, Springfontein, Nov. 12.
Welsh.—3rd: 7846 Hollis, pneumonia, Prieska, Nov. 8. Vol Co.: 7323 Sergt. Rees, Germiston, Nov. 4.
Northampton.—2nd: 5968 Harris, Kimberley, Nov. 6.
Berks.—2nd: 4749 Vaughan, Bloemfontein, Nov. 9;
1184 Stone, Middlesburg, Nov. 5.
Middlesex.—6th: 900 Young, Greenpoint, Nov. 12.
K.R.R.—2nd: 1920 Bartlett, Colombo, Nov. 12. 9th:
3292 Sullivan, dysentery, Kroonstad, Nov. 8; 5384 Mahoney, Germiston, Nov. 8.
Manchester.—1st: 2368 Mannion, Lydenburg, Oct. 25.
2nd: 2nd Lieut. Woodhouse, wounds, near Vrede, Nov. 9;
1754 Prigg, debility and dysentery, Standerton, Nov. 9.
York and Lanc.—1st: 5667 Belk, dysentery, Newcastle, Nov. 14; Hatchell, abscess liver, Simla, Aug. 31.
Seaforths.—2nd: 3795 Gardner, drowned, Norval's Pont, Nov. 12.
Irish Rifles.—2nd: 2779 A. Kelly, suffocation, Thaba Nchu, Nov. 6.
Leinster.—1st: 5325, Manning, Standerton, Nov. 8.
Munster Fus.—1st: (? 5784) Hollman, killed, Honey-nest Kloof, Nov. 6; 6248 Ryan, Pretoria, Nov. 6.
R B.—2nd: 9439 Austin, dysentery, Lydenburg, Oct. 23.
C.I.V.—849 Weston, on Aurania, Oct. 29.
Durban L.I.—2 Sgt.-Instr. Crosby, disease, Maritzburg, Aug. 24; 592 Barrett, Durban, July 15; 138 Sturgeon, pneumonia, Dundee, July 6.
Canadian Regt.—4263 Vannorman, place unknown, June 7.
Queenstown R.V.—607 Bauwman (? disease), Aliwal North, Apr. 30; Hickerson, endocarditis, Queenstown, Nov. 13.
R.A.M.C.—13248 Penman, appendicitis, Bloemfontein, Nov. 12.
Natal Naval Vols.—53 2nd cl. P.O. Dreves, Durban, April 6; 246 Gr. J. Jones, Ladysmith, Mar. 25.

CASUALTIES IN CHINA.

NAVAL.

Algerine.—Sick Berth Att. 350403 Gibson, enteric.
R.M.U.I.—Po. 8697 Dunnett, dysentery; Ply. 8669
Forrester, enteric, all at Wei-hai-wei, Nov. 11.

MILITARY.

R.E.—23rd Co.: 28349 Tisdale, enteric, Hong Kong,
Nov. 8.

Bengal Lancers.—WOUNDED—14th: Lieut. Teed. 15th: one man. 16th: two men, Kusan, Oct. 22.
Madras Pioneers.—1st: KILLED: Accidentally, one man, Pao-ting-fu, Oct. 23.
N.S.W. Cont.—DIED: Surg. Steel, Nov. 10.

OUR SOLDIERS UNDER DEFEAT.—“Linesman,” writing in the November Blackwood, gives an impressive description of the magnificent discipline of the men who retired before the Boers at Colenso:—“The red faces lose their jollity in a flash, as they turn at the word of command from those vicious kopjes behind to the distant camp. All the weariness of those ten hours, the hunger and thirst, the thoughts of dead comrades, perhaps most of all the sorrow for dead hopes, set their seal upon the British countenances as if by magic. That tramp back, even after it had dragged itself out of reach of the long arms of the long French guns, was a dismal enough experience. Unreally slow, too, though there was no thought of impressing the enemy by a retirement of studied leisure. But they must have been impressed, nevertheless, even more than by the callous advance earlier in the day; and subsequent conversations with Boers go to show that many a patriot mouth and pair of eyes opened very wide indeed at the spectacle of human beings literally unstoppable by flying lead. It was Sir John Moore who said that British soldiers were ‘no good in a retirement.’ Well, the campaign in South Africa has slain yet another hoary delusion. There were many retirements for the army of Natal after that, as all the world knows—some melancholy, some as unemotional and as passive as lead, one terrible and full of gloom, one of romantic suspense and risk. The writer hopes to describe them in detail some day, for, thank God that a soldier can say so, they form a chapter in our military history to be read with as much pride for the ‘lads in red’ as ever glowed in an Englishman’s heart at any tale of victory. There is a triumph of defeat as well as of glory; few soldiers in the world but our own have ever gained it. No soldiers but our own have ever turned their backs on an exulting foe, with their discipline intact—nay, more rigid and dignified than before; with their spirit as high, their courage as steadfast, their faith in a gallant commander grappling with a well-nigh impossible task as unshaken as that of any army which ever rushed to victory at its first onset.”

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. H. PATTERSON.—We do not give addresses.

PRESS VIEWS AND CORRESPONDENCE ON SERVICE MATTERS

Service subjects more and more occupy the attention of the daily metropolitan press, in all the organs of which leading articles, correspondence, and intelligence occupy considerable space, in marked contrast to the neglect which prevailed up to the time of the Crimean War. The views and opinions of journalists are not of so much importance as those of naval and military officers and experts, but the general public have also something to say upon the great question of national defence, for they pay the piper although they do not call the tune. This week the Times, in addition to its ordinary Service contents, contained a letter from the Secretary of the Colonists' Land and Loan Corporation, on Military Colonisation in South Africa, on Nov. 10. On Nov. 12 Lieut.-Gen. Laurie and Mr. W. S. Paul wrote about early colonial volunteering. On Nov. 14, a criticism from "Briton" appeared, condemning the breech-action of our new big guns, an account of the doings of Lord Methuen's Division, and a captured Boer despatch; and on the 16th, the leading journal dealt with the vexed question of the employment of engineer officers in civil work in India; and "Onlooker" criticised severely the Army Contract Department for its dealings with Kynoch's Ammunition Company. The Daily Mail, of the 12th and 13th, enlarged on War Office schemes for the future of the "New Army," but our excellent contemporary should remember that the whole question must be threshed out in Parliament, and that War Office schemes depend upon the votes of the House of Commons. The Daily News, on the 13th and 15th, contained the apologies of Lord Rosslyn to those whom, on Lord Roberts's showing, his statements had wronged. And on the 15th Mr. Hales, who did not find much acceptance for his views in South Africa, suggested some improvements for "the Army and its horses." Our respected contemporary has certainly not expressed satisfaction or approval of their late correspondent's views. This week's brief summary includes four only of the leading dailies. It does not profess to be in any way exhaustive.

THE Britannic, conveying the Imperial Representative Military Contingent to Australia, which left Southampton on Nov. 12, is to arrive at Gibraltar on Nov. 16, Malta Nov. 20, Port Said Nov. 23, Aden Nov. 29, Fremantle Dec. 14, and Sydney on Dec. 21. She will stop one day at Fremantle.

MESSRS. CLARIDGE, SON, & RENNIE have been instructed to Sell by Auction, at BINGLEY HALL KING ALFRED'S PLACE, BIRMINGHAM, on Thursday, 13th December next, at 11 o'clock, the following MACHINE GUNS and ACCESSORIES, unless previously disposed of by private treaty:—

Class.	No. on Gun.	No. on Stock.	No. of Barrels	Calibre.	Manufactured by	Date of Manufacture	Kind of Feed.	How Mounted.	Condition of Gun.	REMARK.
1st	1	1	6	8 m.	Grenfell & Accles .	1893	Accles	Y Mount	Good	Mannlicher Cartridge.
	4	1	10	8 m.	"	1893	"	" "	"	" "
	8	1	10	42	"	1893	"	Y Mount and Tripod .	Hopper-catch wanted .	Russian Berdau Cartridge.
	9	1	10	42	"	1893	"	" " "	Good	" "
	10	1	10	42	"	1893	"	Y Mount	"	" "
	11	1	10	42	"	1893	"	Y Mount and Tripod .	"	" "
	12	1	10	42	"	1893	"	" Bracket	"	" "
	15	1	6	42	"	1893	"	" Socket	"	" " (Ships-rail socket.
	—	1	6	42	"	1893	"	Hand Carriage	"	" " carriage complete,
										Handsworth Volunteers.
	31	1	6	45	"	1893	"	"	"	Gatling English Cartridge, "
	32	1	6	45	"	1893	"	"	"	" "
	22	1	10	8 m.	Gatling Gun Co. .	1889	"	Turret Mount	"	Danish Cartridges } These two guns are ar-
	24	1	10	8 m.	"	1889	"	"	"	" " } ranged for Turret Mount,
										" " } and are complete with
										" " } Feed cases.
	2	1	10	45	Armstrong's . .	1882	"	Carriage Plan. Steel .	"	Gatling English Service Cartridge.
2nd	60	1	10	45	" . .	1882	"	" " "	"	" " "
	104	1	10	443	" . .	1882	"	Y Mount	"	French Gras Cartridge.
	—	1	10	45	Armstrong's . .	1876	Drum		Good	Gatling Cartridge, English Service
	—	1	10	45	Colt's Co., U.S.A.	1873	"		"	45 Cartridge, U. S. Service
	150	1	10	42	"	1873	"		"	Russian Berdau Cartridge
	163	2	10	42	"	1878	"		"	" " brass breech, short barrels.
	3	1	10	42	"	1878	"	On Sheet-Steel Carriage.	"	" " long "
	—	2	10	42	"	1878	"	" "	"	" " " "
	—	1	10	45	"	1878	Straight	" "	"	U. S. Service Cartridge " " "
	—	1	10	45	"	1884	"	" "	"	" " all brass case, 24 barrels.
3rd	—	1	5	42	"	1884	Drum		"	Russian Cartridge, brass breech, single frame.
	—	1	6	42	Russia "	1885	Straight		"	" " all brass case.
	—	1	6	4	"	1885	Accles		"	" " "
	—	1	6	1	Colt's Co., U.S.A.	1876	Drum	Carriage Stee	Good	Brass breech.
	—	3	6	1	"	1872	"		"	" "
	—	2	10	65	"	1878	"		"	Cast-iron breech.
	—	2	10	65	"	1874	Drum		"	" "
	—	1	10	75	"	1873	"	On Field Carriage . . .	"	" "

- ¹ Pedestal mount with shield for ships, decks or bridge. Model 1893 for 42 in. and 43 in. calibre guns (Grenfell and Accles).
- ² Gun Carriage with three wheels, made 1886, at Armstrong's.
- ³ Limbers, steel, 2 with ammunition box, made by Grenfell and Accles, 1893.
- ⁴ Steel carriage wheels, made at Armstrong's.
- ⁵ Steel carriage wheels, made at Armstrong's.
- ⁶ Wood carriage trails, made at Colt's Armoury, U.S.A., 1876, for 42 in. and 45 in. calibre guns.

5 Wood carriage trails, complete with wheels for 65 in., 75 in., and 1 in. calibre guns, made at Colt's U.S.A., 1873 to 1876.

1 Steel gun carriage trail, no wheels, for 0.45 in. calibre gun, model at Armstrong's, 1880.

3 " " " " 1 in. gun, " "

1 " " " " with shield for 0.45 in. calibre gun, made at Armstrong's, 1880.

Further particulars and conditions of Sale may be obtained from the Auctioneers, Messrs. Claridge, Son, & Rennie,
5, Waterloo Street, Birmingham. [Telephone No. 1883.]

The Gazettes.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 13.

3rd Hussars.—Christian name of 2nd Lieut. Montague Burge is as now stated, and not as previously described.

4th Hussars.—Lieut. T. P. Tew placed on temp. half-pay on account of ill-health.

7th Hussars.—Capt. F. W. Wormald to be Adjt., vice Capt. C. E. G. Norton, appointed to staff.

Cavalry Depot.—Lieut.-Col. E. Hegan resumes appointment of Lieut.-Col. (Nov. 1).

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

4th Batn.—Lieut. J. W. Ritchie resigns his commission 6th Batn.—Lieut. W. Burton Stewart resigns his commission; Pte. Walter G. Gardyne to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Oct. 11).

14th Batn.—Sergt. Norman S. Rouse to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (July 7).

16th Batn.—Lieut. C. Brook, from Lieut., to be Adjt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (March 13).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Lieut. (District Officer) F. R. N. Orford seconded for service as an Adjt. of Volunteer Artillery (Oct. 22).

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

Majors to be Lieut.-Cols.:—E. S. May, R. E. Boothby, W. F. L. Lindsay, R. Bannatine-Allason, and H. C. Dunlop, Professor, Ordnance College, on augmentation; Hon. A. Sidney, vice H. C. Dunlop, removed for service on staff; Sir Godfrey V. Thomas, Bart., on augmentation.

Cpts. to be Majors:—F. A. G. Y. Elton, vice C. T. Robinson, appointed to staff (Sept. 22); E. J. Duffus, vice J. Hanwell killed in action; F. Potts, vice A. W. Gay, appointed to staff (Oct. 31); G. F. Milne, employed on staff, vice E. S. May; J. R. Wilson, vice R. E. Boothby; A. G. Glanville, vice W. F. L. Lindsay; G. Calvert, vice R. Bannatine-Allason; C. J. U. Morris, vice Hon. A. Sidney; H. L. Powell, vice Sir G. V. Thomas, Bart.

Promotions to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts. antedated:—G. H. Stobart to Sept. 22, vice F. A. G. Y. Elton; A. E. B. Fair to Oct. 1, vice W. Thwaites, appointed Divnl. Adjt.; R. A. Birley, to Oct. 6, vice J. C. G. A. Hankey, appointed Divnl. Adjt.

Lieuts. to be Cpts.:—F. T. Brown, on Seconded List; H. F. E. Lewin, vice J. Dalby, appointed Divnl. Adjt. (Oct. 12); W. E. Edwards, on seconded list; R. E. Paley, vice H. W. Taylor, killed in action (Oct. 14); E. C. W. D. Walthall, vice C. H. Wilson (Oct. 23); E. M. Conolly, vice F. E. L. Barker (Oct. 26); M. J. F. Fitz-Gerald, vice E. J. Duffus (Oct. 31); W. A. S. Gemmell, vice H. Ramsden, appointed Divnl. Adjt. (Nov. 1).

Gentlemen, from South Australian Local Military Force, to be 2nd Lieuts. (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 14):—Pte. William H. Gosse, from South Australian Mtd. Inf.; Pte. Frank G. Saunders, from South Australian Mtd. Inf. Capt. C. H. Wilson (Oct. 23) and F. E. L. Barker (Oct. 26) to be Divnl. Adjts. on augmentation.

Royal Garrison Artillery.

Date of restoration to establishment of supy. Capt. A. H. Lee is Aug. 22, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 5.

Lieuts. to be Cpts.:—R. B. M. Cameron, vice C. R. B. Owen, seconded (Oct. 1); V. L. Beer, vice J. E. L. Bruce, seconded (Oct. 5); G. de S. Dudley, Divnl. Adjt.; E. Davison, on augmentation (Oct. 10); B. R. R. Rambaut, vice C. W. Brownlow, promoted (Nov. 1).

Capt. S. F. Alderson to be Divnl. Adjt., vice Capt. Hon. M. R. C. Ward, vacated appointment (Oct. 1).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Highlanders.—Sergt. Charles Stirling (Lovat's Scouts) granted temp. rank of 2nd Lieut. in Army whilst attached to regt. for duty (June 14).

Royal Berkshire Regt.—Promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. G. P. S. Hunt, antedated to May 25, vice A. S. Turner, promoted.

Royal Irish Rifles.—Major A. T. Swaine to be Lieut.-Col., vice Brevet-Col. C. Haggard, placed on half-pay (Oct. 28).

Army Service Corps.—Christian names of 2nd Lieut. Nevil Bursey Hodgson are as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Sept. 14.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Qrmr. and Hon. Lieut. C. F. Dear placed on temp. half-pay on account of ill-health (Oct. 13).

Hong Kong Regt.—Subadars Nur Khan and Karam Khan retire on retired pay; Jemadars Mehdi Khan (vice Nur Khan) and Rang Shah (vice Karam Khan) to be Subadars; Pay Havildars Ghulan Muhammad (vice Medi Khan), and Nur Khan (vice Rang Shah) to be Jemadars (Sept. 8).

STAFF.

Major-Gen. H. R. Abadie, C.B., to command troops in Jersey whilst Lieut.-Governor in that Island, vice Lieut.-Gen. Sir E. Hopton, K.C.B., whose period of service in appointment expires.

Col. E. B. Courtenay, from 10th Regimental District, to be an A.A.G., vice Col. A. H. Fraser, deceased (Oct. 8).

Major L. H. Reid, I.S.C., to be a Deputy-Judge-Advocate-Gen., China Expedition, with effect from date of assuming duty.

Appointment to staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. J. Reeves, from Royal Irish Fusiliers, is graded as a Col. on staff whilst commanding eastern line of communication, east of Dalmanutha (Sept. 14).

Army Pay Dept.—Officers permanently appointed to Dept.:—Capt. W. E. O. C. Blunt, from Royal Irish Rifles, retaining his substantive rank (Jan. 29, 1898); Lieut. (now Capt.) S. D. Worgan, from Royal Sussex Regt., with substantive rank of Capt. in Army (May 7, 1898); Lieut. (now Capt.) C. N. Hunter, from Gloucester Regt., with substantive rank of Capt. in Army (Sept. 20, 1898); Lieut. N. G. Thompson, Norfolk Regt., to be Paymr. (Dec. 29, 1899).

Brevet.—Lieut.-Col. L. A. Hope, C.B., A.S.C., to be Col. (Oct. 10).

Half-pay.—Major H. St. L. Wood, D.S.O., from Dorset Regt., to be Lieut.-Col.

MEMORANDA.

Lieut. Col. E. W. Mapleton, M.B., R.A.M.C., granted local rank of Col. whilst P.M.O. of a Division in South Africa, from Sept. 30, 1899, and not as stated in the Gazette of Nov. 2.

Lieut.-Col. A. H. Coles, D.S.O., granted local rank of Col. whilst employed as Commandant of Uganda Rifles (Oct. 1).

Capt. F. G. Cardew, I.S.C., granted temp. rank of Major whilst 2nd Deputy-Secretary in Military Secretariat of Government of India.

Rev. E. W. Allen granted temp. rank of Chaplain to Forces 1st Class whilst serving with Imperial Representative Corps (Nov. 12).

Temp. rank of Lieut. in Army, granted to Lieut. E. Southey, withdrawn from Nov. 14, that officer rejoining 3rd Batn. South Wales Borderers.

Officers granted local rank of Lieut. in Army whilst employed with West African Regt.:—Lieut. G. Vesian-Pic, 4th Batn. Royal Irish Regt. (June 21); Lieut. S. M. Neill, 6th Batn. Rifle Brigade (June 27); Lieut. T. D. Pottinger, 3rd Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers (Aug. 7).

Reserve of Officers.—Lieut. H. P. Travers, 3rd V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt., to be Lieut.

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Donegal (S. Div.).—2nd Lieut. M. H. Corsellis to be Lieut.

Suffolk (E. Div.).—Edward H. Robinson to be 2nd Lieut.

INFANTRY.

4th Batn. Royal Lancaster Regt.—Ceil W. Brennd to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 1).

6th Batn. Royal Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. A. L. Thomson, 4th V.B. East Surrey Regt., to be 2nd Lieut.

4th Batn. West Yorkshire Regt.—Promotion of Lieut.

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.'S

Overcoats for Winter.

Newest Styles, Fashionable Materials.

Overcoats for Winter.

In all sizes. Ready for Immediate Use.

Overcoats for Winter.

Cut by our own Cutters, and made in Best West-end Style at Moderate Prices for Cash Payments.

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.,

12, 10, & 8, BROOK STREET, . . .

. . . HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,

Naval and Military Outfitters,

WEST END BRANCH—

19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.

Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard.

Telegraphic Address—

Do. Do. 5810 Avenue.

"Realistic, LONDON."

New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements

(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)

BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.

REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.

Infantry, 35s. 6d.

Cavalry, 38s. 6d.

ON APPROVAL.

MARTELL'S

THREE STAR.

"A genuine old Brandy."—
Medical Press.

To MILITARY MEN and others.

PICKERING'S
BLANCO.

For whitening all articles of Buff or Buckskin Leather, such as Military Equipments, White Helmets, Gloves, Cricket and Tennis Shoes, Tennis Balls, Hunting Thongs, Whips, and a multitude of similar articles.

Removes stains and discolourations, and ensures evenness of colour and a soft, silky surface of glossy satiny appearance. Much better and more convenient than pipe-clay, as there is no trouble of preparation, and it is much cheaper in the end.

BLANCO is put up in cup-shaped blocks (registered design), and with the specially made non-corrosive zinc box, will be found the handiest article for the purposes named.

Sold at every Canteen, also by Iron-mongers, Saddlers, &c.

Manufacturers, JOSEPH PICKERING and SONS, Sheffield, England.

London Offices: St. George's House, Eastcheap, E.C.

WHEN BUYING = =
= = A CHEAP BICYCLE

look at the tyres. If they are not

DUNLOP TYRES

the machine is not cheap at any price.

THE DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD.,
ALMA STREET, COVENTRY; 160 to 166, CLERKENWELL ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

and Instr. of Musketry F. H. Edwards to be Capt., announced in Gazette of Sept. 4, should have borne date April 11, not as therein stated.

5th Batn. Lancashire Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. K. Luttman-Johnson to be Lieut., and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieuts. G. C. Blair, I. K. Watts-Jones, and A. H. Watson to be Lieuts.; Horace Lloyd to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Lieut. H. I. Webb; Bowen seconded for service in South Africa (Aug. 23) Robert H. Burkhardt to be 2nd Lieut. (Oct. 31).

3rd Batn. Scottish Rifles.—William E. Morier to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 5).

3rd Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. A. C. K. Magill to be Lieut.

3rd Batn. West Riding Regt.—Capt. H. J. Johnston to be Major (Oct. 14).

4th Batn. Border Regt.—Richard E. Dent to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 5).

3rd Batn. Derbyshire Regt.—Capt. J. P. B. Reed to be Instr. of Musketry, vice Capt. H. E. D. Wise, who vacates appointment (Oct. 1).

3rd Batn. Northampton Regt.—2nd Lieuts. A. L. Airy and P. B. Allott to be Lieuts. (Nov. 6).

3rd Batn. (Royal West Kent Regt.).—2nd Lieuts. A. P. Stone and C. M. Allfrey to be Lieuts. (Nov. 2).

6th Batn. Middlesex Regt.—Major H. W. H. Brencley granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.; Capt. G. E. Barker granted hon. rank of Major (Nov. 14).

3rd Batn. York and Lancaster Regt.—2nd Lieuts. H. Hincks, F. G. A. Henderson, C. De G. Murray, C. C. Chaytor, B. B. Shepherd, R. E. Key, J. V. M. Biscoe, and K. R. Davies to be Lieuts. (Oct. 30); George G. D'A. Macpherson to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 5).

5th Batn. Royal Irish Rifles.—2nd Lieuts. C. G. Cole-Hamilton, W. M. Cole-Hamilton, G. A. Chatterton, and B. C. James to be Lieuts. (Oct. 18); Polliott A. Stokes to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 4).

4th Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers.—Capt. and Hon. Major H. Hart retires under para. 78 Militia Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform.

3rd Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers.—Arthur E. King to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 3). 4th Batn.: 2nd Lieuts. T. J. Goodlake and W. Emerson to be Lieuts.

3rd Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. F. J. Reid to be Lieut.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Lanark.—Sir Windham R. C. Anstruther, Bart., to be 2nd Lieut.

Pembroke.—Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. Sir C. E. G. Philipps, Bart., retires under para. 64 Yeomanry Regulations, with permission to retain his rank, and wear uniform of regt.

West Somerset.—Lieut. A. M. Myburgh to be Capt. and to remain seconded.

Stafford.—Capt. H. S. Charrington granted hon. rank of Major; Supy. Capt. H. A. Clowes to be Capt. on establishment; Lieut P. S. Foster to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. A. W. Walker to be Lieut.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

1st Devon (W. Div. R.G.A.).—George L. Thornton, Reynolds D. Ward, and Reginald B. Rockley to be 2nd Lieuts.

2nd Durham (Seaham) (W. Div. R.G.A.).—2nd Lieuts. T. J. Allison, W. A. Ellis, and L. Thorman to be Lieuts.

1st Gloucester.—Capt. and Hon. Major J. Weston-Stevens resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps.

1st Lincoln (W. Div. R.G.A.).—Lieut. and District Officer F. R. N. Orford, B.G.A., to be Adjt. vice Major C. Battiscombe, B.F.A., vacated appointment on promotion to field rank; Lieut. and District Officer F. R. N. Orford B.G.A., granted temp. rank of Capt. whilst serving as Adjt. (Oct. 22nd).

2nd Sussex.—Lieut. C. W. Weston resigns his commission.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (VOLUNTEERS).

1st Aberdeen.—Robert Mitchell to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd Cheshire (Railway).—2nd Lieut. E. Davenport to be Lieut.

1st Devon and Somerset.—2nd Lieut. J. F. Finch and Surg.-Lieut. H. P. V. Wiggins resign their commissions. 1st Lanark.—Major J. S. Park to be Lieut.-Col.; Capt. and Hon. Major H. Reid to be Major; Lieut. J. G. Allan resigns his commission.

RIFLE.

Queen's R.V. Brigade Royal Scots.—Capt. G. C. Watson granted hon. rank of Major; Lieut. C. M. Black resigns his commission. 8th V.B.: 2nd Lieuts. D. Weir, R. Christie, J. Denholm, and P. W. Stuart to be Lieuts.

1st V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt.—Lieut. G. A. Johnson resigns his commission. 2nd V.B.: John F. Williams to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. East Kent Regt.—2nd Lieuts. G. H. W. Reece, G. S. Chittenden, L. J. Crowdy, and G. L. Matthews to be Lieuts. (Nov. 14). Cadet Corps attached to 2nd V.B.; Hon. Capt. W. G. Smith to be Capt. (July 1); Edward C. Lester to be Lieut.; Charles Baylay, to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. Northumberland Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. W. L. Benthall to be Lieut.

2nd V.B. Royal Fusiliers.—Major W. W. Thompson and Capt. and Hon. Major F. G. Williams resign their commissions, with permission to retain their ranks and to wear uniform of battalion; 2nd Lieut. A. B. C. Francis resigns his commission.

4th V.B. Liverpool Regt.—2nd Lieuts. W. Curphey, J. A. Macfie, F. H. Bacon, C. A. Bean, and E. L. Hughes to be Lieuts.

4th V.B. Devon Regt.—Appointment of Mr. F. Day to be 2nd Lieut. (supy.), which appeared in Gazette of Oct. 23, is post-dated to Nov. 1; Frederic W. Kendle to be Surg.-Lieut.

1st V.B. Suffolk Regt.—Thomas A. Pytches to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd (Hertford) V.B. Bedford Regt.—Capt. A. M. Whitaker, West Riding Regt. to be Adjt., vice Capt. R. M. Foot, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, vacated appointment (Nov. 2).

1st V.B. Lancashire Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. J. Kenyon to be Lieut.

1st V.B. Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—George Findlay to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Roxburgh and Selkirk (Border).—Athole S. Hay and Thomas D. Darling to be 2nd Lieuts.; Rev. J. J. Drummond to be Acting Chaplain.

1st Lanark.—Henry T. Rodger to be 2nd Lieut. (Supy.).

1st (Bristol) V.B. Gloucester Regt.—Capt. G. H. Wetherman to be Major.

3rd (Cumberland) V.B. Border Regt.—John Parkin to be 2nd Lieut.

Cadet Corps attached to 1st Cinque Ports.—Francis W. B. Smart, George H. Peacock, William C. Mayne, and Heylyn F. Matheson to be 2nd Lieuts. (Oct. 23).

1st V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Capt. and Hon. Major R. Hewett to be Major, and to be made Supy. whilst serving with A.S.C. Co., of Portsmouth Vol. Inf. Brigade; Capt. G. H. Stilwell to be Major; 2nd Lieuts. J. M. Blair, H. T. Green, W. B. Stilwell and F. P. David to be Lieuts.; Edward T. Martin to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd (Duke of Connaught's Own) V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Capt. and Hon. Major J. H. Appleby resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and to wear uniform of Batn. 4th V.B.: Capt. A. H. Loyd resigns his commission; Lieut. J. Gott to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. H. Smith and P. W. Beresford to be Lieuts.

1st (Pembroke) V.B. Welsh Regt.—2nd Lieut. A. G. Edwards resigns his commission; Delmé W. C. Davies-Evans to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. Essex Regt.—Albert E. Charlwood to be 2nd Lieut.

Cadet Corps (Repton School) attached to 1st V.B. Derbyshire Regt.—Hon. Capt. R. A. H. MacFarland to be Capt. (July 1).

1st Nottingham (Robin Hood).—2nd Lieut. W. S. Marshall to be Lieut. (Nov. 14). Cadet Corps (Nottingham High School): Hon. Capt. S. R. Trotman to be Capt. (July 1).

1st V.B. Royal Berkshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. C. F. Simonds to be Lieut.

2nd V.B. Royal West Kent Regt.—Lionel F. Schooling to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. Shropshire L.I.—2nd Lieuts. W. Heasman,

W. N. B. Perrott, J. P. Kitson, and G. H. D. Coates to be Lieuts.

4th Middlesex (West London).—2nd Lieut. W. D. Bushell to be Lieut.

2nd London.—Edward G. Shettle to be 2nd Lieut.; Rev. J. R. Smith, B.A., to be Acting Chaplain.

5th V.B. Durham L.I.—Thomas Lambert, jun., to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. Gordon Highlanders.—Alexander McD. Reid to be 2nd Lieut.

7th Middlesex (London Scottish).—Lieut. L. J. S. Jackson resigns his commission; Supy. Lieut. B. C. Green to be Lieut. on establishment.

VOLUNTEER MEDICAL STAFF CORPS.

Manchester Companies.—Walter Whitehead to be Hon. Surg.-Col. on appointment as Hon. Commandant. MEMORANDUM.

Staffordshire Volunteer Infantry Brigade.—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. J. H. Wilkinson, 1st V.B. South Stafford Regt., vacates appointment of Brig.-Major, under para. 58d Volunteer Regulations (Nov. 1).

[Where not otherwise mentioned the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Nov. 14.]

FRIDAY EVENING.

CHANCERY OF THE ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE,

DOWNING STREET, NOV. 14.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to give directions for the following appointments to the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George:—

To be Ordinary Members of the 3rd Class, or Companions of the said Most Distinguished Order: Major S. C. N. Grant, R.E., for services in connection with Venezuela Boundary Arbitration Commission; Brevet-Major M. Peake, R.A., for services in Egypt.

To be an Honorary Member of the 3rd Class, or Companions of the said Most Distinguished Order: Sheikh Sidi Ali el Morghani.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 16.

Derbyshire Regt.—Gen. Sir Mark Walker, K.C.B., V.C., to be Col., vice Gen. F. A., Lord Chelmsford, G.C.B., transferred to 2nd Life Guards (Sept. 27).

5th Dragoon Guards.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Corpl. C. G. Mills, from New South Wales Mtd. Inf., which appeared in Gazette of July 27, is cancelled.

8th Hussars.—Capt. J. A. Henderson to be Major, vice Brevet Lieut.-Col. P. W. J. Le Gallais, killed in action (Nov. 7).

9th Lancers.—Capt. the Hon. C. H. C. Willoughby seconded for service on staff (Nov. 8).

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

2nd Batn.—John H. O. Gibb to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Aug. 20).

7th Batn.—Temp. Major P. J. Browne to command batn., with temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. in Army (July 25).

11th Batn.—Temp. Major R. B. Firman to command batn., with temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. in Army (Aug. 22).

13th Batn.—Lieut.-Col. A. G. Holland resigns appointment of second in command (Oct. 21).

19th Batn.—To be Lieuts., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army:—Sergts. Hamilton Baillie (July 19), W. A. B. Daniells (Sept. 15), and Andrew Roddick (Sept. 21). Pte. Lewis J. Weatherbe to be Medical Officer, with temp. rank of Capt. (July 31).

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut.-Col. J. Burn-Murdoch retires on an Indian pension (May 28).

In consequence of retirement of Lieut.-Col. J. Burn-Murdoch promotions of the undermentioned Officers are antedated:—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. R. A. Wahab, C.I.E., to May 28; Lieut.-Col. L. B. Friend to Aug. 12, G. E. Shute to Sept. 24, F. Rainsford-Hannay to Oct. 1; Majors E. F. Taylor to May 28, T. Harrison-Topham D.S.O., to Aug. 12, A. G. Hunter-Weston to Sept. 24, A. R. Reynolds to Oct. 1; Capt. W. H. Beach to May 28, E. G. Farquharson to

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

OVERALLS A SPECIALITY.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

June 6, A. F. Cumberlege, to July 25, H. H. Turner to Aug. 12, C. O. Halliday to Sept. 24, R. H. Macdonald to Oct. 1.
Major H. de H. Haig to be Lieut.-Col., vice Brevet-Col. H. H. Hart, placed on half-pay (Oct. 22).
Capt. N. M. Hemming, from half-pay, to be Capt. with precedence next below Capt. G. H. Griffith, in succession to Major H. G. H. Haig (Nov. 1).
Promotion to Capt. of Lieut. W. E. Lees antedated to April 9, but not to carry back pay and allowances prior to Aug. 15.
Capt. H. W. Weekes to be Adj. of Training Batn., vice Capt. T. A. H. Bigge, resigned appointment (Nov. 1).
Superintending Clerk Ernest S. Standing to be Qrmr. with hon. rank of Lieut., supy. to establishment.

Grenadier Guards.—Seconding of Capt. Hon. G. A. A. Hood for special service in South Africa antedated to Nov. 18, 1899. Promotions to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts. antedated:—G. F. Trotter to Nov. 18, 1899, vice Hon. G. A. A. Hood; C. E. Corkran, Adj., to Nov. 18, 1899; E. D. Lord Loch, D.S.O., to Nov. 30, 1899, vice P. A. Clive, seconded; Hon. F. C. Stanley to Nov. 30, 1899.

Scots Guards.—Capt. A. C. Bell seconded for service on staff (Oct. 20).

Regimental District.—Col. H. de C. Rawlins, commanding 28th (Cameronians, Scottish Rifles) and 71st (Highland L.I.) Regimental Districts, retires on retired pay.

LINE BATTALIONS.

Yorkshire Regt.—Lieut. E. B. Pusey resigns his commission.

Essex Regt.—Promotion to Lieut.-Col. of Major C. Wood is antedated to Feb. 23, vice Brevet-Col. T. E. Stephenson, removed on appointment to staff; promotions to Major and Capt. respectively of Capt. H. Broadmead and Lieut. C. W. Barlow antedated to Feb. 23, in succession to Major C. Wood. Promotions to Lieut. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts. antedated:—G. W. Howard to Feb. 23, vice C. W. Barlow; W. H.

Kirk (since deceased) to Feb. 24, to complete establishment; W. A. Jacob to March 11, vice F. N. Parsons, killed in action.

Derbyshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. H. S. Butler resigns his commission; Lieut. M. K. Hodgson, from 3rd Batn. Norfolk Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. L. St. H. Morley, promoted.

Royal Berkshire Regt.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenant of Lieut. G. Wyll, from Tasmanian Contingent, notified in Gazette of Sept. 18, cancelled.

Middlesex Regt.—2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—E. M. Harris, vice A. Kingston, seconded; E. F. Osler on augmentation; D. R. Robinson, vice A. P. Macafee, promoted; N. E. G. Willoughby, vice S. W. Somerville, removed from the Service.

Royal Irish Rifles.—Capt. W. J. McWhinnie to be Major, vice A. T. Swaine, promoted (Oct. 28).

West India Regt.—Capt. to be Major:—V. C. Climo, vice H. C. Buck, removed from Army (June 27); F. A. Liston, vice A. R. Loscombe, promoted (Aug. 15).

Promotions to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts. antedated:—H. E. M. Hutchinson, to June 27, vice B. Faunce, seconded; J. A. Wellington to July 2, vice W. H. Hardyman, appointed Adj. 3rd Batn. Border Regt. Lieuts. to be Capt.:—H. T. Eckersley, vice H. A. Thorne, seconded (July 25); A. M. Byng, vice H. T. Eckersley, seconded for special service in West Africa (July 25). Surname of 2nd Lieut. H. E. Weekes is as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Aug. 17.

Royal Rifles Reserve Regt.—Major T. E. Milborne-Swinnerton-Pilkington, Reserve of Officers, Adj., ceases to belong to Regt. (Oct. 15).

Army Service Corps.—Capt. C. H. Dawson retires from the Service receiving a gratuity; Capt. H. Colquhoun removed from the Army, her Majesty having no further occasion for his services; Capt. G. W. R. Paul resigns his commission.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Lieut.-Col. R. W. Barnes retires on retired pay.

STAFF.

Capt. G. S. St. Aubyn, King's Royal Rifle Corps, resumes appointment of A.D.C. to Lieut.-Gen. (local Gen.) Sir F. W. Grenfell, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Malta and its Dependencies (Nov. 5).

Appointment to the Staff of the Lines of Communication made in South Africa confirmed:—Capt. C. Wooler, Cape Police, to be a Station Commandant, graded as a D.A.A.G. (Aug. 1).

Military Prison Dept.—Major C. R. Oswald-Brown, Reserve of Officers, to be Governor of a Military Prison, in succession to Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. H. Waring, retired pay (Nov. 12).

Army Chaplains' Dept.—Rev. W. F. Sorabie, M.A., Chaplain to the Forces 4th Class, to be Chaplain to the Forces 3rd Class (Sept. 11).

MEMORANDA.

Major-Gen. H. J. Hallows is placed on retired pay (Nov. 13).

Capt. (temp. Capt. in Army) N. A. Jarvie, 4th Batn. Highland L.I., is removed from the Army, Her Majesty having no further occasion for his services.

Capt. and Hon. Major T. E. W. Wellington, 4th Batn. Leinster Regt., granted temp. rank of Major in Army whilst Batn. is embodied (May 8).

Qrmr. and Hon. Lieut. G. Powell, Grenadier Guards, granted hon. rank of Capt. (Nov. 13).

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Nov. 17.]

ARRANGEMENTS, under Major-Gen. Egerton's direction, for the blockade of the Waziris, at the end of this month, are proceeding. The 9th Bombay Infantry from Baroda will shortly arrive at Dera Ismail Khan, while the 17th Bengal Infantry from Benares will also start for the Derajat as soon as they are free from cholera. The blockade is intended to be a most effective one, as the Mashuds will shortly discover.

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd. 23, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Cantens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

APLEY PELLATT & Co.
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing
Cross, London, W.C.
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA
MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

MEDICAL MAN, residing in beautiful pine district of Surrey, has VACANCY for RESIDENT PATIENTS. Can provide suite of rooms, with bath-room, &c., on first floor, facing south, and overlooking large shady garden. House stands high on 40ft. of gravel, and is surrounded by pine woods; splendid neighbourhood for all chest complaints and rheumatic affections; every care and comfort; young society; billiard room; suitable as a permanent home for a chronic invalid with attendant.—Address, "Consultant," care Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

BOARD and EDUCATION.—A WIDOW (daughter of late Army officer) is desirous of taking entire charge of two or more children. General English subjects, Piano, French, and German.—References, &c., on application to Mrs. Turner, 34, Mount Pleasant Road, Lewisham, S.E.

BRIGHTON—PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENT (as homelike as possible) for those requiring Medical, Surgical, and Nursing care. Medical baths, packs, massage, electricity. Own doctor can attend if wished, or their treatment carried out. Close to sea, overlooking private grounds. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO COMFORT, NURSING, DIET. For Terms address, Medical Sup., Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

COUNTRY HOUSE and GROUNDS in KENT TO LET for a few months; ten rooms and every convenience; bath, stabling, and horse and carriage. Ten guineas a month. Half an hour from London. High, dry, and healthy.—Egean, Glentworth, Orpington, Kent.

HUNTING BOX, Co. KILDARE.

CHARMINGLY SITUATED, within four miles of Salins and five from Naas, standing on seven acres nicely planted within easy distance of three packs of hounds. House contains three sitting-rooms, three bedrooms, dressing-room, two servants' rooms, hot and cold bath; all newly painted and papered throughout. Conservatory off drawing-room, and new sanitation. Stabling for five horses, four roomy loose boxes, one stall, all well floored and ventilated; coach-house, two harness-rooms, extensive men's rooms, all newly done up. Would be let furnished or unfurnished for three hunting seasons consecutively. Further loose boxes would be constructed if required. Apply E. Chambré Hardman, 14, Molesworth Street, Dublin.

PARENTS GOING ABROAD and Others.

CHILDREN RECEIVED in pretty country home of Gentlewoman who is a trained nurse, and has been governess.—Miss North, Green Arbour, near Dunmow, Essex.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN of GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grocers, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employments, London."

UNFURNISHED.—No. 4, Alexandra Terrace, PENZANCE. Three reception, six bedrooms and dressing-room, two attics, kitchen (both on the ground floor and basement), bath-room (hot and cold), small back garden; lovely view of Mount's Bay; rent £45.—Apply to Rev. T. Cawley, Morrab Villa, Penzance.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

TO BACHELORS.—CRANBOURN MANSIONS (London Hippodrome), close to Piccadilly and Clubland.

A few beautifully decorated, combined BED-SITTING-ROOMS to be LET in this magnificent building, with valet and attendance.

FURNISHED OR UNFURNISHED. Lift, electric light, lavatory (h. and c.) to each room, liveried attendant, telephone, and all modern conveniences.—Particulars of the Estate Managers, Messrs. Brewett and Taylor, 9, Warwick Court, Holborn, W.C.

WANTED A CAPTAIN SUPER-INTENDENT for the Certified Industrial School Ship "SOUTHAMPTON," at HULL. Salary, £200 per annum and £40 for ration money. The Captain Superintendent and family are required to live on board. Applicants must not be under 35 and not exceeding 52 years of age. Application forms and conditions of service may be obtained from the undersigned.

Applications must be received by the Secretary not later than the 30th inst. Canvassing strictly prohibited.

Hull, Nov. 8, 1900.

F. C. MANLEY, Secretary.

26 and 27, Bishop Lane, Hull.

WANTED for the Volunteer Battalion, Leicestershire Regiment, an ORDERLY-ROOM CLERK. Must have had experience.—Apply in writing to the Adjutant, The Magazine, Leicester.

WANTED.—MAN COOK for OFFICERS' MESS of the third and fourth battalions Worcestershire Regiment (one mess).—Apply Mess President, Blenheim Barracks, Aldershot.

HART AND SON,

60, Artillery Place, Woolwich,
(Established 100 Years), has
FOR SALE

Nearly New REGULATION UNIFORMS

for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices.

Gold and Silver Dress
BELTS, SABRETACHES, and SASHES

for Sale or on Hire.

All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver
Lace, &c., bought for cash.

THE STANDARD LIFE

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.

LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C.,
and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.

ASSURANCES and LOANS

can be effected by

MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS

in Government Service,

on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business.

Annual Revenue exceeds £1,100,000

Bonus Additions Declared exceed £6,750,000

Accumulated Funds exceed £8,400,000

Claims Paid exceed £17,000,000

A REVOLUTION IN FURNISHING

BY MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

MR. LABOUCHERE writes in "TRUTH"

"NORMAN & STACEY have introduced in their business an ingenious safeguard against the risk of loss to his widow or family through the death of the hater. THEY GIVE AN INSURANCE UPON HIS LIFE, so that if for instance a man gets £200 worth of Furniture on the hire-purchase system, and dies when instalments to the amount of £190 have been paid, not only does the furniture become the property of his representatives, BUT THE £10 IS ALSO REFPAID TO THEM."

N.B.—Cash buyers are also given a Free Life Insurance Policy equal to the amount they have spent.

NORMAN & STACEY, LD.,
118, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.

Moderate Prices. Free Delivery Town or Country. Call and view Stock before Furnishing locally, and compare Quality and Prices with those of other firms.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

THE DE VERE, THE PRINCE OF WALES, THE BROADWALK.

(Opposite Kensington Palace.)

Lift. Electric Light. Everything up to date. Tariff on application.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE),

QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE. Special Low £8 Pension Winter Tariff. Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS. For Tariff, address MANAGER.

Major-Gen. SIR STANHOPE WILLIAM JEPHSON, Bart., C.B., deceased.

PURSUANT to the provisions of an Act of Parliament (22 and 23 Victoria Chapter 35) intituled "An Act to further amend the law of property and to relieve Trustees." Notice is hereby given that all creditors and persons having any debts claims or demands upon or against the estate of Major-Gen. Sir Stanhope William Jephson C.B. late of 24 Elphinstone Road Southsea in the county of Hants Baronet deceased (who died on or about the 20th day of June 1900) and Probate of whose Will was granted by the Winchester District Registry of the Probate Division of Her Majesty's High Court of Justice on the 18th day of August 1900 to Desmond Gerald Manners FitzGerald and Richard Mountney Jephson are hereby required to send in particulars in writing of their debts claims or demands to me the undersigned on or before the 21st day of December next.

And notice is hereby further given that at the expiration of such time the said Desmond Gerald Manners FitzGerald and Richard Mountney Jephson will proceed to distribute the assets of the said deceased amongst the persons entitled thereto having regard only to the claims and demands of which they shall then have had notice.

Dated this sixth day of November 1900.

GEO. COSENS PRIOR,
92 High Street Portsmouth,
Solicitor for the said Desmond Gerald Manners FitzGerald and Richard Mountney Jephson executors.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA,

SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS

TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate.

"Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd. Batn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wiltshire Regiment, August, 1896."

Watch and Clock Makers.

"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., B.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

REVERSIONS AND

LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand.
Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

THE NEW

STRAP LEGGING.

LATEST STYLE.

DENNISON'S PATENT, No. 6705. Stohwasser and Winter's Licence.

SHOOTING.

RIDING.

WALKING.

HUNTING.

MILITARY.

IMPERIAL

YEOMANRY.

VOLUNTEERS.

Lord Loch's

Own

IMPERIAL

YEOMANRY.

Order through your Saddler, Bootmaker, or Outfitter.

Sole Manufacturers,

WALLACE, BAILEY & WILKINS,

176, Long Lane, Bermondsey, LONDON S.E.

Extract from the "Shooting Times."

"We have recently given this Legging a severe trial through some of the roughest going in the Kingdom, and can recommend it to Sportsmen as extremely comfortable, and a most shapely improvement on the older forms of Gaiters."

"PALL MALL EAST, CHANCERY CROSS."

"The Denison Patent Strap Leggings have given complete satisfaction, and I am convinced that they are the most comfortable Leggings for Riding and Shooting."—LEWIS H. LLOYD.

The Baby.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

This Notice is published in substitution for that which appeared in "Gazette" of Nov. 9:—

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 9.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following promotion in, and appointments to, the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, in recognition of services rendered during the recent disturbances in China:—

To be an Ordinary Member of the Military Division of the First Class, or Knights Grand Cross, of the said Most Honourable Order, viz.:—Vice-Admiral Sir E. H. Seymour, K.C.B.

To be Ordinary Members of the Military Division of the 3rd class, or Companions, of the said Most Honourable Order, viz.:—Capt. E. H. Bayly, R.N.; J. H. T. Burke, R.N.; G. A. Callaghan, R.N.; and J. R. Jellicoe, R.N.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 9.

With reference to notice in Gazette of Nov. 6, rank of W. T. C. Jones, R.M.L.I., upon whom Her Majesty has conferred the Distinguished Service Order, is Capt., and not Lieut., as therein stated.

Royal Marine Forces.—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. T. F. D. Bridge, R.M.L.I., to be A.D.C. to her Majesty, vice Crosbie, promoted (Oct. 19).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Asst.-Engr. A. Kerr to be Engr. (Nov. 7.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 12.

Clerks A. W. B. Messenger (Aug. 25) and J. E. A. Brown (Sept. 13) promoted to Asst.-Paymr.

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. S. P. Lister to be Lieut. (Nov. 8).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 13.

With reference to notice in Gazette of Nov. 9, name of Staff Surg. promoted to Fleet Surg. for services in China is John Lloyd Thomas, and not John Henry Thomas, as therein stated.

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 13.

Notice in Gazette of Nov. 9 in respect to promotion of Asst.-Engr. Cossey should read as follows:—Asst.-Engr. A. E. Cossey to be promoted to Engr. on completing the necessary qualifying service, and to Chief Engr. on completing 12 years' service.

In accordance with Order in Council of June 29, Asst.-Engr. F. M. Hall has been placed on retired list of his rank (Oct. 23).

Clerk W. T. Hollins to be Asst.-Paymr. (Aug. 25).

Boatswain J. Thornback promoted to Chief Boatswain (Nov. 1).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 14.

Acting Sub-Lieut. J. H. Bainbridge confirmed in rank of Sub-Lieut. (Oct. 15).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Frederick M. Jones to be Engr. (Oct. 8).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 15.

Acting Sub-Lieuts. confirmed in rank of Sub-Lieut.:—J. M. Willcocks (June 15), A. P. Le C. Faught (Sept. 15).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 16.

Additional promotions made for services in China:—Lieut. W. B. S. Wrey to be Commander; Asst.-Paym. H. G. Wilson to be Paym. (Nov. 9).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 10.

Staff-Paymaster.—M. Stephens to Hyacinth (Nov. 9).

Paymasters.—E. H. Eldred to Pique, C. F. Petch to Forte, J. E. Dathan to Pelorus (Nov. 9).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 12.

Commander.—R. P. Cochran to Medea (Nov. 3).
Sub-Lieutenant R.N.R.—A. J. May to Rodney, as acting for second period of twelve months' training (Nov. 10).

Engineer.—W. G. Ludgate to Duke of Wellington, for Seagull (Nov. 2).

Civil Practitioner.—W. H. H. Davey to be surgeon and agent at Liverpool (Nov. 10).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 14.

Commander.—Ronald B. M. Hall, R.N. (retired), to be Deputy-Governor of new naval prison at Portsmouth (Nov. 19).

Captains.—J. Durnford, C.B., D.S.O., to Algeria, for Medway Dockyard Reserve; Sir A. Milne, Bart., to Jupiter (Dec. 15).

Commander.—C. G. Treherne to President; for study at R.N. College (Nov. 13).

Lieutenants.—J. M. Steel to Forte (Nov. 13), R. M. Lambert to Assaye (Dec. 1), H. M. K. Betty to Hood (N.), R. H. Keate to Hood (as 1st), A. V. Vyvyan to Hood (G.), H. C. Pocock, R. F. Thom, D. G. Thyma, W. Hazell (R.N.R.) to Hood (undated).

Surgeon.—R. L. Price, M.B., to Vivid (Nov. 14).

Staff-Paymaster.—I. W. Taylor to Hood (undated).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 15.

Lieutenants.—H. B. Wilson to Tamar, F. B. Noble to Aurora, R. W. Johnson to Endymion (as 1st and T.), F. Brandt to Diadem (T.), C. P. Mansel to Barfleur, for Fame, in command; A. K. Betty to Briak, D. J. Munro to Melampus, for Skipjack (N.); M. L. Hulton to Pembroke (Nov. 14), C. F. Ballard to Aurora, on promotion; C. C. Walcott to Centurion, on promotion; E. O. Kennedy to Barfleur, A. G. Warren (as 1st), A. E. M. Hook (N.), R. C. Hoeking to Blanche (Nov. 20); S. E. Deacon to Pembroke (Nov. 24).

Sub-Lieutenants.—H. G. L. Oliphant to Surprise, M. B. Baillie-Hamilton to Halcyon, L. W. Patch to Salamander, C. Hornby to Speedy, G. A. Walls to Bruiser, for Canopus; R. Fitzmaurice to Banshee, for Royal Sovereign (Nov. 14); R. G. Hervey to Indefatigable, J. L. Forbes to Tribune, R. G. Stone to Pigeon, T. B. Scott to Partridge, C. C. H. Maitland-Addison to Aurora, V. H. Gascoigne to Endymion, H. W. Innes-Lillington to Barfleur (Nov. 23), A. L. Popham to Pylades (undated).

Publications.

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Camps, and Examinations.
Now Ready, 5th EDITION.

OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIDE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memos, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Book.
Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.

By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.

3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS.

Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables, Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

WM. CLOWES and SONS, 13, Charing Cross, S.W., and A. & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.

Of whom Reprint-Books, and Blocks may be had.
Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.

NOTES ON NAVAL STRATEGY AND TACTICS.

By Lieutenant H. STANSBURY, R.N.

PRICE 1s. POST FREE 1s. 1d.

Published by J. J. Keliher and Co., 33, King William Street, E.C., and 99, Victoria Street, S.W.

WORKS ON GEOMETRY.

By JOHN S. RAWLE, F.S.A.,

Late Examiner to the Science & Art Department.

PRactical PLANE & SOLID GEOMETRY,

Approved by the Science and Art Dept., &c.

MORE THAN 600 DIAGRAMS.

250th THOUSAND.
To Prepare Candidates for the Army, Navy, &c.

Price 1s. Bound in Cloth, 2s.

Class-Sheets for Practical Geometry. Price 1s.
Practical Geometry Test Papers. Price 4d.
Freehand Drawing Test Papers. Price 1s.

London:

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & Co. Ltd.

ARMY ALTERATIONS.

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date.

Subscription—5s. 6d. per annum, post free.
One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.

ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE.
With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations.
BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer,
Ashton-under-Lyne.

ALUMINIUM

Holds First Place for PORTABILITY.
It is three to five times Lighter than other metals, is non-poisonous, and does not tarnish.

Write for lists of Camping Outfits, Canteens, Mess-tins, Dekshais, Water Bottles, Flasks, Portable Baths, Sponge Boxes, Egg Cases, etc, etc.

THE LOUIS LEAKEY ALUMINIUM CO., LTD.,
127, FARRINGTON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

EVERITT'S PATENT Trousers Press and Stretcher.

PRICE
25/-

PRICE
25/-

Three of the great advantages of this Press are:—

Simplicity.

By the novel arrangement of the top bars and screws, a pair of trousers can be taken out or replaced in less than a minute.

Effectiveness.

When the pressure is applied the top board bends, thereby ensuring an equal pressure on all parts of the trousers, thus making it the ONLY PERFECT PRESS on the market.

Portability.

It is specially constructed for convenience of travellers, requiring, when folded the space of about 2 inches, and can be opened for use in half a minute.

Will take from One to Eight Pairs of Trousers, and any pair can be removed without disarranging the remainder.

To be obtained of all High-Class Tailors, and The Stores, or direct from the Patentee:

HARRY EVERITT, Tailor, 14, Maddox St., Regent St., London, W.

HEERING'S COPENHAGEN CHERRY BRANDY

Purveyor by Appointment to the Royal Danish and Imperial Russian Courts and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

Peter J. Heering

ESTABLISHED 1818.

SOLD THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Colonial Types.

A Complete List of the Coloured Military Types which depict the various COLONIAL FORCES, including Australian, S. African, Canadian, &c., &c., numbering 8 in all, will be sent post free on receipt of 4s. 4d.

Offices: 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

Publications.

NEW BOOKS for the COUNTRY GENTLEMAN and others.

Edited by NAT GOULD.

THE NEW SPORTING ANNUAL.

(Illustrated.)

An entirely New Publication, to be Published Annually, in November, 1901. It is most gratifying to publisher and editor to be able to announce that the first edition has been entirely taken up, and that already the printing of a second impression is taking place to meet the demand for Nov. 17.

Contributors:—

SIR HERBERT MAX. "THORMANBY"

WELL, M.P. E. SPENCER

NAT GOULD SYDENHAM DIXON

FOX RUSSELL &c., &c.

Gallery of Sporting Photographs, English and Colonial. Racing Pictures, 1901, &c., &c. Ready Saturday, Nov. 17.

By GEORGE F. UNDERHILL.

A CENTURY OF ENGLISH FOX-HUNTING, with a Coloured Frontispiece by John Leach.

Printed on hand-made paper and hand-drawn bound. 10s. 6d. net.

By FRANK T. BARTON, M.R.C.V.S.

THE VETERINARY MANUAL FOR HORSE OWNERS (and Agricultural Students).

An Entirely New and up-to-date Work with about 80 Illustrations from original drawings.

10s. 6d. net.

By "THORMANBY" (W. W. Dixon).

BOXERS and THEIR BATTLES.

Personal Recollections of Famous Fighters and Fighters. With 10 Portraits. 6s.

By W. C. A. BLEW.

RACING.—Famous Racehorses.—Trainers.—Jockeys.—Touts and Tipsters. 3s. 6d.

By NAT GOULD.

SPORTING SKETCHES.

An entirely new work by the well-known Sporting Novelist. Illustrated. Best edition, 4s. Boards, 2s.

OUTRIDDEN. 2nd Edition.

A stirring new Sporting Novel. 2s. 6d. Boards, 2s.

R. A. Everett and Co., 43, Essex Street, Strand.

The Times of India

OVERLAND WEEKLY EDITION.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year, including postage, 12s. 6d.

Half Year " " 6s. 6d.

Quarter " " 3s. 6d.

Per Copy " " 6d.

Re-posted from our London Office 1d. additional each Copy.

ADVERTISEMENTS WILL BE RECEIVED

At the "TIMES OF INDIA" Office, Bombay,

OR AT THE

LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Where all Orders from all parts of Great Britain and the Continent for the Daily and Weekly Editions of the "TIMES OF INDIA" should be addressed.

Advertisement Rates on Application.

LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, Ltd.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.

Established 1853.

Chairman—C. B. RIVINGTON, Esq., J.P., D.L.

Paid-up Capital—£20,000

Debentures and Debenture Stock—£20,000

REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.

W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM,
P.S.C.(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),35, HEREFORD SQUARE, S.W.
(one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station
Metropolitan and District Railways).MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION,
SEPT.—OCT., 1900.FIRST—MR. C. G. LESLIE, 24,060 Marks.*MR. H. G. SMITH, 14,517 Marks.These were the only two candidates sent up by Col. Needham.Mr. Leslie made 4,384 marks more than any other competitor; the next in order
of merit scoring only 19,676 marks.During the last three years all Colonel Needham's Pupils have been successful at the Militia Competitive Examinations.Prospectus and List of Successes on application.HOVE, SUSSEX.*MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,

Late the Border Regiment,

assisted by

Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late R.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.SEPTEMBER, 1900.*NEW REGULATIONS.*SECOND ARTILLERY— Marks.
J. Coldwell-Horsfall 16,790SIXTH INFANTRY—
A. V. P. Marten 16,153

Place	Name	Marks.
4th (Infantry)	B. G. A. Townshend	15,109
1st (Infantry)	* F. O. Koebel	14,105
2nd (Infantry)	C. F. F. Campbell	13,893

* Military subjects only.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5,862
Infantry	L. Aylmer	5,851
University	K. O. Goldie	5,653
	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY, and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.*No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.*Capt. M. M. FESTING.Resident and Non-resident Pupils received.
Prospectus with List of Successes on application.
Officers Coached by Correspondence.G. KIRCHHOFFER,
M.A., F.G.S., F.R.G.S.(Ex-Scholar & Honourman, Pembroke College, Cambridge).Receives Twelve Pupils for all Army
Examinations.OUR RESIDENT INSTRUCTORS.
GREAT FACILITIES FOR
MILITIA EXAMINATIONS.House stands on gravel soil, in the Pine-wood district. Cricket, Football, and
Tennis Grounds.TERMS and List of Successes on Application to KATELEY GRANGE,
Blackwater, Hants.*MILITIA COMPETITIVE,
SEPTEMBER, 1900.*Lieut.-Col. MOORES prepared for the above examination only four Officers, all of whom were successful, viz.:—

Lieut. MORGAN-JONES	19,261 marks.
" H. C. HALL	14,956 "
" H. D. MOORE	12,650 "
" C. J. A' COURT	11,568 "

PREVIOUS SUCCESSSES.15 Officers of the Militia, 62 Officers for promotion. Pupils are also prepared for WOOLWICH and SANDHURST Examinations.Redcliffe Gardens, Clarendon Rd., Southsea.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,

AND

MR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge), ECCLEFRESHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and
Non-Resident, forALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVER-
SITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of many years' successful experience.Careful individual Attention. Strong
Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical
Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer.
Competent Military Instructor.SUCCESSSES, 1900.*Militia Competitive, September.—C. A. de
D. Dalgligh, 7th Infantry, 16,114 marks; E.
Corbould-Warren, 10th Artillery, 13,114
marks; both first trial.Woolwich.—None sent up.*Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only Candidate.Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy,
TRINITY, CAMBRIDGE; Entrance, also PREVIOUS EXAMINATION.—J. Cundell.A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare;
and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION.*WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and UNIVERSITIES.MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.*Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PRE-
PARES A Limited Number of PUPILS.RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.RECENT SUCCESSSES.*WOOLWICH.*G. F. Farran 8001 marks Dec. 1898.
W. Burrell Hayley 9228 " Dec. 1899.
The only pupils sent up.SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.*Viscount Ingestre 7th Cavalry Cadetship.C. M. Truman Cavalry Cadetship.E. P. Grant Infantry Cadetship.G. Winne Finch Infantry Cadetship.B. H. Leatham Infantry Cadetship.G. E. Hawes Infantry Cadetship.C. A. Antrobus Infantry.E. H. Phipps Infantry.H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh Infantry.E. Neave Infantry.G. Wahab Indian Cadetship.COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.*H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.*MILITIA COMPETITIVE.*Colonel Russell, R.E. (ret'd.), and Staff,*CLAVINIA, WEYMOUTH,Prepare for this and other Military Examinations.

Postal Tuition for May Promotion Examination.

For prospectus and successes apply as above.

HOME SCHOOL FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.Home School for the Daughters of Gentlemen
in one of the healthiest suburbs of London. A thoroughly sound modern education is given to a limited number of young ladies, under the careful superintendence of an experienced lady principal,
assisted by accomplished masters and mistresses
(graduates).Pupils are prepared for the London University examinations, Royal Academy of Music, &c., when desired.References kindly permitted to His Grace the Archbishop of York, Sir William Howard Russell,
the Rev. Canon Duckworth, Colonel Swiney,
Judge Gates, parents of pupils, &c.

Address—

D. C. L., Elleray, Atkins Road, Clapham Park,
London, S.W.BUSINESS DIRECTORY.*ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1,
CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.ARMY TAILOR AND MILITARY OUTFITTER.—F. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench
Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.BREECHES MAKERS AND MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW,
BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.GUN AND RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.,
PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. 303 Rifles a spécialité.MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN, Regimental Tailors for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., EDINBURGH (late 27, North Bridge).MILITARY TAILORS AND BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms
strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.HOTEL DIRECTORY.*BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well
Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining,
Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea
Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.DUBLIN.—SHELBOURNE HOTEL.
First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south
aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate.
An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This
Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL and QUEEN'S HOTEL.—
Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

Educational.

THE
COLONIAL COLLEGE &
TRAINING FARMS,
HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have
unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.Full information from the Director at above address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria Street, Westminster.AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,
ASPATRIA,
Cumberland.Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.
WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, & PROMOTION.
CAPTAIN E. C. HEATH.

For prospectus and successes apply—

33, BOUVERIE SQUARE,FOLKESTONE.Special preparation by Correspondence for MAY PROMOTION EXAM.TURKISH & ARABIC.*SCHOLARSHIPS. REWARDS.Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S DOUBLE success at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish and Arabic, held on October 16 and 17, 1900, was with Major W. E. Morton, R.E., Qualified Interpreter at FIRST TRIAL in BOTH Languages, with marks 556 and 643, and mostly prepared by correspondence from London at Mooltan, Punjab,
India.Also Colonel E. Stephenson Essex Regiment,
Qualified Interpreter in Turkish, at First Trial,
with 667 marks; Major H. A. Curtis, R.A., and FIFTEEN other officers with high marks.Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-STANI, RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.

Distance offers no hindrance to success.

Intending Candidates should begin work early.

Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.

BRIGHTON—Crescent House School.A. H. THOMAS, M.A., Oxon.

(Late 2nd Master O.M.C.),

OFFERS A SOUND GENERAL EDUCATION

to Boys preparing for

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND NAVY.

Reduced Fees offered to Sons of Officers serving in South Africa.MILITIA COMPETITIVE.*CAPTAIN FULLER, late R.E.,

Prepares a few Resident and Non-resident Pupils for the above.

Address, 12, Suffolk Square, Cheltenham.

SANDECOTES SCHOOL, PARK-
STONE, DORSET.A High-class School, at Moderate Fees, for the Daughters of Gentlemen, where the aim is to train girls to be practical, refined, womanly women. Every care and comfort for delicate children. Large grounds; tennis and fives courts; playing fields. Pupils prepared for the University and other Examinations. Head Mistress, Miss Sophie M. Smith (National Sciences Tripos, Cambridge), assisted by a highly qualified staff. Two entrance Scholarships for competition in Dec. for girls under 12 and 15 years respectively.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH

AND

MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge), Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors.PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for
the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITIES atCEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE*HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;

For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.R.

Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."

Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and

7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT

(150 yards from the Station), for Promotion

Candidates and Day Pupils.

Telephone, "217, Kensington."

List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed, will be sent on application.SANDHURST, WOOLWICH,*INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SER-*VICE, and UNIVERSITIES.*MR. J. J. GREVATT

(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY,for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.A Barrister on Staff assists Candidates for
DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.

Prospectus with list of successes on application.

WORK WAS RESUMED AUGUST 15, 1900.57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

Shipping.

INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA,
QUEENSLAND, BURMAH,
PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVA-
TION COMPANY, LIMITED.BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to

CALCUTTA.	ZANZIBAR.
MADRAS.	MOMBASSA.
COLOMBO.	BRISBANE.
RANGOON.	BATAVIA.
MAURITIUS.	ROCKHAMPTON.
BOMBAY.	TOWNSVILLE.
KURACHIEE.	MARYBOROUGH.
BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo
to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH,
EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great
Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House,
Northumberland Avenue, W.C.GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square,
Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock
House, Billiter Street, E.C.P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA,
CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN
MAIL SERVICES.*P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS
to GIBRALTAR, MAR-
SEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN,
BOMBAY, KURACHIEE, CALCUTTA,
CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN,
AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TIC-
KETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.—For particulars apply
at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall
Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue,
W.C.BIBBY LINE

TO

MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMBO,
RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA
(via Tuticorin).

Tons.	Liverpool.	Marseilles.
DERBYSHIRE*	6635	Nov. 17 Nov. 24
LANCASHIRE	4244	Dec. 13 Dec. 20
SHROPSHIRE*	5789	Jan. 10 Jan. 17

These marked * are twin-screw steamers.

These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs.
Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.Every possible comfort for first class passengers only.This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles
are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,

26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and

10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.

ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,

138, Leadenhall Street, London.

C. HOWARD & SONS

45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Pantaloons,
Polo Breeches.
11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.

F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.
Established over 80 Years.

M. WISEMAN,
TAILOR & MILITARY OUTFITTER,
HELMET, ARMY CAP,
AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKER,
43, SACKVILLE ST., LONDON, W.

The Pioneer
(Established 1865).
This leading Indian paper has long held the acknowledged position of being in the very forefront of Indian Journalism. Its circulation extends all over the Indian Empire, and is wider than that of any other two daily papers in the country.
Subscription to Europe, America, and the
Colonies, £6 16s. per annum, post free.

THE PIONEER MAIL
(Established 1874)
Is published weekly in time for the English Mail,
and contains a summary of Indian news for Anglo-
Indians in Europe.
Subscription to Europe, America, or the
Colonies, £2 8s. per annum, post free.

For scale of charges for advertisements address—
GENERAL MANAGER,
PIONEER PRESS, ALLAHABAD, INDIA.
Or the London Office,
13A, COCKSPUR STREET, PALL MALL, S.W.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and
VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete,
and single Articles in condition equal to New
at one-third original cost.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD. E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND
BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.
Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S

MAGNESIA

The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach,
Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations,
Bilious Affections.

The Physician's Cure
for Gout, Rheumatic
Gout and Gravel; the
safest and most gentle
Medicine for Infants,
Children, Delicate Females, and the Sickness of Pregnancy.

Sold Throughout the World.

N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

If the Blood is Diseased the Body is Diseased and Enfeebled. Keep your Blood Pure and the Health of the System will follow.

Clarke's Blood Mixture, THE WORLD-FAMED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RESTORER,

is warranted to Cleanse the Blood from all Impurities from whatever cause arising,
For Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Sores of all kinds, Eczema, Scourvy, Scrofula, Bad
Legs, Glandular Swellings, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous.
It is the only real Specific for Gout and Rheumatic pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the Blood and Bones.

As this Mixture is pleasant to the taste and warranted free from anything injurious to the most delicate constitution of either sex, from infancy to old age,
the Proprietors solicit sufferers to give it a trial to test its value. Clarke's Blood Mixture is sold by all Chemists throughout the world. Price 2s. 9d. and 11s.
per bottle.

Thousands of Testimonials of Wonderful Cures from all parts of the World,
Proprietors: The Lincoln and Midland Counties Drug Co., Lincoln.
BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS OR SUBSTITUTES.

BLAND & SONS' "CAPE" GUN

(IMPROVED MODEL).
A New Combination Rifle and Shot Gun.
Left Barrel Rifled .303 bore.
Right Barrel 20 or 28 bore, for Shot or Ball.
A Perfect Battery in itself, and serviceable for any part of the World.

AS SUPPLIED TO
H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,
Whose Expedition to the North Pole

WAS FULLY EQUIPPED WITH ARMS
AND AMMUNITION BY THIS FIRM.

T. BLAND & SONS,
2, King William St., Strand, W.C.
(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)

Works:
41, 42, & 43, Whittall St., Birmingham.

ALL BUT NEW OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,
for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of

LEWIS MOSES,
65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,
at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms and apparel purchased.

"Folkestone Telegraph and Review."

THE LEADING NEWSPAPER
AND ADVERTISING MEDIUM
OF FOLKESTONE & DISTRICT.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
PRICE ONE PENNY.

Replete with all local news. Bright and interesting articles on current topics, fashions, drama, and music.
Advertising rates and specimen copy sent on application.

Address—WALTER BROWN, Manager,
"Folkestone Telegraph and Review,"
Offices: THE PARADE, FOLKESTONE.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE
INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL
INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED
FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL
S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.
ESTABLISHED 1803.
Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.
Paid-up Capital, £300,000.
Invested Funds over £1,500,000.
E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS
in the "ARMY & NAVY GAZETTE" will be sent on application to the Advertisement
Manager.
Offices: 3, YORK ST., LONDON, W.C.

RICHARD DICKESON
AND COMPANY,
WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND
PROVISION IMPORTERS.
LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, 11, Russell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVER: Market Lane and Queen Street,
ALDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street, FLY
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse, PEN
BROKE DOCK: Tremeryck Street, GIBRA-
LTAH: City Mill Lane. CAPE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street. PORT ELIZABETH:
Lenkells Warehouse, Rufane Vale. DURBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street. Agencies at
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c., &c.

Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire,
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price Lists
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Canten
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

OLD ARTIFICIAL TEETH BOUGHT.

Persons wishing to receive full value should apply to the manufacturing dentists,
Messrs. BROWNING.
If forwarded by post, value per return.
Chief Office: 133, OXFORD STREET (opposite
Berners Street), London.
Established 100 years.

The Rangoon Times

Is the Most Popular Daily Newspaper in
BURMA. Conducted on Independent
Lines. Has a large Circulation throughout the Province, and is a Splendid
Medium for Advertising.

THE WEEKLY RANGOON TIMES

Is published on every Homeward Mail day, giving an excellent summary of the week's news.

THE RANGOON COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER.

Published every morning, is a Favourite
Medium with Business Men for Advertising Purposes.

10, MERCHANT STREET, RANGOON.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage,
Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES,
BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.

The Warehouses, having been built expressly
for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature
during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities.
JOHN HANES, Manager.
Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS
EPPS'S
GRATEFUL-COMFORTING
COCOA

BREAKFAST-SUPPER
MOUSEL BROS.,
FURNITURE REMOVERS
AND STORERS,

Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, W.
AND WALHAM GREEN, FULHAM.
BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT

BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.
LEAMINGTON.—Windsor Street.
MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.
LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.
LIVERPOOL.—Bronte Street, Russell Street.
EXETER.—London Inn Square.
GLOUCESTER.—Depository, and Van and Wagon
Works, Commercial Road.

SECOND-HAND UNIFORMS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UNI-
FORMS in all conditions at from one-sixth
original cost, or sells the same on commission.
Mufti clothing also purchased.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2131.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRIOR 6d.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—	PAGE
The Army and the Nation - - - -	1133
Bands of Bandits - - - - -	1133
The Staff College - - - - -	1134
A Colonial Reserve of Seamen - - -	1144
The Expansion of the American Navy -	1145
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes - - - - -	1135
Army Personal - - - - -	1137
Army Foreign - - - - -	1138
Navy Notes - - - - -	1145
Navy Personal - - - - -	1147
Navy Foreign - - - - -	1148
Letters to the Editor—
The Victoria Cross - - - - -	1140
Lloyd's Patriotic Fund - - - - -	1141
The Royal Engineers - - - - -	1141
Articles—
Tried in the Fire.—III. - - - - -	1136
Press Views and Correspondence on Army Matters - - - - -	1136
A Noble Soldier.—"Boy" Booth - - -	1137
Manœuvre Drill for all Arms - - -	1139
The War-Game Season - - - - -	1139
The Victoria Cross - - - - -	1140
War Summary - - - - -	1141
The Battle of Obligado - - - - -	1147
Casualties in South Africa - - - - -	1149
The Gazettes—
Army - - - - -	1151
Navy - - - - -	1154
Regimental Intelligence - - - - -
Reviews - - - - -	1143
Sir Stamford Raffles - - - - -	1143
Some Fiction and Christmas Books -	1143
Short Notices - - - - -	1143
Foreign - - - - -	1143
Obituary - - - - -	1140
Naval Intelligence - - - - -	1154

THE ARMY AND THE NATION.

ARMY reform is fast becoming both epidemic and endemic; the disease is attacking all classes, and, like the influenza, it has seemingly come to stay. Continuing that simile, new nostrums are daily suggested for its treatment, not always by the faculty, nor even by those entitled from special or any knowledge to diagnose the malady or pronounce upon methods of cure. It may be hinted at once, and plainly, that the British public has grown rather hypochondriacal on the subject, and thinks the body politic has been stricken with a nearly mortal malady for which the most drastic remedies alone can serve. The danger of the present alarmist condition of the public mind which shows itself in such unceasing outcry is that an agitation which, if properly directed, would be of the highest value, will be exhausted before anything effective can be done. Action and reaction are as inevitable in public affairs as in physics. The pendulum which has swung to its farthest limit one way will assuredly recoil in the other. By next spring, when the whole question of our military institutions comes up for discussion in the Legislature, fickle opinion will have gone after other gods. The same result will follow as in times past. The cold fit will have succeeded to the hot, and Army Reform, to use the cant expression on every tongue, will be either forgotten or have been left to quidnuncs with no true appreciation of the issues involved.

There would yet be exceeding advantage in the present clamour if the nation can be roused to a clear sense of its needs. It is to be feared that these are much befogged and may be entirely lost sight of in the mass of intricate and confusing suggestions put forward as panaceas for our supposed ills. The paramount national necessity is that our land forces should be adequate for the demands made upon them. They never have been, and unless this axiom is kept fairly in view they never will be made thus sufficient. Our rebuffs and disappointments in South Africa were due really to this one predominant cause, namely, that we were altogether unequal to such an undertaking, just as we should be unequal, perhaps still more so, to any great conflict nearer home. It is a mere flummery to blame generals, or antiquated tactics, or "stupid" officers—parrot cries one and all, mostly unsubstantiated, caught up from hasty and ill-informed critics. It is idle to look for larger and better results by a reshuffling of the War Office cards by calling old officials by new names, recasting duties, or revising functions. None of these things have caused "all this coil." No change in them, improvement, amelioration, correction, reform, can make up for the one essential—increased military means. We have never yet realised, even approximately, what we might and may again be called upon to face in the shape of external war. The most recent experience affords the amplest and most unquestionable proof of this. We entered upon a conflict with the Boers thinking, good, easy fools, that we might tackle them with a single Army Corps. Ten times the number of troops first detailed have not yet sufficed to finish the business. When these considerable reinforcements were peremptorily demanded we blamed the military system that could not produce them. That system could not be held responsible for the deficiency; the blame rests with those who created the system, not those who work it. The character and extent of our armaments depend upon the will of the nation as expressed in Parliament, and never yet has it spoken out, for it has never yet clearly understood how little they kept pace with our growing Imperial needs. This is the true aspect of Army Reform. We must set our house in order by increasing our means both of offence and defence. The task may be difficult, the problem may puzzle the clearest heads, but it is that which we must undertake, and the solution lies far deeper than revision and reconstitution. It depends upon the bringing home to the national understanding the responsibilities, the dangers that face us in the near future, and the only safe method of dealing with them—the adequate provision of men and material.

BANDS OF BANDITS.

DURING the past week there has been some diminution in the number and magnitude of the incidents reported from the South African field. The most frequent, and those in which the Boers have had the largest measure of success, have been concerned with the raiding of the railways and the surprising of small British posts. The guarding of the three main lines running north, as well as the east and west line traversing the Transvaal, is a colossal undertaking, taxing to the utmost all the resources and demanding the unceasing vigilance of the army of occupation. Measured from Orange River Station, Norvals Pont, and Ladysmith, the extent to be watched north and south, with the branch lines, is about 1,300 miles, to which must be added for the Pretoria-Komati line some 300 miles, making an approximate total of 1,600 miles of permanent ways to be kept open to traffic, patrolled and guarded night and day. The central line, crossing the Orange River Colony, has been repeatedly damaged at various points, and several attempts to destroy it near Edenburg, forty miles south of Bloemfontein, have recently been reported. The same state of affairs exists along the western line, which has lately been cut in twenty places south of Kimberley, over a stretch of four miles. It must be admitted that the lines cannot, throughout their entire extent, be effectually guarded at all points against guerilla attacks. The utmost that can be done is to maintain mutually-supporting garrisons at convenient intervals, patrol the line with armoured trains, and the adjacent country with mounted columns, at the same time making good as speedily as possible such damages as the ubiquitous raiders may succeed in causing. It should be borne in mind, however, that without the railways war with the Boer Republics would have been almost impossible for the British Army. The same may be said of all modern wars where very large forces are employed, where the distances to be traversed are great, and where time is an object. Railways have become, however troublesome, indispensable in war.

How to cope effectually with the irregular hostilities still in full operation has been Lord Roberts's chief care for many weeks, and, contrary to his inclination, he has been compelled, by the implacable character of our foe and their unscrupulous methods, to adopt sterner measures in dealing with treachery. It is to be hoped that these measures will have the desired effect, and will prove effectual deterrents to the resumption of arms by burghers who have taken the oath of neutrality. De Wet, who has again been heard of between Kroonstad and the Vaal, not far from the scene of his recent rout at Bothaville—apparently apprehensive that the Commander-in-Chief's procedure may prove effective—has issued a counterblast, declaring that he has taken measures to prevent the burning of farms and calling on all burghers to rejoin the commandoes on pain of death in case of refusal. Many burghers, in this dilemma, have come with their families into Lindley, seeking British protection rather than break their oaths. The same thing is happening in other places, as at Lichtenburg, where the whole of the inhabitants, numbering about 500, have trekked to Mafeking for protection. This voluntary movement is in itself satisfactory, but it increases the responsibility of the British to provide adequate protection, and possibly maintenance also for the refugees, thus adding to the accumulating burden caused by the deportation from the farms of the families of fighting burghers.

The Boer resistance is now largely fostered from without, its continuance being indispensable while ex-President Kruger figures on the European stage. Gold is said to be abundant with General Botha, and the combatants are stated to be receiving five shillings a day. To defeat this design the British must, if possible, increase the vigour and efficiency of their military operations. It must be confessed that in point of mobility there is yet room for improvement. An incident illustrating the superior mobility of the enemy occurred on the 14th inst., ten miles from Lindley, where a trap was laid to catch a small Boer commando. A force took up at midnight an excellent position, where it lay perfectly concealed near the enemy's laager. In the early morning the leading scout of the commando walked straight for the trap, and when close to it was summoned to surrender. He, however, succeeded in escaping, and the whole of the party fled. The British gave chase, but the Boers got clean away. The same superior mobility is shown in all parts of the field. The Boers are better mounted than our men, more lightly equipped personally, are unencumbered with transport, and in many commandoes have two horses per man. Colonel Morris, the Commandant of Durban, on the occasion of the departure for England of Colonel Stevenson, the Inspector-General of Remounts, gave expression recently to sound opinions touching this all-important subject. He highly favoured mules for transport in place of oxen: mules for transport and good Colonial horses for cavalry; lighter equipments and an additional horse for each man. He is reported to have said that: "The campaign was continued, not because we were unable to beat the Boers, but because we were unable to catch them." He did not doubt that Colonel Stevenson would submit these views to the War Office authorities, who would assuredly profit largely by his experience. It is to meet this deficiency, in some measure, no doubt, that a new brigade of mounted infantry is being formed by drafting men from the infantry battalions in the field.

The general situation remains unchanged. The Boer leaders assemble their burghers, and form new centres of resistance wherever the country is unoccupied by the British. The enemy are in some force at present near Balmoral, Middelburg, and Rustenburg in the north, and are concentrating again in the southern districts around Lindley, Thaba 'Nehu, Ficksburg, and Ladybrand. On Monday an outpost of the Buffs was surprised near Balmoral, and lost six killed, five wounded, and one officer and thirty men captured. As a set-off to this mishap we are enabled to record a decided British success on Sunday at Barberspan, west of Bloemfontein. The Boers there, under Commandant Brand, are reported to have been shelled out of their position and driven into the plain, where they were caught by the Lancers, and repeatedly charged with deadly effect. Now that General French's Cavalry Division has been broken up, it is probable that more will be heard of effective cavalry actions in the disturbed districts.

THE STAFF COLLEGE.

IT is clear that a dead set is about to be made against the Staff College, and we publish in another column a letter from "C.O.," which takes up the ground that the original selection of candidates for instruction is conducted on wrong principles, and he makes certain suggestions which are worth attention. A more serious indictment is brought in the columns of our contemporary, The World, which cannot well be allowed to pass without rejoinder. It starts with the somewhat sweeping assertion that there is "a consensus of opinion among the military experts" (whoever they may be) "that the Staff College judged by the experience of South Africa, has failed as a practical training school for war." This statement in full is to the effect that "from general to subaltern the officers who have done the best all-round work during the campaign have graduated in the regimental ranks and those who have done the worst in the Staff College." We may point out, ab initio, that all officers, without exception, who bear the Queen's commission must necessarily graduate through the regimental ranks, including the incriminated staff officers; and yet again, that many officers with Staff College certificates now to be found on the staff or in commands in South Africa are still in regimental lists, were taken from regimental service to fill their various posts, and will, no doubt, in many cases return to their regiments when their special work is over. But the whole of the statement quoted above is so misleading, so mischievous, so contrary to actual fact, that we are constrained to raise our voice in protest. We do not pretend to be backed by a consensus of expert opinion, but we claim to speak with some authority and experience.

The comparison drawn rests mainly on the value of regimental as against staff and scientific training. The choice made by the cavillers is unfortunate. Taking the first who are named, Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener. Lord Roberts, who was scientifically trained at Addiscombe, never did a day's regimental duty after the Indian Mutiny. His staff service has been continuous since June, 1857. Kitchener has done no regimental duty—and that of the Engineers can seldom be so called—since 1878. The "three most successful leaders produced by the war," according to our expert, are French, Ian Hamilton and Baden-Powell. Of these the first was several years on the staff, including A.A.G. at Headquarters; the second has filled personal and general staff appointments for seventeen years out of twenty-eight; the third was constantly absent from his regiment, and on the staff for seven years out of twenty-four. They cannot then be claimed as exclusively regimental officers; they are good men and true who have a large share of that God-given and uncommon quality, the faculty of leadership; but would they have lost it or done worse if they had been through the Staff College? While we do all honour to their achievements we must protest that they are not the only "show men" of the war, and pace the experts can point to many with the Staff College certificate who have come out of the war "with increased reputation." What of General Kelly-Kenny, whose fine march to head off Cronje showed his excellent military qualities, which were fully maintained in subsequent operations; of Hildyard, one of Buller's stoutest lieutenants; of Fitzroy Hart, whose daring courage was conspicuous from first to last; of Bruce Hamilton, Stephenson, Smith-Dorrien, Ralph Allen, brigadiers who have made no mistakes, but proved themselves first-class tactical leaders. What of Broadwood and Burn Murdoch, young cavalry commanders who would bear comparison with any in any army past and present? What of Hutton, who has commanded the 1st Brigade of Mounted Infantry; of Alderson and Pilcher under his immediate command, whose names have been continually before the public as the heroes of many brilliant achievements? Or, passing to the general staff for the supply of which the Staff College more especially exists, what is to be said of the general level and value of the work accomplished? Staff duties are not those which attract most attention; it is only when they are inefficiently performed that we hear of the offending department. It is but negative praise to say that there have been no such complaints, that all who have taken the trouble to enquire, or are not blinded by prejudice, must admit that the general staff has done its work nobly. Lord Roberts certainly had no preference for non-Staff-College men. He took out as his principal adviser on strategical matters, although nominally head of the Intelligence Department, a professor from the Staff College, the eminent military writer, Colonel Henderson, and he has many others on his staff. Sir Redvers Buller has been served throughout by Colonel Miles as D.A.G., the Commandant of the Staff College, and an old graduate; his military secretary was Colonel the Hon. F. W. Stopford, p.s.c., who has seen almost all the fighting possible within the last thirty years, and filled innumerable staff appointments on active service. Take the A.A.G.'s at headquarters, Lawson, Ivo Herbert, Rawlinson, Duff, it is needless to mention all by name, they are almost all Staff College men, and all have served upon the staff in numerous earlier campaigns. All the A.A.G.'s of divisions, Belfield, Ewart, McGregor, and so on, possess, as a rule, the same qualification. It is true also of the D.A.A.G.'s whether at headquarters or with divisions; with the Brigade-Majors, the Provost Marshals, the Military Governors and their assistants; the officers on the lines of communications, Colonel Murray, Colonel Settle, Colonel Heath, Major DuCane, and many more; the special service officers, whose name is legion, and who have been employed here, there, and everywhere. Had this enormous body been as useless as some people would have us believe the whole business of the campaign would long since have fallen into utter and inextricable collapse.

We need not follow our writer much further except to deny entirely that the motives which actuated the bulk of aspirants for the Staff College are not, as stated, to lead a life of lounging, listless idleness, but the far higher aim of self-improvement and the right to broader and more enlightened employment, for such staff work undoubtedly is when compared to regimental routine, at least in the lower grades. The statement that the College "does not attract the best officers of the Army, but those for the most part of mediocre talent, bookworms, faddists, et hoc genus omne," is distinctly contrary to fact. It is best controverted by glancing at the lists of those who have passed through since its first formation. These include Sir Evelyn Wood, Sir Redvers Buller (although he did not complete his course), Sir Frederick Chapman (Roberts' right hand man in Afghanistan), Sir Frederick Maurice, Sir Edward Collen, whose services as a member of the Indian Council are just now much to the fore; Sir John Ardagh, the head of the Intelligence Department; Sir Coleridge Grove, the Military Secretary; Sir Thomas Fraser, commanding at Chatham; Sir Richard Harrison, the Inspector-General of Fortifications; Sir Edmond Elles, the Acting Adjutant-General of the Indian Army; Colonel Grierson, so long our military attaché in Berlin, who has since accompanied Count Waldersee to China, and a whole host of promising young men such as Count Gleichen, Forrester-Walker, Stuart-Wortley, Altham, Lysons, V.C., Cro-

Wyndham, who has gone out in command of the Australian escort to the Duke of York Haldane, the narrative of whose escape from Pretoria has already become a classic. Where will the list end? Are these men of mediocre talent faddists, bookworms, etc., who have "thrown up active and pleasant out-of-door lives in order to bury themselves for two years or more in sedentary studies?" Enough surely has been said to prove the absurdity of the argument and the undoubted animus which underlies the whole attack.

One other word as to the system of Staff College training. It is pretended that the course of study is entirely theoretical, just as it is alleged that staff work itself is in the office and so to speak sedentary. There is plenty of out-of-door life at the Staff College, as well as in most staff appointments. The instruction is largely practical, and includes Staff Rides, schemes of reconnaissance, of attack and defence drawn up on the ground, of the methods of moving troops in large numbers across country, while anyone who has any knowledge of the facts must bear witness to the encouragement of field sports at Camberley: the riding to hounds and with the drag kept by the College, the cricket matches the lawn tennis, the games continually in progress. It is needless to pursue these remarks further. They are surely as ill-natured as they are mainly without the slightest substantiation in fact.

Army Notes.

A point has been raised in regard to War Office administration which calls for some inquiry. It has been said that the higher staff of the Army, the Headquarters Staff that is to say, is too exclusively composed of men long removed from personal dealings with troops. The suggestion is that those officers by passing on continually from stool to stool, so to speak, have lost touch with the active Army. It is worth while examining this contention by looking into the antecedents of the members of the Headquarters Staff. After the Commander-in-Chief, who, by the way, was in actual command in Ireland before he came to Pall Mall, and who by his routine duties of inspections and parades is continually engaged actively, we come to the Adjutant-General, Sir Evelyn Wood, who rejoined the War Office in 1893, having but just completed five years in the command at Aldershot. Next comes Sir Charles Mansfield Clarke, who only relinquished the command of the Army Corps in Madras in October, 1898, and he succeeded as Quartermaster-General to the Forces Sir George White, who had been Commander-in-Chief in India till March in that year, 1898. The Inspector-General of Fortifications, although an engineer officer now performing engineer duties, commanded the Western District until October, 1895. The Deputy-Adjutant-General, an acting appointment, is Colonel J. H. Laye, who commanded a regiment, the Scottish Rifles, till October, 1893, after which he was A.A.G. to the Southern District.

The two Assistant-Adjutant-Generals are Colonel E. O. Hay, an artillery officer continually employed as such until 1899, and Colonel H. C. B. Farrant, who commanded a regiment until 1894, and was afterwards A.A.G. in Dublin. The Assistant-Quartermaster-Generals are Colonel Robert Auld, who commanded a regiment until 1892, and was afterwards D.A.A.G. at Aldershot and then A.A.G. of the North-Western and Southern Districts; Colonel C. E. Beckett, who is fresh from South African service, but who, until July, 1898, had commanded the 3rd Hussars. The Deputy-Assistent-Adjutant-Generals are Major Adye, of the Royal Irish Rifles, and Lieut.-Colonel Robb, of the Durham Light Infantry, and the Deputy-Assistent-Quartermaster-Generals are Lieut.-Colonel Cowans, of the Rifle Brigade, and Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. J. E. Lindley, till quite lately a major in the Royal Dragoons. It may be said per contra that Sir Henry Brackenbury, the Director-General of the Ordnance, has exercised no command since the Nile Expedition, but the duties of his present post are essentially scientific, and his staff and coadjutors are all officers on the active list. The Inspector-General of Cavalry, Major-General H. F. Grant, came straight from the same post in India, where he had been constantly engaged with troops, and his Assistant-Adjutant-General, Colonel C. E. Swayne, was until 1896, regimental Colonel of the 11th Hussars. It cannot be said, then, that the Headquarters Staff is largely, if at all, made up of merely office men. Moreover the principle of taking officers fresh from active professional duty will be strictly adhered to, we may be sure, in all new appointments. With such an abundant mass of material as the South African Army, will afford the claims of those who have seen recent service in the field will take precedence of all others.

The Bombay Gazette says that preparations are in progress for a large camp of exercise for the infantry and artillery of the Bengal Command at Barkatcha during the approaching cold weather. Last year's project was frustrated by a combination of unlucky accidents, commencing with an epidemic of influenza among the artillery horses, which brought the batteries to a standstill within a few marches of the ground; but it is to be hoped that this winter circumstances will be more favourable.

"An Englishman" writes:—"A period of nine months, less a few days, has elapsed since the relief of Ladysmith; many of the gallant actors in this memorable siege have passed away in this long interval, some from wounds, some from disease. Is it not a disgrace on the nation that the whole of Sir George White's despatches on this noble defence have not been given to the public?" There can be small room for doubt that this delay in publication is an injustice, unintentional as it may be, to the men concerned, but it must be borne in mind that only a very small portion of the despatches of this campaign—excepting those received by telegraph—have been published. That particular portion—no less than the action of the Government in publishing it—was the cause of so much hostile criticism that the authorities may well shrink from incurring further blame. There will, doubtless, be found some reason for the holding over of these long-expected despatches, though that reason may not be apparent to the naked eye of the "man in the street."

Nothing in the system of defensive warfare employed by the Boers has been more remarkable than the extensive and skilful use made by them of field intrenchments. During the earlier months of the war, when ample time was at their disposal to perfect this means of defence, every position taken up by the enemy was carefully, systematically, and elaborately covered with a network of trenches constructed, for the combined purposes of defence and shelter, with consummate skill, and with sectional dimensions of a magnitude unattained hitherto. The immense value of these intrenchments to the Boers as a means of defence cannot be disputed, nor the completeness of the shelter they afforded. It was entirely due to them that the losses of the enemy in Cronje's laager at Paardeberg, as well as in the lines along the Tugela, and, in other fortified positions, were almost insignificant, notwithstanding the storms of lyddite and other destructive shells with which they were bombarded for days together. We have long understood in our Service the importance of intrenchments of sorts in the field, and the strengthening of a defensive position by such means is carefully inculcated as an indispensable primary duty in preparing for defence; but both the value of the cover afforded by the regulation trench, and the means provided for making it, are paltry when compared with the effectiveness secured by the Boers, and the means they employed. As to their means it must be admitted that they were unique, since they commanded an unlimited supply of native labour using the ordinary farm implements to which they were accustomed. Such a supply of labour is not at the command of European armies, in which the work of intrenching must be performed by the troops themselves, using such tools as may form part of their military outfit. It is important to see that these tools are thoroughly suitable for their purpose under the conditions of defence now confronting us.

"Intrenching implements" form a regular part of the personal equipment of the British infantry soldier, in common with the equipment of the same arm in other European armies. These implements consist of a small spade, and a small pick with axe-head, carried in leathern frogs on the waist-belt. Each infantry soldier receives one of these articles, but not both. The strong, handy, and ingenious "Slade-Wallace" implement, which was superseded by the existing patterns chiefly because it could not be carried conveniently, was a composite tool intended to perform the work of both pick and shovel, and a soldier carrying one of them was completely equipped for light entrenchment work even in hard ground. With the present tools two men acting together are necessary for the performance of such work. This is an obvious and serious bar to their efficiency. But the whole of these implements are so small, light, and comparatively frail, and their practical usefulness in consequence so limited, that they may fairly be called "toys," with respect to the work henceforth to be performed. If the lessons of the South African war are to bear fruit, the regulation trenches for a defensive position will in future be of such dimensions that, for their preparation, the "intrenching implements" carried by the infantry will be absolutely valueless. The medium-sized implements carried by the regimental transport will also be found too small and light. The work to be done will demand an adequate supply of full-sized spades, shovels, and picks to be carried by the regimental transport, supplemented by a further supply to be furnished and used by parties of the Royal Engineers.

But, if the soldiers' little implements are unsuitable for assisting in the heavy work of intrenching a defensive position, is their retention justifiable on the ground that they may, on rare occasions, be useful in making shallow trenches, or small rifle-pits, to afford partial cover to men of an attacking force? In most countries there will be found natural or artificial obstacles sufficiently large to afford cover to men at all but very short ranges. If an attack, more especially a frontal attack, be made over ground devoid of cover, the advance would be pressed with all the rapidity possible, and to attempt to dig out cover at any point would merely expose the men to greater risk, or afford them an excuse for lagging behind, if so tempted. Another very important aspect of the case arises out of the necessity that exists for making the field-service equipment of the soldier as light and convenient as possible, with a view to increased mobility. It is important to interfere as little as may be with the freedom of the man's movements when marching, or with his ease in the various firing positions. In this respect the small implements carried by the men are much at fault, being inconvenient to carry, overcrowding the waist-belt and incommoding the wearer. The dead-weight they add to his burden might with great advantage be replaced by its equivalent in ammunition, the replenishment of the latter having become a matter of such serious moment, from the immense difficulty attending it, in a fighting line advancing on a position under heavy fire.

Following the example set by France, it is reported that the military authorities in Belgium are about to inaugurate experiments with motor-cars specially adapted for the transport of provisions for the soldiers. The vehicles at present used are very cumbersome, and require six horses to haul them. Even in Italy the military motor-car is receiving attention. In a recent number the Revista d'Artiglieria e Genio publishes a long article from the pen of Colonel Mirandoli, in which he deals with the subject of heavy motor vehicles, such as the Thornycroft steam, and discusses favourably the question of their suitability for military transport purposes.

TRIED IN THE FIRE.—III.

If we were to particularise those amongst the lesser chiefs who had come through their horses, so to speak, and distinguished themselves in this war, the catalogue would be as long as that of the ships in Homer. Many of these must, however, be mentioned to point the argument which is the text of these papers—that the selections, on the whole, were wisely made. Among the first who have not hitherto been mentioned was the ill-fated "Andy" Wauchope, of whom nothing but good was known, and of whose responsibility in the Magersfontein catastrophe there is as yet not a shadow of proof; the appointment of Hector Macdonald as his successor in the command of the Highland Brigade was the definite act of the home authorities, who transferred him expressly from India to the Cape. Next stands Baden-Powell, whose was very distinctly a War Office appointment. He was at home on short leave from India, and was sent out by Lord Wolseley long before hostilities commenced, as the result of a chance meeting in Piccadilly, and the instantaneous, almost intuitive conclusion that "B.-P." would be useful in South Africa. Another rapid decision which has borne the finest fruit, was that of Colonel Girouard, who was almost snapped up by Lord Wolseley at the very outset of the war, and despatched to the scene of his since invaluable labours. Colonel Wynne went out in the first instance specially selected to act as Chief of the Staff to Sir Redvers Buller until Hunter could join him, and his advancement to a brigade was only a matter of local seniority. Other brigadiers despatched from home were A. G. Wavell, an officer of long experience in South African soldiering; Major-General J. E. Boyes, an officer who had been raised in the Gordon Highlanders; Clements, an officer distinguished in the Zulu and Burmese wars; Major-General "Barr" Campbell, a Guardsman who had seen no active service and whose appointment was very sharply criticised at the time, although he appears to have shown himself worthy of selection. Major-General Talbot Coke's was not a popular and generally accepted appointment, but his record was good, and there is reason to believe that had he been entrusted with greater powers upon the Spion Kop after Woodgate had been struck down the disaster might have been avoided. Woodgate himself was very specially selected for brigade command, and took out with him the highest reputation for skill, courage, and judgment in the field, which was unhappily too soon eclipsed by his death.

Every effort was made to draw in good men from all parts of the world. Egypt was, of course, a great source of supply. It gave Major-General Maxwell, a gallant soul whose whole record had been made in Egypt from the days when, as a subaltern in the Royal Highlanders, he marched against the intrenchments of Tel-el-Kebir through all the Soudan expeditions until he commanded a Soudanese brigade in the victory at Khartoum. "Young" Kitchener, of whom we have heard so much of late in the Lydenburg country, and who has had a war experience little less extensive than his more distinguished brother, came from Egypt. So did Broadwood, that most brilliant of young cavalry leaders; Colonel Mahon, the energetic leader who relieved Mafeking; in a lesser rank poor Le Gallais, who has just found a soldier's death; and Henry of the Mounted Infantry. Several excellent men were sent out on special service with no very distinct positions at first, who have since found their opportunities for distinction. Major-General Brocklehurst, of whom more was expected, and with reason perhaps, but who was denied opportunity by being "entangled" in Ladysmith; Lord Dundonald who went out with a roving commission and was quickly snatched up to command irregular cavalry under Buller; Colonel J. R. P. Gordon, who was brought from the command of the 15th Hussars in India, and the command of the brigade; Colonel Ridley, who was since given a brigade; but well-known as a unemployed at the time, but well-known as a first-class officer; Colonel Pilcher, the hero of Sunnyside; Colonel Alderson, well-known as a leader of mounted infantry; Colonel Plumer, a leader of mounted infantry; Colonel Hore, another Mounted Infantry officer, who was Baden-Powell's right hand man in defending Mafeking, and many more. No doubt active operations work like natural selection in the survival of the fittest, and many of the rising generation of soldiers have owed their reputation to the chances lately afforded them. Colonel Ralph Allen went out as A.A.G. to Gatacre, and was involved through no fault of his own in the disaster of Stormberg, which he did his best to avert and remedy; this did not prevent his appointment to a brigade command, and, although the work he has done has been unobtrusive, it has been sound and excellent throughout. Colonel C. W. H. Douglas also went out as A.A.G., and soon became brigadier. Colonel Bruce Hamilton followed the same course. Colonel T. E. Stephenson might thank his seniority and the presence of his regiment, the Essex, in the field for the brigade command in which he has done so well. It was the same with Colonel Inigo Jones of the Scots Guards, with Colonel Smith-Dorrien of the Derbys, Colonel Porter of the Carbineers, Colonel Burn-Murdoch of the Royal Dragoons, and Lieut.-Colonel E. O. F. Hamilton of the Queen's West Surrey Regiment.

The constitution of the general staff may be said to have been entirely by selection, from Lord Kitchener to the junior staff captain on the lines of communication, and it has been made very largely from graduates of the Staff College. Where the contrary has obtained it has been through scarcity, or the very excellent reason that others who have had a like or superior educational training, such as the Engineers and Artillery, have been chosen. Whether they have done better or worse than an equal number without such training is one of those conjectural points which can never be satisfactorily decided. There are those to whom the mere words Staff College act like a red rag to a bull; they denounce it unceasingly, often rancorously, and for reasons that are by no means clear. The subject has been treated at some length in another column, but it may be taken as clearly proved that the men selected for staff work have justified their appointments.

PRESS VIEWS AND CORRESPONDENCE ON ARMY MATTERS.

The Daily Mail of the 17th, prompted by Lord Rosebery's speech at Edinburgh, made much of the Empire's need of men. In the Daily News of the 19th, "A Colonist of 40 Years," while recognising the rashness of some of Mr. Hales's criticism, considered he (Mr. Hales) is not getting fair play, and ventured to suggest Mr. Churchill is not in a position to see into the heart of our Colonial troopers, and that, therefore, his statements as regards their private opinions of the British officers are valueless. Another writer thought that some war correspondents only want advertisement, and that their sayings are only means to an end. Mr. Julian Ralph filled a column of Monday's Morning Post with praise of our Guards' battalions on active service, and devoted a few lines to an expression of the opinion that Britishers entered the Army for "something to do," and did not study military matters as a science.

On Nov. 19 Sir John Dalrymple-Hay qualified some of the statements of Sir M. Culme Seymour, and "Navalis" justly points to the amount of "new blood" infused into the Admiralty by the short terms of service Admiralty officials hold compared with the corresponding posts at the War Office.

The continued delay of the Government to make any announcement of the probable date of the return of the Imperial Yeomanry is creating, to judge from the many letters published, much indignation in private circles. Parents and relatives have written in strong terms this week, one "An Indignant Sufferer," and another, Mr. Max Hollender, who asks why the movements of regulars are public property, whilst no news can be obtained of the Yeomanry, and why are the Household Cavalry and Royal Horse Artillery favoured in the matter of return? The conduct of the war is fast reaching the dimensions of a furious controversy. Mr. Morley's letter last week has received many indignant replies, none stronger than that of Sir E. Ashmead-Bartlett in the Daily News of the 20th inst., or of Mr. F. C. Conybeare in the same issue. The first says:—"The Germans in 1870 shot every French irregular they caught in arms. Where their troops were waylaid and shot down from ambush, if they were unable to capture the actual perpetrators, the Germans seized a number of the inhabitants of the town or district and shot these. . . . The time has come for similar measures in South Africa." Other very cogent arguments are adduced by Mr. W. Slater Boddington in the Times of the 21st, by Mr. H. A. Neck, by "A Liberal," and by "H. W." in the same issue. In the Morning Post of the 20th Mr. Smith Davis, writing on the question of conscription, pointed out the defects of previous systems suggested by "Vox Clamans," and asks for an alternative. In the Times of 22nd inst. Lord Graham, eldest son of the Duke of Montrose, who has been serving as a lieutenant attached to the Army Service Corps, disputes Mr. Morley's insinuations with regard to the ill-usage of Boer women, and shows very conclusively that the lady whose letter Mr. Morley published was undoubtedly a link—and something more—with the enemy. The whole of Lord Graham's letter tends to prove that anxious consideration has been shown to so-called non-combatants. Mr. H. Webber follows on the same side, and refers to the incident in the story quoted by Mr. Morley, which was told by the officer in command. An interesting suggestion comes from Lord Abinger to explain the determination with which Lindley has been made the centre of active operations. "It seems to me a certainty," he writes, "the enemy has some reason for perpetually hovering round this lonely spot. There must be either money, guns of some description, or ammunition, or stores buried in this vicinity." Another note is struck by Mr. Theophilus Schreiner, who has sent a circular to the Press on "The South African Situation," condemning the conduct of the Afrikaner party in Cape Colony and accusing them of inspiring the Boer residents. He attaches great importance to the decision arrived at to hold a monster meeting of the Dutch Reformed Church, which is announced to take place at Stellenbosch on the 28th inst. He adverts to their unbounded influence over other people, and points out that if they raise their voices in protest against the continuance of the war the very best results might be expected.

The first of what promises to be an excellent series of articles on Army Reform appeared in the Times of the 22nd. This first article deals with the War Office, and summarises the points on which reform should be concentrated. These may be briefly stated as follows:—1. The appointment of a chief of the staff. 2. Decentralisation so as to relieve the War Office of all work which can be carried on locally. 3. To convert the War Office into a really military institution. 4. To create a Military Finance Branch, as in India. 5. To improve the system of inspection of all arms. 6. To ensure the administration of patronage on grounds of fitness alone.

"D. L.," writing in the Times of yesterday, points out that if army reform is to be undertaken with any prospect of good results it must be entrusted to other than the actual working heads of the War Office. The ordinary current business will more than occupy Mr. Brodrick and Lord Roberts, and he suggests an independent Commission to investigate the causes of shortcomings, and make suggestions for their removal. He proposes for the constitution of this Commission a judge, an admiral, a Constitutional lawyer, and four "private gentlemen of the first rank in commerce and finance, the whole under the presidency of Mr. Chamberlain." Another writer in the same issue, "Administrator," reminds us that to bring into War Office appointments officers fresh from active employment puts them at a certain disadvantage, for they have a long leeway to make up in matters of detail and administrative precedent, and must be for a certain time in the hands of the permanent officials. The Standard, commenting on the result of the Dover court-martial, emphasises the fact that the Court were not content to give Master Gunner Acheson a bare acquittal, which might have implied that he had escaped by mere defect of proof. The two findings—the honourable acquittal of both Lieut. A'Beckett and Master Gunner Acheson—are absolutely inconsistent. The Daily News considered the War Office bound to hold a further and exhaustive inquiry into the management of the Dover canteen. How came it that theft was possible, and why was the thief not discovered? The same issue of that journal contains an interview with Major Burnham, the famous scout. The Major himself gives much of the credit of his successful scouting to his horse. Should the horse be content to go on grazing the scout would sleep, and when the grazing ceased wake up to note the direction in which the sensitive animal's ears were pointed. The dog would evidently be a good scout if he were less excitable, but he is apt, if he hears anything, to make a fuss about it, and tell his companion too demonstratively. The horse's silent language of the ears is best, but you must be a good scout to learn to read it.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition 1900
Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST. ST. MARY AXE, LONDON E.C.

Army Personal.

There are the very best reasons for stating that Lord Wolseley will cease to perform the duties of Commander-in-Chief from December 1. The work will be carried on until Lord Roberts's return by Sir Evelyn Wood, who, as Adjutant-General, is second in military command of the Army. The cause assigned is the remoteness of the date of Lord Roberts's return to England.

Major-General Sir John Ardagh, K.C.I.E., C.B., has been granted a Good Service Pension of £100 a year. For the last twelve months he has been employed in the Intelligence Department.

It is understood that Major-General Sir Edmond Elles, Officiating Adjutant-General in India, will shortly assume the command at Quetta, Sir Reginald Hart proceeding home on leave.

The annual meeting and dinner of the "Q" Club will take place at the Westminster Palace Hotel on Thursday, December 13 next, when Lieut.-General Sir C. Mansfield-Clarke, Bart., G.C.B., Quartermaster-General, and Major-General A. E. Turner, C.B., Inspector-General of Auxiliary Forces, have consented to honour the club with their presence at dinner.

Colonel J. W. T. Hume has been selected to succeed Colonel J. G. Sparkes in command of the 45th Regimental District at Derby. Colonel Hume, who held the temporary rank of brigadier-general whilst commanding the Militia at Perham Down Camp, joined the Service in 1869, and took part with the 2nd Batn. of the Sherwood Foresters in the Sikkim Expedition of 1888, for which he obtained the medal and clasp. He became colonel in January, 1898. Colonel Sparkes has held the command of the regimental district since August, 1895.

The command of the 26th and 71st Regimental Districts at Hamilton is becoming vacant by the voluntary retirement of Colonel H. de C. Rawlins, who was only appointed thereto in April of last year. Colonel Rawlins received his first appointment as Sub-Lieut. in the 90th Foot (now the 2nd Cameronians) in 1873, was promoted Lieut. a year later, and from January, 1878, to October, 1879, served as regimental Instructor of Musketry, when he obtained his company. His Majority came in May, 1883; lieut.-colonelcy in 1894; and the rank of colonel by brevet in 1898. Colonel Rawlins saw service in South Africa in 1877-8-9. He took part in the Kaffir campaign, the operations against the Galekas, and Zulu War, including the battles of Inyezane and Ginginhlovo (mentioned in despatches).

Colonel G. F. Guyon, who has been in temporary command of the 4th Infantry Brigade at Aldershot since August last, will resume his former post at the head of the Royal Fusiliers and Middlesex Regimental Districts at Hounslow on December 1. Colonel Guyon received his first commission in the 49th Foot (now the Berkshires) in January, 1865, became lieut. three years later, and in the same year exchanged into the 7th Foot (Royal Fusiliers). From 1875 he was regimental Instructor of Musketry until obtaining his company in August, 1878. From November, 1881, to December, 1886, he filled the post of Adjutant of Auxiliary Forces. He was promoted Major in 1882, Lieut.-Colonel in 1891, and Colonel by brevet in 1895. Colonel Guyon has been a Commissioner of Chelsea Hospital since July, 1899. Colonel E. H. FitzHerbert has been temporarily administering the command of the 57th Regimental District, to which Colonel Guyon was appointed in 1897.

Colonel G. M. Davis, M.D., C.B., D.S.O. succeeds Colonel Bookey, the principal medical officer of the China Field Force, who has been compelled, on account of ill-health, to vacate his appointment. The new principal medical officer with Sir Alfred Gaselee's force entered the Bengal branch of the Indian Medical Service in April, 1869, as assistant-surgeon, became surgeon in 1873, surgeon-major in 1881, lieut.-colonel in 1889, brigade-surgeon-lieut.-colonel in 1894, and surgeon-colonel in October, 1897. He saw active in the Mahsood Wuzereee Expedition (1881), the first Miranzai and the Hazara expeditions (1891—medal with clasp), Waziristan Expedition (1894-5, as principal medical officer, despatches, medal, clasp, D.S.O.), and Tirah (1897-8, medal with two clasps and C.B.).

Colonel J. T. B. Bookey entered the Bengal Medical Service in 1872, became surgeon a year later, surgeon-major 1884, surgeon lieut.-colonel in 1892, brigade surgeon-lieut.-colonel in 1897, and surgeon-colonel in May of this year. Colonel Bookey, who is junior to his successor, has seen much service—Jowaki, 1877-8; Mahsood Wuzereee, 1881; Burmah, 1886-7 (despatches); Hazara, 1888 (despatches); Miranzai, 1891 (despatches); Waziristan, 1894-5 (despatches); and North-West Frontier (1897) Expeditions.

Lieut.-Colonel Mayne, C.B., who commanded the field force in the Mekran operations of 1898, has been appointed Aide-de-Camp to the Queen.

Lieut.-Colonel S. H. Exham, R.E., will be promoted shortly to the rank of colonel. He has given thirty years to the Service, his principal war service being in the Afghan campaign of 1878-79, in which he was present at the attack on and capture of Ali Musjid. At present he is superintending engineer of Portsmouth Dockyard.

By the promotion of Major C. T. M. Western, R.F.A., to the rank of lieut.-colonel, the post of assistant military secretary to Sir G. B. Wolseley, commanding the Madras Army, becomes vacant.

Captain Lord Loch, D.S.O., who is on his way home from South Africa, having been wounded in the field, has filled the post of Divisional Signalling Officer on the Staff of Lord Methuen from the very outset of the campaign. He saw active service with his battalion (the 1st Grenadiers) in the Soudan in 1898, and for his services received the medal and D.S.O. He was for some years in the Cape Volunteer Service during his late father's tenure of the Governorship of Cape Colony.

Capt. W. MacL. Campbell, 1st Black Watch, lately aide-de-camp to the Viceroy of India, has been appointed Military Secretary to Lord Amthill, the new Governor of Madras.

Captain C. Champion-de Crespigny, 2nd Life Guards, has been approved as aide-de-camp to the Viceroy of India.

OFFICERS' EXPENSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As a father with sons in the Service, I am grateful to you for showing up the many unnecessary expenses we are put to. There is one item, and a heavy one too, which has not been touched upon. I allude to providing servant's livery, &c. Why should not the mess fund provide the livery, as it is only worn while on mess duty, and when the regiment is ordered abroad there is no further need of it.

OLD SOLDIER.

[This would still entail expense on officers, from whose pockets the mess fund is obtained.—ED. A. AND N. G.]

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:

LIFE. { War Risks, World-Wide.
ACCIDENTS & DISEASES.

FIRE. { Residence Abroad.
BURGLARY, &c.

Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch.

The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.

Special Quotations for Messes.

Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums.

Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,

217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.

Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT

A NOBLE SOLDIER—"BOY" BOOTH.

British officers as a class have been receiving but scant consideration of late from their fellow-countrymen, who have been far too ready to swallow the depreciating criticism of malevolent writers and others. We have been told ad nauseam that they are stupid, incompetent, uncivil, eaten-up with pretensions; that they all wear monocles for no better reason than to fix it in one eye and say "haw-haw" in reply to every question. How grossly libellous and untrue this picture is, need hardly be impressed upon any who have any—even the most superficial—acquaintance with this body of most deserving public servants so ungenerously and unfairly lampooned. Yet it is well to look to the other side of the medal and emphasise our protest by showing what many of our officers really are. This will be best realised by exhibiting the career, the brief life of straightforward usefulness, the noble self-sacrificing death of one of them, the late Major Booth, of the Northumberland Fusiliers, who was killed at the head of the Mounted Infantry of his regiment at Sanna's Post.

The St. George's Gazette, the excellent regimental newspaper of the 5th Fusiliers, contains an appreciation of this gallant young soul which will go home to the hearts of everyone, whether soldier, comrade or civilian. He is spoken of at school as a lad of great perseverance and a very high sense of duty. "Whether engaged in work or play he always showed the same zeal and earnestness," was foremost in all field sports, but yet he passed the Cambridge Local Examination with honour and won admission direct to Sandhurst. He left the Military College with great credit and joined the 2nd Batn. of the 5th Fusiliers at Mean Meer in 1886, where he was at once nicknamed "Boy" Booth, a sobriquet which stuck to him to the last. Close attention to his duties was varied with big game shooting in Cashmere, and the old Yorkshire home of the Booths is decorated with many trophies to his gun. He saw his first service in the Black Mountain Expedition, where he was in charge of the regimental signallers. Soon afterwards, when on leave in England, he seized the opportunity of going through the musketry course at Hythe, and that with the Mounted Infantry at Aldershot. On his return to India he was appointed Adjutant to his regiment, and as such was ever anxious not only for the drill and demeanour, but for the physical and moral good of his men. He took a lively interest in all regimental matters, developed the efficiency of the drums and fifes, paid great attention to musketry and signalling instruction. Being devoted to horses from the time when as a child he rode a Shetland pony with the Bedale Hunt, of which his uncle was master, he took the lead in regimental races, and was known as a noted horse-master, his love for and care of all animals being a noted trait in his character. While the regiment was stationed at Sitapur he was master of a "bobbery pack" and gave excellent sport.

He preceded his regiment home in 1896, and spent some time in France studying the language, being resolved at the first favourable opportunity to compete for admission to the Staff College. Active business interposed and following the lead of his dearest friend, Percy Wilkinson, of the same regiment, he volunteered for service in West Africa, and was one of the contingent which landed at Lagos in March, 1898. A few months later he became A.A.G. to Colonel Lugard, and afterwards to Colonel Willcocks, who has since gained so much distinction in Ashanti. "Boy" Booth's services were rewarded by a Brevet Majority, and he had now earned two medals and clasps.

His regiment, the 2nd Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers, formed part of Gatacre's Division, and was, as we know, disastrously engaged at Stormberg. Booth happily escaped this fatal affair by having been transferred two days before it to command the 1st battalion's mounted infantry on the Modder River in succession to Lieut.-Colonel Keith-Falconer, who had been killed in action. From that time forth Booth rode at the head of these splendid troops, and took part in some of the finest feats performed in the war. He was with French in the magnificent dash upon Kimberley, and again accompanied him, when still worn with fatigue and short rations, in the further hurried ride to head off Cronje at Paardeberg; last of all, he took part with Pilcher's corps in the reconnaissance on Thaba N'chu, which ended with the retreat on Bloemfontein and the disaster of Sanna's Post. In this last engagement he met his death, how gallantly we shall see presently from a report made by his commanding officer. Booth was directed to cover the retreat with his company, which stoutly held one position after another until all the troops in front of him had got through. Then Booth saw a part of Roberts's Horse in difficulties on his left, and again halted to show a firm front, although under a heavy fire. So soon as Roberts's Horse had been extricated Booth desired his company to retire by successive sections, he himself remaining to the last with two lieutenants, Hall and Toppin, also by Corporal Raynham and Private Downes. Now the Boers closed round to within a range of 200 yards and poured in a galling fire. Booth and Downes were killed, Hall severely wounded, Toppin and Raynham taken prisoners. "In sacrificing himself to protect the retreat of Roberts's Horse," wrote Colonel Pilcher, "Major Booth was playing the game which he always played during the fifteen years I knew him." In forwarding a copy of this report to his mother, Lord Roberts with many expressions of hearty sympathy adds, "He fell like a gallant soldier at his post, covering the retirement of his comrades, and by his death Her Majesty has lost a distinguished and capable officer, who, if spared would, I am sure, have risen high in his profession."

To these official records may be added a few extracts from the private correspondence of his brother officers lamenting his premature death.

One writes:—

"Perhaps I feel his loss almost as much as one of his own family. He was by far the very best officer I have ever met, and the best friend I ever had. There was no one like him, and his place can never be filled. I cannot even find much consolation from the most gallant circumstances of his death, for it was not possible to suppose that a man of his sort could have fallen otherwise. It may be some consolation to his family to know the high regard and affection in which he was held by all of us in the regiment. He was the finest character I ever met."

Another says:—

"I can imagine what you must feel, to judge by my own feelings. The bravest and best seem to be taken, and those who can least be spared; the men simply adored him. He was considerate for them always, and never spared himself in the way of hard work or danger. Booth was as cool as a cucumber, bowling over a Boer every time he fired, but was always most careful of his men and careless of himself. It was very magnificent, but the nation could better afford many soldiers than one Booth."

And yet a third—

"He was the finest character of a man I have ever known, a gallant soldier, a true friend, and a polished gentleman; he was a fine example to every officer in the regiment. . . . He never thought of himself or spared himself. His one wish was to do his duty like a soldier and a man, and to lead others to do the same. His loss is a terrible one to all the regiment, and to all who knew him. . . . His profession was everything to him, but next of all, in that profession, his regiment, and he was beloved by all. . . . He has left a name in the 5th Fusiliers which will never die. His services to the regiment have been invaluable, and will remain a lasting record of his zeal, his kindly nature, and his sound common sense. He has friends everywhere who still mourn his loss, and never forget the happy, cheery, and the unselfish kindly character of a true soldier. 'Boy Booth.'" and this, "one of the finest specimens of humanity," to use Lord Wolseley's fine encomium, is of the class impugned by scurrilous critics!

We learn that the accident to the Spartiate, which was described in the morning papers on the 15th inst., was due to her being run into shoal water when turning. The engineers were not told, and sucked up water to flood some of the bearings; there was sand in the water, and the bearings were injured to fusing point by sand friction.

An effective poster has been issued by the Liebig's Extract of Meat Co. It represents a fine ox, whose shadow is cast on the rich coloured downs behind him. In that shadow the word "Lemco" (the new name for Liebig's Extract) has been cut out, showing the white chalk beneath, after the manner of the celebrated "White Horse" in Wiltshire.

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1153.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1155.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1155.

Army Foreign.

Captain Pillon, of the French Army, has been demonstrating to M. Raiberti, the Reporter upon the Military Estimates, the economical advantages of his system of providing bread for the troops in the field. The system has been tried in the 13th Army Corps and at the military bakery on Quai de Billy, and it was intended to be used for a whole brigade of infantry during the late manoeuvres, but the idea was abandoned owing, it would appear, to the expense of providing wood for fuel. At the present time the French soldier ordinarily carries twenty-four cakes of biscuit bread, having a weight 1,200 grammes. Captain Pillon proposes that he should be burdened instead with a packet of self-raising flour, weighing only 1,000 grammes, and shall bake his own bread as required. This is described as an easy matter, and as presenting no greater difficulties than the making of coffee. The man's mess tin, in making bread on this system, serves first as a kneading trough, and then as an oven. The tin being filled with the dough is placed for about forty minutes on a fire, and covered with hot cinders. The bread can also be made, if convenience should be found, in an ordinary fireplace or in any kind of oven or stove. Fire there must be, of course, but it is contended that the soldier can never be deprived of fire if he is to consume his reserve rations, which include rice and haricots. It is only at the outposts that fire is forbidden, and there also cooking is prohibited. To those who suggest difficulties, the advocates of the new system say that it is the duty of the generals to foresee them, and in case of a hostile encounter to arrange for the soldiers not engaged to bake bread for two days. Captain Pillon's bread keeps well for three or four days, is neither hard nor soft, and has a special flavour of its own, which is generally considered very agreeable.

General Rappe, chief of the Swedish General staff, recently submitted to the Minister of War a scheme for the reorganisation of the Swedish Army, which has been investigated by a special committee appointed by the King. This committee has fourteen members, including the six commanders of Army Corps, the Inspector-General of Cavalry (Duke Charles of West Gothland), the Inspector-General of Artillery, and the Medical Director-General, with some other staff officers, and General Hamilton as President. The proposal is for universal service of three years, the recruit being only nine months with the colours in the first year. It is intended that the period of transition from the existing system to the new, if the latter should be adopted, shall be six years, during which period the necessary barracks would be built. The same scheme of general service would apply also to the Navy, and a committee has been appointed to report upon that matter also.

The Russki Invalid states that the town of Kushk, which was recently a place of no importance, has greatly developed since it became the terminus of the Trans-Caspian railway. It has now as many buildings as are in the whole province outside it, and electric light is about to be introduced there. Two neighbouring places, Alexieefsk and Polstafk, share this new wave of prosperity, due to the Russian military advance in Asia.

A violent controversy has arisen in Belgium in relation to the fortifications of Antwerp. The commercial importance of the place and its growing population demand the means of expansion, and the Government has taken the step of authorising a modification of the fortifications. In doing this General Brialmont, who was the author of the fortifications in question, was not consulted as he thought he ought to have been, and he has defended his work in a pamphlet which has led to the publication of bitter articles in the Métropole of Antwerp. The General has been attacked in very unbecoming language, and the Belgique Militaire defends him by exposing the fallacies of his opponents. Although he opposes some of the changes contemplated by the Government, he would not prevent Antwerp extending on the northern side. A vast amount of money has been spent upon the fortifications, and it is perhaps not surprising that the military authorities should resent more than the Government itself the proposal to demolish some part of them.

The France Militaire devotes an article to the situation in South Africa, and says that notwithstanding the favourable view of the situation which has been taken by the British Press and the return of the City Imperial Volunteers and other forces, the condition of affairs is by no means favourable. De Wet, Delarey, Lemmer, Botha, and some others pursue with activity their guerilla warfare, and our contemporary believes that we shall not find it enough to maintain the force we have, but must continue to send reinforcements in order to crush opposition.

The Popolo Romano states that there has been a satisfactory increase in the number of men embodied in the Italian army. Including the permanent army, the auxiliary service, and the mobile and territorial militias, the strength enrolled on June 30, 1898, was 35,765 officers and 3,221,720 men, giving a total of 3,257,491. Nine months later, on April 30, 1899, the strength had risen considerably, the figures then being 35,909 and 3,236,161, making a total of 3,272,070. The increase was thus 14,579, or at the rate of 4.47 per thousand.

WHO IS RIGHT—BULLER OR KRUGER?

Sir Redvers Buller, speaking at Exeter, November 22, said:—

"You are told in the papers that the Boers are patriots fighting for their country, but the whole of the people whom we know as Boers have either surrendered or are prisoners, or are doing their level best to surrender now, if only we will give them protection. The people left in the field are either mercenaries or bandits. There was no really patriotic Boer in the field when I left South Africa. There is hardly a leader whose name has been heard of at the beginning of the war, and those men who are now under arms are men who are attempting to gain profit by remaining under arms, and are in no sense fighting for their country."

On November 23 Kruger, at Marseilles, said:—

"The war waged against us is a war of barbarians. I have witnessed wars of barbarians and never have I seen committed barbarities so monstrous as those committed daily among us. Our farms, which we had had so much difficulty to construct, are burned. The women whose husbands are at the war are hunted down and are brutally separated from their children, who are deprived of bread and necessities. But, what may be done, never shall we surrender. We shall fight to the end."

FOR THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH "Epps' Glycerine Jujubes" always prove effective. They soothe and clear the voice, and are invaluable to all suffering from cough, soreness, or dryness of the throat. Sold only in labelled tins, price 1/6 and 1s. 1/6. James Epps and Co., Ltd., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

HENNESSY'S THREE STAR BRANDY.

Genuine Brandy.
Bottled in Cognac.

MANŒUVRE-DRILL FOR ALL ARMS.

It is hardly stretching the truth to affirm that it is not so much from want of knowledge as from want of practice that the army in South Africa in the service of detachments has from time to time fallen under the lash of the critics. Now, the real facts of the case appear to be that, while our text-books are invariably sound in abstract principles, they do not carry us far enough in the matter of detail, and so, even at manœuvres, the "fog of war," as Colonel Lonsdale Hale aptly terms it, falls early and thick upon the minor tacticians. Now, the object of this article is to put forward a suggestion for the careful compilation of a handbook of war which, as far as possible, shall embody the results and the tactical errors of modern campaigns in which British troops have been engaged, or for which they might well be prepared. This work, it must be clearly understood, should not supersede the present or revised drill-books of cavalry, infantry, artillery, or mounted infantry (mounted rifles is the best term), but should be placed in the hands of field-officers and company leaders with specially marked chapters for the use of sergeants. The book, in fact, should be adapted to all ranks, and should embody the outline of the strategy of actual campaigns, which should serve as a beacon to the higher order of intelligence which marks the brain of the Army, the Staff and other officers. Then the tactical chapters based upon historical analysis of wars typical of the Empire's progress should open with succinct accounts of how battles actually began, and should follow out the phases of each engagement in such clear and lucid detail that subalterns and captains at field-training could by the aid of large scale maps and diagrams make it interesting and instructive to them. Here and there, of course, the chequered and abridged history of Imperial wars, such as that in Zululand, on the Indian frontier, and in South Africa would alternate in descriptions of purely orthodox warfare waged by the armies of the leading Continental States. And, again, maritime expeditions and the combined tactics of fleets and armies would be treated with special regard to the officer-student. But this higher education of officers and men should never be allowed until all ranks had satisfactorily solved the drill and musketry problems of regimental life, for the war has certainly not taught us that the personal training and discipline of officers and men by the machinery of the drill-ground can be dispensed with. Rather the contrary. The soldier, who is slow to take in and execute the drill-instructions and words of command of the sergeant, who stands but thirty yards from him, will be yet slower in following up a flag signal or the wave of a hand, which the instinct of the trained light infantryman, scout, or file of a widely extended line should teach the individual is as emphatic a command as that given by the colonel at the head of the regiment or battalion in close order.

Then, again, the manifold claims of Empire render it imperative that the non-commissioned officers, and even the rank and file, should have some concrete ideas of how mounted infantry, artillery, and cavalry are tactically connected with the dismounted arm, not only in the pitched battle, but in the reconnoitring phase of all actions. This, of course, implies that, after the theory of the hand-book set forth above, in outline has been assimilated, chapter by chapter, units of two or more companies should, if possible, work with the other arms, while every opportunity should be seized to exercise the troops on ground, which should be selected as more or less representative of the terms dealt with in lecture. For it is surprising how a real leader of men, even on a small scale, can inspire his command with his own zeal and energy, if he is not only a good lecturer but able to act as a peripatetic philosopher in the manœuvre field. Then as the history of the war—so it is reported—is already in course of preparation at the hands of one of the very best writers in the Army, and as the Boers are likely to provide us in the future with yet more amazing "data" concerning their temporary successes and their chronic failure as strategists and tacticians of a high intellectual order, the British soldier will be in a position to learn a great deal, which will, it is to be hoped, raise his comrades and his officers in his own estimation.

Need it be here stated that all detraction of superiors and polemical discussion will be eliminated from the pages of the hand-book aforesaid? It is easy to describe a defeat or a repulse without exceeding the limits of military description, and from every battle, however disastrous, the most valuable lessons can be learned when the "data" have been sifted and examined by a master hand and brain. In conclusion, let it be borne in mind that realism can only be brought into play if the teachers and lecturers are in a position to hold dissertations upon facts and not fancies of the mimic battle-field, and stimulated warfare is by no means at present a strong point in our "kriegspiel" either in the field or at the winter tactical and academic exercises. The officers of the army in South Africa are primed with f cts; let us take advantage of their unique knowledge of this amazing war, and, so far as knowledge of Boer warfare is a guide to efficiency, let the proved episodes of the campaign be crystallised to all time for the benefit of the officer and the soldier.

THE WAR-GAME SEASON.

BY A MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.

Lord Wolseley has, as usual, set the right ball rolling in the instructions issued for the training of officers, non-commissioned officers and men during the winter months. The military reader, of course, knows full well that the Queen's Regulations embody the outline of the schedule of instruction now put forth by the Commander-in-Chief, but a very large number of the general public, who now more than ever before study the Service publications, may not be aware that hitherto no really uniform system or method has been adopted throughout the Army and Marines in this important matter of theoretical instruction during the winter months. For instance, the garrison lectures have usually been of rather too academic a nature, with the consequence that officers and N.C.O.'s have hardly derived much help in the practical and minor details of their duty in the field or at manœuvres. But the new scheme is calculated to remedy two defects.

First, it is emphatically laid down that the tactics of all arms are to be treated by company and squadron and battery lecturers; and in the second place, the fortnightly lectures by the staff officer for instruction are bound to secure a good and critical audience, since all available officers and N.C.O.'s are enjoined to attend. Consequently the supernumerary rank will be kept continuously in mind of the principles involved in combined tactics, and the garrison lecturers will be on their mettle to meet the demands of an audience composed of all branches of the Service. It might be added that if there is a defect in the scheme it hinges upon the omission of special regimental superintendent of the winter scheme of instruction, selected for special qualifications in this respect. This, however, is probably provided for in the special instructions given to commanding officers, who would naturally select the second in command to define the scope of the lectures, and to report upon the results. And if Lord Wolseley had himself been present at the typical lecture he could hardly have proved his acumen better than by the good-natured hits at the prevalent habit of question and answer or "poll-parrot" instruction. It is necessary at the specialised field-training of companies and other units, as now carried on, to reduce part of the instruction to mere question and answer, but as the questions are more or less taken from some quark hand-book of war the soldiers are apt to get pages off by heart with much the same results as the candidate who passes an examination by mere "cramming" and an extreme effort of memory, and then forgets all about what he has learnt. But while in the matter of formulae and the dimensions of trenches, parapets, &c., the catechising of soldiers is permitted to rest where it is, Lord Wolseley's orders will not bear fruit if officers do not grasp the idea underlying the latest regulations for greater and lesser war-games as now promulgated to the Army. This is, in effect, that lecturers must use their imagination and their acquired knowledge of war, in order to set and to solve practical problems on the map and elsewhere. Again, in the light of the Commander-in-Chief's remarks, the attention of all ranks is drawn to "the practice of stratagem," a practice undoubtedly suggested by what has occurred in the South African campaign. Officers, in fact, are told to teach their men the art of seeing over the hill, which has nothing to do with particularly strong vision, but is the method of weighing probabilities and calculating chances. Tactics rather than drill, in fact, are to be the rule and not the exception so soon as officers and men quit the close-order formations of the barrack-yard, or, as one might prefer to term it, tactical drill, is to be taught continuously, and not relegated to the period allotted to field days.

Now it would be invidious to name the officers now serving, who would and could formulate, if they are allowed to do so, some expansive scheme of war-game training in the lecture-room and out of it, but the chiefs of the War Office know where to look for genius and born instructors, and these invaluable officers should be impartially distributed over the districts at home and abroad. These experts would not stereotype lectures or war-games, or limit the area of instruction, but would be in a position to teach others how to teach. For it is by no means the fact that every commanding officer or company leader has the gift of teaching, however good a leader he may be in the field, and it might be well to test the officers of all corps after the annual inspection at the hands of these experts aforesaid, and award a special instructional diploma to a field officer and captain of each unit, which should carry with it a small amount of extra pay and the duty of reporting to the commanding officer on the instruction given and the progress made in the winter months by all ranks. The question of seniority need not arise any more than it does now in the case of a D.A.A.G. for instruction, for both these officers would pose as the staff of the commanding officer who to this day gives written orders through the regimental adjutant. But by this means it is to be hoped that a uniform standard of efficiency would be attained throughout the Army and the latest and most up-to-date methods of training would filter through the upper "strata" of the officers, and be brought into vogue regimentally by the commanding officer and his instructional staff. But whatever methods may be used to bring home the principles of instruction promulgated by Lord Wolseley, it will remain on record that he, and he alone, by one of the last regulations he will ever issue as Commander-in-Chief of her Majesty's land forces has, as usual, hit the blot on our system of training and has prescribed the remedy.

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR.

ROSE'S

LIME JUICE WHISKY

LIQUEUR

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the Island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO

Cherry Whisky,
Cherry Brandy,
Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—

HUNTSMEN,

GOLFERS,

and SPORTSMEN

generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

Bottled in Leith, Scotland.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants.
Price 54s. per Case of 1 Dozen Quarts, Carriage Paid.

A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.
41, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

CAPTAIN GALL, Late Northumberland Fusiliers.
AND
CAPTAIN H. C. KING, late of 6, Clifton Gardens, W.
80a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.
Prepare Pupils for
ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS.
Individual Attention Guaranteed. Lists of Successes and Terms on Application.

Obituary.

NAVY.

Captain G. A. Douglas, who died at Groton Cottage, Walmer, on Nov. 20, saw much war service in the course of a long and distinguished career. Joining the Navy in 1847, he was under fire at the bombardment of Sveaborg in 1855 as mate in command of a rocket boat (Baltic medal). He was flag-lieutenant to Admiral Sir James Hope from 1859-62, and during that time was present at the attack on the Pei-ho forts in 1859 and their capture in 1860, took part in several assaults on fortified towns and stockades, and in 1862 engaged and drove off a mounted party of Taepings and a large body of infantry near Shanghai. For these services he received the China medal, with Ta-ku clasp. From 1865 to 1867 he commanded the Torch on the West Coast of Africa in the suppression of the slave trade, and received two letters of commendation from the Admiralty. He subsequently acted as senior officer of a detached squadron acting against pirates in the Persian Gulf, and received the thanks of the Admiralty and the Indian Government. In 1873 he retired with the rank of captain, and at the time of his death was chairman of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution at Deal, and commissioner of salvage for that port.

Commander Hugh Talbot, who died on Wednesday at Merton Lodge, Clifton, was the eldest son of the late Admiral John T. Talbot. Joining the Navy on April 13, 1869, he became a sub-lieutenant in 1875, and held that rank on board the Shah when she engaged the Peruvian rebel turret ship Huascar on May 29, 1877, off the town of Ylo; he also served in two night torpedo expeditions, and was mentioned in despatches. He was promoted to lieutenant in 1879, and served on board the Carysfort during the naval and military operations in the Eastern Sudan, at Suakin, 1884-85. He was employed to superintend the working of the land mines, which were used to protect the flanks, was mentioned in despatches, and received the Egyptian medal, Suakin, 1885, clasp, Khedive's bronze star. Lieut. Talbot attained the rank of commander in 1879, and till recently was in charge of the training school for engineer students at Devonport. He was the author of "The Officer of the Watch."

ARMY.

Gen. Brooke Boyd, whose death occurred this week at St. Leonards, at the age of 84, entered the Bengal Army in 1834. He attained the rank of Captain in 1846; Major, 1855; Lieut.-Colonel, 1859; Colonel, 1866; Major-General, 1871; Lieut.-General, 1877; and General, 1888. The deceased officer served against the Bheels in Malwa in 1836; in the Sutlej Campaign in 1846, including the battle of Sobraon (medal); Burmese War, 1852-53 (medal with clasp, for Pegu); in Bundelcund, in 1858. Himself the son of Gen. Mossom Boyd, of the East India Company's Service, the late general was one of the five brothers who attained that rank, two survive him. Gen. Boyd, who was twice married, leaves a family of three sons and one daughter.

Deputy-Surg.-Gen. George Mackay died suddenly at his residence, 2, Learmouth Terrace, Edinburgh, on Nov. 20. He was the elder son of the late Major Donald Mackay, Her Majesty's 70th Foot, and grandson of Colonel George Mackay, of Bighouse, Sutherlandshire. He was born in 1820 at Aberdeen, where his father's regiment was then stationed. Taken with the regiment to Canada, he received his earliest education near the Falls of Niagara. He was afterwards sent to the Madras College, St. Andrew's, and had as schoolfellows the late Lord Playfair, Mr. Claude Hamilton, and Dr. Cleghorn. In 1841, he took the degree of M.D. at the University of Edinburgh, gaining as an undergraduate several prizes and a silver medal of the Hunterian Society. In the following year he received a commission in the Medical Department of the H.E.I.C. service, and at once proceeded to India. He took part in the operations against the Mahrattas in 1844, and, being sent to Burma on active service in 1852, was present at the actions which culminated in the capture of Rangoon, and also at the occupation of Prome and Meaday. He received the medal and clasp for Pegu, and was specially thanked for his services during the campaign. After the war he returned to duty in India, and in 1864 was appointed to the Military Finance Department. Surgeon Mackay was the first to introduce the modern treatment of heat apoplexy, and in addition to his military duties undertook many offices in societies formed for the general benefit of the English population in India. He retired from the Service in 1875, and since that time has resided in Scotland. In 1851 he married Ellen Rose, daughter of Mr. Arthur Robertson, of Inverness-shire, and he is survived by his widow, three sons and three daughters.

Major Norman Charles Welch, Hampshire Regiment, who died from wounds received in the action near Bothaville, was born in 1865. Joining the Hampshire Regiment from the Militia in 1886 as Lieut., he was promoted to Captain in 1893, and five years later he was employed with the West African Frontier Force. Before the present war he served with the Burmese Expedition in 1887, obtaining the medal with clasp.

Capt. Lawrence Harry Hawkes, Welsh Regiment, who died suddenly at Barberton on the 13th inst., the cause of death not being stated, was born on March 25, 1864. He entered the Army in 1883 as a Lieutenant in the Bedfordshire Regiment, and was transferred some three weeks later to the Welsh Regiment, obtaining his company in 1890.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

It was announced in Tuesday's London Gazette that the Queen had been graciously pleased to award the decoration of the Victoria Cross to the undermentioned officer, whose claims had been submitted for Her Majesty's approval, for his conspicuous bravery during the engagement at Paardeberg, as stated below:—

"Lieut. Francis Newton Parsons (since deceased), Essex Regiment.—On the morning of February 18, at Paardeberg, on the south bank of the River Modder, Pte. Ferguson, 1st Batn. Essex Regiment, was wounded and fell in a place devoid of cover. While trying to crawl under cover, he was again wounded, in the stomach. Lieut. Parsons at once went to his assistance, dressed his wound under heavy fire, went down twice (still under heavy fire) to the bank of the river to get water for Pte. Ferguson, and subsequently carried him to a place of safety. This officer was recommended for the Victoria Cross by Lieut.-Gen. Kelly-Kenny, C.B., on March 3 last. Lieut. Parsons was killed on March 10, in the engagement at Dreifontein, on which occasion he again displayed conspicuous gallantry."

It was announced in last night's Gazette that the Queen had been graciously pleased to signify her intention of conferring the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officer, whose claims had been submitted for her Majesty's approval, for his conspicuous bravery at Warm Bad:—

"Lieut. Guy G. E. Wyly, Tasmanian Imperial Bushmen.—On Sept. 1, near Warm Bad, Lieut. Wyly was with the advanced scouts of a foraging party. They were passing through a narrow gorge, very rocky and thickly wooded, when the enemy in force suddenly opened fire at short range from hidden cover, wounding six out of the party of eight, including Lieut. Wyly. That officer, seeing that one of his men was badly wounded in the leg, and that his horse was shot, went back to the man's assistance, made him take his (Lieut. Wyly's) horse, and opened fire from behind a rock to cover the retreat of the others, at the imminent risk of being cut off himself. Col. T. E. Hickman, D.S.O., considers that the gallant conduct of Lieut. Wyly saved Corpl. Brown from being killed or captured, and that his subsequent action in firing to cover the retreat was "instrumental in saving others of his men from death or capture."

MILITARY MEMORIALS IN "LATTE" BRASS OR MABLE, &c.—Special Illustrated Military Price List on application to GAWTHORP, 16, Long Acre, W.C., and 19, Castle Street East, W., London, Craftsmen in Metals to H.M. the Queen and H.E.H. the Prince of Wales. Patronised by the War Office, Lord Wolseley, Sir Francis Grenfell, the Guards, Cavalry, and most Regiments of the Line. See Memorials to Officers killed at Glencoe, Diklei's Drift, Kimberley, Wagon Hill, Ladysmith, Magersfontein, Omdurman, Khartoum, Khyber Pass, Crete, &c., and in the Boer War of 1880-81.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London N.W.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."
SIR,—Lord Roberts certainly deserves the gratitude of the Army and the public for the broad views he is showing in his recommendations for the Victoria Cross. The decoration was in danger of falling into stereotyped lines granted only for certain stereotyped acts, and tending, therefore, to produce what is known as the professional V.C. hunter. I remember he had considerable difficulty in securing this honour for Sir George (then Major) White in the Afghan War, because Sir George, though his gallantry on all occasions was most conspicuous, had never actually carried a wounded man on his back or placed a so-called live shell in a bucket. But there is one other matter, which Sir Charles Warren's recent speech somewhat emphasises, and that is, the unevenness with which the decoration is issued, for whereas one General is most liberal in his recommendations, another refuses to recommend any one. Thus it has come about that the V.C. is much more highly thought of by the general public than it is in the Service, for military men know and see that luck quite as much as merit, has heretofore governed the distribution. We cannot eliminate the element of luck, but we can ensure that no truly gallant act goes unrewarded.
YLD.

THE new military barracks, on the hutment principle, which have been erected at Crownhill, near Plymouth, were, on Nov. 20, handed over to the military authorities as ready for occupation. The barracks, which comprise 50 distinct buildings, provide an accommodation for 1,000 officers and men, and it is understood that the first regiment to occupy them will be the 3rd Batn. Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, who will at once take possession of them.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
AND BRASSES
Morris & Sons
239 Kennington Rd. London S.E.

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPELL & CO. LTD. EXETER
4 & 5 DUNCANNONS' LONDON
EXA. CHARING CROSS.
DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

JONES & WILLIS
43, GREAT RUSSELL STREET, London, W.C.
79, EDMUND STREET, Birmingham CONCERT STREET, BOLD STREET, Liverpool

MEMORIAL BRASS ENGRAVERS,
STAINED GLASS ARTISTS,
TABLETS IN MARBLE, STONE, AND ALABASTER,
CHURCH FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.

MEMORIAL BRASSES
MARBLE & OTHER TABLETS,
Stained Glass Windows.
DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES FURNISHED BY—
Founded COX, SONS, BUCKLEY & CO., LTD.
18, Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, London.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Nov. 17.

A Reuter message from East London states that recruiting is being actively carried on. Eighty men are leaving shortly to join the Imperial Light Horse, and nearly 300 have joined the Colonial Division. The South African Constabulary is also attracting some good men, while others are joining the Commander-in-Chief's bodyguard.

Monday, Nov. 19.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram of Nov. 16, from Johannesburg, says that Generals Barton and Douglas occupied Klerksdorp on that day without opposition. Gen. Douglas had some desultory fighting each day with Liebenberg's commando, who endeavoured to protect their cattle, but would not make any stand. The British casualties were three men wounded, and Douglas's column captured eight prisoners and a large number of sheep and cattle. Gen. Barton's column captured seven prisoners and some horses, mules, and cattle. Lord Roberts also reports slight skirmishes near Potchefstroom, at Abraham's Kraal, at Vryheid, and elsewhere.

Mr. Pott, the former Consul for the Transvaal at Lorenzo Marques, has been notified by the Portuguese authorities that he must not fly the Transvaal and Free State flags any longer, as the Portuguese Government does not recognise those countries.

Reuter despatches state that Gen. Delarey, with 1,000 men, is reported to be between Vryburg and Fourteen Streams, and that there has been a fight near Edenburg, in which the Boers are said to have been severely handled and to have lost 75 killed and wounded.

Tuesday, Nov. 20.

A Reuter telegram from Standerton says that all the Boer families in that neighbourhood are being gradually brought in, with their cattle, sheep, grain, and forage. The wives of Boers on commando have received notice to prepare to proceed to Natal. It is anticipated that the measures adopted by General Wynne will have a very salutary effect.

A cavalry column which left Bloemfontein recently to operate against the guerillas came in touch with and dispersed the enemy on Nov. 14, about 18 miles west of Bloemfontein.

Wednesday, Nov. 21.

Lord Roberts, in a Johannesburg telegram of Nov. 19, reports various indications of Boer guerilla activity, especially in the Orange River Colony, and says that Klerksdorp is an important telegraphic centre, and that its occupation by our troops is a great disadvantage to the enemy.

Thursday, Nov. 22.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram of Nov. 20, reports the movements of Boer commandos and parties in the vicinity of Wepener, near Standerton, and elsewhere. Gen. Rundle reports from Harrismith that he is gradually clearing the country. Lloyd's column, on the way back from Reitz, captured a large amount of cattle and food-stuffs. Boyes's column, which is now clearing the country between Vrede and Harrismith, has accounted for 22 Boers killed during the recent operations. A report has been received of the details of the recent unsuccessful Boer attack on a police post at Staydon's Dam. Gen. Lyttelton reports that on Nov. 19 an outpost of the Buffs, south-west of Balmoral, was surprised by the enemy, with a British loss of six killed, five wounded, and an officer and 30 men taken prisoners. The post has since been re-occupied, four Boer prisoners being taken and five Boers found badly wounded.

Friday, Nov. 23.

Lord Roberts has telegraphed from Johannesburg to the War Office that his horse fell with him on Sunday, and bruised him somewhat; but he is doing work, and hopes to be about in a few days.

A Reuter despatch of Tuesday from Kroonstad says there are two strong Boer commandos under Botha and Haasbroek, lying near Thaba Nchu and Dewetsdorp respectively, and two smaller bands are west of the railway. De Wet is believed to be with Botha. There is ample evidence that many of the burghers regard both De Wet and Steyn with very unfriendly feelings.

It is reported from Bloemfontein that the Boers under George Brand were severely defeated at Baberspan last Sunday, and were badly cut up by our cavalry.

LLOYD'S PATRIOTIC FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—May I be allowed to make an appeal through your columns for subscriptions to enable the trustees of Lloyd's Patriotic Fund to assist all ranks of Her Majesty's forces disabled by wounds, disease, or accident in the present operations in China and Ashanti. At a time when so much is being done for the sufferers by the War in South Africa, it seems very hard that no assistance should be given to those who are enduring equal hardships and facing equal perils, whilst upholding the honour of the British flag in other parts of the world. The widows and orphans of those killed in China and Ashanti will receive assistance from the Greenwich Hospital Fund, and possibly from other sources, in addition to which the men in the Naval Brigade in China have sent home to Miss Weston the sum of £400 for the benefit of the widows and orphans of their comrades who have been killed, but there is no existing fund in a position to grant assistance to the disabled men.

No portion of the amount handed over to Lloyd's Patriotic Fund for the benefit of men disabled in the War in South Africa can be applied for the above object; nor can the trustees grant the necessary assistance from their general fund, which was started in 1803 for the benefit of officers and men wounded in action, and the widows and orphans of those killed; since the small annual income of the fund (£2,300) is entirely appropriated for the benefit of sufferers by former wars. Up to the present date the casualties in the Naval Brigade in China are:—Killed 80, wounded 240; and of the latter ten men have already been invalided out of the Service as "permanently disabled," and many more who are shown as "severely wounded" will doubtless be discharged before long.

With regard to Ashanti, where principally native African troops are being employed, no official return of casualties has yet been obtained; but in the severe fighting which has taken place, it is certain that some must have occurred amongst the forces engaged. In these circumstances, and since the men of the Naval Brigade in China have themselves sent home to Miss Weston the £400 above mentioned, the trustees of Lloyd's Patriotic Fund earnestly appeal to the public for subscriptions, which will be applied solely and immediately for the benefit of the men disabled in the present operations in China and Ashanti, and in no way hoarded to meet future wants.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Lloyd's Patriotic Fund, Brook House, Walbrook, London, E.C. Cheques and postal orders should be crossed "Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smiths."

C. HAMPDEN WIGRAM, Chairman.

THE ROYAL ENGINEERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Mr. Brodrick announced that some of the duties now devolving on the Royal Engineers on active service are in future to be carried out by other branches of the Service. Does it not, therefore, seem a fitting opportunity to overhaul the corps of Royal Engineers, and so to adjust its duties that in time of piece both officers and men shall practise continuously none but the duties devolving on them in time of war, and not trench upon other people's work? The sophistical excuses hitherto advanced by advocates of the present system (?) should be brushed aside and disregarded, and the corps be re-organised and made into a serviceable arm, instead of a hodge-podge of semi-civil and semi-military builders. The number of officers should not, as at present, be allowed to be ridiculously out of proportion to the men, but, on the contrary, should conform to the latter, much as in the case of the artillery. The builders' work now forced on the corps should be carried out by a non-combatant civil department, as in the case of Admiralty works, or the Public Works Department of India. This would, of course, mean reduction; but is reduction an undesirable thing, if it results in improvement and efficiency? If Mr. Brodrick reads the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE I trust this letter may catch his eye. I enclose my card and, beg to sign myself
A SAPPER.
Nov. 21.

An experimental consignment of rifles, captured from the Boers, is to be sent to India with a view to the possible utilisation of these weapons for frontier levies.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards.—The 1st Life Guards detachment of the Household Cavalry Composite Regiment under Col. Miles, which is expected to reach England next week on its return from South Africa, is to be entertained at a dinner which will be given in the Victoria Hall of the White Hart Hotel, Windsor, at 7 o'clock on Friday evening, the 30th inst. The guests will number about 230. Lieut.-Col. Calley arrived at Windsor on Nov. 22, on his return from South Africa, and received a most enthusiastic welcome at the Cavalry Barracks. After being met by the officers, the gallant officer thanked the soldiers for their kind reception.

3rd Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. J. D. L. Arathoon left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys).—2nd Lieut. L. C. F. Oppenheim left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

3rd Hussars.—2nd Lieut. M. Burge left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home.

14th Hussars.—Lieut. T. E. L. Hill-Whitson left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided.

16th Lancers.—Lieut. A. Cox has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

18th Hussars.—Capt. and Qrmer. J. Baker left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

19th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. G. P. Dodsworth left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Major J. R. H. Allen, R.G.A., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided.

Major Gay, R.A., has been appointed Brigadier-Major for Royal Artillery in the Curragh District in succession to Lieut.-Col. E. W. Fleming, who reverts to duty with the Brigade Division of Royal Field Artillery at Ipswich. Lieut.-Col. Fleming has during the drill season been temporarily employed on the staff at Salisbury Plain. He was appointed Brig.-Major for Royal Artillery at the Curragh in February last, on giving up his post as professor of staff duties and military administration at the Staff College, on that institution being temporarily closed, as a consequence of the Boer war. He was previously employed at Colchester as as D.A.A.G. for Instruction, Eastern District.

Capt. Brodrick, R.A., who was lately serving at Ipswich with the 97th Field Battery, formed at that centre several months ago, has been appointed to do duty with the detachments of Royal Artillery sent to China with the 1-pr. Vickers-Maxim guns.

Capt. Birch left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

Capt. G. T. Mair, R.H.A., is at Kroonstad, suffering from a gunshot wound in the right arm. The bone is fractured, but he is doing well.

Lieut. R. R. B. Wall and 2nd Lieut. R. K. Lynch-Staunton left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

2nd Lieut. W. V. D. Matthews, R.G.A., is seriously ill (enteric) at Pretoria.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut.-Cols. A. C. Foley and A. H. Kennedy left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home.

Major W. F. Hawkins left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, on passage home.

Lieut. S. G. Faber left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Moor, on passage home.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Capt. Lord Loch, D.S.O., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided.

Irish Guards.—For the first time in the history of the new regiment, an officer of the Irish Guards has been appointed for duty as Field Officer in Brigade Waiting during December. Colonel Vesey Dawson, commanding the regiment, has been selected, and the Irish Guards will also supply the adjutant and quartermaster. Capt. C. Fitzclarence, V.C., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Royal Scots (1st).—Major L. W. Bode, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home.

Royal Lancaster Regiment (4th).—Major W. H. Feilden, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Capt. C. M. A. Wood and S. C. Birch, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town in the Assaye on Nov. 14, invalided.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Major G. de H. Fullerton, 6th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye on passage home; Capt. L. W. Johnson, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

NAVAL AND MILITARY MEMORIALS,

Brasses, Crosses, Graves'ones, Monuments, Tablets, Windows, Fonts, Pulpits, Reredoses, Standards, Mosaics, &c., of the highest class, designed, executed, and erected by

THOMAS PRATT & SONS,

Ecclesiastical Art Workers,

MEMORIAL GALLERY, 24, TAVISTOCK STREET (facing Covent Garden), LONDON, W.C.

Illustrations Free.

Old Military Flags netted and arranged for preservation.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—2nd Lieut. A. E. Sauer left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home.

King's Liverpool Regiment (8th).—2nd Lieut. W. N. W. Gape left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire on passage home. Mrs. Richard Roynon Jones, of 1, Paragon Parade, Cheltenham, proposes to send at once plum puddings, &c., to the men of the regiment, whose last Christmas was spent in Ladysmith, and will be very grateful for any subscriptions towards the cost of doing so.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—Lieuts. F. R. Day and B. S. Grissel left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Lincolnshire Regiment (10th).—Capt. J. J. Howley, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye on passage home.

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—2nd Lieut. J. L. Woolcombe has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Suffolk Regiment (12th).—Lieut. Franklin, 1st Batn., has been attached to the Army Service Corps in South Africa, and graded as a staff-lieut. Lieut.-Col. Townley, who will, next February, complete four years' service in command of the 2nd Batn., has received one year's extension of his appointment. He will also be promoted colonel by brevet. Col. Townley has served 32 years in the Suffolks. Capt. C. C. R. Murphy, 1st Batn., has been appointed captain on the staff in South Africa from Sept. 30. Lieut. Peebles (gunshot wound) is doing well.

Somersetshire Light Infantry (13th).—Capt. A. R. Foord, at present serving at the Depot, is to embark at an early date for India to join the 1st Batn.

East Yorkshire Regiment (15th).—2nd Lieut. D. G. Wrangham, 2nd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa. 2nd Lieut. C. L. Estridge left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Capt. Sir F. Frankland, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14, in the Assaye, invalided. 2nd Lieut. L. Paxton, 2nd Batn., who was killed at Thabanchu, on Nov. 16, only joined his regiment in January last. Capt. H. C. Franks, 4th Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Capt. Higgins, of the 3rd Batn., has been appointed an extra A.D.C. to Capt. Lord Ampthill, the new Governor of Madras, who is also in the 3rd Batn.

Royal Scots Fusiliers (21st).—Capt. H. M. Trenchard and F. E. Buchanan, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—Lieut.-Col. C. Healey, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home. Capt. F. St. J. Hughes left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Moor, on passage home.

Scottish Rifles (26th).—Capt. H. H. Smith, 4th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Moor, on passage home.

East Lancashire Regiment (30th).—Lieut. R. A. Gosset left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, on passage home. Capt. Finch, D.A.A.G. for Musketry, Punjab, is permitted to retire from the Service on pension on account of ill-health.

West Riding Regiment (33rd).—Capt. Harris is suffering from a slight gunshot wound in the thigh, at Kroonstad. Capt. H. W. Cobb, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Royal Sussex Regiment (35th).—Capt. J. B. Wroughton, 1st Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Hampshire Regiment (37th).—Lieut. G. Brooke, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided. Capt. Perkins (wounded) is doing well. 2nd Lieut. F. L. Parker left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th).—Capt. E. Layton left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire.

Welsh Regiment (41st).—Capt. R. D. Stevens, 3rd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Highlanders (42nd).—Major J. Deane and 2nd Lieut. R. G. Webber, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home. Lieut. A. H. Marindin left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (43rd).—Capt. G. N. Colville is doing well (gunshot wound).

Essex Regiment (44th).—Lieut. W. A. Jacomb has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Capt. G. M. Tufnell and B. D. L. D. Anley left Cape Town on Nov. 14, invalided. Major H. H. W. Nason left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

Northamptonshire Regiment (48th).—Lieut. R. C. Goldwell left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Royal West Kent Regiment (50th).—Capt. F. C. Marsh left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Shropshire Light Infantry (53rd).—Capt. J. J. White, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Middlesex Regiment (57th).—Major Barnardiston has been appointed D.A.A.G. in the Intelligence Department. He has been temporarily employed at headquarters for a considerable period, and he was at one time serving on the Staff at Colchester as D.A.A.G. of the Eastern District. Lieut. Smith is now convalescent at Kroonstad.

King's Royal Rifle Corps (60th).—Capt. R. S. Oxley left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided. 2nd Lieut. E. B. L'Estrange, 8th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, on passage home. Capt. V. H. S. Scratchley, 4th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, on passage home.

Wiltshire Regiment (62nd).—It having been brought to the Queen's notice by Gen. Dunne, the colonel of the regiment, that H. R. Stimson, late colour-sergeant in that corps, has had four sons very actively engaged in the war in South Africa, her Majesty has graciously given directions for a letter to be sent to Colr.-Sergt. Stimson expressing her interest and gratification at this exceptional record of service in one family. 2nd Lieut. C. A. Harding, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Capt. M. G. Sowerby, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided. Lieut.-Col. Ross is still dangerously ill at Kroonstad, though his condition is improving.

Seaforth Highlanders (72nd).—Lieut. C. P. Doig left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home. 2nd Lieut. Methven has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (87th).—Lieut. F. A. M. Welsh left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home.

Connaught Rangers (89th).—Capt. A. W. Abercrombie left Cape Town in the Assaye, on Nov. 14, on passage home.

Leinster Regiment (100th).—Major W. Seton has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut. Raynes, 1st Batn., is improving.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—Col. F. W. Bell, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home. Capt. A. L. Coppenger, 3rd Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Royal Dublin Fusiliers (102nd).—Capt. F. Macnamara, 5th Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Capt. Cory, 1st Batn., wounded, is doing well. Lieut. J. McD. Haskard, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. Sir E. Grogan, 4th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 15 on passage home.

Staff.—Gen. Sir F. Clery, Major-Gen. J. B. B. Dickson, Gen. J. P. Brabazon, Col. Alexander, Col. Mansell, Lieut.-Col. De Courcy Hamilton, Lieut.-Col. C. V. Hume, Major A. H. C. Hanbury-Tracy, Capt. De Winton, Capt. F. R. F. Boileau, Lieut. Pole, and Lieut. Vaughan left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Moor, on passage home. Col. Hon. J. S. Napier (special service officer) is quite recovered at Winburg, Orange River Colony. Major E. S. Heard left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, on passage home. Capt. G. E. Crofton left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire on passage home.

Indian Staff Corps.—The following officers are about to be appointed to the corps:—Lieuts. Bally, 1st Northamptonshire Regiment; Anderson, 1st North Stafford Regiment; Elphinstone and Dalrymple, 1st East Surrey Regiment, and Skinner, 1st Hampshire Regiment.

R.A.M.C.—Major C. E. Faunce and Capt. F. J. Wade-Brown have been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut. W. Jagger (for duty on board), Major T. Archer and Lieut. F. S. Walker, invalided, left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye. Lieut.-Col. Barrow is appointed to officiate as District Principal Medical Officer, Mandalay.

Army Service Corps.—The War Office have decided to augment the strength of the A.S.C. without delay. Orders have been given for the formation on Dec. 1 of No. 55 Company, of which Captain Morgan will take command at Aldershot. Capt. J. Barrett-Lennard (attached) left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home. Capt. A. R. L. Hayward left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided. Capt. F. G. E. Cannott left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, invalided.

Army Ordnance Department.—Lieut. T. Robertson has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Chaplain's Department.—Rev. W. R. P. Paterson and Rev. F. H. Powell left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home. Rev. J. R. Rockliff and Rev. F. G. Wright left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided. Rev. A. Mitchell left Cape Town on Nov. 15 in the Yorkshire, on passage home.

Army Veterinary Department.—Capt. J. Moore left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided.

Remount Department.—Major W. B. Butler-Creagh left Cape Town on Nov. 17 in the Norham Castle, on passage home. Lieut. Fairweather left Cape Town on Nov. 14 in the Assaye, invalided.

Volunteers.

Major-Gen. Sir W. Gatacre will preside at the annual dinner of the Birmingham Volunteer Officers' Association on Friday, Nov. 30.

The formation of several companies of Volunteers in Northamptonshire, in the populous shoe manufacturing towns that have grown up in the county during the last twelve years, has been sanctioned. At present it is intended to attach the new companies to the 5th V.B. Northamptonshire Regiment.

In consequence of the large supply of recruits produced by the war and the employment of Volunteer troops in South Africa, the Honourable Artillery Company has in the official year recently closed increased in strength by more than 300 men as compared with the number on the roll in 1899. The strength of the company, which a year ago was 548, is now more than 850.

Col. Lord Belhaven and Stenton, who has commanded the Surrey Volunteer Infantry Brigade of eight battalions for more than twelve years, has been granted two years' extension of his appointment, to date from July 3 last.

The Bradfield College Cadet Corps (attached to the Volunteer Battalion of the Berkshire Regiment) is to be increased in establishment from one company to two companies.

A cadet corps has been authorised to be recruited from the City of London School, and to be attached to the London Rifle Brigade.

MESSRS. SKEFFINGTON AND SON, 163, Piccadilly, W., have nearly ready for publication Major A. W. A. Pollock's new book, "With Seven Generals in the Boer War." The author was a special correspondent of the Times, and his narrative describes his personal experiences and observations with Gatacre, Clements, Roberts, Methuen, Mahon, Baden-Powell and Hunter—commencing with Stormberg and ending with the relief of Mafeking and Hunter's march from Maribogo to Krugersdorp and Johannesburg. Amongst the illustrations are fac-similes of two Mafeking siege-notes, bearing the autographs of nearly all the prominent persons connected with the siege and relief.

About

LEMCO

the Soldier's Mainstay.

Lemco is the original Liebig Company's Extract, the only meat extract manufactured under the supervision of J. v. Liebig and his successors. Every jar bears his signature in blue.

Her Majesty's Government has ordered for the front enormous quantities of Lemco. The entire product of thousands of selected bullocks has been supplied in special regulation tins. See the name "Lemco" (the manufacturers' initials) on every jar of

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT.

Reviews.

SIR STAMFORD RAFFLES.

Mr. Hugh Edward Egerton has written, for the series of "Builders of Greater Britain" (T. Fisher Unwin), a very excellent monograph upon Sir Stamford Raffles. He has had access to the records of the India Office and to many private papers, and has done ample justice to a good subject. Raffles was a true pioneer of progress, who had learnt from his earliest years to trust to his own exertions, and who was tried throughout his life by ill fortune, badly treated by his superiors, and snubbed by lesser men, but retaining his composure and carrying out a great work for his country. The Dutch themselves have rendered ample testimony to his fine services in Java, and when he saw that the island was not to be retained, he devoted his life to devising a plan and carrying it out by which the position of Britain in the Far East might be assured. The outcome of his work was the foundation of Singapore, and his papers fully prove that he was a prescient thinker, prompt in theory as in deed. As Mr. Egerton says, it was to the honour of Raffles that he was distinguished both in the fields of thought and action, and that he bridged the chasm which divides the Wakefields from the Clives. The crowds of shipping at Singapore and the large development of the port are testimony to his greatness, and though the Netherlands stood in the pathway, he secured for England her share of the Eastern trade without any hostilities and unsupported by Ministers at home. His work, of course, was not final, but he saw the future need which has created Hong Kong. The biography of such a man well deserved to be added to Mr. Unwin's series.

SOME FICTION AND CHRISTMAS BOOKS.

It has for a long time been our pleasure to welcome at the approach of Christmas the very handsome volumes which Messrs. Blackie publish for the delectation of boys. Few other Christmas volumes are so well printed and illustrated as these. Three of them are again from the pen of that veteran writer Mr. G. A. Henty, and they are again historical in character and vivid in interest. In each one of them a very careful study has been made of the history of a particular period, with the result that a boy, while interested in a dramatic narrative, will acquire a large store of knowledge not to be found in the school-books. Thus, in The Irish Brigade we have a hero who goes through very many stirring adventures in Spain at a time when the Irishmen were greatly valued in the French service. The youth is able to save a large part of the French army at Oudenarde, and he will surely enrapture his friends by his bold kidnapping of the British Prime Minister. The book is very well illustrated by Mr. Sheldon. The second volume is entitled Out with Garibaldi, and is admirably illustrated by Mr. W. Rainey, R.I. The theme is the fall of the kingdom of Naples, and Frank Percival is the English boy who is selected to play a prominent part in the very dramatic invasion of Sicily. He has the satisfaction at the end of rescuing his father and grandfather from a Neapolitan prison. It is a very vigorous story, well written, and thoroughly well done. With Buller in Natal, also illustrated by Mr. Rainey, is probably one of the strongest romances we have had from Mr. Henty's prolific pen. The hero escapes from Johannesburg, and is chosen as the leader of a corps of irregular horse. He fights in every action, makes an incursion into the Transvaal, and emerges triumphant from many a peril. It is just the sort of book to inspire an enterprising boy. Of the same class is Capt. Brereton's In the King's Service, also published by Messrs. Blackie. The author has written several capital stories, and the present one, which is full of incident and adventure, will add to his reputation among boy readers.

Helmet and Spear, by the Rev. A. J. Church (Seeley and Co.), embodies stories from the wars of the Greeks and Romans. Mr. Church has already written so much in the same vein that has won the approval of wide popularity that it is only necessary to commend his picturesque book. He speaks of war as the ultimate expression of the human will, and his tales of the fights of the Greeks with Persia and Carthage, and of the Romans with Carthage and the barbarians, are selected to show how the will of civilisation, by means of war, has rolled back the tide of barbarism, and given us what we enjoy to-day. The stories are well told, for Mr. Church is a master in this particular manner, and the book deserves to be widely read.

Wounds in the Rain is a collection of stories by the late Stephen Crane (Methuen and Co.). Mr. Crane first showed his power of analysing the character of men in action in his Red Badge of Courage, and having himself fought in the Spanish-American War of 1898 he penned a number of sketches which have been accepted as confirming the estimate formed of his ability. The volume includes eleven stories in all, each of them embodying some incident of the campaign, and the intensely human character of them is their strongest feature. Some of them present very vividly the horrors of war, and all of them are very meritorious, and the book will be widely welcomed by Mr. Crane's many admirers.

In Sheep's Clothing, by Hume Nisbet (F. V. White and Co.), is a romance of Upper Queensland, a part of the Empire which the author knows well. He has depicted the country admirably, and has told a good story much bound up with the ill deeds of a very choice villain. It is a tale of wild doings beginning with kidnapping and ending with happiness.

We would also commend A Forest Officer, by Mrs. Frank Penny (Methuen and Sons), a capable story of native life, with much mystery and adventure in Madras. Jim Burns, the forest officer, is a good character, and the book, without being brilliant, is readable.

SHORT NOTICES.

The Waterloo Campaign, 1815 (Archibald Constable and Co.), is the fifth edition of the late Capt. William Siborne's famous volume. Much as has been written about Waterloo, Siborne's book is not displaced, and the appearance of a new edition is timely. It is in good form and well bound, and extends to over 800 pages. Nearly all the notes have had to be omitted, but the nominal lists of officers are retained. The book is a very conscientious study of the events and calls for no fresh praise. As every one knows, Capt. Siborne was the constructor of the Waterloo model, and he entered into communication with the officers of every regiment engaged to perfect his work. His son, Gen. H. D. Siborne, published in 1891 an interesting selection from the correspondence which passed between Capt. Siborne and many well-known officers, and we may say that it was a very interesting volume, published by Messrs. Cassell.

Lieut.-Col. E. Gunter has published (Wm. Clowes and Sons) a fifth edition of his well-known Officers' Field Note and Sketch Book, which will be of great use to officers practising winter reconnaissance, &c., not only for the reports on roads, positions, outposts, and sketching hints, but for its many illustrations of bridging, trenches, and field engineering, which are especially serviceable now that the Manual of Military Engineering, with which they are in accordance, is, as we mentioned on the 10th inst., again out of print.

Messrs. Longmans have added Pike and Perch, by William Senior ("Red Spinner") to their admirable "Fur, Feather, and Fin Series." There are chapters by "John Bickerdyke" and W. H. Pope, and Mr. Alexander Innes Shand contributes an academic chapter on cookery. From such a hand as Mr. Senior's the book could not but be all that it should be. Natural history and fishing methods are well balanced in its pages, and it is an excellent addition to a popular series. There are admirable illustrations.

FOREIGN.

L'Etat Militaire des Principales Puissances Etrangères en 1900, by Capt. J. Lauth, of the French Staff (Berger-Levrault, Paris), is the seventh edition, brought up to date, of a volume published originally in 1887 from the pen of Capt. (now Gen.) Rau. It deals with the military forces of Germany, Austria, Great Britain, Belgium, Spain, Russia, Italy, Roumania, and Switzerland. We have examined it with great care and have found it singularly accurate. Its system is admirable. In each case it deals with the chief command and central administration of the Army, the staff, expenditure, and effectives. Here, a good deal of light is thrown upon the political relations of the forces. Next, we find a careful statement of facts concerning recruiting and reserves, remounts, and the conscription of horses, establishments, the various branches of the service, all very fully described, and the military division of the country with the defensive arrangements. Afterwards the author deals with mobilisation, military vehicles, munitions, guns, &c., the various military establishments, and colonial forces, and concludes with details concerning uniforms, marks of distinction, and flags and standards. Nothing could be better than the way in which all this is done, and the volume is really full of very valuable information.

Seemannssprüche, by the Rev. W. Lüpkes (Mittler, Berlin), is an extremely interesting book, wherein the author attempts to show how deeply the affairs of the sea and ship and fishery life have entered into the common speech of the people. With this view he has brought together a great number of proverbs and popular expressions, German, Dutch, English, Icelandic, Norwegian, Swedish, and Danish; also Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese. In dealing with England he includes Scotch and Irish sayings, with many extracts from Shakespeare. It seems to us that in his desire to be thorough, the author has gone much too far. Many popular sayings, such as "ship-shape," for in order and "a regular broadside" for a destructive argument, have escaped him; but there is no nautical bearing in "huge winds blow on high hills," or "tempering the wind to the shorn lamb," and we might give many other extracts of the same class, which seem to us to indicate a misconception. Nevertheless, those interested in folk-lore and philology will find a great deal to interest them in the book.

Literary.

MR. HENTY'S NEW STORIES.

WITH BULLER IN NATAL;

or, A Born Leader. With Ten Illustrations by W. RAINY, R.I., and a Map. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olive edges, 6s.

"One of the most powerful of Mr. G. A. Henty's annual instalments of boys' books."—PALL MALL GAZETTE.

IN THE IRISH BRIGADE: A

Tale of War in Flanders and Spain. With Twelve Page Illustrations by CHARLES M. SHELDON. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olive edges, 6s.

"A noble tale. . . The chapters concerning the war in Spain are particularly full and interesting."—WORLD.

OUT WITH GARIBALDI: A

Story of the Liberation of Italy. With Eight Illustrations by W. RAINY, R.I. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olive edges, 5s.

"The practised author tells his story well."—ATHENÆUM.

London: BLACKIE and SON (Limited), Old Bailey

NEW VOLUME NOW READY.

THE WOLSELEY SERIES.

Edited by CAPTAIN JAMES, R.E.

OPERATIONS OF GENERAL GURKO'S ADVANCE GUARD IN 1877.

BY

COLONEL EPAUCHIN

(Of the Russian Staff).

TRANSLATED BY H. HAVELOCK.

Demy 8vo. With Maps. 10s. 6d.

London:

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LTD.,
CHANCERY LANE, W.C.

NOW READY.

A list of the Coloured Plates forming the series of

TYPES OF THE INDIAN ARMY

which will be issued as supplements to this paper, commencing January 5, 1901.

ALSO READY.

A complete list of the

TYPES OF THE BRITISH ARMY

which have been issued with the
"ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sent Post Free on Application.

LONDON, 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.

£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400
(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT - - - £100 to £185
(Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315
(Chelsea, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

OETZMANN & Co.
62, 64, 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, 77, & 79,
HAMPSTEAD ROAD, W.
(Continuation North of Tottenham Court Road.)
60 & 61, GRAFTON ST., DUBLIN; 75, UNION ST., RYDE.

Factories:

Eagle Works, HAMPSTEAD ROAD;
Albion Works, DRUMMOND STREET;
Stanhope Works, WILLIAM STREET;
Camden Works, HIGH STREET, CAMDEN TOWN, N.W.

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE NOW PROCEEDING.

IMMENSE REDUCTIONS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

An Exceptional
Opportunity
Of Complete
Or Partial Furnishing
At Minimum
Cost.

All
Carpets
Made up
Free
of Charge.

SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED SALE CATALOGUE
(36 pages) POST FREE.

JEROME SACCONE,
LIMITED,

GIBRALTAR,
WINE, SPIRIT, & CIGAR
MERCHANTS
TO THE

ARMY & NAVY.

LONDON HOUSE:

15, COCKSPUR STREET.

Wine Shipped FREIGHT FREE to any port in the Mediterranean, and half-freight to India and the Cape.

Telegraphic Addresses:
"Saccone, Gibraltar." "Saccone, London."

SATURDAY REVIEW

OF

Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review
are treated only by Naval and Military men.

The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:

8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.

HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,

KILTS, TREWS,

TARTAN PANTALOONS.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING
MILK

AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A PERFECT

UNSWEETENED

CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.

AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK
Stewards and Managers of MESSRS. CLUBS, CANTRENS,
ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this
good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.

WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.

Apply for particulars, Sample, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,

144, New Bond Street,
LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.

H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOX

*Appropriately arranged for everyday
as a lasting memento.*

PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

SHELTON & BALL,

Military and Court Tailors,
180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
(Opposite Burlington Gardens.)

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).

THREE CHEERS FOR THE
RED WHITE
& BLUE
COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.

TRANSVAAL WAR.

DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT
THE FRONT A SUPPLY OF

BRAND'S
BEEF TEA
TABULES.

To be had of ALL CHEMISTS, GROCERS, and
STORES. In boxes of 12, price 2s. 3d.

One tabule with boiling water makes a cup of savoury
and nutritious Beef Tea.

BRAND & Co., Ltd., Mayfair,
W.

... THE ...

Royal Navy List.

(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.

Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST

CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER

10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS
(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.

"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—Nautical Magazine.

Officers are earnestly requested to send
at once their special services to the Editor.

WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Advt. Dept. 1—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)

THE Burton Brewery
COMPANY, LIMITED,
BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.
BONDERS & BLENTERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.
Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO

Mr. E. RUDGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street,
Alexandria, Egypt.

DAY & MARTIN,
LIMITED.

GOLD MEDAL. PARIS, 1900.

A VOLUNTEER WRITES FROM POTCHEFSTROOM:—

Aug. 1, 1900.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been requested by a few comrades to testify
as to the remarkable qualities of your "dubbin" as supplied to the troops by H. M. Government.

Not only for preserving our boots, but for applying to the feet to prevent blisters; as fat for cooking chappatties, and for burning as candles, it is found of great service to "Tommy Atkins at the front."

DAY & MARTIN'S
DUBBIN.

Is Waterproof and absolutely the best Article for use on Shooting and Fishing Boots.

Notices.

THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

ALL EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.		TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year...	£1 8 0	One Year...	£1 12 6
Six Months...	0 14 0	Six Months...	0 16 3
Three Months...	0 7 0	Three Months...	0 8 2

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid
in advance.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
will be forwarded on application.

BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—
Price 5s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.

All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

Important Notice . . .

THE ARMY AND NAVY STATIONS LISTS, which has been suspended for the past few months, will be resumed with our issue of December 15 next, and will be published on the third week of each succeeding month.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1900.

A COLONIAL RESERVE OF SEAMEN.

WE recently announced that fifty men of the Newfoundland Naval Reserve had embarked in the Charybdis to undergo the course of six months' training which is prescribed by the regulations for our own Reservemen. This experiment, it is needless to say, will be watched with great interest by all who are concerned with the future of the Naval Reserve. No seaman can doubt, despite the modern arguments to the contrary, that a seafaring man makes the best material to put behind the guns of a ship of war. It is for this reason and no other that the Admiralty, having failed to secure the services of sufficient merchant seamen have lately made efforts to recruit the Naval Reserve from among the fishermen. This alternative is still in the experimental stage, and it is an open secret that our captains are not by any means unanimous in their opinion of the value of the British fisherman as a man-of-war's man. Still, it would be altogether premature to form a definite judgment on a point of such importance, but there is good ground for hoping that the new type of Reserveman from our own shores will prove sufficiently capable as a seaman and a gunner to counterbalance the paucity of merchant seamen. It is the alien difficulty which obliges the Admiralty to go outside the Merchant Service for Naval Reservemen. The embarkation of these Newfoundland fishermen for six months' practical training marks a new departure and a new link, perhaps, in Imperial Federation. The experiment reflects credit not only upon our Admiralty, who have been too recklessly accused by irresponsible critics of being indifferent to the establishment of a strong Reserve, but also upon the colonists of Newfoundland and their able Governor, Sir Henry McCallum. The Governor, we understand, has displayed keen interest in the experiment.

This important development has been carried out so quietly that it is not even yet generally known under what conditions these Reservemen have been embarked. The point is of importance, however, seeing that the wages question appears to be still one of the chief obstacles in the way of establishing reserves of colonial seamen in several of our colonies, and notably in Australia. It needs but slight acquaintance with the conditions of labour in the British colonies to comprehend why this difficulty has made itself felt. In the United Kingdom it is found possible to recruit seamen for the Reserve at moderate wages, coupled with the offer of a small pension late in life. In our colonies, where far higher wages are earned by all classes of workmen, skilled and unskilled, a greater inducement than the Admiralty scale of pay is needed to attract colonists to the Reserve. It will thus be of interest to learn how the difficulty has been surmounted in the case of these fifty Newfoundland Reservemen. In Australia, where wages are exceptionally high, the Committee of Naval Commandants expressly stated in their report to the Admiralty that colonial seamen could not be induced to join the Reserve unless the Admiralty scale of pay were supplemented. Mr. Goschen very wisely decided to let the matter rest pending the federation of the Australian colonies under a single Government; but it is a question that will have to be faced very soon, and in a liberal spirit. The wages, if higher, must evidently be contributed by the colonies themselves, and, if so, the difficulty at once arises that the colonists may be reluctant to undertake Imperial service, and may stipulate that they shall be employed exclusively in their own waters. This difficulty, however, should disappear as the inner meaning of Imperial service comes to be understood.

The essential function of a British seaman, or Reserveman, is service in any part of the world where duty calls, in which the commerce of the Empire has to be guarded, the ships of the enemy laid low. It is on these broad lines alone that we wish to see the establishment of colonial reserves of seamen or stokers or marines, because merely local forces will never materially add to the naval power of this great Empire, and may even weaken it. A correspondent of one of the daily papers suggests that a sliding scale of wages for all Reservemen might be established, but the project is impracticable. He suggests that our own Reservemen, when employed in colonial waters, should receive the colonial rates of pay, and, similarly, that colonial Reservemen employed in English waters should receive the lower rates of wages as paid to our native fishermen. In point of fact, there is no need, in time of peace, to send the Reservemen far afield. They are virtually naval volunteers, with a retaining fee, and their employment in civil life has to be respected. Already there is some difficulty experienced in persuading our fishermen to embark for the necessary course of training, which extends over a period of six months. They could not be expected to embark in ships bound for a colonial station, any more than colonial fishermen could be expected to come here to be trained. A general and sliding scale will hardly meet the difficulty, but wages may more readily be regulated by local conditions if the Colonial Governments are prepared to supplement the Admiralty scale.

THE EXPANSION OF THE AMERICAN NAVY.

THE election of Mr. McKinley as President of the United States has removed any doubt that might have existed as to the further increase of the American Navy. In his proclamation appointing next Thursday for the Thanksgiving Day, he adjures Americans to express their gratitude, among other things, for the amity with other nations which now prevails. But the policy which the President has adopted makes it imperative that both in naval and military matters expansion should go forward. The responsibilities lately assumed would have seemed strange to the Americans of twenty years ago, but the United States have now passed the bounds that were implied by the Monroe doctrine—America for the Americans—and have embarked upon what, for want of a better name, must be styled "Imperialism," though even now Americans have little conception of what is implied by the duties of empire. It is noteworthy that in the current number of the North American Review Captain Mahan, in discussing Asiatic conditions and international policies, declares that a great prospect now lies before the United States, that the urgency is immediate, and that the opening offered in the unwilling acquisition of the Philippines is "so obvious as to embolden even the least presumptuous to see in it the hand of Providence." In China he regards the Valley of the Yangtze as the central scene of American interests, and, of course, advocates the open door. But his outlook is wider. In order to establish the new and developing state of affairs, the United States, he says, must be equally effective in the Pacific and the Atlantic, predominance of American naval power in the Caribbean Sea being essential to preserve the use of the Isthmian Canal to the commerce of the States.

We learn, therefore, without surprise from our American contemporaries that at the present time the increase of the Navy is an absorbing topic at the Navy Department, and that the return of the Secretary of the Navy after the election is to bring about a decision as to the very important proposals that are put forward. There are various schools of thought upon the subject. In the Bureau of Construction and Repair plans have been made for increasing the fleet upon what are described as "the most advanced lines of warship construction." But there exists in other official quarters a strong feeling that the forthcoming increase, in the immediate future, at least, should be confined to the construction of river and other gunboats, especially adapted for service in the waters of the Philippines, and of China and South America. It now appears that the Naval Policy Board, of which Admiral Dewey is President, and the Board of Construction have presented reports which are not identical in their recommendations. The former is in favour of the construction of two battleships, two armoured cruisers, two destroyers, three torpedo boats, six gunboats, one transport and two training ships, while the latter advocates the construction of three battleships of 13,500 tons, two 15,000-ton armoured cruisers, six gunboats of 2,000 tons, six others of 600 tons, ten small gunboats, one repairing ship of 7,000 tons, a transport of the same displacement, and three fleet colliers displacing 15,000 tons, armed and armoured, and provided with apparatus for transshipping coal and stores at sea. The Secretary of the Navy has not acted on these recommendations, and does not wholly approve them, for he is said to favour the building of vessels of smaller class rather than huge battleships and armoured cruisers.

The various proposals show that extensive measures may be expected, but it has been pointed out that the ships now in construction and authorised will fully occupy the ship-building resources of the country for the next few years. Indeed, Americans are experiencing some of the difficulties which we have encountered. The completion of the Illinois is seriously delayed by the difficulty found in procuring material for the hull and machinery, and there seems at present no way of avoiding the congested conditions which exist in American steel works, since the demands on their powers of production are far in excess of their ability to turn out the work required. The Navy Department is likely, therefore, to find its efforts considerably hampered, although most energetic efforts are being made in every direction to provide for the utmost possible rapidity of construction.

Navy Notes.

The Duke of York's visit to the Antipodes is to be made, as we anticipated, in a merchant ship, the Ophir, one of the finest of the Orient Company's steam vessels. On the Prince of Wales's visit to India the troopship Serapis was adapted to the requirements, and although officers were accommodated, not uncomfortably, forward, there was not too much room; in fact, it was insufficient for His Royal Highness and his necessarily numerous suite and attendants. In a vessel of spacious accommodation such as obtains in the floating palaces of our mercantile marine this will not be the case, and her saloon will be of advantage for the reception and entertainment which will necessarily be given on board. The Duke of York will, therefore, be carried in a manner befitting the occasion. We referred in previous issues to the appropriation of the Oregon as an armed mercantile cruiser for the Naval Manœuvres of 1885. She was officered and manned from the Navy with the following exceptions, the officer of the mercantile marine who had previously commanded her was retained as navigating officer, and the engineers and engine-room staff were not displaced, but an Inspector of Machinery was appointed for general control. Whether this arrangement will be repeated in the Ophir we are not told, but if so, opportunity might be taken on this occasion to give the merchant officers serving in her under the pennant, if they are not already in the Naval Reserve, suitable honorary rank in that branch, as a remembrance of the position they have held in connection with an occurrence of such importance in our history.

Mr. Goschen said farewell on Saturday last to the officials and others at the Admiralty, and gave up the First Lord's residence. Everyone regrets his withdrawal from Whitehall, not only because he has made such a long stay with them, but they naturally regard him as a chief who has done his utmost for the Navy and those connected with it. They, with naval officers, will always remember him as a most courteous gentleman, ever ready to deal justly with their interests and countenance those who deserved consideration.

It will probably be the end of the year before Rear-Admiral Hugo L. Pearson leaves Australia for England. The Gladiator, with a new crew for his flagship, will be despatched about the second week in December. Several applicants on the flag list were anxious to relieve him. The transfer, therefore, of Rear-Admiral Lewis Beaumont, from the Pacific to the Antipodes, was not balm to those who sought such a desirable command. Rear-Admiral John H. Bainbridge was not averse from it, as he possesses considerable private means, an important factor with the officer who accepts the appointment. His service has not usually been far from home during the past quarter of a century. After promotion to commander from the Royal yacht in 1876, he served in the Coast-guard 1877-79; commanded the Dwarf (West Coast of Africa) 1880-82; commander of Britannia 1882-85, when he became captain. In the latter rank he commanded the Valorous (Channel), Narcissus (Channel), Alexandra (Coastguard), Resolution (Channel), and Nile, port guardship, Devonport. Although he did not secure the Australian Station, he will undoubtedly be offered a command later on.

The late Admiral Sir Henry Fairfax, who died in March last while Commander-in-Chief at Devonport, is to be commemorated by the establishment of a cabin in the new Royal Sailors' Home, now being constructed at that port, and the addition of a brass mural tablet to the Dockyard Church. The officers of the Western Command have, under the presidency of Rear-Admiral T.S. Jackson, Admiral-Superintendent, subscribed the necessary funds for such desirable memorials of their late chief.

In a letter to a daily contemporary "Admiral" points out two defects in our scheme of naval mobilisation. All ships in the A division of the Fleet Reserves are supposed to be in readiness for service at forty-eight hours' notice, but "Admiral" is well within the mark in stating that minor defects in these vessels are too often neglected, at least until the summer manœuvres draw near. This is one of the disadvantages of assembling the mobilised vessels at a fixed time of the year, although winter manœuvres are virtually out of the question. The second weak point, says "Admiral," is the neglect of the Admiralty to appoint officers to all ships in the Reserves. The only officers appointed to the ships are one lieutenant and some warrant officers, although the crews are carefully detailed. In the German Navy, captains and a full complement of officers are appointed (on paper) to all ships in Reserve, and this system might also be introduced in this country with advantage. If our captains knew at all times the names of the ships to which they would be sent in case of mobilisation, they might be expected to report from time to time upon any minor defects that were calculated to delay mobilisation at any period of the year. "Admiral" contends that a small committee at the Admiralty could grapple with these appointments of officers from week to week.

Staff-Paymaster F. Harrison Smith, at present a member of the Admiralty Committee on Vic-tualling the Navy and Canteen Management, has provided a small and handy volume of "Hints to Judge-Advocates," which should be of advantage to young beginners in that important part of Naval Criminal Law. Mr. Harrison-Smith's service has been, principally, in the naval secretariat, from which he has gained considerable experience in courts-martial. Irregularities rarely occur in the latter, thus speaking largely for the efficiency of accountant officers who undertake Judge-Advocates' duties. At the same time, a professional vade-mecum is most advantageous even to the well-informed and experienced officer.

An eloquent tribute to the work of the Naval Brigade in South Africa has been written for the Morning Post by Lady Briggs, the widow of Sir John Briggs, whose interesting reminiscences of many Admiralty administrations was published some short time ago. While dealing generally with the achievements of the bluejackets and Marines, it is particularly the work of the second division of the Brigade, mostly men of the Monarch, to which Lady Briggs refers. It will be remembered that on arriving at Bloemfontein, after accompanying Lord Roberts from the Modder River, a portion of the Brigade returned to its ships. Of those who remained the larger section accompanied Captain Bearcroft, of the Philomel, to Pretoria, and participated in the subsequent work along the line of railway to Koomati Poort. But another portion, under Commander Grant, of the Doris, served under Major-General Hart, and took part in all the operations, including a forced march to Potchefstroom. Speaking of the movement of the guns through drifts and up mountain sides, Lady Briggs says, "To move the great gun about on fairly good roads, two teams of oxen were required, but on occasions even this large number had to be doubled. In some cases—one in point being the road into Barberton where the gradient is one in five—a naval gun to get on at all had to be dismounted and placed on a waggon, with its cradle on another. These waggons had to be drawn by sixty-four oxen, and even then they had to be taken in hand by all the sailors and marines forming the crew of the gun, together with the combined strength of the escort and a company of infantry."

We have on previous occasions given the farewell orders of Lord Roberts and other military commanders to the sections of the Naval Brigade serving under them. To these we may now add that of Major-General Hart addressed to Commander Grant at Krugersdorp on October 1:—

"To O.C. Naval Brigade.—I send you a copy of a telegram received from headquarters, and in doing so desire to express my great regret that the requirements of her Majesty's Service compel the removal of yourself and the Naval Brigade under your command from my column. Your war services in the force under my command, both before and after the formation of this column, have been in a high degree valuable, and the deportment of the Naval Brigade in your hands has appeared to me at all times admirable, and, being well assisted by your subordinates, you have overcome serious campaigning difficulties with a ponderous gun which has deservedly become the terror of the enemy. I now wish you, your officers, and all hands of the Naval Brigade good-bye and God-speed."

The letter which the Navy League has published under the title, "War Fleets on a War Footing," appears to us to be as wide of the mark as some other of their recent manifestoes. The case for reconsidering the standard of sufficiency for our fleet does not appear to us to be by any means made out. The same arguments which are used to support the demand for a standard based upon equality with the navies of three foreign Powers might be used to show that we should have a fleet equal to four or more, until we might be asked to attempt a superiority to all the other navies put together. We must look upon this subject from a common-sense point of view, and it is almost impossible that we should find ourselves confronted by a confederation of more than two first-class naval Powers. A fleet therefore, reasonably superior to the navies of the two strongest foreign Powers by sea is surely sufficient standard to work for. At all events, we should be content with this.

It is surely a mistake for a body like the Navy League to shut its eyes to the immense improvement in other directions than the mere provision of material and personnel which have been made in the Navy in recent years. We are ready to admit that other nations have moved also and in the same direction, but it is beside the mark to suggest that they are more ready to use their sea power than we are. The demand for placing and maintaining our two main fighting fleets on a war footing is little less than preposterous. No nation can permanently maintain its forces in these days upon a war basis. It is sufficient that we should be able to raise the Navy from a peace to a war footing in the least possible time and with the least possible disarrangement of machinery. We are far from asserting that our squadrons in the Mediterranean and in the Channel might not advantageously be supplied with what have been called "war auxiliaries," but it is not essential to efficiency that such vessels should be kept permanently under the pennant.

In referring to this most recent letter of the Navy League, we are not finding fault with its style or debating a question of taste, but we hold that it is wrong in principle to demand that the Fleet should be kept on a war footing. We cannot believe that the French, or any other nation, can make preparations for going to war by sea without this becoming known to the Government of this country in sufficient time to prepare for such a proceeding. Of course, it is right that our Fleet should be kept ready for war in every detail, but that is quite another thing. The Navy League invites the Government to publish the opinion of any admiral now in command of a fleet in contradiction of the views set forth in their letter; but we should be much more surprised if they can find any admiral who has ever hoisted his flag ready to support their demands. There are many reasons for believing that the possible contingencies such as are set forth in this letter have been considered by the Board of Admiralty, and preparations made to meet them. We could wish we had as much confidence in the ability of the Admiralty to push on the necessary completion of the ships now building, and to begin the construction of others that are necessary.

A correspondent writes:—"I understand that the Admiralty have recently promulgated a new scheme for the instruction of midshipmen and naval cadets after passing from the Britannia into service afloat. Until recently it has been arranged that every morning on which their services could be spared these young officers were set to the study of certain subjects, each forenoon in the week being set apart for a particular subject, such as seamanship, gunnery, torpedoes, and steam. It is stated that by the new arrangement one fortnight is continuously to be devoted to each subject, an examination being held at the end of each period in order to ascertain the progress made. Moreover, the young officers are to take advantage of the ship being under way by being made to keep watch in the engine-room and stokeholds in order to get more practical insight into the working of the machinery. While in some ways this new plan appears to have its advantages, I am afraid, from my experience of the work and the way in which it is carried out on board a modern man-of-war that it will not always be an improvement on the old system. I refer particularly to boat-work and the arrangements by which the midshipmen take the duty in this connection week and week off. Of course, much will depend upon the commanding officers, and it is certainly a move in the right direction to enable the young executive officers to keep up the training in steam which they begin in the launches of the Britannia. I may mention that when, at a naval port recently, I saw the midshipman in charge of a picket-boat—in the absence of the artificer I suppose it was—jump into the engine-room and run his boat off to his ship himself, it was quite a revelation to me."

The Secretary of State has sanctioned an increase of 600 artillery horses for the ammunition columns and has also approved of the proposals of the Indian Government for the improvement of the Indian Transport Service.

ORBIT BRAND
TOBACCO.

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos
in Bond for Export.

Navv Personal.

The Duke of York left Sandringham on Monday for the Earl of Leicester's seat at Holkham, and remains there until to-day. His Royal Highness' voyage in the Ophir will, it is believed, extend to Canada. After leaving the Antipodes he probably proceeds to Vancouver to visit the Dominion. On returning to England his London residence will be Clarence House.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir Frederick Richards attains the age of sixty-seven on Friday next, and Rear-Admiral John W. Brackenbury on the same day reaches that of fifty-eight.

Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour, is mentioned as one of the suite to accompany the Duke of York to Australia, a part of the world the Admiral has not previously visited. The veteran Admiral of the Fleet Sir Harry Keppel, was to have accompanied the Prince of Wales to India in 1875-76, but age—although he had just then attained his present rank while in his sixty-seventh year—was considered a bar to such a long and trying journey. Only recently, however, he managed to reach his old battle-ground in North Borneo. Sir M. Culme-Seymour is not far from sixty-five, is far more active than many younger men, and quite equal to any strain that a trip to the Antipodes on such an eventful occasion may entail.

Admiral Lord Charles Scott inspected the Naval Cadets' training ship Britannia, at Dartmouth on Monday, and returned to his port duties the same evening.

Vice-Admiral Sir William Kennedy distributed prizes to the students at Sheerness, who had been winners in the Science and Art examination. This was the first occasion of the gallant flag-officer meeting the inhabitants of Sheerness at a public function, and his presence, together with the good advice he gave the competitors, were highly appreciated.

Commodore Alfred L. Winsloe, of the St. George, accompanied by the Venus, Gladiator, Juno, and Vindictive, left Malta on Saturday last for a cruise to Egyptian and Levantine ports. The Theseus joins the broad pendant during the week. The squadron returns to Malta about February 17. This circumstance rather discounts the report that Captain Winsloe is to be appointed to the Orient steamship Ophir, selected for the conveyance of the Duke of York to Australia.

Captain Frederick S. Inglefield, of the Glory, leaves Portsmouth to-day for the Far East to replace the Centurion, as flagship of the Commander-in-Chief. On Monday last, while proceeding out of harbour for gun trials, steam was inadvertently, or accidentally, cut off from the steering apparatus, and a collision with the training ship St. Vincent only averted by prompt and skilful action. Admiral Sir Charles Hotham, Commander-in-Chief, was on board at the time.

Captain A. C. Galloway, of the Scylla, arrived at the Nore on Monday last with the relieved crew of the Barracouta, and proceeded to Chatham to pay off.

Captain Frederick G. Stopford, of the Pearl, who recently arrived at Devonport from Bermuda, is to pay off that vessel on the 15th prox.

Captain Casper J. Baker, of the Blake, left Malta on Monday for Plymouth, with the paid-off crew of the Renown.

Captain David Beatty, late commander of the Barfleur, who was recently promoted for his services during the early phase of the Chinese troubles, in which he was severely wounded and invalided in consequence, is, we are sorry to say, under medical treatment in London, and, doubt exists as to his recovering the use of his wounded arm. Everyone, however, hopes that such a young and gallant officer will be able to resume active duty at no distant period.

Commander John P. Rolleston, of the Archer, arrived at Sydney, N.S.W., on Friday in last week. His ship joins the Australian Squadron in place of the Mohawk, transferred to China.

Commander H. Evan-Thomas commissioned the Pioneer at Chatham on Friday in last week, for her first term of foreign service, and proceeds to the Mediterranean.

Staff-Commander C. R. H. Robinson, of the Wye, is detailed to leave Sheerness on the 16th and Plymouth on the 19th prox. for Ascension, and is due again at the western port on February 17.

Lieut.-Commander Adolphus Williamson, of the Hussar, left Plymouth on Monday for the Mediterranean Station. He successfully commanded the Columbine for three years on the North American and West India Station, and, with similar good luck in his present appointment, should secure promotion before the commission expires.

Inspector of Machinery William Olive relieves Chief Inspector of Machinery James Melrose, of the Portsmouth Dockyard Reserve, when that officer's term of service expires on January 1 next. Mr. Olive was chief of his department at Sydney Naval Yard, N.S.W., from 1896-99, and immediately after returning from that post detailed for service at the Admiralty in connection with the vexed question of Belleville boilers. His large experience and excellent ability will be of great advantage at our principal naval yard.

Chief Engineer W. D. Chope, paid off from the Barracouta, arrived home in the hired transport, Dilwara, on Monday last from the Cape of Good Hope.

ROYAL MARINES.

Colonel William Campbell, A.D.C., 2nd Commandant, R.M.A., arrived at Berlin on Saturday last, as one of deputation from this country, to be present at the opening and dedication of a new hall in that capital of the National Lodge of Prussian Freemasons.

Major Cyril Field's appointment as adjutant of the 5th Vol. Batn. Highland Light Infantry, has been extended to February next.

Major W. S. Cumming relieves Lieut.-Colonel F. G. Cotter in the Royal Arthur, on promotion of the latter to substantive rank.

Major Fitzroy T. H. Scott relieves Major M. A. C. Huggins, as Instructor of Musketry, at Chatham Headquarters, on the latter's advancement to the senior list of his rank. Major Scott is the next in seniority to his predecessor.

Major Alfred E. Marchant, whose return from South Africa was mentioned in our last issue, was entertained at dinner on Friday in last week by Colonel F. Baldwin, commandant, and the officers of the Plymouth Division in compliment to his distinguished services for which he has recently been awarded C.B. The gallant officer proceeds on leave until February next, and will afterwards relieve Major Leonard Peters, Instructor of Musketry at the Plymouth Headquarters, advanced to the senior list.

Captain R. D. Beith left Southampton on Saturday last in the Union Castle steamship Aurania for the Cape of Good Hope, to join the Monarch.

Captain A. E. Rombulow-Pearse joins the Hood, when commissioned, to relieve the Thunderer as port guardship at Pembroke Dock.

Captain Cunliffe Parsons, serving with the Royal Marine Force in China, relieves Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel C. V. Luke, of the Barfleur, on that station.

THE BATTLE OF OBLIGADO.

Last Tuesday, the 20th inst., was the anniversary of the Battle of Obligado, fought in the River Parana, in the year 1845. This has been considered the severest naval action fought by our Navy since Trafalgar, Navarino hardly excepted. Yet the recollection of it has almost died out. There is no medal to show for it, and in few accounts of the wars of the present reign is mention made of it, almost the only record being that published in the "Life of the late Admiral Sir B. J. Sullivan," taken from his letters written three days after the engagement, and a short account in Yonge's "History of the British Navy." Yet our gallant allies, the French, look upon it, as well they may, as one of their most glorious naval actions. They keep up the memory of it by naming two of their men-of-war after the place and the leading French actor, Obligado and Trehouart.

A short account of the engagement shall be our tribute to the memory of the brave men who took part in it. The long continued struggle made by General Rosas, president of the Argentine Republic, to subdue the Banda Oriental, and the losses caused to European merchants by the stoppage of trade and the protracted siege of Monte Video, at length induced the British and French Governments—rightly or wrongly—to interfere. Garibaldi, with his 500 Italian sailors, also took the side of the Monte Videans. The combined British and French squadrons proceeded to force open the Parana, closed by Rosas. The ships sent by the two admirals were:—British, Gorgon, p. s., 6 guns, Commodore Charles Hotham; Firebrand, p. s., 6, Capt. James Hope; Philomel, 8, Commander B. J. Sullivan; Comus, 18, Acting-Commander E. A. Inglefield; Dolphin, 3, Lieut. Levinge; Fanny, 1, Lieut. A. C. Key. French—San Martin, 8, Capt. Trehouart; Fulton, p. s., Lieut. Mazères; Expedita, 16, Lieut. De Miniac; Pandour, 10, Lieut. Du Paie; Procida, 4, Lieut. De la Rivière. Rosas had had constructed at Obligado a formidable boom of dismantled vessels, chained across the river. Above these were three gunboats. On shore was one battery and on the top of the cliffs, 40ft. high, were three others, all constructed of rammed clay, under the superintendence of a Russian engineer. These contained nine heavy guns, five long and 11 short 18prs., and eight field pieces. The Argentine forces consisted of 3,000 men of all arms. It was foreseen that after the destruction of the batteries, an allied force would have to be landed to destroy the guns in the face of this Army. The French sailors were all trained to act as Marines. Not so with the British. Neither officers nor men—with some few exceptions—knew anything of drill. The crew of the largest ship had not even been taught the use of their muskets. So the action was postponed for a fortnight, and Commander Sullivan, who was to lead the landing party, drilled the brigade in simple evolutions. The 18th was the day fixed for the engagement, but lack of wind caused it to be postponed until the

ESTABLISHED 1789.

ROBERT LEWIS,

20, ST. JAMES' ST., LONDON, S.W.

TOBACCO.

CIGARS.

CIGARETTES.

TOBACCO.

The Finest Selection of all the Leading Havana Brands.
Sole Agents for the Hoffman House Cigars.

GOLD TIPPED, BALKAN SOBRANIE, and YENIDJE
NARGHILE BRANDS.

WINDFIELD LAWN TENNIS, GUARDS, and SANDRINGHAM
MIXTURES.

Telegrams: "Intimidat, London."

20, S T. JAMES' STREET, LONDON, S.W.

Telephone No. 3787, Gerrard.

20th. The starboard division was led by Capt. Trehouart, the port by Commander Sullivan, who had previously surveyed under the batteries, and fixed the positions for the vessels. The steamers, which carried the heaviest guns, were kept out of action, it being thought dangerous to expose their machinery to shot, for when the boom was destroyed, they were wanted to tow the sailing ships up stream. This was the first time steamers had been in action. The wind failing at the critical time, little headway could be made against the three or four knot stream. The vessels came on slowly, enabling the enemy to take them in detail. The Philomel first received the concentrated fire of the guns, the first round placing seven men hors de combat. Through loss of sail-power she began to make stern way, so had to anchor short of her real position. The big ships not being able to come up, Levinge, in his little schooner of 200 tons, passed the Philomel, and, in turn, drew all the fire of the batteries, taking up a position, as Hotham said, "that would have done credit to a line-of-battle ship." She lay exposed to all this fire, against which only seven of our guns could be brought to bear. She lost 19 killed and wounded. By this time the San Martin had come up and received the same treatment. Her anchor was dropped by a shot; soon every one of her guns was disabled, and she lay a passive target for the enemy's guns, yet she kept her station. Sullivan says:—"No vessel of her size was—few even of any size were—ever exposed to such a trial, certainly none ever behaved more nobly. Seeing his chief suffering so severely, Lieut. Mazères steamed up in the Fulton and took the fire off the San Martin. Forty-four out of the hundred men on board the latter were killed and wounded. She had 106 round shot in her—not bad for a brig of 200 tons. The Fulton had fifty-six round shot in her paddle wheels and sponsons. Owing to the still water several ships that would have otherwise been sunk kept afloat. The steamers then came up and began to make some impression with their heavy shot and shell. Captain James Hope then went with the armourers to open the boom. In four minutes ten chain cables were cut through, under the concentrated fire of the enemy at 500 yards. The steamers then went above and raked the batteries. After about eight hours' gallant resistance the enemy withdrew into the shelter of the wood, 800 of their number having been killed and wounded, although hardly one of their guns had been injured. Capt. Sullivan then landed with 180 seamen and 145 marines. While the men were forming on the beach, he and Lieut. George Richards spiked five guns in the low battery under a heavy musketry fire. In spite of their heavy loss, the French also sent a party of seamen ashore. The forts were occupied after some resistance, and the guns made useless. The wise decision of Commodore Hotham to undertake this risk, completed the victory. Whilst the loss of the leading French ships was one in seven, that of the leading British was one in eight.

Although some promotions were made, no medal was given, in spite of repeated appeals to the Admiralty. Some of the beautiful brass guns, made in Seville, are still to be seen in Paris. The share of the British trophies were returned, with an apology. The flag of the chief battery, hauled down by Capt. Sullivan, under fire, was given to him by Commodore Hotham. In 1883 he returned this to the family of Col. Rodriguez as a mark of respect for the gallantry with which he and his patriotic regiment had fought the battery. The French took more notice of the victory. Trehouart was promoted to flag rank, under a power—not granted to our Admiralty—by which the services of a captain of striking ability can be secured in the highest rank before years have begun to diminish his powers. The lessons taught by the action were not without fruit. The great superiority of earthen batteries over stone ones led Capt. Sullivan on his return to England to urge our home authorities to adopt them instead of the new stone forts with wide V-shaped embrasures then under construction. Seeing the want of system in the training of our seamen to small arms, he drew up a scheme for the formation of seamen battalions. The value of steamships was so apparent in this action, and in the subsequent operations up the Parana, that a great stimulus to their adoption was given. It is interesting to see how many of the officers who took part in this action afterwards rose to distinction. But almost all the names mentioned have now been removed from the "Navy List" by death; the last to be noted being that of Admiral Sir E. A. Inglefield. It is to be hoped that the memory of this engagement may be kept alive in the service, and that the hearty co-operation with which the British and French officers and men worked may be repeated on future occasions when need exists for an alliance.

CASUALTIES IN CHINA.

Deaths reported from enteric.

Terrible.—R.M.L.I. Ch.: 10090 Taylor, Wei-hai-wei, Nov. 15.
R.F.A.—12th Batt.: 93681 Duros, Peking, Oct. 9.
R.G.A.—15th Co.: 28807 Porter, Wei-hai-wei, Oct. 27.
Welsh Fus.—4698 Peking, Oct. 4

Navv Foreign.

The French Navy estimates for 1901 are more important than those of recent years, because they provide for the battleship programme of the Government. M. Fleury-Ravarin has just presented a report upon them, which may be regarded as strongly supporting the Government scheme. He raises a voice unfamiliar in France, and, like Captain Mahan, insists that the guerre de course must, in the end, be unavailing. He enforces his argument against that system of war are by showing that it would be really costly, because it could not be prosecuted without the establishment of many bases and coaling stations, which would involve a large outlay both for first cost and maintenance. He also expresses no confidence in sustained speed, which, of course, is essential for commercial war. The position he assumes is that France, if she is to maintain her power, must have a strong navy consisting of battleships and armoured cruisers, but he says it is the duty of the Admiralty to indicate the special character and strength of the fleet required, and for the Parliament to give a general direction to policy, and to say what money France can afford to expend.

The reporter alludes to the crois eurs-estafettes which have been proposed, but he thinks that other ships are more urgent. He is a believer in electric submarine boats for coast defence, and of submersible boats of the Naval class for wider operations. We gather from his report that the Goubet has not yet given satisfactory results. In regard to ordnance, he claims predominance for France both in the path of progress and in her present situation, and he is well pleased with the torpedoes she makes at Toulon. He also considers the naval manœuvres, although in some ways disappointing, to be fertile in useful results. M. Fleury-Ravarin has also a great deal to say about the personnel. Like some of his predecessors, he wishes to set up a distinction between the constructive and the administrative work of the Admiralty, his idea being that the chief of the staff should be wholly devoted to the business of preparing for war, and that another vice-admiral should be employed as director of material, with functions analogous to those of our Controller. Another matter greatly insisted on by the Reporter is the necessity of increasing the executive and engineer officers of the navy. He concludes his report by discussing the estimates chapter by chapter.

The intelligence that Captain McCalla, of the United States cruiser Newark, is to be brought before a Court of Inquiry charged with irrational and bad management and lack of discipline, will be received with regret in this country, for his generous appreciation of the good qualities shown by British officers and men in China will not be forgotten. General Chaffee appears to have acquitted Captain Newton H. Hall, of the United States Marine Corps, of certain charges, which Mr. Conger preferred against him, on the ground of misconduct during the siege of the Legations at Peking, when he was second in command of the American Marine Guard. Little appears to have been divulged concerning the charges, but it seems that Mr. Conger upon a certain occasion requested Captain Hall to hold a particular portion of the wall near the American Legation which, from its situation, made a strong strategic position for the guard, and that he refused to do so, although it was later demonstrated, when the men were under command of Captain Myers, that the place could be held from the Chinese. It is also alleged that Captain Hall refused to capture a certain building near the American Legation when the allies were entering the city, but stood by and let Russian troops accomplish the task to the discredit of the Americans. Captain Hall's friends are very indignant at the charges made by Mr. Conger, and the acquittal by General Chaffee appears to show that at the worst he was guilty of nothing more than an error of judgment. We shall be glad if the charges against Captain McCalla are explained in a similar way.

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd.
23, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

Under the German Naval Law provision is made in the coming year for the first instalment of money for the building of two battleships, H. and J. (each 3,000,000 marks); of the large cruiser Ersatz König Wilhelm (3,400,000 marks); of the small cruisers G., H., and J. (each 1,300,000 marks); and of a division of torpedo boats (2,400,000 marks), making in all a sum of 15,700,000 marks for new constructions. Provision is also made (5,000,000 marks in all) for rebuilding and lengthening, and for additions to the armament of the ships of the Siegfried class. The estimates also bear charges for increasing the personnel. The operations in China have caused attention to be directed to the necessity of building river gunboats, and it is announced that the German Navy League, which is a very prosperous organisation, with a vast number of members, has placed at the disposal of the government a certain reserve of its funds for expenditure upon naval work abroad. The Emperor has assented to this course, and when the Reichstag has given its approval, a river gunboat will be put in hand. The prosperity of the German Navy League may be inferred from the very excellent and attractive character with which its official organ, Ueberall, has been invested. We have five parts of the new issue, which are in very handsome form, most beautifully printed and in every way creditable. It touches many various interests, and devotes itself as much to colonial and foreign politics as to purely naval affairs, and embodies a considerable element of fiction.

The Frankfurter Zeitung publishes a table illustrative of the increase of shipbuilding in Germany, which has grown by leaps and bounds. In the year 1898 there were in hand in German yards eighty-four vessels with a total displacement of 85,811 tons, and in the next year the number of ships had risen to 125, but there was a small decrease in tonnage, the total being 83,073. The foreign war ships building in Germany in 1898 were of 32,576 tons, and in 1899 of 26,143 tons. These, we believe, were all Russian and Italian vessels. In the same year the foreign trading ships which were built in Germany displaced 51,524 tons and 54,812 tons. The Frankfurter Zeitung remarks that this condition is highly satisfactory, but that it may soon be reversed by unwise legislation or agrarian policy leading to a high price in materials.

We learn from the Militär-Zeitung of Vienna that the two small battleships of the Habsburg class (8,340 tons), which are to be added to the Austrian navy, are to be laid down respectively at the Scoglio Olivi yard at Pola and at Trieste. These are indicated by the designations "II." and "III." The initial vote for the first of these was made in 1899, while that for the second is in the Budget of the present year. The total cost of each exclusive of armament will be nearly 13,000,000 crowns. The Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete des Seewesens contain particulars which show that a larger battleship (10,000 tons) is to be put in hand to replace the old Laudon.

When the Duke of the Abruzzi returned from his Arctic expedition the Stella Polare was left behind at Christiania. She has now been added, in order that she may be preserved, to the Italian Navy, and a party of officers and seamen have left Spezia to bring her to the Italian port. It will be remembered that Commander Umberto Cagni, who was in command of the vessel, attained the farthest north in latitude, 86 deg. 33 min., and in longitude 65 deg. east, thus surpassing Nansen, whose achievement was in 86 deg. 14 min. N. lat. The Duke of the Abruzzi himself had unfortunately been obliged to submit to the amputation of the extreme phalanges of two of his fingers, and was unable to take command of the small party which reached the highest latitude. An excellent account of the expedition was given in the Rivista Marittima for October. The Stella Polare is a small vessel of 358 tons, built under the name of Jason in 1883. It was in her that Nansen and Sverdrup made their researches on the eastern coast of Greenland in 1888, and that Larsen made an Antarctic expedition in 1892-94.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each, or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Bewley & Co., Importers, 49, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacconists.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died.)

Near LEEUWFontein, Nov. 6.

R.F.A.—84th Batt.: WOUNDED: Bombrs. 34961 Morgan, 34996 Nicholas, Gr. 28918 McLuskey.

Canadian Artillery—"D" Batt.: WOUNDED: 273 Hare.

Shrops. L.I.—2nd: KILLED: Col.-Sgt. 1355 Scouse, Ptes. 6185 Spencer, 4728 Elcox, 1539 Broderick, 1628 Moran, 5626 Watkins. WOUNDED: Maj. Austen, Cpl. 4840 Shaw, L.-Cpl. 3448 Bickley, Ptes. 2995 Sneed, 5739 Harris, 5881 A. Jones, 4409 Oliver, 3802 Phillips, 1803 Greaves, 2362 Coyne, 4506 Bentley, 1177 Bayley, 2042 Casswell, 2735 Davies, 811 Robinson.

MISCELLANEOUS.

6th D.G.—2408 Dove, missing, Oct. 24, was brought to Standerton, wounded, Nov. 10.

12th Lancers.—4182 Symes, wounded, Kroom River, Nov. 14.

13th Huss.—3400 Elsegood, wounded, Waterval Bridge, Nov. 19.

19th Huss.—4576 Pluck, accidentally injured, Lydenburg, Nov. 8.

20th Huss.—4455 Brindley,* wounded Kroom River, Nov. 14.

Imp. Yeo.—8th Co.: 5055 Frost, wounded, near Reitz, Nov. 10. 29th Co.: 3625 L.-Cpl. Roberts, killed; Lieut. Mainwaring, wounded, near Abraham's Kraal, Nov. 13. 31st: 8190 Poyser, wounded, near Abraham's Kraal, Nov. 13.

Mtd. Inf., N.S.W.—177 Sgt. Smiley (mortally), 376 Fulton, (P157) Hodges, wounded, Rhenoster, Nov. 16.

Mtd. Rifles.—Canadian 1st: 26 Cpl. Filson, 102 L.-Cpl. Anderson, killed; Lieuts. Elmsley, Turner, Cockburn, Sgts. 105 Builder,* 30 Metcalf, 312 Cope; Ptes. 42 Loosemoor, 157 Dougall, 327 Roberts, 370 Berg, 225 Richardson, Nov. 7; Sgt. 410 Ryan, Nov. 16, wounded, near Belfast. Cape: 3536 Foot, wounded, near Lindley, Nov. 17; 3051 Boyle, killed; 3362 Searle, wounded, near Heilbron, Nov. 18.

Irreg. Horse.—Kitchener's: Frazer, wounded, Zeekoehoe, Oct. 30. Loch's: 107 Johnson, wounded, Wolverhoek, Nov. 12. Roberts's: Sgt.-Maj. Cerrett, Edmiston, wounded, place unknown, Nov. 11. N.Z. Rough Riders, 4th: 1462 Rudgell, wounded; 1385 Bruce, missing, Ventersdorp, Nov. 11. Brabant's, 2nd: Lieut. Russell, injured, fall from horse, near Frederickstad, Nov. 10. Driscoll's Scouts: Old, Nov. 17; Cpl. Gunn, Nov. 8, wounded, Lindley. N.S.W. Bushmen: 537 Geddins, wounded, Klipkuil, Nov. 13; 182 Starling, wounded, near Klerksdorp, Nov. 16. Strathcona's: 135 Stuart, wounded, near Muzarab, Nov. 14; 434 Sgt. Duncan, injured, fall from horse; 39 Treston, wounded, near Frederickstad, Nov. 10.

Police.—Cape: Capt. Harvey, Sgt. 32 Ball, Cpl. 297 Rogers, Ptes. 380 Pinneck, 90 Hastie, 1833 Vandermeulen, 1868 Peachey, 902 Kelly, 166 Reynolds, 905 Nickerson, 903 Simons, 899 Powell, 909 Price, 777 Gaiffin, 687 Henderson, all wounded, except Capt. Harvey, prisoners released, Nov. 16; 886 Lewis, accidentally wounded Maritzani, Nov. 16; 901 Thomas, reported killed Oct. 23, was wounded prisoner, now released. O.R.C.: Maher, missing, place unknown, Nov. 2.

R.E.—Lieut. Sewell, prisoner, released Oct. 22.

Coldstream Gds.—2nd: 2725 Liddetter, 49 Phillips, killed; Lieut. Stepney, 1014 Sedgwick, wounded, near Muzarab, Nov. 14.

Lancaster.—3rd: 4418 Garnett, accidentally wounded, Virginia, Nov. 16.

North'd Fus.—5253 L.-Cpl. Corbett,* wounded, Bultfontein, Nov. 17. 1st: 4003 Cpl. Lincoln, wounded, Klip River Station, Nov. 11.

Liverpool.—1st: 4248 Watson, wounded, near Pretoria, Nov. 15; 5322 Clayton, killed; 5457 Hackney, 5574 L.-Cpl. Williams, 4614 Doyle, 4600 Miller, 5586 Burns, 5650 Gillison, wounded, Middelburg, Oct. 26.

E. Yorks Mtd. Inf.—3457 Benson, wounded, near Bothaville, Nov. 6, previously reported as belonging to E. Kent Mtd. Inf.

Bedford.—2nd: 2nd Lieut. Paxton, 1053 Trowell, 3548 Young, 3780 Gardiner, killed; 6256 Harvey, wounded, Thaba N'chu, Nov. 16; 6093 Parris, wounded, near Kroonstad, Nov. 4.

Welsh Fus.—5077 Richards, 2714 Livingstone, missing, Zeekoehoe, Oct. 30.

Cameronians.—1179 Brownlee, 5700 Hemmings, wounded, Vaal Station, Nov. 15.

Worcester.—2nd: Lieut. Gibbs, 3163 Sgt. Powell, 3456 Pesteridge, 1632 Hollingsworth, 3548 Fennerty, 3767 McNally, 4669 Green, injured by lightning, Commando Nek, Nov. 10.

R. Highrs.—2nd: 6653 Lawson, wounded, Klip River Station, Nov. 11.

Derby.—1st: 2484 Heal, 5784 Caunt, prisoners, Witfontein, Nov. 4.

Manchester.—1st: 5341 Salt, killed, 4960 Cpl. Andrews, accidentally injured, 5296 Rowden, wounded, Lydenburg, Nov. 8. 2nd: 2162 Percival, killed; 997 Murden,* wounded Vrede, no date given.

York and Lanc.—6063 Jordan, 987 Thorpe, 873 Leach, 1447 Edwards, wounded, Utrecht, Nov. 16.

Gordons.—2nd: 1546 Cox, missing, place unknown, Oct. 31.

Irish Rifles.—2nd: 2856 O'Brien, 1450 McDermott, missing, probably prisoners, Phillipolis, Oct. 27.

Munster Fus.—1st: 6281 Buckley, accidentally wounded, place unknown, Oct. 18.

R. B.—1st: Cpl. 718 Tomlinson, Ptes. 5659 Field, 1659 Flinn, 7878 Flynn, 1581 Knight, 8874 March, 6063 Matthews, 6458 Morris, 7864 O'Brien, 9868 Goreham, 1638 Brown, prisoners, released Oct. 22.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

6th Drag.—5957 Kaberry, appendicitis, Johannesburg, June 23.

12th Lancers.—4151 Burnett (? disease and place), Apl. 4.

16th Lancers.—4043 Carney, Johannesburg, June 21.

Imp. Yeo.—1st Co: 15 Sgt. Butler, Thaba N'chu July 8.

11th: 2039 Sharpe, Mafeking, Nov. 16. 35th: 6408 Chamberlain, Harrismith, Nov. 19. 37th: 4895 Richardson, wounds, Rustenburg, Sept. 17. 44th: 6912 Plowden, (? cause), Durban, Nov. 16. 77th: 15831 Sgt. Green, dysentery, Heilbron, Nov. 19.

Irreg. Horse.—Roberts's: 3495 Semmens, killed, Kargmuiden, Oct. 9. Strathcona's: 629 Sunt, Bright's disease, Pretoria, Nov. 14; 898 Cancellor, Germiston, Nov. 13. S.A.L.H.: 8122 Chandler, Modder Spruit, May 19.

I.L.H.: 774 Allan, killed, August, while prisoner attempting to escape. Marshall's: 595 Thomas, Krugersdorp, Nov. 16. N.S.W. Bushmen: 203 Ayre, diphtheria, Pretoria, Nov. 16. N.Z. Rough R.: 5th: 2483 James, Zeerust, Nov. 20.

Mtd. Inf.—Thorneycroft's: 1635 Motion, Standerton, Nov. 14. N.S.W.: 177 Sgt. Smiley, wounds, Kroonstad, Nov. 16.

Police.—Transvaal: 1287 Vickery (late 79th I.Y.), Nov. 10; 893 Cpl. French, Nov. 7, Pretoria. Telegraph: McMaster, wounds, Christiana, Nov. 9. Mashonaland: 1006 Prang, Pretoria, Nov. 14.

R.H.A.—"U" Batt.: 72991 Cpl. Rogers, wounds, Nov. 10.

R.F.A.—2nd Batt.: 25068 Gallery, Thaba N'chu May 23.

4th: 23465 Parks, wounds, Kroonstad, Nov. 15. 7th: 26849 Fitzgerald, accidentally killed, Thaba N'chu, Nov. 19. 69th: 3729 Sh.-Sm. Dickens, Utrecht, June 5.

82nd Batt.: 10107 Bloxham, Bloemfontein, May 4.

Canadian Artillery—"D" Batt.: 363 Bombr. Moore, Pretoria, Nov. 9.

Cape Garr. Arty.—882 Holderness, pneumonia, Greenpoint, Nov. 19.

R.G.A.—Edinburgh Co.: 1189 Brock, accidentally injured, Durban, Nov. 19.

Amm. Col.—10th: 83996 Sh.-Sm. Howe, killed, Leeuwfontein, Nov. 4.

Scots Gds.—1st: 7748 Templeman, Pretoria, Nov. 18.

2nd: 1887 Birtwhistle, Harrismith, Nov. 17.

R. Scots.—3rd: 8101 Wilson, Kroonstad, Nov. 17.

W. Surrey.—2nd: 248 L.-Cpl. Gibbs (disease not stated), Charlestown, Nov. 14. 3rd: 1994 Holliman, pneumonia, Greenpoint, Nov. 17.

E. Kent.—2nd: 1060 Milloy, Pretoria, Nov. 11; 1198

L.-Cpl. Spinner, pneumonia, Germiston, Nov. 12. 3rd

411 L.-Cpl. Bushell, dysentery, Kroonstad, Nov. 19.

Warwick.—2nd: 4682 Jones, Bloemfontein, Apl. 10; 3077 Baker, abscess liver, Pretoria, Nov. 18.

R. Fus.—Vol. Co.: 8910 Tucker (disease not stated), Pretoria, Nov. 13.

Liverpool.—1st: 4169 Orme, pneumonia, Middelburg, Nov. 10.

Lincoln.—2nd: 3848 Cutts, wounds, Pretoria, Nov. 15.

Devon.—2nd: 5789 Knapp, drowned, Maritzburg, Nov. 13; 6366 Williams, dysentery, Kroonstad, Nov. 15.

Suffolk.—2707 Podd, Johannesburg, June 21; 1st: 3961 Bedwell, peritonitis, Middelburg, Nov. 14.

Somerset L.I.—2nd: 3019 Caines, internal hemorrhage, Jacobsdal, Nov. 13; 6786 L.-Cpl. Baker, Kimberley, Nov. 20.

E. Yorks.—2nd: 8152 Wilson, Harrismith, Nov. 15.

Bedford.—2nd: 6090 Bright, Mafeking, Nov. 17; 3381 Taylor, 5480 Dunkley, both Thaba N'chu, Nov. 18.

Leicester.—1st: 4706 Leader, dysentery, Modderspruit, May 3.

Lancs. Fus.—6th: 4361 Hopkins, dysentery, Kimberley, Nov. 19.

Scots Fus.—2nd: 2570 Simmons, Nov. 10; 1828 Hart, Nov. 13, both wounds, Johannesburg.

Welsh Fus.—3331 Edwards, killed, previously reported missing. 1st: 1621 Nolan, killed, Krugersdorp, Oct. 10; 2600 Roberts, wounds, Frederickstad, Oct. 25.

S.W. Bords.—2nd: 5666 Hughes, Kroonstad, Nov. 17; 6536 Horton, dysentery, Johannesburg, Nov. 11.

K.O.S.B.—1st: 2503 Thew, Pretoria, Nov. 11.

Gloucester.—2nd: 5585 L.-Cpl. Walton, pneumonia, Greenpoint, Nov. 18.

E. Lancs.—3rd: 5836 Crook, Springfontein, Nov. 16.

E. Surrey.—4th: 7879 Muir, Nov. 17; 9158 Mountford, Nov. 11; 3040 C. Jones, Nov. 18, all attd. 2nd Hants, Germiston. Vol. Co.: 6152 Levens, dysentery, Maritzburg, Nov. 14.

W. Riding.—1st: 3672 Ravell, Winburg, Nov. 16. 3rd: 5386 Kilgallow, killed accidentally, Muizenberg, Nov. 15.

Sussex.—Vol. Co.: 7020 Cpl. Wilkinson, Bloemfontein, Nov. 17.

Hants.—Maj. Welch, wounds, Nov. 10.

Dorset.—2nd: 5587 Dorrell, Newcastle, Nov. 18.

Welsh.—1st: Capt. Hawkes died suddenly, cause not stated, Barberton; 6041 Sheehan, accidentally wounded, De Aar, both Nov. 13.

Oxford L.I.—1st: 5661 Boomer, Johannesburg, June 16.

Essex.—1st: 6002 Poynton, heart disease and pneumonia, Germiston, Nov. 10.

Derby.—1st: 6118 Goodman, killed, near Kruger's Siding, Nov. 14. 4th: 2763 Grimditch, disease unknown, Nov. 14; 7143 Percival, Nov. 15, Port Elizabeth.

Berks.—2nd: 4714 Byrne, Middelburg, Nov. 12; 5313 Tull, Pretoria, Nov. 9.

Yorks L.I.—4366 Sgt. Lockwood, killed, near Belfast, Nov. 17.

Middlesex.—2nd: 5417 L.-Cpl. Watson, Newcastle, Nov. 19.

K.R.R.—1st: 8322 Cpl. Butterworth, Middelburg, Nov. 13. 4th: 9830 Steele, Germiston, Nov. 14.

Wilts.—2nd: 7974 Martin, Pretoria, Nov. 8.

Manchester.—1st: 2036 Turnbull, Pretoria, Nov. 15; 2034 E. Smith, angina pectoris, Nov. 15; 5313 Sutcliffe (? disease), Nov. 12, both Schoemanskloof.

H.L.I.—6848 Muir, phthisis, Bloemfontein, Nov. 18.

Seafords.—2nd: 1963 Scott, wounds, Edenburg, Nov. 16.

Gordons.—1st: 4127 J. Smith, cardiac syncope, Belfast, Nov. 13. Vol. Co.: 48 McGillivray, Greenpoint, Nov. 15.

Conn. R.—1st: 6211 O'Donnell, Bloemfontein, Nov. 17; 2975 Cox, dysentery, Nov. 14.

Arg. and Suth.—1st: 6164 Mathieson, Apl. 20; 6377 Russell, Bloemfontein, May 5.

Leinster.—1st: 3041 L.-Cpl. McTiernan, rheumatic fever, Vrede, Nov. 17. 5th: 1849 Gough, aneurism, Wynburg, Nov. 15.

Munster Fus.—1st: 3190 Leary, Pretoria, Nov. 14.

R. B.—1st: 7732 Willis, dysentery, Standerton, Nov. 9.

2nd: 657 Sullivan (? disease), Lydenburg, Nov. 10.

C.I.V.—797 L. E. Smith, Pretoria, Nov. 12.

A.S.C.—38th Co.: 13945 Nansen, Pretoria, Nov. 12.

Cape Vol.—M.S.C.: Jacobus, killed by lightning, Machadodorp, Nov. 13.

Imp. Bearer Co.—Hackshaw, Middelburg, Nov. 4.

Messenger, Standerton, Nov. 19, both dysentery.

ELKINGTON & Co., LTD.

Goldsmiths, Silversmiths, and Court Jewellers.

THE ORIGINATORS AND PATENTEES OF ELECTRO PLATE.

ELKINGTON PLATE

Is the Finest Quality of Table Ware the World can Produce.

CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

Special Designs for Presentation Services prepared and submitted Free of Charge.

London Showrooms:

22, REGENT ST., S.W.; 73, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

9, Parker Street, Liverpool; St. Anns Square, Manchester;
22, Blackett Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne; St. Vincent Street, Glasgow.
Manufactory: Newhall Street, Birmingham.

Actual Manufacturers,
supplying the Public Direct.

Tea Pot, 2 Pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 3s.
Solid Silver, £10.

Cream Jug.
Elkington Plate, £1 14s.
Solid Silver, £3 15s.

Sugar Basin.
Elkington Plate, £2 4s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £5 5s.

Coffee Pot, 2 1/2 pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 6s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £10 10s.

Antique Fluted Tea and Coffee Service.
Elkington Plate, £10 8s. Solid Silver, £29 10s

SPECIAL NOTICE.

THE PRICE of "The Times" History of the War in South Africa' in Five Volumes,

Will be raised to £3 3s. net the Set on Wednesday, November 28.

WHEN THE FIRST VOLUME WILL BE PUBLISHED

All who wish to take advantage of the Subscription Price of £2 12s. 6d.
should order at once.

"The Times" HISTORY OF THE WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Edited by L. S. AMERY, Fellow of All Souls, Oxford.

The actual size of the Volume is 9½ by 6½ inches, and about 450 pages.

Five Royal 8vo. Volumes, £2 12s. 6d. net. (The price will be raised to £3 3s. net on Nov. 28.) This will undoubtedly be the Standard History of the Great War, and be treasured by every family interested in the War.

FIVE HANDSOME ROYAL 8vo. VOLUMES. Profusely Illustrated with Photogravures by the Rembrandt Company, with Maps, etc.

TRADE TERMS, etc., CAN BE HAD OF THE PUBLISHERS OF THE WORK.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Limited, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, London, E.C.

ORDER FORM.

To the Manager of the THE TIMES, Printing House Square, London, E.C.

Herewith remittance * for £2 12s. 6d. in advance payment for the Complete Set, in cloth extra, of THE TIMES HISTORY OF THE WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA, whether it be in Five or Six Royal 8vo. volumes, as described in prospectus; to be forwarded to me, as soon as published, at the address given at foot.

A. & N. G.

Name _____

Address _____

Please put full Address
clearly.

* Cheques should be to order of "THE TIMES," crossed "Barclay & Co."

N.B.—It is not impossible that a Sixth Volume may become necessary. In this case NO EXTRA CHARGE will be made for the Volume to SUBSCRIBERS. On November 28, 1900, the price will be raised to £3 3s. for the Five Volumes.

Delivery to subscribers will be free in the United Kingdom.

On November 28, 1900, the price will be raised to £3 3s. for the Five Volumes.

The Gazette.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, NOV. 20.

4th Hussars.—Capt. F. Lee to be Major, vice Brevet Lieut.-Col. Hon. F. R. W. Eveleigh-de Moleyns, D.S.O., placed on temp. half-pay; Lieut. H. G. Watkin to be Capt., vice F. Lee (Nov. 3).

6th Dragoons.—2nd Lieut. C. R. Terrot to be Lieut., vice A. W. Swanston, killed in action (Oct. 16).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

Major C. M. T. Western to be Lieut.-Col., on augmentation.

Promotion to Major of Capt. F. Potts post-dated to Nov. 1.

Capt. F. B. D. Broadrick, Capt. E. S. E. W. Russell, and 2nd Lieut. W. G. H. Salmond seconded for service in China (Nov. 10).

Supy. Capt. Cecil B. Levita to be Capt., vice F. Potts, promoted (Nov. 1).

Supy. Lieut. E. H. Phillips to be Lieut., vice E. M. Conolly, promoted (Oct. 27).

Christian names of 2nd Lieut. Robert Atcheson French Power are as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 5.

Name of Trpr. Archibald St. John Boulthbee, from the Imperial Yeomanry, appointed to a 2nd Lieutenancy in Gazette of July 24, is as now described, not as therein stated.

Gentlemen from Victorian Local Military Forces, to be 2nd Lieuts. (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 21): Trpr. Alexander T. King, from Victorian Bushmen; Pte. Evelyn French, from Victorian Bushmen.

George M. A. Gregory (Univ. Cand.) to be 2nd Lieut. Royal Garrison Artillery.

Capt. H. J. Cotter seconded for service in China (Nov. 10).

Thomas Cunningham (Univ. Cand.), from Private 7th Middlesex V.R.C., to be 2nd Lieut. (dated May 26, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 21).

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut.-Col. E. Raban, on completion of ten years' employment under Admiralty, is placed on reserve list (Nov. 15).

Capt. J. A. Dealy to be Major, vice H. de H. Haig, promoted (Oct. 22).

Capt. C. C. J. Pery to be Major, in succession to Lieut.-Col. E. Raban (Nov. 15).

Lieut. H. R. S. Christie to be Capt., vice C. C. J. Pery (Nov. 15).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Scots.—Lieut. G. W. G. Neill to be Capt., in succession to Major W. C. Olpherts, Adj. of Vols.; 2nd Lieut. M. M. Haldane to be Lieut., vice G. W. G. Neill (Nov. 7).

Northumberland Fusiliers.—Lieut. A. C. Girdwood to be Capt., vice E. W. Fletcher, promoted (July 1).

Royal Warwick Regt.—Capt. G. K. Cockerill, from I.S.C., to be Capt., in succession to Major R. D. Whigham, who holds a staff appointment.

Royal Fusiliers.—Capt. S. T. D. Lawford to be Major, on augmentation.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. A. H. Reynolds to be Lieut., vice J. B. Cockburn, promoted (Oct. 6).

South Wales Borderers.—2nd Lieut. D. J. Dickinson to be Lieut., vice W. A. G. Williams, D.S.O., killed in action (Nov. 7th).

Kings' Own Scottish Borderers.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Pte. E. B. Stevens, from Imperial Yeomanry, notified in Gazette of Nov. 9, cancelled.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. T. A. D. Best (recovered prisoner of war), to be Lieut. supy. to Establishment (June 20).

East Lancashire Regt.—2nd Lieut. P. C. W. Goodwyn to be Lieut., vice B. H. C. Boileau, seconded (Oct. 14).

Dorset Regt.—Capt. E. K. Ridley to be Major, vice H. St. L. Wood, D.S.O., promoted Lieut.-Col. on half-pay (Nov. 14).

Royal Highlanders.—Temp. 2nd Lieut. W. Fraser-Tyler (Lovat's Scouts) resigns his commission.

Royal Berkshire Regt.—2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—C. Pierce, vice W. K. Peake, promoted into Worcester Regt. (June 20); L. H. M. P. Cockerell, vice P. W. North, promoted (Nov. 7).

Royal West Kent Regt.—Capt. E. V. O. Hewett, seconded for service on staff (Oct. 27).

Yorkshire L.I.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Pte. Sydney H. Little, from City of London Imperial Vols., which appeared in Gazette of Oct. 26, cancelled.

Durham L.I.—Lieut.-Col. A. L. Woodland, on completion of four years' service in command of a btm., placed on half-pay; Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. H. S. Fitzgerald to be Lieut.-Col., vice A. L. Woodland (Oct. 31).

Connaught Rangers.—Pte. Sydney K. H. Little, from City of London Imperial Vols. (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. W. A. White, promoted.

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. J. D. Heriot-Maitland to be Adj. of Vols., vice Lieut. Hon. H. Dawnay, who resigns appointment.

West India Regt.—Lieut. E. A. Strickland, from 1st V.B. Border Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. J. A. Willington, promoted.

Candidates to be 2nd Lieuts. (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 21:—

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Scots.—2nd Lieut. Frank W. Marshall, from Imperial L.I. (nominated by Governor of Natal), in succession to Lieut. G. W. G. Neill, promoted.

Northumberland Fusiliers.—Pte. Graham Agnew, from Cape Police (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), in succession to Lieut. A. C. Girdwood.

Royal Warwick Regt.—Corpl. Claude G. Davies, from Cape Mounted Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), vice P. F. Browne, resigned.

South Wales Borderers.—Corpl. E. H. A. Hodgson, from Cape Mounted Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), in succession to Lieut. W. A. G. Williams, D.S.O., killed in action.

Kings' Own Scottish Borderers.—2nd Lieut. George S. Douglas, from the Imperial L.I. (nominated by Governor of Natal), in succession to Lieut. D. D. Gunn, promoted.

Worcester Regt.—Trpr. John C. Michell, from Rhodesian Protectorate Regt. (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), on augmentation; Trpr. Cornwallis C. W. Maude, from Cape Mounted Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), on augmentation.

East Lancashire Regt.—Trpr. Louis H. D'O. Moule, from Cape Mounted Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), in succession to Lieut. B. H. C. Boileau, seconded.

Hampshire Regt.—Lieut. John C. F. Richards, from Brabant's Horse (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), in succession to Lieut. G. H. Parker, promoted.

Royal Berkshire Regt.—Pte. Harold E. Elliott, from Australian Imperial Regt. (nominated by Governor of Victoria), in succession to Lieut. A. S. Turner, promoted; Trpr. Bertie H. W. Taylor, from Cape Mounted Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), in succession to Lieut. P. W. North, promoted.

Yorkshire L.I.—Trpr. Aylmer W. Wallace, from Cape Mounted Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony) supy. to Establishment.

Manchester Regt.—Lieut. Robert B. Willis, from Royal Canadian Regt. of Infantry (nominated by Governor-General of Canada), vice H. G. W. Woodhouse, died of wounds received in action; Corpl. Cecil E. Northcott, from West Australian Contingent (nominated by Governor of Western Australia), on augmentation; Pte. Stanley M. Perkins, from West Australian Contingent (nominated by Governor of Western Australia), on augmentation.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Lieut.-Col. John F. Falvey retires on retired pay.

STAFF.

Appointment to staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Lieut. R. J. S. Seddon, New Zealand Rough Riders, to be an extra A.D.C. to Field-Marshal Right Hon. F. S. Lord Roberts, K.P., V.C., &c., Commanding-in-Chief in South Africa (Aug. 17).

LAZENBY'S

ECONOMIC, CONVENIENT & PORTABLE

SOUP SQUARES

These squares are prepared in 13 Varieties (MULLIGATAWNY, JULIENNE, GRAVY, &c.), and should find a place in every store-room, being invaluable for making soup at short notice or improving stock. They will keep good any reasonable length of time, and are packed in neat boxes containing 6 & 12 Squares.

ONE 6^p SQUARE
WILL MAKE A PINT & A HALF
OF STRONG NUTRITIOUS SOUP

SOLD BY ALL THE LEADING GROCERS & STORES.

Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the Squares, please communicate at once with the Manufacturers.

E. LAZENBY & SON, LTD., 18 Trinity St., LONDON. S.E.

LAZENBY'S

13 VARIETIES.

SOUP SQUARES

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.'S
Overcoats for Winter.

Newest Styles, Fashionable Materials,

Overcoats for Winter.

In all sizes. Ready for Immediate Use.

Overcoats for Winter.

Cut by our own Cutters, and made in Best West-end Style at Moderate Prices for Cash Payments.

ALFRED WEBB MILES & CO.,

12, 10, & 8, BROOK STREET, . . .

. . . HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,
Naval and Military Outfitters,

WEST END BRANCH—

19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.

Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard.

Do. Do. 5810 Avenue.

Telegraphic Address—

"Realistic, LONDON."

New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements

(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)

BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.

REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.

Infantry, 35s. 6d.

Cavalry, 38s. 6d.

ON APPROVAL.

Appointments to staff of Lines of Communication made in South Africa confirmed:—Lieut.-Col. L. J. Browne, Reserve of Officers, to be an Asst. Press Censor, graded as D.A.A.G. (Oct. 18); Lieut. Hon. A. A. Littleton, South African Mounted Irregular Forces, to be an Asst. Press Censor, graded as Staff Capt. (Sept. 5).

Ordnance College.—Lieut.-Col. H. C. Dunlop, from R.A., continues in appointment of a Professor (Nov. 14).
Brevet.—Lieut.-Col. A. L. Woodland, half-pay (Oct. 31) and Lieut.-Col. W. Dunne, A.S.C. (Nov. 14), to be Col.

MEMORANDA.

Capt. W. J. Peyton, C.M.G., I.S.C., and Lieut. (temp. Capt.) R. H. K. Willans, A.S.C., granted local rank of Major whilst employed with Ashanti Field Force.

Lieut. G. Lewis-Lloyd, Middlesex Regt., granted local rank of Capt. whilst employed with Ashanti Field Force.

Lieut. J. E. Massey, 3rd Batn. Loyal North Lancashire Regt., granted local rank of Lieut. in Army whilst employed with West African Regt. (Oct. 3).

Qmr. and Hon. Lieut. T. Smyth, Gloucester Regt., is granted hon. rank of Capt. (Nov. 19).

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Donegal (S. Div.).—Capt. L. F. Allan granted hon. rank of Major.

Limerick City (S. Div.).—2nd Lieuts. H. R. Wills, C. H. M. Furnell, C. W. A. Arthur, and G. R. Healy to be Lieuts.

Northumberland (W. Div.).—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. J. M. Richardson retires under para. 78 Militia Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform.

S.E. of Scotland (S. Div.).—2nd Lieuts. C. Holmes, S. C. Houston, R. A. Renshaw, J. W. Pepper, and E. F. Hare to be Lieuts.

Suffolk (E. Div.).—2nd Lieut. R. D. Kirby to be Lieut.

Wicklow (S. Div.).—Lieut.-Col. H. E. W. de Robeck granted hon. rank of Col.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (MILITIA).

Falmouth Div. (Submarine Miners).—Major C. H. L. Baskerville granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

INFANTRY.

3rd Batn. Royal West Surrey Regt.—Capt. H. F. Wilkinson, seconded whilst Commandant and Railway Staff Officer in South Africa; Lieut. E. G. Williams to be Capt. (May 3).

3rd Batn. East Kent Regt.—Robert C. S. French-Blake to be 2nd Lieut. (Supp.), without pay or allowances, under para. 11, Militia Regulations (Nov. 6).

3rd Batn. Royal Lancaster Regt.—Lieut. H. W. S. Fayer resigns his commission.

6th Batn. Liverpool Regt.—George H. Jenkins to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd Batn. West Yorkshire Regt.—2nd Lieuts. J. C. Metcalfe, M. Fisher, and H. B. Spence to be Lieuts. (Nov. 13).

3rd Batn. Leicester Regt.—Major Lord E. W. J. Manners resigns his commission on account of ill-health, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform (Nov. 21). 2nd Lieut. A. C. Hart to be Lieut. (Nov. 7).

4th Batn. Royal Irish Regt.—Espino M. P. Ward to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 6).

3rd Batn. Scottish Rifles.—2nd Lieuts. H. M. Lawrence, D. C. Sword, C. H. Young, A. B. Rumbulow-Pearse, and H. A. Ross to be Lieuts. (Nov. 12).

5th Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.—Capt. and Instr. of Musketry F. McGlade resigns his commission on account of ill-health (Nov. 21); Howard S. Cobb to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 12).

3rd Batn. East Surrey Regt.—Capt. W. Boynton granted hon. rank of Major; Hubert C. Rees to be 2nd Lieut.

4th Batn. Border Regt.—Cuthbert G. R. Sydney-Turner to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 9).

3rd Batn. Royal Sussex Regt.—2nd Lieuts. A. J. Parkin, H. F. Bidder (Feb. 5), R. S. Follett (April 19), R. E. Henderson, W. W. Otter (May 31), C. de St. Croix, A. M. Mills, and G. H. C. Earl of Rocksavage (Aug. 1) to be Lieuts.

3rd Batn. Northampton Regt.—William H. J. St. L. Atkinson to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 11).

3rd Batn. Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders.—Capt. W. R. D. Mackenzie to be Major (Oct. 20).

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Rifles.—Capt. and Hon. Major E. T. Pakenham resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform.

4th Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers.—Capt. E. C. D'H. Fairtlough, D.S.O., C.M.G., to be Major, and to remain seconded; Capt. C. H. Tippet to be Major; Lieut. and Instr. of Musketry J. A. Hope-Johnstone to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. C. J. Burke to be Lieut. (Oct. 24).

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Berks.—2nd Lieut. E. R. F. Brunskill resigns his commission.

Duke of Lancaster's Own.—Lieut. Hon. F. W. G. Egerton to be Supy. Capt., without pay or allowances, under para. 26 Yeomanry Regulations, 1898.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

1st Devon (W. Div. R.G.A.).—2nd Lieut. W. J. Harper to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. L. T. Hamilton, W. B. Maddock, H. C. Darke, and H. A. Garrett to be Lieuts.

1st Forfar.—Major T. G. Luis granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

1st Kent (E. Div., R.G.A.).—Acting Chaplain Rev. C. E. Donne resigns his appointment; Rev. J. O. Coles to be Acting Chaplain.

2nd Lancashire.—Lieut. C. S. Clarke resigns his commission.

7th Lancashire (Manchester).—Lieut. L. E. Walker, from 4th V.B. Manchester Regt., to be Lieut.; Thomas W. Walker, to be 2nd Lieut.

Tynemouth (W. Div., R.G.A.).—Lieut. L. S. Hill resigns his commission.

1st Worcester.—2nd Lieut. R. V. Gough to be Capt. 2nd Lieuts. R. T. Pelly, W. T. A. Cloughton, G. H. Taylor, A. A. Maund, L. Woodhouse, H. A. Leggett, S. F. Anderson, and H. B. Lloyd, to be Lieuts.

Cadet Corps attached to 1st Worcester.—Hon. Capt. R. E. Lyon to be Capt. (July 1).

ROYAL ENGINEERS (VOLUNTEERS).

1st Cheshire.—Surg.-Lieut. J. F. Blake-Campbell resigns his commission.

East London (Tower Hamlets).—Lieut.-Col. Commandant W. Whetherly granted hon. rank of Col.

2nd Gloucester (Bristol).—2nd Lieut. De L. E. O'Leary resigns his commission.

1st Middlesex.—St. John B. Headley to be 2nd Lieut.

1st West Riding of Yorkshire (Sheffield).—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. E. S. Tozer to be Lieut.-Col., and to command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations.

RIFLE.

Cadet Corps attached to 2nd V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt.—Hon. Capt. A. H. Tod to be Capt. (July 1). 4th V.B.: William Parker to be 2nd Lieut. 1st V.B. East Kent Regt.: Charles M. Atkinson to be Surg.-Lieut.

2nd V.B. Royal Lancaster Regt.—E. G. Brown and Oliver W. Porritt to be 2nd Lieuts.

3rd V.B. Royal Fusiliers.—Capt. R. J. H. Eccles granted hon. rank of Major.

2nd V.B., Liverpool Regt.—Major and Hon. Lieut. Col. W. Cooper retires under para. 111 Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.; 2nd Lieut. M. Field to be Lieut. 4th V.B.: Edward Melladew to be 2nd Lieut. (supp.). 5th Irish V.B.: Major M. E. Byrne to be Lieut.-Col., and to command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations. 1st Cadet Batn.: Hon. Capt. W. R. Hardwick, E. T. Taylor, and Hon. Lieut. F. H. Wilson, junr., resign their appointments. Hon. Lieut. E. W. Osborn to be Hon. Capt.

1st V.B. Devon Regt.—Capt. L. FitzH. F. Walcott resigns his commission; 2nd Lieuts. E. J. Harbottle, E. J. Carter, C. P. Tremlett, and H. Townsend to be Lieuts.

Cadet Corps (Westward Ho! College) attached to 4th V.B. Devon Regt.—Frederick F. Mee and Reginald G. Martin to be 2nd Lieuts.

5th (Hay Tor) V.B. Devon Regt.—Welby R. Atty to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. Suffolk Regt.—Capt. and Instr. of Musketry C. T. Packard resigns his commission. 4th (Cambridge Univ.) V.B.: Eric F. Harrison to be 2nd Lieut.; William B. Bell to be 2nd Lieut. (supp.).

1st V.B. Somerset L.I.—2nd Lieuts. C. T. Foxcroft and J. H. Evans to be Lieuts.

1st V.B. Lancashire Fusiliers.—Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. T. P. Young vacates command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.; Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. G. E. Wike to be Lieut.-Col., and to command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations.

2nd V.B. Royal Scots Fusiliers.—Lieut. and Instr. of Musketry H. M. Blair to be Captain.

4th V.B. East Surrey Regt.—Lieut. G. H. Thurgood to be Capt.; James R. Acton, Arthur P. T. Tully, Matthew W. C. Craufurd, and Roland G. Dale to be 2nd Lieuts.

3rd (Cumberland) V.B. Border Regt.—Capt. and Hon. Major E. Jackson to be Major.

1st V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Douglas L. Thomson to be Surg.-Lieut. 4th V.B.: Capt. C. A. D. George granted hon. rank of Major.

3rd V.B. South Staffordshire Regt.—2nd Lieuts. G. B. Cope, A. H. McBean, F. W. B. Law, C. O. Langley, W. Edwards, C. Houlst, S. J. Le P. Trench, and F. Holcroft to be Lieuts.

1st (Oxford Univ.) V.B. Oxford L.I.—2nd Lieut. G. E. Barry resigns his commission; Hon. H. E. S. Lambert to be 2nd Lieut. (supp.).

4th V.B. Essex Regt.—Harry Parker and Frank P. Morrison to be 2nd Lieuts.

Cadet Corps (Repton School) attached to 1st V.B. Derbyshire Regt.—Edward A. Surtees to be Lieut.

2nd V.B. Loyal North Lancashire Regt.—Capt. R. Marsland resigns his commission.

1st V.B. Northampton Regt.—Lieut.-Col. H. H. Costobadie, retired pay, late R.A., to be Lieut.-Col.

2nd V.B. Royal West Kent Regt.—Lieut. B. F. Miller resigns his commission; 2nd Lieuts. H. L. Dinwiddie, L. E. Taylor, F. K. Selby, E. A. Belcher, W. F. Marchant, J. Sawers, C. D. Clark, jun., T. L. Price, and J. P. Trousdell to be Lieuts.

Cadet Corps (Blackheath and Quernmore Schools) attached to 2nd V.B. Royal West Kent Regt.—Hon. Capt. C. March to be Capt. (July 1).

2nd V.B. Middlesex Regt.—Hugh R. Sells to be 2nd Lieut.

4th V.B. Manchester Regt.—Capt. J. C. Nichol granted hon. rank of Major.

3rd (Sunderland) V.B. Durham L.I.—2nd Lieut. F. M. Wawn to be Lieut. 5th V.B.: Capt. J. F. Corbitt resigns his commission.

2nd V.B. Highland L.I.—Sir T. J. Lipton, Knt., is appointed to Hon. Colonelcy of batn. 5th (Glasgow Highland) V.B.: George Wingate and Arthur J. Martin to be 2nd Lieuts. (supp.).

1st (Ross Highland) V.B. Seaforth Highlanders.—Rev. W. L. W. Brown to be Acting Chaplain.

6th V.B. Gordon Highlanders.—2nd Lieuts. C. G. Bennett and G. S. Spence to be Lieuts.

4th (Stirling) V.B., Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. D. Frew resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.

2nd Tower Hamlets.—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. J. E. Smith resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of Corps.

VOLUNTEER MEDICAL STAFF CORPS.

Manchester Companies.—Supy. Surg.-Lieut. J. W. Smith, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut. on establishment.

Woolwich Companies.—Qmr. H. J. J. Norman granted hon. rank of Capt.

[Where not otherwise mentioned the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Nov. 21.]

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 23.

2nd Dragoon Guards.—Capt. H. B. N. S. Burlton, from 3rd Batn. West Yorkshire Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., vice R. C. Lawrence, resigned (Nov. 24). Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenantcy of Pte. M. Hendrie, from Royal Canadian Regt. of Infantry, which appeared in Gazette of May 29, is cancelled.

4th Hussars.—To be 2nd Lieuts.—2nd Lieut. W. F. Wormald, from 4th Batn. West Yorkshire Regt., in succession to Lieut. A. Savory, died of wounds received in action; Corpl. Harman J. Grissewood, from Imperial

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

OVERALLS A SPECIALITY.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

Yeomanry (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), in succession to Lieut. H. G. Watkin, promoted; Trpr. Albert E. H. Breslin, from Imperial Yeomanry (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), in succession to Lieut. T. P. Tew, placed on temp. half-pay.

12th Lancers.—Lieut. A. H. Dunlop resigns his commission; 2nd Lieut. H. E. Connop to be Lieut., vice A. H. Dunlop.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

4th Batn.—Pte. Mark L. Paget to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Aug. 1).

5th Batn.—Lieut. E. A. Knight resigns his commission (Oct. 31).

12th Batn.—Pte. George Green to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Oct. 25).

13th Batn.—Lieut. R. O. Hilliard resigns his commission (Oct. 4); Corpl. T. Cumming Butter to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Aug. 1).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Bedford Regt.—Promotions to Lieuts. of 2nd Lieuts. W. W. Muir and D. G. Ridgeway, antedated to Oct. 28 1899.

Leicester Regt.—Capt. G. A. Bulkley retires on retired pay; Brevet Major E. M. Woodward, from Supy. Capt. to be Capt., vice G. A. Bulkley.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Christian names of 2nd Lieut. William Brooksbank Garnett are as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Nov. 9.

Worcester Regt.—2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—C. A. Lewis, vice H. Crawshaw, promoted; J. E. Gordon, vice E. B. Hankey, promoted; A. F. Custance, vice H. A. Lang, promoted; W. A. Bowen and H. R. Elliott, on augmentation. Pte. E. Adair Thelwall, from Col. Lumsden's Corps (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., on augmentation.

West Riding Regt.—Capt. A. M. Whitaker seconded for service as an Adj. of Vols. (Nov. 2); 2nd Lieut. R. T. Barnville is removed from the Army, Her Majesty having no further occasion for his services.

Derbyshire Regt.—Lieut. P. C. Shepard, from 4th Batn., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. R. J. F. Taylor, promoted (dated April 18, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Nov. 24).

Gordon Highlanders.—Temp. rank of Lieut. in Army, granted to undermentioned officers whilst serving with

Vol. Co. in South Africa antedated to June 8:—Capt. W. O. Duncan, 1st V.B.; Lieut. A. W. Robertson, 3rd V.B.

Royal Munster Fusiliers.—Capt. H. J. C. Leland, from 5th Batn., to be 2nd Lieut., on augmentation.

Rifle Brigade.—2nd Lieut. B. Alexander seconded for service under Colonial Office (Oct. 20); Lieut. Hon. R. Brand, from 3rd Batn. Royal Scots, to be 2nd Lieut. in succession to Lieut. S. A. Rickman, promoted.

West India Regt.—Capt. Noel P. Davies to be Major, vice T. P. E. Lowry, retired (Oct. 7).

Royal Northern Reserve Regt.—Capt. G. C. R. C. Fenwick ceases to be employed with Regt. (July 4).

Royal Lancashire Reserve Regt.—Appointment as Lieut. of Lieut. W. M. Thomas, Reserve of Officers, antedated to Sept. 1.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Col. N. B. Major placed on temp. half-pay on account of ill-health (Nov. 6).

STAFF.

Major W. R. Robertson, D.S.O., 3rd Dragoon Guards, resumes appointment of Staff Capt. at Hdqrs, vice Capt. and Brevet-Major E. M. Woodward, Leicester Regt., vacated appointment (Oct. 29).

Capt. H. C. Metcalfe, Northampton Regt., to be a District Insp. of Musketry, vice Capt. H. R. Hardy, Royal West Surrey Regt., appointed an Asst. Insp. Army Ordnance Dept. (Nov. 10).

Appointment of Capt. W. F. Bonham, Essex Regt., as an Asst.-Provost-Marshal, graded as a D.A.A.G., South African Field Force, is dated July 17, 1900, not as stated in the Gazette of Sept. 11.

Brevet.—Lieut.-Col. E. Raban, Reserve List, R.E., to be Col. (Nov. 23).

Memorandum.—Sub Conductor R. F. W. Ashworth, from Adj. Gen.'s Dept., India, to be a Qrmr. in Army, with hon. rank of Lieut. (Nov. 14).

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Nov. 24.]

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.45, and Saturday mornings at 2.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

ARRIVAL OF A BOER COMMANDANT.—Among the passengers by the transport Dilwara, which reached Southampton from the Cape on November 20, says the Times, was Commandant Banks, who was sent to Europe as an "undesirable," and who has since left for France. He readily recounted his experiences, though his English was somewhat broken. He said he was a German by nationality, and was in the Transvaal before the war broke out. When hostilities began he took the oath of allegiance, and was at first engaged in repelling the advance of Col. Plumer on Mafeking. Later on, in command of the German and Boer scouts, he was engaged in impeding Lord Roberts's advance on Bloemfontein. After the occupation of the Free State capital, he was responsible with Christian de Wet for the disaster to the British at Sanna's Post. After being instrumental in bringing about the Reddersburg disaster, he took a leading part in the siege of Wepener. "I sent a message," added the commandant, "to Col. Dalgety asking him to surrender, but on his declining to do so I made it pretty hot for him." Later on, when the siege was raised, he fell back on Thaba N'chu. It was while scouting in this locality that he was wounded and taken prisoner. In describing this incident Banks said he was out with a patrol of Boers, who, when they saw the British advancing, fled. His horse bolted with the rest, and, as it was a long way to the Boer lines and seeing flight was useless, he began to snipe the advancing enemy. A British officer called out to him to surrender, but refusing to lay down his rifle, he was severely shot in the leg, but not before he had accounted for several of the British. He was then removed to one of the field hospitals, and declared that while a patient there, although guarded by ten soldiers with fixed bayonets, he communicated nightly with his friends. He said he had been treated by the British during the time he had been in hospital, excepting at Bloemfontein, with every attention. In conclusion, he declared that from the first he knew the Boers could not win, but it was his duty, having taken the oath, to fight. The commandant appeared to be a favourite on board, and several British officers shook him by the hand and wished him good luck before leaving the vessel. It is Banks's intention to greet Mr. Kruger on his arrival in Europe.

APSLEY PELLATT & CO.
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing
Cross, London, W.C
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA
MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

DEATH.

BELTON.—On November 15, at Bradfield, Berkshire, in his 55th year, Sergeant-Major Martin Belton, late of the Royal Munster Fusiliers, for many years Drill and Musketry Instructor and the faithful friend of the boys of Bradfield College.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

BOURNEMOUTH, WEST.—For Winter or Summer residence; comfortable apartments in a pleasantly situated house; close to pine woods and sea; healthy position; fine view; near shops; excellent cooking and attendance; reasonable terms.—Address, M., Myrtle Villa, Alum Chine Road, Bournemouth.

BRIGHTON.—PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENT (as homelike as possible) for those requiring Medical, Surgical, and Nursing care. Medical baths, packs, massage, electricity. Own doctor can attend if wished, or their treatment carried out. Close to sea, overlooking private grounds. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO COMFORT, NURSING, DIET. For Terms address, Medical Sup., Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

HUNTING BOX, Co. KILDARE.

TO LET.

CHARMINGLY SITUATED, within four miles of Salins and five from Naas, standing on seven acres nicely planted within easy distance of three packs of hounds. House contains three sitting-rooms, three bedrooms, dressing-room, two servants' rooms, hot and cold bath; all newly painted and papered throughout. Conservatory off drawing-room, and new sanitation. Stabling for five horses, four roomy loose boxes, one stall, all well floored and ventilated; coach-house, two harness-rooms, extensive men's rooms, all newly done up. Would be let furnished or unfurnished for three hunting seasons consecutively. Further loose boxes would be constructed if required. Apply E. Chambers Hardman, 14, Molesworth Street, Dublin.

HYDE PARK.—Paying Guests received in the well-furnished house of an officer's widow. Electric light, bath, h. and c. Close to Lancaster Gate, Electric Railway, and Great Western Railway. Address: 18, Norfolk Square, W.

INVALID or CONVALESCENT OFFICERS received at The Bournemouth Hydro. Airy site overlooking Sea. Sea-water, Turkish Baths, Massage, Billiards, Gymnasium, Resident Physician.—Apply Secretary.

LANFAIRFECHAN, N. WALES.—Winter months or longer; detached house, well furnished; three sitting, five bed, one dressing rooms; bath, h. and c.; good garden, paddock, poultry; two servants left; near mountains, sea, shops; excellent climate; suit a valid officer. Apply—Glanarvon.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

PASSAGE TO INDIA.—A Certificated Nurse would act in any capacity on voyage, strongly recommended by Lady Fraser, to whom apply, Commandant's House, Chatham.

ROYAL CAMBRIDGE ASYLUM FOR SOLDIERS' WIDOWS.

For widows of soldiers who have served not less than 14 years and married with leave while serving. Comfortable home with large garden. Furnished room for each inmate, 7s. a week, and coat allowance. Number in Asylum 71. Election by subscribers.

COMMITTEE APPEAL for more SUBSCRIPTIONS to meet current expenses. For particulars apply to Secretary, 5, York Street, St. James Square, S.W.

SAFE INVESTMENT.—Six percent. First Mortgage Debentures (at par) in a South Wales Colliery, repayable at the price of £110 per £100 by ten equal yearly drawings. For full particulars, address "Agent," Messrs. Hillburn, 379, Strand, London.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN OF GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grooms, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employons, London."

TO BACHELORS.—CRANBOURN MANSIONS (London Hippodrome), close to Piccadilly and Clubland.

A few beautifully decorated, combined BED-SITTING-ROOMS to be LET in this magnificent building, with valet and attendance.

FURNISHED OR UNFURNISHED. Lift, electric light, lavatory (h. and c.) to each room, liveried attendant, telephone, and all modern conveniences.—Particulars of the Estate Managers, Messrs. Browett and Taylor, 9, Warwick Court, Holborn, W.C.

WANTED AN OFFICER (retired), Army or Navy, to reside near Kynoch Town, Essex, and act as Chief Inspector of the Cordite and Explosives Factory there, but with no responsibility for the manufacture. Not above middle age; strict disciplinarian; some knowledge of explosives.—Apply, in first instance, by letter only, with full particulars, including age, qualifications, experience, and salary required, to Kynoch, Limited, Witton, Birmingham.

WANTED a really competent Coach for the Militia military subjects.—Apply, stating fee and qualifications, to X, Melton Bank, Malvern.

WANTED for the Volunteer Battalion, Leicestershire Regiment, an ORDERLY-ROOM CLERK. Must have had experience.—Apply in writing to the Adjutant, The Magazine, Leicester.

PARENTS GOING ABROAD and Others.

CHILDREN RECEIVED in pretty country home of Gentlewoman who is a trained nurse, and has been governess.—Miss North, Green Arbour, near Dunmow, Essex.

A REVOLUTION IN FURNISHING

BY MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

Mr. LABOUCHERE writes in "TRUTH."

"NORMAN & STACEY have introduced in their business an ingenious safeguard against the risk of loss to his widow or family through the death of the h. or. THEY GIVE AN INSURANCE UPON HIS LIFE, so that if for instance a man gets £200 worth of Furniture on the hire-purchase system, and dies when instalments to the amount of £190 have been paid, not only does the furniture become the property of his representatives, BUT THE £100 IS ALSO REPAYED TO THEM."

N.B.—Cash buyers are also given a Free Life Insurance Policy equal to the amount they have spent.

NORMAN & STACEY, LD.,

118, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.

Moderate Prices. Free Delivery Town or Country. Call and view Stock before furnishing locally, and compare Quality and Prices with those of other firms.

CLEVELAND HYDRO.

FULLY LICENSED RESIDENTIAL HOTEL. COMFORTABLE WINTER HEALTH RESORT. Reduced Terms to Invalids from the Front.

Bright, Cheerful, Homelike. Well Warmed and Ventilated. Turkish, Electric and other Baths. MASSAGE AND ELECTRO MASSAGE.

Special arrangements and amusements for the Xmas Holidays.

Climate mild, equable and bracing.

SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE),

QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE.

Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff.

Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS.

For Tariff, address MANAGER.

ROYAL UNITED SERVICE

INSTITUTION,

WHITEHALL.

LECTURE at 3 p.m.,

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1900,

"MILITARY TRAINING IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS."

BY

The REV. C. G. GULL, M.A.,

Captain Commanding 4th London V.R. Corps (Head Master Grocers Company's Schools).

The Chair will be taken by

Major-General VISCOUNT FRANKFORT DE MONTMORENCY, K.C.B.

By Order of the Council,
R. HOLDEN, Lieut.-Colonel,
Secretary.

WANTED.—MAN COOK for OFFICERS' MESS of the third and fourth battalions Worcestershire Regiment (one mess).—Apply Mess President, Blenheim Barracks, Aldershot.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA, SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate. "Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd. Batn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wilt. Regiment. August, 1896."

Watch and Clock Makers.

"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best if not the very best, in the Discovery and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.L.H., E.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

HART AND SON,

60, Artillery Place, Woolwich,

(Established 100 Years), has

FOR SALE

Nearly New

REGULATION UNIFORMS

for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices.

Gold and Silver Dress

BELTS, SABRETACHES, and SASHES

for Sale or on Hire.

All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver

Lace, &c., bought for cash.

THE STANDARD LIFE

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.

LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C.,

and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.

ASSURANCES AND LOANS

can be effected by

MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS

in Government Service,

on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business.

Annual Revenue exceeds . . . £1,100,000

Bonus Additions Declared exceed . . . £6,750,000

Accumulated Funds exceed . . . £8,400,000

Claims Paid exceed . . . £17,000,000

The Navy.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 15.

Royal Marine Light Infantry.—Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. F. G. Cotter to be Lieut.-Col., vice Adair, appointed A.A.G. Royal Marines; Capt. J. R. Goddard to be Major, vice Cotter, promoted (Nov. 1).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 16.

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. A. B. W. Sheppard to be Lieut. (Nov. 8).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 19.

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. J. Fox to be Lieut. (Nov. 14).

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 20.

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. P. H. Millar to be Lieut. (Nov. 2); Sub-Lieut. A. W. McKellar to be Lieut. (Nov. 17); Acting Sub-Lieut. G. R. Fullagar confirmed as Sub-Lieut. (Aug. 8); Midshipman A. V. R. Lovegrove to be Sub-Lieut. (Oct. 15); Asst.-Engr. J. Birchall to be Engr. (Oct. 30).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 22.

In accordance with Order in Council of June 29, 1900, Fleet Engr. D. J. Gyles has been placed on Retired List, at his own request, with permission to assume rank of Insp. of Machinery (Nov. 20).

Staff Paymrs. advanced to Fleet Paymr.—B. G. Lloyd-Evans (Oct. 5); W. B. Clark (Oct. 16); W. C. Gillies (Oct. 18).

Paymrs. advanced to Staff Paymr.—W. L. Gill (Oct. 1), C. D. M. Farrant (Oct. 9).

Staff Paymr. J. G. Matthews advanced to Fleet Paymr. on Retired List (Oct. 16).

Clark G. B. Owens to be Asst.-Paymr. (Nov. 4).

Royal Naval Reserve.—In accordance with the Regulations for Royal Naval Reserve:—Lieut. J. Robertson placed on Retired List of his rank (Nov. 19).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 16.

Commander.—W. H. Nicholson to Phoenix (Nov. 9).
Lieutenants.—R. H. Keate to Philomel (as 1st) appointment to the Hood cancelled; H. E. Jane to Sphinx (Nov. 23); A. O. Dewar to Benbow (Nov. 20); J. R. Lett-Ward to Hood (as 1st) (undated).
Chief Engineer.—R. B. Garde to Vivid, for Sharpshooter, for supervision of instruction of engine-room ratings (Nov. 2).

Assistant-Engineer.—W. G. Heppel to Cambridge for Conqueror (May 2).
Staff-Surgeon.—J. H. Thomas to Cormorant for Gibraltar Hospital (Nov. 15).

Surgeons.—E. Folliott to Assaye; R. St. G. S. Bond to Highflyer (Nov. 16).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 17.

Lieutenants.—C. Maxwell-Lefroy to Endymion (G.), H. Lynes to Barfleur (G.), J. T. Bush to Duke of Wellington (G.), R. M. Harbord to Australia (as 1st), A. M. Loxley to Warspite (G.), A. Pringle to Camperdown (G.), J. H. Trye to Devastation (G.) (Nov. 23), F. C. C. Pasco to President for duty R.N. College (Jan. 3, 1901).
Fleet-Engineer.—W. T. Allen to Duke of Wellington for Mercury (Nov. 16).

Chief Engineer.—J. A. Hibberd to Duke of Wellington for Eclipse (Nov. 16).

Engineers.—D. P. Green to Vivid for Keyham College, W. A. P. Smith to Royal Sovereign for Banshee, E. J. Rosevere to Pembroke for Haughty (Nov. 16).

Staff-Surgeon.—G. T. Broatch to Devastation (Nov. 15).

Chaplain.—Rev. C. E. L. Cowan, M.A., to Glory (Nov. 16).

Surgeons.—J. M. G. Swainson to Terrible, A. J. Hewitt to Trafalgar (Nov. 16).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 19.

Chaplain.—Rev. J. H. S. Bailey, B.A., to Empress of India (Nov. 19).

Naval Instructor.—T. Y. Baker, B.A., to Theseus (Nov. 19).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 20.
Commander.—A. T. Hunt to President, for study at R.N. College (Nov. 24).
Lieutenants.—O. L. Beck to Buzzard (N.) (Nov. 9), C. A. Smith, R.N.R., to Excellent, for one month's course of gunnery (Nov. 24).
Inspector of Machinery.—W. Olive to Duke of Wellington, for Reserve (Jan. 1).
Fleet Surgeon.—A. McKinlay to Camperdown (undated).
Staff Surgeon.—R. F. Bovil to Howe (undated).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 21.

Lieutenant.—R. A. Norton to Pembroke, for Contest, in command (Nov. 5).

Probationary-Assistant-Engineer.—F. J. L. Heath to Niobe (Nov. 21).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 22.

Lieutenant.—H. G. C. Somerville to Triton (Dec. 1).
Chief Engineers.—F. A. Stutterford to Monarch; J. N. Crowle to Vivid, for Æolus (Nov. 21).
Engineer.—E. E. Pethick to Monarch (Nov. 21).
Assistant-Engineers.—F. A. Fletcher to Nile (undated), L. J. Cook to Charydis; J. C. Jenkins to Wildfire, for Edinburgh; H. E. Wolfe to Royal Sovereign; W. B. Parnall to Andromeda (Nov. 21).

A LECTURE will be given on Thursday next, the 29th inst., at the R. A. Institution by Major F. J. S. Cleve, R.F.A., on "Tendencies in Tactics," Sir Frederick Maurice in the chair.

In consequence of complaints on the subject of the abuse by certain soldiers of the grant of shooting passes in India, a committee, appointed to inquire into the question, has reported that new rules have now been issued to commanding officers, an adherence to which will, it is hoped, lead to the extinction of affrays such as have taken place before.

PREVENTION OF ZYMOTIC DISEASES.—For greater security have the Drainage and Water Supply of your Town and Country or temporary Residence examined and certified by The Sanitary Engineering Company (H. Carter, C.E., Manager), 65, Victoria Street, Westminster.—Fee quoted on receipt of full particulars. Established 23 years. Telegrams: "Sanitation, London."

THE "SCOUT" PUTTIE & LEGGINGS

(Clarke's Patent, 19141-1899.)
SUPERSEDE ALL OTHERS
The Best, Simplest and most Effective Article in the market.

FOR MILITARY AND SPORTING PURPOSES
THEY ARE UNEQUALLED.

No loops used.
Straps are self-adjusting. Inside portion of calf is smooth for saddle.

Price 25s. per pair
Best blocked pigskin.

Descriptive particulars on application to Patentee—
Thomas H. Clarke, Military Boot Maker, Fermoy, Co. Cork.

A THING THAT EVERYBODY WANTS and EVERYBODY LIKES.

A BOOT HEEL THAT WILL BE ALWAYS EVEN

This is absolutely secured by wearing WOOD'S Automatic Revolving Heel Pad.

Sold all over the World in Millions.

Doubles the Durability of Boots, prevents Splashing, makes the Tread Silent and Soft as a Grass Lawn, reduces Fatigue to a minimum, prevents Slipping. Patented everywhere. Can be fixed while you wait. Prices Ladies', 1s.; Gents', 1s. 3d. Improved Quality. Sold by Best Makers and Rubber Dealers, or post free from the Makers. Send paper size of heel required.

REVOLVING HEEL CO., D. 23, NELSON, LANC.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LTD.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.

Established 1853.

Chairman—C. R. RIVINGTON, F.E.C., J.P., D.L.
Paid-up Capital.....£200,000
Debentures and Debenture Stock.....£207,236

REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.

W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.

WATSON'S PRISM BINOCULAR GLASS.

Ordinary Field Glasses entirely superseded.

SUPERB
DEFINITION.

COMPACT
AND FLAT.

Entirely new System of Construction, giving immense field of view and high magnification. Magnification, 7 diameters, £7 15s. 0d. Magnification, 9 diameters, £9 0s. 0d. In best sling case.

Field Glasses and Telescopes of every description from £2 2s. 0d.

For full particulars send for Catalogue No. 6, post free on application to
W. WATSON & SONS, Manufacturing Opticians to H.M. Government, 318, HIGH HOLBORN LONDON, W.C., and 16, Forrest Road, EDINBURGH.
ESTABLISHED 1837.

Our Next Plate.

A Coloured Plate, showing types of the following Forces, will be presented with the "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE" of Dec. 1:

NORTH BORNEO DYAK POLICE.

HONG-KONG SIKH POLICE.

MALAY STATES GUIDES.

HONG-KONG CHINESE POLICE

MAURITIUS, GARRISON ARTILLERY!

Sent post free on receipt of money order for (Abroad) 7½d.; or (Inland) Stamps for 6½d.

THE PUBLISHER, "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE," YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

Publications.

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Camps, and Examinations.
Now Ready, 5th EDITION.

THE OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIDE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to 10 Official Test Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memos, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Book.
Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.

By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.

3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS.
Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables, Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

WM. CLOWES and SONS, 18, Charing Cross, S.W., and A. & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.

Of whom Reprint-Books, and Blocks may be had.
Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.

NOTES ON NAVAL STRATEGY AND TACTICS.

By Lieutenant H. STANSBURY, R.N.

PRICE 1s. POST FREE 1s. 1d.

Published by J. J. Kelther and Co., 33, King William Street, E.C., and 99, Victoria Street, S.W.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS

ARMS, CREST, and ADDRESS DIS

Engraved as Gems, from original and artistic designs.

NOTE PAPER and ENVELOPES brilliantly illuminated by hand in gold, silver, bronze, and colour. BEST BELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100. HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.

All the New and Fashionable Note Papers. BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS of FARE, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, INVITATIONS and BOOK PLATES. REGIMENTAL BAND CARDS.

A VISITING CARD PLATE elegantly engraved and 100 Cards printed for 4s. 6d.
RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

The "E.I.U."

securely packed in postal tube. Speedy application is necessary.

Address:—THE PUBLISHER, 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

The Publisher begs to inform readers that he still has copies of the Plate of the "CITY IMPERIAL VOLUNTEERS," which was issued with the "Army and Navy Gazette" some time ago, on sale, Price 6½d. (halfpenny stamps) post free.

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM,
P.S.C.

(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM
and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),
35, HEREFORD SQUARE, S.W.
(one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station Metropolitan and District Railways).

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION,
SEPT.—OCT., 1900.

FIRST—MR. C. G. LESLIE, 24,060 Marks.
MR. H. G. SMITH, 14,517 Marks.

These were the only two candidates
sent up by Col. Needham.

Mr. Leslie made 4,384 marks more than any other competitor; the next in order
of merit scoring only 19,676 marks.

During the last three years all Colonel
Needham's Pupils have been successful
at the Militia Competitive Examinations.

Prospectus and List of Successes on application.

HOVE, SUSSEX.

MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,
Late the Border Regiment,
assisted by
Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late R.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

SEPTEMBER, 1900.

NEW REGULATIONS.

SECOND ARTILLERY— Marks.
J. Coldwell-Horsfall 16,790

SIXTH INFANTRY—
A. V. P. Marten 16,153

Place.	Name.	Marks.
14th (Infantry)	B. G. A. Townshend	15,109
21st (Infantry)	*F. O. Koebel	14,105
22nd (Infantry)	C. F. F. Campbell	13,893

* Military subjects only.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5,802
Infantry	L. Aymer	5,851
Infantry	K. O. Goldie	5,653
University	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.

ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY,
and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.

No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.
Capt. M. M. M. FESTING.
Resident and Non-resident Pupils received.
Prospectus with List of Successes on application.
Officers Coached by Correspondence.

S. G. KIRCHHOFFER,
M.A., F.G.S., F.R.G.S.

(Ex-Scholar & Honourman, Pembroke College, Cambridge).

Receives Twelve Pupils for all Army Examinations.

FOUR RESIDENT INSTRUCTORS.

GREAT FACILITIES FOR

MILITIA EXAMINATIONS.

House stands on gravel soil, in the Pine-wood district. Cricket, Football, and Tennis Grounds.

Terms and List of Successes on Application to

YATELEY GRANGE,
Blackwater, Hants.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE,
SEPTEMBER, 1900.

Lieut.-Col. MOORES prepared for the above examination only four Officers, all of whom were successful, viz.:—

Lieut. MORGAN-JONES	19,261 marks.
" H. C. HALL	14,956 "
" H. D. MOORE	12,650 "
" C. J. A' COURT	11,568 "

PREVIOUS SUCCESSSES.

145 Officers of the Militia, 62 Officers for promotion. Pupils are also prepared for WOOLWICH and SANDHURST Examinations.

8, Redcliffe Gardens, Clarendon Road,
SOUTHSEA.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,
ANDMR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.

(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge),
ECCLEFECHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and
Non-Resident, for
ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVER-
SITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.

Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate
Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of
many years' successful experience.

Careful Individual Attention. Strong
Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical
Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer.
Competent Military Instructor.

SUCCESSSES, 1900.

Militia Competitive, September.—C. A. de
G. Dalghish, 7th Infantry, 16,114 marks; E.
Corbould-Warren, 10th Artillery, 13,114
marks; both first trial.

Woolwich.—None sent up.
Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only Candidate.

Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy.
Cambridge.—Trinity College Entrance; and
"Previous" Examination.—J. Cundell.

A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his
moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare;
and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.

LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION.WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and*UNIVERSITIES.*MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.

Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PRE-
PARES a Limited Number of PUPILS.

RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST
Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.

The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.

RECENT SUCCESSSES.WOOLWICH.

G. F. Farran 8001 marks Dec. 1898.

W. Burrell Hayley 9228 " Dec. 1899.

The only pupils sent up.

SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.

Viscount Ingestre 7th Cavalry Cadetship.

C. M. Truman Cavalry Cadetship.

E. P. Grant Infantry Cadetship.

G. Winne Finch Infantry Cadetship.

B. H. Leatham Infantry Cadetship.

G. E. Hawes Infantry Cadetship.

C. A. Antrobus Infantry.

E. H. Pipon Infantry.

H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh Infantry.

E. Neave Infantry.

G. Wahab Indian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Colonel Russell, Clavinia, Weymouth.

SEPTEMBER, 1900.

Three sent up, three passed, viz.:—

Embodied Officers.	Topo.	Mil.		Mil. Hist.
		Eng.	1st
a Russell	940	1060	1465	1000
b Fletcher	1020	425	1020	845
c Yardley	900	1510	1255	620

a and c Four weeks' leave before exam. only.

b Four weeks' work interrupted by duty—an absolute beginner.

HOME SCHOOL FOR THEDAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.

Home School for the Daughters of Gentlemen
in one of the healthiest suburbs of London. A thoroughly sound modern education is given to a limited number of young ladies, under the careful superintendence of an experienced lady principal,
assisted by accomplished masters and mistresses
(graduates).

Pupils are prepared for the London University examinations, Royal Academy of Music, &c., when desired.

D. C. L., Elleray, Atkins Road, Clapham Park,
London, S.W.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1,

CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.

ARMY TAILOR AND MILITARY OUTFITTER.—P. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench

Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.

BREECHES MAKERS AND MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW,

BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.

GUN AND RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.,

PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. 303 Rifles a spécialité.

MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN, Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., Edinburgh (late 27, North Bridge).

MILITARY TAILORS AND BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms

strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.

HOTEL DIRECTORY.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well

Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining,

Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.

DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea

Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.

DUBLIN.—SHELBORNE HOTEL.

First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.

EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south

aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate.

An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.

LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families.—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This

Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.

PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL AND QUEEN'S HOTEL.—

Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

Educational.

THE
COLONIAL COLLEGE &
TRAINING FARMS,
HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have
unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.

Full information from the Director at above
address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria Street, Westminster.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,
ASPATRIA,

Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising
Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Scasido.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

WOOLWICH, SANDHURST.

CAPTAIN E. C. HEATH.

33, BOUVERIE SQUARE,

FOLKESTONE.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, SEPT., 1900.

H. B. T. Hume FOURTH INFANTRY 16,557

* F. Robinson 5th Infantry 16,806

E. L. Bowring 12th Infantry 15,149

C. L. Master 18th Infantry 14,526

M. C. Fowke 54th Infantry 11,755

H. J. Coddington 55th Infantry 11,728

* Passed under Old Regulations.

Special preparation by Correspondence for
MAY PROMOTION EXAM.

TURKISH & ARABIC.SCHOLARSHIPS, REWARDS.

Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S DOUBLE success at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish and Arabic, held on October 16 and 17, 1900, was
with Major W. E. Morton, R.E., Qualified Interpreter at FIRST TRIAL in both Languages, with marks 656 and 643, and mostly prepared by correspondence from London at Mooltan, Punjab,
India.

Also Colonel E. Stephenson Essex Regiment,
Qualified Interpreter in Turkish, at First Trial,
with 667 marks; Major H. A. Curtis, R.A., and
FIFTEEN other officers with high marks.

Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.

NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-
STANI, RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.

Distance offers no hindrance to success.
Intending Candidates should begin work early.

Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Capt. Fuller, late R.E., in conjunction with Mr. A. J. de Havilland

Bushnell, M.A., prepares resident

and non-resident Pupils for the above.

Address: 12, Suffolk Square, Cheltenham.

SANDECOTES SCHOOL, PARK-STONE, DORSET.

A High-class School, at Moderate Fees, for the Daughters of Gentlemen, where the aim is to train girls to be practical, refined, womanly

women. Every care and comfort for delicate children. Large grounds; tennis and fives courts; playing fields. Pupils prepared for the University and other Examinations. Head Mis-

tress, Miss Sophie M. Smith (National Sciences Tripos, Cambridge), assisted by a highly qualified staff. Two entrance Scholarships for competition in Dec. for girls under 12 and 15 years respectively.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTHAND
MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.

(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge),
Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors,

PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for
the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and

UNIVERSITIES at

CEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE

HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;

For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.R.

Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."

Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and

7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT

(150 yards from the Station), for Promotion

Candidates and Day Pupils.

Telephone, "217, Kensington."

List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed,
will be sent on application.

SANDHURST, WOOLWICH,INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SER-*VICE, and UNIVERSITIES.

MR. J. J. GREVATT

(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY,
for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.

A Barrister on Staff assists Candidates for
DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.
Prospectus with list of successes on application.
WORK WAS RESUMED AUGUST 15, 1900.

57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

Shipping.INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA,
QUEENSLAND, BURMAH,PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.*BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVA-
TION COMPANY, LIMITED.BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to

CALCUTTA. ZANZIBAR.

MADRAS. MOMBASSA.

COLOMBO. BRISBANE.

RANGOON. BATAVIA.

MAURITIUS. ROCKHAMPTON.

BOMBAY. TOWNSVILLE.

KURACHEE. MARYBOROUGH.

BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo
to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH,
EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great
Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House,
Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square,
Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock
House, Billiter Street, E.C.

P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA,
CHINA, & AUSTRALIANMAIL SERVICES.*P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS*TO GIBRALTAR, MAR- SEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN,BOMBAY, KURACHEE, CALCUTTA,
CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN,AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TIC-
KETS and ROUND THE

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Pantaloons,
Polo Breeches.
11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.

F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.

Established over 80 Years.

EMIGRATION TO CANADA.

Canada offers great advantages to settlers, including free grants of 160 acres of land, improved farms at reasonable prices, fine climate, no rent, light taxes, free schools, good markets, rapidly developing industries, and large import and export trade. Pamphlets, maps, and full particulars (supplied post free), may be obtained from the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria Street, London, S.W., or from the Allan, Dominion and Elder Dempster Steamship Companies, or their Local Agents, or the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.
Write for particulars.

The Madras Times.

PUBLISHED TWICE DAILY.
MORNING EDITION.—The only morning daily paper of the capital of Southern India.
EVENING EDITION.—Being despatched by the mail trains, this edition circulates throughout the South of India, from Orissa to Cape Comorin, and the Nizam's Dominions, Ceylon, Burma, the Straits Settlements, &c.

THE MADRAS TIMES

WEEKLY AND OVERLAND EDITION.
For Weekly Subscribers, and for despatch to the United Kingdom, Russia, Germany, France, America, South Africa, Burma, the Straits Settlements, China, Japan, and Australia, the MADRAS TIMES (Weekly and Overland Edition) is the best weekly newspaper in Southern India. Post free £1 5s. per annum.

AGENTS IN LONDON FOR ADVERTISEMENTS, &c.:
Messrs. HENRY S. KING & Co., Cornhill.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete, and single Articles in condition equal to New at one-third original cost.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD.

E. WHISTLER,
11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND

BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.

Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S
The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach,
Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations,
Bilious Affections.

MAGNESIA
The Physician's Cure for Gout, Rheumatic Gout and Gravel; the safest and most gentle Medicine for Infants, Children, Delicate Females, and the Sickness of Pregnancy.

Sold Throughout the World.
N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The Times of India

OVERLAND WEEKLY EDITION.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year, including postage	£1 10s. 0d.
Half Year	16s. 0d.
Quarter	8s. 6d.
Per Copy	8d.

Re-posted from our London Office 1d. additional each Copy.

ADVERTISEMENTS WILL BE RECEIVED
At the "TIMES OF INDIA" Office, Bombay,
OR AT THE

LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Where all Orders from all parts of Great Britain and the Continent for the DAILY and WEEKLY Editions of the "TIMES OF INDIA" should be addressed.

Advertisement Rates on Application.

LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.

BLAND & SONS'
"EUOPLIA"
BALL AND SHOT GUN.

A WEAPON OF PRECISION

Shooting Conical bullets up to 100 yards with the accuracy of any rifle; and shot with the pattern and penetration of a shot gun.

In 12, 16 and 20 Bores. Weight of 12 Bore about 7lbs.

AS SUPPLIED TO

H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,

Whose Expedition to the North Pole

WAS FULLY EQUIPPED WITH ARMS
AND AMMUNITION BY THIS FIRM.

T. BLAND & SONS,

2, King William St., Strand, W.C.
(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)

Works:

41, 42, & 43, Whittall St., Birmingham.

ALL BUT NEW

OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,

for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of

LEWIS MOSES,

65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,

at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms and apparel purchased.

The Pioneer

(Established 1865).

This leading Indian paper has long held the acknowledged position of being in the very forefront of Indian journalism. Its circulation extends all over the Indian Empire, and is wider than that of any other two daily papers in the country. Subscription to Europe, America, and the Colonies, £6 16s. per annum, post free.

THE PIONEER MAIL

(Established 1874)

Is published weekly in time for the English Mail, and contains a summary of Indian news for Anglo-Indians in Europe.

Subscription to Europe, America, or the Colonies, £2 8s. per annum, post free.

For scale of charges for advertisements address—
GENERAL MANAGER,
PIONEER PRESS, ALLAHABAD, INDIA.
Or the London Office,
13A, COCKSPUR STREET, FALM MALL, S.W.

"Folkestone Telegraph and Review."

THE LEADING NEWSPAPER
AND ADVERTISING MEDIUM
OF FOLKESTONE & DISTRICT.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
PRICE ONE PENNY.

Replete with all local news. Bright and interesting articles on current topics, fashions, drama, and music. Advertising rates and specimen copy sent on application.

Address—WALTER BROWN, Manager,
"Folkestone Telegraph and Review,"
Offices: THE PARADE, FOLKESTONE.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, FALM MALL
S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.

ESTABLISHED 1803.

Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.

Paid-up Capital, £300,000.

Invested Funds over £1,500,000.

E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS

in the "ARMY & NAVY GAZETTE" will be sent on application to the Advertisement
Manager.
Offices: 3, YORK ST., LONDON, W.C.

RICHARD DICKESON AND COMPANY, WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND PROVISION IMPORTERS.

LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, Mansell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVER: Market Lane and Queen Street,
ALDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street. FLY-
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse. FEN-
BROKE DOCK: Tremeryck Street. GIBRAL-
TAR: City Mill Lane. CAPE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street. PORT ELIZABETH:
Lenkeits Warehouse, Rufane Vale. DURBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street. Agencies at
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c., &c.

Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire.
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price Lists
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Custom
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

OLD ARTIFICIAL TEETH BOUGHT.

Persons wishing to receive full value should apply to the manufacturing dentists,
Messrs. BROWNING.

If forwarded by post, value per return.

Chief Office: 133, OXFORD STREET (opposite
Berners Street), London.
Established 100 years.

ARMY ALTERATIONS.

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various
Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date.

SUBSCRIPTION—5s. 6d. per annum, post free.
One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.

ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE.
With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations.
BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer
Ashton-under-Lyne.

REVERSIONS AND LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities
and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the
EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST
SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand
Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage
Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES,

BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.

The Warehouses, having been built expressly
for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature
during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities.

JOHN HANES, Manager.

Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.

EPPS'S

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

COCOA

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

MOUSELL BROS.,

FURNITURE REMOVERS

AND STORERS,

Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, &c.

AND WALTHAM GREEN, FULHAM.

BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT

BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.

LEAMINGTON.—Windsor Street.

MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.

LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.

LIVERPOOL.—Bronte Street, Russell Street.

EXETER.—London Inn Square.

GLOUCESTER.—Depository, and Van and Wagon
Works, Commercial Road.

SECOND-HAND

UNIFORMS

BOUGHT AND SOLD.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UNIFORMS in all conditions at from one-fifth original cost, or sells the same on commission. Mufti clothing also purchased.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2132.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRICE 6D.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—	PAGE
A Good and Faithful Servant - - -	1157
A Cherished Illusion - - -	1157
The South African Situation - - -	1158
On a War Footing - - -	1169
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes - - -	1159
Army Personal - - -	1161
Army Foreign - - -	1162
Navy Notes - - -	1169
Navy Personal - - -	1171
Navy Foreign - - -	1172
Letters to the Editor—
Direct Commissions in the Army - - -	1162
Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund - - -	1163
Lord Wolseley's Retirement - - -	1164
Articles—
An Interesting Letter - - -	1160
The Decadent Army Corps - - -	1160
The Household Cavalry - - -	1160
War Summary - - -	1163
Press Views and Opinions on Army Matters -	1163
Pretoria As It Is - - -	1164
The Forces of the Smaller Colonies - - -	1166
Winter Training - - -	1172
Casualties in South Africa - - -	1173
The Gazettes—
Navy - - -	1174
Army - - -	1175
Regimental Intelligence - - -	1165
Reviews - - -	1167
The "Times" History of the War* - - -	1167
The Amir of Afghanistan - - -	1167
Autumns in Argyleshire - - -	1167
Obituary - - -	1164
Naval Intelligence - - -	1174

With this number is presented a Coloured Plate of the Forces of the Smaller Colonies, which brings to an end the Colonials; sets of 10 (including Egyptian and West India Regiments) price 5s. 3d. post free.

On January 5, 1900, will be issued a Coloured Plate of part of the BENGAL Forces, commencing the series of Types of the INDIAN ARMY.

A GOOD AND FAITHFUL SERVANT.

TO-DAY, December 1, 1900, Field-Marshal Viscount Wolseley, K.P., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., vacates the post of Commander-in-Chief and goes into retirement—not necessarily for good and all, for he is still comparatively young, with unimpaired faculties, and, despite unfounded rumours to the contrary, in excellent health. That he would readily, nay, eagerly, return to active employment whenever and in whatever capacity the Queen may think fit to command goes without saying; that he will be fit for any work and for years to come is equally true. But he will, for the moment, hold no office, and this will be the first gap in a distinguished career which has been continuous since March 12, 1852. How meritoriously that long space of nearly fifty years has been filled is too well known to need repetition. Lord Wolseley's rise from ensign to field-marshal has been his own doing, the work of his own hands. We live fast in these modern days and forget freely, but it would be rank injustice to overlook what the country owes to Wolseley's genius, what his great services and unceasing efforts have gained for it. From first to last he has been a good and faithful servant, unremitting in his desire to increase the efficiency, to raise the character of the Army by example and precept, and, where he has had the power, by definite and enlightened action.

There has been some tendency to overlook this of late, born principally of the public disappointment at recent misadventure which craved a scapegoat and fastened responsibility upon the most prominent official in our military hierarchy. It is still early in the day to take up Lord Wolseley's defence from such unfair and ungenerous innuendoes. The abundant rebutting evidence that undoubtedly exists cannot at present be brought into court. For this many lips must be unsealed which cannot well speak out, yet, as fully and authoritatively as the situation demands. Enough is, nevertheless, known, positively and certainly known, that we should not have entered upon the Boer struggle with such a plentiful lack of means had the Government listened betimes to the counsels, the warnings, the portentous statement of the true facts as they were patent to their principal, but never sufficiently esteemed, military adviser. The nation will surely be told some day how our political leaders refused to admit the reality or extent of the impending danger—the danger of making war, serious and protracted war, without adequate means. There would probably have been no war had the British arms at the Cape been raised to proper strength while negotiations were still proceeding. Had the army corps, which started in October, been despatched, as Lord Wolseley urged, in July, Mr. Kruger would have been less eager to try conclusions for supremacy in South Africa. It will be said, perhaps, that no such step was possible without calling up the Reserve, but this was just the emergency to be met by mobilisation. Even if we admit the force of that difficulty as committing the Government too soon to a forward policy, albeit the wiser and safer course, it would have still have been better to fill up Natal, as Lord Wolseley urged again and again, with a respectable field force at a much earlier date. As the crisis grew nearer and darker Lord Wolseley was instant in his entreaties to prepare. It was too late to replenish empty storehouses depleted by continuous cheeseparing, to add greatly to the regular establishment, but at least the supplementary services might be increased, provision made for the supply of horses and mules, the General Staff selected, and the whole force constituted on proper lines. On all these points Lord Wolseley spoke out persistently, and he made many more recommendations the wisdom of which was proved by their subsequent adoption. He was the first to suggest that the door should be opened to Volunteers, and long before the acceptance of the C.I.V.'s he was in favour of the despatch of our citizen soldiers, and their employment in the very forefront. Again, he early realised the substantial aid the Colonies could give, and was keenly anxious for the creation of colonial corps. It was not Lord Wolseley who made the notoriously inept reply, "unmounted men preferred," although it has been attempted to blame him for it, for no one knew better than he how essentially mobility would be needed in dealing with the Boers.

It is, perhaps, premature to emphasise these points, the force of which can never be fully realised until a complete and unquestionably accurate history of the war is written. It is our duty, however, to refer to them in common justice to Lord Wolseley, and to give effect to the wishes of our many correspondents, who feel that his great and conspicuous services are in danger of being minimised just now should be properly recognised. It is unnecessary to recall the early phases of his distinguished career, the personal prowess, the skilled leadership, the undoubted genius for war he ever exhibited in the field. All these are written large in the records of the time. Less is known of his administrative labours, the constant, often unobtrusive, efforts to improve the Army, to raise the standard of all ranks, to solve the ever-present and ever-difficult problem of maintaining the strength of a force dependent on voluntary enlistment. He did not invent short service, for that was the work of the classes which would furnish recruits on no other terms; but he was the first to press the principle for the acceptance of the then Secretary of State, Mr. Cardwell, to whose memory as a far-sighted, broad-minded reformer Lord Wolseley is ever loyal. But the value of the First Class Army Reserve, which was called into existence at the same time, has now been proved beyond all dispute, and this was mainly Lord Wolseley's handiwork. So also the elaborate scheme of mobilisation, which has met so successfully the first great test imposed upon it; this was projected by him, and carried out under his supervision by Sir Coleridge Grove, his most trusted and most gifted lieutenant. It would be well for the nation if now, when on the eve of new developments it could count as surely upon the aid of another Wolseley, of some one with the same ardent spirit, as single-minded, and as entirely devoted to the best interests of the country and the Service.

A CHERISHED ILLUSION.

THE modern iconoclast is just now rampant amongst us. We recognise him daily in our matutinal newspaper. He sniffs disaster and failure in every wind that blows. His methods are drastic, for his forte is destructiveness, leaving constructiveness to inferior mortals. It is he who would without delay sweep away the Augean stables in Pall Mall; he would abolish Sandhurst, and pass all officers through the Militia; and he would shut up, as the abode of effete, the Staff College, because one of its former graduates have met with disaster in South Africa. In the narrow purview of this modern reformer—who is not a soldier but the amateur military expert—our whole Army system is rotten to the core, and should be pulled down, the illusion being fondly cherished that out of the chaos thus created a brand new and perfect system would arise, by some spontaneous process of evolution, like the phoenix, from its ashes.

There never was a time when the Army needed clear heads and strong wills at the helm more than it does at present, for it is entering on a crisis the issue of which must determine its fate, for good or for evil, for many days to come. We may say at once that what the Army needs is not reconstruction but progressive development. As the Empire expands so must the military forces of the Crown. What they have long suffered from has not been rottenness within, but the effects of an inelastic policy, the baneful fruit of party government. To save it from the continued dry-rot which is the direct result of political niggardliness, the Army, in the fullest meaning of the word, requires that its chiefs at the War Office shall have more voice in its organisation and government, and that the civilian element shall be relegated to the second place. Three desiderata there are at present above all others for the Imperial land forces of Greater Britain, namely, adequate numbers of all arms, both for home defence and to meet the sudden emergency of a great war, efficient training, and up-to-date armament and equipment.

As it is the proverbial bad carpenter who complains of his tools, so it may be taken that outcries against our military institutions, the growth of many years and of many minds, are tokens of vacuity of mind. The War Office is, and must be, composed partly of a military staff changing periodically, and partly of permanent officials who are of necessity civilians. Were it not so, and the civil element abolished, the military staff must either become permanent to the detriment of the Service, or the traditions of the War Office must be sacrificed, and with them regularity of working and routine. But the relative numbers of these two classes may, and probably does, require readjustment to give the military side its proper preponderance, and decentralisation would doubtless bring about reduction in the permanent establishment. To inveigh against Sandhurst, because many who have gone straight from the Militia have done well in the war is puerile. Had they gone through Sandhurst, we do not say they would have done better, but it is safe to suppose that they would have gone to their field-work technically better instructed. To cry down the Staff College is equally illogical. That useful institution was not established to turn out embryo generals. No human institution can do that. It was set up to instruct in technical and special work, young officers who aspire to hold appointments on the general staff. In that it has, in the main, succeeded. At the same time, it is fairly debatable whether entrance by competitive examination or by careful selection and practical tests be best; whether physical proficiency should not have weight in determining entrance; whether officers should not, if failing at practical tests early in their course, be more promptly returned to their regiments; and whether the course at the College should not more closely resemble actual staff duties, with much more practical work.

It will be curious to watch the action of the new régime in dealing with the problems before it. We hear on good authority that Lord Roberts is on the eve of returning to England, and his advent is eagerly expected by no one more anxiously than by Mr. Brodrick. The new Secretary of State for War is on the brink of a serious dilemma; he has parted a little readily with the man who might have helped him, and must for the moment lean on the acting and temporary official he finds at his elbow. It is difficult to believe that Sir Evelyn Wood would be competent to solve the most urgent questions pending, even if he had the full powers that are seldom given to a locum tenens. The sooner Lord Roberts appears upon the scene the better.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN SITUATION.

THE country has had two very serious shocks this week. One was the discovery of another dastardly plot against the life of Lord Roberts at Johannesburg. The disquieting fact was reported to the War Office by the Commander-in-Chief himself, in a despatch of characteristic brevity. Ten men, foreigners and anarchists, have been arrested for complicity in the intended crime, which was of a diabolical nature, the intention of the conspirators having been to explode a dynamite bomb on the 18th ult. during Divine service in the church attended by Lord Roberts. For a considerable time Johannesburg has enjoyed the unenviable notoriety of attracting the adventurers and doubtful characters of the world, and so long as affairs in South Africa continue in their present unsettled state such men will constitute a danger to be reckoned with. This projected crime, providentially averted, is another sign of the distinctly lower level to which the struggle now desolating the country has sunk. The Boers may advance as an excuse that this new plot against Lord Roberts was the conception of foreigners. We should be prompt to accord them such credit as may be their due in connection with this particular incident, but we cannot shut our eyes to the unpleasant fact that Lord Roberts has on more occasions than one reported distinct cases of deliberate murder committed by the Boers in the field. Even so recently as Monday he informed the War Office that Lieut. Neumeyer, of the Constabulary, when unarmed, was brutally murdered by Boers in the south-east of the Orange River Colony. Such criminal acts, even more than acts of treachery, may have most baneful consequences, as tending to exasperate our men and to lead to deeds of reprisals, which all good soldiers would deplore and condemn.

The second shock is suggestive of the worst periods of the war, when "regrettable incidents," the loss of places, the surrender of troops, and other humiliations were by no means infrequent. Now, once again, the enterprising De Wet has scored a triumph after his own peculiar fashion. With the genius of the true soldier, he has contrived to concentrate superior against inferior numbers, and, bringing a force of 2,500 against a garrison of not a fifth his strength, has compelled it to lay down its arms. The capture of Dewetsdorp on the 23rd is another, and probably not the latest success to his credit. We have no further knowledge of the facts than that the strength of the garrison was some 400, and that the casualties had been severe. A later report, however, states that De Wet had set all his prisoners free, and was heading in all haste to the south or south-west, being hotly pursued by General Charles Knox's command. Knox had already reoccupied Dewetsdorp, and it may fairly be said that the incident, however painful, is closed. If only he has been able to bring De Wet to action—a somewhat problematical assumption—the tables may yet be turned. It seems certain that De Wet's aim was to join forces with Commandant Hertzog somewhere between Fauresmith and the Orange River, but Settle's fine fight at Luckoff has disposed very summarily of Hertzog.

The general disposition of our active columns, according to recent reports, may be briefly outlined as follows:—General Charles Knox moving south towards the Orange River in pursuit of De Wet; General Settle with Sir C. Parsons not far from Fauresmith and lending a hand to Knox. General Smith-Dorrien on the 20th ult. had returned to Belfast from Dulstroom. Colonels Plumer and Hickman had then arrived at Pretoria from Rustenburg, and Colonel Plumer has since successfully fought the enemy near De Wagen Drift. General Paget has moved out from Pretoria to place garrisons at Rietfontein and Mosilikatze's Nek. All garrisons in the neighbourhood of the capital are being reinforced. General French has been clearing the approaches to Johannesburg of "snipers." General Clements, after shelling a laager near Rekopoot, in spite of the opposition of Delarey, reached Krugersdorp on Monday, with cattle and prisoners. Of Lord Methuen there has been no recent news, but Colonel Douglas was reported to be near Klerksdorp, General Hart to be moving along the Gatsrand, General Wynne to be near Heidelberg, and Colonel Bewicke-Copley to have been smartly engaged near Greylingstad. Passing into the Orange River Colony, we find Colonel White guarding the western border; General Bruce-Hamilton, from Kroonstad, searching the country round Lindley, Heilbron, and Frankfort; Colonel De Lisle near Kroonstad; and General Boyes, of Sir A. Rundle's force, at Harrismith, after sweeping the colony towards Vrede and Reitz. General Campbell, on the road from Harrismith to Bethlehem, had a smart engagement on the 23rd ult.

We have no wish to be pessimistic. The return of peace and prosperity in South Africa is assuredly only a matter of time, but the fact must not be blinked that when the Commander-in-Chief returns to England abundant work will remain for Lord Kitchener to accomplish before the new colonies can be said to enjoy a state of peace. Meanwhile, the general situation is not satisfactory, and were sedition again to raise its head dangerously south of the Orange River it might become very decidedly worse. By the prowess of our troops, and the able strategy of our generals, we have conquered and annexed the Boer Republics, but their subjugation is yet far from complete. The remnants of the beaten Boer armies, aggregating, it is said, some 12,000 men, still keep the field in bands varying from, say, 50 to 1,000 strong. These have deliberately adopted guerilla tactics in order to harass the British, and to maintain the semblance of organised resistance in the hope thereby of supporting the efforts of Mr. Kruger in Europe. Much success has undoubtedly attended this plan of campaign, since the Boer leaders have been thus enabled to keep together sufficient numbers, and to make their presence sufficiently formidable to establish a claim to be still accorded the status of belligerents.

Over and above the Dewetsdorp affair, minor incidents continue to be abundant in all quarters. These, as a rule, result in the dispersal of the enemy, who, when retiring, leave in our hands cattle, horses, foodstuffs, and a few prisoners. As the few prisoners taken are replaced by commandeering, and the lost animals and stores by looting the farms of loyal men, no very serious injury is done to the guerilla bands. Solongasammunition—now the very breath of life to the Boers—holds out, the enemy will indefinitely prolong a struggle which is rapidly desolating the unhappy country. Much ammunition is believed to have been buried. For this a thorough search should be made, while at the same time illicit supplies through the various ports should be rigorously barred. Well-founded suspicion has recently fallen on both Lorenzo Marques and Port Elizabeth as being bases of supply.

Army Notes.

A distinguished veteran writes us as follows: "I cannot join in the chorus of approval raised the London Press for the liberal arson of the property in anticipation of the final settlement of differences between Briton and Boer. I remember how severely Lord Clyde reprimanded Sir Hope Grant for burning an Oudh age whence some of his men had been shot, 'a monstrous folly, sir,' cried Lord Clyde. 'Don't you see you drive every man in the place into the budmashes when you burn down his in?' Lecky, in his volume on 1798, attributes much of the rebellion in some counties to destruction of houses by the soldiery—'it is a fact, and fencibles, the very sort of lads shener will have under him.'"

That seems to be a very excellent move has been made at Hythe. On the reopening of the establishment in January next the occasion will be used to put the whole body of Sandhurst cadets through musketry instruction. Some 250 embryos will thus obtain practical knowledge in the most important branch of military training, the very outset of their careers. They would receive their musketry individually and as a matter of course, but they will now be grounded quite thoroughly in the best methods of imparting instruction.

All are not equally gifted as teachers, this is a very much needed quality in regimental officers of the future. Musketry instruction has not been neglected greatly, it has been carried on in a very wooden conventional fashion. There is the great difficulty in getting hold of the men to train, for home battalions are always so weak their training must perforce be skimmed or perfunctory. The soldier, to become a marksman, must be treated before everything the most careful treatment individually. The proper use of sights, the use of fire, and so forth, can only be inculcated slowly and with infinite pains. Every officer who passes on to a commission will be a far more useful officer if he can boast of the Hythe certificate.

Printed an article on November 17, urging the authorities to adopt the plan of furnishing officers' quarters if only partially. It is satisfactory to hear that steps are being taken to grant this much needed boon. Officers have been invited from various large contractors for contracts to supply goods. A quantity of furniture that will be given is not specified, but it will include at least the chest of drawers, washstand, and so on. This saving in hired or other transport at regimental move will, it is calculated, be as much as a set-off or reduction of the initial Millman's Magazine has given us of late a series of most excellent papers on military subjects. In the current number a regimental officer writes upon the "Reservist in War," and his verdict in such favourable terms that it does not do better than call general attention to the opinions he formed on personal experience. He frankly admits that before the mobilisation he was sceptical as to the value of the Reservist, but that he would prove weak in discipline, shot, and from being essentially an old soldier was likely to know too much and set a bad example to his younger comrades. He tells us that he was entirely wrong, that the Reservist has proved a first-class soldier, a fine shot, foremost in the fight, steady and well drilled in camp and quarters. It is impossible to rate his pluck and steadiness under the most severe trials. Throughout the terrible campaign on the Tugela the presence of a large number of old soldiers in the ranks was of inestimable value in strengthening and stiffening the ranks. Although they were slow to get into the fire, their individual performance was always good, and it is now proved beyond evidence that when met on equal terms the Reservists showed a decided superiority over the regulars. The only qualification of this high opinion is as regards the Reservist non-commissioned officer, whom our authority believes to be inferior to the rank and file, and he gives two reasons. First, that the best sergeants are engaged and so do not pass into the Reserve at all; next that the Reservists congregate together in civil life, and the former private thus becomes a little too familiar with the former non-commissioned officer. Nevertheless, the writer is anxious to do justice to many brilliant exceptions whose good qualities were brought out by the stress of severe circumstances. At a time like the present, when the whole question of short service is so much in the air, it is satisfactory to know that not only do the men cheerfully come forward on mobilisation, but that they fall into their places immediately as steady, stalwart, well-trained soldiers.

On one other matter, that of the spirit which animated the Reservist when recalled to the colours, we cannot do better than quote this thoughtful and appreciative authority at length:—

"There is," he writes, "one more point concerning the Reservist, and the British soldier generally, on which I think a few words may well be said. What, does the reader suppose, is the motive which impels him whom he is pleased to speak of in his kindest mood as 'an absent-minded beggar,' to lay down his life in his quiet, matter-of-fact way, for the country and Queen about whom he seldom speaks in enthusiastic terms? Is it simply from blind discipline, as some are found to say? No, a thousand times no! I who write have lived among soldiers since my boyhood, and I tell those who do not know it that the English soldier, like nine-tenths of the class from which he springs, is at heart as truly a patriot as Horatius or Sir Richard Grenville. He does not howl out his devotion to his country with the noisy fervour whose life is short as the 'light fire in the veins of a boy.' Happily the national shyness, or pride, keeps him very silent on the subject of his feelings; and long may it be so. Yet, in the intimacy for which war sometimes gives opportunity, I have sounded the thoughts of many men, and never have I failed to find a clear comprehension of the issues at stake, and a quiet but very resolute conviction that, cost what it might, the struggle in South Africa must be persisted in until England has her own again."

The Times of India deplores the decline of the Indian Medical Service, due, our contemporary feels sure, to the decreasing attractiveness of the Service. The deadlock produced in the R.A.M.C. by the War Office plan of ignoring medical grievances ought to be a lesson to the Indian Government to fix its relations with the medical profession on a basis of sound business and good feeling; and good feeling can scarcely be engendered when, year by year, desirable appointments and allowances become scarcer, when experiments are made in every direction to determine how much a service can endure. It may seem a little thing, involving more a matter of "sentiment" than money, when officers in Bombay and Madras are told that, for purposes of interference, they belong to the Indian Medical Service, but, for purposes of promotion, they are and must remain provincial men, and are never to raise their eyes so high as to aspire to be the head of the Indian Medical Service. That honour is to be henceforth and forever the peculiar appanage of Bengal. It was humiliating enough to lower the prestige of the Surgeons-General in Bombay and Madras by converting what had always been independent charges into subordinate ones, and by accentuating this inferiority in abolishing the secretaries who added dignity to the rank. But this personal degradation is not to be compared with the affront directed at the entire body of medical officers in Bombay and Madras across whose commissions is now written: "Abandon all hope of ever being the head of your own department."

The November Journal of the Royal United Service Institution contains a brief, but exceedingly interesting, paper by Major E. A. Altham, late A.A.G. for Intelligence of the Natal Field Force, on the "Ladysmith Pigeon Post." Of the importance of this means of communication in the field there can be no question. That Sir George White's Pigeon Department was so successfully managed was entirely due to the patriotism of Durban pigeon-owners, who made a great sacrifice in giving up nearly 100 birds—many of them of great value—to the service of our field army. An expert of the Durban Homing Society was shut up in Ladysmith, and his services were invaluable. Some of the birds under his care, however, were quite untrained, but, so far as the limited area available permitted, their training was kept up, with a view to their use after the siege, for cavalry reconnaissances, as has been recently done at the French manoeuvres. The Ladysmith messages were written in ink on special paper, and were as a rule inserted under a rubber ring round the bird's leg and secured by a silk thread; some messages, however, were placed in a quill, attached to the tail feathers. It is feared that this method was not known at Durban, and some messages were thereby lost. "A cipher was usually employed; but an interesting exception was the message of congratulation sent by Sir George White, in the name of the garrison, to the Prince of Wales, on H.R.H.'s birthday, which was further celebrated by the discharge of 21 guns from the Naval battery into the Boer lines."

"A unique and entirely successful experiment was the transmission of two maps by pigeon post, a feat which has not probably been attempted either in peace or war. . . . The originals were photographed to a very small size, the scale itself being included in the photograph. The photograph was, however, of too great weight to entrust to one pigeon, and was, therefore, cut in half, each half being carried by one bird."

Both maps arrived safely. . . . One possible advantage of pigeons during a siege was not tested at Ladysmith—they were not made into pie, although the untrained birds increased during the four months to nearly 200 in number. . . . The experience of the siege, says the writer in conclusion, warrants the belief that, with systematic training, results of much value will be obtained from military pigeon lofts, and the establishment now being started at Aldershot indicates that the matter is being seriously taken up by the military authorities."

America is one of the countries in which the subject of motor-cars for military purposes is being kept well to the front. Following the recently issued report of General Miles of the U.S. Army, comes the news that a special steam-car has been offered, free of expense, to the U.S. War Department, by Mr. John Briebe Walker, the president of a concern known as the Mobile Company of America. Mr. Walker guarantees that the vehicle in question will carry 1,000 rounds of ammunition, four riflemen, four rifles, two intrenching shovels, food for the four men sufficient for three days, four pairs of blankets, two rubber shelters, reaching down from the sides of the car, and sufficient fuel for a run of 200 miles. The guarantee further provides that the car shall be able to travel 100 miles between sunrise and sunset, over average American country roads or even the unbroken prairies of Colorado. It is evident from the scope of the guarantee that Mr. Walker holds optimistical views with regard to the capabilities of this motor-car; it is not yet stated, however, whether the American Minister has accepted the offer.

The distances covered by Kelly-Kenny's 6th Division from Enslin to Bloemfontein are worth publishing, as they are worthy to take their place against the best record of good marches:—

Feb. 12, Enslin to Randam, 6 a.m. to 1 p.m., 10½ miles.

Feb. 13, Randam to Watervald, 5 a.m. to 11 a.m., 10 miles.

Feb. 14, Watervald to Wegdrai, 1 a.m. to 11 a.m., 10 miles; Wegdrai to Klipdrift, 5 p.m. to 12.30 a.m. (15th), 12 miles; including detour, 27 miles, in 24 hours.

Feb. 16, Klipdrift to Brandvallei, 5 a.m. to 12 noon (17th); Feb. 17, Klipdrift to Brandvallei, 3 a.m. to 12.30 p.m., 11 miles; 18th Brigade engaged with enemy's rearguard. 18th Brigade followed.

Feb. 17, Brandvallei to Paardeberg, 5 p.m. to 9.30 a.m., 5 miles.

Feb. 18, Paardeberg to Boer Laager, 3 a.m. to 7 a.m., 2 miles. Battle of Paardeberg.

March 1, Boer Laager to Oosfontein, 4 miles.

March 7, Oosfontein to Poplar Grove, 3.30 a.m. to 7 p.m., 22 miles; including detour. Drove enemy from his position.

March 8, Poplar Grove to Roodeport (Farm), 12 noon to 4.30 p.m., 7 miles.

March 10, Roodeport to Driefontein, 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., 10 miles. Battle of Driefontein.

March 11, Driefontein to Kaal's Spruit, 5.30 a.m. to 3 p.m., 14 miles.

March 12, Kaal's Spruit to Venter's Vallei, 5.30 a.m. to 2.30 p.m., 12½ miles.

March 13, Venter's Vallei to Brand Kop, 3 p.m. to 1 a.m. (14th), 13½ miles.

March 14, Brand Kop to Bloemfontein, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., 6 miles.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

The following extracts from a letter of a general officer in South Africa may afford our readers some clearer conception of the unpleasantness and wearing anxiety that surrounds the subordinate commanders in this present vexatious Boer warfare. After adverting to a threatened raid on the Bloemfontein-Kroonstadt railway, which he had checked by prompt measures, and especially by the use of field guns, he goes on:—

"Next day I got a telegram from Bloemfontein to say they were going to cross the line between Brandfort and Karree and that it was imperative to stop them, so I ordered Vet River—my next station south—to have the half batn. Seaforths ready to entrain and 100 details; told Brandfort to have two 15prs. and two pom-poms ready at the station with all their mounted men; commandeered an engine which I attached to trucks luckily at Smaldeel, sent on the two 9f. guns at once, and proceeded by train. On arrival at Brandfort at about 9 p.m. I marched to a position I had selected when there arriving about 1 a.m. It was a pretty dark night and very cold, the guides were useless, and had I not known the road well, as did my A.D.C., I should have hesitated to do a night march. On arrival we took up a position and waited in the cold—I had nothing but a thin waterproof. The enemy declined to come on, so at 6 a.m. we returned to Brandfort, arriving about nine pretty tired. I then wired to Bloemfontein that I proposed returning at once to Smaldeel, the reply was: 'Stay where you are.' Half an hour afterwards a clear line wire said: 'Proceed at once with your guns to Smaldeel, the enemy is crossing between Smaldeel and Winburg.' So I sent the guns on, entrained with all possible speed, and arrived at Smaldeel about 5 p.m., and ascertained that the enemy had crossed at 9.30 a.m., so I was a bit late. This was annoying, as had the nine field guns remained at Smaldeel, they could have annoyed the enemy considerably when fleeing from Macdonald. However, I believe we headed back the party which meant crossing near Brandfort. Then I was wired at Smaldeel to come with my staff at once to Bloemfontein, but to inquire into a case of farm burning at Brandfort on the way. I stopped at Brandfort for this, and on the evening of the next I reached Bloemfontein. That evening and next day I discussed matters with Kelly-Kenny, and was ordered to go down the line to Norval's Pont, Bethulie, &c., and inspect the posts and their defences. I was on the point of starting when I got a message to say I was to take command of a column consisting of four guns, 200 mounted infantry, and three companies, and escort 53 waggons here, to start at 12 noon. We did not get away till three, for it was an awful day, a violent dust storm in progress, and I did not enjoy my wait a little bit, nor the march—in fact, we only did seven miles. Again next day my march was delayed by a report brought in by a M. I. scout from the right, who said he had been fired at, and that there were some 50 Boers commandeering on a farm two or three miles west. I sent a party of M. I. under an officer to verify this, but he failed to find any trace of them; also my guns were ready for action on a ridge. This caused a delay of two and a-half hours, which annoyed me. On reaching my halting-place I found out that Dewetsdorp was occupied by our troops. At midnight a despatch came from K.-K. (Lord Kitchener) ordering me to proceed as quickly as possible with all my mounted troops, two guns, and one company of infantry to Bokpoort, 16 miles due east of Dewetsdorp (it was at least 27 from where I was, and more than 20 from Dewetsdorp), and leave the rest of my column to garrison this place. I got here about eight, and arranged to start at 10, but at 9.30 my scouts on the west were fired on, and I received a report from an officer of M. I. that he located some 50 Boers on Berkshire Hills, our old position when we took this place months ago. In spite of my orders, I did not feel justified in leaving an unknown force of the enemy hanging about here without finding out more of their numbers, &c. Eventually I got off at 1 p.m., and when I had marched some three miles a mounted messenger pursued me with a telegram from K.-K., saying Lord R. did not approve of my proceeding east, and I was to return here. Thus the morning's delay was useful rather than otherwise, and as three of my waggons had already broken down, I was rather pleased to come back. To-day my patrols have had a brush with the enemy, with the result that I have one horse wounded."

Is it too much to infer that had this force been suffered to continue its march on Dewetsdorp and beyond, the surrender of that ill-fated garrison, reported yesterday, might have been avoided?

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1177.

BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1179.

EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1179.

THE DECADENT ARMY CORPS.

[By a MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.]

The army corps system is threatened with extinction before it has a chance of vindicating its existence for service beyond the seas, and in the light of this undoubted fact it is worth while to quote a paragraph from a modern treatise on the art of war written for British officers. This extract runs thus:—"The substitution of nations in arms for the professional soldier of former days increases so largely the size of modern armies that a divisional system is no longer possible." And in view of what has occurred in South Africa, when Lord Wolseley's almost perfect system broke in pieces, not through any fault of the paper organisation, but owing to the inexorable logic of facts, one is bound to admit that there is after all a great deal to be said in favour of a more elastic organisation of divisions, pure and simple, mixed divisions and mixed brigades of cavalry, horse artillery, and mounted rifles; and the strangest feature in the history of the army corps system for service abroad is, that as war succeeded war since and including the struggle in the Crimea, we have invariably dispensed with an army corps—and have got on very well without it. In 1882 we sent a field force, approaching in strength that of the second largest unit of modern armies, but it never became an army corps in the sense that the troops were picked up here and there, and never paraded on mobilisation as such until they joined issue with the Egyptian rebels on the road to Tel-el-Kebir. In fact, the field force in Egypt was selected with a view to the more or less unorthodox work which they had to do, and if the South African armies had been made up with regard to the mobility and heterodoxy of the Boers, we might have come out "on top" a good deal earlier than has proved to be the case.

But the reason for the now almost discredited army corps system is sufficiently obvious and hinges upon the political alliances, which at one time were so favourably regarded in this country. After the Russo-Turkish war and Admiral Hornby's dash for the Bosphorus, it was pointed out by more than one military writer how potent a factor would a British army corps be in conjunction with the Fleet, if it could be "dumped" down, complete in every respect, at any objective of British enterprise. But this view was based upon an isolated instance of the exhaustion which may overtake a great and unwieldy empire such as Russia, whose strength, frittered away in the struggle with the infidel Turk, could undoubtedly have been thrown back in disorder by a single British army corps based upon the fleet, even when the Cossacks of the advanced guard were within striking distance of Constantinople.

Since those days the colonial expansion of the Empire has dealt a knock-down blow to the legend of European enterprises, with or without allies, while our political isolation intensifies the sentiment of dependence upon the fleet, should we be called upon to take sides in a European conflict. At the same time, while that form of army corps legend is dead, there is no doubt at all in most soldiers' minds that we ought still to train our generals in the handling of large bodies of troops, or else we shall fail to live up to the prestige of our earlier military history. For although army corps were designed for national armies with land frontiers, we ought to be able to weld together our divisions at short notice for combined action beyond the seas, and the lesson of the late war has not been properly applied, if some machinery is not at once evolved to ensure both the independence of the divisions and the coherence of larger expeditionary forces with a specific object in view.

And while it is not particularly profitable to indulge in speculations as to why and how the fact did not long ago strike the military authorities that an insular Power can hardly ever hope to ship the units of an army corps simultaneously to a distant shore, it is at least satisfactory to note the awakening of the nation and of the Army to the fact that the British land forces necessarily form a service of detachments, while the Staff needs a training which the College at Camberley can only begin, but which must be perfected by soldiering in all colonies and in all climates. India alone requires mobile army corps, the home defence army being necessarily tied to the littoral and the strategic pivots of the capital and the fleet. These are matters on which there can be no two opinions, but it has taken an astonishingly long time to arrive at the conclusions forced upon us by our colonial expansion and our costly little wars. Among these in history the Boer rebellion will loom as Titanic a figure as the memory of Waterloo in its effect upon national character and its consequences to the Empire.

THE HOUSEHOLD CAVALRY.

The return of the Composite Regiment of the Household Cavalry is a fitting opportunity for paying a full tribute to the services performed by these fine troops in South Africa. Some doubts were expressed at the time of their despatch as to their fitness for the campaign then in progress. Their weight and equipment, it was thought, might detract from their value by reducing their mobility and increasing the burden on their horses. Care was taken to select no man who weighed more than twelve stone, and, so far as it was possible, they were mounted on specially-chosen weight-carriers. The result has been that they have nobly taken their share of the work in hand, and have met with unqualified praise from their various commanders in the field. No one appreciated the "heavies" more than General Broadwood, an excellent judge of quality, and it is his opinion that they were ideal troops.

They were constantly engaged from the time of their arrival out to the end of the larger operations. French greatly trusted them in the fighting round Colesberg, when they worked chiefly under Colonel Porter, of the Carabineers, who acted as brigadier. After that they formed part of the strong cavalry force which French was gradually concentrating on the Modder, preparatory to his famous ride to relieve Kimberley. They took part in the demonstration on Koodoosdrift, which was a preliminary to the great main advance. After Kimberley they promptly joined in answering the call made upon French and his exhausted horsemen to head off the now fugitive Cronje and make the investing cordon complete. The next eventful occasion on which they were seriously engaged was in the reconnaissance conducted by Broadwood towards Thaba N'chu to the far east of Bloemfontein, which ended the unfortunate affair of Koon Spruit or Sanna's Post. It was generally understood that our cavalry on that dread day were too utterly exhausted, both men and horses, the latter especially, to take a prominent share in that action and that they drew off under cover of the mounted infantry. But never a word that is credible has as yet been advanced which could justify the charges brought against them so ungenerously by Lord Rosslyn.

When Lord Roberts began his advance from Bloemfontein the Household Cavalry were with Ian Hamilton, forming part of the cavalry brigade under Broadwood which accompanied the mounted infantry division. Ian Hamilton, who has found a fluent historian in Mr. Winston Churchill, was continuously employed and for ever engaged in fighting and marching, at first on the right flank of Lord Roberts and then on the left, having crossed the line of advance to take the lead in clearing the way for the occupation of Johannesburg. A couple of fine achievements may be mentioned here more in detail. The first was the action of Welcome Farm, between Bloemfontein and Kroonstadt, on May 5, when General Broadwood, with two squadrons of Household Cavalry and two of the 10th Hussars, seized a ridge on which a considerable Boer force was rapidly being concentrated. It was a brief but brilliant affair, in which the cavalry chiefly suffered, and Lieut. Rose, of the Royal Horse Guards, lost his life. This young officer was already highly distinguished, having served through the Tirah Campaign as a volunteer, and afterwards on the personal staff of Sir William Penn Symons, and yet again on the West Coast of Africa.

The second occurred in the critical period of the fight on Diamond Hill, June 12, when Broadwood ordered the Household Cavalry to clear out kraal and several grassy ridges strongly held by the Boers, who were pouring in a dangerous enfilading fire on his right flank. The men were about to dismount and use their carbines, when the General desired them to charge with the sword, which they did with conspicuous success.

Army Personal.

Her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales have forwarded their usual donations of £150 and £21 respectively to the National Artillery Association.

All the casualties caused by the Boer War have not occurred at the front. There has been but little appreciation of the severe strain imposed upon the staff in Pall Mall, both civil and military, during the last year and a half. Throughout the whole of this most anxious period every department and branch in the War Office has been working double tides. The pressure has been unprecedented, and has called for almost superhuman efforts to cope with the business. There has been no shirking it; every official, high and low, from the Secretary of State and Commander-in-Chief to the most junior clerk, has laboured strenuously and unceasingly with the immense amount to be done. All without exception have attended early and late, the regular official hours have been constantly exceeded; it has been a common practice to work late in the night, and many zealous men have sacrificed their Sundays as well. As to leave, the ordinary established leave, it has never been asked for, and all hands have ground steadily on without a day's relaxation or relief. These are facts that deserve to be put prominently forward, and especially now, when there is such a marked tendency to depreciate the War Office, its organization, methods, staff, and all appertaining to it. Never in our whole history has a great body of earnest, indefatigable public servants been more unfairly and more ungenerously assailed.

Labour so severe and so long protracted as that which has fallen upon the War Office has, of course, exacted its penalty in impaired health, even in death. At the beginning of the year Sir Henry Brackenbury broke down absolutely for a time, but he has since happily, and to the advantage of the State, been restored to full vigour. In another department, that of the Military Secretary, where the pressure of work has been extreme, the breakdowns have been serious. Now Sir Coleridge Grove has lost two most trusted assistants. One has been struck down by paralysis, the other, Mr. F. E. Vandeleur, has just died. He was the senior clerk, who had long conducted with admirable tact and efficiency the onerous duties that appertain to first appointments in the Army, the issue of commissions, and the management of the reserve of officers. Mr. Vandeleur belonged in the first instance to the Horse Guards' civil staff and joined the Commander-in-Chief's office as a junior clerk in 1866, but came over to Pall-mall with the rest on the amalgamation of the two offices. He will be greatly missed and regretted.

Sir Redvers Buller must surely be growing satiated with the plaudits of his admiring friends. After a triumphal progress through his native Devonshire he is once more in London, appearing constantly in public, always heartily received, and always subjected to floods of gushing, almost exaggerated encomium. That a man who is naturally modest and retiring should delight in such continued demonstrations is hardly possible, and after the first proud acknowledgment that his services had been sufficiently appreciated he would probably have preferred to retire into the background. It cannot surely be pleasant to be told to his face, as Captain Hedworth Lambton did a day or two ago, that "Buller is a splendid man," and that this was "the verdict of every man, woman and child who was old enough to look at the papers." We need not give too much weight to after-dinner speaking, and we will do Sir Redvers the justice to say that in his replies he invariably passes on the praise to the men he commanded. But it is time to protest in his own best interests against the excessive laudation that is being poured upon him, and to urge him, himself, to reduce his public appearances, so far as he possibly can, or, if his many engagements prevent this, to be a little more reticent and self-contained. His popularity is undoubted, and his many fine qualities are fully appreciated, but, after all, it is easy to push hero worship too far.

Our readers will read the following from Major-General Hutton, C.B., A.D.C., lately commanding the mounted infantry under General Ian Hamilton, with interest and satisfaction:—

"Pretoria, October 8, 1900.
"The force under the command of Major-General E. T. H. Hutton, (C.B., A.D.C.) to the Queen, is broken up in consequence of the conclusion of operations in the Eland's Valley, eastern Transvaal, from the 8th inst., and upon the (approaching) conclusion of active hostilities in South Africa. Major-General Hutton, upon relinquishing the command of the force placed under his orders, desires to convey to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the various units who have served under his command during the campaign his sincere and hearty congratulations upon the success that, under Providence, has attended their efforts throughout the operations in which they have been engaged. The units of Imperial troops selected for service with the mounted infantry, and those of Colonial mounted troops representative of Canada, of the six colonies of Australia, and of New Zealand, have alike distinguished themselves by their steadiness under fire, by their gallantry in the field, and by their uniform good conduct in camp. In the latter connection it is a subject of the greatest satisfaction to note that since the formation of the 1st Mounted Infantry Brigade on April 7 last, there has been an almost entire absence of military crime. The mutual sympathy, admiration, and good-will which have been so conspicuous between the Imperial and Colonial troops comprising his command must, in the Major-General's opinion, be necessarily conducive to that unity and solidarity of feeling which is so important and essential a factor in the success of the Army of the British Empire. The Major-General desires especially to record his appreciation and thanks for the excellent services rendered by all members of the staff connected with his force, both Imperial and Colonial, but especially to Lieut.-Col. Martyr, D.S.O., Chief Staff Officer, and to those of his Headquarter Staff."

Colonel the Hon. F. W. Stopford, C.B., who is to be chief staff officer and A.A.G. to General Buller on his resuming the command of the troops at Aldershot in January, has acted as military secretary to Sir Redvers throughout the Natal campaign. He entered the Service as ensign in the Grenadier Guards in 1871, and is a Staff College graduate (1885). From August, 1877, to 1881 he served as adjutant, he became captain in 1884, major by brevet in 1885, major in 1890, lieutenant-colonel in 1894, colonel by brevet in September, 1897, and was then for a month on half-pay, until he reached substantive rank. Colonel Stopford has seen much active service. In the Egyptian war of 1882 he was A.D.C. to Sir John Adye, chief of the staff (mentioned in despatches, medal), and in the Soudan (1884-5) he acted as A.D.C. to Major-General Sir Lyon Fremantle (again mentioned in despatches, clasp, brevet majority). When the Ashanti expedition was despatched in 1895, Colonel Stopford was appointed A.A.G., and it was for his services in this post that he received his brevet colonelcy. His other staff services have been as brigade-major at Aldershot from 1886 to 1889, D.A.A.G. headquarters of Army from 1892 to 1894, D.A.A.G. at Aldershot 1894 to 1897, A.A.G. headquarters of Army, October, 1897, to October, 1899, when he left for Natal. His C.B. dates from 1898.

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION. SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:

LIFE. { War Risks,
World-Wide.
ACCIDENTS &
DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence
Abroad.
BURGLARY, &c.

Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch.

The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.

Special Quotations for Messes.
Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums.
Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.
Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT

Colonel E. R. Courtenay, who has been chosen for the post of A.A.G. in the North-Western District, has seen considerable war service. He joined the 25th Foot in August, 1873, as a sub-lieut., and in October of that year exchanged into the 20th Hussars as a lieut. In 1879 he served in the Zulu campaign, and as staff officer to mounted troops of the 1st Division, he was present at the action at Inyezane, the relief of Eshowe, and the battle of Ginginhlovo, where his horse was shot under him. For these services he was mentioned in despatches, and received the medal with clasp. From 1881 to 1884 Colonel Courtenay was adjutant of the 20th Hussars, and in the latter year saw further active service in the Soudan. He accompanied the Desert Column from Gubat to Korti, was present at the attack on the camp at Abu Klea, and was rewarded with the medal and clasp. He was with the Frontier Field Force in the Soudan in 1886 and fought at Giniss. Promoted captain in 1881, he received a further step by exchanging into the 13th Hussars as major in 1889. Two years later he again exchanged—this time into the 11th Hussars. From June, 1896, when he was promoted lieut.-colonel, until June of this year when he became colonel by brevet, Colonel Courtenay commanded the 11th. He was again on active service in 1897-98 on the north-west frontier of India, and for this received the medal and clasp. Colonel Courtenay is a Staff College graduate, and since September last has been commanding the 10th Regimental District at Lincoln.

Brevet-Colonel J. Davidson (late 8th Hussars), who has been private secretary to the Commander-in-Chief since October, 1899, has been appointed A.A.G. at headquarters in Ireland. Colonel Davidson passed from the Militia into the 106th Foot as lieut. in December, 1874, exchanged into the 8th Hussars the following month, became captain in 1881, major in 1883, and commanded the regiment for five years until October, 1897, when he was placed on half-pay. From July, 1898, to October, 1899, he was A.D.C. to Lord Wolseley, since when he has been private secretary. Colonel Davidson served in the Jowaki Expedition (1877-78), when he was mentioned in despatches and received the medal with clasp; then in the Afghan war of 1878-79, as D.A.Q.M.G. of the 1st Division, Peshawar Valley Field Force, he was present at the capture of Ali Musjid and the action of Futehabad, being again mentioned in despatches and receiving the medal with clasp and brevet of major. He was promoted brevet colonel in 1898.

Brevet-Colonel T. P. B. Ternan, C.M.G., D.S.O., who is proceeding with Colonel Hatch, of the East African Rifles, against the Somalis, has been closely associated with that region for the last six years. Going out to Uganda in 1894 on special service, he has since commanded a variety of expeditions for the enforcement of order. Unyoro was the first district to engage his attention, and a year later, 1896, proceedings were taken against King Kabarega. The Kamassia tribe next revolted, and then an expedition was organised against King Mwanga, in which encounter Colonel Ternan was wounded. But he has also seen active service in other parts of the globe. He holds the medals for the Afghan war of 1879-80, the Egyptian war of 1882 (in addition to the bronze star), the Nile campaign of 1884-5-6, and the fighting in 1888-9, including the actions at Giniss, Fort Khor Mousa, Toski, where his horse was shot (clasp, D.S.O., Osmanieh 4th Class). Since last year he has been on special service in South Africa, whither he was summoned from the post, which he had held since August last, of Deputy Commissioner and Consul in the British East Africa Protectorate. His regiment is the Royal Warwick.

Lieut.-Colonel G. P. Hatch, C.M.G., who is also going with troops to Kismayu, belongs to the Reserve of Officers, and formerly was in the West India Regiment. He served with the 2nd Royal Irish in Egypt in 1882, and was at Tel-el-Kebir (medal with clasp), and in 1895 took part in operations against East African (Mazru) rebel natives, since when he has been serving with the East African Rifles, a corps which has the services of seventeen British officers. Colonel Hatch holds the Brilliant Star of Zanzibar.

Army Foreign.

The Correspondence Universelle remarks that the Persians awaited with curiosity the return of the Shah, for they thought that his tour through Europe, and more particularly his reception at St. Petersburg, might have the effect of accelerating the Russification of Persia. The Russian loan of 25,000,000frs. to the Persian Government for works on the Persian Gulf and the purchase of guns, marked a considerable step. Since that time the Persian Government has been organising its army under Russian instructors, and, according to the Correspondence, the Russians are now encouraging the increase of the Persian forces. The France Militaire, in commenting upon this intelligence, notes the movement to establish caravan routes from Baluchistan to Persia, with the supposed idea of a railway to traverse that country and Arabia, and it remarks that Russia, on her part, is seeking a railway outlet to the Persian Gulf by a branch from the lines in the Caucasus. Our contemporary suspects that the feeble resources of Persia will make a new loan necessary, and it points out that the Russian deficit, likely to be increased by the events in China, may make it necessary, and very desirable, for France to take her part. In short, the argument is that closer bonds should unite Russia and France, and that the former should supply the element of force, and the latter, in a large measure, the sinews of war.

A lecture recently delivered by Colonel von Bernhardt, of the German General Staff, before the Military Society of Berlin, has been attracting a good deal of attention. The lecturer was dealing with mobilisation for war, and his remarks appeared to have applied particularly to hostilities with France, although they would have an almost equal bearing on the case of Russia. He said that the next war must open with blows of unparalleled force, and by shocks which it would be so endeavour to make terrific. They would be so sudden that only the troops maintained on the frontier could take part in them. Thus the methods employed would differ markedly from those adopted by the Germans in 1870, when they took time to mobilise their troops and make careful preparations before the troops were sent to the front, and when they invaded France their organisation, like their effectives, was complete. The French have now adopted as their own the methods of the Germans in 1870, instead of the hasty and incomplete procedure which led to their first disasters in that year; but now, if Colonel Bernhardt interprets rightly the plan of campaign, the Germans have changed their system, at least in appearance, and will throw themselves with destructive force upon their enemies at the very outbreak of hostilities, the troops maintained near the frontier during peace time alone being engaged, and will endeavour by a tremendous offensive operation to paralyse that mobilisation upon which the French build their hopes. The German troops, in effect, in the frontier zone, are practically on a war footing, and could advance within a few hours, and all are trained troops, without any admixture of reservists.

A difficult and delicate task will now fall to the presidents and secretaries of military clubs and messes in France. The War Minister has withdrawn the order which prohibited the introduction of papers hostile to the Government, though it remains in operation in the case of non-commissioned officers and men. It will be no easy matter to draw the line between criticism and hostility. Has the Temps become an opponent of the Government because it has condemned the new rules in regard to promotion? And in the same way the Matin might be contrasted with the Echo de Paris, the Figaro with the Gaulois, or the Petit Parisien with the Débats. The circular of General André prescribes that large tolerance shall be exercised in regard to the papers admitted, but there is to be a nice balance between the hostile journals and those which support the Government. There may, at least, be no preponderance of the former. As for the men, not finding the papers they want in their quarters, they go to the public-houses to read them, and there the interdiction of the Minister of War does not follow them. It was General de Galliffet who, on January 1, 1900, set his face against the papers inimical to the Government, and his successor has only partially modified his act of disapproval.

It has been proposed that the home-coming American volunteers from the Philippines shall be replaced by embodying natives troops in the islands. Military opinion in the United States seems to be largely opposed to this idea. It is pointed out that experience of the natives is too limited to justify such an important step as the creation of a native Philippine army without the exercise of extreme caution. Some Macabebes have done good work as scouts, and have received firearms and uniforms as police, and natives have been employed against the insurgents in Luzon and the southern islands. Last year several hundred Ilocanos asked to be allowed to serve, and fifty were enlisted as scouts, while 500 were employed in transport and road making. It is thought, however, that the Ilocanos seek to use the American flag to get square with their old enemies, the Tagalogs who have claimed dominion over them. The Army and Navy Journal says that whatever value these levies possess, it is too soon to decide to make them regular soldiers for garrison duties in the island, and remarks that it will be well to remember that blood is thicker than water among the men of the Philippines just as it is between those of Anglo-Saxon extraction. Our contemporary does not wish over-confidence in native protestations of loyalty to furnish American history with a Sepoy rebellion, and it apprehends that the danger of treachery would be much greater in the Philippines than in India unless a strong garrison of white troops were maintained. The Government is urged to show firmness at the beginning, which will be worth far more than years of severity later on. "Give to the natives now a latitude that may lure them into an uprising, and we may be sowing a wind that will have to be reaped in a whirlwind of blood and disaster." But the condition in the Philippines is now so serious that the volunteers will not return so soon as was expected. Meanwhile General MacArthur has received instructions to push the campaign with the utmost vigour.

The Neues Wiener Tagblatt publishes the opinion of a volunteer who fought for the Boers and later escaped from a British prison on the struggle in South Africa. He says:—

"The war is far from being over. There are still 6,000 Boers determined to fight to the end, for their possessions and their homes, all that they had, are destroyed. Therefore life is no longer of any value to them. The English began the war in complete disorganisation, thinking that it would be a military promenade—the officers had not even maps of the country. One of the reasons why their soldiers did not retreat was that, if they did not obey orders to advance, their artillery, posted in their rear, opened fire on them. It was impossible not to pity the poor devils. We often held impregnable positions, but none the less the English generals used to order an advance against the deadly hail of our bullets; and if the men flinched their own guns opened on them from behind. The result was a shambles, nothing less. The hatred of the Boers was directed chiefly against the English lancers, who behaved like brigands. Every lancer who fell into the Boers' hands was immediately shot, for they robbed and plundered on all sides, violated women, and killed prisoners with their lances."

If this man could be taken seriously, this last remark of his would furnish additional evidence of the Boers' fear and hatred of cold steel. Again, there seems to have been a slight split in the enemy's camp:—

"In the Boer army no mystery was made about the strange, sudden death of Joubert. He was poisoned by the Boers themselves for not having prevented, as he could and should have done, the relief of Ladysmith. The truth is that he owned many houses in the town, and feared the destruction of his own property. So, in spite of peremptory orders to destroy the place, he always refused; and when Ladysmith was finally relieved poison was given him in his food. Lucas Meyer and Schneemann were also traitors, and received large sums from the English to hand over the Orange Free State. Schneemann was shot and General de Wet himself put his revolver to Meyer's breast."

DIRECT COMMISSIONS IN THE ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—During the course of the war a great many direct commissions have been granted to a variety of candidates. Some of the recipients have fairly won their reward by gallant service in the field as officers, non-commissioned officers, or troopers in Imperial and Colonial corps of irregulars. But a far larger number have obtained commissions in answer to the demands of policy, or simply because they possessed sufficient interest. The result is that a large number of Militia candidates, as well as Sandhurst cadets, have been crowded out, or, at the least, superseded by others with far less claims to special consideration. Various young gentlemen have joined the Militia and Volunteers during the war for no other reason than in order to obtain nominations, and some have been successful after but a few weeks of nominal service. Three weeks a Volunteer is, I believe, the record. Meanwhile, there are in South Africa, with their Militia regiments, or attached to battalions of the Line, a number of young officers whose service dates from before the training of 1899, and who, including some service at their depots during the mobilisation of the Army, have been doing continuous duty during upwards of twelve months. These officers have hitherto been denied commissions upon the grounds of their being under twenty years of age, and by the fact of their being on service abroad have been prevented from presenting themselves for examination in March or September of the present year; in short, they are made to suffer professionally as the reward for serving their country. That such an injustice will be permitted to continue is scarcely credible, but at all events it yet persists. It is quite ridiculous to suggest that hereafter these young officers should be asked to compete for commissions upon equal terms with other candidates who have remained at home under the continuous instruction of their crammens. Much time would be required in order to make good lost ground. Then again, there is the case of the Sandhurst and Militia candidates who have passed the most recent examinations and have received or still await commissions. Many of these joined the Militia or passed for Sandhurst many months before the thought of entering the Army had crossed the minds of some who have been appointed to direct commissions over their heads. I know a case of a boy who obtained his direct commission as a public school nominee who in his school was below two Militia subalterns now in South Africa, and also much below a Sandhurst cadet who has recently been gazetted.

In common fairness, those who have qualified by service should receive reasonable antedates. But, above all, no further time should be lost in granting commissions to all Militia subalterns, recommended by their commanding officers, who had joined their battalions previously to embodiment for service. Those who joined later have, of course, no greater claims than those who joined at home—unless in the case of so many as may have actually distinguished themselves in action.

A RETIRED OFFICER WHOSE SON IS IN THE
MILITIA AT THE FRONT.
Junior United Service Club, Nov. 26.

THE military panorama, "The Battle of Omdurman," painted by Professor Fleischer, and formally opened by Baillie Clelland on Saturday last at Glasgow, is unquestionably a most notable work. The centre is occupied with the British firing line, with the Seaforth's and Camerons at the most critical moment of the battle when the last mad rush of the Dervish fanatics was made to stop the victorious march of the Sirdar's army. In various parts of the picture can be seen Lord Kitchener, the late Gen. Wauchoppe, Sir Francis Wingate, Slatin Pasha, Gen. Hector Macdonald and Gatacre. Of the fidelity and accuracy of the great canvas, which is 320ft. long, there can be no question, for Mr. Bennett Barleigh, who was present at the opening ceremony, testified to the wonderful groupings of what he considered to be the most picturesque battle of the century, and the most eye-picturesque, Mr. Frederick Villiers, who is equally complimentary. Mr. A. M. Thiem, who was commissioned the artist to paint the picture, was publicly thanked for his enterprise, which will undoubtedly be one of the sights of Glasgow for many months to come.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE TEOFANI'S HIGH-CLASS CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition, 1900

Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Nov. 24.

A Reuter's message says Gen. Bruce Hamilton's column, which left Kroonstad on Nov. 10, and has been scouring the country, has arrived at Kroon-spruit after marching through Lindley and Heilbron. A number of prisoners were taken on Nov. 22. The Heilbron commando, they said, was about 400 strong and had a helio working, but they had buried their telegraphic instruments and their big guns and ammunition.

The prisoners said they always travelled in small parties of from 15 to 50. They had never seen Lord Roberts's proclamation. They offered to fight for the British, and take them to the main laager if they were allowed to stay in the country.

Monday, Nov. 26.

A Bloemfontein telegram states that the British troops have cleared the country to the eastward for a distance of 25 miles, and are thoroughly searching the hills. A number of Boer refugees have come in from Thaba N'chu.

A constabulary post, 25 miles south-west of Johannesburg, was attacked on Nov. 19 by 180 Boers, who, after two hours' fighting, were driven off with a loss of two killed, several wounded, and six horses captured. The British had no casualties.

A Cape Town telegram states that it is understood that after Lord Roberts's departure Sir Alfred Milner will proceed to the Transvaal, and will make Pretoria his headquarters. Arrangements are being made for the return to Johannesburg of 2,000 refugees on condition that they enrol themselves as a town guard, subject to the ordinary military discipline of an irregular corps. If the plan is successful the number will probably be increased.

Wednesday, Nov. 28.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram of Nov. 26 to the Secretary for War, says that as reports of a plot against his life will probably reach the War Office he thinks the facts should be known. The police had for some time been aware that a plot was in existence, and on Nov. 16 arrested five Italians, four Greeks, and a Frenchman, who are now awaiting trial. Their intention was to explode a mine in St. Mary's Church during service on Nov. 18. In another telegram of the same date Lord Roberts reports small engagements with the Boers near Frankfort and at Dainsfontein. Large captures of stock are reported from Klerksdorp and Heidelberg. Gen. Clements, moving towards Rietfontein, was opposed by Delarey, who had from 800 to 1,000 men, with three guns. The enemy were completely dispersed; three of their dead were seen, and natives state that they lost three more killed and several wounded. A fierce attack on Brakpan was successfully repelled by seven of the Railway Pioneer Regt. and 10 mounted infantry. Three Boers were killed, and a Transvaal flag was captured.

Thursday, Nov. 22.

Cape Town correspondents say that for some time past the recrudescence of hostile feeling shown towards the British Empire after the outbreak of the war by colonial sympathisers with the Republics has caused grave anxiety among the loyal population. By the dissemination of malignant lies regarding the progress of the war and the conduct of the British troops, the ignorant and credulous section of the Dutch population is being worked up to a state of mind that may prove dangerous to the peace of the colony. Taking advantage of the freedom of speech enjoyed under British institutions, the Dutch Press and clergy, as well as the prisoners of war who were permitted to return to their homes on parole, are preaching a propaganda that can only be intended to promote discontent, if not open rebellion. The loyal Press is urgent in its demand for the proclamation of martial law.

Friday, Nov. 30.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram of Nov. 28 from Johannesburg, announces a serious disaster at Dewetsdorp. The garrison, about 400 in number, consisting of detachments of the Gloucestershire Regiment, the Highland L.I., and the Irish Rifles, with two guns of the 68th Field Battery, surrendered to the enemy last Friday afternoon. Their losses were 15 killed and 42 wounded. The enemy are said to have been 2,500 strong. A column of 1,400 strong, sent from Edenburg to relieve Dewetsdorp, did not arrive in time. Gen. C. Knox joined this force on Nov. 26, and entered Dewetsdorp, which he found evacuated. Gen. Knox pursued the enemy, and it is reported that on Nov. 27 he fought a successful engagement near Vaalbank with Steyn and De Wet, who retired west and south-west. In other telegrams Lord Roberts describes successful engagements with the Boers near Wagon Drift, at Tiger Kloof, near Bethlehem, at Bulfontein, and elsewhere.

Reuter despatches from Smithfield and its vicinity supply details of Gen. C. Knox's operations against Steyn and De Wet on Nov. 27 and 28. They resulted in the breaking up of De Wet's commando into three bodies, and his being cut off from the Orange River.

Luckhoff, which is a village about half-way between Orange River and Fauresmith, was the scene of a sharp engagement on Tuesday between Gen. Settle's column and 500 Boers under Commandant Herzog. The enemy, who occupied strong positions, were driven off after a stubborn fight. Their losses are believed to be heavy; the British casualties were slight. Herzog has since been endeavouring to effect a junction with De Wet, who is reported to be in the neighbourhood.

Unofficial telegrams state that Col. Pilcher, co-operating with another portion of Gen. Knox's force under Col. Barker, surprised the Boers, and had a sharp engagement at close quarters, during which the enemy used one of the guns captured at Dewetsdorp. Two waggons of provisions and clothing, which had presumably been taken at Dewetsdorp also, were captured, together with nearly 300 of the enemy's horses. Mr. Boyle, the District Commissioner of Dewetsdorp, who was taken prisoner by the Boers, informed a storekeeper that De Wet had released the garrison, but nothing had been seen of the men at the time of telegraphing.

IRISH DISTRESSED LADIES' FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—You have for some years past kindly allowed me at the approach of Christmastide to make an appeal through your columns on behalf of the Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund. Perhaps I may be permitted to remind your readers that this fund was established for the purpose of giving assistance to ladies whose incomes were entirely derived from Irish land (generally in the form of jointures or charges) and who have been reduced from comfort to penury by agrarian troubles, and latterly by the operation of the Land Court. It is impossible for those not resident in Ireland to realise the sufferings and privations endured by ladies who have been previously in good circumstances, but who, through no fault of their own, have been driven from their comfortable homes and left penniless upon the world.

The war in South Africa has affected this charity, in common, I suppose, with every other; at the same time we are most grateful for the amount of support which has been accorded to us during the past year. Our receipts up to October 31 have been £1,664, our expenditure £1,647. We have 74 pensioners on our list, one 96 years of age; they receive an average of £20 a year each; we have, besides, expended in special grants to assist ladies in meeting pressing demands and helping them to situations, £345; on account of illness, £53; and on education, £69. The secretaries will thankfully receive and acknowledge subscriptions at 17, North Audley Street, London, and 4, Kildare Street, Dublin.

ERNE,

Chairman of London Committee.

THE following officers, who are now serving in South Africa, have been selected for service with the West African Frontier Force:—Lieuts. P. A. Macgregor and R. F. Peel, 1st Coldstream Guards; W. H. Wilkin, 1st Derbyshire; W. D. Sword and A. M. Stapylton, 2nd N. Stafford; and F. H. Mahony, 1st Cheshire. 2nd Lieuts. Wilson, R.F.A.; A. V. Richardson, 2nd Cheshire; G. H. Garratt, 1st South Lancs.; C. T. Lawrence, 2nd Hampshire; A. L. Ross, Lancs. Fusiliers; L. H. M. P. Cockerell and C. H. T. Lucas, 2nd R. Berkshire; G. G. Pomeroy and H. Needham, 1st Gloucestershire; Elis, Welsh Regt.; Paulson, K.R.R.; and Rainsford, Mounted Infantry.

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.

£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400

(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT - - - £100 to £185

(Tilly Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315

(Chelsea, S.W.)

All these Rents Include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

PRESS VIEWS AND OPINIONS ON ARMY MATTERS.

Much correspondence has appeared this week in the Times, treating of "Farm-burning in the Transvaal and Orange River Colonies." One writer—"Charles Trevelyan"—whilst admitting that so many contradictory reports reach this country as to make the truth difficult to determine, pertinently asks, "Has this burning of farms sensibly diminished the Boer forces in the field? If not, what is the good of it all?" And again, what becomes of the women and children who are rendered homeless through De Wet's misguided energy? The British nation—not its soldiers—is responsible for their maintenance. Mr. E. A. Armstrong points out that as long as farms remain "farms," they are safe; when farms become "forts," they are treated as "forts." Mr. Leonard Courtney quotes the evidence of officers and men, who assert that the "farm" and "fort" distinction is not always clearly drawn. "Old Soldier" writes in the Times of Nov. 26, complaining that to win the Victoria Cross, an act of heroism must be performed under the eyes of a senior officer. This increases the element of "luck." A correspondent, in the same issue, pleads the cause of militia subalterns, who, he states, are being kept out of their commissions (which they hoped to earn) by the promotion of Colonial Volunteer privates. This view is also expressed in the Morning Post by "Guardian." The case is a hard one. The Army Service Corps have a grievance similar to that of the Indian Medical Services in Bombay and Madras. The head of the Service is not one of themselves. "A.S.C." in Tuesday's Times, hopes that in the reconstruction of the War Office the A.S.C. will be represented by an A.S.C. man. The Morning Post devoted a column to "Camp Cookery for Soldiers." The military cooks of the future must be of the "rough and ready" order, and be able to cook equally well on a kopje and turn the boulders thereof into ovens, so to speak. Several correspondents write to this journal, comparing the evidence taken at the Dover court-martial to that adduced at the Dreyfus trial. The Express held forth on the 26th and 29th on "Ruinous Economy" at the War Office and "Red Tape Meanness." The wrath of this journal is excited by the stinting of Volunteers' allowances when in camp. The Daily Mail of Nov. 26 takes up the cudgel on behalf of Lord Kitchener, against whom "a violent campaign of slander and calumny" is being prosecuted. On the 27th the Daily Mail says that such districts as the Mourne mountains in Ireland will in future be used for manœuvre purposes. The Standard of Nov. 28 remarks, apropos of the departure of Lord Wolseley from the War Office, that Sir Evelyn cannot possibly combine efficiently the Adjutant-Generalship and the post of Commander-in-Chief. In the same issue, correspondence is again provoked by the result of the Acheson court-martial. The Daily Telegraph of Nov. 26, commenting on Kitchener's appointment to the rank of local General, says:—"What we have now to do is to accept the stern philosophy of the situation, and to see the most disagreeable phase of the struggle through with the immovable equanimity with which we faced the most dangerous crisis." On the 27th the Telegraph contained a long article—nearly three columns—on "South Africa and its Problems," from a correspondent at Cape Town, quoting long passages from the local press on the relations of Dutch and English in Cape Colony. "Semper Paratus" suggests in Thursday's Morning Post that Reserve officers should do an annual training with the Militia. After many years' absence an officer cannot expect to know his drill and duties directly. Sir H. S. King, in a circular to the Press, announces the starting of a fund for a memorial to the late Sir W. Lockhart in India.

The Daily News of Nov. 29 allowed Mr. Hales a column and a half to discuss the "Army Nurse." The Army nurse struck Mr. Hales as being by far the best arm at the front. Again he comes forward with a suggestion of reform. Why not teach them to ride?

Mr. S. Hamilton Cartwright, in the Morning Post of Nov. 30, suggests a form of "Limited Conscription"—that one member of every family should join the Army or the Navy. Also, he proposes that those who subsequently enter the Reserve should receive an old-age pension at a certain age.

Friday's Times revives the question of the Imperial Yeomanry. "An Ex-C.O. of Yeomanry" defends the action of retaining the Yeomanry in South Africa whilst the Guards are returning. Their equipment renders them far more valuable for present purposes than regular cavalry. The discontent, he adds, which has been aired in the Press, is not by any means general in the ranks of the Yeomanry. On the strength of a single letter received from the front, "A Wounded Yeomanry Officer" denies this latter statement.

MAJOR AUSTIN, D.S.O., R.E., and Major Bright, Rifle Brigade, left England on Nov. 29 for the Sudan upon a Government survey to Lake Rudolf, in continuation of their last year's expedition. This new expedition, which will probably occupy about a year, will fit out at Omdurman.

Obituary.

NAVY.

Major Richard Augustine Fitzgerald Studdert, R.M.A., died at Deal on Nov. 20, aged 63. He was the son of the late Admiral J. Fitzgerald Studdert, of Pella, Kilrush, co. Clare, and entered the Royal Marine Artillery in 1853. He obtained his Lieutenant's commission in the following year, and in 1855 served in the Crimea and in the expedition to Kinburn, receiving the medal and the Turkish medal. He again saw service in the China Expedition of 1857-59, and was present at the blockade of the Canton River and the bombardment, storm, and capture of the city. For his services on this occasion he received the medal with clasp. He retired on half-pay in 1862, and was promoted to the rank of Captain in 1874, and Major in 1879. Major Studdert was appointed Adjutant of the 1st Middlesex Artillery Volunteers in 1864, and Adjutant of the 1st London Artillery Volunteers in 1873.

ARMY.

Gen. Sir George H. S. Willis, G.C.B., who died at Bournemouth on Nov. 29, after a long illness, the result of malarial fever contracted during foreign service, was 77 years of age, and was the only son of Mr. George B. Willis, R.A., of Sopley Park, Hants. He joined the 77th Foot, the old East Middlesex Regiment, so long ago as 1841, and since then had served throughout the world. He landed in the Crimea with the Light Division in 1854, took part in the affair on the Bulganac, was present at the battle of the Alma, Balaklava, Inkerman, and the assaults on the Redan, being slightly wounded on several occasions. Towards the end of the siege of Sevastopol he was D.A.Q.M.G. at Headquarters, and afterwards became A.Q.M.G. of the 4th Division, until the evacuation of the Crimea. In 1856-57 Sir George Willis was attached to the French Army in Algeria, and in the latter year formed the 2nd Batn. of the 6th Foot, now the Warwicks. From 1858-59 he was Q.M.G. at the Rock, and then for five years A.G. at Malta. From 1866 to 1871, he was Q.M.G. of the Southern District, which he afterwards commanded. Then for a term of three years (1872-75) he was A.Q.M.G. at headquarters. From 1878-81 he commanded the Northern District; and in the next year he led the 1st Division in the Egyptian Campaign, commanding the troops at the actions of El-magfa, Tel-el-mahuta, and Kassassin. In command of his division Sir George Willis was wounded at Tel-el-Kebir. He was four times mentioned in despatches, and received the thanks of the Houses of Parliament. From 1884 to 1889 he commanded the Southern District, and in 1892 contested Portsmouth in the Conservative interest. Sir George Willis was a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour, held the orders of the 2nd class Osmanieh and 4th class Medjidie, and was a Knight of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. He was a mighty hunter, having hunted, shot and fished in every continent. He married firstly, in 1856, a daughter of Mr. George Morgan, M.P. for Brighendunbury; and secondly, a daughter of Sir John Neeld, the first baronet, 1874. He was Hon. Colonel of the Middlesex Regt. and 2nd Hampshire Volunteer Artillery.

Lieut.-Gen. R. T. Glyn died on Nov. 21 at The Chequers, Strathfieldsaye, Mortimer, Berks. Glyn in 1831, he was the only son of the late Mr. R. C. Glyn, of the H.E.I.C.'s Service. He joined the 24th Regiment in 1850, and obtained his company in 1855. In the same year he served with the 82nd Regiment in the Crimea, and received the medal with clasp for Sevastopol and the Turkish medal. In the Indian Mutiny he served with his own regiment and obtained the medal, and was promoted to the rank of Major in 1861, Lieut.-Colonel in 1867, and Colonel in 1872. On the outbreak of the Kaffir War of 1877-78 he was appointed to the command of the eastern frontier, and afterwards, in command of the forces in the Transkei, took part in the engagement at Newmarke. He was several times mentioned in despatches, and his services were rewarded with the C.B. In the Zulu War of 1879 he was first placed in command of

No. 3 column, and was present at the attack on Sirayo's Krantz and the operations at Matyani's stronghold. Then he became, successively, Colonel on the staff and Commander of the Forces in the Transkei, and afterwards commanded the Infantry Brigade (2nd Division) in the engagement at Ulundi. For his services in this campaign he was again mentioned in despatches, and received the O.M.G. and the medal with clasp. He commanded the 24th Regimental District at Brecon from 1880 to 1882, when he was raised to the rank of Major-General. He became Lieut.-General in 1887, the year of his retirement, and in 1898 was appointed Colonel of the South Wales Borderers. Lieut.-General Glyn married, in 1856, Anne, daughter of Col. Clements, of the Canadian Rifles.

Major-Gen. Thomas Henry Clifton, who died at Robin Hood Farm, Kingston Vale, Nov. 27, was born in 1820, and was the son of the late Mr. Thomas Clifton, of Clifton. He entered the Army in 1839, and served in the Crimea in 1854 as A.D.C. to the Duke of Cambridge. He was present at the battles of Alma, Balaklava, and Inkerman, at the last of which he was wounded and his horse was shot. He also took part in the siege of Sevastopol, and in the sortie of Oct. 26. For his services he received the brevets of Major and Lieut.-Colonel, the medal with four clasps, the fifth class of the Medjidie, and the Turkish medal. Major-Gen. Clifton retired in 1873, and afterwards acted as Extra-ecquerry to the Duke of Cambridge. In 1877 Major-Gen. Clifton married Annie, widow of Lord Cosmo Russell, and daughter of Mr. J. C. Norbury. His wife died in 1886.

Major-Gen. J. W. Hoggan, C.B., whose death is announced in Edinburgh, was born in 1833 and was son of the late Major-Gen. J. Hoggan, C.B. He entered the Bengal Army in 1849, and was promoted to the rank of Lieut. in 1853. During the Indian Mutiny in 1857-58 he was present at the actions of Bhagonalo, Nugeena, Bareilly, and Mohunpore—in the last of which he was severely wounded—and received the medal. In 1861 he attained the rank of Captain, and was appointed Major in 1869 and Lieut.-Colonel in 1875. He again saw active service in the Afghan War of 1878-80, and was present in the engagements at Saif-oo-deen and Ahmed Kheyl, being mentioned in despatches. He also took part in the march to Kandahar, and was present at the battle of Kandahar. Again mentioned in despatches, he received for his services the medal with two clasps and the bronze decoration. He became Colonel in 1880, and Major-General in the following year, when he retired.

Col. Frederick Charles St. John, late of the Indian Staff Corps, died at Dover, on Nov. 24, in his 66th year. He joined the Madras Native Infantry in 1856, and obtained his company in 1868. He became Major in 1876, and served in the Afghan War of 1878-80, for which he received the medal. In 1882 he was appointed Lieut.-Colonel, and he again saw service with the Burmese Expedition of 1885-86, receiving the medal with clasp. He was promoted to the rank of Colonel in 1886, and was placed on the unemployed supernumerary list in 1895.

Col. Charles Harley Bridges, J.P. (retired, Indian Staff Corps), died suddenly on the 27th inst. at Heathfield, near Axminster. He served with the China Expeditionary Force, 1860-61, and took part in numerous operations against the Taiping rebels in the vicinity of Shanghai in 1862. For these services he received a medal, and in the following year was engaged on the North-West Frontier of India, at the forcing of the Umbeyla Pass (medal with clasp). He also served in the Looshai Expedition, 1871-72, and the Afghan War, 1879-80, on the latter occasion being mentioned in despatches. On March 31, 1891, he retired with the rank of colonel. In 1870 Col. Bridges married Emily, daughter of the late John Bird, of Taunton.

LORD WOLSELEY'S RETIREMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."
SIR,—The date of retirement from the Army of Lord Wolseley has been notified, and it is the firm impression in the minds of many officers and others of the Army that he has not been justly treated with regard to the war in South Africa. He has indeed had a brilliant career, and is certainly the General of this century, who is still really invaluable as a Commander-in-Chief, and has done much more to help the country out of its difficulties with regard to the Boer war than the nation seems to be aware of.
S. M.

PRETORIA AS IT IS.

An interesting picture of the capital of the Transvaal, and the daily life of its residents, is presented to us by a correspondent writing from the 2nd Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers to their regimental paper, the St. George's Gazette :—

"Pretoria is quite the most charming little town we have yet come across, and has great possibilities about it of being made still more beautiful. Trees and shrubs of every variety there are in profusion; and at the end of the town, where stands the house now occupied by Lord Roberts, is a most perfectly kept public park, through which we strolled, leaving our jehus outside. We were disappointed with the President's house, which is a poky little one-storied, tin-roofed affair, with two stone lions about the size of bull-dogs on pedestals outside the steps. The public buildings round the big square are remarkably handsome, and the club is—or would be if there were room in it to swing a cat—comfortable and well-appointed. Just now it is crammed with representatives from every regiment under heaven, Regular and Irregular, British and Colonial, Horse, Foot, and Dragoons. To get a seat at dinner is near as arduous a business as the storming of a kopje. Long before the dinner hour there is a surging phalanx of hungry officers clamouring for admittance, so that naturally the weakest and less ravenous go the wall. We ourselves hardly felt equal to compete amongst the throng, so made our way to the Transvaal Hotel, where the pressure was not quite so great till invaded by the disappointed overflow from the club. Then it, too, became an inferno of bewildered waiters, skurrying about with gigantic piles of plates, and impatient officers calling upon them by all their gods to come to attend to them. These latter eventually took the law—and such victuals as they could lay hold of—into their own hands; and we were presently favoured with a view of a young officer of the Fifth, of open countenance and cavernous smile, elbowing his way towards the kitchen, and bawling hungrily for 'four beefs!' for himself and party."

THE Indian troops to take part in the Commonwealth celebrations left Bombay for Sydney on Nov. 23 in the Indian Marine steamer Dalhousie.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
* And BRASSES *
Morris & Sons
239 Kennington Rd. London S.E.

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPEL & CO. LTD. EXETER
4 & 5 DUNCANNONS' LONDON.
& CHANCERY CROSS.
DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

HART, SON,
PEARD, & CO. LTD.
Metal Workers.

— SPECIALITÉ —
Memorial Brasses.

88-91, DRURY LANE,
LONDON, W.C.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

2nd Life Guards.—Major-Gen. the Earl of Dundonald, who in the early part of last year relinquished the command of the regiment, and who has just returned from South Africa, on Nov. 29 paid a visit to Albany Street barracks, where he was entertained at luncheon by the officers of his old corps. 2nd Lieut. J. H. Ripley left Cape Town on Nov. 22 in the Chicago, on passage home.

5th Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. F. R. Otter left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided.

6th Dragoon Guards (Carbineers).—Major A. C. Hamilton has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

7th Dragoon Guards.—Capt. H. A. Lempière has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

1st (Royal) Dragoons.—Major Lord Basing left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided.

6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons.—2nd Lieut. C. R. Terrott has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieuts. J. Harris and E. Paterson left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided.

7th Hussars.—Capt. R. G. Brooke left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle on passage home.

9th Lancers.—Lieut. G. H. Smith left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle on passage home.

13th Hussars.—Capt. Maclaren, who was badly wounded in the operations for the relief of Mafeking, was on Nov. 28 restored to the regiment after nearly 18 months' special service. He has lately been recruiting in London for Major-Gen. Baden-Powell's police.

20th Hussars.—2nd Lieut M. B. P. Urquhart has been appointed to the regiment.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The 19th Co. of the Eastern Division R.G.A., which has been stationed at Gibraltar since 1897, is under orders to embark for India next month. It will be relieved by the 8th Co. of the Eastern Division from Aden.

Col. Chapman, R.F.A., is reported seriously ill.

Lieut.-Col. H. T. Lugard, R.G.A., left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home.

Major R. F. Fox and Capt. G. H. A. White, R.F.A., left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle, on passage home.

Major E. G. Nicholls, R.G.A., and Capt. H. E. Carey, R.F.A., have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Major Abdy has taken over command of the 97th Battery R.F.A., which, a few months ago, moved from Ipswich to Leeds, replacing Major Leckie, who has taken over command of H Battery, R.H.A., in India, while Capt. Henderson has become second in command of the 98th Battery, R.F.A., which also lately left Ipswich for Ireland.

Capt. E. S. Russell, and 2nd Lieut. E. R. de Laveleye (in French) and 2nd Lieut. H. L. Holme (in German) have qualified as interpreters.

Lieut. W. S. Brancker, R.H.A., has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Lieuts. F. R. Sedgwick and R. A. Anstruther left Cape Town on Nov. 26, in the Simla, invalided.

Lieut. J. G. Dooner, 61st Battery R.F.A., and 2nd Lieut. A. Boulbee, 18th Battery R.F.A., have returned to duty in South Africa.

2nd Lieut. L. C. P. Millman, has, on first appointment, been posted to the 50th Battery, R.F.A., at Agra.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut.-Col. B. Scott, C.I.E., will complete the qualifying service this month, and be promoted colonel by brevet. He entered the Service in 1871, becoming major in 1889, and lieutenant-colonel seven years later. In 1878-9 he took part in the Afghan War, and received the medal for his services.

Lieut.-Col. J. C. Campbell has been appointed to the command of the R.E. in Ceylon. He took part in the Jowaki Afridi Expedition, and afterwards acted as Assistant Field Engineer in the Afghan War. He commanded a company of Bengal Sappers and Miners, and was present at the attack and capture of Ali Musjid.

Lieut.-Col. G. A. Tower has been posted to the office of the Chief Engineer, Bengal command.

Brevet-Lieut.-Col. A. E. Sandbach left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle, on passage home.

Major R. S. Curtis has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Major W. R. Morton has qualified as interpreter in Arabic and in Turkish.

Major C. E. Baddeley and 2nd Lieut. C. F. Binney have been posted to the Bombay Sappers, the former as Instructor, vice Lieut.-Col. Shute, promoted, and the latter, vice Gervers, reverted to the home establishment; Capt. C. O. Halliday succeeding Major Baddeley.

Capt. T. R. Main left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided.

INFANTRY.

Brigade of Guards.—It is stated that four battalions of Guards are to return towards the end of this month. As soon as can be managed three battalions from home will go to Gibraltar to form a brigade under Sir H. Colville. The report upon the musketry training of the Guards for this year states that only 2,670 "trained men" were sent to the targets, a much smaller number than last year, but due to six battalions being on active service. The total stated produced 29 per cent. of marksmen, 57 of second-class shots, and 12 of third-class, the average figure of merit of the five battalions firing being 89 for individual practice and 46 for collective. The number of recruits firing (2,050) shows an increase of 696 over the 1899 total; and the classification is 88 per cent. first-class shots, and 11 per cent. second-class; 372 being the individual figure of merit, and 53 the collective. The results are regarded as very creditable to the Assistant-Adjts. and Musketry-Sergts; and Major-Gen. Trotter is "thoroughly satisfied with the musketry efficiency of the brigade, due to the interest taken in it by all ranks."

Grenadier Guards.—Lieut. E. Ashmead-Bartlett, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home.

Coldstream Guards.—Capt. C. Willoughby has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Scots Guards.—Lieut. Hon. R. Coke, 1st Batn., has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut. Arthur Melville Southey, 2nd Batn., who was killed at Tigers Kloof on Nov. 23, was born on Oct. 18, 1872. He joined the regiment as second-lieutenant in April, 1892, and five years later received his lieutenant's commission. 2nd Lieut. Lord G. R. Grosvenor left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided.

Irish Guards.—The formation of the Irish Guards is to be completed by April 1. It is hoped that many men will join from the Reserve Batn. when that has been disbanded.

Royal Scots (1st).—Col. Thomas French Ross, lately returned from India on the expiration of his command of the 2nd Batn., died in London on Nov. 20, and was buried at Nunhead Cemetery on the 24th. The funeral was attended by his brother Major Ross, Major French and other members of his family, and by the following officers of his old regiment, viz.: Gen. E. A. Stuart (Col.-in-Chief of the regiment), Gen. E. T. St. L. McGwire, Col. Gould Adams, C.B., C.M.G., Major G. Deane, Major Gostling, four staff sergeants from the Regimental District at Glencorse, N.B., and several of the wives of reservists and others now serving with the 1st Batn. in South Africa. Beautiful wreaths, sent by his many friends in the regiment and others, covered the coffin. Col. Ross, during a service of 32 years, had served in, and commanded, both battalions of the regiment.

Royal West Surrey Regiment (2nd).—Lieut. H. C. Whinfield left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided.

East Kent Regiment (3rd).—Capt. C. Vipan left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle, on passage home.

Royal Lancaster Regiment (4th).—2nd Lieut. H. R. Sparenborg has qualified as interpreter in German.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Major Dyas has been transferred from the 1st Batn. to the new 4th Batn. at Colchester. Capt. Dilcombe, lately promoted to his present rank from Lieut. in the Connaught Rangers, has been appointed to the 4th Batn. at Colchester. Capt. Cockerill, of the Indian Staff Corps, who has been transferred to Colchester, joined the Royal West Surrey Regt. in 1888, and the following year was appointed to the I.S.C. He served in the Hazara expedition of 1891. Lieut.-Col. H. J. S. Landon, 2nd Batn., Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home. Capt. C. E. Etches, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 22 in the Chicago, on passage home. Major G. F. Ellison, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—The 1st Batn. at Bombay, the detachments at Ahmednager, Dees, and Deolali, are under orders to move during the present relief season to Dum Dum, in the Bengal command. Capt. Luard, who was wounded during the South African campaign, has been promoted major. Lieut. Hodgson, 3rd Batn., has been given a commission as 2nd Lieut. in the Sherwood Foresters, and will join the 1st Batn. in South Africa, where he has of late been serving with his Militia batn. Capt. J. Marriott and Lieut. F. E. Walker, 2nd Batn., have been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Lincoln Regiment (10th).—Lieut. D. O. Grieve, left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle, on passage home.

Suffolk Regiment (12th).—Major A. C. Cubitt, 1st Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 12 in the Simla, on passage home.

West Yorkshire Regiment (14th).—Lieut. C. W. Gordon is ordered to join the Chinese Regiment at once.

East Yorkshire Regiment (15th).—Col. W. W. Ward left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided. 2nd Lieut. R. H. Wilkinson, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Capt. H. F. Barclay, 4th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 21 for Madeira in the Dunottar Castle. Lieut. A. B. Lemon left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—Capt. W. S. Copland, 2nd Batn., has returned to duty in South Africa.

Royal Scots Fusiliers (21st).—Capt. J. Duncan, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Maple-more, on passage home.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers (23rd).—Capt. R. E. P. Gabbett left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, on passage home.

King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th).—2nd Lieut. Hon. M. St. John has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th).—Major Gibb, who has been appointed second in command of the 2nd Batn., has seen a good deal of active service, all of which, however, has been spent in Egypt. He served with the Nile expedition of 1884, and with the Soudan Field Force a year later. He is the holder of the Humane Society's medal for having saved, whilst serving with the river expedition 16 years ago, the life of an interpreter who had fallen into the Nile.

East Lancashire Regiment (30th).—2nd Lieut. L. O. T. Barnes left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalided.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd).—Major F. H. Chapman has been directed to proceed to South Africa to join the 2nd Batn., on promotion. Capt. J. H. T. Cornish-Bowden has been appointed Adjutant of the Eastern Bengal State Railway Volunteer Rifles, in succession to Major H. F. Williams, Royal Munster Fusiliers, whose tenure of the appointment has expired.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th).—Lieut. Gardner, 4th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 22 in the Chicago, on passage home.

Dorsetshire Regiment (39th).—Lieut. G. S. Cardew has died at Noroshera, at the age of 22. The deceased entered the Army in 1895, and received his lieutenantancy three years later.

Royal Highlanders (42nd).—In memory of the late Major-Gen. Wauchope and the men of the 2nd Batn. who fell at Magersfontein, a marble tablet was unveiled on Nov. 26 in the Presbyterian Church, York. Capt. Jennings Bramley becomes Deputy-Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry Instruction, Poona, vice Major Beresford, tenure-expired. 2nd Lieut. D. Campbell, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Maple-more, on passage home.

Essex Regiment (44th).—It has been ordered that when the 1st Batn. is transferred from South

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR.

ROSE'S LIME JUICE WHISKY

LIQUEUR

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the Island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO

Cherry Whisky,
Cherry Brandy,
Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—

HUNTSMEN,

GOLFERS,

and SPORTSMEN

generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

Bottled in
Leith, Scotland.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants.

Price 54s. per Case of 1 Dozen Quarts, Carriage Paid.

A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.,
41, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

Africa to India, it shall be located at Wellington, Madras command. When it arrives there the 2nd Batn. at Swebo and Bharno, will leave Burmah for England, being relieved in Burmah by the 1st Batn. East Kent Regt.; the time of departure for England of the 2nd Batn. is uncertain. It is also impossible to indicate when the 1st Batn. will arrive in India from Africa. Lieut. R. Ruxton is ordered to join the Chinese Regiment at once.

Northamptonshire Regiment (48th).—Lieut. A. T. Page left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle, on passage home. The Royal Humane Society have awarded a medal to Lieut. W. T. Layard, serving with the China expeditionary force, for the gallant rescue of a Chinese servant from the Peiho river during the advance on Peking on the night of Aug. 6.

Yorkshire Light Infantry (51st).—Capt. C. O. L. Yate has qualified as interpreter in French.

Middlesex Regiment (57th).—Qrmer. and Hon. Lieut. F. Piens has qualified as interpreter in German.

King's Royal Rifle Corps (60th).—As the 2nd Batn. cannot be accommodated at Sealkote in addition to the Royal Sussex, it has been decided to locate them at Rawul Pindi in place of the Gloucesters, the latter going to Sealkote on their arrival from Ceylon. Lieut. D. H. Blundell, who arrived on Nov. 26 at Cumberland Lodge, Windsor, brought with him from South Africa the personal effects and property of the late Prince Christian Victor.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—Lieut. G. D. Eykyn, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 22 in the Chicago on passage home.

North Staffordshire Regiment (64th).—2nd Lieut. J. Carnegie has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Lieut. W. J. Ainsworth is returning from South Africa to take up the Adjutancy of the 2nd Batn.

Highland Light Infantry (72nd).—Capt. H. T. C. Singleton left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle, on passage home.

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—Capt. J. D. McLachlan has qualified as interpreter in Italian and French.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (87th).—Major T. G. Barclay, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home. Lieut. R. W. R. Jeudwine left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalidated.

Connaught Rangers (88th).—Lieut. P. Joyce has been discharged to duty in South Africa.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st).—Lieut. J. W. Watson, 1st Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home.

Derbyshire Regiment (95th).—2nd Lieut. H. J. Rouse, 4th Batn., left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—Capt. G. C. Bowen, 2nd Batn., and Lieut. W. R. T. Browne, 3rd Batn., have returned to duty in South Africa.

Rifle Brigade.—Major C. O. Lamb and Lieut. S. E. Holland left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalidated. Capt. A. H. W. Lowndes and Lieut. C. E. Harrison have been discharged to duty in South Africa. Lieut. M. G. E. Bell, 3rd Batn., proceeds to England to join the 4th Batn. on promotion.

Army Service Corps.—A draft from the depot has been ordered to leave Aldershot for Shorncliffe today to form the new 56th Company at that station. Lieut. E. Wood left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalidated.

Staff.—Major-Gen. Sir H. C. Chermiside, who commanded the 3rd Division in S. Africa, will resume his command of the troops at the Curragh on Jan. 10; Col. H. S. G. Miles, who has been serving in S. Africa as Chief Staff Officer to Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, will resume his appointment as commandant of the Staff College on the same date. Major-Gen. Sir E. R. Elles, now officiating Adjt.-Gen. in India, is to be appointed to the command of a first-class district in India, from Dec. 6, succeeding Lieut.-Gen. C. Tucker, lately commanding a Division in South Africa. Col. Godfrey (late 7th Division) has been discharged to duty in S. Africa. Col. J. Davidson, Private Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, is to take over the duties of A.A.G. on the Staff of the Duke of Connaught in Ireland to-day, in place of Col. E. J. Courtenay whose extended period of service in the appointment expires. Major-Gen. Pole-Carew, Col. F. W. Benson, Majors C. C. Monro, Hon. G. L. Bryan, and H. N. C. Heath, Capt. F. B. Maurice, and F. D. Farquhar, left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle, on passage home. Capt. Smith, 2nd Central India Horse, now in S. Africa, has been appointed D.A.A.G., Madras Command headquarters. Capt. R. L. Morris, 3rd Bengal Cavalry, has been appointed A.D.C. to Major-Gen. Sir Bindon Blood, Commanding the Meerut District. Lieut. Sir F. Burdett (Reserve of Officers), lately with the 17th Lancers, and since gone to Ceylon in charge of Boer prisoners, has been selected by Sir West Ridgeway, Governor of Ceylon, for service on his staff as extra A.D.C. Lieut.-Col. C. Crutchley, who has been since early this year acting temporarily as A.A.G. for Recruiting on the Headquarters Staff, has now been confirmed in that appointment as from Jan. 13 last, with the substantive rank of colonel in the Army.

Indian Staff Corps.—Major C. E. Norrie left Cape Town on Nov. 22 in the Chicago, on passage home. The Royal Humane Society have awarded the bronze medal to Capt. G. H. G. Mockler for rescuing a Chinese girl from the Peiho river at Tientsin on Sept. 25. Lieut. O. C. Newman left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home.

R.A.M.C.—Lieut. L. N. Lloyd has been discharged to duty in South Africa. Col. A. W. Duke and Major J. W. Jerome left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home. Majors W. G. A. Bedford, R. W. Lord, J. G. Black, and Capt. K. M. Cameron left Cape Town in the Simla on Nov. 26, invalidated.

Indian Medical Service.—Lieut.-Col. P. de H. Haig has been appointed P.M.O., Malakand Field Force, in succession to Lieut.-Col. P. F. O'Connor, appointed to the China Expeditionary Force.

Army Veterinary Department.—Lieut. W. Franklin, who was wounded at Komati Poort, is now at Pretoria, progressing favourably.

Remount Department.—Major C. E. W. Wood left Cape Town on Nov. 21 in the Dunottar Castle, on passage home. Capt. W. G. Eden left Cape Town in the Maplemore, on passage home.

Chaplains' Department.—Revs. S. P. H. Statham and J. R. Wilson left Cape Town on Nov. 22 in the Chicago, on passage home.

Reserve of Officers.—Major W. Bertram left Cape Town on Nov. 24 in the Goth, on passage home. Capt. J. W. Yardley left Cape Town on Nov. 26 in the Simla, invalidated.

Militia.

After the disembodiment of 21 Militia Batns. at home, ordered for Dec. 4 and 5, 63 battalions will remain embodied, of which 29 will be at home, 29 in South Africa, three in Malta, one in Egypt, and one in St. Helena, the latter having been previously in South Africa.

The War Office states that in view of the disembodiment of various regiments of Militia a prolonged period of training, and of the uncertainty which prevails as to the training of 1901, commanding officers have been directed to make the following communication to their regiments:—(1) It is hoped that the usual annual training of the Militia will not be required in 1901, but should unlooked for circumstances make such a training a national necessity the longest possible notice will be given. (2) In any case special facilities for leave will be given in 1901. (3) The messing allowance will be continued to all men entitled to it under the Army scale. (4) Non-commissioned officers will receive the pay of their Army rank. (5) Extra duty pay will be continued on the Army scale. (6) In future years an opportunity of earning additional remuneration will be afforded to Militiamen. Orders have been given, adds the War Office, for the following Militia battalions to be disembodied on the dates noted against them:—Dec. 4.—3rd Duke of Cornwall's L.I., 3rd Hampshire Regt., 3rd Royal Highlanders, 3rd Derbyshire Regt. Dec. 5.—3rd Northamptonshire Regt. Dec. 4.—4th Durham L.I., 3rd Somersetshire L.I., 3rd East Yorkshire Regt., 3rd Bedfordshire Regt., 3rd Cheshire Regt., 3rd South Staffordshire Regt., 4th Royal Dublin Fusiliers, 3rd Royal Scots Fusiliers. Dec. 5.—4th South Wales Borderers, 3rd Leicestershire Regt. Dec. 4.—3rd York and Lancaster Regt., 3rd Cameron Highlanders, 3rd R. Irish Fusiliers, 3rd Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, 6th Rifle Brigade, 5th King's Royal Rifles.

SIR ANDREW CLARKE, G.C.M.G., will preside at the Straits Settlements Dinner to be held in the Whitehall Rooms, Hotel Metropole, on Dec. 6.

THE Army Order on the subject of the South Africa war medal hangs fire on account of the difficulty in arranging as to clasps for special actions. The medals, however, are to be ready for issue as soon as the notification of Her Majesty's approval appears.

THE FORCES OF THE SMALLER COLONIES.

(WITH COLOURED SUPPLEMENT.)

Our account of the military forces of the Empire—which has yet to include the Indian Army—would be incomplete without a reference to the local and other forces of the smaller colonies. The principle which has been established, and is now acted upon, is that in the self-governing colonies the British troops shall occupy only the important strategic points, while the colonists themselves raise and maintain the forces required for their own safety, and as we have seen in the South African war, when the need arises, for the purposes of the Empire. The principle has been carried out in the Australian colonies, the Cape colonies, Canada—with the exception of Halifax—Newfoundland, and some other of our possessions. But Gibraltar, Malta, Bermuda, Barbados, Jamaica, Mauritius, Natal, Sierra Leone, St. Helena, Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, and Hong Kong, are still garrisoned by Imperial troops supported in many cases by local forces. The West India Regiment and the Chinese Regiment are well known for the good service they have rendered. There is the Hong Kong Regiment recruited from Mahomedans of the Punjab, and organised like the battalions of the Indian Army, with a small establishment of British officers. The Asiatic Artillery is another valuable force, with companies distributed in Hong Kong, Singapore, Ceylon, and Mauritius. This force is also recruited from the natives of India. The African Artillery, recruited from West Indian negroes, has companies in Sierra Leone, Jamaica, and St. Lucia. There are also Asiatic Submarine Mining detachments, African Engineers, and other special forces.

It would be difficult, indeed, to describe the many organised bodies of troops which exist for local defence and the preservation of the peace in the Crown colonies and the territories of Chartered Companies. We illustrate typical examples of these invaluable forces in the Mauritius Garrison Artillery, the Hong Kong Police, the Malay States Guides, and the North Borneo Dyak Police. Since 1870 the Imperial troops have been gradually withdrawn from many of the colonies, but these sturdy representatives of our strength are doing good service in every part of the Queen's dominions. Thus in Ceylon the Imperial troops are supported by local forces of unpaid Volunteers, consisting of artillery, mounted infantry, and infantry of mixed nationalities. At Hong Kong the local forces consist of a permanent armed police, of whom part are Europeans, part Sikhs, and the rest Chinamen, and there is a force of Volunteer Artillery, partly British, and partly Parsees. There is the local battalion of Royal Artillery for Hong Kong and Singapore, and another for Ceylon and Mauritius, and in the latter garrison is a force of civil police. In the Straits Settlements the local troops are Volunteer artillery (British) with Maxim guns, and a body of police composed of Europeans and Sikhs. The Malay States Guides are an admirable force recruited in India. The British North Borneo Company has its own local forces, consisting of the Dyak Police, to preserve the peace in the Company's territory, extending over an area of 31,000 square miles, with a population of 200,000.

In addition to the forces of the South African colonies, which, like those of Australasia, we have described in previous articles, there are many local troops in our African Dominions. Thus in the British East Africa Protectorate are the East Africa Rifles, formed out of the forces of the British East Africa Company. Bechuanaland has its police, and so also Gambia, while the Gold Coast and Lagos Constabulary are well known. The Niger Coast Protectorate and Southern Nigeria have important organisations of constabulary, while the Niger Territory has its well known Frontier Force, with which many British officers are employed. The Frontier Police of Sierra Leone and the well-known Uganda Rifles, who have done such hard fighting in East Africa, may be said to complete the roll of our troops in the African Continent. Reference may also be made to the police at Barbadoes and British Guiana, and the constabulary in British Honduras and Jamaica, to which several forces British officers are attached.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos
in Bond for Export.

Reviews.

THE "TIMES" HISTORY OF THE WAR.*

A work so comprehensive and so generally accurate, according to existing knowledge, as the "Times" History of the War in South Africa, must take a foremost place at once, and of right, in contemporary literature. It may, indeed, be fairly predicted that if this great project be continued on the same lines, and the succeeding volumes are of the same value as this first issued, the book will become the chief authority of the war, until displaced by the great official record which we are promised, but which may not see the light during the present generation. The subject matter of this first volume deals entirely with the preliminaries of the war, which are told in a masterly fashion. Such antecedent history has been greatly obscured by the clash of arms, but the time is approaching when it must be closely and attentively weighed and reconsidered, for it bears very forcibly upon the eventual settlement of the conquered Republics. Now, when exaggerated sentiment finds increasing expression in pro-Boer circles at home and abroad, it is well that the policy which brought on the war should be once more set forth clearly and distinctly. A feeling prevails in some circles that the Boers have been hardly used, that their stubborn resistance is the sturdy protest of a free people against oppression; that, in fact, they have been fighting for their independence. Their champions will do well to follow the course of the negotiations as set forth in this history, and consider dispassionately the clear drift of the Boer policy for some years past. It must surely be plain that the struggle was not to secure their own independence, but for the unjustifiable right claimed by one small section to oppress the rest of the community. Mr. Kruger set his face resolutely against any concessions to the Uitlanders because he foresaw that by giving them the franchise he would strengthen the hands of the progressive and peaceful party, which had Joubert at its head. By the aid of the Uitlanders' vote Joubert would no doubt have dispossessed Kruger at the next election. As it was, indeed, Joubert at one time went very near election, and we must all deplore his defeat. But Kruger, when he found himself secure gave a free vent to his ambitious aims, which were no less than to make himself the Napoleon of South Africa. His vaulting ambition, like that of his prototype, has overleapt itself as we know. But little more than a year ago he firmly believed that he had but to put forth his hand to secure the supremacy in South Africa. He fully expected to realise his dream, which was to pull down the British power, and place the British colonial population in the same subservient condition as were the Uitlanders in the Transvaal. His whole policy was influenced and dictated by the solution of this one question, to determine whether England or the Transvaal was to be the paramount force in South Africa. It has been said that this ambition dated no further back than the Jameson Raid, but it was far older. Kruger was entirely dominated by the idea that we could not face him or overcome him if the matter was put to the touchstone of conflict. It was at first no more than "a vague, sentimental aspiration," but it passed at length into a settled policy, backed up by the unstinting expenditure of his considerable means. How patiently, but how extensively he laid in materials of war we never exactly realised until the rupture was imminent. Our Intelligence Department was, no doubt, in possession of most of the facts appertaining to the Boer armaments, and they were duly submitted to our Government. But, as we know, it was loth to believe the truth, or more exactly, hesitated to take action till the eleventh hour, feeling, to the last, that a pacific issue was still possible. There was nothing of this sort in Kruger's mind; no wavering of purpose, no weakening in his fixed resolve to take the initiative in attack. As we are told in this history, he had made up his mind to strike the first blow much sooner, but was prevented by the unexpected difficulty he found in moving and providing for his forces in the field. The delay was providential from our point of view, for, weak as we were in October when the first reinforcements reached Natal, a month sooner we should have been absolutely powerless to make any stand. Had the ultimatum been presented in September, had Joubert's invasion followed forthwith, the Boers would certainly have overrun the whole colony of Natal, and might indeed have threatened, if not occupied Cape Town itself.

Here, then, we have the true inwardness of the whole momentous story. The Boers deliberately proposed to eject us from South Africa. The conspiracy, and it was no less, had been slowly planned and perfected, and it might have gone much nearer success under conditions more favourable to the enemy, less happy for us. We may commend to those who sympathise with the now expiring Boer power the careful perusal of these facts. At the same time we may safely leave it to the common-sense of the world at large to decide which would have been best for humanity and the cause of civilisation: the supremacy of Boer or Briton at the Cape.

THE AMIR OF AFGHANISTAN.

The Life of Abdur Rahman, Amir of Afghanistan (John Murray), is undoubtedly one of the most interesting biographies which have appeared for many years. Its special interest lies in the fact that it is the personal explanation of the ideals and the statecraft of an Oriental potentate who has loomed large in recent history. It has been edited by Mir Munshi, Sultan Mahomed Khan, who describes himself on the title page as "Advanced Student of Christ's College, Cambridge; Secretary of State of Afghanistan; Barrister-at-Law." Mr. Murray explains that the first eleven chapters, which contain the narrative of the Amir's early life, of the strange vicissitudes of his career, his adventures, successes and failures, his eleven years' imprisonment in Russian Turkistan, and finally of his accession to the Afghan Throne, were written by the Amir himself, and translated by the Mir Munshi, while the remaining chapters, which deal with the consolidation of Afghanistan and its domestic and foreign policy, have been taken down from the Amir's lips by the same official. We must be content to say of the first volume of the book that it is exceedingly instructive, and at the same time in many parts vastly entertaining. There is something very naive, fresh, and even childlike in some parts of the Amir's confidences, but at the same time the reader discerns that he has always been a man of distinguished character, who has pursued his purposes with unflinching assiduity, and a very penetrating judgment. It is most curious, upon opening the second volume, to find the Amir speaking of the many speculations which have been made as to the successor to the throne of Kabul, and the various conjectures as to Habibullah Khan, Nasrullah Khan and Mahomed Omar. But, although it would not be difficult to discern the Amir's purpose, he quite declines to state it in these pages. His Highness appears to have had a particular objection to Lord Lansdowne's government, and it will illustrate his dogged perseverance if we say that, when his Hotchkiss guns were stopped in India in 1893, he set to work with Indian and Kabuli artisans, constructed models, and made a Hotchkiss which stood all tests. Throughout the book Abdur Rahman displays a most friendly spirit towards England, though he makes many a thrust at Anglo-Indian administrators. His remarks upon Russia are significant:—

"I think it necessary to mention here that the Russian policy of aggression is slow and steady, but firm and unchangeable. If they once make up their minds to do a thing, there is no stopping them, and no changing their policy. It is not the case with them, as with some other countries, that every party that comes into power can undo the work that has been done by the party itself."

The Amir was particularly offended at the stopping of the guns, which he describes as a new thing in the history of civilised nations, and says that he was humiliated in the eyes of his own subjects. The disturbed relations with the Government of India were repugnant to him, and he remarks that it was not pleasant to think that the Government of Afghanistan "was to a certain extent under any Viceroy of India who might be appointed, and that the Amir of Afghanistan should be merely a tool and a puppet to be made to dance by a Viceroy." His highness has always been particularly anxious that he should be directly represented at the Court of St. James's, and it may be suspected that this work is published, in some sense, as a plea against the Indian Government. It was in order to establish direct relations that his son, Nasrullah Khan, was sent to England, and the Amir states frankly that the visit proved a complete failure. In relation to this matter there is a note of bitterness in his pages. He says he was more than hurt by the failure, but it is characteristic of his benevolent philosophy that he advises his sons and successors not to take serious offence, and enforces his wish by a pretty parable. Abdur Rahman's main argument is no doubt a just one—that the interests of Afghanistan and Great Britain are identical.

"The Russian policy in Asia is that in any way, rightly or wrongly, friendly or unfriendly, with peace or war, the Islamic Kingdoms should be washed away from the face of the Asiatic continent. . . . It is Russia's desire to absorb and swallow up Persia, Turkey and Afghanistan, but in the event of this plan failing, she would then try to cut off the Islamic Governments from the friendship of England, and draw them towards herself, so that they might take up arms against England."—"Russian invasion of India would be not only difficult, but impossible, so far as one can judge from present conditions. It does not follow, however, that Russia has no intention of invading India; there is not the slightest doubt that Russia is determined, and certain in her heart to attack India whenever she finds an opportunity to do so. . . . The Russians believe that they can go on breaking promises and treaties and advancing further and ever moving onward; on the other hand, the English show either indifference to this constant aggression, or satisfy themselves by taking a corner for themselves, which is a definite proof of England's weakness and the terror with which she regards Russia."

Nevertheless the Amir has confidence. He disapproves the forward policy, and would like England to give Afghanistan more confidence and more moral and material support, and to allow her ruler to annex the territories of the independent Pathan tribe. "But praise be to Allah!" he says, "both the English and the Afghans have sufficient sense to understand that their safety and strength lie in being united and that danger lies in disunion." With this quotation we must conclude our notice of what is certainly a work of extraordinary and unusual interest.

AUTUMNS IN ARGYLESHIRE.

This is the title of a delightful book by the Hon. A. E. Gathorne-Hardy (Longmans and Co.), which embodies a number of sketches published in the National Review, the Badminton Magazine, and Rod and Gun. The author has a very distinct literary gift, and has prepared a volume which is singularly pleasant to read, and will be valued by all sportsmen and lovers of out-door life. It does not rank far behind Charles St. John's Wild Sports of the Highlands, which is a masterpiece of sporting literature. Things have changed very much in the country which Scott described, and sport has become more luxurious and more expensive, though deer forests have not increased in value to the same extent as grouse moors and salmon rivers. One charm of Mr. Gathorne-Hardy's book is that it describes the shooting of one place—Poltalloch, the beautiful property of the Malcolms, just opposite to the Crinan Canal, to which the author has resorted every autumn since the year 1867. The estate comprises upwards of 100,000 acres of moorland and plantations with arable and pasture land in straths and glens. It extends southward along the Sound of Jura to the mouth of Loch Sween in Cantyre, and is bounded on the west by Lochs Crinan and Craignish, and extends north and east along the shores of Loch Awe. This romantic region is a veritable sportsman's paradise, and Mr. Gathorne-Hardy describes with facile pen many a delightful day which he has spent by moor and stream. Like St. John, he evidently could scarcely bring himself to shoot the graceful roe, although he is very proud of his bags. The variety of the sport is very great, and we have never read better description. The author is both a naturalist and a lover of scenery, and his book has the advantage of being illustrated by Mr. Archibald Thorburn, who never fails to interpret well scenes of sporting life. A more attractive volume on sport at home has not appeared for some years.

Vanity Fair presents its readers this week with a very admirable "General Reader" from the masterly pencil of "Spy," who has done so many "living images" for our excellent contemporary, but who has never done better than this representation of Lord Roberts and of eleven of his "officers of fame and service," whose names are household words with us all. They are in their khaki uniform and war paint, and, indeed, it might be thought that the colour had caught on to their faces; but every man is there in his bodily presentment as his friends see him in the life—and full of character, attitude, features, expression, legs and all, without flattery. "Spy" has not tried to idealise—nor to beautify, but he has been real to the last buckle and button. If objection could be made to any detail it would perhaps be justified in the case of Lord Roberts' figure, which seems to be foreshortened unhappily in his chair. Plumer, Hunter, Macdonald, Buller, Baden-Powell, Dundonald, Kitchener, Pole-Carew, White, Carrington, and French, are there to the manner born, and though wives and daughters may find a nose too long or an eye too small, here and there, those who know the men will admit that "Spy" has presented them to the world with unmistakable similitude, and the general public can find no better introduction than—indeed they cannot find so good as—this Vanity Fair cartoon.

The Life of a Century, by Edwin Hodder, is a serial publication (George Newnes, Limited) of which we have received the first two parts. It is intended to survey the politics, religion, commerce, art, science, &c., of the century, and the early parts are well illustrated and satisfactory.

FOR THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH "Epps's Glycerine Jujubes" always prove effective. They soften and clear the voice, and are invaluable to all suffering from cough, soreness, or dryness of the throat. Sold only in labelled tins, price 7d. and 1s. 1d. James Epps and Co., Ltd., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

CAPTAIN GALL, Late Northumberland Fusiliers.
AND
CAPTAIN H. C. KING, Late of 6, Clifton Gardens, W.
90a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.,
Prepare Pupils for
ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS.
Individual Attention Guaranteed. Lists of Successes and Terms on Application.

* "Times" History of the War in South Africa. Sampson Low.

ST. PAULI

(BREWERY: BREMEN)

LAGER OR PILSENER BEER.

SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER IN THE MARKET.

ANNUAL EXPORT, 12,000,000 BOTTLES.

Supplied to all the Principal LONDON Clubs.
The Messes of the British and German Navies, &c., &c.
AGENTS IN—EUROPE:ALDERSHOT.
ATHENS.
CHATHAM.
CONSTANTINOPLE.
GENOA.
GIBRALTAR.
LISBON.
MALTA.
NAPLES.
PORTSMOUTH.
PLYMOUTH.ASIA:ADEN.
BAGHDAD.
BANGKOK.
BOMBAY.
BUSHIRE.
CALCUTTA.
CEYLON.
HONG KONG.
KARACHI.
MADRAS.
MAURITIUS.
NOVA GOA.
PENANG.
RANGOON.
SHANGHAI.
SINGAPORE.
TEHERAN.AFRICA:ALEXANDRIA.
BEYROUTH.
BONNY.
CAIRO.
MASSOWAH.
MOMBASA.
SUAKIM.
SUZ.
PORT SAID.
TANGIERS.
AMERICA:
ANTIGUA.
BARBADOS.
JAMAIKA.
JAMAICA.
MONTEVIDEO.
ST. LUCIA.
TRINIDAD.AUSTRALIA:
ADELAIDE.
BRISBANE.
MELBOURNE.
PERTH.
SYDNEY.
NAPIER.

And all the Principal NAVAL and MILITARY Stations.

The ST. PAULI BREWERIES CO., Limited
8, Great Winchester Street, London, E.C.JEROME SACCONE,

LIMITED,

GIBRALTAR,
WINE, SPIRIT, & CIGAR
MERCHANTS
TO THEARMY & NAVY.

LONDON HOUSE:

15, COCKSPUR STREET.Wine Shipped FREIGHT FREE to any port in the Mediterranean, and half-freight to India and the Cape.Telegraphic Addresses:
"Saccone, Gibraltar." "Saccone, London."SATURDAY REVIEW

OF

Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review
are treated only by Naval and Military men.The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:

8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.

HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,

KILTS, TREWS,

TARTAN PANTALOONS.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING
MILKAS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.
A PERFECTUNSWEETENED*CONDENSED MILKFrom the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.
AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK
Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS,
ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this
good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.

WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.

Apply for particulars, Sample, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,144, New Bond Street,
LONDON, W.TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.*Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.*H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOXAppropriately arranged for everyday use as a lasting memento.PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.*SHELTON & BALL,*Military and Court Tailors,*180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
(Opposite Burlington Gardens.)New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).THREE CHEERS FOR THE*RED*WHITE*& BLUE*COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.TRANSVAAL WAR.DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT
THE FRONT A SUPPLY OFBRAND'S*BEEF TEA*TABULES.To be had of ALL CHEMISTS, GROCERS, and STORES. In boxes of 12, price 2s. 3d.One tabule with boiling water makes a cup of savoury and nutritious Beef Tea.BRAND & Co., Ltd., Mayfair, W.

... THE ...

Royal Navy List.

(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.

Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST

CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER

10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS

(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.

"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—*Nautical Magazine.*Officers are earnestly requested to send at once their special services to the Editor.WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.
Advt. Dept. 1—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)Burton Brewery*COMPANY, LIMITED,*BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.

BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.

Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO

Mr. E. RUGGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trentor Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street, Alexandria, Egypt.DAY & MARTIN,
LIMITED.GOLD MEDAL. PARIS, 1900.

A VOLUNTEER WRITES FROM POTCHEFSTROOM:—

Aug. 1, 1900.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been requested by a few comrades to testify
as to the remarkable qualities of your "dubbin" as supplied to the troops by H. M. Government.Not only for preserving our boots, but for applying to the feet to prevent blisters; as fat for cooking chappatties, and for burning as candles, it is found of great service to "Tommy Atkins at the front."DAY & MARTIN'S
DUBBINIs Waterproof and absolutely the best Article for use on Shooting and Fishing Boots.NOW READY.

A list of the Coloured Plates forming the series of

TYPES OF THE INDIAN ARMYwhich will be issued as supplements to this paper, commencing January 5, 1901.ALSO READY.

A complete list of the

TYPES OF THE BRITISH AND COLONIAL FORCES.which have been issued with the
"ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sent Post Free on Application.

LONDON: 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.

Notices.THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.All EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.The rates of Subscription for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.	TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year... .. £1 8 0	One Year... .. £1 12 6
Six Months... .. 0 14 0	Six Months... .. 0 16 6
Three Months... .. 0 7 0	Three Months... .. 0 8 6

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid
in advance.RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE will be fixed on application.
BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—
Price 5s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED FOR REVIEW.In the Web of a War; Cunliffe's History of the Boer War, Vol. I. (Methuen). Life of Abdur Rahman, Amir of Afghanistan, 2 Vols; A Sea-King's Midshipman; Boer Politics (John Murray). The Problem of Asia,
Capt. Mahan (Sampson Low). Khurasan and Sistan,
Lieut.-Col. Yate (Blackwood). Sparks from a Camp
Fire, Capt. Creagh (Chapman and Hall). London's Peril (Downey). A Century of Fox-Hunting (R. A.
Everett). Campaign Pictures of the War in South Africa, by A. G. Hales (Cassell and Co.). The Times
History of the War in South Africa, Vol. I. (Sampson Low).Magazines for December:—Pall Mall, Cornhill, Longmans, Macmillan's, Blackwood's, Humanitarian,
Harper's, Century Illustrated, Nineteenth Century,
Badminton, Antiquary, Genealogical, Northern Counties.

TEACHER'S "HIGHLAND CREAM" SCOTCH WHISKY.

QUALITY UNRIVALLED.

WM. TEACHER & SONS,
Glasgow, London, and Manchester.

Important Notice . . .

THE ARMY AND NAVY STATIONS Lists, which has been suspended for the past few months, will be resumed with our issue of December 15 next, and will be published on the third week of each succeeding month.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1900.

ON A WAR FOOTING.

THE circumstance that at a time when we are at peace with the civilised world, and virtually in alliance with most of the principal Powers, the Navy League should demand that our fleets should be placed on a war footing is a curious commentary upon the harmony of nations. The only possible explanation of such a move on our part that we can conceive would be the discovery of the existence of a plot on the part of two or more of the great sea Powers to fall upon this country unawares with the ultimate intention of dismembering the Empire. Of course we are aware that people do exist who believe in such a plot, because we read their lucubrations in the daily Press; but, as they have never yet produced a tittle of evidence in support of their contention, it is hardly worth while considering them. But the Navy League is another matter altogether. It is a body which, if somewhat pessimistic, is at least perfectly sane, and yet here we find this body urging Government to take a step which must have world-wide results, and yet for which there is apparently no adequate reason whatever. Moreover, the demand, preposterous as it seems to us, does not lack for countenance and support in influential and well-informed quarters. Now, what are we to suppose from this? Either that the Navy League is in possession of some important information as to the projects of foreign Powers, and from a trustworthy source—or and this seems more probable—that the Navy League means by the phrase "a war footing" something very different to what we do. In the former alternative it is not, however, merely one portion of the fleet that should be placed on a war footing; nor would it be sufficient to stop short at this point. The only effective reply to such a project as we have indicated would be immediate action such as, for instance, we took at Copenhagen and the Russians at Sinope. This is the way to nip such plots in the bud. Is it possible, however, to believe that anything in the shape of a combination of European Powers against this country can exist outside the heated imagination of a few dreamers? We have passed through a good many war scares and are fairly well acquainted with the symptoms, but at present we see none of them. On the contrary, while we are far from saying that we should relax our vigilance or diminish our efforts in the direction of preparing against possible contingencies, such signs as there are seem to point to us to a peaceful beginning of the new century.

There is the other alternative, which is well worth consideration. What is the meaning of placing the Navy on a war footing? By this phrase we understand the mobilisation of the Reserves, the commissioning of every available ship, the cessation of the ordinary educational courses and methods of training, the shepherding of foreign men-of-war, the picketing of the trade routes, and many other measures which must affect and dislocate business and commerce throughout the Empire. And what it means in the movement of the machinery of mobilisation for the Navy and the nation collectively, it means also in a relative sense for every individual ship. Every man-of-war, it is true, is in some measure on a war footing at all times, and yet those who are acquainted with naval life are aware there is yet a great deal to be done in each one of them before she can be said to be prepared for instant battle. Those who have seen a man-of-war ready to fight and expecting to open fire on an enemy will know what we mean. In comparison with the condition of affairs we refer to the so-called evolution of "Clearing ship for action" is but a perfunctory and make-believe business. We can hardly believe that it is the desire of the Navy League that the ships of the Channel and the Mediterranean Squadrons should remain permanently in the state of preparation we have pictured, and yet this, and no less, is what they demand, and is properly described as being on a war footing. And as it is with the ships so with the squadrons of which they are the units. If, for example, Sir John Fisher is instructed to place the force at his disposal on a war footing, is it to be supposed that he will allow it to be scattered as it is now? There are necessarily some ships detached for purposes of training, and others are stationed temporarily at various ports engaged in duties which would either automatically cease, or at least must be dispensed with, in time of war. Not only the internal economy of the ships, their stations, and the composition of the squadrons would be affected by an order to place them on a war footing, but the political effect of such a menacing movement would probably be calculated to bring about the very opposite result to that which could be desired under the conditions now ruling.

It seems necessary, then, to look about for another meaning to this phrase if we are to understand what the Navy League is driving at. We gather from a part of the letter they have issued that they are desirous of seeing the Mediterranean and Channel Squadrons supplied with additional cruisers, and perhaps with some other of those auxiliary vessels which go towards completing the effectiveness of the naval fighting machine. If this is all that they mean by the term "a war footing" we are entirely with them. In both the squadrons they mention there is a lamentable lack of cruisers, if we take as our standard of effective strength the numbers which are supplied when the fleets are mobilised for manœuvres. In the Mediterranean, for example, even including the four ships of the training squadron now there, there are not more cruisers than there are battleships, while in the Channel the disproportion is still more striking. Affairs in China and South Africa are partly responsible for this state of things, and it is probable that at no previous period of our history since the introduction of steam and steel have we had so many men-of-war in commission. Nevertheless, if more are required, more should be found; the important point to bear in mind being that the various squadrons should be kept at a strength suited to the situation, while it can hardly be seriously disputed that the Government and its naval advisers at the Admiralty or in command afloat are the best judges of what the situation demands. With regard to what we have called adjuncts of a fleet, the auxiliaries, which if not absolutely essential in peace time, will largely increase the mobility and fighting efficiency of our squadrons in time of war, it is at least highly desirable that some of these should be supplied if only for purposes of trial and experience. While, therefore, we cannot help thinking it a mistake to talk about placing fleets on a war footing when so very much less is meant, we acknowledge that, with the qualified meaning of the phrase we assume to be that of the Navy League, they have in this case asked for no more than has many times been suggested as highly desirable by this journal.

Navy Notes.

Admiral Sir J. O. Hopkins directs attention to the speed of our cruisers in the current issue of the Navy League Journal. The admiral, whose views are most clearly entitled to respect, deplors the lack of speed exhibited by so many of the cruisers built for the British Navy since the Naval Defence Act, his chief point being that we have failed to improve upon the speed of the ships designed ten years ago under the Hamilton programme, whilst foreign navies now possess cruisers capable of steaming 23 knots. The facts given by Sir J. Hopkins are indisputable, facts that may be found tabulated in the "Naval Annual." The British second-class cruisers of the Hamilton programme mostly attained speeds of 19 to 20 knots on trial, and proved very capable steamers on service. We have since increased the tonnage of nearly all classes of cruisers without attaining improvement in speed, whilst in several cases speed has actually declined. The defects of water tube boilers are, of course, partly responsible for our lack of progress, but if the Russians can get 23 knots out of a cruiser of 6,500 tons we should be able to do as much. Admiral Hopkins refers, too, to the success of certain ships built for foreign Powers by our own Elswick Company. Some of these cruisers of 4,000 tons are credited with a speed of 24 knots, whilst no cruiser of equal displacement in the British Navy has ever exceeded a speed of 20 knots under the most favourable circumstances. "Any Commander-in-Chief," writes Admiral Hopkins, "would gladly accept the Buenos Ayres type for his second-class cruisers, looking at her enormous speed (23 knots), her good coal storage and armament, rather than the same number of Astræas, hampered by compromises which reduce their speed to 19½ knots." The admiral is also of opinion that almost any of our young captains would choose the Buenos Ayres type in preference to cruisers of equal tonnage designed by our Admiralty. These comparisons have, to be sure, been made more than once, and the superiority of the Elswick designs cannot seriously be disputed. But the interesting point brought out by Sir J. Hopkins is the failure of our designers to keep pace with the improved speed of foreign cruisers—a matter of vital importance in war. We have reduced the weight of the boilers and enormously increased the steam pressure, yet the increased speed that ought to result is not forthcoming. The admiral scores another point in the tail of his article, asking why the Admiralty are content to contract for 20-knots speed in the case of the four new cruisers for which tenders were recently invited. Why, indeed?

The battle of Gras Pan, in which our seamen and marines did so well, took place a year ago last Sunday. We have not noticed that the anniversary has been celebrated in any way, but surely it is fitting that the occasion should be marked by some function and not allowed to fade out of public recollection. Twelve months having passed away, we are not inclined to reopen the questions raised at the time as to whether the Naval Brigade should have been there, or being there should have been used as infantry, or being used as infantry should have been under the command of a naval officer; all this is now beside the mark. The point to remember is that in no engagement or action of the whole war was greater pluck and gallantry displayed. Canon Rawnsley the other day called attention in the Times to the circumstance that in all probability had he lived, young Huddart, of the Doris, would have received the Victoria Cross, and in addition to this young midshipman we lost Commander Ethelston, of the Powerful, Major Plumbe and Captain Senior, of the Marines, with two blue-jackets and ten marines. Here it was also that Captain Prothero and Lieut. Jones were wounded, while the total casualties were very nearly one-third of the force engaged. We trust that now the war is nearly over and the men from the ships have returned, that an attempt will be made to bring together into one volume some record of the brave achievements and arduous labours of the Naval Brigades in South Africa. The materials exist both for writing the story and illustrating it, and it only requires somebody to put it together in readable shape to make a memento, which all those connected with the Sea Service would prize.

Considerable interest is being expressed at the present time in the possible future of the Naval Ordnance Department. This department is in process of reorganisation and, as we have already stated, it is much to be desired that some naval officers should be appointed to it. The alternative appears to be to appoint civilians, and it is unlikely that these latter can possess that thorough knowledge of guns and all connected with them, which is a necessary qualification. There are now three vacancies in the rank of assistant naval ordnance officer—one vacancy dates from December, 1898, the second from December, 1899, and the most recent from September, 1900. No steps have, we believe, been taken to fill up these appointments permanently, and it is openly stated that a contest is going on amongst those in authority as to whether civilians or Naval and Marine officers should be appointed. Civilians have indeed been temporarily posted to these vacant offices, but not only will it be an injustice to the naval service if they receive the appointments permanently, but from the point of view of efficiency it will also be a mistake. There is no reason to doubt that the views of the officers transferred from the Army who are serving in the department are not in accordance with this suggestion, and we hope that nothing in the shape of vested interests will be allowed to stand in the way of a course which is so eminently desirable on every ground.

It is rumoured that the Admiralty intend creating a rank of accountant officer, on the active list, senior to that of fleet-paymaster, and promoting a dozen officers from the latter grade. We hope that the statement is correct; but at the same time we trust that advancement will be made by selection, in the manner that obtains with the inspectorial grades of the medical and engineer branches, and not by seniority only. Appointments in such a newly-formed position should apply principally to the general depôts at home. It would be somewhat inconsistent to confer them on those who lead the virtually do-nothing existence of an accountant officer in the drill-ships Clyde, Dædalus, President, and Eagle, where his services are unnecessary. Hitherto such desirable appointments as coast guard districts and drill ships have been conferred irrespective of seniority. Junior officers obtained them while older men were put to the treadmill of hard labour in Divisions No. 2 at Portsmouth, Plymouth, or Chatham. It would do no harm if promotion to Fleet-Paymaster were also obtained by merit instead of seniority. An officer who has barely kept his head above water may attain the highest rates of full pay and retirement merely by serving. An application of the official pruning knife would be advantageous to the accountant branch.

From South Africa we have accounts of a gallant action performed some time since by Sub-Lieut. Lecky, of the Widgeon. This vessel was, it appears, sent up on the East coast in order to determine if it were possible to land troops through Amatongaland. The vessel took up with her a party of Steinmaker's scouts and also surf-boats. In the attempt to get the men on shore a surf-boat capsized, and as she was rolling over one of the scouts, who was unable to swim, was seen to be in danger of being swept out to sea. Thereupon Mr. Lecky seized a line, and, jumping into the water, swam out to the spot, and was able to pass it to the scout, so that both of them could be dragged on shore. Mr. Lecky is the son of Captain Lecky, R.N.R., the well-known author of "Wrinkles on Navigation." That his gallant conduct will receive recognition goes without saying. We are glad to be able to record such a plucky piece of work.

Lieut. Frederick R. Harrold, of the Pactolus, for the second time in succession secured the Hornby Challenge Cup in the fancy-rig handicap sailing race of the Channel Squadron regatta at Arosa Bay last week. A very strong wind prevailed at the time and greatly damaged the chances of several of the sixty-five boats that competed. Captain F. J. Foley, of the Furious, would have secured second place but for an accident to his galley's rigging. He was, however, only twenty seconds behind Captain W. Wilson, of the Resolution, to whom the mishap gave the advantage. The three afore-named officers managed their boats with admirable ability, demonstrating that seamanship has not yet "gone by the board."

Of the officers who took part in the affair at Obligado, 1845, referred to in our issue of last week, we find that the following are still "with us." Admiral of the Fleet Sir J. Edmund Commerell, V.C. (midshipman), Captain James Kiddle (master's assistant), and General Sir Charles Barnard Read (first lieut.), who were in the Firebrand. Admiral Edward Field (midshipman), Comus; and Commander C. G. Fegen (midshipman), Gorgon. Admiral Thomas Saumarez was a midshipman at the time, but we cannot trace if he was present at the action. Colonel E. O. Domville, R.M.L.I., was also on the station in Melampus, but she does not appear to have been in the engagement. The South-east coast of America Station consisted at that period of the Vernon, flagship of Rear-Admiral S. H. Inglefield; Eagle (now at Liverpool), Melampus and Curagoa, frigates. The Cyclops, Firebrand and Gorgon, paddle steamers. The Acorn, Comus and Grecian, sailing sloops; and the Dolphin and Spider, brigantines. This was rather a large squadron, but prize-money was made in those days.

It is rumoured that the Admiralty are negotiating for widening Queen Street, Portsea, the thoroughfare that leads from the main gate of the dockyard to the Lion gate entrance of the Naval Barracks, now under construction. More than a decade back, when the extension of the yard was discussed, the north side of Queen Street was mentioned as the future boundary. A worthy chief engineer of that establishment was asked at the time if he had sufficient space, and replied, "No! not enough to swing a cat in. Push the yard into Queen Street and we may then be able to do our work." Unfortunately such an operation would involve more than the acquisition of existing dwellings, as there are two churches, three chapels, and a brewery to be considered. The household property in the rear of Queen Street is a most undesirable feature. Very old and insanitary houses, stuffed into courts and alleys where fresh air and sunlight never visit, largely obtain. The domiciles adjacent to the dockyard walls and the old convict prison are, we hope, scheduled for demolition on the Admiralty becoming their owners, and the same in respect of the vile slums that exist in the rear of the former Army barracks that are now naval property. It would, undoubtedly, be a costly venture to purchase the whole of this property, but it is unwise to split up the area. Portsmouth Yard requires enlarging. Sufficient ground to the eastward of the present boundary is hardly procurable, and therefore the First Lord should insist on obtaining the Queen Street locality.

A somewhat curious point was raised at a meeting of the Association of Port Sanitary Authorities in London yesterday week in connection with the exemption of Government vessels from the provisions of the Public Health Act in regard to infectious diseases. The chairman was of opinion that such exemption exposed this country to danger, but he seemed by his remarks to refer more particularly to foreign men-of-war than to our own Government vessels. He instanced the case of a Russian Royal yacht coming up the Thames and having on board a serious case of typhus, and he argued that means should be adopted to prevent the occurrence of such a thing again. Among the other speakers there seemed to be unanimity so far as the necessity of inspection by the local authority of foreign ships goes, and also to some extent of troop-ships, but Dr. Harris, who represents Southampton, said that he hoped the Association would not ask for powers to inspect her Majesty's warships without careful consideration. Surely it would be quite sufficient if the Admiralty and War Office instruct their medical officers to give notice to the local authority on entering a port if they have a case of infectious disease on board. Mr. Smith, who represents Rochester and Chatham, was not of this opinion, and urged the inspection of all Government vessels by the port authorities, and a resolution to this effect was carried by the meeting. As to the exact bearing of this question we are not fully informed at present, but looking merely at the facts cited in support of the resolution it seems to us to partake very largely of that fussy meddling with matters which is unfortunately too frequently characteristic of local authorities.

At Exeter last week, when General Sir Redvers Buller was enrolled as a citizen of that ancient town and presented with a sword of honour, Admirals Sir William Dowell and Sir Alexander Buller, Rear-Admiral Mather Byles and Captain Sir Edward Chichester were present. At the banquet which followed the last-named officer responded for "Our Guests from South Africa," and stated that himself and family were greatly indebted to Sir Redvers Buller, as his (Sir Edward's) eldest son was, with the Naval Brigade, locked up in Ladysmith, and the gallant general got him out. Sir Redvers Buller, who preceded Sir Edward Chichester, in acknowledging the toast, said he was glad to have had the chance of saying something about the transport work, which was performed without a hitch.

Lady Charles Montagu-Douglas-Scott, wife of the Admiral Commander-in-Chief of the Plymouth Station, has kindly promised to lay the memorial stone of the new Royal Sailors' Home at Devonport on Friday, 14th prox.

THE BRAVERY OF THE BOERS.—"No more contemptible injustice was ever done to beaten enemies than that which by far too great a portion of our usually impartial press has been done to these Dutchmen. Instances of bravery, nay, of heroism, have been so numerous and so sustained that it would be an insult to the doers of the deeds to catalogue them in any way as lusus naturæ in dispositions naturally craven; and of collective heroism, without, astonishing in a soldiery brought up in a school of pure individualism. Witness the staunch stand in the trenches at Pieter's Hill, under a rain of huge projectiles the like of which no soldier has ever seen before, or the dash upon Broadwood's guns at Tigerpoort, or the forlorn hope against Wagon Hill, when, if the British Army had not been blessed with souls as bold, it had surely lost a division from its list, and a town from its safe keeping. The British Army can ill brook such enemies being labelled 'cowards.' The Boers are brave men; in the name of fair play, let no one state otherwise, and let all, if possible, refrain from criticism too scathing because their tactics are not ours, because they have a rooted objection to the open, to being surrounded, or to fighting at the bottom of a hill when the top is available to them."—From Blackwood's Magazine, December.

Navy Personal.

Admiral Lord Walter Kerr's visit to the Glory at Portsmouth, last week, gave rise to a report in some of the daily papers that his lordship would probably relieve Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Seymour on the China station. Nothing could be wider of the mark, as it is a vice-admiral's appointment, and in every way improbable that a senior Naval Lord would be offered such a distant command.

Admiral Sir James Erskine will be sixty-two years of age to-morrow. On Friday next Admiral Edward S. Adeane completes his sixty-fourth year, and Rear-Admiral Pelham Aldrich, Admiral Superintendent of Portsmouth Yard, reaches the age of fifty-six the following day.

Admiral Lord Charles Scott was unable to attend the functions at Exeter last week in honour of General Sir Redvers Buller, as the annual meeting of the Royal Albert Hospital necessitated his presence as President of that institution.

Vice-Admiral Sir John A. Fisher has received the Queen's permission to accept and wear the Grand Cordon of the Order of the Osmanieh, which the Sultan of Turkey conferred on him on the occasion of his, Sir John's, visit to Constantinople for the celebration of his Imperial Majesty's jubilee. The gallant flag-officer was awarded the third-class of the Order in 1882 for his services during the Egyptian Expedition.

Rear-Admiral Thomas S. Jackson, in his capacity of Admiral-Superintendent of Devonport Dockyard, had the pleasure of presenting a young employé of that establishment with a gold watch and chain and a purse of thirty-three sovereigns on Saturday last, which had been provided by fellow-workmen of the recipient, in appreciation of his gallantry in jumping overboard from the Implacable last month and rescuing a shipwright foreman who had fallen into the water from that battleship.

Rear-Admiral H. Fletcher Campbell was present last week at the farewell dinner to Lord Amthill, given on the occasion of his lordship's appointment as Governor of Madras. The gallant flag officer has recently sold his estate Boquhan, Stirlingshire, for £60,000.

Captain Frederick S. Inglefield, of the Glory, after leaving Portsmouth on Saturday last for China to relieve the Centurion, maintained communication with the Hector, depot ship of wireless telegraphy, until he was fifty miles distant from that naval establishment.

Captain Frederick William B. Fisher, of the Magicienne, left Zanzibar on Sunday last for Kumayu in consequence of the Somalis having arisen against the administration in the Jebuland province of British East Africa. Commander Murray T. Parke, of the Blanche, leaves Devonport next week to relieve him after three years' foreign service.

Captain Casper J. Baker, of the Blake, arrived at Plymouth on Monday last with the paid-off crew of the Renown, and is to embark a new crew to re-commission the Empress of India at Malta.

Captain Frank H. Henderson, of the Hermes, pays off that vessel at Devonport on Saturday next, and will probably commission a larger cruiser during the coming month.

Captain Francis J. Foley, of the Furious, although unsuccessful in securing the Hornby boat-sailing prize, was able to obtain, as its first possessor, the challenge cup for service-rigged boats of the Channel Fleet, presented by Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson. He was nearly seven hours covering the course in his galley, with anything but a light breeze during the large portion of the race.

Captain J. G. M. Field, of the Marathon, left Singapore on Friday in last week to rejoin the East India Squadron from China.

Captain Arthur W. E. Prothero, of the Arrogant, left Plymouth on Sunday last to rejoin the Channel Squadron, after a long detention by the dockyard authorities at Devonport, in refitting her. This cruiser was commissioned in January, 1898, being at the time a new ship, and since then a considerable portion of the time has been spent in repairing and re-adjusting her machinery.

Captain Henry Leah, of the Diadem, left Plymouth on the 14th ult. for Gibraltar with a lighter, containing coaling plant, in tow, but had the misfortune to lose her off Ushant through stress of weather. In 1864 Captain J. F. B. Wainwright, of the Black Prince, towed a tug, for Ascension, as far as Madeira under most unfavourable conditions of weather. Ten years afterwards another tug, the present Trinculo, was towed from Portsmouth to the same naval establishment in the month of January by the store-ship Supply in virtually smooth water. We regret the bad fortune that attended the trip of the Diadem.

Captain Frederick G. Stopford, of the Pearl, recently returned from the North America and West India Station, pays off that cruiser at Devonport on Wednesday next.

Captain A. C. Galloway, of the Scylla, pays off that vessel at Chatham on Wednesday next.

Commander William R. Cresswell (retired Lieut., Royal Navy), Commandant of the South Australian Naval Defence Force, who commissioned the Protector, belonging to that Colony, in August last, and proceeded to China with an Australian contingent, left Hong Kong on Saturday last to return to Adelaide.

Commander Rosslyn E. Wemyss, of the Niobe, was entertained by the ward-room officers of that cruiser at dinner, on Tuesday last, at Devonport, prior to leaving them to take up, later on, the appointment of second in command of the Ophir, the Orient Company's steamship selected to convey the Duke of York to Australia. Commander Algernon Heneage, recently promoted for his services in South Africa, relieves Commander Wemyss in the Niobe.

Commander A. T. Taylor, of the Hebe, left Gibraltar on Tuesday last for Portsmouth to pay off that vessel.

Commander Edward F. Inglefield, of the Swallow, pays off that sloop at Sheerness on Friday next.

Commander Charles H. Dundas, who temporarily commanded the Philomel at the Cape of Good Hope during the recent absence of Captain John E. Bearcroft while commanding the Naval Brigade with Lord Roberts, arrived at Southampton on Saturday last in the Union-Castle steamship Tantallon Castle.

Lieut.-Commander A. H. Gordon, of the Sparrow, left Sheerness on Tuesday last for Australia to relieve the Ringdove.

Lieut. Robert N. Bax, Junior Staff Officer of the Cambridge, has been awarded the Royal Humane Society's medal for saving the life of a petty officer at Chatham in August last.

ROYAL MARINES.

Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Edward R. M. Crooke, R.M.A. (retired), recruiting staff officer at Edinburgh, is granted an extension of two years in that appointment.

Major and Hon. Lieut.-Colonel C. B. G. Dick, Paymaster of the Plymouth Division during the past seven years, is about to resign that appointment and become Secretary of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, whose station is at Gravesend. Yachting interests in the West of England, especially those at Plymouth, thereby lose a valuable supporter, and the Royal Marine theatre at Stonehouse a most zealous director. Local charities will also regret his departure as he willingly assisted them at bazaars and other functions in aid of their support.

Captain Richard L. Bayliff obtains the adjutancy of the 2nd V.B. Welsh Regiment.

Captain Frederick W. Luard, R.M.L.I., and Lieut. Basil A. Hill, R.M.A., are detailed for the Empress of India when recommissioned on the Mediterranean Station.

Captain Walter T. C. Jones, recently awarded the D.S.O. for his services in South Africa, especially during the engagement at Enslin, replaces Major James R. Goddard, of the Cambridge, on promotion.

Lieut. Arthur R. Maxwell relieves Lieut. H. A. Morgan in the Alexandria.

Lieut. F. G. Tanqueray-Willaume, R.M.A., joins the Hood when commissioned to replace the Thunderer as port guardship at Pembroke Dock.

Lieut. Leslie Wilson, invalided from South Africa, left for England in the transport Assaye on the 14th ult.

ELKINGTON & CO., LTD.

Goldsmiths, Silversmiths, and Court Jewellers.

THE ORIGINATORS AND PATENTEES OF ELECTRO PLATE.

ELKINGTON PLATE

Is the Finest Quality of Table Ware the World can Produce.

CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

Special Designs for Presentation Services prepared and submitted Free of Charge.

London Showrooms:

22, REGENT ST., S.W.; 73, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

9, Parker Street, Liverpool; St. Anns Square, Manchester;
22, Blackett Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne; St. Vincent Street, Glasgow.
Manufactory: Newhall Street, Birmingham.

Actual Manufacturers,
supplying the Public Direct.

Tea Pot, 9 Pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 3s.
Solid Silver, £10.

Cream Jug.
Elkington Plate, £1 14s.
Solid Silver, £3 15s.

Sugar Basin.
Elkington Plate, £2 4s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £5 5s.

Coffee Pot, 2 1/2 pints.
Elkington Plate, £3 6s. 6d.
Solid Silver, £10 10s.

Antique Fluted Tea and Coffee Service.
Elkington Plate, £10 8s. Solid Silver, £29 10s.

Navy Foreign.

The Russian reinforcement which is now on its way to the Far East, having left Cherbourg and Brest, consists of the new battleships Poltava and Sevastopol, with five torpedo boats, having altogether seventy-two officers and 1,527 men. The armoured cruiser Gromoboi also goes out to Chinese waters, and it is stated that the battleship Peresviet will join the flag there, as well as the cruisers Pallada and Variag, built respectively at St. Petersburg and Philadelphia, as soon as they are ready for service. The squadron will further receive the accession of the torpedo transports Amur and Yenissei and five more torpedo boats. Next year the battleship Retvisan, and the cruisers Askold, Bogatyr, Bayan, and Novik will proceed to the station. These additions will make the Pacific Squadron an imposing force, including seven large armour-clads and a great number of first and second-class cruisers. On the other hand it is announced that the Russian Government has ordered all the cruisers belonging to the Volunteer Fleet to resume their commercial functions, with the exception of three which are to remain attached to the Pacific Squadron. Eleven volunteer cruisers will, therefore, return to their commercial work, of which five are at Odessa, four returning from China, and two still in the Far East.

There were some points in the recent report of Rear-Admiral Highborn, chief of the United States Bureau of Construction, which deserve to be noted. He complains that the provision of dry docks—there are at the present time but nine on the east coast—is altogether inadequate for the needs of war, and will scarcely keep pace with the increasing number of ships. He points out that the situation would be most inconvenient, or even disastrous, if war should break out, and he strongly urges that the increase should be in adequate ratio to the increase of the fleet, and that war requirements should always be kept in view.

Another point with which he deals is the question of submarine boats, which he thinks have become quite practicable. He believes there are great possibilities in submarine navigation, and that a knowledge that it was being employed for coast and harbour defence would have a great moral effect upon an enemy:—

"Experience has shown that the appearance of any particular type of fighting craft in sufficient numbers to make its possibilities a factor to be considered, forces modifications in types previously existing. That this should be particularly the case with submarine vessels there is every reason to believe, and there can be little doubt that to the first nations in the field with the new type will accrue not only the advantages which will come from the possession of efficient vessels of this type, but the additional advantage and saving in cost which will result from an early understanding of the new type and the modifications which its introduction will force in existing types."

Admiral Highborn also advocates the building of a wooden sailing ship of 1,600 or 1,800 tons for the training service. He alludes to the controversy as to training under masts and yards, but without expressing a strong opinion upon it, and proposes the building of the vessel chiefly on the ground that all the materials and appliances exist at Portsmouth, N. H., Yard, and that the former, though of the finest quality, would have to be sold for a nominal sum. The cost of the vessel would therefore be a little more than that of the labour involved.

The designs for the five new American battleships, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Virginia, and Rhode Island, show that they are to be very powerful vessels. A compromise was effected between the advocates of the superposed turrets and the ordinary system of building, and three of the new ships will be on the first-named system, and two upon the latter; but in general dimensions they will be almost the same. The vessels which are to be sheathed and coppered, being those with superposed turrets, will displace about 15,000 tons, and be 435ft. long with 76ft. 10in. beam, and about 24ft. draught. The unsheathed vessels will displace about 400 tons less. The most striking feature will be the armament. Each ship will carry four 12in. guns coupled in the main turrets, and there will be twelve 6in. quick-firers in the battery.

The new feature is the addition of eight 8in. guns. In the first type four of these will be in the superposed turrets, and four in two turrets amidships; while in the other type the guns will be in four turrets, two on each side at the ends of the citadel. The smaller armament will be twelve 14-prs. and twelve 3-prs., and a number of 1-prs. The vessels will have submerged torpedo tubes. Protection will be given by a complete water-line belt, with a maximum thickness of 11in., and from the top of this belt (which is 8ft. wide amidships) will rise 6in. armouring, extending for a length of 245ft. and joining the turrets by bulkheads, thus forming a citadel for the secondary armament. There will be an armoured conning tower and signal tower, and a nickel-steel deck. The use of wood will be strictly limited. The ships will have two 4-cylinder triple-expansion engines of about 19,000 horse-power, the steam being supplied by twenty-four Babcock and Wilcox straight water-tube boilers, and the speed is intended to be at least 19 knots. The complement of each ship will be 703.

The French Mediterranean Squadron is now formed of the following vessels:—Charles Martel, 11,880 tons, launched 1893; Jauréguiberry, 11,824 tons, 1893; Bouvet, 12,200 tons, 1896; Charlemagne, 1895, St. Louis and the Gaulois, both 1896, all three of 11,275 tons. The above are all battleships of the first-class, and although their armament varies, their speed is approximately the same. In addition to the battleships, there are eight cruisers in permanent commission. Pothuau, 5,360 tons, belted, launched 1895; Latouche Tréville, 4,756 tons, belted, 1892; Chanzy, 4,933, belted, 1894; Cassard, 3,952, not belted, 1896; Du Chayla (like Cassard), 1895; Linois, 2,345, not belted, 1894; Galilée, 2,317, not belted, 1896; Forbin, 1,820, not belted, 1888; Dunois, 896, launched 1897, a fast torpedo gunboat. Four torpedo boat destroyers are attached to the squadrons. The paper speed of all the above is liable to material discount at sea, but perhaps not in a greater degree than some other fighting ships of other nations.

The France Militaire states that with the object of letting the French flag be seen as much as possible Admiral Pottier has decided to divide the ships of his fleet into three groups, and to place them as follows:—The first group will be stationed in the Gulf of Pe-chi-li, and will consist of the cruisers Guichen, Pascal, Bugeaud, and Friant; the gunboats Vipère, Décidée, and Alouette; the torpedo boats Takou and the Bengali. This group will have one vessel at Nagasaki, one or more at Che-fu, and the remainder at the base of operations. The second group will be stationed at Shanghai, and will consist of the cruisers Amiral Charner, Chasseloup Laubat and Jean Bart; and the gunboats Surprise and Lion. The duty of this group will be to watch the Yang-tse and the neighbouring islands, and the coast as far as Fu-Chu. The third group will watch the coast from Fu-Chu to the frontier of Tongking, and will consist of the cruiser Descartes, and the gunboats Styx (protected), Avalanche, Argus, and Vigilante. The D'Entrecasteaux, whose crew has undergone great fatigue, has been sent to Japan in order that the men may enjoy a short period of rest and change.

The French Northern Squadron was somewhat modified in its constitution on November 20, owing to the addition of a fourth admiral. The first division now comprises the Masséna (Vice-Admiral Ménard), Carnot, and Amiral Baudin; the second division, the Formidable (Rear-Admiral de Bausset), and Amiral Duperré; the third division, the Bouvines (Rear-Admiral Mallarmé), Jemmapes, Valmy, and Amiral Tréhouart; while the light squadron includes the Bruix (Rear-Admiral Gourdon), Dupuy de Lôme, D'Assas, Infernet, Fleurus, and La Hire, as well as certain destroyers. It has been decided that the evolutions in the Channel and Mediterranean shall henceforth be identical, and certain of the Mediterranean ships are to be supplied with special signalling masts. The squadron has been reorganised in order to give greater homogeneity to the divisions. The two armoured divisions are credited with a speed of 18 knots, and the first has its main armament coupled in two turrets, while in the second the four turrets are on the quadrilateral principle.

Danzer's Armee-Zeitung, of Vienna, strongly criticises the landing of a brigade from the Kaiserin Elizabeth in China. The consequence was that the ship was reduced in her value to an extreme degree, and our contemporary argues that a landing should never be thought of so long as the enemy possesses any force on the water. The losses in such operations as have been undertaken are, moreover, heavy by wounds and disease. It appears that in the case of the Kaiserin Elizabeth 60 per cent. of the officers and 45 per cent. of the men were sent ashore.

Mr. Holland, the inventor of the submarine boat, is preparing for an adventurous journey. It is his intention to proceed next February from New York to Lisbon in a submarine boat of special construction. She will be 63ft. long, will burn gasoline fuel, and carry provisions for the inventor and a crew of eight men. The course will be by way of Bermuda and Fayal, and the object is to demonstrate the value of submarine vessels operating from distant bases. A steamer will accompany the boat, which during part of the trip will be submerged.

The November number of the Marine Rundschau contains an article by Herr Otto Kretschmer, of the German Naval Constructive Department, embodying a plan for estimating the value of warships. Many such schemes have been propounded, based upon various co-efficients, in which we must confess not to having very great confidence. Herr Kretschmer's purpose is to give a mathematical formula by which the value of ships according to their age, protection, and armament may be estimated. He takes account also of speed, coal expenditure, and the economy of engines and boilers, and includes some other considerations, such as draught. The study is elaborate and evidently careful and conscientious, and we would commend it to the attention of those interested in such things.

WINTER TRAINING.

Lord Wolseley has intimated to the Army his desire that during the winter months commanding officers will arrange for a systematic course of lectures in military subjects to all ranks under their command.

The instruction imparted to officers, in accordance with the Queen's Regulations, is not to be confined to mere question and answer based on the drill-book of the branch of the Service concerned, but will consist of lectures on various subjects, comprising the drill-books of the other arms, minor tactics, the choice of suitable ground for defence, the practice of stratagems, and the customs of war as usually practised by civilised nations in the field, &c. Not less than one lecture of an hour's duration will be delivered weekly. The work may also be occasionally varied by setting simple schemes, or devising situations on a map, and then calling upon officers, irrespective of rank, to work them out. A short time only, 15 or 20 minutes, is the most that should be given in which to solve these problems. Officers will be called on to give verbally the orders they would issue, and their reasons for the action taken. Commanding officers will also call upon officers to lecture who, from previous experience on active service, acquaintance with mounted infantry duties, &c., are in a position to impart information and instruction.

In districts where there is a deputy assistant-adjutant-general for instruction, the general officer commanding will arrange for him to deliver a lecture on some military subject once a fortnight, the choice of subjects resting with the general. These lectures will be attended by all available officers and non-commissioned officers in the garrison.

The lectures to the men, of which there will be not less than one per week, will be delivered by officers commanding squadrons, batteries, and companies. In instructing the men, the system of question and answer is not to be followed; but officers and non-commissioned officers will be called upon to lecture the men in the presence of the captain, and some few questions at the conclusion of the lecture will be put, to test the attention and intelligence of the class. Special attention is to be directed to outposts, accounting, and other kindred duties in the field.

Officers commanding squadrons, batteries, and companies will, further, assemble their non-commissioned officers once a week, and lecture them on one or other of the subjects mentioned in Infantry Drill, Part X., section 219 (2).

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each, or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Beryl & Co., Importers, 49, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacconists.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died.)

9th Lancers.—4025 L.-Cpl. Wells, wounded, Carolina.
17th Lancers.—Lieut. Hon. H. Baring, 3326 Sgt. Paul, wounded, near Driekop, Nov. 24.
Imp. Yeo.—7th Co.: 2249 Cpl. Gee, 2269 Pegg, killed; 2215 MacCormack, 2223 Harrison, wounded, Georgina, Nov. 21. 22nd Co.: 94 Howe, wounded, Harrismith, Nov. 22. 34th: 6262 Sgt. Scott, wounded, Harrismith, Nov. 22; Lieut. Grey, 6268 L.-Cpl. Morgan, wounded, Cornelis River, Nov. 19. 35th: Capt. Lord Denman, wounded, Harrismith, Nov. 22.
Irreg. Horse.—Roberts's: Lieut. Gresson, wounded, Krugersdorp, Nov. 14. Nesbitt's: Curry, wounded, near Phillipolis, Nov. 27. Strathcona's: 286 Deering, injured, fall from horse, Fredericksstad, Nov. 8. Loch's: 115 Bellinger, wounded, Natal Spruit, Nov. 20.
Mtd. Inf.—Thorneycroft's: 6634 Andrews, killed; Lieut. Roos, wounded, Landerspruit, Nov. 16.
Police.—Special: Watson, missing, near Vryburg, Nov. 11. O.R.C.: Lieut. Nieuweyter, prisoner, Nov. 23, near Attilio; body found Nov. 24, apparently murdered. S. A. Constab.: 218 Ballinghall (late C.M.R.), 360 McCarrick, 79 Brumby, 78 Brawall (all late 2nd Northld. Fus.), 45 Fuller, killed, near Bloemfontein, Nov. 16; C. Brown* (late C.I.V.), wounded, Thaba N'chu, Nov. 19. R.H.A.—75198 Black, wounded, Verkfontein, Nov. 21. R.P.A.—81st Batt.: 79398 Davis, wounded, Wilge River, Nov. 19.
R.E.—10th Co.: 1806 Walker, missing, has rejoined. Gren. Gds.—3rd: 2056 Wardle, killed; 3524 L.-Cpl. Clifford, wounded, near Phillipolis, Nov. 27.
Scots Gds.—Lieut. Southey, 1824 Wilson killed; Major Hanbury, 1547 Anderson, 9399 Harley, wounded; 7506 Baker, missing, Tiger's Kloof, Nov. 23.
E. Kent.—2nd: 1697 Col.-Sgt. Swan, 5958 L.-Cpl. Horn, 5708 Black, 5833 Dawson, 1931 A. Brown, 5745 P. Jones, killed; 6003 Cpl. Stone, 5941 L.-Cpl. Nisbitt, 2963 Willey, 1147 Hemsley, 1580 Goodwin, 1050 Want, 1975 Mannings, 6158 Potts, 2521 Savin, 2555 Manning, 1183 Tuff, wounded, Balmoral, Nov. 19.
Lanc.—5674 R. Jones, who died of wounds, Colenso Kopjes, Feb. 27, was incorrectly reported as of S. Lancs. Regt.
Northld. Fus.—2nd: 3357 Bradley, 5283 Bowman, 3137 Bone, 2319 Scanlon, missing, believed unwounded prisoners, Bultfontein, Nov. 21; 3195 Coching, 4655 Templeman, wounded, Sterkfontein, Nov. 23.
R. Fus.—2nd: 3883 Spooner, prisoner, Klerksdorp, July 25, now rejoined, previously reported as of Northld. Fus.; 4263 Halloran, wounded; 7083 L.-Cpl. Lodge, missing, Wilge River, Nov. 23.
Liverpool.—1st: 3240 Sgt. Morris, wounded, Waterval Boven, Nov. 12.
Suffolk.—1st: 836 Atkinson, wounded, Belfast, Nov. 5.
Cheshire.—Simpson, missing, Leeuwspruit, June 14.
Mtd. Inf.: 2857 Sgt. Wardle, wounded, near Bethulie, Nov. 20.
Welsh Fus.—1st: 3907 McCabe, missing, June 3, rejoined Nov. 16; 6026 Richards, missing, has rejoined.
K.O.S.B.—3179 Royce, missing, now at Machadodorp doing duty.
Middlesex.—2nd: 2504 Payne, 5418 English, wounded, Almond's Nek, June 11.
Manchester.—2nd: 5780 McNicholls, 2244 Johnson, 2253 Carey, wounded, Leeuwspruit, Nov. 16; 2424 Foster, missing, Houtnek, May 12, has rejoined.
Cameron's.—1st: 3738 Queen, 3050 Mitchell, missing June 19, rejoined Nov. 16.
Dublin Fus.—2nd: 3503 Byrne, 3847 Dumphy, 6375 McCann, wounded, Almond's Nek, June 11.
R.B.—Mil. Res.: 4373 Emsley, 2427 Gammon (both att'd. 2nd E. Kent), wounded, Balmoral, Nov. 19.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

9th Lancers.—3428 Lacy, wounds, Rooikop, April 24, previously reported wounded.
13th Hussars.—2749 Sgt.-Maj. Lightfoot, aneurism aorta, Maritzburg, Nov. 27.

Imp. Yeo.—1st Co.: 9266 Sh.-Sm. Urch, Winburg, Nov. 25. 5th: 329 Baldwin, Pretoria, Nov. 23. 16th: 7208 Cross, Kroonstad, Nov. 21.
Irreg. Horse.—Strathcona's: 157 Scott, accidentally shot, Muzarab, Nov. 21. N.S.W. Bushmen: 201 Grey, Pretoria, Nov. 19. S.A.L.H.: 26 Brown, killed in action, previously reported prisoner, Chieveley, Jan. 19; 1681 Palmer, May 18, 1619 MacDonell, dysentery, May 14, both Modderspruit; 984 Alexander, killed, Klip River Junction, June 10; 1172 McLean, 1072 Cullum, killed, De Beers Pass, March 13, both previously reported missing; 1009 Diack, killed, Klip River Junction, June 10. Kitchener's: 3178 Cpl. Farr-Goodwin, wound, Damhoek, Sept. 21. Nesbitt's: Sgt. Brink, killed, Groot Oliphant's River, Oct. 13; Becker, heart disease, Cookhouse, Nov. 18. Lovat's: 8758 Lockhart, killed, near Phillipolis, Nov. 23. N.Z. Roughriders: 817 Anderson, Pretoria, Nov. 20. 5th: 2689 Cpl. King, Klerksdorp, Nov. 22. Brabant's: 4346 Paulson, Muzarab, Nov. 25.
Mtd. Inf.—Thorneycroft's: Lieut. Pigott, Standerton, Nov. 12. N.Z.: 171 Palmer, Pretoria, Nov. 23. Bethune's: Whitehouse, Mooi River, Nov. 22. Tasm.: 104 Butler, Germiston, June 1. N.S.W.: 376 Fulton, wounds, Kroonstad, Nov. 23.
Mtd. Rifles.—Cape: 3088 Chapman, Kimberley, Nov. 20. Border: 334 Ashe, disease, Ladysmith, Feb. 13.
Police.—Cape: Capt. Crozier, disease not stated, Daniel's Kuil, Nov. 21; 561 Bridger, paralysis and influenza, New Bethesda, Nov. 14. Transvaal Constab.: Hucker (late 598 C.I.V.), Nov. 20; 1108 Turnbull (late 8474 I.Y., 19th), disease not stated, Nov. 23, Pretoria.
R.H.A.—32165 Pigott, Bloemfontein, Nov. 24. "A" Batt.: 70710 Davies, disease not stated, Wynberg, Nov. 22. "J": 71390 Taylor, Nov. 15; 24250 Yates, Nov. 21, Pretoria. "M": 12249 Thomas (attached "P"), dysentery, Reitfontein, Oct. 20. "P": 41285 R. Jones, abscess liver, Pretoria, Nov. 23.
R.F.A.—6325 Coll.-maker Clark, lightning, Pretoria, Nov. 22. 44th Batt.: 66666 Bowman, Kimberley, Nov. 20. Pom-Poms: 21344 Parkes, Pretoria, Nov. 21. Canadian Arty.—355 Sgt. Evatt, disease not stated, Waterval Onder, Nov. 18.
R.G.A.—2880 Garney, Vryburg, Nov. 25. 10th Co. (E.D.): 28222 Johnson, lightning, Wakkerstroom, Nov. 23. Cape Garr. Arty.—174 Rourke, disease not stated, Cape Town, Nov. 23.
R.E.—3685 Childs, Pretoria, Nov. 21. Field T.: 40897 Feamley, Bloemfontein, Nov. 25. Vols., Elect.: 6189 West, Stellenbosch.
Cape Pioneer Rly. Regt.—789 Kramert, pneumonia, Germiston, Nov. 22.
Gren. Gds.—3rd: 7948 Rowley, Nov. 21; 4046 Brindle, Nov. 27, Springfontein; 2610 Trimby, Norvals Pont, Nov. 26.
Coldstream Gds.—1st: 1710 Farrell, Kroonstad, Nov. 21.
R. Scots Mtd. Inf.—5880 Bradfort, Bloemfontein, Nov. 26.
W. Surrey.—2nd: 1497 Keen, dysentery, Nov. 20; 4958 Neville, Nov. 24, Charlestown.
E. Kent.—2nd: 4373 Riley, wounds, Pretoria, Nov. 22. 3rd: 5364 Brill (? disease), Bloemfontein, Nov. 22.
Lanc.—2nd: 5962 Morrison, Bloemfontein, Nov. 24. 3rd: 6462 Stewart, Nov. 23; 6645 Kelly, Nov. 25, Kroonstad.
Warwick.—6th: 2737 Raven, dysentery, Bloemfontein, Nov. 20; 7646 Begley, Middelburg, Aug. 21.
R. Fus.—2nd: 2296 Hall (? 3296 Hull), lightning, Kaalfontein, Nov. 24.
Liverpool Mtd. Inf.—4343 Morrill, killed, Brugspruit, Nov. 19.
Norfolk.—3rd: 4220 J. Smith, Springfontein, Nov. 22. Lincoln.—2nd: 2688 Sgt. Robinson, Nov. 7; 2345 Webster, dysentery, Nov. 21, Pretoria.
Devon.—2nd: 5427 Dorch, Cape Town, Nov. 24. Somerset L.I.—6899 Edwards, Kimberley, Nov. 24. W. Yorks.—2nd: 2415 Heeley, Rustenburg, Nov. 22. E. Yorks.—2nd: 1027 Ray, dysentery, Harrismith, Nov. 23.
Bedford.—2nd: 7818 Pocock, Thabanchu, Nov. 23. Leicester.—1st: 3316 Morris (? disease), Nile May, 16. Yorks.—Mtd. Inf.—5549 Ryan, killed Aug. 26; previously reported wounded, and of Welsh Regt.
Scots Fus.—2nd: 5861 L.-Cpl. Smith, Muzarab, Nov. 25.

S.W. Borders.—3rd: 4522 Davis, Brandfort, Nov. 23. K.O.S.B.—1st: 76665 Lennox, Pretoria, Nov. 20. Ianiskilling.—1st: 5341 Sgt. Clarke, Middelburg, Nov. 22.
Worcester.—1st: 3435 Bridge, Bloemfontein, Nov. 26. E. Lancs.—3rd: 574 Marsh, Brandfort, Nov. 25. D.C.L.I.—3769 Tozser, killed, Waterval Boven, Nov. 23. W. Riding.—5698 Hawkswill, Nov. 20. 1st: 5931 L.-Cpl. Taylor, Nov. 22, Pretoria.
Dorset.—2nd: 2973 Martin, pneumonia, Charlestown, Nov. 21.
Oxford L.I.—1st: 4089 Cole, Standerton, Nov. 21; 3745 Morris, Kroonstad, Nov. 26.
Northampton.—5145 L.-Cpl. Holt, Klerksdorp, Nov. 18. 2nd: 955 Caglin, dysentery, Kroonstad, Nov. 25. Berks.—Vol. Co.: 6796 Rivers, Glen, Nov. 26.
W. Kent.—2nd: 3664 Capon, dysentery, Nov. 23; 1744 Mundry (? 1745 Munday), wounds, Nov. 18, Frankfort, Vol. Co.: 6948 Sgt. Everleigh, Norvals Pont, Nov. 22. Yorks L.I.—4264 Beckett, Johannesburg, Nov. 20. Middlesex.—2nd: 8317 Kelly, Nov. 21; 5293 Dempsey, dysentery, Nov. 26, Newcastle.
K.R.R.—1st: 728 Raven, Ladysmith, Feb. 12. 3rd: 5912 Finbow, dysentery, Standerton, Nov. 26. Wilts.—2nd: 2663 McHugh, Nov. 21; 4235 Foster, dysentery, Nov. 25, Pretoria; 2124 Sheppard, wounds, Fouriesberg, July 30.
Gordons.—2nd Vol. Co.: McGilivray, Greenpoint, Nov. 15, proper number is 116.
Cameron's.—1st: 1142 Baigent, Lindley, Nov. 11. Irish Rifles.—2nd: 3444 Bashford, Nov. 23; 2311 Scammell, dysentery, Nov. 24, Bloemfontein. Irish Fus.—2nd: 4191 Braisby, wounds, Colenso, Feb. 23.
Arg. and Suth.—1st: 4927 Kennedy, Rustenburg, Nov. 24. 4th: 4791 L.-Cpl. McKendrick, dysentery, Kroonstad, Nov. 26.
Munster Fus.—1st: 6329 O'Malley, Kimberley, Nov. 21. Dublin Fus.—2nd: 6800 Connor, Johannesburg, Nov. 25.
R.B.—Mil. Res.: 4373 Emsley, wounds, Pretoria, Nov. 22.
Durban L.I.—1465 Shoemith, disease, Durban, Sept. 21. Vols.—Grahamstown: 1st: 844 Benohke (? disease), Cradock, July 26. Queenstown: Faudry, Winburg, Nov. 27. D. of Edinburgh's O.: Sutherland, drowned, Kimberley, Nov. 22.
A.S.C.—9974 Woods, 15938 Howard, both dysentery, Middelburg, Nov. 20; 14360 Brittain, lightning, Nov. 22; 8309 Champion (att'd. R.F.A.) dysentery, Nov. 23, Pretoria. 24th Co.: 12448 Hibbert, Pretoria, Nov. 25. 27th: 11493 Cpl. Mayes, Mafeking, Nov. 27. St. John's Amb.—1505 Siddie, Standerton, Nov. 21. Imp. Yeo. Hosp.—Saunders, heart disease, Maitla nd Nov. 27. Imp. Bearer Co.—Davis, Standerton, Nov. 23.

CASUALTIES IN CHINA.

DEATHS REPORTED.

Welsh Fus.—2nd: 5123 Corben, enteric, Peking, Nov. 23; 3784 Hanlon, ague, Tien-tsin, Sept. 21; 4441 Burgoyne, drowned, Tungchow, Sept. 4.

MESSRS. W. D. and H. O. Wills, Limited, in conjunction with Messrs. Holt and Holt, their agents in South Africa, cabled to Lord Roberts offering 1,000,000 of their cigarettes as a Christmas gift to the troops at the front. Lord Roberts has cabled the following reply from Johannesburg:—"Please accept hearty thanks of self and army for handsome present of cigarettes; they will be greatly appreciated.—LORD ROBERTS."

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd. 23, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

OVERALLS A SPECIALITY.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

The Navy.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 21.

Royal Marines.—Gmrmr. and Hon. Major John Burtenshaw (retired list), R.M.L.I., is appointed Recruiting Staff Officer, 2nd Class, at Glasgow, vice Brown, completed period of appointment (Nov. 23).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 23.

Rev. John H. S. Bailey, B.A., Rev. George S. Kewney, B.A., Francis H. Batchelor, Esq., B.A., appointed Naval Instrs. (Nov. 12).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Lient. W. H. Owen placed on the retired list, with permission to assume rank of Commander (Nov. 19).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 24.

Staff-Engr. A. Kerr promoted to Fleet-Engr. (Nov. 15).
Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub.-Lient. S. G. S. McNeil to be Lient. (Nov. 22).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 26.

In accordance with provisions of Order in Council of Feb. 22, 1870, Staff-Capt. J. Bell Johnson placed on retired list, with permission to assume rank of Capt. (Nov. 26).

Clerk C. H. Carroll promoted to Asst.-Payr. (Oct. 18).

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 27.

Gunners Samuel T. Marchant and Theodore Bye promoted to Chief Gunners (Nov. 1).

Royal Marine Artillery.—2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—H. Denning, with seniority immediately following Lient. E. Wright (July 1, 1898), F. G. Lane-Poole, R. E. Kilvert, P. R. Heycock, J. W. Hudleston, G. W. Lushington, C. G. G. Crawley, J. E. Van der Viste (Jan. 1, 1899).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 28.

In accordance with Order in Council of Feb. 22, 1870, Chaplain Rev. A. Baker, M.A., placed on Retired List (Nov. 9).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieuts. H. G. H. Pye and N. Fletcher to be Lieuts. (Nov. 26).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 23.

Lieutenant.—J. D. Rogers to Terror (Nov. 22).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 24.

Lieutenants.—H. Blackett (1st), H. M. K. Betty (N), D. A. H. Larking, M. G. Philpott, to Empress of India (Nov. 23). H. G. Verker (T), P. Franklin, C. E. Cundall to Empress of India; J. H. Jones to Rodney;

G. M. Marston to Hood (N) (undated). A. H. Ozzard to Collingwood (1st) (Nov. 20). F. G. R. Clarke to Colossus (Nov. 28).

Sub-Lieutenant.—C. V. Usborne to Empress of India (Nov. 23).

Midshipmen.—J. E. N. Murdoch, H. D. W. Macpherson, H. Spencer, V. R. N. Porter, E. Q. Carter, R. Gregory, O. T. H. Phillips, H. R. Clifton-Mogg, B. Bannerman, W. G. H. Cree, V. M. Cooper, P. F. Newcombe, C. R. Dane to Empress of India, reappointed on recommissioning (undated).

Fleet-Engineer.—W. H. Grant to Empress of India (undated).

Engineers.—W. C. Morcom to Pembroke for Contest (Nov. 5). G. T. Paterson to Pembroke for Contest, G. N. Leslie to Empress of India, J. L. Kimber to Pembroke for Reserve, P. Wheeler to Wildfire for Reserve (Nov. 23).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 26.

Lieutenant and Commander.—A. B. Baker to Victoria for Vulture (Nov. 26).

Engineer.—R. W. Martell to Victory for Vulture (Nov. 26).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 28.

Commander.—F. K. C. Gibbons to Blenheim (Jan. 1).
Chief Engineer.—E. A. Short to Vivid for Hermes, on paying off (undated).

Engineer.—J. R. Wilson to Vivid for Hermes (undated).

Fleet-Surgeon.—G. S. Smith to Blake, for medical charge on voyage to Malta (Nov. 27), and to Empress of India (undated).

Surgeon.—R. R. Fasson, M.B., to Blake for voyage to Malta (Nov. 27), and to Empress of India (undated).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 29.

Staff-Commander.—R. J. Rogers to Vivid, for Queen's Harbourmaster at Plymouth Sound (Nov. 26).

Staff-Paymaster.—W. D. Clark to Empress of India (undated).

It is decided that all officers returning from South Africa shall be allowed 61 days' leave from the date of debarkation.

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.45, and Saturday mornings at 2.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

THE WAR CORRESPONDENT: HIS UNRIVALLED IMPUDENCE.—"Without knowledge or experience, he is prepared to condemn the operations of our wisest generals. There is nothing magnificent about him save his pride and the privilege of print. Though he does not share the hardship of the campaign, he has no scruple in blaming the brave men who sacrifice their lives. But, says he, my paper backs me, and I can publish whatever tale I choose. And so, since 500 years have not convinced the world that the printing-press is the father of lies, the journalist still holds a position of force and trust. He says what he will; he accuses large classes of his fellow-men without shame or hesitancy. Setting no bounds to his presumption, he describes manoeuvres of whose import he is ignorant; and knowing no other contest than 'a football match, he pronounces with an easy nonchalance upon complicated operations.'—Blackwood's Magazine, December.

THE Forum (of New York), in an article from the pen of Major Arthur Griffiths, makes the following suggestion as to the future of the Intelligence Department:—"Enough has been adduced perhaps to prove that it has rendered very valuable services to the State. Yet it cannot be denied that its sphere of usefulness might be extended. It is much handicapped by limited means, both as regards money and men. The work cast upon it is often costly, or it should cost much if adequately executed; yet the funds at the disposal of the office are meagre. It can command no more than a beggarly allowance for travelling expenses, which is eked out to the utmost, and made to cover the expenses of small special expeditions of inquiry—of officers sent out on a particular mission. But the Intelligence has no share or part in the secret service money allotted by Parliament to be spent without account rendered. A portion of this grant, which is held exclusively by the Prime Minister and used as he thinks fit, may now and again be allowed by him to the Intelligence for the execution of some particular service; but that department should be in a position to draw upon funds of its own. Men also cost money to the extent of extra allowances or the payment of substitutes, and there should be no stint in the supply of staff or the retention of officers of proved value to the department. Judicious development is, in short, what the Intelligence most needs—an increase of means and a larger authority. We may hope that its claim, both from past services and those yet to be rendered, may entitle it to full consideration, if ever the military institutions of the nation are revised and reformed.

GOLDSMITHS & SILVERSMITHS COMPANY,

Show Rooms 112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company) LTD.

Supply the Public at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, Saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

INSPECTION INVITED OF THE LARGEST, CHOICEST, AND MOST ARTISTIC STOCK IN THE WORLD OF

Awarded
Nine Gold Medals.

MILITARY STATUETTES;

PRESENTATION

PLATE,

CANTEENS,

&c.

ESTIMATES FREE.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
and Special Mess Spoon, Fork, and Cutlery List POST FREE.

Awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honour.

RACE & POLO CUPS,

MESS-TABLE

PLATE,

CENTRE-PIECES,

&c.

DESIGNS FREE.

GOODS FORWARDED
ON APPROVAL.

MAGNIFICENT STOCK of DIAMOND ORNAMENTS, HIGH-CLASS JEWELLERY, SOLID SILVER CLOCKS, WATCHES, and DRESSING-BAGS.

Repair of Mess-Plate a Speciality.

GOLDSMITHS & SILVERSMITHS COMPANY, Ltd., Show Rooms: 112, REGENT ST., W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Co.)

Telephone: 3729.

[The Goldsmiths' Alliance Ltd. (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, E.C., is transferred to this Company]. Telegrams: "Argemnon, London."

The Gazettes.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, NOV. 27.

5th Lancers.—Capt. E. O. Wathen seconded for service on Staff (June 16).

9th Lancers.—Lieut. Lord Charles C. Bentinck to be Capt., vice Hon. C. H. C. Willoughby, seconded (Nov. 8).

13th Hussars.—Capt. A. H. M. Taylor seconded for service on Staff; Supy.-Capt. K. MacLaren to be Capt., vice A. H. M. Taylor (June 11).

19th Hussars.—Capt. H. G. De Pledge seconded for service on Staff (March 28).

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

1st Bn.—Temp. Lieut.-Col. E. G. W. Chaloner resigns command of battalion (Nov. 28). Lieut. W. J. R. Marsh to be Capt. with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (April 18). Lieut. C. G. M. Adam resigns his commission.

2nd Bn.—Promotion of Qrmer-Sergt. M. Hunt to Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army, antedated to June 23.

3rd Bn.—Temp. Major R. F. T. Gascoigne to command Bn., with temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. in Army (Aug. 21); Temp. Capt. H. B. de la P. Beresford-Peirse, from Adjt., to be 2nd in Command, with temp. rank of Major in Army (Aug. 21); Capt. R. T. O. Sheriffe resigns his commission (Sept. 26); promotion to Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army, of Lieut. R. L. Birkin, antedated to June 19; Lieut. H. H. Wilson to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (Sept. 26); promotion of Sergt. E. T. Whitehead to Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army, antedated to June 19; Sergt. Thomas Philip Barber (Sept. 11) and Sergt. W. G. A. Vallance (Sept. 26) to be Lieuts., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army.

4th Bn.—Pte. Bertram H. G. Arkwright to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Oct. 25).

5th Bn.—Lieuts. J. T. Lutley (Sept. 3) and N. E. Money (Oct. 20) to be Capts., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army; Lieut. E. A. Knight resigns his commission (July 17); Corpl. Edward A. S. Gell to be Qrmer., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Oct. 6); Sergt. J. R. Benwick (May 12); Pte. Raymond T. Pelly (July 10); Pte. George A. Weir (July 17); and Cpl. Reginald Smart (Sept. 3), to be Lieuts. with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army.

6th Bn.—Lieut. R. W. Purvis to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (Nov. 1); Lieut. A. C. Campbell, from 14th Bn., to be Lieut. (Nov. 16).

7th Bn.—Lieut. A. M. Myburgh resigns his commission.

8th Bn.—Lieut. C. H. Bibby-Hesketh resigns his commission.

10th Bn.—Regtl. Sergt-Major Harry Houghton to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (May 7).

14th Bn.—Major Sir A. Lamb, Bart., resigns appointment of 2nd in Command; Pte. W. C. Cunninghame to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Nov. 16).

15th Bn.—Pte. Hon. Eric Thesiger to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Oct. 29).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Capt. (District Officer) R. Price to be Major (District Officer), on augmentation.

Lieuts. (District Officers) to be Capts. (District Officers):—R. Saunders on Seconded List; G. Clark, vice R. Price; W. R. Arnold and H. G. W. Jennison, on augmentation.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

Major A. W. B. Gordon retires on retired pay.

Promotions to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts. are antedated:—L. H. D. Broughton to June 14, vice W. J. K. Rettie; H. E. Carey to June 16, vice A. M. Perreau, appointed Div. Adjt.; H. W. Atlay to June 18, on augmentation; C. L. O'Malley to June 19, vice J. F. N. Birch, promoted; G. T. Mair to June 25, on augmentation; S. F. Stallard to June 29, in succession to Major W. A. M. Thompson, who holds a Staff appointment; C. St. L. G. Hawkes to June 30, vice C. H. de Rougemont, promoted; A. S. Cotton to July 26, in succession to Major H. Biddulph, employed in China; H. B. Phipps to July 28, on augmentation; A. G. Arbuthnot to Aug. 8, vice H. F. Dawson, seconded; H. A. Koebel to Aug. 22, vice F. Lyon, seconded; L. B. Montrésor to Aug. 30, vice H. G. Lloyd, appointed Div. Adjt.; C. D. Hope to Sept. 1, on augmentation; H. A. L. H. Wade to Sept. 8, vice B. R. Kirwan, seconded; H. P. E. Coode to Sept. 14, vice W. E. Wingfield, seconded; A. B. Forman to Sept. 15, vice N. E. Tilney, seconded; G. H. Stobart to Sept. 17, vice E. G. Cheke, appointed Div. Adjt.; A. E. B. Fair to Sept. 22, vice F. A. G. Y. Elton, promoted; R. A. Birley to Oct. 1, vice W. Thwaites, appointed Div. Adjt.; F. T. Brown to Oct. 6, on the Seconded List; H. F. E. Lewin to Oct. 6, vice J. C. G. A. Hankey, appointed Div. Adjt.; W. E. Edwards to Oct. 12, on the Seconded List; R. E. Paley to Oct. 12, vice J. Dalby, appointed Div. Adjt.; E. C. W. D. Walthall to Oct. 15, vice H. W. Taylor, killed in action; E. M. Conolly to Oct. 23, vice C. H. Wilson, appointed Div. Adjt.; M. J. F. Fitzgerald to Oct. 26, vice F. E. L. Barker, appointed Div. Adjt.; W. A. S. Gemmell to Oct. 31, vice E. J. Duffus, promoted.

Lieut. A. D. H. Grayson to be Capt., vice H. Ramsden, appointed Div. Adjt. (Nov. 1).

2nd Lieut. R. Oldershaw resigns his commission. Name of 2nd Lieut. Edmund Gerald FitzGibbon is as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 5.

MR. TRIPPEL'S ARMY CLASSES

FOR

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, SANDHURST & WOOLWICH,

AT

ONSLow HALL, RICHMOND, SURREY.

Telegraphic Address: Trippel, Richmond, Surrey.

For recent successes see Front Page.

Capt. W. J. K. Rettie to be Adjt., vice Capt. H. L. Powell, vacated appointment. (June 14.)

Royal Garrison Artillery.

Promotions to Major of undermentioned Capts. are antedated:—W. H. Mills (July 13), employed on the Staff; W. L. Farman (July 13), vice N. W. H. Du Boulay, employed on special service in China; F. L. Donaldson (Sept. 19), vice A. C. Currie, appointed to the Staff. C. W. Brownlow (Oct. 10), on augmentation.

Promotions to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts. are antedated:—H. W. Ravenhill (July 13), vice W. L. Farman, promoted; J. Grose (July 26), vice C. Howard Vyse, appointed Instr. in Gunnery; C. F. L. Mulliken (Sept. 15), vice C. M. Nuttall, seconded; B. R. B. Ram-baut (Oct. 10), vice C. W. Brownlow, promoted.

Capt. V. L. Beer seconded for service as Commandant, Permanent Garrison, Albany, West Australia. (Oct. 26). Lieut. W. H. McGowan, from British Guiana Militia, to be 2nd Lieut.

LINE BATTALIONS.

Northumberland Fusiliers.—2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—H. C. Oxley, vice A. W. Rickman, seconded; A. F. Douglas, vice W. H. Wild, appointed Adjt.; J. E. V. Isaac, vice A. C. Girdwood, promoted.

Norfolk Regt.—Capt. A. H. Luard to be Major, vice Bt.-Lieut.-Col. H. R. B. Donne, promoted Lieut.-Col. on half-pay. (Sept. 8).

Yorkshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. C. H. de St. P. Bunbury to be Lieut., vice E. B. Pusey, resigned (Nov. 17).

Royal Scots Fusiliers.—Capt. E. Christian seconded for service on Staff (July 13).

Cheshire Regt.—Capt. W. H. Anderson seconded for service on Staff (June 6).

South Wales Borderers.—Capt. Thomas S. Marquis and Robert P. Yates seconded for service on Staff. (June 4). Supy. Capt. F. M. Gillespie to be Capt., vice T. S. Marquis (June 4).

Gloucester Regt.—Lieut. Guy M. Shipway seconded for service on Staff (July 28).

Dorsetshire Regt.—Capt. A. A. Chichester seconded for service on Staff (June 13).

South Lancashire Regt.—Lieut. M. A. Ord to be Capt., vice N. M. Lynch, deceased, and 2nd Lieut. E. C. Fane to be Lieut., vice M. A. Ord (Nov. 14).

Essex Regt.—Officers seconded for service on staff:—Capt. B. A. Warry (Aug. 9); Lieut. G. W. Howard (March 5). Promotions to Lieut. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts., antedated:—W. A. Jacomb, vice G. W. Howard (March 5); H. L. Mathews, vice F. N. Parsons, killed in action (March 11); A. G. N. Wood, vice G. M. H. Stirling, promoted (March 23); G. H. Raleigh, vice W. H. Kirk, deceased (April 18).

Royal Berkshire Regt.—Lieut. A. H. Buchanan-Dunlop, seconded for service on Staff (July 12).

Royal West Kent Regt.—Lieut. J. W. O'Dowda to be Capt., vice E. V. O. Hewett, seconded; 2nd Lieut. P. S. Hall to be Lieut., vice J. W. O'Dowda (Oct. 27).

Wiltshire Regt.—Major H. A. Stock retires on retired pay (Nov. 28).

North Stafford Regt.—Capt. S. C. G. F. Astell seconded

EVERITT'S PATENT
Trousers Press and Stretcher.

PRICE

25/-

PRICE

25/-

Three of the great advantages of this Press are:—

Simplicity

By the novel arrangement of the top bars and screws, a pair of trousers can be taken out or replaced in less than a minute. When the pressure is applied the top board bends, thereby ensuring an equal pressure on all parts of the trousers, thus making it the ONLY PERFECT PRESS on the market.

Effectiveness

It is specially constructed for convenience of travellers, requiring, when folded the space of about 2 inches, and can be opened for use in half a minute.

Portability

Will take from One to Eight Pairs of Trousers, and any pair can be removed without disarranging the remainder. To be obtained of all High-Class Tailors, and The Stores, or direct from the Patentee:

HARRY EVERITT, Tailor, 14, Maddox St., Regent St., London, W.

MARTELL'S
THREE STAR.

"A genuine old Brandy."—
Medical Press.

Colonial Types.

A Complete Set of the Coloured Military Types which depict the various COLONIAL FORCES, including Australian, S. African, Canadian, &c., &c., making Ten in all, will be sent post free on receipt of 5s. 3d.

Offices: 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.O.

CHARBONNEL AND WALKER,

PARISIAN CONFECTIONERS,

173, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

SPECIAL ARTICLES POUR COTILLONS: THE LARGEST AND MOST ARTISTIC COLLECTION IN LONDON, Choicest Selections of FRENCH NOVELTIES suitable for

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

AND

NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

Any Article from 10s. 6d. upwards forwarded upon receipt of remittance.

3rd V.B. Northumberland Fusiliers.—2nd Lieuts. B. G. Bryant, J. L. Lovibond, J. W. Morrison, P. N. B. Haggie, H. O. Roberts, F. C. Garrett, and R. P. R. Lyle to be Lieuts.

2nd V.B. Royal Warwick Regt.—Capt. A. Welch, from 1st V.B. Leicester Regt., to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. C. W. Little, O. K. Winterton, E. M. Jones, J. M. Knox, and P. J. Locke to be Lieuts.

1st V.B. Liverpool Regt.—Lieut. J. L. Mackenzie to be Inst. of Musketry (Nov. 3). 3rd V.B.—Albert B. Anderson, Arthur Campbell, Ernest P. A. Bower, N. Papayanni, and Percy J. S. Overton, to be 2nd Lieuts. 1st Cadet Batn.—W. J. P. Lawless to be Hon. 2nd Lieut.

4th V.B. Devon Regt.—James H. Norman and Arthur G. Gurney to be 2nd Lieuts. (Supy.)

1st V.B. Suffolk Regt.—Capt. A. E. Smith resigns his commission.

3rd (Cambridgeshire) V.B. Suffolk Regt.—Capt. F. Grounds resigns his commission. 4th (Cambridge Univ.) V.B.—Capt. F. H. A. Gray and Lieut. T. W. Clayton resign their commissions; Lieut. H. Brown and 2nd Lieut. K. C. Browning to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. J. C. Thompson, E. Watermeyer, and W. A. Smith to be Lieuts.

1st V.B. Somerset L.I.—2nd Lieut. P. Kitchen resigns his commission. 3rd V.B.: Lieut. E. B. Graves-Knyffton to be Inst. of Musketry.

1st V.B. West Yorkshire Regt.—Capt. J. C. R. Husband granted hon. rank of Major.

2nd V.B. East Yorkshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. W. Green to be Lieut.

Cadet Corps attached to 2nd (Hertford) V.B. Bedford Regt.—Hon. Capt. J. Parsons to be Capt. (July 1); George H. Gowing to be Lieut. (Nov. 15).

1st V.B. Lancashire Fusiliers.—Capt. and Hon. Major H. O. Hutchinson resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank, and wear uniform of Batn.; Lieut. J. Whitehead to be Inst. of Musketry (Nov. 8). 3rd V.B.—Capt. L. W. H. Zimmermann resigns his commission; Capt. D. T. Seckham, Lancashire Fusiliers, to be Adj. on increase of establishment (Nov. 15).

1st V.B. Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—A. W. L. Butler to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Lanark.—Lieut. W. M. Sime resigns his commission. Cadet Corps (Bristol Grammar School) attached to 1st V.B. Gloucester Regt.—J. G. Holmes to be Capt.

3rd V.B. East Surrey Regt.—Capt. P. C. Bates resigns his commission; Lieuts. W. Clemence and A. P. Drayson to be Capt.

Cadet Corps (Richmond County School) attached to 3rd V.B. East Surrey Regt.—Hon. Capt. A. E. Buckhurst to be Capt. (July 11).

1st V.B. West Riding Regt.—Capt. J. B. Howard to be Inst. of Musketry; 2nd Lieut. W. A. Laxton to be Lieut.; Robert H. Goldthorp and William B. B. Yates to be 2nd Lieuts.

1st (Cumberland) V. B. Border Regt.—Capt. F. W. Halton to be Inst. of Musketry (Nov. 14).

Cadet Corps (Brighton College) attached to 1st V.B. Royal Sussex Regt.—Herbert S. Davis to be Lieut.

4th V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Capt. B. H. Boucher, Hampshire Regt., to be Adj., vice Major E. S. Crofts, whose period of service has expired (Nov. 12).

3rd V.B. South Stafford Regt.—Capt. W. H. Haden to be Inst. of Musketry (Nov. 1).

Cadet Corps (Sherborne School) attached to 1st V.B. Dorset Regt.—Hon. Capt. W. B. Wildman to be Capt. (July 1); Henry Dunkin to be Lieut.; Godfrey M. Carey to be 2nd Lieut.

1st (Pembroke) V.B. Welsh Regt.—Lieuts. Joshua Lloyd and Arthur S. Richards to be 2nd Lieuts.; John R. Evans to be Surg.-Lieut. 3rd V.B.: Lieut. J. Evans resigns his commission.

6th (Fife) V.B. Royal Highlanders.—Alexander M. Stewart to be 2nd Lieut. (extra supy.).

1st (Oxford Univ.) V.B. Oxford L.I.—Charles H. Cotesworth and Arthur M. St. C. Alfrey to be 2nd Lieut. (extra supy.).

1st V.B. Loyal North Lancashire Regt.—Lieuts. E. Stowell and F. W. Foley to be Capt., and to remain supy.; Lieut. W. Dryden to be Capt.

1st V.B. Northampton Regt.—William Dulley and Albert C. Henson to be 2nd Lieuts.

17th (North) Middlesex.—Lieut. F. J. W. A. Wint to be Capt.

2nd (South) Middlesex.—Henry H. Comyn to be 2nd Lieut. (supy.).

Cadet Corps attached to the 13th Middlesex (Queen's Westminster).—Rev. Henry B. Foster to be Capt. 2nd London: Arthur J. Genese to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. Wiltshire Regt.—Lieut. G. W. Bartholomew resigns his commission.

7th Middlesex (London Scottish).—John R. Divino to be 2nd Lieut. (extra supy.).

14th Middlesex (Inns of Court).—Arthur M. Ware, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut.

15th Middlesex (Customs and Docks).—Capt. and Hon. Major W. J. Hornblower resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank, and wear uniform of corps.

16th Middlesex (London Irish).—Lieut. H. F. A. Roche to be Inst. of Musketry; 2nd Lieut. E. C. R. Armstrong resigns his commission.

20th Middlesex (Artists).—Charles F. H. Greenwood to be 2nd Lieut.

24th Middlesex.—2nd Lieut. C. E. E. Labouchere resigns his commission.

1st Tower Hamlets.—Norman Duncan-Teape and Robert E. Jones to be 2nd Lieuts. (supy.).

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Nov. 28.]

APSELY PELLATT & Co.
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing
Cross, London, W.C
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA
MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

DEATH.

TALBOT.—On November 21, at Merton Lodge, Clifton, Bristol, Commander Hugh Talbot, R.N., eldest son of the late Admiral John T. Talbot, aged 45.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

ADVERTISING RATES for Houses to Let, Wanted, For Sale, and other announcements of a similar description, will be forwarded on application to the Offices, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

BOURNEMOUTH, WEST.—For Winter or Summer residence; comfortable apartments in a pleasantly situated house; close to pine woods and sea; healthy position; fine view; near shops; excellent cooking and attendance; reasonable terms.—Address, M., Myrtle Villa, Alum Chine Road, Bournemouth.

BRIGHTON.—PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENT (as homelike as possible) for those requiring Medical, Surgical, and Nursing care. Medical baths, packs, massage, electricity. Own doctor can attend if wished, or their treatment carried out. Close to sea, overlooking private grounds. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO COMFORT, NURSING, DIET. For Terms address, Medical Sup., Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

HANDSOME Bay Horse For Sale.—A perfect Infantry Charger; most showy and quiet to ride or drive; coming 12; 15-2 high.—For price, apply to Lieut.-Col. Sergeant, 1, Plowden Buildings, Temple, London, E.C.

INDIAN ARMY.—A List of the Coloured Plates comprising the Series of Types of the Indian Army, to be issued during 1901, will be forwarded on application to the Offices of this Paper, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

LANFAIRFECHAN, N. WALES.—Winter months or longer; detached house, well furnished; three sitting, five bed, one dressing rooms; bath, h. and c.; good garden, paddock, poultry; two servants left; near mountains, sea, shops; excellent climate; suit invalid officer. Apply—Glanarvon.

MILITARY TYPES.—Collectors in search of copies of 1st and 2nd Lieut. Guards types issued with THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE are requested to communicate with 019, c/o ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

PARENTS GOING ABROAD and Others.

CHILDREN RECEIVED in pretty country home of Gentlewoman who is a trained nurse, and has been governess.—Miss North, Green Arbour, near Dunmow, Essex.

PASSAGE to INDIA for an AYAH.—An Ayah, who is strongly recommended, wishes to return to Bombay in charge of children.—Apply, for all particulars, to Mrs. Lawrence, Buryard, Trinity Avenue, Southend.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN OF GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grooms, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employers, London."

TO BE LET, FURNISHED, a charming House, near Queenstown for six months from January, 1901. Servants would be left, and use of a pair of horses if desired.—Apply to Lady Mary Aldworth, Carrig-rhu, Queenstown.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

TWO GIRLS, 13 or 14 years of age, may be received in good School, at reduced fees, Highgate, N., to fill vacancies. Thorough education, limited number of boarders.—Apply, H. H., c/o J. and J. Paton, 143, Cannon Street, London.

WANTED, for a North of England Volunteer Battalion, an ARMY QUARTERMASTER, recently retired, to undertake that appointment for the battalion. Services would be actively required for about six weeks during the summer months only.—For further particulars apply C. O., care of the Manager, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

WANTED for the Volunteer Battalion, Leicestershire Regiment, an ORDERLY-ROOM CLERK. Must have had experience.—Apply in writing to the Adjutant, The Magazine, Leicester.

WANTED.—MAN COOK for OFFICERS' MESS of the third and fourth battalions Worcestershire Regiment (one mess).—Apply Mess President, Blenheim Barracks, Aldershot.

SWAINE and ADENEY,

WHIP MANUFACTURERS

to the Queen, the Princess of Wales, the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family.

PRIZE MEDALS, 1851, 1862; PARIS, 1878, 1889; VIENNA, 1873; CHICAGO, 1893.

185, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE), QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE. Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff. Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS. For Tariff, address MANAGER.

SOLDIERS' DAUGHTERS' HOME, HAMPSTEAD.

Patron: Her Most Gracious MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

Chairman: LIEUT.-GENERAL LORD DE ROS, K.C.V.O.

Vice-Chairman: LIEUT.-GEN. LORD WILLIAM SEYMOUR. On Application to the Secretary, forms for admission of Soldiers' daughters on list of candidates for election will be sent to any address. Candidates must be between 6 and 11, of sound health, and Protestants. Annual Election in May. List of candidates closed first Monday in March.

CONTRIBUTIONS are earnestly solicited to enable the Committee to maintain the number of girls in the Home at 180. Cheques (crossed on Messrs. Cox and Co.) to be made payable to C. E. LOW, Secretary, 5, Robert Street, Adelphi, W.C.

THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street. LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C., and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street. ASSURANCES AND LOANS can be effected by MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS in Government Service, on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business.

Annual Revenue exceeds	£1,100,000
Bonus Additions Declared exceed	£6,750,000
Accumulated Funds exceed	£8,400,000
Claims Paid exceed	£17,000,000

HART AND SON,

60, Artillery Place, Woolwich, (Established 100 Years), has FOR SALE

Nearly New REGULATION UNIFORMS for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices. Gold and Silver Dress

BELTS, SABRETACHES, and SASHES for Sale or on Hire.

All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver Lace, &c., bought for cash.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

No. 286, DECEMBER, 1900.

The Strategic Value of the Channel Islands. By WILLIAM LAIRD CLOWES ("Nauticus"). "Balfourian Amelioration" in Ireland. By the Right Hon. HORACE PLUNKETT (Vice-President of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland).

Thomas Henry Huxley. By LESLIE STEPHEN. Recent Science. By PRINCE KROPOTKIN. The Role of Women in Society. I. In Eighteenth-Century France. II. In Nineteenth-Century England. By the Hon. Lady FOSBURY.

The Defective Addition to our Company Law. By His Honour JUDGE EMDEN. A Visit to the Boer Prisoners at St. Helena. By MRS. JOHN RICHARD GREEN.

The Foot's End. By FREDERICK WEDMORE. Present-day Progress in India. By PROTAP CHUNDER MOZOOMDAR.

"The Sources of Islam." By SIR WILLIAM MUIR, K.C.S.I. Negligence in Recruiting. By CAPTAIN P. G. ELGOOD.

The Return of the Exile: a Retrospect. By SIR CHARLES ROE.

The Newspapers. By SIR WEMYSS REID. The Usages of War in South Africa. By JOHN MACDONELL, C.B. (Associé de l'Institut de Droit International).

Are we really a Nation of Amateurs? By the Right Hon. SIR HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P. Lord Rosebery on the Dangers to British Trade. By HENRY BIRCHENOUGH.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON and CO., Ltd.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES, BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.

The Warehouses, having been built expressly for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities. JOHN HANES, Manager.

Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS

ARMS, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES Engraved as Gems, from original and artistic designs.

NOTE PAPER and ENVELOPES brilliantly illuminated by hand in gold, silver, bronze, and colours. BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100.

HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.

All the New and Fashionable Note Papers. BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS of FARE, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, INVITATIONS and BOOK PLATES, REGIMENTAL BAND CARDS.

A VISITING CARD PLATE elegantly engraved and 100 CARDS printed for 4s. 6d.

RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA, SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plates. "Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd, Batn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wilt. Regiment, August, 1896."

Watch and Clock Makers. Report.

"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., R.N.

WAR MEDALS. All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

NOTES ON NAVAL STRATEGY AND TACTICS.

By Lieutenant H. STANSBURY, R.N.

PRICE 1s. POST FREE 1s. 1d.

Published by J. J. Kellier and Co., 33, King William Street, E.C., and 99, Victoria Street, S.W.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 1022. DECEMBER, 1900.

Price 2s. 6d.

ARMY REORGANISATION: THE HOME ARMY—TRAINING AND REDISTRIBUTION IN RELATION TO TRAINING AND TO MOBILISATION FOR WAR.—WITH PLUMES TO THE RELIEF OF MAIFERING. BY ONE OF HIS TROOPERS.—THE WATCHER BY THE THRESHOLD. BY JOHN BUCHAN.—A RECONNAISSANCE. BY ERNEST DAWSON.—AT A CHINESE DINNER-PARTY.—DOOM CAS'LE: A ROMANCE. BY NEIL MUNRO.—CHRISTMAS UNDER ARMS. BY CAPTAIN NEILL MALCOLM, D.S.O.—THE CASKET LETTERS. BY ANDREW LANG.—HELENA FAUCIT (LADY MARTIN). MUSINGS WITHOUT METHOD. CAMP-FOLLOWERS OF FALSEHOOD. CALUMNIES AGAINST THE BRITISH OFFICER.—THE CENSORSHIP.—THE PATRONAGE OF GENERALS.—MR. W. T. STEAD'S RECKLESS CHARGES.—"NAPOLEON"—THE JUSTIFICATION OF THE ENGLISH—NAPOLEON'S TABLE-TALK.—THE PASSING OF A NATION. BY "LINESMAN."—THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE.

Price Two Shillings.

CONTENTS, DECEMBER.

Notes on the Evolution of Cavalry.—continued. Lieut.-Col. F. N. MAUDE, late R.E.

The Economic Condition of Russia. CHRESONESE.

Frederick the Great.—IV. The First Part of the Campaign of 1757. Prague and Kolin. WILLIAM O'CONNOR MORRIS.

Notes on Artillery Fire.—Part II. A REGIMENTAL OFFICER.

Reconnaissance and Escorts for Horse and Field Artillery. Lieut.-Col. A. H. C. PHILLIPOTS, R.E.A.

Field Engineering for Home Defence.—Part III. Capt. R. F. SORSBIE, R.E.

The Volunteer Force. C. B. Schools of Instruction. A VOLUNTEER STAFF OFFICER.

The Future of the Yeomanry.—II. Capt. FRANK GREEN.

Conscription: An Answer to Dr. Maguire. WAG LEY.

Obligatory Military Service. H. S. MONTGOMERIE.

Army Reform. EDITOR.

London: WILLIAM CLOWES AND SONS, LTD., 13, CHANCERY CROSS, S.W.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO.'S CHRISTMAS LIST.

In Large Crown 4to, Cloth Gilt, Gilt Edges. Price 7s. 6d.

HEROES OF THE UNITED SERVICE.

Records of Noble Deeds in the British Army and Navy.

By L. VALENTINE.

With Upwards of 150 Illustrations in the Text and 32 Full-page plates, by CLARKSON STANFIELD, R. CATON WOODVILLE, LANCELOT SPEED, etc.

"Unselfish and heroic acts have made our Empire the greatest in the world." So said Lord Salisbury on one occasion, and how very true his words are will at once be seen by those who take up this really fine volume. It is the final work of its author, Mrs. Valentine, than whom none have known better how to deal with such subjects. . . The most striking point in the general life-history is set out crisply and concisely. War maps, plans, and illustrations go to make up a most entertaining and handsome volume, which should have special value as a gift-book."—Lloyd's News.

THE MYSTERY OF LADYPLACE. By

CHRISTIAN LYS. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 6s. "Readers of the 'Fortress of Yadasara' will not be disappointed with Mr. Lys' new volume. The Mystery is one that would baffle Sherlock Holmes himself. The characters are all life-like and interesting, that of the stout German doctor being particularly clever."

THE FORTRESS OF YADASARA. By

CHRISTIAN LYS. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 6s. With 8 Illustrations by LANCELOT SPEED. "The tale is told with spirit and art, so that throughout we feel the shadow of the Fortress over us."—Athenaeum.

IN CONNECTION WITH THE DE WILLOUGHBY CLAIM. By FRANCES

HODGSON BURNETT. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s. "The De Willoughby Claim" shows the gifted authoress at her best. The volume is one of the most human that has been published this year, and is full of that sweetness and pathos we have come to look for in Mrs. Hodgson Burnett's work. The characters are all lovable. . . It is the biggest thing Mrs. Hodgson Burnett has attempted, and she has been rewarded with conspicuous success."—Weekly Sun.

THE DOGS OF WAR. By EDGAR PICKERING.

With Illustrations by LANCELOT SPEED. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 6s. "The story is brimful of incident and stirring adventure, told without extravagance or too strong evidence of party feeling."—Birmingham Gazette.

WOMAN AND ARTIST. By MAX O'RELL.

Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. "Good things are rife in this delightful book, which ought to win a shining success."—Daily Telegraph.

TO PAY THE PRICE. By SILAS K.

HOCKING. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 3s. 6d. With Original Illustrations by ARTHUR A. DIXON. "Whatever the setting of Mr. Silas Hocking's stories, he is always entertaining; there is a manly religious tone without cant in his books, which makes them wholesome and attractive to all classes of readers."—Birmingham Gazette.

A LOST IDENTITY. By J. D. HENNESSEY.

Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. "A remarkable and weird story. Mr. Hennessey deals with the strange case of Mark Guntery, who, by the sinister occult influence of his enemy, has his spirit separated from his soul and body, and enshrined in that of an aged man. The narrative is largely concerned with the doings of the dual Mark, and the reader's attention is held from first to last."

ILLUSTRATED GIFT BOOKS.

In large crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d. each.

HUNTING FOR GOLD. Adventures in the Klondyke. By HUME NISBET. With 6 Illustrations by HAL HURST.

A CHASE ROUND THE WORLD. By ROBERT OVERTON. With numerous Illustrations.

"Mr. Overton has written a thoroughly entertaining story, worthy of his best efforts, and his exciting narrative has been capably illustrated by A. Monro."

THE FORTUNES OF CLAUDE. By EDGAR PICKERING. With 6 full-page Plates and Initial Letters specially designed by LANCELOT SPEED.

The fortunes of Claude are largely connected with those of Prince Charles Edward, under whose banner he enrolled himself. There is plenty of fighting, highwaymen, and adventures of all kinds, such as please boys to read about.

TRAVELS BY THE FIRESIDE. A Book for Winter Evenings. By GORDON STABLES, M.D., C.M. With Original Illustrations by GORDON BROWNE.

Mr. Gordon Stables's book, like Aladdin's Carpet, carries us a long and absorbingly interesting journey, almost without our being aware of it. By the cosy fireside we can sit while Mr. Stables arrays before us his life-like pictures of distant lands.

KINGS OF THE SEA: A Story of the Spanish Main. By HUME NISBET. With Illustrations by J. B. GREENE.

A capital story of adventure on the Spanish Main.

MY FRIEND ANNE: A Story of the Sixteenth century. By JESSIE ARMSTRONG. With Original Illustrations by G. DEMAIN HAMMOND, R.I.

A well-written tale of the days of Anne Boleyn and the Court of Henry VIII., where for the most part the scene is laid. The life of the period is depicted with accuracy, and yet at the same time with an interest which cannot fail to please the most critical of readers.

MY LADIES THREE. By ANNIE E. ARMSTRONG. With 6 Original Illustrations by G. D. HAMMOND, R.I.

A pretty and romantic story of the days of George the First, in which, like the interest of the tale, the manner and style of language of the period is well kept up.

A Complete Catalogue of Christmas Books on Application.

LONDON: FREDERICK WARNE & CO., CHANDOS HOUSE, BEDFORD STREET.

POCKET VOLUME. BOUND IN KHAKI.

Small 24mo, cloth, red lettered, gilt top, 1s.

SOLDIER SONGS. A NEW MILITARY SONG BOOK.

Containing the latest Popular Songs, including: THE SOLDIERS OF THE QUEEN. PRIVATE TOMMY ATKINS. THE DEATHLESS ARMY. THE OLD BRIGADE. WHO CARRIES THE GUN? THE UNION JACK. TO THE FRONT, etc.

To which are added the Collection Edited by J. E. Carpenter. Also issued in limp red lambskin, 2s. net.

POCKET VOLUME. BOUND IN NAVY BLUE.

Small 24mo, cloth, white lettered, gilt top, price 1s. In navy blue lambskin, 2s. net.

SAILOR SONGS. A NEW NAVAL SONG BOOK.

Containing the latest Popular Songs, including: THEY ALL LOVE JACK. THE DEATH OF NELSON. THE MIDSHIPMITE, etc.

To which are added the Collection Edited by J. E. Carpenter.

NEW FAIRY TALE BOOK.

GOBBO-BOBO, the Two-Eyed Griffin: a Fairy Story. By H. E. INMAN. With numerous Original Illustrations and 8 full-page Plates by E. A. MASON. Large crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt edges, 6s.

Mr. Inman introduces his readers to "Gobbo-Bobo," otherwise "The Temple Bar Griffin," who keeps guard over London opposite the Law Courts. Wonderful adventures follow, and we come across notabilities of the town, real and mystical personages of old time and to-day being jumbled up in the most delightful manner; such as the "Aldermanic Turtle," who refuses to be made into soup, the "Dandy Lion," the "Welsh Rabbit," "Gog and Magog," &c. Mr. Mason's illustrations are very happy in expressing the author's queer fancies and help to complete a charming children's volume.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

In large crown 8vo, cloth gilt or art linen, gilt top, 3s. 6d. each.

THE OWL KING, and other Stories. By H. E. INMAN. Illustrated by E. A. MASON.

"There is an invention and freshness in these fairy stories, which have that consistency that is all a young reader has a right to demand."—Birmingham Daily Post.

THE ONE-EYED GRIFFIN, and other Fairy Tales. A series of Original Stories by HERBERT E. INMAN. With numerous Illustrations by E. A. MASON. "Pretty and touching fairy stories. Among them 'Prince Gibley Gobley,' will especially charm little folks."—Daily Chronicle.

STORIES FROM SHAKSPEARE. By M. S. TOWNSEND. With upwards of 120 Original Illustrations by the Author. Large crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 6s. Lovers of literature will be grateful for any attempt to engrain an early appreciation of the noblest works in the language upon the minds of the young. The rendering of the plays into prose stories has been so skilfully treated that they cannot fail to awaken interest in the youngest child.

AN INDISPENSABLE WORK FOR NAVAL OFFICERS.

ROYAL NAVY LIST

DIARY & NAVAL HANDBOOK

[FOURTH YEAR] FOR 1901. [OF ISSUE.]

DIARY ARRANGED WHOLE PAGE TO A DAY.

A NAVAL ENCYCLOPÆDIA.

Only Diary specially devoted to the Navy.

Several pages of valuable Tables.

Original Articles. Calendar of Naval Events, &c.

"THE 'WHITAKER' OF THE NAVY"

IN

OVER 500 PAGES, THREE SHILLINGS NET.

Postage in the British Isles, 4d.; Abroad, 8d.

LONDON:—WITHERBY & CO., 326, HIGH HOLBORN.

AND OF ALL BOOKSELLERS AND RAILWAY BOOKSTALLS.

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE.

LORD NELSON.

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM,
P.S.C.(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM
and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),35, HEREFORD SQUARE, S.W.
(one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station
Metropolitan and District Railways).MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION,
SEPT.—OCT., 1900.FIRST—MR. C. G. LESLIE, 24,060 Marks.
MR. H. G. SMITH, 14,517 Marks.These were the only two candidates sent up by Col. Needham.Mr. Leslie made 4,384 marks more than any other competitor; the next in order
of merit scoring only 19,676 marks.*During the last three years all Colonel Needham's Pupils have been successful
at the Militia Competitive Examinations.Prospectus and List of Successes on application.HOVE, SUSSEX.*MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,
Late the Border Regiment,
assisted by

Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late R.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.SEPTEMBER, 1900.*NEW REGULATIONS.*SECOND ARTILLERY— Marks.
J. Coldwell-Horshall 16,790SIXTH INFANTRY—
A. V. P. Marten 16,153

Place.	Name.	Marks.
14th (Infantry)	B. G. A. Townshend	15,109
21st (Infantry)	*F. O. Koebel	14,105
22nd (Infantry)	C. F. F. Campbell	13,893

* Military subjects only.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5,862
Infantry	L. Aymer	5,851
Infantry	K. O. Goldie	5,653
University	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.

ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY,
and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.*No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.
Capt. M. M. M. FESTING.Resident and Non-resident Pupils received.
Prospectus with List of Successes on application.
Officers Coached by Correspondence.S. G. KIRCHHOFFER,
M.A., F.G.S., F.R.G.S.(Ex-Scholar & Honourman, Pembroke College, Cambridge).
Receives Twelve Pupils for all Army Examinations.FOUR RESIDENT INSTRUCTORS.*GREAT FACILITIES FOR MILITIA EXAMINATIONS.House stands on gravel soil, in the Pine-wood district. Cricket, Football, and Tennis Grounds.Terms and List of Successes on Application to
YATELEY GRANGE,
Blackwater, Hants.MILITIA COMPETITIVE.*Capt. Fuller, late R.E., in conjunc- tion with Mr. A. J. de Havilland
Bushnell, M.A., prepares resident and non-resident Pupils for the above.Address: 1, Orrisdale Terrace, College Road, Cheltenham.MILITIA EXAMINATION.*SEPTEMBER, 1900.Lieut.-Col. MOORES prepared for the above Examination only Four Officers, all of whom have been selected for Commissions, but the marks obtained on this occasion do not in any way indicate a test of the knowledge acquired by the pupils in the subjects of the examination.
Previous successes under real competition: 145
Officers of the Militia, also 62 Officers for promotion.Pupils are also prepared for WOOLWICH and SANDHURST.8, Redcliffe Gardens, Clarendon Road, SOUTHSEA.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,

AND

MR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge), ECCLEFECHAY, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and
Non-Resident, for
ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVER-
SITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of
many years' successful experience.
Careful Individual Attention. Strong
Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical
Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer.
Competent Military Instructor.SUCCESSES, 1900.Militia Competitive, September.—C. A. de
G. Dalglish, 7th Infantry, 16,114 marks; E.
Corbould-Warren, 10th Artillery, 13,114
marks; both first trial.Woolwich.—None sent up.
Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only
Candidate.Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy.
Cambridge.—Trinity College Entrance; and Cambridge.—"Previous" Examination.—J. Cundell.A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare;
and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION.*WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and UNIVERSITIES.MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PRE-
PARES a limited number of PUPILS.RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.RECENT SUCCESSSES.*WOOLWICH.G. F. Farran 8001 marks Dec. 1898.
W. Burrell Hayley 9228 " Dec. 1899.
The only pupils sent up.

SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.

Viscount Ingestre	7th Cavalry Cadetship.
C. M. Truman	Cavalry Cadetship.
E. P. Grant	Infantry Cadetship.
G. Winne Finch	Infantry Cadetship.
B. H. Leatham	Infantry Cadetship.
G. E. Hawes	Infantry Cadetship.
C. A. Antrobus	Infantry.
B. H. Pison	Infantry.
H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh	Infantry.
B. Neave	Infantry.
G. Wahab	Indian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Colonel Russell, Clavinia, Weymouth.

SEPTEMBER, 1900.

Three sent up, three passed, viz.:—

Embodied Officers.	Topo.	Mil. Eng.	Mil. 1st	Mil. 2nd
a Russell	940	1060	1465	1000
b Fletcher	1020	425	1020	845
c Yardley	900	1510	1255	620

a and c Four weeks' leave before exam. only.
b Four weeks' work interrupted by duty—an absolute beginner.BRIGHTON—Crescent House School.*A. H. THOMAS, M.A., Oxon.

(Late 2nd Master O.M.C.).

OFFERS A SOUND GENERAL EDUCATION

to Boys preparing for

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND NAVY.

Reduced Fees offered to Sons of Officers serving in South Africa.BUSINESS DIRECTORY.*ARMY TAILORS and ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1,
CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.ARMY TAILOR and MILITARY OUTFITTER.—F. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench
Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.BREECHES MAKERS and MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW,
BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.GUN and RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.
PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. 303 Rifles a spécialité.MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN. Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., EDINBURGH (late 27, North Bridge).MILITARY TAILORS and BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms
strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.HOTEL DIRECTORY.*BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well
Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining
Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.CLEVEDON HYDRO.—FULLY LICENSED RESIDENTIAL HOTEL. Comfortable
Winter Health Resort. Reduced terms to invalids from the Front. Bright, Cheerful, Homelike. Well Warmed and Ventilated. Turkish, Electric and other Baths. Massage and Electro Massage. Special arrangements and amusements for the Xmas Holidays. Climate mild, equable, and bracing. SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea
Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.DUBLIN.—SHELBORNE HOTEL.
First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south
aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate.
An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARDLONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This
Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL and QUEEN'S HOTEL.—
Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

Educational.

THE
COLONIAL COLLEGE &
TRAINING FARMS,
HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have
unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.Full information from the Director at above address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria Street, Westminster.AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,
ASPATRIA.

Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising
Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE
CIRENCESTER.

(Established by Royal Charter, 1845.)

For Land Owners, Land Agents, Surveyors,
Agriculturists, Colonists, &c.

PATRON:

H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

PRESIDENT:

HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF RICHMOND AND

GORDON, K.G.

COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT:

The Right Hon. the EARL OF DUCIE, Chairman.

Col. Sir NIGEL KINGSCOTE, K.C.B., Vice-

Chairman.

PRINCIPAL:

THE REV. JOHN B. MCLELLAN, M.A.

Hon. Member of Surveyors' Institution, and late

Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

For Prospectus of College, Farm and
Dairy, List of Governors, Professors,
Practical Instructors, &c., Courses of Instruction, Scholarships, Diplomas, Gold
Medals, &c., apply to the Principal
NEXT SESSION begins TUESDAY,
October 9.TURKISH & ARABIC.*SCHOLARSHIPS. REWARDS.Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S Double success at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish and Arabic, held on October 16 and 17, 1900, was with Major W. B. Morton, R.E., Qualified Interpreter at FIRST TRIAL in both Languages, with marks 656 and 643, and mostly prepared by correspondence from London at Mooltan, Punjab,
India.Also Colonel E. Stephenson Essex Regiment,
Qualified Interpreter in Turkish, at First Trial,
with 667 marks; Major H. A. Curtis, R.A., and FIFTEEN other officers with high marks.Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.

NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-

STANI, BUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.

Distance offers no hindrance to success.

Intending Candidates should begin work early.

Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.

SANDECOTES SCHOOL, PARK-STONE, DORSET.A High-class School, at Moderate Fees, for the Daughters of Gentlemen, where the aim is to train girls to be practical, refined, womanly women. Every care and comfort for delicate children. Large grounds; tennis and fives courts; playing fields. Pupils prepared for the University and other Examinations. Head Mistress, Miss Sophie M. Smith (National Sciences Tripos, Cambridge), assisted by a highly qualified staff. Two entrance Scholarships for competition in Dec. for girls under 12 and 15 years respectively.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH
ANDMR. H. A. STERN, M.A.(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge), Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors.PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, andUNIVERSITIES at*CEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE*HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;

For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.E.

Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."

Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and

7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT

(150 yards from the Station), for Promotion

Candidates and Day Pupils.

Telephone, "217, Kensington."

List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed,
will be sent on application.SANDHURST, WOOLWICH,
INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SER-
VICE, and UNIVERSITIES.MR. J. J. GREVATT

(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY,
for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.

A Barrister on Staff assists Candidates for

DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.

Prospectus with List of successes on application.

WORK WAS RESUMED AUGUST 15, 1900.

57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

Shipping.INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA,
QUEENSLAND, BURMAH,
PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGA-
TION COMPANY, LIMITED.
BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to

CALCUTTA.	ZANZIBAR.
MADRAS.	MOMBASSA.
COLOMBO.	BRISBANE.
RANGOON.	BATAVIA.
MAURITIUS.	ROCKHAMPTON.
BOMBAY.	TOWNSVILLE.
KURACHEE.	MARYBOROUGH.
BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo
to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH,
EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great
Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House,
Northumberland Avenue, W.C.GELLATLY, HANKY & CO., Albert Square,
Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock
House, Billiter Street, E.C.P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA,
CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN
MAIL SERVICES.P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS
to GIBALTAR, MAR-
SEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN,
BOMBAY, KURACHEE, CALCUTTA,
CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN,
AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TIC-
KETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.—For particulars apply
at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall
Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue,
W.C.BIBBY LINE

TO

MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMBO,
RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA
(via Tuticorin).Tons. Liverpool. Marseilles.
LANCASHIRE 4244 Dec. 13 Dec. 20
SHROPSHIRE* 5789 Jan. 10 Jan. 17.
STAFFORDSHIRE* 6005 Jan. 24 Jan. 31

Those marked * are twin-screw steamers.

These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs.
Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewards.Every possible comfort for first class passengers only.This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles
are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon
respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,
26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and
10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,
138, Leadenhall Street, London.
C. HOWARD & SONS
45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Pantaloons,
Polo Breeches.
11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.

F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.

Established over 80 Years.

M. WISEMAN,
TAILOR & MILITARY OUTFITTER,
HELMET, ARMY CAP,
AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKER,
43, SACKVILLE ST., LONDON, W.

EMIGRATION TO CANADA.
Canada offers great advantages to settlers, including free grants of 160 acres of land and improved farms at reasonable prices. Fine climate, no rent, light taxes, free schools, good markets, rapidly developing industries, and large import and export trade. Pamphlets, maps, and full particulars (supplied post free), may be obtained from the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria Street, London, S.W., or from the Allan, Dominion and Elder Dempster Steamship Companies, or their Local Agents, or the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.
Write for particulars.

OUR NEXT PLATE.
Ready on January 5, 1901.
Will commence a series of types of
THE INDIAN ARMY,
And will illustrate part of the Military Forces of BENGAL, the remainder appearing in the
FEBRUARY PLATE.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and
VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete,
and single Articles in condition equal to New
at one-third original cost.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD.

E. WHISTLER,
11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND

BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.
Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S
The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach,
Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations,
Bilious Affections.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA
SOLD THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.
N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,
Naval and Military Outfitters,
WEST END BRANCH—
19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.
Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard. Telegraphic Address—
Do. Do. 5810 Avenue. "Realistic, LONDON."
New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements
(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)
BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.
REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.
Infantry, 35s. 6d. Cavalry, 38s. 6d.
ON APPROVAL.

If the Blood is Diseased the Body is Diseased and Enfeebled. Keep your Blood Pure and the Health of the System will follow.

Clarke's Blood Mixture,

THE WORLD-FAMED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RESTORER,
is warranted to Cleanse the Blood from all Impurities from whatever cause arising,
For Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Sores of all kinds, Eczema, Scurvy, Scrofula, Bad
Legs, Glandular Swellings, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous.
It is the only real Specific for Gout and Rheumatic pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the Blood and Bones.

As this Mixture is pleasant to the taste and warranted free from anything injurious to the most delicate constitution of either sex, from infancy to old age,
the Proprietors solicit sufferers to give it a trial to test its value. Clarke's Blood Mixture is sold by all Chemists throughout the world. Price 2s. 9d. and 11s.
per bottle.

Thousands of Testimonials of Wonderful Cures from all parts of the World.
Proprietors: The Lincoln and Midland Counties Drug Co., Lincoln.
BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS OR SUBSTITUTES.

REVERSIONS AND LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities
and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or
Annuities thereon Granted by the
EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST
SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand
Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

ALL BUT NEW OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,
for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of

LEWIS MOSES,
65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,
at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms and apparel purchased.

The Physician's Cure
for Gout, Rheumatic
Gout and Gravel; the
safest and most gentle
Medicine for Infants,
Children, Delicate Females, and the Sickness of Pregnancy.

RICHARD DICKESON
AND COMPANY,
WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND
PROVISION IMPORTERS.
LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, Mansell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVEY: Market Lane and Queen Street,
ALDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street. PLY-
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse. PEN-
BROKE DOCK: Tremeryck Street. GIBRA-
LTA: City Mill Lane. CAPE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street. PORT ELIZABETH:
Lenkita Warehouse, Rufane Vale. DURBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street. Agencies at
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c., &c.
Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire.
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price Lists
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest.
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Custom
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST
SOCIETY, LTD.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.
Established 1833.
Chairman—C. R. RIVINGTON, Fec., J.P., D.L.
Paid-up Capital, £200,000
Debentures and Debenture Stock, £200,000
REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS
PURCHASED.
ADVANCES MADE THEREON.
W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE
INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL
INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED
FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL
S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.
ESTABLISHED 1803.
Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.
Paid-up Capital, £303,000.
Invested Funds over £1,500,000.
E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

BLAND & SONS'
"CAPE" GUN

(IMPROVED MODEL).
A New Combination Rifle and Shot Gun.
Left Barrel Rifled '303 bore.
Right Barrel 20 or 28 bore, for Shot or Ball.
A Perfect Battery in itself, and serviceable for
any part of the World.

AS SUPPLIED TO
H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,
Whose Expedition to the North Pole
WAS FULLY EQUIPPED WITH ARMS
AND AMMUNITION BY THIS FIRM.
T. BLAND & SONS,
2, King William St., Strand, W.C.
(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)
Works:
41, 42, & 43, Whittall St., Birmingham.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S
GRATEFUL-COMFORTING.
COCOA
BREAKFAST-SUPPER.

MOUSELL BROS.,
FURNITURE REMOVERS
AND STORERS,
Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, S.W.
AND WALHAM GREEN, FULHAM.
BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT
BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.
LEAMINGTON.—Windsor Street.
MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.
LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.
LIVERPOOL.—Bronte Street, Russell Street.
EXETER.—London Inn Square.
GLOUCESTER.—Depository, and Van and Wagon
Works, Commercial Road.

SECOND-HAND
UNIFORMS
BOUGHT AND SOLD.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UN-IFORMS in all conditions at from one-fifth
original cost, or sells the same on commission.
Mufti clothing also purchased.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2133.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRICE 6D
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—	PAGE
The Old Bogey - - - - -	1181
The Kaiser and Mr. Kruger - - - - -	1181
South Africa - - - - -	1182
Some Navy Ideas - - - - -	1192
The Powers of the Admiralty - - - - -	1193
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes - - - - -	1183
Army Personal - - - - -	1185
Navy Notes - - - - -	1194
Navy Personal - - - - -	1195
Letters to the Editor—
Army Service Corps - - - - -	1186
A Growl from a "Gloucester" - - - - -	1187
Articles—
At the Front - - - - -	1183
The Ashanti Despatches - - - - -	1184
Press Views and Opinions on Army Matters - - - - -	1184
War Summary - - - - -	1186
Returned, Sick, and Wounded Officers - - - - -	1187
Casualties in South Africa - - - - -	1197
The Gazettes—
Navy - - - - -	1196
Army - - - - -	1198
Regimental Intelligence - - - - -	1188
Reviews - - - - -
Napoleon - - - - -	1190
Sir William Hunter's "British India" - - - - -	1190
Christmas Publications - - - - -	1190
Short Notices - - - - -	1190
Obituary - - - - -	1188
Naval Intelligence - - - - -	1196

THE OLD BOGEY.

THE vapourings of certain French Colonels under the Second Empire no doubt contributed largely to the Volunteer movement in 1859. It was said that the Orsini plot against Napoleon III. had been hatched in London, and some of the sycophantic seniors in the French army were eager to invade this country, which then, as now, was deemed defenceless. To-day General Mercier brings openly before the French Senate his views upon the possibility of making a hostile descent upon our shores. He bases his belief upon the alleged failure of our troops in South Africa: "The British Army (in his opinion) gallant and sound as it was, was no longer equal to the expectation of the country." Again, he lays stress upon the many instances in history when the British Navy mutinied "in the very moment of battle." From these somewhat thin, vague premises General Mercier argues that a landing in England is "not beyond realisation," and in this opinion he claims to be supported by "many high military personages." It is also, he told the Senate, "the opinion of Baron Von der Goltz," the eminent German strategist. It may be well to assure General Mercier that if he cares to pursue his investigations he will find still stronger endorsements of his views. There are schemes fully worked out for the invasion of England in the secret drawers of every European War Office; the subject is a favourite excursus for the military students of all nations. The final verdict was given by the great Von Moltke, who unhesitatingly affirmed that a descent was perfectly feasible, but he added his famous rider. It would be possible, he declared, under certain, and by no means far-fetched or visionary conditions, to land a force of one or two hundred thousand men in England, "the difficulty would be to get them out again."

Yet complacency in such a matter of life and death cannot be too strongly deprecated. War has ever been full of astonishing and fatal surprises. Because none of the threats so often heard have ever gone beyond words, we should not conclude that invasion will never be tried and possibly accomplished. The truest wisdom is to be always ready—the strong man armed keepeth his house in order—and however inept the recent utterances of General Mercier, they show at least what aspirations are in the minds of our nearest neighbours. It behoves to narrowly examine our defensive army, especially in the light of such a danger as the sudden mobilisation of 200,000 invaders, their successful passage of the Channel, their rapid disembarkation, and no less rapid advance in overwhelming strength against their "principal objective," London.

Let us take up each item in turn, weighing the pros and cons—the chances for and against accomplishment. There would not be the slightest difficulty in the first, although it is taken a little too much for granted that absolute antecedent secrecy could be maintained as to the gathering of troops, their concentration upon the coast and railroads leading there. Nor does it seem likely that the necessary tonnage—a fleet of some hundreds of transports—could be collected at the ports without some betrayal of the movement. The warnings conveyed might not be early, but they should suffice to put the British Navy on the alert, provided always that it had not decoyed to a distance, a favourite postulate with the supporters of invasion. It is their fashion to exclude the probable—and as some of us believe the certain—action of our fleet in hindering or impeding the descent, a notion that may be classed with General Mercier's hope that the bluejackets might mutiny at the psychological moment. A more reasonable assumption is that the first line of defence—the chief bulwark of the realm—would hardly be found wanting on such a supreme occasion. But let us imagine, for the sake of argument, that whether by evading or overcoming our fleet, the landing had been effected, what remains? Are we to accept General Mercier's serene conclusion that the road would be open for an unopposed advance upon London? Should we in truth possess no Army in being; no sufficient forces—horse, foot, or guns; no organisation for putting them quickly in the field; no means for offering resistance, even of an imperfect and inadequate kind? The answer may not be entirely reassuring, but the situation is not quite so hopeless as too sanguine enemies and too pessimistic fellow countrymen would have us suppose. Last summer, no doubt, when the strain of the Boer war was abnormally severe, a situation was created which might have been seized by a watchful enemy, and the same may recur. Even then we might yet have made a good show, but the necessity happily did not arise. Nor need we in future be subjected to any attack we could not readily face by using ordinary care. The defensive capabilities of this country are more than sufficient to protect us if they are properly utilised. The numbers available are more than adequate if effectively organised; the scheme of mobilisation is good, and could easily be perfected. But we must have more method, a more symmetrical system, more practical tests. The various items of the whole array must be put on a sound serviceable footing—the men fully trained, matériel amply provided, every unit held at all times fit and ready to take the field. Within our limited area, literally honeycombed with railways, concentration is feasible from the longest distances in the very shortest time; the easy and immediate movement of bicyclists as fighting forces to the points first threatened has been demonstrated by Sir Frederick Maurice; we have, above all, a country naturally adapted for defence, in which every lane may be made a line of entrenchment, every hillside a fortress. The lessons of the Boer war have been learnt at bitter cost, but their value remains with us, and will be appreciated when we ourselves are on the defensive. It is in no spirit of bombast that we are inclined to bid General Mercier and his legions to come and do their worst.

The old bogey may be for ever laid if our rulers will but make the most of the undoubted powers we possess, actual and latent, of holding every enemy at bay.

THE KAISER AND MR. KRUGER.

IN politely declining to receive ex-President Kruger, His Imperial Majesty the German Emperor has rendered Great Britain no slight service. The torrent of interested and cleverly promoted gush let loose in France threatened dangerous consequences. The danger, let us hope, has been arrested, since the ominous tide flowing whither no man could see, has been stemmed by the timely action of the Kaiser taken at the critical moment, and prompted by the instinct of true statesmanship that would guard the best interests of a great and rising Empire. Mr. Kruger's triumphal progress from Marseilles to Paris, and thence to the frontier of Belgium, has been witnessed by this country with a composure almost amounting to indifference. Yet it was an astonishing spectacle. Due partly to clever manipulation in its initial stages, but also very greatly to the excitable character of the race, and the hatred of Great Britain that has unfortunately become second nature with no inconsiderable section of the French people, a sudden enthusiasm for the cause of the Boers was kindled, which ran like wildfire through the masses. The influence of this apparently spontaneous outbreak made itself immediately felt, as though it were a mandate from the nation, in the reception accorded by the President of France to ex-President Kruger, and in the votes of respectful sympathy with him passed by the Chamber of Deputies, and the Senate. It was perhaps scarcely surprising that the echoes of the shouting of the almost frenzied mobs of France should have reached beyond her northern border, and prepared on a smaller scale like scenes in the towns of Belgium; but to the King of the Belgians and the Government of that prosperous little kingdom, it was no light matter that a British Consul and his family should be hooted and pelted with eggs in the streets of Liège. Thus was the evil spreading like a prairie fire, and had it continued its baneful course with its initial success unabated, as its promoters so ardently hoped and wished, while it might have failed to restore to the South African Republics their lost independence, it might have set all Europe in a blaze.

Mr. Kruger has been ill-advised to come to Europe on such a mission at the present time, when the troops of the great Powers are engaged in the Far East in a combined attempt to bring the guilty Court of the Celestial Empire to its knees. He now understands his position better, and the failure of his mission must be patent even to him, but it has required the strong personality and the decided action of the Kaiser to enlighten him. He will now be well-advised, and will gain the sympathy of many who look at him askance, if, convinced that he is the champion of a cause irretrievably lost, he will exert what influence he may still possess with the fighting burghers to induce them to lay down their arms, and will himself retire to some quiet retreat where he may end his eventful life in peace.

With every desire to avoid ungenerous words towards a fallen foe, it is impossible to repress a feeling of indignation at Mr. Kruger's attempt to promote his cause and arouse hatred against this country, on alighting on French soil, by misrepresenting the British soldiers in South Africa as barbarous in their methods of carrying on the war. Consciousness, it surely must have been, of the falsity of this charge that compelled him later on to explain that, in accusing our troops, he spoke as the head of a State, but that as head of a family he had nothing but thanks for Lord Roberts for his consideration towards those of his own whom he has left behind. We turn with pleasure from the sorry spectacle that Mr. Kruger and the French nation have seen fit to provide for the delectation of the world, to the noble words of Lord Roberts in his farewell to the Army in South Africa on giving up his command. The eloquent tribute he pays to the excellence of the Army he quits with unfeigned regret will take its place in history, as the worthy closing of the drama in which, for nearly a year of constant and arduous work, he has been the chief actor. We commend to the notice of Mr. Kruger the words of the British Commander-in-Chief to his "gallant and devoted comrades," as he aptly styles them:—"By your conspicuous kindness and humanity towards your enemies, your forbearance and good behaviour in the towns occupied, you have caused the Army of Great Britain to be as highly respected as it must henceforth be greatly feared in South Africa." Such words coming from such a source will fill the Queen's subjects in every clime with feelings of legitimate pride and satisfaction, but this is no time for self-congratulations. The hostile cries of foreign mobs still ringing in our ears, the insults offered to British Consuls at Liège and Cologne, and last, but by no means least in significance, the outspoken utterances of General Mercier in the French Senate, all warn us as a nation that the time has come to put our house in order. On this account if on no other, th early installation of Lord Roberts in Pall Mall to take up the new duties he is prepared with so much hopefulness to face, is an event that all must desire to see realised at the earliest possible moment.

SOUTH AFRICA.

IT will be profitable, perhaps, at this stage to extend our view beyond the borders of the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony, the actual theatre of the war that has occupied our arms for so long, and embrace within the scope of our remarks the adjacent colonies of the Cape and Natal, which present just now a remarkable and instructive contrast with one another. Natal, the "Garden Colony," has apparently almost returned to its normal condition of peace and loyalty, and its towns have been enjoying the privilege of entertaining the veteran Chief who so lately led the British Army to victory. Lord Roberts, in addressing the Cadet Corps at Pietermaritzburg, gave expression to opinions that deserve attention from a larger audience than that to which they were addressed. Reuter reports that Lord Roberts was greatly pleased to hear that every youth in the Colony was compelled at one time or another to join the corps, and to learn the principles of discipline and how to shoot, should occasion ever arise for him to do so. This was an excellent idea, and he would like to see the example followed throughout Great and Greater Britain. "I hope," added Lord Roberts, "the old country will follow the example of one of her children, and insist on all boys joining cadet corps." He then referred to the excellent service rendered in the war by the Colonial contingents, whose assistance had been invaluable to him and in conclusion emphasised the primary importance of good shooting, a matter of the first consideration. With the school children he left the watchwords of "truth, mercy, and liberty," begging them to ever remember that their fathers and brothers had gone forth to die to save their country from the invader.

Turning to Cape Colony, we find a far less satisfactory state of affairs. There, owing to the preponderance of the Dutch portion of the population, and the propaganda of misrepresentation that has been prevalent amongst them, a dangerous condition of unrest exists. This may result in open revolt unless controlled by a statesman-like combination of administrative wisdom and military strength. These essentials for the preservation of peace exist respectively and adequately in Sir Alfred Milner and Lord Kitchener, but the vigour and loyalty of the co-operation to be expected from the Cape Government are still doubtful quantities, although amid much that is disquieting we may still see some healthy signs. Nevertheless, there are men and women among the Dutch who, realising the fruitlessness of a continuance of guerilla warfare, are urging their countrymen, and especially their pastors, to use their influence to bring it to an end, and to accept British rule. On the other hand, we have the formation in Cape Colony of new corps of irregulars, which will add considerably to the defensive power of the British, a move that will be welcomed, as showing that our fellow-subjects in Cape Colony view with increasing spirit and determination the necessity now confronting each loyal member of the community to contribute to in the restoration of peace.

Meanwhile, north of the Orange and the Vaal rivers, all the incidents of active guerilla warfare are still of daily occurrence. From Vryburg, beyond the western border to Utrecht, east of Natal, and from the districts north of Middelburg to the neighbourhood of Bethulie on the Orange River, reports of fighting more or less severe continue to come in. In point of severity the heaviest blows have been given and received by General Paget, who, after continuous fighting for four days from the 26th ult., and with the co-operation of General Lyttelton, is reported to have beaten Viljoen and Erasmus, with a loss of eighty killed, besides wounded and prisoners. The engagement occurred in the districts lying north of Balmoral and Middelburg, and about forty miles to the east of Pretoria. This crushing defeat, in which the New Zealanders by their conspicuous gallantry largely helped, would go far to convince the fighting Boers of the uselessness of the struggle, were they not still encouraged by the most astounding and mendacious statements concerning British losses, and the hopeful prospects of their cause. It is, however, to the south of the Orange River Colony, ever since the unfortunate, and as yet unexplained capture of the garrison of Dewetsdorp on the 23rd ult., that all eyes have been directed with the keenest interest. The attempt to traverse the Colony southwards from Bothaville, after the serious defeat suffered there on the 6th ult., with the avowed intention of crossing the Orange River to raise again the standard of rebellion in Cape Colony and obtain there recruits and supplies, constitutes the boldest scheme yet formed by De Wet, who has proved himself to be par excellence the most daring and resourceful of the Boer commanders. Bearing in mind the extraordinary mobility of the enemy, and the facility with which De Wet has hitherto eluded pursuit, it is very much to the credit of General Charles Knox that since the temporary success of the enemy at Dewetsdorp, he should have overtaken the Boer leader, and headed him off by interposing between his force and the south. Lord Kitchener reported on the 30th ult. that Knox had engaged De Wet's rear-guard on the Dewetsdorp-Smithfield road, and had turned the flank of the Boers, who retreated towards the south and south-east, with a loss of two waggons and 300 led horses. At the time of the report Knox was in touch with De Wet near Tafelberg, twelve miles north of Bethulie, on the Orange River. De Wet had thus made considerable progress, and had apparently regained his original direction southwards. Unofficial information stated further that three columns of Knox's force under Colonels Pilcher, Barker, and Herbert, had then by forced marches got south of De Wet. During Sunday Knox's mounted troops were engaged at Goddekoop and Willoughby, three miles north of the Bethulie-Smithfield road, with the enemy, who were apparently making off for Odendal Drift on the Orange River, but were successfully headed off, when they retired towards the north-east, the British keeping in touch with them. On Tuesday Knox again engaged De Wet's force near the Bethulie-Smithfield road, and drove them northward. It is of the first importance that any attempt to invade Cape Colony at the present time should be defeated. The continued pursuit of Steyn and De Wet by General Knox will, therefore, be watched with the keenest interest, coupled with the hope, so long deferred, that the valour and labours of our troops may be at length rewarded by the capture of the formidable guerilla chief.

LORD STRATHCONA's Corps, which has had a place in the "Army List" since April last, and has done such excellent service in South Africa, is not to be disbanded. The Canadian Government, sensible of the excellent qualities the officers, non-commissioned officers and men have displayed, have decided that the Corps shall continue to exist, in name at least. It is therefore to be made the nucleus of a regiment of mounted infantry to the North-West Territory.

Army Notes.

Mr. Balfour stated, in the course of the debate on the Address, that the Government did not consider it to the public interest that all the despatches relating to the war should yet be published. It has been decided, however, that a selection of them shall be made public. The arrangement is not a satisfactory one, but even a partial break in the long silence that has hitherto been observed will be welcomed by military men. The Government by the publication of the Spion Kop despatches drew upon themselves so much criticism that they decided to keep back subsequent despatches, at least till such time as they could be published without embarrassing officers in the field. It was argued, it must be confessed with some force, that it would not do to hold back some and publish others. It may be said that this applies with not less force now than it did then. So it does; but the disadvantage, not to say injustice, of withholding the despatches is more apparent now than it was at the time the Government came to its decision. It would seem from Mr. Balfour's statement that some of the despatches will never see the light of day, though they will be available to anyone appointed to inquire into the conduct of the war. There is an air of mystery about this that is rather repugnant to the military mind, but it will hardly surprise anyone who is intimately acquainted with the fact. As to when the "selected" despatches will be forthcoming, Mr. Balfour was not very explicit. He did not hold out hope, however, that it would be before the return of Lord Roberts.

An old-established rule still obtains in the British Army that officers are not to be subjected to minor punishment, on the ground that the infliction of small penalties can only militate against their dignity and authority in the eyes of their men. Hence arrest is seldom imposed except as the preliminary to trial by court-martial, and trial as it used to be understood was never ordered unless there was a strong prima facie belief that conviction would follow. But although minor punishments are contrary to military regulation, the outside public is increasingly anxious to visit major punishments upon officers, both general and subordinates, who have been guilty of the most heinous of modern offences, non-success. Within the last week a new voice has been raised calling for strict inquiry into points still in doubt, and the due apportionment of condign punishment where it has been proved to be deserved. It is impossible to protest too strongly against the ungenerous and vindictive spirit that animates these outcries. To push fault-finding to its farthest limits can only have the most disastrous consequences in disheartening the servants of the public and paving the way to far worse disasters than any we have yet seen. At the same time we need not go far to seek the reasons for this recrudescence of ill-will. It is assuredly the reaction of the malcontents against the excessive laudation, as it seems to them, of men whom they do not consider entitled to unqualified praise.

When the full details of the Boer War come to be better known one point will certainly be brought out which greatly redounds to the credit of the army of Natal. By comparison with the main army, that which advanced through Bloemfontein under Lord Roberts in person, Buller's force was infinitely better off in the matter of supplies. Never were the men in Natal without a full day's rations; the service of the commissariat was generally admirable, the transport worked smoothly and not a single convoy was lost from first to last. It is, of course, true that the operations were long conducted within the limits of the Natal colony, and the communications were seldom if at all threatened. Per contra the main advance was handicapped from the very outset by the irretrievable loss at Jacobsdal, while in the continued movement forward the lines of railway were more and more exposed. Yet when the future historian is estimating the merits of respective commanders he will be bound to give due credit to the close attention paid by Sir Redvers Buller to the feeding of his troops, and this may explain the strong devotion he inspired, in part, but of course not wholly, for the British soldier has always loved a tenacious fighter.

The waste of life and strength still goes on in South Africa. Horse sickness has been rather bad lately about Standerton, and the loss in horseflesh during the war will come to a stupendous figure when all is over. Of those men who are invalided an appreciable number will not be fit for active service for many a long day; but the troops in the field have had no "visitations" such as desolated our camp in Bulgaria in 1854, or which from time to time are known in India. The lists of killed and wounded, and of the victims of enteric, dysentery, and other maladies, claim their columns in the papers every week, and among the agencies of death we note the work of "lightning," which has killed several men at different places recently in the field. The Boer Prayer-book contains a special prayer against a form of sudden death which is common and dreaded in the Transvaal, and when a Boer is overtaken by a storm on the veldt he dismounts, outspans his horse, removes the saddle, which he uses as a pillow, and puts spurs and stirrups and bit away for the time lest the lightning should be attracted by the metal. Before Lord (then Sir Garnet) Wolseley left Pretoria on his way home, his staff entertained him at a hotel kept by an Englishman named Carter, who was known to many when he was a boy with them at Eton. Sir H. Brackenbury, Sir F. Maurice, the late Sir Owen Lanyon, Sir G. Jackson, and others, had to wait long before the banquet was served, as Mr. Carter, who had driven to a neighbouring farm for some luxuries, did not make his appearance, and before they rose from table a Kaffir brought the news that Carter and his servant and the horse had been killed by lightning on the road home a short way outside the town. There were several men killed in one tent during the Sekukuni expedition by lightning, and many horses shared the same fate in Zululand in the campaign of 1879.

Professor Oram, of Queen's College, London, has published a preliminary volume to his larger work on "Imperial Britain," on which he has long been engaged. Among many evidences of profound thought and the highest patriotism is an eloquent protest against the common current belief that "the British people will under no circumstances tolerate any form of compulsory service for war." He affirms that "nothing in the past justifies the ascription of such a limit to the devotion of this people." He is satisfied that if ever called upon we are capable of making the same heroic sacrifices as our forefathers. "The Ministry or Cabinet which but dares, dares to trust this people's resolution, will find that their enthusiasm is not that of men over-wrought with war fever, but the deep-seated purpose of a people strong to defend the heritage of its fathers, and not to swerve from the path which fate itself has marked out for it amongst the nations of the earth." The Professor deals with the other prominent argument against compulsory service which is comprised in the word "militarism." "Men point to Rennes, to the petty tyrannies of military upstarts over civilians in Germany, and cry: 'Behold what awaits you from conscription.'" "There is nothing in our annals which warrants evil presage from the spread of militarism, nothing which precludes the hope, the just confidence that our very blood and the ineffaceable character of our race will save us from any mischief that militarism may have brought to others, and that in the future another chivalry may arise which shall be to other armies and other systems what the Imperial Parliament is to the Parliaments of the world—a paragon and an example." The Professor winds up in a noble passage: "With us the decision rests. If we should decide wrongly—it is not the loss of prestige, it is not the narrowed bounds we have to fear, it is the judgment of the dead, the despair of the living, of the inarticulate myriads who have trusted to us, it is the arraigning eyes of the unborn. Who can confront this unappalled?"

Tuesday's London Gazette made public Sir F. Hodgson's and Sir J. Willcocks' despatches dealing with the recent operations against the rebel Ashantis and the relief of Kumasi. Whilst sympathising with the troops employed, in their hardships and sufferings, it is impossible not to feel a glow of pleasure at the recital of the deeds of valour and of the soldierly qualities displayed by the native force under the direction of British officers. It is, perhaps, this influence of the British officers over the Hausas and Sikhs and West Indians that is the most striking point of the story. Their own inherent stubbornness and hardiness, combined with an implicit belief in and obedience to their leaders formed an irresistible combination. Another point of interest may be observed if one compares the tactics employed in South Africa with those pursued on the West Coast. Here orders were given that the enemy's fire was only to be replied to to such an extent as was absolutely necessary to give our men time to adopt some open formation. Then the charge was sounded, and the enemy attacked with the bayonet, the result being invariably all that could be desired. The fact, too, must not be overlooked that the operations, which were brought to such a successful issue, were conducted during the rainy season when military operations were by some considered impossible. But, in the words of Sir J. Willcocks, discipline and determination saved Kumasi. Sir F. Hodgson, recognising the wonderful services of the Lagos Hausas and Gold Coast men within besieged Kumasi, suggests some special medal or star should be awarded. Curiously enough, a few days after the appearance of Sir F. Hodgson's recommendation, the approval of Her Majesty was signified of the grant of West African medals for various expeditions made between 1896 and 1899.

AT THE FRONT.

I dreamt that, as I struggled with some liver mixed with sand,
There came a haggard orderly, a paper in his hand,
Whereon was writ, in characters 'twere difficult to read,
"The force will be in readiness to march at utmost speed,
Towards a place unknown to us, which may be best described
As either on our front or rear, if not on either side.
And, as the way is difficult, and rather hard to find,
We think 'tis meant that those in front should follow those behind.
The hour of march is two a.m., or four, or half-past seven,
Provided no more orders come at nine or at eleven.
We are informed the enemy is either here or there—
But if this should not be the case, they're probably elsewhere.
We have good reason to believe their force is large or small,
[at all.
And furnished with some fifty guns, or else with none
Commanded by one C. de Wet, or so it would appear,
Had not someone reported him five hundred miles from here.
It gives us pleasure to report that Kruger, or that Steyn,
Are in nine different places, ending mostly in 'fontein' [death.
That Botha has surrendered, and is fighting to the And Delarey either wounded, well, or dead from want of breath. ^{genera}
Enclosed a wire from G^{enera}l Bluff, Headquarters, Bungles Rand,
'Have just hemmed in the enemy, I think, on every hand,
He cannot possibly escape, unless by chance he treks
By one of fifteen open roads, or fifteen unheld Neks;
His force is twenty-one, although some make it even higher, [Liar
To wit, the Representative of the Western Province
My dispositions have been made throughout with utmost care—
I shall attack, when well assured the enemy's still there.
Another wire from General George, 'Headquarters, Hogfontein,' 'Regret report, the convoy lost, containing my champagne. [short,
Loss serious, as our Pommery was reported to be
And two or three commandos here are almost out of port.
Permit me here to mention—I trust I don't intrude—
One Captain Blank for services connected with the food.
Positions are impregnable, retreat compelled, I fear,
Unless am strongly reinforced with gin and bottled beer. [force
One general says he has destroyed a non-existent
And stormed a place that wasn't held with most appalling loss.
Advanced guard will be furnished by the First Hus-sars, of course,
And flanking parties from the scouts, or any other source.
P.S.—You also will provide rear guards, and picquets three—
The rest I'll tell you later,
Yours truly (Signed) T. B."

THE ASHANTI DESPATCHES.

The London Gazette of Tuesday contained the despatches received by the Colonial Office from Sir F. M. Hodgson and from Col. Sir J. Willcocks, dealing with the recent operations in Ashanti and the relief of Kumasi. The first despatch, which is from Sir F. Hodgson and was sent from Accra on July 24, shortly after his arrival from Kumasi, covers the report made by Major A. Morris, D.S.O., Acting Commissioner and Commandant of the northern territories of the Gold Coast, on the services rendered by the officers of the small force which, under his command, broke out of Kumasi on June 23 and brought Sir F. Hodgson down to the coast. At the outbreak of the troubles Major Morris had by a forced march, in which he was severely wounded, thrown a force into Kumasi and taken command of the garrison. Of his services in conducting the march to the coast Sir F. Hodgson says:—

"Major Morris carefully planned and carried out the arrangements for leaving Kumasi, and I do not hesitate to say that it was to his care, foresight, and presence that the column, consisting as it did of troops weakened by reduced and unaccustomed diet during the long and trying siege, and of carriers exhausted by insufficient food, succeeded in the hazardous task which had to be undertaken. He had written in very modest terms of the achievement, but that the task was not a light one is evident from the fact that among the 600 troops engaged in it the casualties amounted to nearly 20 per cent.

The officers specially selected for praise by Major Morris are Capt. C. H. Armitage, Acting Resident at Kumasi, who "was most energetic during the siege, displayed great tact and ability in dealing with the loyal Ashanti kings and native levies, handling them well in action on several occasions; he commanded the advance guard on the march down with much dash and vigour, his taking the Patasi stockade being particularly smart"; Capt. G. Marshall, Royal West Kent Regiment, and Asst.-Insp. P. H. A. Leggett, Gold Coast Constabulary, who unfortunately both succumbed to wounds received by them in the fighting on June 23; Asst.-Insp. A. P. Berthon, Asst.-Colonial Surg. P. J. Garland, P.M.O., and Asst.-Colonial Surgs. E. H. Tweedy and A. J. Chalmers; Mr. L. F. David, of the Ashanti Company, for valuable information regarding the road to Nkwanta. To these names Sir F. Hodgson adds those of Capt. J. G. O. Aplin, J. E. C. Cochrane, and B. M. Read, of the Lagos Constabulary, for conspicuous gallantry in taking a stockade on April 29, when the detachment under Capt. Aplin's command pushed through the rebel lines and entered Kumasi.

In a further despatch of Aug. 28 Sir F. Hodgson notices for special reward the names of Capt. F. E. Bishop, Asst.-Insp. Gold Coast Constabulary; Mr. J. C. Ralph, Asst.-Insp. Lagos Constabulary; Dr. J. B. Hay, Assistant Colonial Surgeon; the native officer Harry Zenuwa, Gold Coast Constabulary. These were the officers left in command at Kumasi when Sir F. Hodgson, in consequence of the scarcity of provisions, decided to break through with the bulk of the force. Of these officers Sir F. Hodgson says:—

"The work entrusted to these officers was a very hazardous one, because, although it was taken for granted that the relief of the fort was being organised and arranged, no news from the outside world had come in since April 29. Nothing was known, therefore, as to whether a relieving column could reach Kumasi by July 15, up to which date the scanty stock of provisions could be made to last. The mental anxiety which these officers had to endure must have been very severe, and as each day passed and brought them and the gallant soldiers under their command nearer to the end the strain upon them must have become almost unbearable. For three weeks they truly and unflinchingly upheld the honour of the British flag under circumstances which might have appalled the stoutest heart."

Sir F. Hodgson, in addition to asking for appropriate rewards for each of the officers mentioned, also suggests that some special medal or star should be given to the men of the Gold Coast and Lagos Hausa forces of the garrison for their gallantry in circumstances of great hardship and privation.

The third despatch is a very detailed report from Sir J. Willcocks, dated Bekwai Camp, Aug. 14, covering the whole of the operations from his arrival at Cape Coast Castle on May 26. His account of the entry into Kumasi after the battle is striking in the extreme.

"Forming up in the main road, we marched towards Kumasi, a mile distant, the troops cheering wildly for the Queen, and then followed silence. No sound came from the direction of the fort, which you cannot see till quite close. For a moment the hideous desolation and silence, the headless bodies lying everywhere, the sickening smell, &c., almost made one shudder to think what no one dared to utter—"Has Kumasi fallen? Are we too late?" Then a bugle sound caught the ear—"the general salute"—the tops of the towers appeared, and again every man in the column, white and black, broke into cheers long sustained. The brave defenders had at last seen us; they knew for hours past from the firing growing ever nearer that we were coming, yet they dared not open their only gate; they perforce must wait, for even as we appeared the enemy were making their last efforts to destroy the outlying buildings, and were actually setting them on fire until after dark, when a party of 100 men went out and treated them to volleys and cleared them out. If I have gone too fully into details of the final scene, the occasion was one that every white man felt for him comes perhaps but once, and no one would have missed it for a kingdom."

On July 17 Sir J. Willcocks returned to Bekwai with an enormous train of wounded, refugees, women and children, and the whole garrison, "mostly carried in hammocks," leaving a small garrison of less than 200 men under Capt. Eden. On the 22nd a column of 800 men under Major Morland finally captured and destroyed the war camp at Kokofu.

On the 30th Major Beddoes, with a force of 400 men, destroyed a large war camp east of Dompooasi after heavy fighting in which Major Beddoes, three officers, a colour-sergeant, and 29 men were wounded, and one man killed. In the beginning of August Sir J. Willcocks decided to reinforce the garrison at Kumasi, and Col. Burroughs marched there again with 750 men. This operation again involved some heavy fighting. On the evening of Aug. 7 Col. Burroughs made an entirely successful night attack on a big war camp near Kumasi, which, however, unfortunately involved the death of Lieut. Greer, West India Regiment. Sir J. Willcocks picturesquely describes the motley composition of the British force that carried out the charge:—

"Sikhs from the distant Punjab, Askaris from Somaliland and British Central Africa, Hausas from Bornu and Lake Chad, Yorubas and Mendis from the Hinterland of the West Coast, West Indians from Jamaica and other islands, and a sprinkling of Senegalese; here they were of different races, religions, and tongues; yet implicitly trusting in the white men who led them, and whose word was law. No matter what way they went, or why, they knew it was all right so long as they obeyed, and they did."

The heaviness of the fighting during the whole series of operations is shown by the fact that the total casualties among the combatants exceeded 25 per cent. "The cheerfulness of the Europeans, the wonderful stamina of the men, and the devotion to duty of all has been remarkable."

The following officers and non-commissioned officers are specially selected by Sir J. Willcocks for favourable notice:—

Lieut.-Col. C. A. P. Burroughs, commanding West African Regiment, wounded at Kokofu; Lieut.-Col. T. L. N. Morland, King's Royal Rifles, 1st Batn. W.A.F.F.; Col. J. A. Man Stuart, C.M.G., 3rd Batn. Gordon Highlanders, Base Commandant; Major F. T. Henstock, West India Regiment, chief staff officer; Lieut.-Col. P. S. Wilkinson, Northumberland Fusiliers, Inspector-General Gold Coast Constabulary, wounded at Dompooasi; Major C. J. Mellis, I.S.C., 1st Batn. W.A.F.F., twice wounded; Dr. McDowell, W.A.F.F., P.M.O. of the Field Force; Capt. J. H. E. Holford, 7th Hussars, D.A.A.G.; Capt. A. J. F. Eden, Oxford L.I., 2nd Batn. W.A.F.F.; Capt. W. M. Hall, West York Regiment, 1st Batn. W.A.F.F.; Capt. R. H. K. Willans, A.S.C., W.A.F.F., chief transport officer; Capt. R. S. McClintock, R.E., D.A.A.G.; Capt. H. V. J. McC. Neal, 3rd Batn. Scottish Rifles, Lagos Hausas; Capt. E. P. S. Roupell, R.E. (Militia), 3rd W.A.F.F., severely wounded; Lieut. W. F. S. Edwards, 4th Batn. Devon Regiment, Sierra Leone Frontier Police, wounded; Lieut. E. H. Phillips, R.A., W.A.F.F., severely wounded; Lieut. W. E. Edwards, R.A., W.A.F.F., severely wounded; Lieut. H. V. Shortland, 3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regiment, 3rd W.A.F.F.; Lieut. C. E. J. G. O'Malley, 6th Batn. Middlesex Regiment, W.A.F.F., severely wounded; Colour-Sergt. Mackenzie, Seaforth Highlanders, 1st Batn. W.A.F.F.; Mr. G. B. Haddon-Smith, Political Officer, Gold Coast Civil Service; Mr. H. B. W. Russell, private secretary.

The names are given of a large number of others, who have done good work.

THE grant of separation allowances to wives of mobilised Reservists, when residing at the places where their husbands are stationed, is to be continued so long as they are not accommodated in barracks or placed on the lodging list with their husbands.

GEN. SIR GEORGE WHITE, V.C., has sent a letter to the Earl of Meath, president and chairman of the Lads' Drill Association, in which he says:—"The Convent, Gibraltar, Nov. 21, 1900. Dear Lord Meath,—I have to-day received your lordship's letter dated Nov. 15, and shall be very glad to be proposed as a vice-president of the Lads' Drill Association. I have strong belief in the effects of the training towards creating 'a nation in arms,' a development which the enormous compulsory levies amongst the nations of Continental Europe render necessary if England is to retain her position. I have sent my subscription as a life member to the secretary of the association."

FOR THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH "Epps's Glycerine Jujubes" always prove effective. They soften and clear the voice, and are invaluable to all suffering from cough, soreness, or dryness of the throat. Sold only in labelled tins, price 7d. and 1s. 1d. James Epps and Co., Ltd., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

PRESS VIEWS AND OPINIONS ON ARMY MATTERS.

Lieut.-Col. Terry, in the Daily News of Dec. 1, points to Sir Charles Warren as being the one man who is likely, if given a chance, to pacify South Africa quickly. Sir Charles Warren proved his skill in this direction in Griqualand in 1877-78 and in 1884-85. "Economicus" refers, in the same journal, to our "disgraceful failure to hold our own at Dewetsdorp," and Sir Andrew Clarke points out an error made in the Daily News' account of Lord Wolseley's career. He says he did not decline to take command of the Ashanti Expedition of 1873, "on the ground that the task was an impossible one," but that he wrote a paper showing Col. Wolseley's scheme of advancing on Kumasi in boats up the Prah River to be impracticable. His alternative plan of campaign was subsequently adopted. The Times of the same date publishes the reply of Mr. Brodrick to the complaint, formulated by Sir John Leng, concerning the retention of Reservists in South Africa. Mr. Brodrick, the greater part of whose letter deals with an individual soldier, says that he regrets the time for the general discharge of Reservists has not yet come. Lord Roberts cannot spare them.

What appears to be a serious injustice to the Reservists in the Police Force is pointed out by Mr. Winston Churchill in Tuesday's Times—the time during which policemen Reservists have been serving in South Africa is prohibited from counting towards pension:—

"It is a curious state of affairs. A man engages to serve the Queen in a blue uniform at home in time of peace. When war breaks out unexpectedly he is sent to serve the Queen in a brown uniform abroad. Yet, although this latter service is the most honourable and arduous that can be required of a British subject, it shall not be accounted to him at all, and he will be penalised in consequence of his service against the enemy by having to work an extra year, or perhaps two years, to obtain his pension. Surely the Home Secretary might consider whether the law cannot be amended."

In the same issue Sir Gilbert Clayton-East supports the views of those who complain of the Yeomanry's detention in South Africa. "They volunteered for an emergency, and now the emergency is over, they ought to be sent home." Mr. E. Wedgwood maintains that Englishmen do not realise the vast difference between English and Orange Colony farms. The farm burning is inevitable. A farm in the veldt is as often as not an hotel as well, and the occupant hears all that is going on in his neighbourhood.

The Daily News of Dec. 5 had two columns full of the privations and hardships of the campaign—taking the form of an interview with an ex-Guardsman. He has no words hard enough for the British officer, the transport, or the hospital service. It is not agreeable reading. "Justice" writes to the Standard, commenting on Gen. Buller's assertion that the Devonshire Regiment saved Ladysmith. "Justice" wishes to call attention to the behaviour of the Imperial Light Horse at Wagon Hill, to whom equal honour is due.

Lady Violet Cecil, in a circular to the Press on "British Soldiers' Graves in South Africa," appeals for help on behalf of the Loyal Women's Guild, of which the Princess of Wales has now become Patroness. The Government has promised to bear the expense of fencing in the ground of nearly 150 places in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, but the care of individual graves is undertaken by the Guild. The Canadian "Daughters of the Empire" perform a similar office for the Canadian graves. £5,000 is still needed.

A correspondent of the Daily News, writing from Cape Town on Nov. 14, renews the attack on the Imperial military officer, who is lacking, it seems, in sense and capacity for adapting himself to the new military conditions involved in our great South African Army. The gap between the officer and the man in England is too great. In our Colonial forces there is no such gap. It is obvious to the Daily News that the forces of the Empire can never become an organic whole until our Army at home is likewise founded upon a sound democratic basis.

The Times of Dec. 7 had a second instalment of Lessons of the War, dealing with the "Organisation of the Army." A military correspondent, at some length, endeavours to show that, while a revolution in the Army is needless, drastic changes are essential. But for the patriotism of private individuals, our organisation scheme must have broken down this year. "Taxpayer," in the same issue, asks if it is known whether the breach action of the 42 new 4.7 in. and 27 new new 9.2 in. guns recently ordered by the War Office is dependent on the security of the Walin screw, and have late experiments with that system given satisfactory results?

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1201.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1203.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1203.

Army Personal.

Two dinners have taken place during the past week of a private nature, although they were in a manner public events. There were no reporters present at either, and the remarks made are, therefore, only imperfectly known. The first was the dinner given to Lord Wolseley by the War Office staff, at the Junior Constitutional Club, with Sir Evelyn Wood in the chair. It was very largely attended, every official being present except Mr. Brodrick; also Sir Redvers Buller, as ex-Adjutant-General, and Sir Edward Bulwer, who was Inspector-General of Recruiting. In replying to the very cordial and appreciative proposal of his health, Lord Wolseley spoke at some length upon the great services rendered by his colleagues for years past, both to the nation and to himself. But about himself he said very little, except to emphasise the fact that his earnest endeavour throughout his career had been to advance the public good, and that he had invariably sought, in the disposal of his patronage, to obtain the most capable and deserving officers, facts not sufficiently recognised by his detractors.

The other banquet was that given by the members of the Naval and Military Club to Sir Redvers Buller, when Lord Wolseley was chairman. Some 150 members sat down to an excellent dinner, for the chef of the club, who is well known as a cordon bleu, was never in better form. Lord Wolseley spoke in glowing terms of the guest of the evening, especially adverting to his many fine soldierly traits exhibited during the Natal campaign. Sir Redvers Buller replied at considerable length, but he talked more about the club in its early days than of his latest experiences in the field. The generation is fast passing away that saw the birth of the Naval and Military Club, which was really started by the junior members of the Services in the early sixties, when the waiting lists of the three existing Service clubs were so hopelessly long that election seemed indefinitely postponed. The club started in Clifford Street, and seems to have passed through a rather serious financial struggle when it first moved into Cambridge House, Piccadilly. There were dissensions also amongst the members, the body of whom were not too well satisfied with the action of the committee, and Sir Redvers Buller adverted with much humour to the days when he and many others waged a warfare with the management and eventually overbore it. A really large sum of money was put down, practically by the subalterns of the Army, in order to readjust the situation, but from that time forth, and very largely through the strenuous exertions of Sir Redvers himself, the club entered upon and has since enjoyed a period of the highest prosperity.

It is to be hoped that our remarks last week upon the transcendent services of the War Office staff through the late trying period will not fall upon barren ground. There is some notion that these services will be recognised in a substantial manner, not merely by a shower of C.B.'s and other titular rewards which fall principally to seniors, but by a grant of six months' or even a year's extra pay to all members of the staff. Where all have put their shoulders so strenuously to the wheel all alike are entitled to share in the recognition made. The moment may not be opportune to press the claims of the War Office officials. But the officials cannot fairly be held responsible for the Office, whether or not the Department has been equal to the excessive calls made upon it, and we venture to think that the hostile criticisms so freely vented upon it are much exaggerated, often grossly unfair. The fact remains that the individual agents ought not, in common fairness, to be blamed for a system which is denounced. They had little or no hand in its creation, and they were powerless to alter it. What is certain is that they have done their level best to rise to a supreme occasion, and some day when the present excitement dies down more justice must be done to them.

Lord Roberts will leave Cape Town in the Canada for England on Tuesday next.

Major-General (Colonel) G. H. Marshall will resume command of the Royal Artillery at Aldershot on return from active service in South Africa.

Major-General (Colonel) R. S. S. Fetherstonhaugh has been deprived of his brigade command at Aldershot by the re-arrangement of troops consequent upon the departure on Tuesday of the 4th Batn. Manchester Regiment for Portland, and disembodiment of Militia units. General Fetherstonhaugh, it is believed, will obtain command of the new camp at Woolmer when it is occupied shortly.

Major-Generals G. F. Guyon and T. E. Verner, who took over the command of the Infantry Brigade at Aldershot on September 1, have reverted to their rank as colonels, and have resumed their former duties as officers commanding the 7th-57th (Hounslow) and the 10th (Lincoln) Regimental Districts respectively, with effect from the 1st inst.

Brigadier-Generals V. Hatton, C.B., and J. W. T. Hume have reverted to the colonels' rank on the half-pay list on vacating their commands. Colonel Hatton is noted for employment, Colonel Hume will take up a command in January.

Brigadier-General J. W. Webber, who has been in command of the Irish Militia Brigade at Aldershot since May last, has reverted to half-pay on the break-up of his command. All ranks of the brigade bear handsome testimony to his popularity as a "chief." Though a strict disciplinarian he left nothing undone, it is said, which thoughtfulness could do to render the embodiment pleasant as well as profitable in a professional sense.

Colonel Rainsford-Hannay having returned from active service, South Africa, has been selected for the appointment of Colonel on the Staff commanding the Royal Artillery in the Cork District, and is ordered to join on the 10th inst., in relief of Colonel A. W. Anstruther-Duncan, who has been acting temporarily since March last.

Colonel D. C. De Wend, half-pay, late of the Duke of Wellington's Regiment, who commanded a Militia Brigade at Salisbury Plain during the summer, will be placed on the retired list to-morrow, having attained the limit of age.

Colonel R. A. Hickson, lately commanding the 2nd Batn. of the Buffs in South Africa, will succeed Colonel W. E. R. Kelly in command of the 3rd Regimental District, Canterbury, on January 1.

Colonel E. H. H. Fitzherbert, who has been acting temporarily since August 23, has handed over command of the 7th-57th Regimental District at Hounslow to Colonel G. F. Guyon, on the latter's return from the command of the Infantry Brigade at Aldershot.

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION. SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:

LIFE. { War Risks, World-Wide.
ACCIDENTS & DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence Abroad.
BURGLARY, &c.

Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch. The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement or removal.

Special Quotations for Messes.
Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums.
Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.
Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT.

Colonel F. H. Flowden, late Oxfordshire Light Infantry, on appointment as A.A.G. on the Bombay establishment, has been posted to Mhow.

Colonel Sir James Willcocks and his staff, before leaving Kumasi, were entertained by the West African Regiment at a farewell dinner and concert on Saturday last. There was a large gathering, and Sir James was repeatedly and warmly cheered. He left on Monday, and had a great send-off, the troops lining the road making an imposing scene. All the friendly chiefs were drawn up in State on the sidepath for a distance of two miles. Lieut.-Colonel O. A. P. Burroughs now commands. The Kumasi garrison consists of the West African Rifles and the 2nd Central African Rifles. The remainder of the troops have already gone to the coast. Most of the special service officers will sail on the 19th. Sir James Willcocks sails on January 2.

The report as to the illness of Lord Wantage, V.C., is much exaggerated. He intends returning to town immediately.

Colonel Sir James Fergusson, who moved the re-election of the Speaker in the House of Commons on Monday, saw the Houses of Parliament for the first time, the St. James's Gazette says, when they were only a yard or two from the ground. He was six years old when he heard the guns of Edinburgh Castle fired for the Queen's accession. He sat in Chelsea Hospital beside the coffin of the Duke of Wellington, and was inspected as a Guardsman by Prince Albert. He fought in the Crimea, and came home in time to take his seat in Parliament at 23. He had been elected for his native county of Ayr in his absence, and he was an M.P. before he knew it.

Colonel E. B. Anderson, I.S.C., from colonel on the staff, Southern Shan States, has been selected to succeed Brigadier-General R. A. Gilchrist in command of the Bellary District.

Lieut.-Colonel W. J. Bosworth, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment, took over on Wednesday command of a provisional battalion formed at Aldershot, consisting of detachments of the Royal Irish Regiment, Cheshire Regiment, South Wales Borderers, Hampshire Regiment, and Sherwood Foresters.

Brevet Lieut.-Colonel W. S. Sparkes, Welsh Regiment, A.A.G., Egyptian Army, has been deputed to proceed with 500 men from Omdurman to the Bahr-el-Ghazel region to occupy all the posts within the Anglo-Egyptian zone, which until recently were held by the French.

Lieut.-Colonel M. M. P. Battye, captain, retired list, late of the 10th Regiment, has been appointed a Military Knight of Windsor on the Lower Foundation, in succession to the late Lieut.-Colonel Maude, V.C., C.B. He joined the Army November 23, 1855, and retired on pension February 2, 1878. He served in the Indian Mutiny, and was present at the capture of Atowlee, the advance to Lucknow, and actions of Chanda, Umerepore, Sultanpore, and siege and capture of Lucknow (medal with clasp).

Major E. S. Head, Northumberland Fusiliers, is coming home from South Africa to take up duty at the Staff College as instructor in military topography.

Brevet Majors H. H. Austin, D.S.O., R.E., and R. G. T. Bright, Rifle Brigade, who have left for Omdurman en route to Lake Rudolf, on what is termed a Government survey, will simply be continuing the work they began last year, which was entered upon in view of the negotiations with the Negus for the delimitation of the boundaries of the Sudan and the Uganda Protectorate where they join the Abyssinian territory.

Selections for Adjutants of Auxiliary Forces: Captains M. L. MacEwen, 16th Lancers, for the Fifehire Light Horse; F. C. Turner, 2nd Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers for the 4th Batn., Bedfordshire Regiment, and C. B. S. Tew, 1st Batn. West Yorkshire Regiment, for the 3rd Batn. West Yorkshire Regiment.

WAR SUMMARY.

Friday, Nov. 30.

Lord Roberts and staff arrived at Ladysmith to-day. On his way south, the field-marshal inspected Majuba Hill and Laing's Nek. His welcome was of a most enthusiastic character. A general holiday was proclaimed, and the station was crowded in every part. A band of school children sang the National Anthem when Lord Roberts alighted. Replying to an address from the townspeople, the field-marshal expressed his admiration and high appreciation of the part which had been played by the inhabitants in the defence of the town, a defence that would be looked back upon as a glorious memorial of British pluck and endurance. He admired increasingly the men who bore without a murmur hunger and pestilence and the hourly chance of death, and he liked to think that they had such able men as Sir George White for comrades, while outside, others, equally brave, were steadfastly determined to effect their relief, which the gallantry of the defence had made doubly imperative. The war was now over, although bodies of guerrillas still gave trouble. He trusted that the day was very near when peace would reign supreme. No ill-feeling towards a conquered foe would mar the great object of a united South Africa, which would be ruled with mercy, liberty, truth, and justice for all nationalities.

Saturday, Dec. 1.

Lord Roberts visited Colenso and the surrounding battlefields, and went round the defences of Ladysmith.

Lord Kitchener telegraphed from Bloemfontein at 8.15 p.m.:-

"Further report from Paget of his action north-east of Bronkhorst Spruit, Nov. 29, states that towards evening his troops closed in on enemy's position. At about 6.30 p.m. the Boers were reinforced, and brought up three more guns. They then made a determined attack on our line, and after severe fighting were repulsed with heavy loss. The enemy did not await projected attack at dawn, but withdrew during the night. The troops behaved with great gallantry, especially the New Zealand Mounted Rifles, who showed exceptional bravery throughout the day. I regret to say that Lieut.-Col. Lloyd, commanding West Riding Regiment, was killed, and the following officers were wounded: Lieuts. Townsend and Oakes (severely), Capt. Ackworth and Lieut. Harman (slightly), all of West Riding Regiment; also Lieut. Challis, R.A.M.C. (severely, being hit in three places while gallantly attending wounded men under a heavy fire), and Capt. Crawshaw and Lieuts. Montgomerie, Somerville, and Tucker, and Surg.-Capt. Godfrey, all of the New Zealand Mounted Rifles, who had five officers hit out of a total of six. Thirteen men were killed, and 59 non-commissioned officers and men wounded. Paget was in occupation of enemy's position yesterday morning, having sent his mounted troops in pursuit of the Boers, who retired north-east."

Monday, Dec. 3.

Lord Roberts issued a farewell Army Order to the troops to-day to this effect:-

"I cannot part with my comrades without giving expression to my profound appreciation of the noble work they have performed for their Queen and country and for me personally, and to my pride in the results they have achieved. I should like to remain with the Army until it is broken up, but I have come to the conclusion that, as Lord Kitchener has consented to take over the command, my presence is no longer required in South Africa, and that duty calls me in another direction. For months together—in fierce heat, in biting cold, in pouring rain—you, my comrades, have marched and fought without halt and bivouacked without shelter. You frequently have had to continue marching with your clothes in rags and your boots without soles. You have forced your way through dense jungles, over precipitous mountains, through and over which with infinite labour you have had to drag heavy guns and ox-waggons. You have covered with almost incredible speed enormous distances, and that often on very short supply of food. You have endured the sufferings inevitable in war to sick and wounded men far from the base without a murmur, and even with cheerfulness. You have in fact acted up to the highest standard of patriotism, and by your conspicuous kindness and humanity towards your enemies, your forbearance and good behaviour in the towns occupied you have caused the Army of Great Britain to be as highly respected as it must henceforth be greatly feared in South Africa. Many of you—Colonials as well as British—I hope to meet again, but those I may never see more will live in my memory and will be held in high regard to my life's end. And now farewell. May God bless every member of the South African Army. That you may all be spared to return to your homes and find those dear to you well and happy is the earnest hope of your commander."

Lord Kitchener telegraphed from Bloemfontein at 3.55 p.m.:-

"Summary of news on Dec. 2. General C. Knox's mounted troops were engaged all day at Goddekoop and Willoughby, three miles north of the Bethulie-Smithfield Road, with a force of the enemy apparently making for Odendaal Drift on the Orange River. The Boers, who were accompanied by a large convoy, were headed off and retired in a north-east direction, our troops keeping touch with them. We captured seven prisoners. General Settle, marching from Luckhoff, has arrived at Jagersfontein. He has had several skirmishes with the enemy, capturing 30 prisoners and a large quantity of live stock. General Paget's mounted troops had a slight engagement with the enemy on Dec. 2 near Leeuwfontein, and drove them back with a loss of two men killed. We had no casualties. Stephenson reports health of troops at Komati Poort much improved during last week. Horse sickness Barberton diminished."

Tuesday, Dec. 4.

Lord Roberts and his younger daughter arrived at Pietermaritzburg at 10 a.m. Lord Roberts was received by the Premier. He was subsequently presented with an address.

Lord Roberts, in reply to the address, said he was extremely glad they had given him an opportunity of expressing in their capital, on behalf of the Army and himself, the heartfelt thanks which he felt were due to the local inhabitants of Natal for the generous aid they had afforded in the long-continued struggle in the cause of liberty, freedom, and honour of the British Empire. The gallantry of the colony's soldiers and the determination and steadfastness of the whole population of Natal, in spite of great privations and sufferings, had excited their admiration and won their gratitude. When the late President destroyed the hope of a peaceful solution of the disputed question he was one of the few who anticipated a long and severe struggle, for he believed the Boers were buoyed up by the hope, however unfounded, of outside aid. He felt that the action taken in regard to the untimely peace of 1881 had given them a false impression of the British power and of the feeling of the inhabitants in their relations with South Africa. One most satisfactory feature of the war was the wonderful way in which the Mother Country had been assisted by her sons from every quarter of the globe.

Wednesday, Dec. 5.

Lord Roberts arrived at Durban. In the course of his reply to various addresses of welcome and congratulation he asserted with confidence that the war was now practically over. He alluded with gratification to the support given to Great Britain by her colonies, and expressed his warm sympathy with the refugees from the Transvaal, who, he hoped, would soon be able to return to their homes. Lord Roberts afterwards embarked on board the transport Canada for Cape Town.

Thursday, Dec. 6.

Lord Kitchener, in a telegram from Bloemfontein, stated that on Monday a determined attack was made by about 500 of Delarey's men at Buffelsport on a convoy proceeding from Pretoria to Rustenburg. The escort took up a position on some kopjes and fought with great gallantry. The Boers got into the first half of the convoy and burnt the waggons; the second half was not touched. Assistance was sent from Rustenburg and Commando Nek, and Major-Gen. Broadwood's Brigade arrived on the following morning, when the enemy dispersed. Our loss was 15 men killed and an officer and 22 men wounded. The Boers suffered considerably. De Wet crossed the Caledon yesterday by Kareepont Drift, making for Odendaal. Major-Gen. C. Knox followed with a portion of his force, the remainder by Bethulie bridge. Odendaal Drift was held by the Guards, and the river was in flood. The Cape Government had issued a memorandum in English and Dutch, which is to be continued weekly, containing an official vouched report of the actual course of events in South Africa by way of correction of false reports so persistently circulated about the progress of the war.

A Parliamentary paper issued December 6 recapitulates the strength, reinforcements, &c., of the South African Army between August 1st, 1899, and Dec. 1st, 1900. The present strength of forces in South Africa is: Regulars—(1) 11,600 cavalry, 12,700 artillery, 105,300 infantry and mounted infantry, 13,293 others; total, 142,893. (2) Colonials, say, 33,000. (3) Imperial Yeomanry, 8,000. (4) Volunteers, 7,500. (5) Militia, 18,900. Total, 210,293. These figures do not allow for disbandment of Colonials, &c., of which precise details have not been received.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE TEOFANI'S HIGH-CLASS CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition, 1900

Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

Casualties reported since the beginning of the war, up to and including the month of November:-

	Officers.	N.C.O.'s & Men
Killed in action	311	3,018
Died of wounds	93	952
Prisoners who have died
in captivity	4	92
Died of disease	163	6,566
Accidental deaths	4	176

Total deaths in S. Africa 575 10,804

Missing and prisoners (excluding those who have been recovered or have died in captivity)	14	1,236†
Sent home as invalids	1,551	35,548†

Total, S.A. Field Force 2,140 47,588

49,728$

Total reduction of the Military Forces through war in South Africa:-

Deaths in South Africa	575	10,804
Missing and prisoners	14	1,236†
Invalids sent home who have died	4	231
Invalids sent home who have left the Service as unfit	—	1,314

593 13,585

14,178$

† Of these 231 have died, 1,314 have been discharged from the Service as unfit, and 780 are in hospital.

‡ This total includes a number of men reported "missing" who subsequently rejoined, but whose return has not yet been notified.

§ The difference between these two numbers is due to the fact that the great majority of the men invalided home have recovered and rejoined for duty (see note †).

ARMY SERVICE CORPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE"

SIR,—As a man conducting his business on business lines, some actions of the military authorities strike me (and possibly others) as singular. It has been admitted that our transport, during the present Boer war, has been quite inadequate, and to meet this in some measure, the authorities are raising five or six (possibly more) additional companies of the Army Service Corps. These companies must, it is presumed, have their proper quota of officers.

I see by the Army List, that since the commencement of the war many officers, while serving with their regiments in South Africa, have been attached to the corps there on probation, as also others who have been appointed to direct commissions therein. Both these classes had no previous technical training whatever in their duties, yet they are expected to be able to pass an examination within twelve months, for (in the case of attached officers) permanent transfer to the corps, for which examination it has been deemed necessary hitherto for each officer to undergo a year's technical training at Aldershot. There are several officers now serving in South Africa who have been attached, as 2nd Lieutenants, for a year or longer. These in ordinary circumstances would have been promoted Lieutenants at the end of their year's probation, having passed the examination referred to, but how can they do so in technical subjects, having only had field training?

While field training is absolutely necessary and excellent in its way, it would seem doubtful whether training of this kind alone would fit an officer for home service or continental war.

A business man would suppose, now that transport difficulties in South Africa are greatly lessened, that the military authorities would order home those officers mentioned (who are comparatively few), replace them by young officers who have been appointed to the corps at home during the past twelve months, and who have received a home technical training. Thus both those at home and those in South Africa would be equally instructed and benefited, as also, indirectly, the British ratepayer.

"BUSINESS."

A COMBINED trousers press and stretcher has recently been invented by Mr. Everitt, of 14, Maddox Street, which appears to serve the purposes for which it is intended in a satisfactory manner. The top bars and screws are arranged so that a single pair of trousers can be withdrawn, or replaced without disturbing the other garments already in the press. It folds for travelling into very small compass, and is easily opened for use.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper) 8s. per 100, post free, of Bevel & Co., Importers, 49, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacconist.

MISS HICHENS, Cert. Med. Rubber and Hospital Trained Nurse. VISITS PATIENTS mornings. RECEIVES from 2 to 6 p.m., or by appointment.—(First Flat), No. 5, Vernon Place, Bloomsbury Square, W.C.

Obituary.

ARMY.

Major-Gen. Roderick Donald Macpherson, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, died in Edinburgh, on Sunday last. Gen. Macpherson, who was 76 years of age, entered the Bengal Army in 1841, and received his Lieut.'s commission in 1845. He served in the Burmese war of 1852-53, and was present at the taking of Rangoon, receiving the medal, with clasp, for Pegu. He again saw service in the Sonthal campaign of 1855, and in the following year obtained his company. He was promoted to the rank of Major in 1861, Lieut.-Colonel in 1867, Colonel in 1872, and Major-General in 1875, when he retired.

Colonel Lionel James Archer Chapman, Royal Field Artillery, died at Pretoria of enteric fever on the 3rd inst., aged 53. He was a son of the late Mr. G. Chapman, of Dieppe. He joined the Army Jan. 13, 1869, became Captain Nov. 14, 1879, Major April 7, 1885, Lieut.-Colonel June 30, 1895, and Brevet-Colonel June 30, 1899.

Lieut.-Col. George Evans Lloyd, D.S.O., 1st Batn. Duke of Wellington's Regiment, was killed in action in South Africa on the 29th ult. Born Oct. 24, 1855, he joined the 70th Regiment from the Militia, Nov. 9, 1876, and was at once transferred to the Yorkshire Light Infantry, becoming Captain June 20, 1883. He was promoted into the South Staffordshire Regiment as Major, Nov. 1, 1890; was promoted Lieut.-Colonel, half-pay, Nov. 18, 1896; and was gazetted to the command of the 1st Batn. Duke of Wellington's Regiment, June 30, 1897. He was employed with the Egyptian Army, May 1894 to November 1896, and was Governor of the Red Sea Littoral, and Commandant at Suakin, July, 1894 to November, 1896. He served in the Jowaki Expedition, 1877 (medal with clasp); in the Afghan War, 1878-79, including the assault of Ali Musjid (medal with clasp); in the Soudan Expedition, 1884-85, on the Nile as Commandant at Tangur (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp, bronze star, and brevet of Major); in the Soudan, 1885-89, including actions at Ginniss (mentioned, D.S.O.), action of Savras (mentioned, 3rd class of Medjidie), action of Gamaizah (mentioned), action of Toski (mentioned, two clasps); and in the Expedition to Dongola, 1896 (mentioned, promoted Lieut.-Colonel, half-pay, and medal). Col. Lloyd was eldest son of the Rev. Prebendary Lloyd, Troedyrwr Rectory, Cambridge.

Lieut.-Col. Henry Lewis, Quartermaster retired list, late of 7th Dragoon Guards, died at Ravenscourt Park, W., on the 30th ult., in his 75th year. He served with the 7th Dragoon Guards throughout the Kafir war of 1846-47 (medal). In 1868 he became Quartermaster, and in 1881 was promoted to Hon. Captain. In the Egyptian war of 1882 he again saw active service with his regiment, and was present in the engagement at Mahsara and at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir and the capture of Cairo. Promoted Hon. Major (medal with clasp and Khedive's star). He retired in 1884 with the hon. rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

Captain William Pearson Barter, R.A.M.C., died at Agra on the 2nd inst., aged 34 years. He was the only surviving son of Brig.-Surg. J. F. Barter, M.D. (retired), of Beneden, Harlesden, N.B. He joined the Army July 29, 1893, and became Captain July 29, 1896.

A suit of plain clothes, or 13s. 6d. in lieu thereof, is to be issued on discharge to each member of the Imperial Yeomanry and Volunteers after active service in South Africa.

UNDER the auspices of the Old Haileyburian Society, a general meeting of old members of the school was held at the Church House, Dean's Yard, Westminster, last Thursday evening, the 6th inst., for the purpose of considering the form of a memorial to the Old Haileyburians who either have been killed in action or have died of disease in South Africa. The society is in communication with a large number of old schoolboys, but it is hoped that those who have not been written to will co-operate in the movement.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

Composite Regiment.—The Prince of Wales inspected the regiment and the Canadian Contingent, returned from South Africa, at Albany Street Barracks on Monday last. The various detachments which were to form the parade arrived at Regent's Park Barracks shortly before three o'clock. The detachment of 1st Life Guards, who were inspected by the Queen on Thursday last, had come by special train from Windsor, and, accompanied by their band, marched from Paddington to Regent's Park. The Royal Horse Guards had marched from Hyde Park. Albany Street was gay with flags and decorations. The square at the barracks was not large enough for both the cavalry and infantry to parade for inspection together. Consequently the two arms were reviewed separately. The parade was a dismounted one. The detachments of 1st and 2nd Life Guards were drawn up in line, with the detachment of Royal Horse Guards in line in the rear. While the Household Cavalry was inspected the Royal Canadians stood at ease on the right flank of the cavalry parade. The ground was kept by men of the 2nd Life Guards. As the weather was fine a large number of guests had accepted Sir Audley Neeld's invitation to witness the inspection. Amongst those present were the Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria, attended by Lady Emily Kingscote, Miss Knollys, and Gen. Sir Dighton Probyn, the Duke and Duchess of York, attended by Sir Charles Cust, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Duke of Westminster, the Earl and Countess of Dudley, and many past officers and relatives of the present officers of the Household Cavalry. Shortly after three the Prince of Wales, who had lunched with Sir Audley Neeld and the officers of the 2nd Life Guards, arrived, and was received with a Royal salute. He then proceeded to inspect the parade, accompanied by the Duke of Cambridge. There were also present: Lord Wolseley, Sir Evelyn Wood, the Quarter-master-General, and Major-Gen. Trotter. The Prince retired to the saluting base, and the regiment marched past by troops, with Col. Miles at its head. The men were no longer in the service uniform which they have worn for the last 12 months. They were her Majesty's mounted Guards again. The march, past over, the regiment formed three sides of a square, while the Prince addressed the following words to the parade:—

"Col. Miles, Col. Neeld, and Col. Fenwick, officers and men.—It is just a year since I took leave of you on your departure for South Africa. I am glad to have this my first opportunity of welcoming you home. I cannot say sufficient, from what I have heard, in praise of the way in which officers and men have conducted themselves in the course of this arduous campaign. I always felt sure that the brilliant history of the Household Cavalry would be maintained in this campaign. I have not been mistaken. I am glad to see those of you who have returned, and I grieve for those who have not returned; but such, however, is the fortune of war. I feel more proud than ever in being your Colonel-in-Chief, and in welcoming you home I trust that your good character will last as long as the regiment exists."

Col. Miles called for three cheers for the Prince of Wales, to which the men lustily responded. The Composite Regiment then marched off the ground and dismissed, while the officers returned and added colour to the scene by mingling with their guests. As soon as the barrack square was clear the Royal Canadian Regiment came on the ground. Col. Otter drew the regiment up in line, and the Prince again inspected. As soon as the inspection was over the regiment, which was still in its service uniform, marched past in fours to the tune of "Vive la Canadienne!" When the battalion was again halted, the Prince addressed them:

"Col. Otter, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Royal Canadian Regiment.—You had the privilege of being received a few days ago by the Queen, and I have now the privilege of receiving you here. It affords me the greatest satisfaction that, during your short period of stay in England, I should have the opportunity of seeing you, Col. Otter, and your gallant men. I am well aware of all that you have gone through, and of the splendid way in which you have behaved in South Africa, and I deeply regret that you have lost so many brave men. I am glad to think that the Colonies have come forward in so magnificent a way, and especially Canada. I have not forgotten, though it is some time ago, my visit to your shores, and it has always been a most pleasant remembrance to me. I hope that you will have an agreeable time here and a safe passage home, and that on arrival home you will find all your friends and families well."

After a few of the senior officers had been presented, the regiment enthusiastically cheered the Prince. The parade then dismissed.

1st Life Guards.—Lieut.-Cols. Miles and Calley dined with the Queen and Royal Family at Windsor Castle on Saturday last, on return from South Africa. The Queen has given £5 to the fund for the relief of the widow of Trooper Yandle, who died during the voyage home from South Africa from brain fever. The bereaved woman only learned the sad news when the detachment arrived in Windsor Barracks on the 29th ult.

Royal Horse Guards (Blue).—Lieut.-Col. Lord Binning is fast recovering from the accident he met with some weeks ago. Capt. the Hon. R. Ward is about to be seconded on appointment as A.D.C. to Lieut.-Gen. French in South Africa. Captain Burns-Hartopp, Master of the Queen's Hounds, and late of the regiment, notwithstanding the terrible nature of his accident, is progressing favourably.

3rd Dragoon Guards.—Major Robertson, D.S.O., has resumed duty in the Intelligence Department as Staff Captain on return from South Africa, where he has been employed since January as D.A.A.G.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS AND BRASSES

Morris & Sons 239 Kennington Rd. London, S.E.

JONES & WILLIS

43, Gt. Russell St.,
LONDON,
W.C.
Works:
HORNSEY.

79, Edmund St.,
BIRMINGHAM.

Concert Street,
Bald Street,
LIVERPOOL.

MEMORIAL BRASS

ENGRAVERS.

TABLETS IN . . .

MARBLE, STONE, & ALABASTER.

STAINED GLASS .

MEMORIAL WINDOWS.

CHURCH FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.

MEMORIAL BRASSES

MARBLE & OTHER TABLETS,
Stained Glass Windows.

DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES FURNISHED BY—
Founded COX, SONS, BUCKLEY & CO., 1187,
18, Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, London.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

4th Dragoon Guards.—Capt. McClellan acts as Assistant Signalling Officer, Punjab and Bengal, during the cold season.

6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons.—Major Allenby has been appointed second in command, vice Major Rimington promoted to the command. Capt. Austice vacates the Adjutancy of the 11th Yeomanry Brigade, and leaves England immediately to join headquarters in South Africa.

7th Hussars.—Major Carew, D.S.O., who has returned from active service in South Africa, has been granted leave until Dec. 30, when he will rejoin headquarters at Aldershot.

9th Lancers.—Major Bishop reverts to regimental duty from the Adjutancy of the 3rd Yeomanry Brigade, and will be restored to the establishment. Capt. Lord Charles Bentinck has accepted a Yeomanry Adjutancy.

15th Hussars.—The will of the late Major (Lieut.-Col.) Cockayne-Frith has been proved under £40,128, the gross value being put down at £42,153. The sole executrix is the widow, to whom the testator left all his property, subject to the payment of a legacy of £500 to Major de Crespigny.

16th Lancers.—Major Kirkpatrick has been appointed second in command, vice Major Bethune, promoted to the command.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Two depots will in future be stationed at Newport (Mon.), viz., No. 4 Field and H. Mountain.

With the approval of the Secretary of State, the Government of India has decided that a lieutenant-colonel R.A. acting for a colonel on the staff on leave under Article 724, Indian Army Regulations, Vol. I, shall be allowed half the command pay of his permanent appointment, viz., 200 rupees, a month, in addition to the half staff pay of his officiating appointment, viz., 400 rupees a month.

Appointments have been made to R.H.A. thus:—Major E. H. Armitage to M. Battery in South Africa; Capt. W. R. Eden to A Battery in South Africa; E. H. T. Parsons to G Battery in South Africa; G. A. FitzGerald to S Battery at Aldershot; and Lieuts. H. Fawcus to B Battery in China; and H. Allcard to U Battery in South Africa.

Lieut.-Col. F. W. Boteler, R.F.A., has arrived at home from India, in command of invalids and time-expired men on board the Sunda.

Capt. L. L. H. Osborn, R.G.A., from Adj. 4th Lancashire V.A.C., has been transferred to the Edinburgh Militia Artillery for the unexpired portion of his five years.

Capt. W. N. Gordon, R.G.A., has been appointed Adjutant of the 1st Dorset V.A.C.

Capt. E. F. Corbett, R.G.A., takes up on the 16th inst. the adjutancy of the Tipperary Artillery Militia, in succession to Capt. R. C. Brown, R.M.A., whose five years have expired.

Capt. F. Vans Agnew, R.G.A., has been appointed A.A.G., Madras, in the absence of Capt. Coxhead, D.S.O., on active service in China.

Capt. W. Ellershaw, R.G.A., has been appointed an extra instructor in artillery at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich.

2nd Lieut. P. A. à Beckett has been transferred for duty from Dover to Plymouth.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The tenure of appointment of Director-General of Military Works in India is to be limited to five years.

The first definite news of the fate of Capt. W. A. Watts-Jones was obtained by the German Expedition to Kalgan. In May last Capt. Jones accompanied Mr. Grant Birch on a journey down the Yellow River, when the latter was drowned. Capt. Watts-Jones succeeded in reaching Kwei-hua-Cheng, eight days' journey to the west of Kalgan. He was arrested by order of the Taotai, and, after having been horribly tortured for four days, was executed on July 15. There seemed to be evidence to show that this atrocity was carried out by orders of the chief official of the district.

INFANTRY.

Coldstream Guards.—Lieuts. Macgregor and Peel, 1st Batn., are about to be seconded for service with the West African Frontier Force.

Royal Scots (1st).—Major Macgregor is transferred on promotion, from the 2nd Batn. in India to the 1st Batn. in South Africa. Lieut. Neill, 2nd Batn., succeeds to the adjutancy of the 7th Volunteer Batn., at Haddington, vice Major Barton, retired on retired pay.

Queen's (2nd).—Major Taylor retains the Adjutancy of the 2nd Volunteer Batn. for an extended period of six months from the 9th prox.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Capt. Braithwaite has been posted to the 4th Batn. at York on restoration to the establishment.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—Capt. Wolseley, 2nd Batn. has been appointed adjutant of the Galloway Volunteer Rifles.

King's Regiment (8th).—The 2nd Batn. moved on Thursday from Dublin to the Curragh, where it took over quarters.

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—The 4th Volunteer Batn. is to be increased by one company, with headquarters at Witheridge.

Suffolk Regiment (12th).—The Duke of Cambridge presided at the annual dinner of the 4th (Militia) Batn. at the Grand Hotel on Monday evening. There were present Cols. FitzGeorge and Fryer; Lieut.-Cols. Bacchus and Hurrell; Surg.-Lieut.-Col. Fawcett; Majors Blunt, Beldam, Francis, Pell, C. Stanley, and A. Stanley; Capt. C. A. Brett, Barthropp, and Hall; Lieuts. the Hon. M. P. Macnaghten (Royal Scots Fusiliers), Wayman, J. Bacchus, and Furber; 2nd Lieuts. Robinson and Wheeler. Capt. Wallace, who has been an assistant inspector of small arms since January, 1897, has succeeded Lieut.-Col. Ward, R.A., as an inspector, on the completion of the latter's term of appointment.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—Brevet Major Woodward, who has been temporarily employed as a staff captain, Military Intelligence Headquarters, since Feb. 6 last, has reverted to regimental duty. Capt. the Hon. H. B. Hawke and 250 non-commissioned officers and men, 2nd Batn., left Alexandria on Thursday for Khartoum to furnish the local European garrison.

Cheshire Regiment (22nd).—Lieut. Mahony, 1st Batn., is about to be seconded on appointment to the West African Frontier Force, which he is now on his way from the Cape to join.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers (23rd).—Major Lyle, D.S.O., has been appointed second in command of the 1st Batn. in South Africa, vice Major Archdale, promoted to the command of the 2nd Batn. Lincolnshire Regiment.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—The 1st Batn. arrived at Peshawar on the 25th ult. from Dehra Dun. Capt. Wright, 1st Batn., has been selected for the adjutancy of the 2nd V.B. Royal Lancaster Regiment.

King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th).—Major Wilkinson retains his appointment as inspector of musketry, Salisbury District, on the break up of the summer camp. Capt. Maclean, Hannay and Gunn remain with the 1st Batn. in South Africa, on promotion.

Gloucestershire Regiment (28th).—The Secretary of State for War has approved of a Cadet Corps being formed at Bristol Grammar School and attached to the 1st Volunteer Batn.

East Lancashire Regiment (30th).—Major O'Brien is acting as President of the Military Tribunal, Johannesburg.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd).—Half the battalion left Calcutta on the 21st ult. for Ceylon; the remainder will embark for the same destination on the 15th inst. Lieuts. Elliott and Vickers are about to be appointed to the Indian Staff Corps.

Royal Sussex Regiment (35th).—Capt. Church retains his appointment as Adjutant of the 1st V.B. Manchester Regiment until further orders on the expiration of his term.

Worcestershire Regiment (36th).—Capt. Hankey and Lang are ordered to join the 4th Batn. at Aldershot as early as possible, on promotion.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th).—Col. Savage has been granted an extension of command for twelve months. Capt. Buckle has taken up the duties of Recruiting Staff Officer, North-Eastern District, for three years.

Welsh Regiment (41st).—Lieut.-Col. Banfield will complete his four years in command on Wednesday next.

Black Watch (42nd).—Lieut. Jennings-Bramley has been confirmed in his appointment as D.A.A.G. in India.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (43rd).—Major Porter has been appointed second in command of the 2nd Batn. (52nd) in India.

Sherwood Foresters (45th).—Lieut. Wilkin is about to be seconded for service with the West African Frontier Force.

Royal Berkshire Regiment (49th).—Capt. Feet-ham, adjutant of the 1st Volunteer Batn., has met with an accident whilst hunting. During a run of the South Berks hounds in the neighbourhood of Goring, he was thrown in presence of a wire in a hedge, which his horse was attempting to clear. He was severely shaken and bruised, but is progressing favourably.

King's Own Light Infantry (51st).—Capt. Trevor has taken up the duties temporarily as staff-captain (for A.S.C.), Cork District, vice Capt. Fielding, 4th Batn. King's Royal Rifles.

Shropshire Light Infantry (53rd) has won the Poona hockey tournament, having beaten the 2nd Batn. Royal Scots. Capt. Luard is ordered to join the 2nd Batn. (85th) in South Africa, on promotion.

Essex Regiment (56th).—Lieut. Macpherson is about to be appointed to the Indian Staff Corps, and has joined the 33rd Madras Infantry.

Middlesex Regiment (57th).—Capt. Rowley has taken up the appointment of commander of the Poonamallee depot.

Northamptonshire Regiment (58th).—Capt. Metcalfe has taken up his duties as District Inspector of Musketry, Headquarters, Ireland, on transfer from the staff in Scotland.

East Lancashire Regiment (59th).—Capt. Voyle is posted to this battalion in India, on restoration to the establishment; Capt. Saunders is ordered to join the 1st Batn. (30th) in South Africa, on promotion.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—Mr. Onslow Ford has been commissioned to model a silver statuette of the late Lieut. the Hon. F. Roberts, at a cost of £400, for presentation to Lord Roberts by the citizens of Bath. Lieut. Blundell-Hollinshead-Blundell, 4th Batn., a devoted comrade and friend of the late Brevet-Major Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein, whose personal effects he had brought from South Africa, had the honour of being presented to the Queen on the 29th ult. at Windsor Castle, when her Majesty conferred on him the 4th Class of the Victorian Order, he having brought home from the Cape the late Prince's personal effects.

Wiltshire Regiment (62nd).—Major Reay has completed his period of five years as D.A.A.G., Madras, and reverts to his regiment.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—The 4th Batn. moved on Tuesday from Aldershot to Portland.

Royal Berkshire Regiment (66th).—Major McClintock has arrived home from South Africa, and leaves immediately for Gibraltar to join the 1st Batn. (49th) on appointment as second in command.

East Surrey Regiment (70th).—Lieut.-Col. Harris will complete his four years in command on Friday.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—A memorial to the officers and men who fell during the Indian frontier fights from 1892 to 1898 was unveiled on Saturday, at Aberdeen, by Col. Mathias, C.B., A.D.C. He handed the memorial over to the custody of the Lord Provost, who accepted it on behalf of the community. It is a handsome granite obelisk 20ft. high, with the inscription on the base: "Erected by the 1st Batt. Gordon Highlanders in memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men who were killed or died of wounds or disease during the service in India from January, 1892, to November, 1898." On the face of the column the names of those who perished, about one hundred altogether, are inscribed. Capt. Wedderburn has been appointed adjutant of the new kilted battalion of the Queen's Rifle Volunteer Brigade at Edinburgh.

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (76th).—Capt. Whitaker has been appointed Adjutant of the 2nd V.B. Bedfordshire Regiment at Berkhamstead.

Middlesex Regiment (77th).—The funeral of Gen. Sir George Willis took place on Tuesday afternoon in the parish churchyard of Sopley, Hampshire, his native place. The coffin was borne on a gun carriage from the residence in Bournemouth. It was guarded by an escort of the Royal Horse Artillery, and was covered with the Union Jack. The chief mourners were Lady Willis and her four sons, and there were also present representatives of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem and the Mayors of Portsmouth, Bournemouth, and Christchurch, as well as many officers. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. F. Vallings, rector, and the Rev. C. Mills, of Coggeshall, nephew of Gen. Willis. Major Longe has been selected for the appointment of second in command of the new 3rd Batn. at Woolwich on augmentation.

South Lancashire Regiment (82nd).—Lieut. Jennings is a candidate for the Indian Staff Corps, and has joined the 11th Bengal Lancers.

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. Bell is transferred on promotion from the 3rd to the 4th Batn., and Lieut. Ellis from the 1st Batn. to the 4th Batn.

West India Regiment.—Lieut. Robertson has been selected for the adjutancy of the newly-formed 8th (Scottish) V.B. Liverpool Regiment.

NAVAL AND MILITARY MEMORIALS,

Brasses, Crosses, Gravestones, Monuments, Tablets, Windows, Fonts, Pulpits, Reredoses, Standards, Mosaics, &c., of the highest class, designed, executed, and erected by

THOMAS PRATT & SONS,

Ecclesiastical Art Workers,

MEMORIAL GALLERY, 24, TAVISTOCK STREET (facing Covent Garden), LONDON, W.C.

Illustrations Free.

Old Military Flags netted and arranged for preservation.

Reviews.

NAPOLEON.*

*By Lord Rosebery. (Arthur Humphreys.)

This monograph deserves far more than the brief notice which appeared in these columns on Nov. 10, as we then said. It is, perhaps, the finest and best sustained effort made to solve the greatest human problem that has presented itself to the minds of men. "For a problem Napoleon is," as Lord Rosebery tells us, "and must ever remain." The world tries in vain to penetrate the secret of this prodigious being. Its complexity, its variety, its absorbing interest, baffle the inquirer at every turn. In one sense Napoleon was the noblest, in another, the basest of his kind. He gave France settled rule, when torn and bleeding with internal dissensions, and re-established her social life by wise and beneficent methods; he was a far-seeing administrator, a judicious law-giver; he built up his French official hierarchy such as it exists to this day; the Code Napoleon is still the basis of all law and order in France. The worst side of his character was shown in his ruthless measures to retain the colossal power he had usurped; the murder of the Duke d'Enghien is an ineradicable stain, his oppression of his political opponents crowded into State prisons during the closing years of his reign dwarf the finest attributes of this human Colossus. On one point there can be no doubt or question, that he was the greatest soldier of our or any age. Lord Rosebery wisely leaves this subject aside, feeling his insufficiency to deal with what would require "an expert and a volume to discuss it with authority," yet he refers to the salient features of Napoleon's military genius, omitting only the chief of all, his originality, and the highly developed faculty of imagination, without a full measure of which no commander has ever risen to the highest flights. Napoleon's successes in the field were, no doubt, chiefly due, as Lord Rosebery says, to "his rapidity of movement and apprehension, his power of inspiring his army to perform extraordinary feats, his knowledge of detail, combined with his gigantic grasp. His prodigious triumphs make cool judgment difficult." Where Napoleon exceeded all rivals was in the novelty of his methods, the inventiveness with which he brought new forces into play, and won victory after victory by the unexpected application of new means to old principles.

The chief merit of the book is, perhaps, the skill with which Lord Rosebery lets his subject paint his own picture at the various epochs of his eventful career. He was at his greatest, so he himself believed, when he entered Moscow, and he often regretted, for his own reputation, that he did not die then, when he must have left behind him "a reputation as a conqueror without parallel in history." He might have been another man, he tells us, had he accomplished his early dreams and gone to the East from Egypt instead of returning to France. He was, if we may believe Napoleon himself, an Oriental at heart, and this sentiment possessed him so strongly that he did not hesitate to confess himself a Mahomedan from choice. For the most attractive picture of all, at once pathetic and sublime, we have to thank Lord Rosebery cordially. He brings Napoleon before us with admirable effect as he was in the closing scenes at St. Helena: "the lord of so many palaces confined to two small rooms, hardly a dozen feet square." He tells us of his daily life, so simple indoors, so full of state when he went abroad. The loose dressing-gown contrasting with the green coat, the little round table covered with books which overflowed on to the floor, the carriage and six horses with equerries on each side in which he drove along the roads of St. Helena. We see him constantly combatting with ennui, perpetually sticking for trifles, and especially eager to maintain his dignity at all costs. "What strikes one most in his habits is the weariness and futility of it all. One is irresistibly reminded of a caged animal walking restlessly and aimlessly up and down his confined den, and watching the outside world with the fierce despair of his wild eye."

Lord Rosebery has undoubtedly treated a great subject finely, and yet there are parts of the book we may wish had never been written. It is painful in the extreme to revive the griefs of that past period when England behaved with such little magnanimity to her fallen foe. The whole story of the last episode in the Napoleonic legend does not redound to our credit, or that of our responsible ministers. That the conqueror of Europe had been a horrible nightmare haunting us perpetually for many years was a perfect excuse for his being held in close captivity for the rest of his days. But the penalty of imprisonment need never have been heightened by such mean and sordid treatment as the ex-Emperor received. It was ungenerous enough to deny him the state and title which we had often acknowledged diplomatically; to penuriously limit his expenditure; to expose him to all manner of irksome restraints; but to subject him to the tender mercies of Sir Hudson Lowe, acting under such a simulacrum of a statesman as Lord Bathurst, is an ineradicable disgrace to our nation. It was surely better to draw a veil over that particular period, but Lord Rosebery has thrown it up into the strongest and whitest relief.

SIR WILLIAM HUNTER'S "BRITISH INDIA."

It is with melancholy interest that we have received the second volume of the late Sir William Hunter's History of British India (Longmans and Co.), for its eighth chapter concludes with the last words written by his hand, penned only a few days before he died. When we survey the vast work carried out by Sir William Hunter for the topography and history of India, we recognise that his labours have scarcely had any parallel, and that the Empire should be proud of them. The "Imperial Gazetteer" and the statistical accounts of Bengal and Assam are monumental works of invaluable utility, and the many volumes upon rural Bengal, Orissa, and other subjects are admirable guides to the administrator and historian. The new volume covers the period to the union of the old and new companies under the Earl of Godolphin's award, but the last chapter has been written and arranged, from Sir William Hunter's papers, by Mr. P. E. Roberts, who has edited the book, assisted by Lady Hunter, who had an extraordinarily intimate knowledge of her husband's work. Though Sir William Hunter did not live to complete his great design, it may be said that he finished one great section of the history in India—the struggle for commercial supremacy in the 17th century. It is no longer possible to think, as was pointed out in the first volume, that our Indian history began in 1746. The truth is that the light focussed by Orme upon the Anglo-French struggle lifted that period out of its proper perspective, and even Professor Seeley fell into the error of saying that our acquisition of India was made blindly. Even in 1687 the Court of Directors hoped, in their own words, to lay the foundation of "a large, well-grounded, sure English dominion in India for all time to come." It was with sound instinct that the directors, seeing the time was not ripe, avoided the acquisition of territory and political power as long as possible. But they clung to the policy too tenaciously, and often failed to realise the conditions which determined the actions of their representatives. The massacre of Amboyna and the hardships suffered by our traders threw us back from the Spice Islands upon the Indian Peninsula, and the subject of the present volume is the great commercial development that followed. It is a period of extreme importance, and the names of Josiah Child, Gerald Aungier, the real founder of Bombay, Francis Day, the builder of Madras; and Thomas Pitt deserve to stand high among administrators. The Company had not only to win its way in the East; it had to fight for its existence at home. It was loyal to Charles, in whose cause Capt. Mucknell carried his ship into Bristol, then held for his Majesty, and made her over for the support of the war against the Parliament, at a cost of £20,000, to his masters; but Charles, by this time, had worn out the loyalty of the Court of Directors. It was during the civil war that the system of separate series of groups of voyagers broke down, and that a demand was made for the individual freedom of each member of the company to trade on his own account. Cromwell afterwards laid the groundwork of the East India Company. As Sir William Hunter said, under the regulations based on his charter it cast its medieval skin, shook off the traditions of the regulated system, and grew into one united, continuous, and permanent joint stock corporation, in the full sense of the words. The English company, unlike the Dutch and the French, was almost wholly a private enterprise and had to wrest its privileges from kings and Parliaments. How it did so is very ably demonstrated in this volume, which is a great authority and must find its place in every library. We congratulate Mr. Roberts upon his success in preparing it for the press.

CHRISTMAS PUBLICATIONS.

The resource, invention, and imagination of those who provide good things for Christmas seem to be endless, and the artistic means they have at their disposal are truly surprising. We have received a delightful selection of the publications of Messrs. C. W. Faulkner and Co., comprising calendars, Christmas cards, games, and other dainty and attractive productions. We cannot praise too highly the delicacy and skill with which the many pictorial calendars are produced. Some are in photogravure, some in sepia, others in colours, but all are singularly beautiful, and it is hard to choose between them, though every taste is catered for. The Christmas cards are equally good, and are rich in colour and floral fancy, and there is not one that does not possess some art character or charm. The framed photogravures from well-known pictures are an admirable series. The same firm has produced a great number of games, and the little ones will never be tired of: Musical Snap, Spottit, and some others.

Messrs. Dean appear almost to have surpassed themselves in the variety and vigorous character of their many picture books. They are adapted for children of all ages, and there seems not to be one that is not a success. The folding picture books are particularly good, among them the English Struwellpeter. These toy books and games will add hugely to the delight of Christmas time for the young. We cannot describe their vast variety.

Messrs. Raphael Tuck and Son are famous all the world over, and they also have sent us a selection of their publications that almost defies description. Their Christmas cards are in extraordinary variety, and nothing seems wanting in the skill or taste with which they have been produced. The finest art processes have been at command, and the result is a series of beautiful things. The picture books and games, as well as the calendars, share the same character, and we can only say that we advise those who can to inspect these things for themselves.

SHORT NOTICES.

We do not know through how many editions, Mr. Arnold Forster's In a Conning Tower has gone but it is an excellent picture of the strain and stress in which modern naval warfare would be conducted, and Messrs. Cassell's cheap edition at 6d., with the late Mr. Overend's admirable illustrations, is excellent, and should sell widely at this present time.

Messrs. Clowes and Sons have published in the form of a capital little booklet a Guide to Obtaining a Captain's Proficiency Certificate from the School of Instruction, by Lieut. B. S. Ince, 3rd V.B. Essex Regiment. The object has been to lay before candidates a concise description of the work, method, and course of instruction at the School and to give hints as to the books to be used. We can heartily commend it.

Mr. Thomas Fennell, Head-constable in the Royal Irish Constabulary (a rank which we may remark is similar to that of sergeant-major in the Army) has compiled a very useful Handbook of Company Drill for the Use of the Royal Irish Constabulary. Everything in the little volume is excellent, and it should be most useful. It is dated from Sligo, but we regret to find no publisher's name upon it. However, those interested in the subject will probably know how to procure it.

We have received from the Free Age Press, of Maldon, Essex, three works by Tolstoi: Work While Ye Have Light and How I Came to Believe, each published at threepence, and The Slavery of Our Time, which deals with present problems on the plane of thought of jurists and economists (1s.).

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR. ROSE'S LIME JUICE WHISKY

LIQUEUR

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the Island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO

Cherry Whisky,
Cherry Brandy,
Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—
HUNTSMEN,
GOLFERS,
and SPORTSMEN
generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

Bottled in
Leith, Scotland.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants.
Price 54s. per Case of 1 Dozen Quarts, Carriage Paid.

A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.,
41, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

ORBIT BRAND TOBACCO.

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos

in Bond for Export.

ONLY A FEW DAYS MORE—AT MOST THE BEST CHRISTMAS GIFT.

The offer of this great Christmas gift will almost certainly be withdrawn within the next Two or Three days.

The orders have been rapidly increasing; if they continue to increase, as it is quite possible they may, readers who delay in ordering will certainly be too late to avail themselves of this extraordinary opportunity. With these facts in his or her mind, it is for the reader to decide, for himself or for herself, whether it is not the only safe course to make use, TO-DAY, of the Order Form.

THE OFFER.

The most welcome of announcements to all who care for books is this: On receipt of a preliminary payment of 5s. the "DAILY MAIL" will deliver to you the complete twenty-five volumes of "THE TIMES" REPRINT of the Ninth, and latest, Edition of the great national library of reference, the "ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA." The purchase may then be completed in small monthly payments of 12s.; and when the payments are completed the purchaser will have paid less than half the regular price charged by the publishers, Messrs. A. & C. BLACK.

THE FULL MOROCCO BINDING IS ALREADY SOLD OUT.

Notice will be given as each of the other bindings is found to have been over subscribed; but if the reader waits until this notice appears he can only hope to learn from it that he has allowed a remarkable opportunity to slip through his fingers.

TO LEARN MORE

Call at once at one of the following Offices, which we have opened for this special purpose, where we will gladly give the fullest information on all points:—

LONDON.

NEAR BOUVERIE ST., FLEET ST.
"Daily Mail" Office
("Encyclopædia" Dept.), 4, Harmsworth Buildings, Tallis Street, E.C.

NEAR THE BANK.
Messrs. Cramer & Co., Ltd., Piano-forte Dealers, 48, Moorgate Street, E.C.

NEAR MARK LANE.
Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode, 101, Leadenhall Street.

NEAR CANNON S. STATION.
Messrs. William Dawson & Sons, Ltd., 121, Cannon Street, E.C.

WEST END.

Messrs. Cramer & Co., Ltd., Piano-forte Dealers, 207-209, Regent Street, W.

NEAR CHARING CROSS.

Messrs. William Dawson & Sons, Ltd., 23, Northumberland Avenue.

MANCHESTER.
Messrs. Forsyth Brothers, 126-128, Deansgate.

BIRMINGHAM.
Messrs. Stockley & Sabins, 123, Colmore Row.

CARDIFF.
Messrs. William Dawson & Sons, Ltd., Hayes Buildings, Working Street.

EXETER.
Messrs. William Dawson & Sons, Ltd., 22, Gandy Street.

PROVINCES.

LEICESTER.
Messrs. William Dawson & Sons, Ltd., 7B, Halford Street.

GLASGOW.
The Glasgow Herald Office, Buchanan Street. Open every day till 8 o'clock.

EDINBURGH.
The Glasgow Herald Branch Office, St. Giles Street; also at Messrs. Methven, Simpson & Co., 83, Princes Street.

GREENOCK.
The Glasgow Herald Branch Office, Cathcart Street.

ABERDEEN.
Free Press Buildings, Union Street.

DUNDEE.
Messrs. Methven, Simpson & Co., 122, Nethergate.

PAISLEY.
Office of the Glasgow Herald, 3, County Place.

If so many Christmas Orders are received that they cannot be fulfilled, we will return money by telegraph.

SPECIAL CHRISTMAS ORDER FORM.

A Telegram, reserving a Set, may be in time, when a Letter would be too late.

Monthly Payments.—Order Form.

All Cheques should be payable to H. E. HOOPER.

THE MANAGER, THE "DAILY MAIL," TALLIS STREET, LONDON, E.C.

[Date].....

I enclose FIVE SHILLINGS. Please send me the ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA (9th Edition)

Strike out all but one of these paragraphs.

bound in Cloth, for which I agree to make to you, or anyone you appoint, 30 additional payments of 12 Shillings.
in Half Morocco, for which I agree to make to you, or anyone you appoint, 30 additional payments of 15 Shillings.

In THREE-QUARTER LEVANT—the "Daily Mail's" Special Binding—for which I agree to make to you, or
* anyone you may appoint, 30 additional payments of 17 SHILLINGS.

The best bargain. *

in Full Morocco. [ALL THIS BINDING IS SOLD.]

The first of these monthly payments to be made upon delivery of the complete 25 volumes, and the succeeding payments on the corresponding day of each month following. Until such payments are complete I engage that the volumes, not being my property, shall not be disposed of by sale or otherwise. I further agree that if, owing to unforeseen circumstances, of which you shall be the judge, the volumes cannot be delivered, the return of the deposit of Five Shillings to me shall cancel this agreement.

Strike out adjoining paragraph if Bookcase not desired. £25

Please also send a Revolving Bookcase, for which I agree to make (after the payments for the book have been completed) further monthly payments of the same amount until I shall have paid 60 SHILLINGS for the Bookcase.

N.B.—In the case of the Three-quarter Levant—the "Daily Mail's" Special Binding—the purchase of the Bookcase will be completed by 3 monthly payments of 17s. and one final payment of 9s.

[Signed].....

[Rank or Occupation].....

AM. 1. [Address].....

Please address the package to.....

If the package is to be delivered beyond London postal district, the purchaser should add here the name of the railway company or shipping agent in London to whom delivery is to be made. Beyond the London postal district, carriage will be at purchaser's cost.

As a special feature of its novel offer, the "Daily Mail" has introduced this beautiful binding—at a very moderate price.

Cash Prices.

All Cheques should be payable to H. E. HOOPER.

CLOTH BINDING,
£17

HALF MOROCCO BINDING,
£21

THREE-QUARTER LEVANT BINDING
(which we recommend),
£24

FULL MOROCCO BINDING,
£28
[ALL SOLD.]

The Special Revolving Bookcase, £3.

NOTE.—If the purchaser sends a cheque for the full amount at the cash price shown above, he will effect a saving and no Order Form need be used.

OETZMANN & Co.
62, 64, 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, 77, & 79,
HAMPSTEAD ROAD, W.
(Continuation North of Tottenham Court Road.)
60 & 61, GRAFTON ST., DUBLIN; 75, UNION ST., RYDE.
Factories:
Eagle Works, HAMPSTEAD ROAD;
Albion Works, DRUMMOND STREET;
Stanhope Works, WILLIAM STREET;
Camden Works, HIGH STREET, CAMDEN TOWN, N.W.

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE NOW PROCEEDING.
IMMENSE REDUCTIONS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS.

An Exceptional Opportunity Of Complete Or Partial Furnishing At Minimum Cost.
SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED SALE CATALOGUE (36 pages) POST FREE.

JEROME SACONE, LTD.,
15, COCKSPUR STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W. AND GIBRALTAR.

Wine and Spirit Merchants to the Army and Navy.
Wines Supplied to Naval Messes Free of Duty.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESSES:—"Saccone," Gibraltar. "Saccone," London.

SHELTON & BALL,
Military and Court Tailors,
180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
(Opposite Burlington Gardens.)

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).

... THE ...
SATURDAY REVIEW
OF
Politics, Literature, Science and Art.
(Established 1855.)
EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review are treated only by Naval and Military men.

The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:
8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.
HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,
KILTS, TREWS,
TARTAN PANTALOONS.
11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING MILK

AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A PERFECT UNSWEETENED CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.
AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK
Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS, ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.
WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.
Apply for particulars, Sample, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,
144, New Bond Street,
LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.

H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOX
Appropriately arranged for everyday use as a lasting memento.

PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

Important Notice . . .

The publication of the ARMY AND NAVY STATIONS List, which has been suspended for the past few months, will be resumed with our issue of December 15 next, and will be published on the third week of each succeeding month.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE RED WHITE & BLUE
COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity. It being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.

MILITARY MEN

Under Orders for S. Africa should take with them a supply of

BRAND'S MEAT LOZENGES.

Sustaining and Invigorating.
In Hermetically Sealed Boxes, Convenient for the Pocket.

BRAND & CO., Ltd.,
MAYFAIR, LONDON.

... THE ...
Royal Navy List.
(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.
Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST
CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER
10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS
(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.
"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—Nautical Magazine.

Officers are earnestly requested to send at once their special services to the Editor.
WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.
Advt. Dept.:—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)

THE Burton Brewery
COMPANY, LIMITED,
BURTON-ON-TRENT.
Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.
BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.
Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO
Mr. E. RUGGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent,
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street,
Alexandria, Egypt.

DAY & MARTIN, LIMITED.

GOLD MEDAL. PARIS, 1900.

A VOLUNTEER WRITES FROM POTCHEFSTROOM:—

Aug. 1, 1900.
GENTLEMEN,—I have been requested by a few comrades to testify as to the remarkable qualities of your "dubbin" as supplied to the troops by H. M. Government.
Not only for preserving our boots, but for applying to the feet to prevent blisters; as fat for cooking chappatties, and for burning as candles, it is found of great service to "Tommy Atkins at the front."

DAY & MARTIN'S DUBBIN

Is Waterproof and absolutely the best Article for use on Shooting and Fishing Boots.

Notices.

THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

All EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE are:—
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM. | TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year... .. £1 8 0 | One Year... .. £1 12 6
Six Months... .. 0 14 0 | Six Months... .. 0 16 6
Three Months... .. 0 7 0 | Three Months... .. 0 8 2
Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid in advance.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE will be forwarded on application.
BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—Price 6s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.

All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1900.

SOME NAVAL IDEAS.
ON Wednesday next Sir John Hopkins is to deliver a lecture at the Royal United Service Institution, and both the lecturer's personality and the subject he will handle should insure a very large and representative audience. It is almost unnecessary to remind our readers of the many claims which Sir John Hopkins has upon their attention, his experience is of such a varied nature that the greatest weight attaches to anything he may have to say in connection with the naval service. Both at sea and on shore he has filled nearly every interesting and important post with the exception of that of the First Sea Lord. He has been the private secretary to the First Lord, an appointment which gives unrivalled advantages to its holder for acquiring a knowledge of the internal economy of the Admiralty. He has been superintendent of more than one dockyard, the Director of Naval Ordnance, and a Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, all of these posts in which special experience is obtained in regard to the provision and use of naval material. On the other hand, as Commander-in-Chief of our squadrons on the North America and West Indies station and in the Mediterranean—the latter so recently as last year—he has had unrivalled opportunities of learning the feeling of the Navy afloat, of its shortcomings, its requirements, and, in a word, of its actual and potential condition. When, therefore, Sir John Hopkins proposes to give us what he has called “a few naval ideas for the coming century,” we know that we may anticipate not the visionary schemes of a dreamer, but some practical common-sense suggestions of which the country will do well to take note. The time is entirely opportune, because not only are we on the immediate threshold of a new century, but we are at something like a crisis in naval affairs, while we have just replaced the old and trusted man-at-the-wheel with a young and inexperienced helmsman.

What are the matters in connection with the Navy upon which Sir John Hopkins will bring his “ideas” to bear? It may be idle gossip, but rumour credits the Admiral with the intention of letting a flood of light upon Admiralty administration. We hardly credit this story. There is very little to be told about this subject which is not already public property. That every one in a position of responsibility at Whitehall is overworked is well known, and if, with his experience, the Admiral should propose that additional naval officers be sent there to give much needed assistance he will only be echoing the report of the Hartington Commission. Moreover, this is exactly what every Sea Lord has urged for a long time past. During the dying century the fleet has undergone an entire revolution, a change of which we require no further demonstration or illustration than is afforded by the contrast between the steel battle-ships which pass in and out of Portsmouth harbour, and the Victory which rests there as a memento of the old Navy. And with this revolution has come about added responsibilities and largely increased duties to the Board which controls our sea power. What more natural, then, than that a far-seeing administrator and organiser like Sir John Hopkins should suggest, as essential to efficiency and made necessary by these changes, an additional staff to cope with the work. But beyond this and alongside the development and growth of the fleet, we have new systems of officering and manning our ships, which are acknowledged to be yet in need of improvement. The continuous service system, which to many of the older officers is but a thing of yesterday, has admittedly worked well, but it has not given us the reserve which modern ideas demand. Here, again, there is an opening for practical suggestions. One after another writers have told us, and statistics prove, that we can no longer rely upon the mercantile marine alone for that expansion of our personnel which is necessary should the fleet have to be placed on a war footing. There have been, indeed, no dearth of suggestions and proposals in this connection, but despite this we shall be surprised if the Admiral has not something useful to say on the subject. There are, too, those burning questions associated with the shortage of lieutenants, the claims of the Engineers, and the aspirations of the Marines which no one who has studied the Navy, much less an officer of the experience of Sir John Hopkins, is likely to omit when picturing the sea-service of the immediate future. It will astonish no one, surely, if the Admiral endeavoured to indicate the lines upon which reform might run if these and similar problems are to be solved. Nor should the grievances and the ambitions of the lower deck fail to fill a corner in the canvas. The position of the soldier, it is said, is in need of amelioration, and for every claim that can be urged in support of such treatment for the Army, at least an equal number can be found for the Navy. What will Sir John Hopkins have to say on the subject of promotion to the quarterdeck from before the mast?

On the subject of naval matériel we have a clear indication of the line the Admiral is likely to take in the article which he has written in the Navy League Journal, and to which we referred last week. In our cruisers speed is of paramount importance, he tells us, and he goes on to assert emphatically that he and the majority of naval officers are far from being satisfied with our ships in this respect. For at least ten years we have been standing still while foreigners, and, indeed, our own private constructors, have been going ahead of us. It is surely not too much to ask that the cruisers of the foremost Navy in the world should be as speedy as those of any other Power. But speed is not the only quality in a fighting ship, nor cruisers the only class of vessel built for purposes of war. We shall be astonished if the Admiral has not something to say about other types of warships. During recent years there have been discussions concerning the relative amount of nearly every kind of offensive and defensive strength required to make a fighting vessel effective. We have witnessed a wonderful development of defensive power, from the thin slip of iron on the Warrior's broadside, through the masses of composite armour on some of the turret ships, down to the adoption of Harveyed and Krupp steel in our later vessels. There are opportunities for many “ideas” here. The guns too, there is no finality in this direction either. We cannot do less than expect, then, that the Admiral will let us know his views in this connection. Some other pressing matters can scarcely escape treatment, especially that most important one connected with the delays in the completion of vessels under construction. We remember, in an excellent article which Sir William White contributed to the Nineteenth Century on “The Latest Reconstruction of the Navy,” he claimed that the productive power of private firms is one great source of our Naval strength, “provided it can be and is utilised at the proper time.” Are we not allowing “the proper time” to slip away without that utilisation of this productive power which the Chief Constructor of the Navy asserted to be indispensable if it was to be of value? His experience at the Admiralty must have given Sir John Hopkins much substance for ideas in this direction, just as it is an open secret that his experience recently afloat has made him a firm believer in the necessity of testing the battle-worthiness of our machinery of naval organisation frequently and thoroughly. We have heard much recently about putting the fleets on a war footing, and it is said, we do not know with how much truth, that although the Admiral is not in favour of the permanent maintenance of our forces in this condition, he is a strenuous supporter of the proposal that it should be carried out as an experiment, and by way of surprise, in order to practically discover the weak points in our naval armour.

MR. ARNOLD-FOSTER, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty, has left Cape Town for England in the Briton.

THE POWERS OF THE ADMIRALTY.

A DISCUSSION of considerable interest has recently taken place in the columns of the Times concerning the powers and responsibilities of the First Lord and the Board of Admiralty. It arose out of the statement made by Mr. Goschen that he had regarded the members of the Board as his comrades and colleagues, and not as his subordinates, and was initiated by Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, who stated, on the contrary, that the members of the Board had no responsibility whatever to the Queen and country, and that the First Lord was not primus inter pares, but supreme. The gallant officer's contention was that the system was changed by Mr. Childers's famous Order in Council of 1869, and that before that time the Admiralty Board was responsible, the First Lord being then no more than primus inter pares. “Navalis” in two letters dissented from this conclusion, which was strongly supported by Sir Edward Fanshawe. The view of the last-named officer was that there exists a clear line of demarcation between the periods before and after Mr. Childers's Order in Council, though even before 1869 there was an apparent incompatibility between the authority of the Government, as represented by the First Lord, and that of the Admiralty, whose members were assumed to have equal voices. Notwithstanding this incompatibility Sir Edward Fanshawe, who served on the Board during the Duke of Somerset's administration, expressed the opinion that it would have been impossible to devise a better system for conducting the multifarious duties of the Admiralty than that which prevailed at the time. Sir John Dalrymple-Hay pointed out, with justice, that the subordinate position of the Naval Lords was not then emphasised by the “insolent description” of them inserted in the Order of 1869.

The argument put forward by “Navalis” was that the notorious Order really effected no change whatever. The First Lord before 1869 occupied a position of unquestioned superiority to his colleagues, and on assuming office could appoint them, thus changing, if he so desired, the whole constitution of the Board. The Duke of Somerset stated before a Select Committee of the House of Commons, in 1861, that he considered the First Lord responsible for the administration of the Navy, and that he had always acted under that impression, and believed “all former First Lords were of this opinion”; while the Naval Lords were responsible to the First Lord for their several departments. According to this theory, which has certainly been borne out in practice, the First Lord was undoubtedly not primus inter pares. The Childers Order in Council assumed his superiority, and the Goschen Order of 1872 further allocated to the First Lord a complete responsibility for the business of the Admiralty. But obviously this predominance of the First Lord was no new thing, though it is not laid down in the Admiralty Patent, which is an existing instrument of ancient origin at variance with the Orders in Council. Mr. John Leyland, in another letter, emphasised the undefined relationship existing between the Admiralty Board and the First Lord by instancing the action of Lord Melville in 1804, and the fact that the powers of the Board of Admiralty depend more upon usage than upon written instruments. He cited the evidence of Sir James Graham to the effect that it would be impolitic to attempt to define these powers or to harmonise the Patent and the Order in Council.

Evidently, then, there exists, as Sir Vesey Hamilton has shown in his treatise on “Naval Administration,” and has existed, even antecedent to the Admiralty Patents, an elastic and undefined power based upon usage, which has enabled the First Lord to undertake any duties the public safety may require. An obvious conclusion may be drawn from this. Whatever measure of responsibility the public may attribute to the Admiralty Board, the First Lord may act independently of it and may choose, contrary to the sound policy of Mr. Goschen, to regard its members as his subordinates. Much, therefore, depends upon the personality of the First Lord. Where responsibility is confined to departmental duties, doubtless excellent servants may be found to do good work, but much must necessarily be lost if the functions of the Board fall into desuetude. It is, indeed, hard to see in what way the higher duties of the Admiralty could be conducted if the First Lord should adopt any policy differing from that pursued by Mr. Goschen, and it may be assumed that officers of the highest competence and organising power might be unwilling to serve upon a Board which was no more than a figment. The remedy of resignation as a protest has very rarely been resorted to by the Naval Lords, but Sir John Dalrymple-Hay has given an exceedingly interesting account of the effect of a resolution to resign by himself and Admiral G. H. Seymour in 1867. As members of Sir John Parkington's Board they had protested, in the previous November, against the inadequate provision for shipbuilding, and they refused to sign the estimates, but Mr. Corry was appointed First Lord within the next few days, and upon receiving assurances that seven armoured ships would be laid down they consented to join his Board. "If Admiral Seymour and I had not been members of the House of Commons, it is evident we could not have had any power to oblige the Cabinet to consent to this expenditure." Yet since that time only one or two members of the Board have been members of Parliament. There was one unhappy time during the régime of Mr. Childers when the Board was regarded as of little value; but we are firmly convinced that upon a strong Board, directing through the First Lord the naval policy of the country, the safety of the State depends. The legal understanding of responsibility is no doubt obscure, but, as Sir Edward Fanshawe suggests, it might be a great advantage if the opinion of the Naval Lords was made accessible to the House of Commons and the country. This is not a new idea, and it would seem to offer a means for making responsibility known—a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Navv Notes.

The coming voyage of the Duke of York may possibly extend to the United States. The American Ambassador at the Court of St. James's, inspired by the President at the White House, is reported to have introduced the subject to the Marquis of Salisbury, and the Press of the great Republic is in favour of it. The fact of His Royal Highness's tour being in honour of the British Colonies who aided the Mother Country in the South African operations, should, in the opinion of some people, militate against such a visit. As he could, however, proceed to the United States on the termination of his Canadian visit such an objection might be overruled, and our Transatlantic cousins would undoubtedly appreciate a visit from him and the Duchess.

Lord Charles Beresford has made some comments on the administration of the Services in a letter to the secretary of the York Conservative Association which have found their way into print. The Admiral expresses the view that the country has more to lose "by want of proper organisation of the forces we possess than by the inadequacy of those forces." In proof of this statement his lordship points to the South African war. "It is really no one's fault," he writes, "It is the false, rotten, and misleading system under which the Services are administered." Lord Charles Beresford justly claims that he has repeatedly sounded this warning in days of peace, and he undertakes, on his return to half-pay to give the country some curious information relative to the maladministration of the two Services. As an Army reformer Lord Charles will be a new figure, and one may doubt if it be entirely discreet for him to adopt this rôle. It is possible, however, that he means to confine himself to naval organisation, despite this letter. But the expressions "false, rotten, and misleading" cannot justly be applied to the administration of the Navy within the past dozen years. There are weaknesses in our administration, beyond question, but these terms are too sweeping and violent.

The Channel Squadron left Gibraltar on Tuesday for Lisbon, where it arrived the following day. The visit is in honour of the King and Queen as well as a compliment to the Government of Portugal. On Friday their Majesties honoured the vice-admiral with a visit, and on Thursday and to-day entertainments and festivities were arranged for the visitors by a council of the ministry. The squadron leaves to-morrow for the Home ports. The Jupiter and the Furious parted company from the Squadron at Gibraltar and proceeded to the Nore.

Elsewhere in this number will be found some interesting particulars which have just been officially promulgated in the Channel Squadron of the regattas held at Berehaven and Arosa Bay. We have already referred to the circumstance that the Pactolus, the smallest ship with the squadron, and having the smallest complement, has taken first place. This can only be due to the great encouragement which must have been given in the ship to all who desired to perfect themselves in boat pulling and sailing. In this connection may be mentioned the fact, which we note with much satisfaction, that in the curriculum of training of young executive officers afloat, a knowledge of boat work under all conditions has been introduced as a new subject, and a maximum of seventy-five marks will be given for proficiency in it. Everything possible ought to be done to make our young seamen, whether officers or from the lower deck, expert boat handlers. This is a part of the seamanship craft which can still be taught, and to properly manœuvre a boat under sail in all weathers is an accomplishment of which any man may be proud. By the way, we have not seen any reference to the circumstance, but it is a significant commentary upon the recent discussion on naval training that the Admiralty have now abolished the marks which were previously accorded at the examinations of midshipmen for a knowledge of masts and yards.

Two interesting ceremonial dinners were held at Durban during the last week in October. The first of these was given by a gentleman connected with the shipping companies in honour of Captain Van Koughnet, R.N., the senior Naval transport officer at Durban during the war. In returning thanks for the honour paid to him, Captain Van Koughnet gave some interesting statistics of the transport work. He had disembarked and re-embarked at Durban 102,000 men, had landed 500,000 tons of stores, nearly 40,000 cattle, mules and horses, and 70,403 tons of coal. On his departure for England Captain Van Koughnet was presented by the shipping firms with an illuminated address, and a very handsome and valuable piece of plate. The latter is a gold tray, of which the bottom contains 67 Kruger sovereigns, the whole weighing about 30 ounces.

The second dinner was given by the officers and men of the cruiser Philomel to their comrades of the Naval Brigade originally landed from the ship more than a year previously. Captain Bearcroft, who has himself been landed for twelve months, spoke in the highest terms of the gallantry of the seamen and Marines under his command, and paid tribute to the arduous work performed by the Philomel's crew during the patrol of the coast. He expressed the opinion that those actually landed had certainly had the "best of it."

In the Nineteenth Century for this month there is an article on the strategical value of the Channel Islands, by Mr. Laird Clowes, in which the writer suggests the creation of a protected depôt and station between the islands of Sark, Herm, and Jethou. The writer's contention is that such a base could not but prove most valuable in the event of a war with France since it would be situated within 50 miles, or 2½ hours' steam, from Cherbourg, and within 140 miles, or 5½ hours' steam, from Brest. That such a depôt would be of value in the circumstances goes without saying, provided always that there was a French force in Cherbourg, which, however, seems to us to be doubtful. We cannot, however, admit that the writer makes out a good case for fortifying the islands in the vicinity. Nor do we quite understand what he means by saying that "even if they were only properly gunned the Channel Islands, in time of war, might throw serious difficulties in the way of sea communication between the two large French Atlantic ports, and might go far towards paralysing any attempt of the Commanders-in-Chief at the two places to combine their squadrons."

Mr. Clowes very properly points out in the earlier part of his article that should Great Britain succeed in retaining the command of the sea, France would thereby be reduced to a condition of impotence so far as offensive operations are concerned. In other words, the real protection of the Channel Islands depends entirely on our being able to retain the command of the sea, and this can only be retained by the presence of a superior naval force. Why, then, go to the expense of fortifying any portion of the islands. The scheme is, indeed, but a variant of that to make Braye a fortified port, on which many thousands of pounds have been wasted. Surely if it be found in war-time that we require a base for operations against Cherbourg in the Channel Islands we can find one there without going to the cost of making either forts or placing guns for the purpose, provided, of course, that we retained command of the seas. Mr. Clowes says that he does not want to see the Channel Islands, or any of them, fortified against invasion. But against anything else such protection as could be rapidly improvised would certainly appear to be sufficient protection. Experience has shown that when military engineers begin defensive works they seldom know when to stop, and with the present demands upon the public purse there are many more pressing needs than the establishment of a fortified base at Sark.

The death of Mr. Henry Russell, which took place yesterday, will have come as a surprise to many, for the songs with which his name is associated, though they will fill a permanent place in British patriotic music, are rather more of the past than of the present. The author of "Cheer, boys, cheer!" and "A life on the ocean wave" was to the boys who are now grey-headed men what Dibdin had been to their forefathers, although we do not know that he was officially encouraged in the same way. Henry Russell, indeed, fulfilled a much wider purpose than Dibdin, for where the latter sent his boys to sea to fight, the former encouraged them to seek a home in our colonies, and with his songs "To the West" and "A good time coming, boys" induced thousands to emigrate to Canada and Australia to build up the great commonwealths of to-day. The nautical turn given to many of his songs and ballads was no doubt a result originally of his association with Sheerness, where he was born. But in every case his songs were written with a motive, as he acknowledges in his reminiscences, and were intended either to attack some vice of the day or to stir up and foster the patriotic spirit of his countrymen.

We commend to the notice of our naval readers an excellent article on army organisation by a military correspondent in the Times of yesterday. In it is set forth clearly and without elaboration of detail that view which is held by what Mr. Wyndham called "The Blunwater School." It is also just the kind of letter to which, we believe, the late Admiral Colomb would have subscribed. If the Navy League were to publish their endorsement of the principles inculcated in this article as those necessary for the organisation of our military forces, it should cut the ground for ever from under the feet of those who pretend to believe that the upholders of an effective and all-powerful Navy are opposed to the provision of an efficient Army.

Navy Personal.

Admiral the Hon. Sir Edmund Fremantle is in the West of England, and visits his last command during the coming week, when he will be the guest of an ex-Mayor of Devonport, at his residence in Stoke.

Admiral Thomas Saumarez was the guest of the Worshipful Company of Patten-Makers at their annual dinner in the Hotel Metropole on Tuesday last. The gallant flag-officer, although well in the seventies, still displays considerable activity, in spite of much hard work in South America and China during active operations while he was a lieutenant and also as commander.

Rear-Admiral Hugo L. Pearson, Commander-in-Chief of the Australian station, is due at Sydney, N.S.W., in the Royal Arthur, on Wednesday next, with His Excellency the Earl of Hopetoun, Governor-General elect of the Australian Commonwealth. The flagship will be met outside Sydney Heads by a fleet of the mercantile marine, and on entering the magnificent harbour is to pass through two columns of vessels of the Australian Squadron.

Rear-Admiral Lewis A. Beaumont, transferred as Commander-in-Chief from the Pacific to the Australian station, has arrived in London for consultation at the Admiralty, and to receive instructions in reference to the Royal visit to the Antipodes. He leaves for Australia about the middle of the current month. The command of the Pacific Squadron is temporarily placed with the senior captain until the arrival of Rear-Admiral A. K. Bickford, who left Liverpool with his staff last week for North America, and takes the Canadian Pacific route to join the Warspite.

Rear-Admiral Swinton C. Holland, Admiral Superintendent of Chatham Yard, a flag officer of considerable scientific ability, was the guest of the Institute of Electrical Engineers at their annual dinner in the Hotel Cecil on Monday last, and responded to the toast of the Royal Navy.

Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Bedford, Commander-in-Chief of the North America and West India station, left Bermuda on Tuesday in the Crescent, on his annual visit to the southern portion of his command, accompanied by the Pallas, Proserpine, Buzzard, and Quail.

Rear-Admiral Archibald L. Douglas, second Sea Lord, was a guest on Friday in last week of the Royal Scottish Corporation at their 236th anniversary, held this year at the Holborn Restaurant. The gallant Admiral in responding for the Navy, remarked that they had to deplore the loss of their chief, Mr. Goschen, whose devotion to the Service was unparalleled. He was succeeded by a good man, but it was no reflection to say that they all regretted Mr. Goschen's departure from the Admiralty.

Rear-Admiral Sir William Wharton, F.R.S., Hydrographer of the Admiralty, and Captain the Earl of Glasgow were present at the annual banquet of the Royal Society, in the Hotel Metropole, on Friday in last week.

Captain John Casement, of the Amphion, arrived at Valparaiso on Saturday last to join the Pacific Squadron.

Captain John Durnford, of the Jupiter, is due at Sheerness on Tuesday or Wednesday next to transfer the command of that battleship to Captain Sir Alexander Berkeley-Milne, Bart. Captain Durnford will then relieve Captain George L. Atkinson, in charge of the Medway Dockyard Reserve, whose term of service in that appointment expires on the last mentioned day.

Captain Frederick S. Inglefield, of the Glory, en route for China, arrived at Malta on Monday last and left again on Wednesday. As he started from Portsmouth on Saturday, the 24th ult., he has taken about the same time (nine days) that the late Indian troopships were allowed to make the passage.

Captain Frederick F. Fegen, of the Leander, arrived at St. Vincent, Cape Verd Island, on Sunday last, and left the following Wednesday for Plymouth, where he is due on Friday next.

Captains William Spratt and Alfred F. Marescaux are granted naval pensions for retired commanders, vacant by the deaths of Captain H. D. Selby and H. K. Leet. Both recipients served in the Burmese War 1851-52; and were on one occasion in a most critical position during the following year in China, when their boats capsized and themselves and their crews were at the mercy of the natives, but luckily escaped.

Commander H. Evan-Thomas, of the Pioneer, left the Nore on Sunday last for the Mediterranean station to replace the Fearless, recently paid off at Portsmouth.

Commander Robert F. Scott, who is to command the Discovery during the coming Antarctic Expedition, will probably leave for the South Polar region in August next.

Commander Ernest C. Troubridge, of the Pelorus, left Devonport on Thursday in last week to rejoin the Channel Squadron at Gibraltar, but on the following day had to return to Plymouth, the boilers of this cruiser having developed defects while crossing the Bay of Biscay. The Flag Captain, aided by the Chief Inspector of Machinery of the Dockyard Reserve, inquired into the matter on Saturday last, and the vessel is again in dockyard hands. Prior to her departure she had been nearly four months under repair at Devonport, after returning from South Africa. Had she been paid-off at the time much trouble and detention of officers and crew would have been avoided.

Commander Murray T. Parks, of the Blanche, left Plymouth on Thursday for the Cape of Good Hope to relieve the Magicienne.

Lieut. and Commander Alexander A. Gordon, of the Sparrow, left the Nore last week for Australia, calling at Plymouth on his way down the Channel. On arrival there the propeller of that vessel was found not in working order, and he will be unable to leave Devon port until next week.

Lieuts. Leslie Menzies from the Plover, Edward A. Baird from the Earnest; Staff-Surgeon R. T. Lavinge from the Humber; Engineers J. E. Vibert from the Dragon, H. W. Harris from the Melita, J. P. Leahy from the Victorious; and Surgeon Hugh Burniston from the Esk—whose periods of foreign service had expired; Assistant-Paymaster J. H. Feesey from the Tyne; Midshipmen E. M. Mercer from the Undaunted, W. R. Chapman from the Goliath, and E. W. Isaacson and Assistant-Engineer T. J. Davies from the Royal Sovereign, all invalided; Acting Sub-Lieut. G. H. Fryberg and Midshipman H. D. Bridges from the Undaunted; and Midshipman W. Hallwright from the Terrible, returning home for educational purposes, arrived at Plymouth in the hired transport Jelunga from the Far East and Mediterranean on Friday in last week. Staff-Surgeon William Home, late of Wei-Hai-Wei Royal Marine detachment, was in medical charge.

Fleet-Surgeon Henry L. Croker, of the Britannia, who has been medical officer of the Naval Cadets' Training Establishment for upwards of three years, has been selected for appointment to the Royal Arthur, when recommissioned as flagship of the Australian station.

ROYAL MARINES.

Major James H. Bor, R.M.A., D.A.A.G. at the Admiralty, has the honour of being selected to command the Royal Marine detachment that will embark in the Ophir when commissioned to convey the Duke of York to Australia.

Captain and Brevet-Major Lewis S. T. Halliday who highly distinguished himself during the siege of the British Legation at Peking, arrived at Portsmouth on Saturday last in the hired transport Jelunga, invalided from China. The gallant officer's wounded arm still requires support, but there is no doubt that he will eventually return to duty.

Lieut. Leslie O. Wilson, invalided from the Monarch, at the Cape of Good Hope, arrived at Southampton on Tuesday last in the P. and O. steamship Assaye, hired transport.

Captain Frank W. Luard, who was to embark for Malta to join the Empress of India, when recommissioned, has been allowed to exchange appointments with Captain John B. Noble, of the Minotaur, at Portland.

Regarding the action at Obligado, 1845, referred to in our issue of Saturday last, General Sir Charles Barnard Read was inadvertently inserted for General Sir Charles Barnard, R.M.A.

ELKINGTON & CO., LTD.,

Goldsmiths, Silversmiths, and Court Jewellers,
THE ORIGINATORS AND PATENTEES OF ELECTRO PLATE.

ELKINGTON'S SPOONS AND FORKS
are Manufactured and Hardened by a Special Superior Process.

ELKINGTON'S PATENT SECURE-HANDLE CUTLERY.
Blades of Finest Hand-Forged Double Shear Steel.
Fine African Ivory Handles.

CATALOGUES AND ESTIMATES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

22, REGENT STREET, S.W., & 73, CHEAPSIDE, E.C., LONDON;

9, Parker Street, LIVERPOOL; St. Ann's Square, MANCHESTER;
22, Blackett St., NEWCASTLE; 84, St. Vincent St., GLASGOW; 3, Esplanade, CALCUTTA;
Manufactory and Showrooms: Newhall Street, BIRMINGHAM.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED
ELKINGTON PLATE.

Elkington's "GEORGIAN" Pattern.

Elkington's "KENT" Pattern.

Elkington's "LOUIS XV." Pattern.

Elkington's "RICH BEAD" Pattern.

The Navy.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 28.

ROYAL NAVAL RESERVE.

In accordance with Order in Council of May 15, the following appointments have been made, to take effect from that date:—

Hon. Payms. to be Staff Payms.:—F. Wood, W. H. G. Deacon, A. O. Cooper.

Hon. Payms. to be Payms.:—E. Holmes, J. M. Cumberland, W. H. Stewardson, M. J. O'Connor, H. Roche, D. Kyd, W. H. Bignold, J. T. Hynes, G. Owen, F. Shaw, B. A. Forrow, F. G. Taylor, W. Durie, W. J. Wallace, T. J. Mitchell, W. D. Thompson, A. Smith, R. W. Edrupt, H. Fooks, E. Hughes, W. G. Lewis, W. Powell, J. Browning, F. W. Wood, J. Mortished, E. Taffs, J. I. Miller, A. E. Evans, D. Mackenzie, N. Fitz-Gerald, L. Smith, J. Clark, J. Wright, J. T. Rees, J. O. Hill, N. Seymour, C. Baker, J. Y. Mosey, C. L. Lord, G. R. Colbourne, W. Stevenson, S. Scott.

Hon. Asst.-Payms. to be Asst.-Payms.:—L. Stromberg, W. W. Wheeler, J. E. Sorrell, H. J. Pockett, J. S. Gilchrist, J. H. Hogarth, C. S. Hall, W. M. Davies, J. Stewart, G. H. Gronow, T. E. Cullum, A. King, G. M. M. Rae, J. H. Thomas, J. W. H. Hall, J. B. Richards, W. J. Ferrins, T. S. Burgess, N. A. Mackie, R. C. Lamb, B. Jacob, A. Mowat, C. E. Plummer, H. Pye, S. Young, G. F. Briggs, J. J. Leonard, J. Tooney, A. E. Craddy, B. H. Eidler, A. C. Saunders, G. Keith, T. W. Banks, P. Hoad, A. J. Padfield, R. Magowan, W. H. Walls, F. Autridge, J. Cosgrove, L. E. Lewis, R. C. W. Merrick, R. S. Back, J. R. W. Stibbs, S. S. Robson, J. M. Kelly, W. C. Woolven, W. R. Twitchett, J. C. Nye, J. Clague, J. Ritchie, T. R. Best, T. W. Warren, W. B. H. White, W. B. Cree, G. M. Smith, J. Frazer, E. Baker, J. N. Garnock, J. R. Beatt, E. E. Gray, G. Burch, W. H. C. Hambling, A. E. Davies, J. Hunter, W. H. Walton.

Hon. Payms. allowed to assume rank of Paymr. on Retired List:—G. Clubb, W. H. Holmes, J. F. Kellas, J. Lyons, W. F. Piltier, C. B., W. Turner, W. S. Whitfield, G. T. Luxton, H. C. Moore, J. M. Swain, J. W. Broderick, G. C. Whitwell, J. Ritchie, H. Hicks, D. C. Ross, H. Carr, H. P. Devereux, J. Mantle, E. Bates, C. T. Ellington, C. Hughes.

Hon. Asst. Payms. allowed to resume rank of Asst. Paymr. on Retired List:—P. B. Troy, J. R. Buckley, G. H. Stansfield, G. Long, A. Boyle, C. Radcliffe, D. H. F. Carter, J. Harty, T. F. Hemsley, A. Thoms.

Hon. Asst. Payms. promoted to Payms.:—W. Bland, W. Hudson, A. S. Hayes, H. C. Richards (May 15).

John Samuel and John Cameron appointed Payms. (May 15).

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 30.

Acting Sub-Lieut. R. Aylen, confirmed in rank of Sub-Lieut. (Dec. 15, 1899).

In accordance with Order in Council of April 1, 1881, Staff-Surg. H. P. Shuttleworth placed on Retired List of his rank (Oct. 23).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 1.

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. G. A. H. Curtis to be Lieut. (Nov. 27).

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 3.

Royal Marine Light Infantry.—Lieut. R. F. Willis to be Capt., vice Goddard, promoted (Nov. 1).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 4.

Engrs. promoted to Chief Engr.:—G. W. Murray (Oct. 31) and W. G. Ludgate (Nov. 1).

Clerk F. Hird promoted to Asst.-Paymr. (Oct. 19).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. H. G. Evans to be Lieut. (Nov. 29).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 5.

Royal Marine Artillery.—Capt. A. T. Schreiber seconded for service as Adj. of Auxiliary Forces (Dec. 1).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 6.

Sub-Lieut. C. C. Johnson promoted to Lieut. (Oct. 15).

Acting Sub-Lieut. F. B. Favell confirmed in rank of Sub-Lieut. (Dec. 25, 1899).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. J. Dobson to be Lieut. (Dec. 4).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 30.

Lieutenants R.N.R.—J. M. Buggé to Royal Oak, for twelve months' training (Nov. 30); A. C. Baker (Acting) to Sans Pareil, to complete twelve months' service (undated).

Sub-Lieutenants.—C. Johnson to Vivid, for Leven; H. N. Key to Victory, for Sylvia (Nov. 29).

Fleet Engineers.—T. Rule to Vivid, for Temeraire; J. R. J. Pedrick to Cambridge, for Conqueror (Nov. 29); W. G. Parsons to Alexandra; W. H. Pibworth to Duke of Wellington, for Swiftsure; H. S. Rashbrook to Vivid, for Bellerophon (Nov. 30).

Chief Engineers.—J. T. H. Ward to Pembroke, for Northumberland, W. F. Hinchliff to Duke of Wellington, for Iron Duke (Nov. 30).

Engineers.—B. W. Martell to Duke of Wellington, J. E. Moorshead to Victory, for Vulture (Nov. 27).

Naval Instructors.—A. W. Veater, B.A., to Astræa, F. H. Batchelor to Victorious (Nov. 28).

Staff Paymaster.—W. C. Gillies to St. Vincent (Jan. 5, 1901).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 3.

Lieutenant.—C. W. Robinson to Duke of Wellington (Dec. 10).

Fleet Paymaster.—S. R. G. Sandys to Warspite (Dec. 3).

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd.
32, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteeens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 4.

Fleet Engineer.—T. Rule to Europa (lent) (Dec. 4).
Chief Engineer.—T. R. Reynolds to Duke of Wellington for Glatton (Dec. 4).

Assistant Paymasters (in charge).—A. E. B. Hosken to Torch, G. P. Wilson to Ringdove (Nov. 23).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 5.

Lieutenants and Commanders.—G. de L. O. Johnson to Pembroke, for Salmon; R. J. Stopford to Pembroke, for Angler (Nov. 16).

Lieutenants.—R. R. Gosset to Pembroke (Dec. 1); J. T. Shenton to Excellent, for Hero (N.), for duty in reserve (Dec. 8).

Sub-Lieutenants.—R. N. R. G. Alcock to Nile (as acting), to complete twelve months' service (Dec. 9).

Midshipmen.—R. S. Hemlett, G. H. J. Parker to Pembroke, for Salmon (Nov. 16).

Surgeons.—A. S. G. Bell to Boscawen for Minotaur (Dec. 5).

Fleet Paymasters.—H. W. Hunt to Rodney, for Leith; and Clyde Coastguard District (undated), H. Dawson to Crescent, A. Turner to Majestic, H. A. Malaher to Jupiter (Dec. 4).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 7.

Sub-Lieutenants.—E. W. Harbord to Centurion, J. M. Willcocks to Nile, for Panther (Dec. 5).

CHANNEL SQUADRON REGATTAS.

The following details were officially issued at Gibraltar during the stay of the Channel Squadron at that port, of the pulling regatta, held at Berehaven on Sept. 28, and the sailing regatta, held at Arosa Bay on Nov. 17, 19, and 21.

The winners of cups were:—

Hornby Challenge Cup.—Lieut. Harrold, Pactolus.
Rawson Challenge Cup.—Capt. Foley, Furious.

Cups presented by the Vice-Admiral:—

No. 1.—Lieut. Harrold, Pactolus.
No. 2.—Capt. Foley, Furious.
No. 3.—Mr. Tinson, midshipman, Resolution.
No. 4.—Mr. Mulock, midshipman, Magnificent.
Officers' Pulling Challenge Cup, Pactolus.

In the summary of the number of points obtained by each ship first, second, and third places are taken as equivalent to three, two, and one points respectively, with the exception of the "all-comers" race, (No. 19) in which the first, second, third, fourth, and fifth places are counted as five, four, three, two, and one points respectively. Only places for which prizes were awarded are taken into account, except in officers' pulling races and in the races for the Hornby and Rawson challenge cups. The best-rigged punt competition (No. 20) has not been included in the summary of results, as there was only one entry.

PULLING RACES.

1. Whalers and gigs (4 or 5 oars, duty crews).—Jupiter 1, Pactolus 2, Furious 3.
2. (a) Cutters, 34 ft. (14 oars, duty crews).—Jupiter 1, Hannibal 2, Mars 3. (b) Cutters, 32 ft. (14 oars, duty crews).—Diadem. (c) Cutters (12 oars, duty crews).—Magnificent 1, Furious 2, Diadem 3. (d) Cutters (10 oars, duty crews).—Repulse.
3. Whalers and gigs (4 or 5 oars, stokers).—Hannibal 1, Pactolus 2, Hannibal 3.
4. Cutters (10, 12, or 14 oars, Marines).—Hannibal 1, Jupiter 2, Magnificent 3.

5. Whalers and gigs (4 or 5 oars, idlers and carpenters).—Mars 1, Magnificent 2, Hannibal 3.

6. Pinnaces (Service number of oars, racing crews).—Prince George 1, Repulse 2, Resolution 3.

7. Whalers and gigs (4 or 5 oars, signalmen).—Pactolus 1, Magnificent 2, Hannibal 3.

8. (a) Cutters, 34 ft. (14 oars, ord. smn.).—Hannibal 1, Jupiter 2, Magnificent 3. (b) Cutters, 32 ft. (14 oars, ord. smn.).—Diadem. (c) Cutters (12 oars, ord. smn.).—Prince George 1, Repulse 2, Furious 3.

9. Whalers and gigs (4 or 5 oars, bandsmen).—Magnificent 1, Diadem 2, Repulse 3.

10. (a) Gigs, 32 ft. (6 oars, racing crews).—Majestic 1, Majestic 2. (b) Gigs, 30 ft. (6 oars, racing crews).—Pactolus. (c) Gigs, 28 ft. (6 oars, racing crews).—Repulse 1, Jupiter 2.

11. Whalers and gigs (4 or 5 oars, Marines).—Hannibal 1, Jupiter 2, Mars 3.

12. (a) Cutters, 34 ft. (14 oars, racing crews).—Magnificent 1, Jupiter 2, Mars 3. (b) Cutters, 32 ft. (14 oars, racing crews).—Furious. (c) Cutters (12 oars, racing crews).—Furious 1, Prince George 2, Magnificent 3.

(d) Cutters (10 oars, racing crews).—Diadem.

13. Whalers and gigs (4 or 5 oars, E.R.A.'s).—Hannibal 1, Pactolus 2, Prince George 3.

14. Launches (18 oars, racing crews).—Resolution 1, Hannibal 2, Repulse 3.

15. Cutters (10, 12, or 14 oars, boys).—Furious 1, Magnificent 2, Hannibal 3.

16. Whalers and gigs (4 or 5 oars, racing crews).—Pactolus 1, Majestic 2, Hannibal 3.

17. Cutters (10, 12, or 14 oars, stokers).—Hannibal 1, Prince George 2, Magnificent 3.

18. Skiffs (racing crews).—Magnificent 1, Prince George 2, Jupiter 3.

19. All comers.—Pactolus 1, Majestic 2, Jupiter 3, Prince George 4, Resolution 5.

20. Best-rigged punt.—Majestic.

OFFICERS' PULLING RACES.

1. Skiffs (officers).—Pactolus 1, Magnificent 2, Prince George 3.

2. Gigs (sub-officers).—Majestic 1, Magnificent 2, Hannibal 3.

3. Gigs (challenge cup) (com. and n.e. officers).—Pactolus 1, Hannibal 2, Majestic 3.

4. Skiffs (officers not under 35 years of age).—Jupiter 1, Majestic 2, Repulse 3.

SAILING RACES.

1. Launch (Service rig).—Repulse 1, Jupiter 2, Resolution 3.

2. Pinnace (Service rig).—Resolution 1, Magnificent 2, Majestic 3.

3. Cutter, 12 and 14 oars (Service rig).—Furious 1, Pactolus 2, Magnificent 3.

4. Cutter, 8 and 10 oars (Service rig).—Resolution.

5. Single-banked boats, 6 oars (Service rig).—Majestic.

6. Single-banked boats, (less than 6 oars).—Hannibal 1, Majestic 2, Jupiter 3.

7. Dinghies and skiffs (any rig).—Pactolus 1, Jupiter 2, Hornby Cup. All, except dinghies and skiffs (taney rig).—Pactolus (30-ft. cutter) 1, Resolution (30-ft. gig) 2, Furious (30-ft. gig) 3.

Rawson Cup. All (Service rig).—Furious (30-ft. gig) 1, Pactolus (30-ft. gig) 2, Diadem (26-ft. cutter) 3.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS, ETC.

Ship.	1st.	2nd.	3rd.	4th*	5th*	Points.	Prize money.
1 Pactolus ...	8	5	—	—	—	36	2 s. d. 33 17 8
2 Hannibal ...	7	3	6	—	—	33	27 4 0
3 { Jupiter ...	3	7	4	—	—	29	23 14 0
3 { Magnificent ...	4	6	5	—	—	29	23 3 0
5 Majestic ...	3	5	2	—	—	23	19 5 6
6 Furious ...	5	1	3	—	—	20	25 14 8
7 { Repulse ...	3	2	3	—	—	16	14 10 0
7 { Pr. George ...	3	3	2	1	—	16	17 2 0
9 { Diadem ...	3	1	2	—	—	13	14 8 0
9 { Resolution ...	3	1	1	—	1	13	15 15 8
11 Mars ...	1	—	3	—	—	6	3 12 0

* All-comers' races.

A WOOLLEN serge-like material is shortly to be issued to the troops at home, and in this practically the whole of their parade work will be performed. The colour is described as a "sort of yellowish fawn" not greatly different in shade to the present khaki. Bedford cord of the same neutral tint will be used as riding breeches. It is not intended, however, that the new clothing shall entirely supersede the scarlet, blue, &c., for ceremonial and walking out purposes.

Mr. G. W. S. Howson, for 14 years Science Master at Uppingham School, has recently been appointed Head Master of Holt (Norfolk) Grammar School, an old foundation established by the Worshipful Company of Fishmongers. The Governors are erecting new buildings at a cost of £50,000 to accommodate 200 boys. Mr. Howson is devoting special attention to modern languages and science subjects, which are specially necessary to boys adopting a commercial career.

PREVENTION OF ZYMOTIC DISEASES.—For greater security have the Drainage and Water Supply of your Town and Country or temporary Residence examined and certified by the Sanitary Engineering Company (H. Carter, O.E., Manager), 33, Victoria Street, Westminster.—Fee quoted on receipt of full particulars. Established 23 years. Telegrams: "Sanitation, London."

HENNESSY'S
THREE STAR
BRANDY.

Jas. Hennessy & Co.'s Brandy has the largest sale in the world.
IT IS GENUINE BRANDY.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died).

DEWETSDORP, Nov. 22 and 23.

R.F.A.—13th Brig. Divl. Staff: Missing: 71790 Priest, 53222 Gray. 68th Batt.: Wounded: Lieut. Elam; Sh.-sm. 2670 Beaman; Grs. 27208 Atkins, 78312 Green, 28824 Spilling, 39094 Thomas, 20625 Mason, 42221 Watten. PRISONERS: Major Massey, and 38 N.C.O.'s and men.

R.E.—Wounded: 26807 Barham.

R. Scots.—1st: Wounded: 2817 Dakers.

Gloucester.—Killed: Sgt. 2101 Hember; L.-Cpl. 2944 Browning; Ptes. 3253 Batten, 1563 O'Ryan, 2830 Banting, 5066 Card, 3355 Tanner, 3273 Bond, 2395 Court, 3635 A. Thomas. Wounded: Capt. Wingfield-Digby; Col.-Sgt. 1978 Pearce; L.-Cpl. 1128 Restall; Ptes. 4963 Bulley, 1921 Knight, 2302 Aspdon, 2632 Barnes, 833 Offer, 2640 Perry, 2189 Smith, 783 E. Thomas. PRISONERS: Major Tuffnell; Capt. Fyffe, Menzies, Walshe; 2nd Lieut. Ford; all N.C.O.'s and men, A B and F Co.'s.

H.L.I.—Killed: McGregor, 4274 Cameron, 336 McNair. Wounded: Major Anson; Lieut. Home; L.-Cpl. 5009 Moffatt; Ptes. 4463 Harrison, 5723 Connor, 4998 Dougan, 4347 Kennedy, 1650 Hall, 1966 Wilson, 4559 Davidson, 3176 Johnstone, 2099 Mullen, 3231 Stewart, 3974 Whyte (?3231) Craig, 6498 Gordon, 3058 Kemp, 8102 O'Neill. PRISONERS: 2nd Lieut. Alston and one Co.

Irish Rifles.—Killed: Treklin. Wounded: 2nd Lieut. Cooke-Collis; Ptes. Eustace, 700 Pearson. PRISONERS: detachment, strength unknown.

A.S.C.—Wounded: 13408 Sherrett. PRISONER: 2nd Lieut. McNally. MISSING: L.-Cpl. 8903 Hockey, 14343 Sandison, att'd. 68th batt. R.F.A.

O.R.C. Police.—Wounded: Cpl. Archer. PRISONER: Lieut. Boyle. Total taken prisoners 451 of all ranks.

RHENOSTER KOP, Nov. 29.

W. Riding.—1st: Killed: Lieut.-Col. Lloyd, Ptes. 5832 Harrison, 5142 Wilkinson, 5284 W. Edwards, 3176 Roberts. Wounded: Capt. Acworth; Lieuts. Towns- end, Oakes; Sgts. 1182 Booth, 2097 Mason; Cpl. 2614 Pitt; Ptes. 1509 Andrews, 3612 Venables, 1637 Gilby, 6324 Shaw, 4827 Bryce, 5010 Champlin, 3215 Hains- worth, 4389 Whiles, 2723 Crossley, 5727 E. Edwards, 6356 Neil, 6282 Bentley, 1391 Holland, 2938 Halligan, 2633 Naylor, 5485 W. Smith, 889 Carney, 1323 Howe, 5717 Lee, 3492 Parkinson, 2716 Thompson, 2492 Watterson.

Munster Fus.—1st: Wounded: Sgt. 4127 Minogue; Ptes. 1420 Henley, 6246 Malone, 4226 Heathcote, 2698 Mangan, 6037 O'Connell, 5724 Hanlon, 2811 Sullivan, 5919 O'Gorman, 3124 Doyle, 3441 Doolan.

R.A.M.C.—Wounded: Lieut. Challis.

RIETFontEIN, Nov. 29.

Mounted Infantry, N.Z.—Killed: Sgt. 77 Russell, Cpl. 435 Rodney-Devereux, Pte. 734 Hyde, [Tpr. Openheim. Wounded: Capts. Crawshaw, Godfrey; Lieuts. Mont- gomerie, Somerville, Tucker; Sgts. 383 Street, 418 R. Smith; Cpls. 837 Hagenson, 457 Clews; Ptes. 466 Borlase, 390 Goldstone, 831 Hawthorne, 766 Dyke, 476 Beath, 468 Foreman, 398 Hill, 721 Anderson, 522 McBride, 542 Swainson, 419 R. Brown, 815 Wood. Queensland.—Wounded: Sgt. 230 Austin; Pte. 117 Earl. Bushmen: Queensland.—Killed: 296 Wright; wounded, 243 Lehman. Vict.—Killed: 509 McKenzie; wounded, 611 McCurdy.

R.H.A.: "U" Batt.—Killed: 70586 Blower.

R.F.A.: 7th Batt.—Killed: 293 Molton.

SCHWEIZER RENEKE, Nov. 23 and 29.

Dennison's Scouts.—Killed: Lieut. Streak, Sgt.-Maj. Staynes. Wounded: Capt. Dennison, Tprs. Fourie, Van Wyk, Barton.

Bushmen, N.S.W.—Killed: 473 Handcock. Wounded: L.-Cpl. A. Smith.

R.G.A.—23rd Co. (W.D.): Wounded: 90568 Wilkinson.

Somerset L.I.—2nd: Wounded: 2740 Baily.*

Welsh.—3rd: Wounded: 552 Evans, 576 Davies, 9601 Thomas.

MISCELLANEOUS.

4th D.G.—5158 Thompson (attached 6th D.G.), wounded, Warkfontein, Nov. 30.

6th D.G.—2966 Richards, wounded, Meyerton, Nov. 27.

10th Huss.—3906 Law, wounded, Koster River, Nov. 30.

13th Huss.—4083 Lewis, wounded, Kroonsdrai, Nov. 29; 4107 Ware, wounded, Standerton, Dec. 2.

17th Lancers.—3444 Edwards, wounded; 3637 Bladon, missing near Dewetsdorp, Nov. 26.

Imp. Vco.—6th Batn.: 1501 Adair, wounded, Vaalbank, Nov. 27. 14th Co.: 3228 Wilson, wounded, near Lichten- burg, Nov. 24. 27th: 15314 Fisher, 3708 Griffiths, wounded, Quaggalaagte, Nov. 27. 62nd: 11418 Sgt. Hudson, wounded, Bethlehem, Nov. 17. 76th: 14574 Sgt. Dearle, wounded; Sh.-Sms. 16117 Heath, 16135 Watkins, 13717 Howarth, prisoners, Ladybrand, Nov. 30.

Irreg. Horse.—Lovat's: 8719 Dingwall, killed; 8703 Cameron, wounded, Ofontein, Nov. 27. Kitchener's: 9682 Sgt. McDonald; 108 Waring, killed, Welverdiend, Nov. 20. Roberts's: 2071 Daniels, killed; 4621 Michie, 2361 McMaster, Nov. 23; 1245 Duthie, Nov. 27, wounded, near Frankfort, Nov. 22. Rimington's Guides: Sgt. Webber, killed, Groenfontein, Nov. 25. Marshall's: Wesson, reported killed Oct. 18, has rejoined, now at Kimberley well.

Mtd. Inf.—Thorneycroft's: 3069 Sgt. Carson, 2769 McGrath, 76893 Huxley, wounded, Barnato Kopje, Nov. 24; 916 O'Brien, wounded, near Rietfontein, Nov. 25.

Police.—O.R.C.: Lieut. Dobbie* (late 1st Batn. I.Y.), Tprs. Nell, Viljoen, wounded near Ladybrand, Nov. 30.

Cape: 101 Sgt. Carson, wounded, Luckhoff, Nov. 27.

R.H.A.—"U": Maj. Taylor, wounded, Vaalbank, Nov. 27.

Pom-Poms: 69724 Hains, wounded, Quaggalaagte, Nov. 27.

R.F.A.—5th Batt.: 46543 Norris, 46470 Millett, wounded, Ofontein, Nov. 27.

Aust. Arty.—2610 Gowing*, wounded, near Vryburg, Nov. 24.

Amm. Col.—6540 Cosgrove, accidentally wounded, Machadodorp, Nov. 26.

Cape Rly. Pioneer Regt.—L.-Cpls. 563 Wright, wounded, Brakpan, Nov. 24; 384 Sutherland, prisoner, near Rand- fontein, Nov. 28.

Gren. Gds.—2nd: 6409 Linskill, Harrismith, Dec. 3.

Norfolk.—2nd: 5072 Rushmer, wounded, near Bethany, Dec. 1. 3rd: Lieut. Stott, wounded, Kaffir River, Dec. 1.

Mtd. Inf.: 4469 Sgt. Liddimore, 4903 L.-Cpl. Theobald, 4484 Callaby, 5142 Miffin, wounded, Vaalbank, Nov. 27.

Lincoln.—2nd: 2301 Allan, wounded, Zuirfontein, Nov. 24.

Devon.—2nd: 6429 Howell, wounded, near Rietfon- tein, Nov. 25.

Somerset L.I.—2nd: Capt. Elger, wounded, Schweizer Reneke, Nov. 24.

S. W. Bords.—2nd: 2nd Lieut. Moffatt, wounded, Welverdiend, Nov. 24.

K.O.S.B. Mtd. Inf.—3489 Bretherton, wounded, Vaal- bank, Nov. 27.

West Riding.—2nd Lieut. Harman has been incorrectly reported wounded. 1st: 5681 Land, 5447 Bickerdyke, wounded, near Waterval, Nov. 23.

Oxford L.I.—1st: 3934 Baker, killed; 4634 Green, 5932 Sharman, 6195 Macklin, 6107 R. Jones, wounded; 5917 Taylor 6016 Thorne, 4646 Merry, 2990 Keene, 3372, Lundie, 2024 Parker, 5937 Jarvis, missing, Gottenburg, Dec. 1.

Derby Mtd. Inf.—2601 Sgt.-Major Dexter,* wounded, Vaalbank, Nov. 27.

Manchester.—2nd: 2005 Hurst, reported died, wounds, May 29, is now reported to be alive; 18 Sutcliffe, 2318 Robinson, missing, have rejoined.

Durham L.I.—3rd: 4870 Goodwin,* wounded, Vredefort Road, Nov. 29.

Seaforths.—2nd: Lieut. Clive, 4233 Kermack, 2361 Taylor, wounded, Ofontein, Nov. 27.

Cameron's Mtd. Inf.—3453 Turnbull wounded, Welver- diend, Nov. 24. 1st: 3835 Rippingale, missing, July 17, rejoined Nov. 27.

A.S.C.—8495 Hamm (att'd. R.A.), wounded Welver- diend, Nov. 24.

A.V.D.—Vet.-Surg. Moore met with serious accident whilst riding at Standerton; Lieut. Conder, wounded, Quaggalaagte, Nov. 27.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

5th D.G.—3624 Cruse, wounds, Howick, Dec. 1.

4th Huss.—2643 Thirron, Middelburg, Nov. 25.

10th Huss.—3247 Hornsey, Rensburg, Jan. 6, 3654 Cpl. Widdison, Apl. 15, 2863 Walker, Apl. 24, Bloemfontein.

Imp. Vco.—15583 Smith, Heilbron, Dec. 1. 3rd Co.: 5629 Williams, Howick, Nov. 30. 15th: 3345 Sh.-Sm. Willey, Mafeking, Dec. 3. 23rd: 2718 Dransfield.

Kimberley, Nov. 27.

Mtd. Inf.—Thorneycroft's: 7883 Butler, Standerton, Nov. 30. Vict.: 364 L.-Sgt. McGowan, Kustenburg, Dec. 1.

Irreg. Horse.—Kitchener's: Lieut. Berghuys, wound, Krugersdorp. I.L.H.: 225 Sgt. Wellstead, wounds, Johannesburg, Nov. 25. N.Z. Rough Riders: 1501 Yorke, Kimberley, Nov. 30. Roberts's: 4621 Michie, wounds, Johannesburg, Nov. 26. N.S.W. Bushmen: 939 Morris, Klerksdorp, Nov. 27.

R.H.A.—"A" Batt.: 6432 Connor, wounds, Lydenburg, Sept. 11.

R.F.A.—Sgt.-Major Stuart (? disease), Witart, Nov. 26; 77490 Pattison, killed, Krugersdorp, Nov. 30. 9th Batt.: 92827 Adams, Bultfontein, Nov. 27. 61st: 87042 Chandler, Lydenburg, Nov. 29. 86th: 7596 Bombr. Wickan, Pretoria, Nov. 28.

R.G.A.—8th Co. (W.D.): 2901 McPartlin, Cape Town, Nov. 29.

Amm. Col.—2nd Div.: 78325 Whithill, shock following operation, Maritzburg, Dec. 3.

R.E.—22435 Trafford, Pretoria, Nov. 28. 11th Co.: 27741 Wenmouth, Rustenburg, Nov. 27. 26th: 5983 Durrance, Pretoria, Nov. 29.

Gren. Gds.—2nd: 2272 Sgt. Way, dysentery, Mooi River, Nov. 27. 3rd: 5016 Pearce, Kroonstad, Dec. 3.

Coldstream Gds.—1st: 2588 Riley, drowned, Stink- houtboom, Nov. 27.

Scots Gds.—2nd: 528 Sgt. Robertson, wounds, Harri- smith, Nov. 29.

R. Scots.—1st: 6499 J. Smith, accidentally killed, Burghersdorp, Mar. 8.

Liverpool.—5020 Mills, Nov. 29. 1st: 1148 Essery, Nov. 18, Waterval Onder.

Norfolk.—2nd: 2313 Haws, Bloemfontein, May 5.

E. Yorks.—2nd: 6192 Clarke, Bloemfontein, Nov. 30.

Yorks.—1st: 2293 Humphries, killed, Nashbank, Apr. 27.

Scots Fus.—2nd: 5861 L.-Cpl. Smith, Muzarab, Nov. 25; 5895 Walton, Johannesburg, Nov. 30; 3481 Andrews, Kroonstad, Nov. 29.

Welsh Fus.—1st: 2823 Mailen, Kimberley, May 13; previously reported Maden, of 1st Munster Fus.

S. W. Bords.—2nd: 5830 Breeze, Krugersdorp, Nov. 24.

K.O.S.B.—1st: 6160 Martin, Pretoria, Nov. 29.

Inniskillings.—1st: 3065 McShane, dysentery, Middel- burg, Nov. 27.

Worcester.—1st: 5034 Cpl. Moore, wounds, Bethlehem, Oct. 28.

E. Lancs.—1st: 6151 Southworth, Bloemfontein, Dec. 1.

E. Surrey.—2nd: 5365 Wild, killed in action, Feb. 23; previously reported wounded.

D.C.L.I.—Mtd. Inf.: 4453 Lewins, wounds, Waterval Onder, Nov. 28.

W. Riding.—1st: 4690 Relton, Kroonstad, Nov. 30; 6317 Mitchell, Pretoria, Dec. 2.

Border.—3rd: (? 2412) Fitzsimmons (att'd. 2nd Wilts), Pretoria, Dec. 1.

S. Staff.—Vol. Co.: 6873 Walker, De Aar, Nov. 29.

S. Lancs.—1st: 5757 Hughes, Mooi River, Nov. 27; 432 Foley, Ladysmith, Aug. 16.

Welsh.—3rd: Capt. Masterman, malaria and menin- gitis, Prieska, Nov. 28.

Derby.—Mtd. Inf.: 2894 Sgt. Dodd, Wepener, Nov. 27.

Berks.—2nd: 3413 Lait, Pretoria, Nov. 29.

W. Kent.—2nd: 3431 Montague, enteritis, Heilbron, Nov. 29.

K.R.R.—1st: 1187 Telfer, accidental injuries, Pre- toria, Nov. 29; 2031 Puddy, pneumonia, Middelburg, Nov. 30.

Manchester.—9925 Flowers, Standerton, Nov. 27. 1st: 1842 Lilley, Mooi River, Dec. 1.

Gordons.—Vol. Co.: 2 Sgt. Porter, dysentery, Green- point, Dec. 1.

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

OVERALLS A SPECIALITY.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

Cameron's.—1st: 2342 Paterson, Bloemfontein, Nov. 29.
Irish Fus.—2nd: 1496 Silcock, dysentery, Thaba N'chu, Nov. 30.

Leinster.—1st: 3406 Bergin, Vrede, Nov. 29.
Munster Fus.—4th: 2258 Sullivan, Kimberley, Nov. 27
5th: 1844 Wordan, De Aar, Nov. 29.
Dublin Fus.—2nd: 5181 Clarke, lightning, Kaalfontein, Nov. 23.

R.B.—5th: Capt. Marshall, Maritzburg, Dec. 3.
D. Edinburgh's O.V.R.—Horsman, remittent fever, Kimberley, Nov. 30.

A.S.C.—12211 Roper, Wynberg, Nov. 29. 22nd Co.: 10695 Tye, killed, Eshowe, Nov. 29.

R.A.M.C.—12950 Rodwell, Newcastle, Nov. 28; 12611 Beeston, Durban, Sept. 21, 9366 Hewlett, Mooi River, Sept. 1, both accidentally drowned; 13484 Archer, Pretoria, Nov. 28; 13246 Cpl. Howat, Dec. 1; 13065 Turner, pneumonia, Dec. 2, Bloemfontein.

Civil Surgs.—Courtenay Parsons, Harrismith, Dec. 2; A. Elliott (attd. 4th Brig. Div. R.F.A.), Middelburg, Dec. 1.

Imp. Hosp. Corps.—Thomas, accidentally shot dead, Mooi River, Dec. 1; Timmons, bronchitis, Volksrust, Dec. 28.

CASUALTIES IN CHINA.

DEATHS REPORTED.

CHINA.

R.E. Ball. Sect.—24576 Shoesmith, enteric, Peking, Nov. 30.

CEYLON.

K.R.R.—2nd: 837 Lightfoot, malaria, Colombo, Nov. 24.

LADY CRAWFORD, 10, Warwick Square, writes pointing out that the "scandal of destitute families of British officers expatriated by poverty, and seeking relief from those against whom their fathers fought and won their spurs, is far from complimentary to the nation for whom they died." She makes an urgent appeal on their behalf. Their sufferings, she thinks, must soon seriously engage the attention of the British public, the condition of the families being already a subject of discussion abroad.

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.45, and Saturday mornings at 2.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

The Gazette.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 4.

2nd Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. M. C. C. Pinching, from 5th Batn. Lancashire Fusiliers, to be 2nd Lieut., on augmentation.

6th Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. W. J. S. Rundle seconded for service on staff (Sept. 6); promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. J. V. Hermon antedated to Sept. 6, vice W. J. S. Rundle.

12th Lancers.—Lieut. Reginald H. Villiers, from Thorneycroft's Mtd. Inf. (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. A. H. Dunlop, resigned.

19th Hussars.—Capt. A. L. Powell seconded for service on staff (Aug. 28).

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

5th Batn.—Capt. A. B. Crabbe resigns his commission.
7th Batn.—Lieut. C. E. Levita resigns his commission (Sept. 16).

13th Batn.—Capt. J. F. Humby resigns his commission (Oct. 17); Lieut. Hon. V. Gibson resigns his commission.

16th Batn.—Major G. S. C. Jenkinson resigns appointment of second in command (Sept. 27).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Warrant Officers to be Lieuts. (District Officers):—Sergt.-Major Thomas Austin, vice F. R. N. Orford, seconded; Suptndg. Clerk Frederick C. Anderson, vice G. Clark, promoted.

Royal Garrison Artillery.—Capt. F. A. Randolph seconded for service in Army Ordnance Dept. (Nov. 26); Supy. Capt. F. S. Butcher to be Capt., vice V. L. Beer, seconded (Oct. 26); Supy. Lieut. A. G. Haig to be Lieut., vice E. Davidson, promoted (Oct. 10).

Ceylon-Mauritius Batn.—Appointment of Havildar-Major Hurnam Singh to be Jemadar dated Sept. 14, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 5.

MR. TRIPPEL'S ARMY CLASSES

FOR

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, SANDHURST & WOOLWICH,

AT

ONSLOW HALL, RICHMOND, SURREY.

Telegraphic Address: Trippel, Richmond, Surrey.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Major C. Penrose to be Lieut.-Col., vice Brevet-Col. E. Raban, placed on reserve list (Nov. 15).

REGIMENTAL DISTRICT.

Col. E. H. Fitzherbert, commanding 7th (Royal Fusiliers) and 57th (Middlesex Regt.) Regimental Districts, placed on half pay (Dec. 1).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Scots.—Lieut.-Col. E. P. Morgan-Payler placed on half pay; Major W. Douglas to be Lieut.-Col., vice E. P. Morgan-Payler.

Royal West Surrey Regt.—Capt. B. T. Pell seconded for service on staff (July 3).

Liverpool Regt.—Major H. J. W. Guise retires on retired pay; Capt. H. Ross-Johnson to be Major, vice H. J. W. Guise (Dec. 5); Lieut. G. A. Howard-Vyse to be Capt., vice M. S. Adye, resigned (Nov. 3); Lieut. A. C. Lewin to be Capt., on augmentation (Dec. 5). To be 2nd Lieuts. (dated as stated against their names, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 5):—Sergt. Samuel E. Norris, from New South Wales Bushmen (nominated by Governor of New South Wales), on augmentation (May 19); George J. Living (nominated by Governor of Victoria), on augmentation (July 18).

Norfolk Regt.—Capt. Sir E. W. Verner, Bart., placed on tem. half-pay on account of ill-health.

Suffolk Regt.—Lieut. A. P. Frankland seconded for service on staff (Aug. 15).

Bedford Regt.—Lieut. Howard Murray, from Victorian Local Military Forces (nominated by Governor of Victoria), to be 2nd Lieut., vice L. Paxton, killed in action (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 5).

Royal Irish Regt.—Major H. M. Hatchell placed on retired pay (Nov. 30); 2nd Lieut. E. J. Norwood seconded for service on staff (June 13).

Royal Scots Fusiliers.—Lieut. A. St. L. Fetherstonhaugh seconded for service on staff (June 23).

Cheshire Regt.—Capt. Anthony E. R. Tucker retires from the Service receiving a gratuity, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform (Dec. 5); Lieut. P. L. Grove to be Capt., vice W. R. Clifford, seconded (June 4); Lieut. C. G. E. Hughes seconded for service on staff (June 2); promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. F. H. Mahoney antedated to June 2, vice C. G. E. Hughes.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.—Major A. J. Murray to be Lieut.-Col., vice H. C. B. Gray, deceased (Oct. 29).

Worcester Regt.—Pte. Henry T. Sanderson, from Victorian Mtd. Inf. (nominated by Governor of Victoria), to be 2nd Lieut. on augmentation (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 5).

East Lancashire Regt.—Promotion to Capt. of Lieut. A. A. Sanders antedated to June 2, in succession to

BOVRIL

BOVRIL IS THE SUBSTANCE OF THE BEEF NOT THE SHADOW

The absolute purity and great economy of Bovril.

is proven by the fact that over five hundred hospitals and kindred public institutions, including all the most important in the United Kingdom, are regular users of Bovril. Such a practical public endorsement is conclusive evidence of the absolute purity of Bovril, and of its great value as a nourishing stimulant in convalescence.

So unanimous a verdict, and so great a testimonial has never before been given to any similar preparation.

Major C. R. M. O'Brien, who holds a staff appointment; Capt. E. C. Da Costa seconded for service on staff (June 5).

West Riding Regt.—Supy. Capt. K. A. Macleod to be Capt., vice A. M. Whitaker, seconded (Nov. 9); Lieut. William E. Keates, from Victorian Local Military Forces (nominated by Governor of Victoria) to be 2nd Lieut., supy. to establishment (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec 5).

Border Regt.—Capt. E. G. Sinclair-MacLagan to be Adjt., vice Lieut. C. L. Macnab, promoted into Northumberland Fusiliers (July 11).

South Staffordshire Regt.—Major W. H. M. Bent, placed on retired pay (Nov. 30).

Dorset Regt.—Capt. G. F. Beal, from 1st V.B. Devon Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. C. F. Woodward, transferred to I.S.C.

South Lancashire Regt.—Lieut. Guy G. E. Wyllie, V.C., from Tasmanian Bushmen (nominated by Governor of Tasmania), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. M. A. Ord, promoted.

Royal Highlanders.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Capt. Sir E. A. S. Richardson, Bart., from 3rd Batn., which appeared in Gazette of May 1, is cancelled at his own request.

Derbyshire Regt.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Robert M. Megowan, notified in Gazette of Aug. 21, is cancelled on account of ill-health. To be 2nd Lieut. (dated as stated against their names, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 5).—Pte. Aubrey V. Gayer, from Victorian Bushmen (nominated by Governor of Victoria) vice C. E. de la Pasture, transferred to Scots Guards; Trpr. M. B. Rimington, from Rimington's Guides (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), supy. to establishment (May 19).

Royal Berkshire Regt.—Frederick N. Parker (nominated by Governor of Victoria), to be 2nd Lieut., supy. to establishment (dated July 18), but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 5).

Royal West Kent Regt.—2nd Lieut. E. J. Hudson, from 1st V.B. and from Pte. Imperial Yeomanry, to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. J. W. O'Dowda, promoted.

Middlesex Regt.—To be 2nd Lieut. (dated as stated against their names, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 5).—Pte. Hay S. Mitchell, from Royal Canadian Regt. of Infantry (nominated by the Governor-General of Canada), on augmentation (May 19); Cedric R. Hay (nominated by Governor of Victoria), on augmentation (July 18).

King's Royal Rifle Corps.—Capt. C. W. Wilson resigns appointment of Adjt.

Wiltshire Regt.—Capt. N. D. Macdonald to be Major vice H. A. Stock, retired; Supy. Capt. S. H. W. Tordiffe to be Capt., vice N. D. Macdonald (Nov. 28).

Manchester Regt.—To be 2nd Lieut. (dated as stated against their names, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 5).—Sergt. Nowell B. de L. Forth, from Queensland Bushmen (nominated by Governor of Queensland), on augmentation; Pte. Harry C. S. Malet, from Cape Mounted Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), on augmentation (May 19); John M. Molesworth (nominated by Governor of Victoria) on augmentation (July 18).

Durham L.I.—Lieut. E. B. Thresher to be Adjt., vice Capt. B. W. L. MacMahon, whose period of service in that appointment has expired (Nov. 19).

Highland L.I.—Major J. Mitchell-Innes, placed on retired pay (Dec. 4).

Seaforth Highlanders.—2nd Lieut. J. O. Hopkinson, from 1st V.B., to be 2nd Lieut., vice A. D. Bell, transferred to 4th Hussars.

Leinster Regt.—Lieut. H. T. Maffett is seconded for service under Colonial Office (Nov. 14).

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. H. F. Darell resigns his commission (Dec. 5); Lieut. A. C. H. Kennard to be Capt., vice A. D. Stewart, killed in action (Oct. 7).

West India Regt.—Lieut. W. E. Lancaster, from 2nd V.B. Devon Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. R. K. Healing, promoted.

Army Service Corps.—Major A. H. Thomas, D.S.O., to be Lieut.-Col., vice E. E. Heath, temporarily retained under provisions of Article 103A, Royal Warrant, May 30, 1899; Capt. W. I. S. McCormick to be Major, vice A. H. Thomas (Nov. 12). Lieut. to be Capt. —C. E. Watling, vice W. I. S. McCormick (Nov. 12); B. S. Moore, vice H. Colquhoun, removed from Army; D. Parsons, vice G. W. R. Paul, resigned (Nov. 17); H. W. Clinch, vice C. H. Dawson, retired (Nov. 18).

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Major M. O'C. Drury retires on retired pay.

STAFF.

Lieut. Gen. Horatio H., Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, G.C.B., K.C.M.G., R.E., placed on Staff as a Gen. on Staff, to command Forces in South Africa (with local rank of Gen. in that country whilst so employed), from Nov. 29, date on which Field-Marshal Right Hon. Frederick S., Lord Roberts, K.P., V.C., &c., handed over command.

Brevet Col. F. H. Plowden, from Lieut.-Col. Oxford L.I., to be an A.A.G. in India, and to be granted substantive rank of Col. in Army, vice Col. F. S. F. Stokes, whose period of service in appointment has expired (Sept. 2).

Capt. A. W. S. Wingate, I.S.C., to be a Special Service Officer on Staff of China Expedition, with effect from date of assuming duty.

Capt. B. D'A. Corbet, Reserve of Officers, to be A.D.C. to Right Hon. Earl of Hopetoun, K.T., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief of Commonwealth of Australia (Nov. 7).

Appointments to Staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Capt. H. French, Reserve of Officers, to be an Asst. Provost-Marshal, graded as a D.A.A.G., from Feb. 23 to April 28; Capt. H. R. Cumming, Durham

L.I., to be a Railway Staff Officer, graded as Staff Capt. from June 28 to July 18; Lieut. R. P. Cobbold, Reserve of Officers, to be a D.A.A.G., from April 24 to June 22, and from July 19.

Appointment to Staff of Lines of Communication made in South Africa confirmed:—Lieut.-Col. E. St. L. Moore, Imperial Yeomanry, to be a Station commandant, graded as an A.A.G., from Oct. 8 to Oct. 17.

School of Gunnery.—Lieut. H. S. Hearn, R.A., to be 4th Asst. Supt. of Experiments, vice Capt. K. E. Haynes, R.A., proceeded to South Africa (March 14).

Army Chaplains' Dept.—Rev. M. Jones, B.A., Chaplain to Forces 4th Class, to be Chaplain to Forces 3rd Class (Dec. 1).

Army Pay Dept.—Major C. F. H. Medhurst, Paymr., to be Staff-Paymr., vice Lieut.-Col. J. M. Sherrard, deceased (Nov. 7); Lieut. E. F. Despard, from Connaught Rangers, is permanently appointed to A.P.D., with substantive rank of Capt. in Army (July 19, 1898); Lieut. N. G. Thompson, Norfolk Regt., Paymr., granted provisional rank of Capt. whilst serving with A.P.D. (Dec. 29, 1899).

Brevet.—Lieut.-Cols. to be Cols.:—G. F. Francis, I.S.C. (Nov. 5); L. E. Coker, Asst. Commandant and Secretary R.M. Academy (Nov. 30); A. N. Rochford, R.H.A. (Dec. 2); J. H. Rosseter, R.G.A. (Dec. 4).

MEMORANDA.

Major-Gen. Horatio H., Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, G.C.B., K.C.M.G., R.E., to be a Lieut.-Gen., supy. to establishment (Nov. 29).

Major-Gen. A. Walker, C.S.I., Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, placed on Unemployed Supy. List (Dec. 2).

Col. W. L. Greenstreet placed on Retired List, with an Indian pension (Nov. 28).

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. W. J. Irwin, half-pay, retires on retired pay.

Capt. (temp. Capt. in Army) E. J. Whitting, 3rd V.B. Somerset L.I., removed from the Army, Her Majesty having no further occasion for his services.

Capt. D. E. McCarthy Morrogh, 3rd Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers, granted temp. rank of Capt. in Army whilst employed with West African Frontier Force (Sept. 1).

Lieut. A. L. Cartwright, Durham L.I., granted local rank of Capt. whilst employed as a Company Commander in West African Regt. (Jan. 20).

Qmr. and Hon. Lieut. W. C. Perry, R.G.A., granted hon. rank of Capt. (Dec. 6).

Reserve of Officers.—Capt. G. T. Munro resigns his commission.

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Clare (S. Div.).—Capt. P. A. Dwyer seconded for service with Remount Dept. (Nov. 23).

Donegal (S. Div.).—Capt. and Hon. Major D. B. T.

LAZENBY'S

ECONOMIC, CONVENIENT & PORTABLE

SOUP SQUARES

These squares are prepared in 13 Varieties (MULLIGATAWNY, JULIENNE, GRAVY, &c.), and should find a place in every store-room, being invaluable for making soup at short notice or improving stock. They will keep good any reasonable length of time, and are packed in neat boxes containing 6 & 12 Squares.

ONE 6^p SQUARE
WILL MAKE A PINT & A HALF
OF STRONG NUTRITIOUS SOUP

SOLD BY ALL THE LEADING GROCERS & STORES.
Should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the Squares, please communicate at once with the Manufacturers.
E. LAZENBY & SON, LTD., 18 Trinity St., LONDON, S.E.

LAZENBY'S

13 VARIETIES.

SOUP SQUARES

Colonial Types. . .

A Complete Set of the Coloured Military Types which depict the various COLONIAL FORCES, including Australian, S. African, Canadian, &c., &c., making Ten in all, will be sent post free on receipt of 5s. 3d.

Offices: 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

Two Important New Volumes.

Just Published. Price 6s.

CAMPAIGN PICTURES OF THE WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA (1899-1900).

Letters from the Front.

By A. G. HALES.

"Will be read with avidity. . . Pictures full of purple patches . . . real pathos, simple, tear-compelling."—Daily News.

Just Published. Price 12s. 6d. net.

"THE SHOP": The Story of the Royal Military Academy.

By CAPTAIN GUGGISBERG, R.E.

With Numerous Illustrations and Full-page Coloured Plates.

CASSELL & COMPANY, Ltd., Ludgate Hill, London

WHEN BUYING = =
= = A CHEAP BICYCLE

look at the tyres. If they are not

DUNLOP TYRES

the machine is not cheap at any price.

THE DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD.,
ALMA STREET, COVENTRY; 160 to 166, CLERKENWELL ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

Digitized by Google

4th V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Henry F. Compton to be Capt.; Alfred O. Lyon to be Lieut.; Herbert A. Bessemer, late 2nd Lieut. Humber Div. R.E. (Militia), Submarine Miners, to be Lieut.; Angus A. H. Murray and Rowland S. A. Kennard to be 2nd Lieuts.

1st (Pembroke) V.B. Welsh Regt.—Richard A. Nevill, Henry W. Spowart and Thomas G. C. Seymour to be 2nd Lieuts.; Arthur H. Williams to be 2nd Lieut. (supy.)

2nd (Angus) V.B. Royal Highlanders.—Lieut. J. Fairweather resigns his commission. 3rd (Dundee Highland) V.B.—2nd Lieuts. A. E. Barry, J. Cruickshank, jun., J. McL. Tooh, G. S. Rae, J. Wylie, and D. A. Wylie to be Lieuts.

1st (Oxford Univ.) V.B. Oxford L.I.—Reginald T. Lee, Leo Q. T. T. de O. P. Tollemache-Tollemache, Walter Middleton, Charles E. Morris, Reginald C. F. Schomberg, James R. Little, Godfrey A. S. Mure, and Gerald J. R. Henson to be 2nd Lieuts. (extra supy.). 4th (Eton College) V.B.—Major Commandant C. Lowry resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.; Capt. R. S. de Havilland to be Major; Lieut. G. H. J. Hurst to be Capt.; Lieuts. S. F. Fremantle, H. J. W. Bliss, and G. M. S. Smith resign their commissions; 2nd Lieut. A. C. Rayner-Wood to be Lieut.; 2nd Lieuts. R. Benson and W. H. P. Lewis resign their commissions; 2nd Lieuts. V. Le N. Foster and C. F. G. W. de Falbe to be Lieuts.

2nd V.B. Essex Regt.—Lieut. C. W. Denton resigns his commission; Lieut. F. A. Vaizey to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. J. B. Hawkins and W. P. N. Ridley to be Lieuts.

Cadet Corps (Derby School) attached to 1st V.B. Derbyshire Regt.—Guy D. Wilson to be Capt.; Cecil J. Palmer to be Lieut. 2nd V.B.—Major E. Colles to be Lieut.-Col. on increase of establishment; 2nd Lieut. H. A. Hull to be Capt. on increase of establishment; 2nd Lieut. J. H. Twigg and J. S. Pollitt to be Lieuts.

1st Nottingham.—Surg.-Capt. H. G. Ashwell resigns his commission.

1st V.B. Royal Berkshire Regt.—Capt. E. A. Upcott granted hon. rank of Major.

1st V.B. Royal West Kent Regt.—Lieut. W. C. Lewis to be Instr. of Musketry. 4th V.B.—Arthur B. Rogers to be Capt.

1st V.B. Yorkshire L.I.—Capt. H. G. E. Green granted hon. rank of Major.

1st V.B. Middlesex Regt.—Supy. Capt. A. R. Grylls to be Capt. on establishment (Nov. 23); Lieut. M. R. Moritz resigns his commission.

2nd (South) Middlesex.—Appointment of H. H. Comyn as 2nd Lieut. (supy.), announced in Gazette of Nov. 27, bears date Nov. 28.

Prince of Wales's Own, 12th Middlesex (Civil Service).—Capt. H. M. Warne granted hon. rank of Major.

13th Middlesex (Queen's Westminster).—Lieut. H. C. Venning resigns his commission.

Cadet Corps attached 1st London.—Charles F. M. Abbott-Brown to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Wiltshire.—Capt. and Hon. Major T. H. Clark resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps.

2nd V.B. Wiltshire Regt.—Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. E. B. Merriman retires under para. 55a and 111 Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.

3rd V.B. Manchester Regt.—2nd Lieuts. W. H. Andrew, T. J. Barlow, T. Waterhouse, D. H. Wade, C. Barlow, E. Garside, and W. Wilson, to be Lieuts.

1st (Hallamshire) V.B. York and Lancaster Regt.—2nd Lieut. J. D. Webster, J. Wortley, G. Elliot, C. Addison, and E. W. Longden, to be Lieuts.

1st V.B. Durham L.I.—Lieut. L. Ropner to be Capt. 2nd V.B.—John Petherick and John E. Parker to be Capt. on increase of establishment; 2nd Lieut. C. E. Cummins to be Lieut.

5th (Glasgow Highland) V.B. Highland L.I.—Lieut. H. S. Scott resigns his commission; Surg.-Capt. A. MacPhee, M.D., to be Surg.-Major.

4th (Stirling) V.B. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.—Archibald S. Hunter to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Dumbarton.—James T. Goudie and William M. Stewart to be 2nd Lieuts.

14th Middlesex (Inns of Court).—2nd Lieuts. T. F. Hobson, C. N. Wood, W. S. Eastwood, P. N. Fawcett, J. A. Hay, and D. M. Robertson-Macdonald, to be Lieuts.

15th Middlesex (Customs and Docks).—Matthias P. Levy to be 2nd Lieut.

24th Middlesex.—Capt. G. W. Treble granted hon. rank of Major.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Dec. 5.]

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 7.

7th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. A. R. T. Cartwright resigns his commission.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

7th Batn.—Surname of Sergt. A. H. V. Williams, promoted Lieut. in Gazette of Oct. 26, is as now described, and not as therein stated.

8th Batn.—Lieut. C. W. H. Lowther resigns his commission.

19th Batn.—Notification substituted for that which appeared in Gazette of Oct. 26:—Temp. Capt. K. F. MacLachlan, from Adj. to be Capt., retaining temp. rank (Sept. 1).

Royal Malta Artillery.—Lieuts. from Royal Malta Regt. of Militia to be 2nd Lieuts., with local and temp. rank:—S. A. G. Carbone, in succession to Lieut. (with local and temp. rank) C. A. Denaro, promoted; J. Bonavita, vice G. Mompalao de Piro, transferred to Royal Artillery.

Royal Engineers.—Brevet Col. O. V. Boddy, on completion of five years' service as a regimental Lieut.-Col., placed on half-pay; Major J. G. Day to be Lieut.-Col., vice Brevet Col. O. V. Boddy; Capt. B. C. Johnston to be Major, vice J. G. Day; Lieut. G. A. Beazeley to be Capt., vice B. C. Johnston (Dec. 5).

Scots Guards.—Lieut. J. S. Thorpe to be Capt., vice A. C. Bell, seconded; 2nd Lieut. Hon. C. E. Craven to be Lieut. vice J. S. Thorpe (Oct. 20).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal Lancaster Regt.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Lieut. P. H. Milward, from Durban L.I., which appeared in Gazette of May 18, is cancelled at his own request.

Royal Warwick Regt.—2nd Lieut. C. B. Hore to be Lieut., on augmentation (Dec. 8).

King's Own Scottish Borderers.—Capt. David D. Gunn seconded for service on staff (Sept. 10). Supy. Capt. A. G. Fraser to be Capt., vice D. D. Gunn (Nov. 1).

Gloucester Regt.—Capt. R. M. M. Davey seconded for service on staff (Sept. 1).

Worcester Regt.—Supy. Capt. E. Bell to be Capt., on augmentation (Dec. 1); promotions to Capt. of Lieuts. C. H. Palmer, H. Crawshaw, B. O. Richards, R. E. L. Townsend, U. Fitzh. Ruxton, and R. G. D. Nivison antedated to June 20; promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. L. C. Dorman antedated to June 20; 2nd Lieuts. C. C. Messervy, H. A. B. Dealtry, and E. P. Mainwaring-White to be Lieuts. on augmentation.

East Lancashire Regt.—Surname of 2nd Lieut. W. O. Paterson is as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Aug. 24; Christian names of 2nd Lieut. Edward Hillyar Roche Thackwell are as now described, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 2.

Border Regt.—Lieut. A. R. S. Lyon-Campbell seconded for service on staff (Aug. 8).

Royal Sussex Regt.—2nd Lieut. R. F. Finke to be Lieut., vice R. B. Hopkins, promoted into Manchester Regt. (Oct. 10).

Hampshire Regt.—Capt. B. H. Boucher seconded for service as an Adj. of Volunteers (Nov. 12).

Royal Berkshire Regt.—Lieut. R. H. Collins seconded for service on staff (July 13); promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. L. H. M. P. Cockerell antedated to July 12, vice A. H. Buchanan-Dunlop, seconded; Supy. Lieut. W. R. E. Annesley to be Lieut., to complete establishment (Nov. 15).

Middlesex Regt.—Supy. Capt. A. C. J. Campbell to be Capt., on augmentation (Nov. 1); Lieut. D. R. Robinson is seconded for service with A.S.C. (Nov. 17).

North Stafford Regt.—Lieut. T. A. Andrus to be Capt., vice J. W. Saunders retired (Oct. 20).

APSPLEY PELLATT & Co.

21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing Cross, London, W.C.

FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA

MANUFACTURERS

Complete Mess Furnishers.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

BRIGHTON.—PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENT (as homelike as possible) for those requiring Medical, Surgical, and Nursing care. Medical baths, packs, massage, electricity. Own doctor can attend if wished, or their treatment carried out. Close to sea, overlooking private grounds. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO COMFORT, NURSING, DIET. For Terms address, Medical Sup., Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

INDIAN ARMY.—A List of the Coloured Plates comprising the Series of Types of the Indian Army, to be issued during 1901, will be forwarded on application to the Offices of this Paper, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

INVALID or CONVALESCENT OFFICERS received at The Bournemouth Hydro. Airy site overlooking Sea. Sea-water, Turkish Baths, Massage, Billiards, Gymnasium, Resident Physician.—Apply Secretary.

LEAMINGTON.—Large House suitable for Bachelors wishing to Hunt, or for retired Indian Officer with family. Near station. Four large reception, nine bedrooms, two bath-rooms, good offices and kitchens. For Sale or to Let.—Apply, Dakeyne, Clarendon Square, Leamington.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

MILITARY TYPES.—Collectors in search of copies of 1st and 2nd Life Guards types issued with THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE are requested to communicate with 019, c/o ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

PARENTS GOING ABROAD and Others.

CHILDREN RECEIVED in pretty country home of Gentlewoman who is a trained nurse, and has been governess.—Miss North, Green Arbour, near Dunmow, Essex.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS. 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN OF GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grooms, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employons, London."

WANTED, for a North of England Volunteer Battalion, an ARMY QUARTERMASTER, recently retired, to undertake that appointment for the battalion. Services would be actively required for about six weeks during the summer months only.—For further particulars apply C. O., care of the Manager, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

WANTED for the Volunteer Battalion, Leicestershire Regiment, an ORDERLY-ROOM CLERK. Must have had experience.—Apply in writing to the Adjutant, The Magazine, Leicester.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

WANTED.—Cavalry Pattern Saddle and Bridle in good order.—Address, F. C. P., c/o Wilkin's Advertisement Offices, 162, Piccadilly, London, W.

WANTED.—Messman for Officers' Mess.—Apply to the Mess President, Officers' Mess, Queen's Bays, Aldershot.

YEOMANRY PLATES.—A complete set of Yeomanry Plates, together with a copy of the "Imperial Yeomanry" Type, making 33 in all, will be sent carriage paid on receipt of P.O.O. for 12s. 6d. (made payable to the manager), to any address in the United Kingdom. A VALUABLE AND UNIQUE CHRISTMAS PRESENT FOR A MILITARY OFFICER. Give early notice to the Publisher, "Army and Navy Gazette," 3, York Street, London, W.C.

HART AND SON,

60, Artillery Place, Woolwich.

(Established 100 Years), has

FOR SALE

Nearly New

REGULATION UNIFORMS

for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER

OFFICERS

at Low Prices.

Gold and Silver Dress

BELTS, SABRETACHES, and SASHES

for Sale or on Hire.

All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver

Lace, &c., bought for cash.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA,

SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS

TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate. "Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd. Batn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wiltshire Regiment, August, 1896."

Watch and Clock Makers.

"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best if not the very best, in the Discovery. and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., E.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

SWAINE and ADENEY,

WHIP MANUFACTURERS

to the Queen, the Princess of Wales, the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family.

PRIZE MEDALS, 1851, 1862; PARIS, 1878, 1889;

VIENNA, 1873; CHICAGO, 1893.

185, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

CHARBONNEL AND WALKER,

PARISIAN CONFECTIONERS,

173, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

SPECIAL ARTICLES POUR COTILLONS: THE LARGEST AND MOST ARTISTIC COLLECTION IN LONDON

Choicest Selections of FRENCH NOVELTIES suitable for CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

AND

NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

Any Article from 10s. 6d. upwards forwarded upon receipt of remittance.

Royal Irish Fusiliers.—Lieut. H. L. Knight seconded for service on staff (Sept. 14).

Connaught Rangers.—Capt. J. F. Robertson seconded for service on staff (July 1); promotion to Capt. of Lieut. W. A. White antedated to July 1, vice J. F. Robertson.

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. and Brevet Major G. H. Thesiger seconded for service on staff (June 27). Promotion to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts. antedated as follows:—Sir E. I. B. Grogan, Bart., to June 27, vice Brevet-Major G. H. Thesiger; S. H. Rickman to July 27, vice Hon. A. W. de B. S. Foljambe, seconded; M. G. E. Bell to Aug. 9, vice M. W. de la P. Beresford, deceased; P. G. A. Cox to Aug. 30, vice E. G. Campbell, died of wounds received in action; G. M. A. Ellis to Aug. 30; A. C. H. Kennard to Aug. 31, vice W. H. W. Steward, died of wounds received in action. Lieut. G. N. Salmon to be Capt., vice A. D. Stewart, killed in action Oct. 7. Promotions to Lieut. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts., antedated:—N. S. Talbot to June 27; A. A. G. Bond to July 27; R. G. Graham to Aug. 9; E. P. Powell to Aug. 30.

West India Regt.—Lieut. C. G. Skene, from 1st Hereford V.R.C., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. J. A. Greer, killed in action; 2nd Lieut. H. P. Mackenzie, from Milford Haven Div. R.E. (Militia), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. C. L. Thomas, seconded. Candidates nominated by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa, to be 2nd Lieuts.:—Corpl. William F. Gilchrist, from Durham L.I., in succession to Lieut. E. V. Moore, seconded; Trpr. Nicholas M. Gepp, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. G. E. Hewett, promoted; Pte. George W. Walmer, from Col. Lumsden's Corps, in succession to Lieut. H. T. Eckersley, seconded.

Army Service Corps.—Promotion to Capt. of Lieut. D. Parsons dated Nov. 18, not as stated in Gazette of Dec. 4.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Major F. M. Baker retires on retired pay.

STAFF.

Lieut. Hugh, Lord Kensington, 15th Hussars, appointed A.D.C. to Major-Gen. (local Lieut.-Gen.) Sir H. M. Leslie Rundle, K.C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., commanding a Division, Field Force, South Africa, not as stated in Gazette of Sept. 11 (May 7).

Appointment to staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Capt. A. G. Maxwell, I.S.C., to be Camp Commandant, Army Headquarters, and to be graded as D.A.A.G. whilst so employed, vice Capt. C. H. H. Gough, I.S.C., vacated appointment (Sept. 12).

Appointments to staff of lines of communication made in South Africa confirmed:—Lieut. (now Capt.) F. E. Duffus, A.S.C., graded as Staff Capt. whilst an Embarking Staff Officer, from Oct. 9, 1899, to March 9, 1900; Lieut. (now Capt.) P. G. W. Eckford, Royal Irish Rifles, graded as D.A.A.G. whilst Press Censor at Durban, from Oct. 9, 1899, to Feb. 14, 1900; Major N. A. D. Barton, Connaught Rangers, graded as D.A.A.G. whilst in charge of Base Supply Depot, Durban (Oct. 1).

School of Submarine Mining.—Lieut. G. E. J. Durnford, R.E., confirmed in appointment of an Asst.-Instr. (Feb. 3).

Army Pay Dept.—Lieut. E. G. Lees, from Royal Berkshire Regt., permanently appointed to Army Pay Dept., with substantive rank of Capt. in Army (Nov. 10).

Brevet.—Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. S. C. F. Peile, I.S.C., to be Col. (Aug. 10); Capt. A. H. Lee, R.A., to be Major.

Half-Pay.—Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Col. C. O. Hore, from South Stafford Regt., to be Lieut.-Col.

MEMORANDA.

Lieut.-Col. U. G. C. de Burgh, temp. Asst.-Insr. o Remounts, granted substantive rank of Col. in Army (Nov. 24).

Lieut.-Col. H. L. Aylmer, Camp Commandant, South Africa, retires on retired pay.

Temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. in Army granted to undermentioned Officers whilst serving with R.A. in South Africa, antedated to March 24:—Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. E. T. Pottinger, Antrim Artillery; Lieut. Col. H. P. Dittmas, Durham Artillery.

Major G. E. Elmitt, Antrim Artillery, granted temp. rank of Major in Army whilst serving with R.A. in South Africa (March 24).

Temp. rank of Capt. in Army, granted to undermentioned Officers whilst serving with R.A. in South Africa, is antedated to March 24:—Capt. and Hon. Major W. B. Reed and Capt. F. H. Crawford, Donegal Artillery; Capt. W. A. Allpress, Antrim Artillery.

Temp. rank of Lieut. in Army, granted to Lieut. (now Capt.) L. F. Allan, Donegal Artillery, whilst serving with R.A. in South Africa, antedated to Mar. 24.

Capt. L. F. Allan, Donegal Artillery, granted temp. rank of Capt. in Army whilst serving with R.A. in South Africa (June 6).

Temp. rank of 2nd Lieut. in Army, granted to undermentioned officers whilst serving with R.A. in South Africa, antedated to March 24:—2nd Lieut. (now Lieut.) W. H. Milligan, Donegal Artillery; 2nd Lieut. (now Lieut.) H. B. Ayrton, Antrim Artillery.

Officers (temp. 2nd Lieuts.) granted temp. rank of Lieut. in Army whilst serving with R.A. in South Africa:—Lieuts. W. H. Milligan (July 4) and J. O. Fullerton (Aug. 31), Donegal Artillery; Lieuts. H. R. Aytton and R. H. O'D. Paterson, Antrim Artillery (Sept. 28).

Reserve of Officers.—Lieut. J. H. Galbraith (Capt. 3rd V.B. Highland L.I., resigns his commission; 2nd Lieut. G. M. De V. Beauleck to be Lieut.

Army Medical Reserve of Officers.—Surg.-Major A. Kinsey Morgan resigns his commission.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Dec. 8.]

THE ..
"SCOUT" PUTTIE
LEGGING

(Clarke's Patent, 19141-1899.)
SUPERSEDE ALL OTHERS

The Best, Simplest and most Effective Article in the market.

FOR MILITARY AND SPORTING PURPOSES THEY ARE UNEQUALLED.

No loops used. Straps are self-adjusting. Inside portion of calf is smooth for saddle.

Price 25s. per pair
Best blocked pigskin.

Descriptive particulars on application to Patentee—
Thomas H. Clarke, Military Boot Maker, Fermoy, Co. Cork.

A THING THAT EVERYBODY WANTS and EVERYBODY LIKES.

A BOOT HEEL THAT WILL BE ALWAYS EVEN

This is absolutely secured by wearing WOOD'S Automatic Revolving Heel Pad.

Sold all over the World in Millions.

Doubles the Durability of Boots, prevents Splashing, makes the Tread Silent and Soft as a Grass Lawn, reduces Fatigue to a minimum, prevents Slipping. Patented everywhere. Can be fixed while you wait. Prices Ladies' 1s., Gents' 1s. 3d. Improved Quality. Sold by Boot Makers and Rubber Dealers, or post free from the Makers. Send paper size of heel required.

REVOLVING HEEL CO., D. 23, NELSON, LANC.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

THE DE VERE, THE PRINCE OF WALES, THE BROADWALK.

(Opposite Kensington Palace.)

Lift. Electric Light. Everything up to date. Tariff on application.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS,

ARMS, CREST, and ADDRESS
DIES Engraved as Gems, from original and artistic designs.

NOTE PAPER and ENVELOPES brilliantly illuminated by hand in gold, silver, bronze, and colours.

BEST RELIEF STAMPING,

any colour, 1s. per 100.
HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.

All the New and Fashionable Note Papers.
BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS of FARE, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, INVITATIONS and BOOK PLATES, REGIMENTAL BAND CARDS.

A VISITING CARD PLATE

elegantly engraved and 100 CARDS printed for 4s. 6d.

RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

A REVOLUTION IN FURNISHING BY MONTHLY PAYMENTS

WHAT IS NORMAN AND STACEY'S PLAN of Furnishing?
It is a clever scheme, now known and adopted in all parts of the English-speaking world, which enables you to furnish your House or Flat throughout, from Drawing Room to Kitchen (even to the extent of Linens, Silver, Cutlery, Blinds, etc.), out of income, without disturbing your Capital by (instead of paying Cash) dividing the whole amount into 6, 12, 24, or 36 equal monthly payments. During the above-mentioned period you can, of course, at any time (should you wish it) pay off the amount and avail yourself of the cash discount.

NORMAN & STACEY, LD.,
118, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.

Moderate Prices. Free Delivery Town or Country. Call and view Stock before Furnishing locally, and compare Quality and Prices with those of other firms.

CLEVEDON HYDRO.

FULLY LICENSED RESIDENTIAL HOTEL.
COMFORTABLE WINTER HEALTH RESORT.
Reduced Terms to Invalids from the Front.
Bright, Cheerful, Homelike. Well Warmed and Ventilated. Turkish, Electric and other Baths.
MASSAGE AND ELECTRO MASSAGE.
Special arrangements and amusements for the Xmas Holidays.

Climate mild, equable and bracing.
SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.
MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE), QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE.
Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff.
Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS.
For Tariff, address MANAGER.

A WONDERFUL SHILLINGSWORTH!

Buy NAT GOULD'S Sporting Annual.
Just Published, fully illustrated.
"Packed from beginning to end with good things by the best sporting writers."
At all Bookstalls and Booksellers.

Post free, 1s. 3d., from R. A. EVERETT & Co., Publishers, London.

ROYAL UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION,
WHITEHALL.

LECTURE on
WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1900, at 3 p.m.
"A FEW NAVAL IDEAS FOR THE COMING CENTURY."
By ADMIRAL SIR JOHN O. HOPKINS, G.C.B.
The Chair will be taken by
ADMIRAL SIR N. BOWDEN-SMITH, K.C.B.

LECTURE on
THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1900, at 3 p.m.
"THE NATIVE QUESTION IN SOUTH AFRICA."
By the HON. L. ZIEKMAN,
Member of the Cape Legislative Assembly.
To be followed by a discussion.

By Order of the Council,
R. HOLDEN, Lieut.-Colonel, Secretary.

ARMY ALTERATIONS

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date.
SUBSCRIPTION—5s. 6d. per annum, post free.
One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.

ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE.
With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations.
BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer,
Ashton-under-Lyne.

Shi ping.

INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA,
QUEENSLAND, BURMAH,
PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, LIMITED.
BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to CALCUTTA. MADRAS. COLOMBO. RANGOON. MANBITTUS. BOMBAY. KURACHEE. BAGDAD.
ZANZIBAR. MOMBASSA. BRISBANE. BATAVIA. ROCKHAMPTON. TOWNSVILLE. MARYBOROUGH.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH, EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.
Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House, Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock House, Billiter Street, E.C.

P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA, CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICES.

P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS to GIBRALTAR, MARSEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN, BOMBAY, KURACHEE, CALCUTTA, CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.

P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TICKETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.—For particulars apply at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

BIBBY LINE

TO

MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMBO, RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA (via Tuticorin).

LANCASHIRE 4244 Dec. 13 Dec. 20
SHEPESHIRE* 5789 Jan. 10 Jan. 17
STAFFORDSHIRE* 6005 Jan. 24 Jan. 31

Those marked * are twin-screw steamers. These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.

Every possible comfort for first class passengers only.
This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,
28, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and
10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.
ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,
138, Leadenhall Street, London.
C. HOWARD & SONS
45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM,
P.S.C.(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),35, HERFORD SQUARE, S.W.
(one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station
Metropolitan and District Railways).MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION,
SEPT.—OCT., 1900.FIRST—Mr. C. G. LESLIE, 24,060 Marks.
Mr. H. G. SMITH, 14,517 Marks.These were the only two candidates sent up by Col. Needham.Mr. Leslie made 4,384 marks more than any other competitor; the next in order
of merit scoring only 19,676 marks.*During the last three years all Colonel Needham's Pupils have been successful
at the Militia Competitive Examinations.Prospectus and List of Successes on application.HOVE, SUSSEX.*MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,
Late the Border Regiment,
assisted by

Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late R.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.SEPTEMBER, 1900.*NEW REGULATIONS.*SECOND ARTILLERY— Marks.
J. Coldwell-Horsfall 16,790SIXTH INFANTRY—
A. V. P. Marten 16,153

Place.	Name.	Marks.
14th (Infantry)	B. G. A. Townshend	15,109
21st (Infantry)	F. O. Koebel	14,105
22nd (Infantry)	C. F. F. Campbell	13,893

* Military subjects only.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5,862
Infantry	L. Aylmer	5,851
Infantry	K. O. Goldie	5,653
University	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Colonel Russell, Clavinia, Weymouth.

SEPTEMBER, 1900.

Three sent up, three passed, viz.:

Embodied Officers.	Topo.	Mil. Eng.	Mil. Hist. 1st	Mil. Hist. 2nd
a Russell	940	1060	1465	1000
b Fletcher	1020	425	1020	845
c Yardley	900	1510	1255	620

a and c Four weeks' leave before exam. only.
b Four weeks' work interrupted by duty—an absolute beginner.
Col. Russell's three sons passed FIRST TRIAL in 1896-98-1900 respectively, as also have nearly all his other pupils.

PROMOTION EXAM.MILITARY SUBJECTS: Special System of Postal
Tuition adapted to all.
Prospectus, &c., on application.TURKISH & ARABIC.*SCHOLARSHIPS. REWARDS.Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S Double success at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish and Arabic, held on October 16 and 17, 1900, was
with Major W. B. Morton, R.E., Qualified Interpreter at FIRST TRIAL in both Languages, with marks 856 and 643, and mostly prepared by correspondence from London at Moorlian, Punjab,
India.Also Colonel E. Stephenson Essex Regiment,
Qualified Interpreter in Turkish, at First Trial,
with 667 marks; Major H. A. Curtis, R.A., and
FIFTEEN other officers with high marks.
Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.
NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-
STANI, RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.Distance offers no hindrance to success.
Intending Candidates should begin work early.
Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.MILITIA EXAMINATION.*SEPTEMBER, 1900.Lieut.-Col. MOORES prepared for the above
Examination only Four Officers, all of whom have been selected for Commissions, but the marks obtained on this occasion do not in any way indicate a test of the knowledge acquired by
the pupils in the subjects of the examination.
Previous successes under real competition: 145
Officers of the Militia, also 62 Officers for promotion.Pupils are also prepared for WOOLWICH and SANDHURST.
8, Redcliffe Gardens, Clarendon Road,
SOUTHSEA.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,

AND

MR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge),
ECCLEFECHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and
Non-Resident, forALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVER-SITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.
Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate
Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of
many years' successful experience.Careful Individual Attention. Strong
Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical
Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer.
Competent Military Instructor.*SUCCESSES, 1900.Militia Competitive, September.—C. A. de
G. Dalglish, 7th Infantry, 16,114 marks; E.
Corbould-Warren, 10th Artillery, 13,114
marks; both first trial.Woolwich.—None sent up.
Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only
Candidate.Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy.
Cambridge.—Trinity College Entrance; and "Previous" Examination.—J. Cundell.A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare;
and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION.
WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, AND UNIVERSITIES.*MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PRE-
PARES a limited number of PUPILS.RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.RECENT SUCCESSSES.*WOOLWICH.G. F. Farran 8001 marks Dec. 1898.
W. Burrell Hayley 9228 " Dec. 1899.
The only pupils sent up.SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.
Viscount Ingestre 7th Cavalry Cadetship.
C. M. Truman Cavalry Cadetship.E. P. Grant Infantry Cadetship.
G. Winne Finch Infantry Cadetship.
B. H. Leatham Infantry Cadetship.C. E. Hawes Infantry Cadetship.
C. A. Antrobus Infantry.
R. H. Pison Infantry.H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh Infantry.
B. Neave Infantry.
G. Wahab Indian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.Capt. Fuller, late R.E., in conjunction with Mr. A. J. de Havilland
Bushnell, M.A., prepares resident and non-resident Pupils for the above.Address: 1, Orrisdale Terrace, College Road, Cheltenham.MILITIA COMPETITIVE.*WOOLWICH, SANDHURST.*CAPTAIN E. C. HEATH.

33, BOUVERIE SQUARE,

FOLKESTONE.MILITIA COMPETITIVE, SEPT., 1900.

H. B. T. Hume FOURTH INFANTRY	16,557
* F. Robinson 5th Infantry	16,706
E. L. Bowring 12th Infantry	15,149
C. L. Master 18th Infantry	14,526
M. C. Powke 54th Infantry	11,755
H. J. Coddington 55th Infantry	11,728

* Passed under Old Regulations.

Special preparation by Correspondence for
MAY PROMOTION EXAM.

Educational.

THE
COLONIAL COLLEGE &
TRAINING FARMS,
HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.Full information from the Director at above address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria
Street, Westminster.AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,
ASPATRIA.

Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising
Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,
CIRENCESTER.Established by Royal Charter 1845. For Land Owners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists,
Colonists, &c. For Prospectus of College, Farm and Dairy, List of Governors, Professors, Practical Instructors, &c., Courses of Instruction, Scholarships, Diplomas, Gold Medals, &c., apply to the Principal.NEXT SESSION begins TUESDAY, February 5.ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY,
and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS*No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.
Capt. M. M. M. FESTING.Resident and Non-resident Pupils received.
Prospectus with List of Successes on application.
Officers Coached by Correspondence.S. G. KIRCHHOFFER,
M.A., F.G.S., F.R.G.S.(EX-SCHOLAR & HONOURMAN, PEMBROKE COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE),
Receives Twelve Pupils for all Army Examinations.FOUR RESIDENT INSTRUCTORS.*GREAT FACILITIES FOR MILITIA EXAMINATIONS.House stands on gravel soil, in the Pine-wood district. Cricket, Football, and
Tennis Grounds.Terms and List of Successes on Application to
YATELEY GRANGE,
Blackwater, Hants.HOME SCHOOL FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.Home School for the Daughters of Gentlemen
in one of the healthiest suburbs of London. A thoroughly sound modern education is given to a limited number of young ladies, under the careful superintendence of an experienced lady principal,
assisted by accomplished masters and mistresses
(graduates).Pupils are prepared for the London University examinations, Royal Academy of Music, &c., when desired.References kindly permitted to His Grace the Archbishop of York, Sir William Howard Russell,
the Rev. Canon Duckworth, Colonel Swiney,
Judge Gates, parents of pupils, &c.Address—
D. C. L., Ellery, Atkins Road, Clapham Park,
London, S.W.BUSINESS DIRECTORY.*ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1,
CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.*ARMY TAILOR AND MILITARY OUTFITTER.—F. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench
Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.*BREECHES MAKERS AND MILITARY TAILORS.—SAN DON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW,
BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.*GUN AND RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.
PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. 303 Rifles a spécialité.*MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN. Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., Edinburgh (late 27, North Bridge).*MILITARY TAILORS AND BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms
strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.*HOTEL DIRECTORY.*BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well
Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining,
Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.*DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea
Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.*DUBLIN.—SHELBOURNE HOTEL.
First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.*EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate.
An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.*LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families.—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This
Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.*PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL AND QUEEN'S HOTEL.—
Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH

AND

MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge), Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military InstructorsPREPARE RAPIDLY AND INDIVIDUALLY for
the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITIES at*CEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE
HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.R.
Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and 7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT(150 yards from the Station), for Promotion
Candidates and Day Pupils.Telephone, "217, Kensington."
List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed,
will be sent on application.SANDHURST, WOOLWICH
INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SER-
VICE, AND UNIVERSITIES.*MR. J. J. GREVATT

(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY,
for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.A Barrister c/o Staff assists Candidates for
DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.
Prospectus with list of successes on application.

WORK WAS RESUMED AUGUST 15, 1900.

57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

GRESHAM'S SCHOOL, HOLT,
NORFOLK. Founded 1555.Head Master, G. W. S. HOWSON, M.A., late of Uppingham School.Three miles from the sea, and close to Sheringham and Cromer. Splendid climate. The soil is gravel on chalk. Entirely new drainage.Governors:—The Fishmongers' Company and County and Local Representatives.Classrooms, Laboratories, and Workshops are in course of erection, at an estimated expenditure of £50,000.Highest inclusive fees £57 per annum.
Science and Modern Languages taught throughout the School.ARMY AND NAVY GLASSES.
*Arrangements made for Entire Charge of Boys from India.*Yearly leaving Exhibitions of £60 per annum for three years.

Next term commences Monday, Jan. 21.

For further particulars address the Head Master,
who can be seen by appointment at the Hotel
Metropole, London, on Monday and Tuesday,
January 7th and 8th.LLANDOVERY COLLEGE.*ARMY CLASS.An examination for two Scholarships, of £30 and £25 a year respectively, will be held in January at Llandoverly.For particulars apply to Rev. W. W. Poole Hughes, Sherborne School, Dorset (Warden-elect of Llandoverly).SANDECOTES SCHOOL, PARK-STONE, DORSET.A HIGH-CLASS SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen, where the aim is to train girls to be practical, refined, and cultured.Every care and comfort for delicate children.
Large grounds; tennis and fives courts; playing fields. Pupils prepared for the University and other Examinations. Head Mistress, MISS
SOPHIE M. SMITH (National Sciences Tripos, Cambridge), assisted by a highly qualified staff.A limited number of Entrance Scholarships are awarded by competition.TWO GIRLS, 13 or 14 years of age, may be received in good School, at reduced fees, Highgate, N., to fill vacancies
Thorough education, limited number of boarders.
—Apply, H. H., c/o J. and J. Paton, 143, Cannon Street, London.*Publications.*Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Camps, and Examinations.

Now Ready, 5th EDITION.

— THE —

OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH
BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE
AIDE-MÉMOIRE.Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Tranches, and many additions, Field Memos, Coloured and Black
Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Book.
Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.

3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICSRewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.WM. CLOWES and SONS, 13, Charing Cross, S.W., and A. & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.Of whom Reill-Books, and Blocks may be had.
Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.NOTES ON NAVAL STRATEGY AND TACTICS.

By Lieutenant H. STANSBURY, R.N.

PRICE 1s. POST FREE 1s. 1d.

Published by J. J. Kellher and Co., 33, King
William Street, E.C., and 99, Victoria Street, S.W.

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Pantaloon,
Polo Breeches.
11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.

F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.

Established over 80 Years.
EMIGRATION TO CANADA.

Canada offers great advantages to settlers, including free grants of 160 acres of land and improved farms at reasonable prices. Fine climate, no rent, light taxes, free schools, good markets, rapidly developing industries, and large import and export trade. Pamphlets, maps, and full particulars (supplied post free), may be obtained from the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria Street, London, S.W., or from the Allan, Dominion and Elder Dempster Steamship Companies, or their Local Agents, or the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.
Write for particulars.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES,
BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.
The Warehouses, having been built expressly for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities.
JOHN HANES, Manager.
Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete, and single Articles in condition equal to New at one-third original cost.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD.

E. WHISTLER,
11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND
BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.

Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S
The Physician's Cure for Gout, Rheumatic Gout and Gravel; the safest and most gentle Medicine for Infants, Children, Delicate Females, and the Sickness of Pregnancy.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA
The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations, Bilious Affections.

MAGNESIA
Sold Throughout the World.

N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,
Naval and Military Outfitters,
WEST END BRANCH—
19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.
Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard. Do. 5810 Avenue.
Telegraphic Address—"Realistic, LONDON."

New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements
(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)
BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.
REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.
Infantry, 35s. 6d. Cavalry, 38s. 6d.
ON APPROVAL.

The Times of India
OVERLAND WEEKLY EDITION.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
One Year, including postage£1 10s. 0d.
Half Year " " 16s. 0d.
Quarter " " 8s. 6d.
Per Copy " " 8d.
Re-posted from our London Office 1d. additional each Copy.

ADVERTISEMENTS WILL BE RECEIVED
At the "TIMES OF INDIA" Office, Bombay,
OR AT THE

LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.
Where all Orders from all parts of Great Britain and the Continent for the DAILY and WEEKLY Editions of the "TIMES OF INDIA" should be addressed.

Advertisement Rates on Application.
LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET E.C.

REVERSIONS AND LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the
EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand
Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

ALL BUT NEW OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,
for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of
LEWIS MOSES,

65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,
at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms and apparel purchased.

THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.
LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C.,
and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.

ASSURANCES AND LOANS

can be effected by
MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS

in Government Service,
on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business

Annual Revenue exceeds£1,100,000
Bonus Additions Declared exceed£6,750,000
Accumulated Funds exceed£8,400,000
Claims Paid exceed£17,000,000

The Pioneer
(Established 1865).

This leading Indian paper has long held the acknowledged position of being in the very forefront of Indian journalism. Its circulation extends all over the Indian Empire, and is wider than that of any other two daily papers in the country. Subscription to Europe, America, and the Colonies, £6 16s. per annum, post free.

THE PIONEER MAIL
(Established 1874)

Is published weekly in time for the English Mail, and contains a summary of Indian news for Anglo-Indians in Europe.
Subscription to Europe, America, or the Colonies, £2 8s. per annum, post free.

For scale of charges for advertisements address—
GENERAL MANAGER,
PIONEER PRESS, ALLAHABAD, INDIA.
Or the London Office,
13A, COCKSPUR STREET, PALL MALL, S.W.

RICHARD DICKESON
AND COMPANY,
WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND
PROVISION IMPORTERS.
LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, Mansell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVEY: Market Lane, and Queen Street,
ALDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street, FLY-
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse, FEM-
BROKE DOCK: Tremeryck Street, GIBRAL-
TAR: City Mill Lane, CAFE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street, PORT ELIZABETH:
Leakets Warehouses, Eufane Vale. DUBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street, Agencies at
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c., &c.

Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire.
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price Lists
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Canteen
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST
SOCIETY, LTD.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.
Established 1853.

Chairman—C. B. BRYINGTON, Esq., J.P., D.L.
Paid-up Capital£400,000
Debentures and Debenture Stock£207,250
REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS
PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.

W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE
INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL
INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED
FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL,
S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.
Established 1803.

Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.
Paid-up Capital, £300,000.
Invested Funds over £1,500,000.
E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

BLAND & SONS'
"EUOPLIA"
BALL AND SHOT GUN.

A WEAPON OF PRECISION
Shooting Conical bullets up to 100 yards with the accuracy of any rifle; and shot with the pattern
and penetration of a shot gun.
In 12, 16 and 20 Bore. Weight of 12 Bore
about 7 lbs.

AS SUPPLIED TO

H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,
Whose Expedition to the North Pole
WAS ENTIRELY EQUIPPED WITH ARMS
AND AMMUNITION BY THIS FIRM.

And also to
"THE SOUTHERN CROSS" ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION,

led by

G. E. BORCHGREVINK, Esq.

T. BLAND & SONS,
2, King William St., Strand, W.C.
(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)

Works: 41, 42, & 43, Whittall St., Birmingham.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.

EPPS'S
GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
COCOA

BREAKFAST—SUPPER

MOUSELL BROS.,
FURNITURE REMOVERS
AND STORERS,

Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, W.

AND WALHAM GREEN, FULHAM.

BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT

BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.
LEAMINGTON.—Windor Street.
MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.
LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.
LIVERPOOL.—Bronze Street, Russell Street.
EXETER.—London Inn Square.
GLOUCESTER.—Depository and Van and Wagon
Works, Commercial Road.

SECOND-HAND
UNIFORMS
BOUGHT AND SOLD.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UNIFORMS in all conditions at from one-fifth original cost, or sells the same on commission. Mufti clothing also purchased.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2134.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRICE 6D.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—		PAGE
Game to the Last	- - - - -	1205
Yeomanry Reorganisation	- - - - -	1205
An Indian Staff College	- - - - -	1206
On Naval Development	- - - - -	1216
England and Portugal	- - - - -	1216
The French Naval Debate	- - - - -	1217
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes	- - - - -	1207
Army Personal	- - - - -	1209
Army Foreign	- - - - -	1210
Navy Notes	- - - - -	1218
Navy Personal	- - - - -	1219
Navy Foreign	- - - - -	1220
Letters to the Editor—
The Language Question in Malta	- - - - -	1212
Articles—
An Austrian Field-Marshal on the War	- - - - -	1208
The Practice of Stratagem	- - - - -	1208
War Summary	- - - - -	1211
Medals for West and South Africa	- - - - -	1211
The War Vote	- - - - -	1211
Army Mobilisation	- - - - -	1211
Press Views and Opinions on Army Matters	- - - - -	1211
The Peking Legations	- - - - -	1220
Casualties in South Africa	- - - - -	1221
The Gazettes—
Army	- - - - -	1222
Navy	- - - - -	1226
Regimental Intelligence	- - - - -	1212
Reviews	- - - - -	1214
Some Magazines	- - - - -	1214
Forward Policy	- - - - -	1214
Short Notices	- - - - -	1214
Obituary	- - - - -	1212
Naval Intelligence	- - - - -	1226

GAME TO THE LAST.

ANOTHER shock has befallen us with all the dramatic force of the unexpected. The surrender of Dewetsdorp a few weeks back was, we hoped, to end the regrettable incidents that have so often characterised the campaign. Yesterday came the news of a serious engagement, which may not be quite a reverse, but which undoubtedly obliged General Clements to retreat with severe losses in officers and men. The situation at the time of writing is not clearly defined, but we know that Clements, holding Nooitgedacht on the Megaliesberg mountains, west of Pretoria, was fiercely attacked by Delarey, reinforced by Boyer, and driven from his position. He retreated on Heckport, a dozen miles to the south, but seems to have sacrificed four companies of the Northumberland—reported missing some 200 strong. Broadwood, who was to the north of the mountains, seven miles from Clements, with his mounted brigade, hurried forward to assist, but so far the result of his co-operation is not known. Delarey has always had the reputation of being one of the most intelligent and skilful of the Boer leaders, and in this affair he has certainly proved his capacity for war. The gathering together of a superior force, the direction of his attack, and the determination with which it was pressed, must be frankly acknowledged even though success was achieved at our expense. Meanwhile, De Wet and ex-President Steyn, after heavy losses in men and guns and the dispersal of their force at Bothaville on the 6th ult., undertook a fresh raid to the south over the Caledon and Orange Rivers, with Cape Colony as their objective. Success, moreover, would most probably have crowned the daring effort had not British troops held the drifts over the Orange River, and caused the baffled chief of the raiding column, defeated in his object, to turn and change the direction of his march to the north-east. The latest intelligence on the subject from Lord Kitchener showed that the chase of De Wet still continued, Knox having reported on Tuesday from Helvetia, north of Smithfield and the Caledon River, that he was engaged in a running fight with De Wet's force, which was heading, apparently, for Reddersburg, thirty miles to the north-west, where a column was ready to co-operate against it.

The whole story of De Wet's last raid reads like a chapter from romance, and although the hero is our irreconcilable foe we cannot withhold our admiration of his boldness, energy, and resource. The time selected for his descent southwards was well chosen. With discontent growing among the Cape Colony Dutch, whose representative congress was about to meet at Worcester, and with Mr. Kruger in Europe anxiously looking for the support that any real success in the field might give him, a raid across the frontier of Cape Colony, led by so redoubtable a chief, would have been acclaimed as a signal victory for the Boer arms, and might have been the precursor of untold trouble. For the present this has happily been averted, thanks to the magnificent efforts of General Knox's columns and the effective holding of the southern drifts at which the Guards were posted. But the line of the great border river from Basutoland to Orange River Station is not less than 250 miles in extent, and a fresh attempt to force a passage to the south at some point on the western side of the central railway is still not impossible. The drifts are numerous, and a considerable force must be required to effectually guard them all. It is not only necessary to maintain with unabated vigour the pursuit of De Wet until he be forced to stand again at bay and fight, thus affording the only chance of his capture, but also to block the passages of the rivers that cross his line of march, so that his raids for fresh supplies may be cut short and his resources destroyed. Had it been possible to guard the drifts over the Caledon, after its passage south by De Wet at Karreepoort, his subsequent escape to the north-west across the same river would have been prevented, and, shut up within the triangle bounded by the Caledon, the Orange River, and the Basutoland border, his capture would have become a matter more safe to prophecy about than has hitherto been the case. As it was, the difficulties surrounding General Knox's task were enormous. His force, it is true, is divisible into four mobile columns for independent movement in any direction, but with an enemy still more mobile, who during any night, favoured perhaps by storm and torrential rain, can double back on his line of march, as De Wet has repeatedly done, the dispositions of the pursuing, and—as we are accustomed to read—surrounding columns, must be constantly disarranged and rendered abortive.

While the British forces in the Transvaal and Orange River Colonies have been standing to arms at their posts, or following the trail of the flying Boers, the veteran chief who has so lately bidden the Army farewell in words that will long be remembered, has been the recipient of fresh honours at Cape Town. Lord Roberts regretted that he was unable to remain in South Africa until peace could be formally declared, but he was satisfied that under the able guidance of Lord Kitchener, in whose judgment and military skill he had implicit confidence, the guerilla warfare still causing trouble would soon terminate. We have pleasure in recording this expression of unqualified confidence in the distinguished officer to whom Lord Roberts has handed over the supreme command in South Africa, because there has been a disposition shown by certain writers to attribute to the pacificator of the Sudan qualities of sternness which, as soon as his hands were freed, were expected to bear ample fruit in a ruthless and desolating crusade to crush out the guerilla bands. We do not share this view, and believe that we are justified by Lord Roberts's words in rejecting such an estimate of Lord Kitchener's character.

Lord Roberts left Cape Town on Tuesday homeward-bound, and a grateful country is already preparing a fitting welcome for him. The great work, which he reminded his audience at Cape Town he set out to do some twenty years ago when a mistaken policy suddenly stayed his hand, has at length been nearly accomplished. That work was "to dispel, by force of arms if necessary, the aspirations of the Boers to render themselves independent of British control." The issue has now been fought out, with the result that, after a prolonged, stubborn, and valorous resistance, the Republics have been annexed to the Empire of the Queen. We can well understand Lord Roberts's pride at having been the first to command "an Imperial Army," and his satisfaction at the far-reaching results of the war, which, by tapping the military resources of the colonies, has shown the enormous power possessed by a consolidated empire such as ours. Henceforth, as Lord Roberts said, the English and the Dutch must work together irrespective of race, if they wish the country to flourish.

YEOMANRY REORGANISATION.

MR. BRODRICK has taken what may be regarded as a first step in the direction of a reform of our military forces. He has appointed a committee to report on "the future organisation, training, and equipment of the Yeomanry." The committee, which has entered upon its labours this week, consists of Colonels Lord Harris, Royal East Kent Yeomanry (chairman); the Earl of Dundonald, Viscount Galway, Nottinghamshire Yeomanry, A. G. Lucas, D.A.G., Imperial Yeomanry, and L. Rolleston, 3rd Batn. Imperial Yeomanry; Captains the Marquis of Bath, Royal Wilts Yeomanry, and Sir J. Dickson-Poynder, M.P., 1st Batn. Imperial Yeomanry, with Mr. R. H. Brade, of the War Office, as secretary. Lord Harris is an enthusiastic Yeomanry officer, and under his able presidency we may be certain that the committee will devise means whereby the military efficiency of the service will be greatly increased. Even among its best officers there has existed for some time past a feeling that all is not as it ought to be as regards the training, field efficiency, and equipment of the force; that practical instruction has been made subservient to ceremonial movements, and that in the matter of equipment utility is to a great extent sacrificed to show. It will be with these details that Lord Harris's Committee will be called upon to deal.

It is most fortunate that Lord Harris is the commanding officer of a corps which has always been notable for soldierly zeal. In many respects the Royal East Kent Mounted Rifles have set an example of progress, so that the committee cannot fail to derive benefit from the presence at its head of an officer who not only has been in close touch with the Yeomanry, but has on a previous occasion had an opportunity of carefully weighing many of the questions which will now come before him as the outcome of this year's war experience. There are many who think—and there are strong arguments in favour of their view—that our Yeomanry should be converted into a force of Mounted Riflemen, or Light Horse. No doubt this would necessitate longer and more thorough training than is now demanded, but as shooting and outpost duties would be the important features, no great difficulty ought to be experienced in securing the attendance of the men in the non-training period for the purposes of target and scouting practice under that proper system which it will be the business of Lord Harris's Committee to formulate. It must be borne in mind that the duties of scouting can be taught by small parties even better than by big ones, and good marksmanship should be rendered much easier of attainment when the War Office has completed its scheme for the increase of range accommodation throughout the Kingdom. The Boer War has shown how eager young men are to render service in defence of the State and its interests. If asked to join a corps which they felt was something more than simply a country Yeomanry regiment, recruits of the best class would, we believe, always be forthcoming. What men object to is associating themselves with shams, and there has been a feeling hitherto that the Yeomanry has not kept in touch with the times in all respects. That feeling has now been exploded. It is not to be expected, of course, that corps of Yeomanry can rise to the same high standard of discipline and efficiency as Line cavalry, but better education, more refined surroundings, and a fuller knowledge of horses would undoubtedly compensate to some extent for want of those qualities in which the trained soldier must necessarily excel.

It might be difficult to arrange for a constant influx of Line officers into the Yeomanry, but it would be a wise thing to obtain the services of a certain number annually on the same principles as have been laid down for thirty years past in the case of the Militia. Officers of infantry, with a knowledge of mounted infantry duties could not fail to prove a valuable acquisition, in addition to those obtained from the cavalry. The practical experience of men of this class is simply thrown away on the Militia—as matters stand at present; but as field officers and company commanders of Yeomanry their services would be most valuable. Every encouragement, therefore, should be given to county men with the training required to accept commissions in the Yeomanry, for their presence could not fail to have a good effect in every way, more especially now when the curriculum of military training is to be made more severe in the Army. In the way indicated, and under a proper system, a majority of our cavalry and mounted infantry officers might be made most useful. There are among them many earnest soldiers who would rejoice at the chance of keeping up their professional knowledge if it offered any hope of their again seeing active service.

In order to maintain a proper martial spirit and keep up that enthusiasm which is so necessary, it might even be arranged that contingents from corps should be selected occasionally as a composite regiment for active service in small wars. This would be a popular move after what has happened lately at the Cape, for it would show that the War Office was mindful of the manner in which all ranks have this year done their duty. We trust Lord Harris's Committee will deal fearlessly with the question of the expenses of officers. There is nothing which has a more evil effect in deterring county men from accepting commissions in the Yeomanry than the burden which their purses are called upon to bear once they obtain troop command. Having always championed the cause of the Yeomanry, we are glad to find that our opinion of the martial spirit of the force has been so fully justified by the events of the last twelve months. It has proved itself to be a valuable adjunct to our available mounted troops. But it is due to the brave men who have been so well upholding its character in the field, that on their return to their homes they should find themselves associated with comrades who recognise the work they have done. Those assuredly will not do so who resist reform when reform is so urgently needed to render the service capable of performing properly the duties it would be called upon to discharge on any future emergency arising, such as that which brought so many gallant battalions to arms for active service in January last.

AN INDIAN STAFF COLLEGE.

IT has long been felt that a second Staff College should be instituted for India, and the matter has already received the careful attention of the authorities. The present time is one peculiarly adapted for raising the question and emphasising it strongly. In the first place, it has been decided that the number of students at the College at Camberley should be very largely increased. The value of the instruction given, despite all carping criticism, has been substantially proved in the Boer War. It has been the fashion to underrate the services of Staff College graduates, but without foundation in fact, and some of the fallacies held on this matter have been already exposed in these columns. The general verdict of those competent to speak is, that although in some conspicuous cases men have come to the front as leaders without the special training of the Staff College, these men would still have been the better for it, and are willing to confess it. Throughout the campaign commanders generally have preferred to get Staff College men as their assistants. Even without this admission the broad principle remains that wider special knowledge must benefit everyone. So we may expect at no remote date to hear that the advantages of the Staff College will be extended to a much larger number, and it must obviously relieve pressure if arrangements are made to give instruction elsewhere.

There are, however, many more reasons than this for creating a college in India. Some of the principal arguments in its favour have been brought to our notice by influential correspondents on the spot. Among these may be mentioned the expense entailed upon officers in the Indian army in returning to England for study before the competitive entrance examination, and afterwards when residing at the College. It may be urged again that the very highest military training is necessary for officers serving in India. Moreover, the conditions of eastern warfare are in many respects different from those in other parts of the world, and a special training therefore is desirable, which can only be effectively given in India. Another argument raised is to afford a place where loyal Indian Princes eager to fight on the side of the British troops can acquire a high-class military education. After these come the minor, but not less pressing, considerations of the Indian Military Budget, and it is calculated that by abolishing garrison classes and classes for musketry instruction there will be a saving even when taking into account the cost of the new College. It may be hoped that on these grounds the authorities may see their way to meeting the wishes of the Indian Army, wishes which have been already strongly expressed by the acting Commander-in-Chief in India, Sir Arthur Palmer, and by many corps and divisional commanders. The same view, too, has been taken up by our much-esteemed and influential contemporary, the Pioneer, of Allahabad.

The lines upon which the Indian Staff College should be run would probably be analogous to those in force at home. Certain changes which are imminent, more especially with regard to the first selection of students, may, therefore, be mentioned with advantage here. There has been much discussion, and some fault-finding, on this matter, a point which underlies the whole efficiency of the College. Some colour has been given to the complaint that the very best material for the general staff has not invariably come forward in candidature for admission to the College. The most suitable men for the staff are not necessarily those of the highest educational attainments, those, in fact, most likely to win high places in competitive examination. While it is of importance to leave the principle of self-selection untouched, seeing that the desire to improve and seek advancement are very estimable qualities, indicating proper ambition, it should nevertheless be competent for commanders, regimental and other, to strongly recommend officers of whom they have formed a high opinion, and who would go to the College without competing for places. We may expect, therefore, to see a very large increase in the number nominated annually for study. There is a feeling also that while the staff qualification is wisely extended to men who have done good staff work on service, even these men will be the better also for instruction, and they will possibly be subjected in future to a modified course at the Staff College. Lastly, as regards the syllabus and the character of the instruction afforded, it is in contemplation to increase the out-of-door work in preference to the sedentary. Some misapprehension prevails on these points, and it has been thought that the latter exclusively obtained. As a matter of fact, the purely scholastic or sedentary instruction is much less at our Staff College than in those of our Continental neighbours. At the great Staff School at Berlin it extends over three years, all of it indoors and at the desk. With us the term is no more than two years, and during that time there are abundant opportunities for practical out-of-door employment.

Army Notes.

The question of the power to be wielded by Lord Roberts when he assumes the post of Commander-in-Chief has been brought into prominence this week by question and answer in the House. It has been elicited that Lord Roberts made no stipulations when he accepted the appointment, and we are therefore bound to believe that there will be no change in his status, that the much discussed Order in Council of 1895 will remain in force, and that he will continue to be distinctly subordinate to the Secretary of State for War. Some misapprehension, however, prevails as to the provisions of this Order in Council, and it has been held that they were novel in this particular respect. But the supremacy of the Parliamentary chief was vindicated long before 1895; it was affirmed and accepted at the very outset when the Secretary of State for War was first created to absorb the many independent offices that held sway before the Crimea. It was in furtherance of this principle that the Horse Guards staff was brought bodily, from the Duke of Cambridge downward, to Pall Mall in the hope that when under one and the same roof there could be no question which was the superior. That person de jure was no doubt the Secretary of State, but de facto the presence of a Royal prince in the building was speedily felt, and the Duke, almost unconsciously and without any personal effort became the first official in the administration. The innovations that were introduced in 1895 of course were very marked, but they were really in another direction. The subordination as mentioned above was re-emphasised, but it was enforced by steps, the wisdom of which was questioned at the time. The Order in Council decreed, no doubt as the best method of limiting the Commander-in-Chief's power, the aggrandisement of other officials who had been very distinctly his subordinates hitherto. Instead of being not merely the chief but also the sole adviser of his civil superior, he became no more than primus inter pares, the first of many colleagues who were entitled to speak for themselves on their own branches and independently of him.

There were many strong objections to this system as many acute minds foresaw, and these have come out in practice. The first great drawback from the public point of view is the diffusion of responsibility; indeed, it has been almost impossible to fix responsibility at all. Where a non-expert is at the head of a business which he does not and cannot be expected to understand except superficially, if that, and seeks advice from a number of different counsellors, he is little able to choose between the many opinions, often diverse, that are given him; nor can he accurately remember always the exact advice he got from each, and, therefore, cannot throw back upon an individual the responsibility that belongs to him. It is a peculiarity of all questions, administrative and other, that they have many sides, many different points of view. Thus in selecting a new rifle, the relative importance of range, weight, durability, facility in carriage, simplicity of workmanship and so on, must be decided by different departments. Only an expert opinion can collate opinions, sift them, and decide upon their comparative value. It was here that the assistance of a supreme military adviser became indispensable, this was the main function of the Commander-in-Chief under the old régime. In this way the Secretary of State got the essence of good advice, and whether it was good or bad the man who gave it was known and could be held strictly to account for what he recommended. It would be well, therefore, in advocating reforms, to concentrate effort upon those that are administrative and capable of simple and immediate treatment, separating them from those that are constitutionally and practically unattainable, however strongly desired.

A series of excellent articles are now running through the Times, dealing with the lessons of the war, but that of December 7 on "Army Organisation" is rather calculated to mislead. The writer is disposed to blame the military authorities for being "ignorant of the very objects of our military preparations." He quotes Sir Redvers Buller as saying, "We do not know what are supposed to be the potentialities of the British Army." Who can know that within the the Army? The decision can only rest with the nation and those who govern its policy. The plain answer is given, but seemingly in a different sense, when the writer quotes Lord Wolseley: "Before the military authorities can be called upon to provide an army, they ought to be clearly and distinctly what kind of an army is required." All that the heads of the Army can be expected to do is to make the best of the materials provided; the nature and extent of those materials must and invariably have been settled for them by their masters the public. If they have been insufficient, the nation itself and its political rulers must be held responsible; all the more so in that the shortcomings and insufficiency have been repeatedly and persistently pointed out by the soldiers, and as constantly ignored. It is certain to demonstration that the nation never in its wildest dreams contemplated the possibility of a war which would oblige us to put 250,000 combatants into the field. But many far-seeing soldiers did, as a "potentiality," and when they formulated schemes and measures to meet such a demand, were uniformly derided as alarmists and visionaries.

In addition to the local Jubaland garrison and the troops recently despatched from Mombasa under Colonels Ternan and Hatch, the Government has decided to employ Indian troops in the operations against the Ogaden Somalis. It is therefore likely that the punitive operations will be of such a character as to deal effectually with the Ogadens, and will include the occupation of their chief town. Until their recent outrage, when they murdered Mr. Jenner, our sub-commissioner at Kismayu, in cold blood, the Foreign Office had no reason to believe that these people were unfriendly or disaffected. On the contrary, they enjoyed a considerable measure of independence under British rule, which they appeared fully to appreciate. If it be true, as stated, that as many as 4,000 Somalis are in arms, it would tax to the utmost the resources at Colonel Ternan's command, consisting as it does almost entirely of locally raised levies. Fortunately, Colonel Ternan is an officer possessed of much practical knowledge of the country and its inhabitants, but it is doubtful whether he could lay his hands upon a sufficient number of men to do all that is required of him. There is always a fear in risings of this kind that they will spread, and any augmentation of the fighting power of the rebels would, of course, add largely to the dangers, which, it is to be feared, our officers are called upon for the moment to face. In course of time we shall, doubtless, have forces enough on the East Coast of Africa to cope with the native risings to which we are becoming so accustomed. Meanwhile, the Government is acting wisely in employing Indian troops—the more so as they have shown by their services recently in Uganda how well they can fight under East African conditions, and, again, how ready they are to go anywhere and do anything in the service of their Queen Empress. The idea is that Colonel Ternan shall be entrusted with supreme command of operations, and permitted to prepare his own plan of campaign, in consultation with officers on the spot. The force from India will fall, on arrival, into the general arrangements.

We sincerely hope that Mr. Brodrick's promise to "see what can be done" in the matter of granting allowances to officers of the Militia who are given commissions in the Army, will result in something substantial. It would be grossly unfair to these officers if, because they accepted commissions in the Regulars, they had to forfeit the £100 to which they would otherwise have been entitled when the battalions are disembodied. The Secretary of State assured Captain Jessel, who questioned him on the subject, that the matter is under the consideration of the War Office, and we can hardly think that any such injustice of the nature suggested will be perpetrated. Colonel Sir Howard Vincent also drew from Mr. Brodrick on Tuesday an assurance that the allowance of £100 made to officers of the Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteers on their release from active service will apply to non-commissioned officers and privates of the Regular or Auxiliary forces promoted to commissions in the Army for conspicuous gallantry or distinguished service in the field. This, however, is conditional, of course, on their having two years' service.

Numerous paragraphs have appeared in the newspapers during the past few weeks announcing the placing of orders for guns with different firms. Some of the military critics who have been loudest in denouncing the manner in which the army in South Africa was equipped with artillery, have passed some very scathing remarks on what they called the new-found ardour of the authorities in this matter. It was all being done, we were assured, to pacify the public, and grave doubts were expressed that the orders were being placed indiscriminately and without regard for any definite standard. Perhaps the statement made by Mr. Brodrick on this subject on Tuesday will do something to ease the minds of these critics. The Secretary of State announced that all the guns required for the approved establishments have been ordered. As regards the battery of seven Horse Artillery and forty-eight Field Artillery batteries authorised in the spring, all the former and forty-five of the latter have been realised, in addition to the sixteen batteries raised in the years immediately preceding.

There is little prospect of relief for the line cavalry regiments in South Africa at present, nor is there any chance, we learn, of the arrangements which have been sanctioned for the transfer of the 5th Dragoon Guards, Carabiniers, and 9th and 12th Lancers to India being carried into effect for some weeks to come. The War Office is very anxious to dispense with the services of the battalions of Imperial Yeomanry which will shortly have been a year at the front. But here, again, there are difficulties. Nevertheless, an effort is to be made on the earliest possible date to meet the case of the yeomen troopers, many of whom took the field at great sacrifice. It is admitted that they have borne themselves admirably in face of the enemy, and have well maintained the character of their service. The conditions of the warfare now being conducted are such, however, that it is almost impossible to reduce the strength of the mounted troops; but it is hoped when General Baden Powell's police force is more complete that an opportunity may be afforded for giving those officers, non-commissioned officers and troopers who may desire to return to their homes the means of doing so, it being fully recognised that they, not being soldiers in the true sense, have a prior claim to be freed from their military engagement. Their ready response to the call of duty was in the highest sense praiseworthy, and there is no disposition to deny their right to be released from the burden of active service the moment that an improvement in the situation justifies a curtailment of our armed strength at the seat of war. The whole subject will be discussed when Lord Roberts arrives in England. Meanwhile the friends of the officers and men may rest satisfied that orders will be issued for their re-embarkation on the earliest possible date, as it is felt that the duties which they are now called upon to perform, to a great extent, those of local policemen, are not such as it was originally intended for them to undertake. With a view to early action all available cavalry recruits for the regiments at the front are being sent from England, greatly to their satisfaction, for the eagerness of the young soldier to "smell powder" is one of the most encouraging facts with which the Inspector-General of Recruiting has just now to deal.

The nature of the pageant which is, as usual, to be included in next season's Royal Military Tournament, has now, we believe, been settled. It is proposed to represent types of the allied forces which are now serving in the Far East, and this scheme, if worked out with as much skill and taste as in former years, should—to use an Americanism—"draw the town." For the sake of the military charities that benefit by the gate-money, we hope it will do so. The date of the tournament has also been settled—May 30 to June 13 inclusive. The show will be under the general control of the Home District as heretofore, but the more immediate chief will be Major King, who did so well this year.

AN AUSTRIAN FIELD-MARSHAL ON THE WAR.

[We present these views of a distinguished foreign soldier on the South African Campaign as likely to interest our readers, merely premising that we by no means accept them in their entirety.—ED. A. AND N. G.]

In the Kasinoverin of Vienna, on the evening of November 30 last, Field-Marshal Gustav Ratzenhofer held a conference upon the war in South Africa. Among those present were his Imperial Highness Archduke Leopold Salvator, the Chief of the General Staff; Baron von Beck, Field-Marshal Schmidt, Field-Marshal Engel, with many more generals, and some two thousand other officers. The lecturer called attention to the fact that nearly a quarter of a million men and 170,000 horses and mules had been despatched to South Africa, after a voyage of 26 days' duration, embarked in about 280 ships. He considered this movement of troops to the seat of war a marvellous undertaking. It was also worthy of note that the breadth of Lord Roberts's base of operations extended from Cape Town to Pietermaritzburg, about the distance of Vienna to St. Petersburg; that there are no roads, in a European sense, in the theatre of war; that the railways are indifferent, and that his line of communications as he advanced was constantly exposed to and threatened by the enemy. Comparing the opponents, the lecturer described the Boer as by nature an ideal warrior: "he is what we should wish our Austrian soldiers to be like; he does of his own accord and free will what our own soldiers are forced to do by discipline." He arms himself and fights at his own instigation; he is educated to be a good horseman and a fine shot, taking great pleasure in both exercises; he finds his own food, whereas the professional soldier waits till he is fed; he does not cease to delight in warfare even when adverse, and this because he fights for his family, his personal possessions, and his political freedom. The Boer leaders have had, however, to combat certain disadvantages, and chiefly the difficulty of moving their men in large masses. The much-talked-of mobility of the Boers has only been seen in small skirmishes, not in great battles. The lecturer held an entirely different opinion of the British troops. The object of war was indifferent to most of them, their instruction in the art of war was very inadequate, and was not improved by their personal qualities. British officers are excellent, deeply penetrated with the knowledge of the greatness of England, and endowed with courage amounting almost to foolhardiness. As a consequence, the troops have often been led without any tactical prudence, and great loss in officers have ensued without securing the results sought. This has been frequently seen in the actions fought. The troops have sometimes had to retire with 3 to 6 per cent. of casualties in the men, while 12 to 30 per cent. of officers have fallen. During the early successes of the Boers in the first and second part of the war it was common enough to exalt a local militia, such as they were, in comparison to troops. Later experience in the war, however, corrected this view. As regards armament, the two opponents exhibited no marked difference. Rifles and small arms were much of the same description on both sides, but superiority of the English artillery was not so decisively proved as had been expected. The English only possessed cavalry in one sense of the word. With the Boers their infantry acted as mounted infantry, like our dragoons of the seventeenth century. The mounted infantry of the Boers may serve to teach us also to employ "cavalry on foot" in the future.

It cannot be believed that the Boer war will lead to any great change in our present mode of tactics. The experience gained is but a repetition of the discoveries made previously in 1866 and in 1870-71. In every case everywhere the English method of attack was upon the enemy's front, where it could not possibly succeed. [How about Lord Roberts's advance from Bloemfontein to Pretoria?—ED. A. AND N. GAZETTE.] It has been shown clearly that infantry is the chief force in war, and that an army will be judged by what its infantry is really capable of accomplishing. The instruction given to an army should be to attain its object with a minimum loss of life, and there should be no undue sacrifice of officers, which might be assured if all ranks were urged to use their highest endeavour. Bravery is not brought about by exhortation alone, and he who depends on this will often be deceived. In small engagements the British have been seen at a disadvantage to the Boers. Only in the form of night marches and night attacks, intended to surprise the enemy, have the British evinced commendable skill. Such night manoeuvres have not always turned out satisfactorily, however. Some, indeed, terminated in complete rout—witness Stormberg and Magersfontein. The Archduke went on to say that the chief interest in the war abroad was in its reaction upon the general military defence in Europe. He noted that Great Britain, although severely shaken a few months ago, had made immense exertions, and was more self-reliant than ever; yet it was clear that the resistance of a small adversary had taxed England's power to the utmost, and that she was at one time practically defenceless at home, her only safety being dependent on the Fleet.

Finally, the lecturer asked, What will England do for the reorganisation of her Army? "No more than she did after the Crimean war, after the Indian Mutiny, after the Afghan Campaign, plainly, nothing at all. A nation like England is too much tied to her political existence to alter her military institutions. Small measures may be introduced, but there will be no attempt at enforcing general conscription." Yet it might become inevitable, for—viewed by the spirit abroad, the bitter antagonism aroused against the Anglo-Saxon race caused by the rapid growth of Imperialism, both British and American—there was little likelihood of peace in the future.

THE PRACTICE OF STRATAGEM.

Lord Wolseley conveyed a mild rebuke to the officers of the Army when he advocated the subject of study which forms the headline of this article; but if his last words are accepted as the truth they really are, great things may be expected in the future of the tacticians who lead our troops, from colonels to newly-joined second lieutenants. Now, as the subject of ambushes and stratagems of war is as yet but a very barren study, for so few writers outside the ex-Commander-in-Chief have taken the trouble to deal with it, though our troops so often are called upon to deal with the most subtle of African and Asiatic foes, it may be well to preface this article with the remark that when so chivalrous a soldier as Lord Wolseley uses the term "stratagem" he does not imply any approach to the questionable tactics of the Boers, half of whose successes on a small scale have been due to methods not to be commended for imitation.

Now it is a very remarkable fact that in treating the subject of savage warfare, which, after all, with its varied incidents of terrain and tactical positions, is an excellent apprenticeship for larger operations, writers have a good deal more to say about the formation of squares and other such almost obsolete parade movements than concerning the art of out-witting, out-pacing, and out-flanking the probably mobile enemy. But the French, the Germans, and, notably the Spanish troops, are taught the arts of ambush and "espionage" as a matter of course, although the occasions on which they are called to fight with savage or half-civilised foes are out of all proportion to the sum total of our "little wars," into all of which are imported the elements of treachery and guile on the part of our opponents. But on our side we can hardly picture the British scout up a tree in the literal, not the metaphorical, sense of the term, even if our soldiers take it as a matter of course that they shall be fired at from tree-tops and other military crows'-nests. Now the laws and regulations of war forbid no stratagems in which the element of treachery is not clearly apparent. We may not poison streams or rivers or use the white flag to decoy an enemy into an ambush, nor may we commit outrage on the persons of intermediaries, flags of truce, or prisoners of war. But the traditions of the Army are so ultra-chivalrous that soldiers are apt to strain the sense of the recognised conventions of war. Even in these days of smokeless powder and invisible riflemen—so great is the range of modern firearms—we avoid as far as possible the very subterfuges of war, which are the cause of half the avoidable losses of war as practised by the enemy. An officer straight from the battlefields of Natal complained to the writer, that never—or hardly ever—was any attempt made to conceal the numbers and formations of our own troops. He may have had in his mind the grand advance of the army at Colenso, when some brigades advanced in close order, and even in mass to within close range of the Boer trenches and epaulements; but, even so, there are numberless instances of the old heroic frontal attacks, which, after all, do not, in the long run, save time or lives in face of the rapid fire of modern magazine rifles.

Again, if it be allowed, that in central Europe, where are no really "magnificent distances" for the manoeuvre tactics of vast armies, still the science of secret movements is hard to apply. The key to ambushes and diversions is the recognition of local objectives and the necessity for out-pacing the enemy in the race for greater or minor defensive positions. Now, the potentialities of mounted infantry in this practice of stratagem are countless, if properly screened by cavalry and supported by field artillery, for it has been proved over and over again that troops armed with magazine rifles can not only disguise their formations and numbers, when well covered, but can bid defiance to at least five times their number in the attacking zone until their flanks are turned. This opens up a vast field of adventure for thoroughly mobile columns in such countries as Russia and Spain, and even in parts of that historical arena which witnessed the triumph of German arms in 1870-1.

Then, any instructor or officer of British troops knows full well that even in the field-training of squadrons and companies the education of the individual soldier usually stops at the point of determining the unknown in war. The outpost sentry, the picquet officer, the point of the advanced or flank-guard, the senior member of the "officers' patrol," the leader of the convoy, the captain of the strong patrol, are all told too much about their enemy and far too little about the improvisation of methods whereby to define the numbers of, and to locate, the enemy. Now, there are parts even of England where a limited area could readily be defined, in which an "enemy's" patrol or other body of troops might be ordered to advance on a given objective, while a company or squadron with a battery might be ordered to (1) locate this enemy; (2) define his object; and (3) push home the reconnaissance to the stage of estimating his strength. But this is rarely, if ever, practised, and combinations of small bodies of troops of two or more arms with the object of collecting "data" as to the movements and strength of an enemy often known only to be existent but whose objective is unknown, are so rare as to be practically negligible.

But surely this is partly what Lord Wolseley means when he refers to the practice of stratagem. After all half the art of war is the process of deduction and of analysis in order to throw light upon the unknown factors in the enemy's plans. There is no question of loss of dignity in their enquiries and reconnaissances, for what we leave undone in this respect we have no guarantee will be neglected by our potential enemies after the digested lessons of the late war. We do not recognise the term "espionage" in our Army, though it takes its place in the French staff officer's manual and other works. It is in effect the art of secret but armed reconnaissance on the part of very lightly equipped troops, both horse and foot, who so far disguise themselves as to become, if possible, a mere blot in the landscape without trans'orming the rule as to the meaning of a recognised uniform to protect the individual from being shot as a spy pure and simple. Obviously the use of artillery with its cumbersome length of train in these exercises must be confined to very special terrain; but there is no doubt that in the practice of stratagems a vast field of enquiry is open to officers of all arms, and that a most useful universal hand-book for all arms might, with the help of such men as Major-General Baden-Powell, form an invaluable supplement to that well-known author's book on scouting.

TO LET, WANTED, &c., Announcements, will be found on page 1225.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1227.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1227.

Army Personal.

The Prince of Wales and Lord Roberts will attend a Thanksgiving Service at St. Paul's Cathedral on January 3. On this occasion no tickets will be issued by the Dean and Chapter to the general public, as the whole floor of the Cathedral will be required by those officially invited.

An enterprising young contemporary which has the credit of being usually well informed, stated yesterday that some striking changes were imminent in the higher staff at the War Office. The chief of these is the appointment of the Duke of Connaught as Adjutant-General, leaving to Sir Evelyn Wood the reversion of the command in Dublin. The Duke's presence at the War Office would be hailed with much satisfaction in the Service, in which H.R.H. is most popular.

At the same time, and on the same authority, it is announced that the new Deputy-Adjutant-General will be General Kelly-Kenny, at present on his way home from South Africa as fellow-passenger with Lord Roberts in the Canada. General Kelly-Kenny has greatly increased his reputation as a sound, sensible soldier, and he is held in great favour by Lord Roberts.

It is confidently believed that General Ian Hamilton will be the new Military Secretary in succession to Sir Coleridge Grove, whose time, however, does not expire till May 6, 1901. His services, which are deemed extremely valuable, and with good reason, will be retained by Lord Roberts at least until the honours and rewards for the war are settled.

Lord Roberts entered upon his fiftieth year of service in the Army on Wednesday. His lordship's native city of Waterford proposes to restore the old French Church there in his honour, as it contains his family burial-place. The cost will be from £3,000 to £4,000, and is to be defrayed by public subscription. Winchester and Bournemouth are added to the places which will confer their freedom on the gallant Field-Marshal.

When Sir Redvers Buller joins at Aldershot, on January 10, a general rearrangement of staff appointments in that district will be carried out; but the selections will be delayed for a time, as the views of Lord Roberts have to be consulted.

General Sir William Lockhart, who died as Commander-in-Chief in India in March last, is to have a memorial. Sir Henry Seymour King, M.P., writes appealing to the deceased officer's friends and admirers for help towards the fund which is being raised for the purpose, and "it is unnecessary," says Sir Henry, who is acting as hon. treasurer for the United Kingdom, "to set forth Sir William Lockhart's merits as a military genius and a man who attained a singular influence and authority among the tribes of the North-West Frontier. Everyone will remember the extraordinary demonstration which, at the close of the last successful campaign in which he was engaged, was offered to him of their admiration and affection by the Afridis he had vanquished, when they crowded to see him off, and, taking the horses out of his carriage, dragged him to the station. A more pathetic tribute even was the telegram of inquiry they sent when they heard that he was lying ill at Calcutta." Various proposals have been made as to the nature of the memorial, which will depend on the amount subscribed and the general feeling expressed by the contributors. The maximum donation for the United Kingdom is fixed for two guineas, and subscriptions may be forwarded to Messrs. Henry S. King and Co., 45, Pall Mall.

Lord Kitchener's promotion to the rank of lieutenant-general was no great concession, for he headed the list of major-generals of the corps of Royal Engineers, and would have obtained his step in due course to fill the next vacancy. By his promotion to local General in South Africa, his lordship, of course, supersedes Sir Frederick Forestier Walker, who, though he has been a lieutenant-general since September, 1895, holds no local rank as G.O. Commanding the Lines of Communication. General Forestier Walker is fifty-six years of age; Lord Kitchener is fifty.

Lieut.-General H. Kent, C.B., will, we learn, succeed the late General Sir George Willis as Colonel of the Middlesex Regiment. General Kent received his first commission in the 2nd Batn., the old 77th, in 1845, served with it in the Crimea, commanded it for years, and did not retire from command until 1880. He has always taken the greatest interest in its welfare, and is already honorary colonel of one of its Militia battalions.

Lieut.-General Sir Archibald Hunter has succeeded Major-General T. Kelly-Kenny, C.B., in command at Bloemfontein, on the latter's departure for England.

By the retirement of Major-General A. Walker, Sir J. F. Maurice becomes the senior officer of his rank for promotion to lieutenant-general.

Major-General R. Pole-Carew, C.B., who is en route to England from the Cape, is to be entertained by the Cornishmen in London at dinner on his return from active service.

Major-General R. L. H. Curtis, who took up the duties of D.A.G. on the Irish Headquarters Staff in January last as a temporary measure, and was promoted a general officer in April, has vacated his appointment.

Major-General (Colonel) J. B. B. Dickson, C.B., who arrived in England a few days ago, returns shortly to Singapore, to resume command of the troops in the Straits Settlement, and will not, therefore, revert to half-pay and lose his rank, as in the case of other officers who have come home from South Africa, on handing over their higher commands in the field.

Major-General (Colonel) J. P. Brabazon, C.B., who has returned from South Africa, would in the ordinary course have been retired for age last February. Having returned to England he loses, of course, his local rank as Major-General; but his case is to be held over, we understand, for consideration, and there is every prospect of his being saved for four more years of military employment.

Major-General (Colonel) A. H. Wavell has reverted to the half-pay list as a colonel on return from the command of the Brigade in South Africa.

Major-General (Colonel) Bruce Hamilton was to have gone to Ireland as A.A.G. at Headquarters, in succession to Colonel E. J. Courtenay, but for his departure for South Africa. After filling the post for an extra year Colonel Courtenay has now vacated, and Colonel J. Davidson, whose appointment has been announced, has taken up the duties.

Major-General Hector Macdonald, C.B., is to be presented with the freedom of Dundee on his return from South Africa. General Macdonald has been offered the hon. colonelcy of the new 8th V.B. (Liverpool Scottish) of the King's Liverpool Regiment.

Colonel Legge, it is proposed, shall be allowed to retain his command of the Reserve Regiment of Lancers on election to the House of Commons. It would result in inconvenience if the gallant officer were interfered with, seeing that the term of his appointment was only for twelve months, when the Reserve unit will cease to exist.

The retirement of Colonel J. G. Kelly, C.B., I.S.C., which takes effect from the 4th inst., creates another vacancy on the list of Queen's aides-de-camp.

Colonel Sir C. H. Leslie, Bart., I.S.C., has reverted to the command at Cawnpore as colonel on the staff, on being relieved at Allahabad by Brigadier-General St. J. M. Fancourt, I.S.C., on return from leave to England.

Colonel F. Glennie handed over the duties of commandant at Kneller Hall to his successor, Colonel F. Barrington-Foote, on Monday last.

Colonel G. F. Guyon, who has returned to Hounslow to resume command of the double Regimental District there, will retain his appointment for another two years it is believed. All ranks at Hounslow were delighted to see him back, for he has been quite a record command, as both the Royal Fusiliers and Middlesex Regiment have been raised from two to four Line battalions during the time he has been at the head of their recruiting arrangements. The work at Hounslow has thus been enormously increased, but so excellent is the system of administration that everything proceeds with perfect regularity, and there is perhaps no district in the kingdom in which matters run more harmoniously.

On relief by Colonel the Hon. F. W. Stopford on January 10, Colonel C. Kennedy, late Suffolk Regiment, who has been officiating as D.A.G. at Aldershot, since December last, will return to the Curragh and rejoin the Staff of Major-General Sir Herbert Chermide as A.A.G.

Colonel W. J. Irwin, who has been on the half-pay list since he vacated command of the 20th Hussars in September, 1899, has retired voluntarily on retired pay, recognising that there was little prospect of any employment for him in view of the constant return of men from the war.

Colonel Sir James Fergusson will again act as Chairman of the Service Members' Committee at St. Stephen's, with Major F. C. Rasch as Secretary. The Committee, which consists, in the new Parliament, of eighty members, will not meet until the House assembles for general business early next year, as debate during the short Session has been strictly confined to the heads of Supply named in the Supplementary Vote.

Colonel Sir F. Cardew, retired list, late of the South Lancashire Regiment, has arrived home on vacating the Governorship of Sierra Leone, in the duties of which appointment Major H. L. Nathan, C.M.G., R.E., relieved him this week.

Colonel G. H. Boyle, late Rifle Brigade, has been granted a two years' extension of command of the Western Counties Volunteer Infantry Brigade, with effect from June 20.

Colonel Sir James Willcocks returned to Cape Coast Castle on Wednesday from command of the Ashanti Expedition. The whole community turned out to receive him, and he was presented with an address. In reply, he said the country was now settled, and miners and traders might safely travel. It was immensely rich from an agricultural point of view, and was probably the richest country in the world as regards minerals, but it required development. Colonel Willcocks highly praised the bravery of all the officers, non-commissioned officers, and African soldiers who had taken part in the expedition and whom, he said, he would ever be proud to command.

Lieut.-Colonel E. W. Fleming, R.F.A., will rejoin the Staff College, when it reopens next month, as Professor of Artillery, to complete his unexpired period of service in that appointment.

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION. SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:

LIFE. { War Risks,
World-Wide.
ACCIDENTS &
DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence
Abroad.
BURGLARY, &c.

Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch. The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.

Special Quotations for Messes.
Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums.
Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.
Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT.

Lieut.-Colonel C. A. Hadfield, A.S.C., has been selected to officiate as D.A.G. and chief staff officer to the Duke of Connaught in Ireland, pending the appointment of a successor to Major-General Curteis, vacated. Colonel Hadfield has had considerable staff experience in Ireland, and is well and favourably known. Since March last he has been officiating as D.A.A.G. on His Royal Highness's staff.

Lieut.-Colonel R. D. B. Rutherford has been selected for the command of the 26th—71st Regimental District at Hamilton, vice Colonel H. de C. Rawlins retired, and takes up duty at once, with the rank of Colonel in the Army.

A committee has been formed to erect a memorial to the late Lieut.-Colonel W. F. Le Gallais, whose death, near Bothaville, in a victorious engagement with General De Wet on November 6 last, is so generally deplored. It is hoped that a sufficient sum (£500) will be subscribed to enable the committee to erect the carved-oak choir-stalls, with commemorative brass-plate, in the newly-restored parish church of St. Brelade, Jersey, a venerable edifice dating back to A.D. 1100, and already containing numerous memorial tablets of the Le Gallais family, whose home, "La Moye," crowns the heights overlooking the old church. The Rev. J. A. Balleine, St. Brelade's Rectory, Jersey, who is treasurer of the fund, will thankfully receive subscriptions.

Lieut.-Colonel E. Stoneman, A.S.C., whose death is announced from South Africa this week, is the officer who was responsible for the provisioning of Ladysmith previous to the arrival of Colonel Ward. His loss will be deeply mourned by all who were present during the siege, for no two men ever worked harder in the face of an enemy than he and Colonel Ward, both of whom brought the utmost credit on the corps to which they belonged.

Brevet Lieut.-Colonel A. J. Arnold, D.S.O., half pay, late 3rd Hussars, was lent some time ago by the War Office to the Portuguese Chartered Company for service at Mozambique. He has lately been in command of an exploring expedition, which has been highly successful, the result of his operations being that a troublesome chief named Makombie has made his submission, and he and two of his Indunas are alone to accompany Colonel Arnold to Lisbon to pay homage to King Carlos. Owing to Colonel Arnold's vigorous action the troubles of the Mozambique Company with the natives are said to be ended. The chief Makombie has for years past resisted all attempts of the Portuguese to open out the country. Colonel Arnold's expedition took the field against him a few months ago.

Major A. F. Montanaro, R.A., and Captains F. Lyon, R.A., P. B. Fuller, 3rd Batn. Leicestershire Regiment; G. W. Briggs, 4th Batn. Royal Irish Regiment; E. St. B. Sladen, 4th Batn. South Wales Borderers; J. W. C. Glyn, 3rd Batn. East Surrey Regiment; C. A. Mitchell, 6th Batn. Rifle Brigade; and H. W. Thompson, West India Regiment, special service officers with the Ashanti expedition, left Cape Coast Castle on the 6th inst. for England, in the Oron.

Major H. N. Schofield, R.A., and Captain C. J. Sackville West, King's Royal Rifles, will rejoin Sir Redvers Buller's staff at Aldershot as A.D.C.'s, and Captain A. R. Trotter, 2nd Life Guards, as extra A.D.C.

Major H. Mullaly, R.E., has been granted an extension of his appointment as D.A.Q.M.G. for mobilisation at the Indian Army Headquarters, a fact which will occasion no surprise to those who are acquainted with the work which he has done during the period of his staff employment. This has been most valuable, embracing, as it does, a complete revision of the mobilisation arrangements. His services in Ladysmith during the siege scarcely need to be referred to.

In consequence of a communication from the military authorities in South Africa, the Secretary for War has decided that no applications will be entertained from prisoners of war on parole in Europe to return to South Africa until the cessation of hostilities.

Army Foreign.

There is an important article in the Militär-Wochenblatt which applies perhaps with equal justice to the conduct of war in South Africa and China, and which should induce some moderation in the violent attacks the German papers are making upon Lord Kitchener in language for which it is difficult to find a parallel. It is well known that reports from China published in Germany as "Letters from the Huns" have attributed great barbarity to the German troops serving under Count Waldersee, and many have not been slow to ascribe the outrages spoken of to the speech which the German Emperor delivered shortly after the murder of his Ambassador. We do not, for our part, believe that the German troops as a body are capable of these alleged cruelties, and in any case they cannot justly be used, as the Wochenblatt says, to discredit the German army—"an army whose pride and glory it has ever been to unite humanity with unflinching energy and iron discipline." The argument of our contemporary is that the laws of war only hold good when they are observed by both belligerents. If they are recognised only by one side, it is then not only a right, but a duty to disregard them, and how far a commander will go in this direction must be left to his own military and moral responsibility. The Wochenblatt proceeds to argue that the greatest energy is the greatest humanity, and that in some circumstances what appear to be acts of cruelty may, in the long run, prevent more suffering than they cause. "For instance, it may happen that a force compelled to rely upon itself, and finding its own resources and those of the country in which it operates sufficing only for its own maintenance, may discover the provision for prisoners to be disastrous, or at least so dangerous that no one could assume the responsibility. In such a position nothing can be done but to take no prisoners or to get rid of them." In support of this view the Wochenblatt instances events in Algeria and Tonking, on the Amur and in Manchuria, and in the Soudan and Turkistan. While using this language, it protests that it will neither palliate nor defend unnecessary cruelty, and is convinced that where wrong has been done the wrong-doers will be punished. Its purpose, however, is to show that the alleged cruelties in China must not be judged by an inflexible standard, but with reference to the general circumstances in which such acts were committed.

A strong agitation has been conducted in Belgium for some years to bring about a reorganisation of the army. It has been urged with much cogency upon military grounds in the Belgique Militaire and in other papers. The cry was taken up by the Socialists upon party grounds, as a means of damaging the Government, and thus the question of military organisation has been thrown into the political arena. The reformers wish to bring about personal service and the abolition of substitution, and the Government has appointed a commission to investigate the related questions. Some attack the Government for taking refuge behind a body, which, it is alleged, is packed by the militarists. But the motion in the Chamber in favour of personal service was lost by sixteen votes, and the Commission has, therefore, entered upon its work. It is to report upon international obligations, as applied to Belgian neutrality; the present state of the defences, including the forts; the effective strength of the army on the peace and war footing; the duration of active service in the various ranks, the strength of the annual contingent, the redistribution of the forces, and the system of recruiting. It is probable that no drastic changes will be made, but the duration of service may be reduced, and the contingent increased.

The Militär-Wochenblatt has now begun to deduce broad lessons from the campaign in South Africa. Clausewitz remarks that war is an instrument of politics—an accomplishment of its aims by means of force—and the Wochenblatt devotes much of one article to showing the interrelation of war and politics in South Africa. It dwells upon the fact that we failed at the beginning of the war in thus making war the tool of our policy, and that the course of our operations became difficult in consequence. But the Wochenblatt evidently does not overlook the great difficulty that must be found in bridging the gap between the last word of diplomacy and the first act of hostile operations, where distant over-sea possessions are concerned. It insists, nevertheless, that a state which pursues a colonial policy must have means in its control to bring about its ends; and thus the lesson for Germany is to extend her fleet and to bring her organisation into line with her colonial necessities. But, if war is the instrument of diplomacy, it is often marred by politics, and the German organ touches upon some incidents in which this has been the case in South Africa, and shows how great was the advantage of Germany in 1870-71 when war and politics were almost in a single hand. The necessity of organisation and peace training is also treated at length, and our contemporary pays a high tribute to the bravery and endurance of the British troops—both officers and men—while animadverting upon some of our failures developed from imperfect organisation. In another article, it turns to the weakness of alliances, illustrating this by the influence of diverse interests and purposes among the Orange and Transvaal Boers. It shows how, though they were fighting for their existence as independent peoples, these conditions led to want of energy and to the failure to assume a strategic offensive. There were moments also, it says, when the English showed a similar lack of energy. The carelessness of Cronje for his flank is but one illustration of the failure of the Boers. In regard to tactical matters, the Wochenblatt has much to say, but its chief point is that modern weapons have given to the defence, in protected positions, a great superiority, and have made frontal attacks, unless thoroughly prepared, extremely difficult.

The committee which has charge of the French Museum of the Army recently met for the first time under the presidency of General de Lacroix, when a high tribute was paid to the memory of General Vanson. The Museum was opened in July, 1897, and the average number of visitors has been 150,000 yearly. Additions are made to the collection nearly every day. Many contributions came from MM. Meissonnier, Detaille, Martel, Charis, and others, and General Vanson has bequeathed to the Museum a collection of more than 20,000 engravings. Two rooms are now opened, but the collection is so large that a third will soon be ready.

The new field gun is the question of the day in Austrian military circles. The Reichswehr deplores that, while other nations are already supplied, Austria is still engaged in experiments, having three or four different guns under trial. In the Neue Freie Presse an artillery officer of high rank discusses the question of material, and strongly urges that nickel steel should be adopted in place of steel-bronze. In Danzer's Armee-Zeitung the same question is discussed, and the same conclusion arrived at. Although all indications would show that a bronze gun is superior, this paper declares that nickel steel is superior, and that the country is too old for experiments. It, therefore, warns the authorities "at the twelfth hour" that nickel steel must be adopted in Austria as in other countries.

NOW READY.

UNDER ENGLAND'S FLAG.

From 1804 to 1809.

By Capt. CHARLES BOOTHBY,

Author of "A Prisoner of France." Containing Frontispiece Portrait of the Author, and numerous Full-Page and other Illustrations.

Crown 8vo, cloth, deckled edges, price 6s.

This book, which comprises the Diaries and Letters of Capt. Boothby, R.E., gives us a vivid picture of the stirring times in Europe between the years 1804-1809. Especially interesting are his notes of personal conversations with such men as Sir John Moore and Sir Sidney Smith.

A. & C. BLACK, 50, Soho Square, London.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Dec. 8.

Lord Kitchener, in a Bloemfontein telegram of Dec. 7, says that De Wet's force is reported to have gone east and north-east from near Odendaal Drift. Gen. C. Knox is following, and reports the capture of a Krupp gun and a waggon-load of ammunition. The Dewetsdorp prisoners, with the exception of the officers, have been released, but have not yet come in. While some women were being handed over to the Boers under a flag of truce near our outposts at Belfast on Dec. 5, a body of 100 of the enemy vigorously attacked a small neighbouring mounted infantry post, which held out under a hot fire till help arrived, when the Boers fled, leaving one man killed. There were no British casualties. A mounted infantry patrol encountered a party of Boers near Thaba N'Chu on Dec. 6, and captured seven prisoners and 10 horses.

Reuter despatches state that Gen. Broadwood's Brigade reached Oliphant's Nek on Dec. 3. Gen. Talbot Coke's Brigade, in a reconnaissance at Drakensberg, collected 100 horses, 600 cattle, and 8,000 sheep.

Monday, Dec. 10.

Lord Kitchener, telegraphing from Bloemfontein on Dec. 8, says he has just received news from Gen. C. Knox in Rouxville that De Wet's force, having failed to carry the Commassie Bridge, which was held by the British, has trekked to the north-east, abandoning 500 horses and many Cape carts. His attempt on Cape Colony has therefore been a failure. He is being pressed on all sides. A Reuter despatch from Aliwal North gives some interesting details of Gen. C. Knox's chase of De Wet. It says there is no doubt that the Boer leader has been thoroughly harried. Natives report that his horses are hardly able to march. He is now in a most dangerous position. Strong British forces surround him on every side, while two swollen rivers bar his passage.

Lord Roberts paid a brief visit to Port Elizabeth on Dec. 7, and then continued his journey to Cape Town, where he arrived on Dec. 7, and on his way to Government House was enthusiastically cheered by an immense crowd.

Tuesday, Dec. 11.

Lord Kitchener, in a telegram from Bloemfontein of Dec. 9, says that the released prisoners, except officers, taken by the Boers at Dewetsdorp, have arrived at Bethulie.

A Reuter telegram from Pretoria reports the murder of two unarmed Highlanders by Boers, and says there is a strong demand for stern repressive measures. The Boer women are particularly bitter, and use every means at their disposal to keep the men on commando.

Lord Roberts was, on Dec. 10, entertained at a public luncheon in Cape Town, when the reception accorded both to him and to Sir A. Milner was of a very enthusiastic character.

Wednesday, Dec. 12.

Lord Kitchener's headquarters have been established at Bloemfontein.

Gen. Settle's column has arrived at Edenburg from Luthoff after a fatiguing march in very bad weather. The column has denuded the country of live stock and grain and brought in 30 prisoners.

Lord Roberts has addressed to the Premier of Cape Colony a memorandum on the subject of farm-burning, explaining the reasons for which the policy was adopted and the limitations within which it is employed, and pointing out that it is in strict accordance with the usages of civilised warfare.

Thursday, Dec. 13.

Lord Kitchener, telegraphing from Pretoria on Dec. 12, said that Gen. Knox had reported from Helvetia, north of Smithfield, that he was engaged in a running fight with De Wet's force. The enemy was moving in the direction of Reddersburg, where there was a column ready to co-operate. Lord Kitchener also reports a successful Boer attack on a mounted infantry post near Barberton, in which the British lost three killed, five wounded, and 13 "missing," who were subsequently released.

Friday, Dec. 14.

A Reuter message from Mafeking stated that on Dec. 8 some of the 10th Yeomanry and the 5th Fusiliers, under Col. Meyrick, were heavily engaged at Wonderfontein. A messenger was sent to Lord Methuen at Kaffirskraal, and reinforcements were despatched from that place. The vanguard was attacked on the left flank eight miles from Wonderfontein, but beat off the enemy. On their return the troops were harassed by snipers. No casualties were reported. A Boer doctor on the same day came into camp to beg for water. He stated that one Boer had been killed and that several had been wounded, one man subsequently dying from his wounds.

A Reuter message from Adelaide said that Lord Kitchener had cabled to the South Australian Government asking that wounded Imperial Bushmen who were convalescent should prepare to return to S. Africa.

With reference to this request the Premier of Queensland stated that that colony would have no difficulty in raising another force of 300 or 400 men to go to South Africa if necessary.

In a later telegram, despatched from Pretoria at 5.25 p.m., Lord Kitchener was unfortunately called upon to give information of a serious reverse to our arms. In this telegram he said: "Gen. Clements' force, at Nooitgedacht, on the Magaliesberg, was attacked at dawn to-day by Delarey, reinforced by Beyer's Commando from Warmbaths, making a force estimated at 2,500. Though the first attack was repulsed, the Boers managed to get on the top of Magaliesberg, which was held by four companies of Northumberland Fusiliers, and were thus able to command Clements' camp. He retired on Hekpoort, and took up position on hill in centre of valley. Casualties are not completely reported, but fighting was very severe, and I deeply regret that Lieut.-Col. Legge, 20th Hussars, Capt. MacBean, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Capt. Atkins, Wilts Regiment, and Lieut. Murdoch, Cameron Highlanders, have been killed. Broadwood's Brigade has not yet been able to report action."

MEDALS FOR WEST AND EAST AFRICA.

It is announced by Army Order that the Queen has approved of the grant of the West Africa medal with a clasp inscribed "1896-98," "1897-98," "1898," or "1899," according to the date of the operations, to the Imperial and Colonial Forces who were employed in any of the undermentioned military operations in West Africa, providing that the claims are approved by the Commander-in-Chief:— In the several expeditions in the northern territories of the Gold Coast between Nov. 27, 1896, and June 14, 1898; in the expeditions in the Hinterland of Lagos between September, 1897, and June 14, 1898; with the force under Lieut.-Col. J. Willcocks, C.M.G., D.S.O., in Borgu, before June 14, 1898; in the Lalap expedition, under Lieut.-Col. Pilcher, from June 8 to 27, 1898; in the expeditions known as Ibouza, Anam, Barua, Bassema, Siana, Angiana, Illah, Dama, all in 1898, and Bula, 1899. The medal, with clasp inscribed "1899," will also be given to the forces employed in the Central Division expedition in February and March, 1899, and in the Benin Territories expedition in April and May, 1899.

The Queen has also approved of the grant of the East and Central Africa medal, with clasp inscribed "Uganda, 1899," to the Imperial and Colonial Forces employed in the operations against Kabarega, in the Uganda Protectorate, between March 21 and May 2, 1899, again provided the Commander-in-Chief approves the claims.

In both cases officers, non-commissioned officers, and men already in possession of the medal will receive the clasp only; and the grant to officers of the Regular and Auxiliary Forces will be confined to those who had official sanction to be present.

ARMY MOBILISATION.

The Secretary for War has approved of several additions being made to the Regulations for Army Mobilisation. In the event of a general mobilisation for home defence the Staff College, Ordnance College, Royal Military Academy, Royal Military College, Royal Artillery Institution, Schools of Musketry Signalling, and Cookery, Army Medical and Army Veterinary Schools will be closed; and courses of instruction will be suspended at Schools of Gunnery, School of Military Engineering, Chatham (as regards officers of Royal Engineers and officers and troops coming in whole or part from other stations or corps), Royal Military School of Music (so far as relates to students or pupils capable of bearing arms), Riding Establishment, Canterbury, and Royal Artillery Riding Establishment, Woolwich. All ranks employed in connection with Gymnasia, Royal Artillery Regimental District Staff, Woolwich, and the Discharge Depot, Gosport, will become available for general duty.

The officers affected by the above, as well as other (unseconded) officers in extra regimental employment, will be given instructions from Army Headquarters, with the following exceptions: Those who have been assigned specific duties in the approved defence scheme of the district in which they are serving will receive their instructions from district headquarters; and those who are borne on the home establishment of units and depôts will, in the absence of orders, rejoin forthwith for regimental duty. Unless other provision has already been made, military staff clerks should, if possible, be allowed to accompany the officers under whom they were serving prior to mobilisation, if such officers in their new positions are entitled to the services of clerks.

Officers on the Indian and Colonial establishment who, at the time of mobilisation, are on leave in the United Kingdom, will report themselves in writing to the Under-Secretary for War.

CAPTAIN GALL,

Late Northumberland Fusiliers.

CAPTAIN H. C. KING,

late of 6, Clifton Gardens, W.

90a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.

Prepare Pupils for

ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS.

Individual Attention Guaranteed. Lists of Successes and Terms on Application.

PRESS VIEWS AND OPINIONS ON ARMY MATTERS.

The Times of Dec. 10 contained a letter from Lord Stanley, M.P., covering a letter from Mr. Maxwell (Standard correspondent in South Africa), which he (Lord Stanley) quotes in corroboration of his evidence before the Hospitals Commission. A previous letter of Mr. Burdett-Coutts implied that Lord Stanley said Mr. Burdett-Coutts would speak ill of the hospitals if he was sent down from the front (Lord Stanley being Press Censor at the time). The Times of Dec. 11 had a letter from the other side. Mr. Burdett-Coutts avers five misstatements of fact and nine errors in Lord Stanley's evidence, the principal misstatement being the charge of blackmail. Mr. Burdett-Coutts says he told Lord Stanley that the hospitals were in a dreadful state.

"A Major," writing to the Morning Post anent the proposition that every battalion should consist of four companies, each commanded by a mounted captain, draws attention to the fact that this scheme, which is in force in Germany, would be a heavy blow to promotion. In the German Army a subaltern is considered fortunate if he gets his company after 20 years' service.

Mr. Walter Long makes an appeal through the Press for funds to send out comforts to the men of the Scots Greys at the front. A former appeal realised £800, but this sum has long been exhausted.

Mr. James Branch, writing in the Daily News of Dec. 13, considers that the wholesale destruction of farms by our troops in South Africa is merely paving for a general South African bankruptcy. From a commercial point of view, this policy is fatal. "The father of a candidate" revealed in Thursday's Morning Post a state of affairs with regard to the Militia Competitive Examination which, as the writer says, may well seem incredible. To induce boys to join Militia regiments notice was given that for each day's service at home and for each day spent abroad 30 and 40 marks a day respectively would be credited to candidates. The War Office did not take into consideration the date on which the various regiments were embodied, that some came out in December, 1899, some not till May, 1900. In order to equalise the conditions between candidates who had passed the literary portion of the examination and those who had not passed any Army examination, the War Office assigned 20,000 marks to the papers set to each class of candidates. Having thus put matters, as claimed, on a level footing, the War Office undid what had been done by dividing the candidates into two classes, and by giving a proportionate number of commissions to each class. As a result, candidates in that class which had previously passed in the literary examination have failed to secure commissions, though the individual marks made by them were higher than the marks of 42 successful candidates in the other class.

"H. K. A.," who signs a long letter in Friday's Morning Post, is all in favour of complete militarism in the War Office. "H. K. A." thinks that party politics should not enter into the question in any way. Then there should be a soldier of the first rank as Minister for War; next the Commander-in-Chief, his colleague—not his subordinate—with an ex officio set in the Cabinet in respect of all military questions, and with complete freedom of action within his sphere of influence; instead of a permanent Under-Secretary, the embodiment of official tradition, a general officer of proved experience and ability, holding office for five years, the word "permanent" to apply henceforward to no important position in the War Office whatever; of necessity a Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, who should be gifted, if possible, with as admirable a talent for learning his lesson and repeating it clearly in the House as was shown by Mr. Wyndham. The places at present held by senior clerks should be filled by staff officers with the grade of assistant adjutant-general, each in charge of a section, and all holding their appointments for five years.

THE WAR VOTE.

The second supplementary Army estimate for the financial year ending March 31 next has been issued as a Parliamentary paper. The sum required is £16,000,000, the additional expenditure being due to the war in South Africa and affairs in China. The sub-headings under which the vote will be asked are:—

Transport and remounts ...	£5,300,000
Provisions, forage, &c. ...	£4,250,000
Clothing, establishments, and services ...	£750,000
Warlike and other stores ...	£4,700,000
Works, buildings, &c. ...	£1,000,000

A note attached to the estimate says:—"The estimate includes provision for the newly-raised South African Constabulary. The adjustment between Imperial and Colonial revenues of the charge in respect of this force as also of the charge for repairs, &c., to railways in South Africa will be a matter for future settlement."

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd., 32, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Cantens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every article of mess requirements.

Obituary.

ARMY.

Gen. Edward Dayot Watson, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, died at 2, Portland Place, Bath, on the 8th inst., aged 84. He joined the Army, March 7, 1837, became Captain June 13, 1849, Major July 21, 1857, Lieut.-Colonel Jan. 1, 1867, Colonel Jan. 1, 1867, Major-General Oct. 1, 1877, Lieut.-General July 1, 1881, and General Dec. 1, 1888. He served in the Indian Mutiny, 1857 (medal), and also in the Bhootan Expedition 1864-65, when he was present at the capture of Buxow and Tazagaon (medal).

Surg.-Gen. George Vernon Currie, I.M.S., retired list, Indian Medical Service, died at 27, Eastbourne Terrace, Hyde Park, W., on the 3rd inst., aged 72. He served in the Indian Mutiny 1857 (medal), in the N.W. Frontier Campaign 1857-58, in the Eusofzai and Swat Expedition 1866 and in the Afghan War 1879 (medal).

Col. Archibald Morteux Calvert, retired list, Royal Artillery, died suddenly at Ockley Court on the 7th inst., aged 69. He joined the Royal Artillery May 1, 1846, became Captain Feb. 17, 1854, Major Dec. 8, 1867, Lieut.-Colonel July 7, 1869, and Colonel July 1, 1881. He served in the Indian Mutiny, 1857 (medal).

Lieut.-Col. Thomas Horsfall Heaton Garrett, retired list, 16th Lancers, of Crake Hall, Bedale, Yorkshire, died at Cairo on the 9th inst. He joined the Army July 13, 1870; became Lieut. Feb. 4, 1871; Captain Feb. 24, 1876; Major July 21, 1882; and after being promoted to a half-pay Lieut.-Colonelcy, Aug. 21, 1889, retired on retired pay. He served with the 14th Hussars, 1870-77, and with the 16th Lancers, 1877-89, and was on the staff from 1889 to 1892, first as extra A.D.O. to Lord Londonderry when Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, and afterwards as Private Secretary to the Earl of Zetland, also at Vice-Regal Lodge.

Lieut.-Col. James Stoneman, Army Service Corps, died from enteric fever at Pietermaritzburg on the 10th inst. He received his first commissioned rank in 1875, and became appointed to the Commissariat and Transport Staff in 1880, and became Lieut.-Colonel in 1894. He was formerly a Captain in the Yorkshire Light Infantry. He served in the Egyptian War of 1882 (medal and Khedive's Star).

Major (Lieut.-Col.) Norton Legge, D.S.O., 20th Hussars, was killed in action at Nooitgedacht on Wednesday. Born June 7, 1860, he joined the 20th Hussars from the Militia Aug. 21, 1880; became Captain Dec. 23, 1887; was Adjutant July 24, 1889, to July 29, 1893; and was promoted Major Oct. 17, 1898. He had been serving in South Africa since the beginning of the year as commandant of the 6th Corps of Mounted Infantry, with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel. He was employed with the Egyptian Army from 1894 to 1896, and again during August and September, 1898. He served in the Sudan Expedition, 1885; at Suakin (medal with clasp and bronze star) in 1885-86, including action at Ginniss (mentioned); in the Dongola Expedition, 1898 (mentioned D.S.O., and medal with two clasps); in the Nile Expedition, 1897 (clasp); and in the Expedition to Khartoum, 1898, as Staff Officer of Cavalry, including the battle of Khartoum (mentioned, clasp, and Khedive's medal).

Major Edward Honeywood Hughes, 1st Batn. York and Lancaster Regiment, died at Dunley, Bovey Tracey, on the 29th ult. Born March 5, 1866, he joined the York and Lancaster Regiment as Lieut. Feb. 6, 1884, became Captain March 7, 1890, and Major July 1 last. He had passed the Staff College.

Capt. John Albert Emmanuel MacBean, D.S.O., Royal Dublin Fusiliers, was killed in action at Nooitgedacht on Wednesday. Born June 6, 1865, he joined the Royal Dublin Fusiliers from the Militia May 4, 1878, became Lieut. March 6, 1889, and Captain May 6, 1896. He was employed with the Egyptian Army Dec., 1896, to Dec., 1898. He served with the Nile Expedition, 1897, including the action of Abu Hamed (mentioned in despatches and medal with two clasps); also in the Nile Expedition, 1898, including the battles of Atbara and Khartoum (mentioned D.S.O., two clasps and Khedive's medal). He went to South Africa last year as Brigade-Major of an infantry brigade.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

Capt. W. Atkins, Wiltshire Regiment, was killed in action at Nooitgedacht, South Africa, on Wednesday. Born June 23, 1861, he obtained his commission in the Royal Irish Rifles, after six years in the ranks, July 4, 1888, became Lieut. Aug. 3, 1889, and Captain July 18, 1896. He had not seen war service previous to his arrival in South Africa.

The Rev. Hon. George Barrington Legge, formerly a Captain in the Rifle Brigade, died at his residence in Montagu Square on Sunday last. He was eldest surviving son of the fourth Earl of Dartmouth and uncle of the present peer, the Bishop of Lichfield and Col. the Hon. H. Legge, M.P., being his brothers. Mr. Legge was born in 1831, and after going to Eton was appointed to the Rifle Brigade in 1850. He served with it in the Kaffir war 1852-53 (medal), and in the Crimean Campaign, 1854, including the battles of Alma, Balaklava, Inkerman, and Sebastopol (medal with four clasps, Turkish medal and 5th Class of the Medjidie). In 1859 he left the Army and entered holy orders, being appointed curate of Atcham, Shropshire. In 1860 he married the only daughter of the late Mr. G. Levett, of Wichnor Park, Lichfield, and was nominated by the Earl of Aylesford to the vicarage and rectory of Great and Little Packington, near Coventry, which he held for four years. In 1878 he accepted the vicarage of Whillington, near Lichfield, which he resigned in 1882.

Lieut. Archibald Jose Campbell-Murdoch, 1st Batn. Cameron Highlanders, was killed in action at Nooitgedacht, South Africa, on Wednesday. Born June 28, 1876, he joined the Cameron Highlanders from the Militia May 15, 1897, and became Lieut. Nov. 15, 1898. He served in the Nile Expedition, 1898, with the Cameron Highlanders, including the battle of Khartoum (medal with clasp and Egyptian medal).

2nd Lieut. John Francis Thompson-Pegg, Royal Garrison Artillery, was killed by lightning during a thunderstorm near Dundee, Natal, on the 11th inst. Born April 12, 1878, he joined the Army, Dec. 23, 1897.

THE LANGUAGE QUESTION IN MALTA

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In your issue of November 17th you state that Sir Francis Grenfell a year or two ago introduced, under the authority of the Colonial Office, a law that English should be the official language of Malta, "thus taking the first real step towards vindicating British supremacy." This statement has often been made before, and is absolutely incorrect. The law in question was initiated by Sir Arthur Lyon Fremantle, Sir F. Grenfell's predecessor, and was published and promulgated by Order in Council some days before Sir Arthur Fremantle's term of office expired. To the latter officer alone is the credit of this particular measure due. In the same article you mention that here in Egypt the "French language holds its own against English." You may be glad to learn that for all practical purposes French is as dead as Julius Caesar, and English the predominant tongue. OFFICER.

Egypt, Nov.

THE Twentieth Century Liqueur—Rose's Lime Juice Whisky Liqueur—is a blend of ten-year old Scotch whisky and the juice of limes. It is a judicious blend—in the words of an Edinburgh analyst it possesses "the stimulating properties of a high-class whisky, combined with the tonic and medicinal characteristics of lime juice." It is very palatable.

THE joint hon. secretaries of the War Employment Bureau write to say that the War Employment Bureau—the whole mission of which has been to help the soldiers' wives, widows, mothers to get the employment they sorely need—has succeeded in finding permanent or temporary work for 1,400 women, 746 of whom have been engaged in needlework. The bureau secured from the Royal Army Clothing Department contracts for no fewer than 57,000 shirts and 13,000 cholera belts. The hon. secretaries, however, appeal for further support, on the ground that returned Reservists are not likely to obtain immediate employment, and in the meantime they add to the expense of their wives, Plain needlework of all kinds is needed. Housework, office-cleaning and scouring, and work of a like nature would be most welcome. Many of the women, having young children, cannot undertake regular domestic service, but large numbers can go out as "supplies." All articles are carefully supervised by a committee of ladies before being delivered to the public, and profit-making having no place in the bureau's undertakings all goods are supplied at cost price. The address of the bureau is 171, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards.—Major the Hon. C. E. Bingham will return to regimental duty from staff employ in South Africa. Capt. Keith Fraser has left on a voyage round the world and is on leave with medical certificate dated April 30 next.

Royal Horse Guards (Blue).—Capt. Villiers having returned to regimental duty will be restored to the establishment as soon as possible, as will also Capt. Ricardo, who was seconded when he was taken prisoner by the Boers shortly after the arrival of the Composite Regiment in South Africa. Capt. Lord Crichton, son of the Earl of Erne, had a gratifying reception on his return to Crom Castle, co. Fermanagh, on Wednesday. He was presented with an address of welcome at Newtown Butler, the town being decorated. At the Castle another address was presented. In replying Lord Crichton referred particularly to the gallantry of the Inniskilling Dragoons and Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.

2nd Dragoon Guards.—Major Wilberforce, who has joined the new South African Constabulary, will act as Commandant of the Reserve Depot at Pretoria. The Bays have now three of their five majors and five captains extra regimentally employed.

6th Dragoon Guards (Carbiniers).—A correspondent writes from South Africa:—"So far as can be gathered here the date of removal to India is still uncertain, although it is quite settled that the regiment is to go eastwards when the work of war is over. Lieut.-Col. Sprot hopes to embark in command."

1st (Royal) Dragoons.—Major Lord Basing, who has been invalided to England, is said by last accounts to be making good progress. Lord Basing commanded the regiment during the greater part of the operations in Natal, when the general condition of the "Royals" was excellent. Major Carr-Ellison took over his duties when he left headquarters, he having entirely recovered from the effects of his recent illness.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys).—Major Crabbie completes his term as adjutant of the Fife-shire Light Horse Volunteers Tuesday next.

3rd Hussars.—Major Goring has been granted twelve months leave from India.

5th Lancers.—The regiment hopes to be one of the first to return to England from South Africa at the close of military operations.

6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons.—Major Allenby and Capt. Yardley have written to the parents of the late Lieut. Swanston, the well-known Cambridge "Blue," stating that he died an heroic death, being shot while

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPELL & CO. LTD. EXETER
4 & 5 DUNCANNON ST. LONDON.
CHANCERY CROSS.
DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

HART, SON,
PEARCE, & CO. LTD.
Metal Workers.
— SPECIALITÉ —
Memorial Brasses.
88-91, DRURY LANE,
LONDON, W.C.

MEMORIAL BRASSES.

CATALOGUES, DESIGNS, AND ESTIMATES FREE FROM THE ACTUAL MAKERS—

BENHAM & FROUD, LTD., CHANDOS STREET, LONDON, W.C.

making repeated efforts to bring a wounded trooper to a place of safety.

7th Hussars.—Capt. Prince Alexander of Teck reverts to regimental duty.

9th Lancers.—Lieut.-Col. Little has made good progress since his return to England, and hopes ere long to put himself at the head of his regiment once more. Lord and Lady Charles Cavendish-Bentinck arrived at Worksop on Monday on their way to Welbeck Abbey from South Africa. The reception accorded them was most enthusiastic, the town being gaily decorated, and thousands of people being present from Worksop and the surrounding district. The Duke of Portland, with the Duchess and Miss Grenfell, met his brother and sister-in-law at the station. Lord Charles Cavendish-Bentinck was presented with an address of welcome from the Worksop Urban District Council, and the party were escorted to the Abbey by a detachment of the Sherwood Rangers Yeomanry Cavalry and 150 of the Duke's tenantry on horseback. On reaching Welbeck his lordship received addresses of welcome from the tenantry, and the officials and heads of departments of the estate. Lord Charles expressed the pleasure of himself and his wife at the cordiality of their reception, and the Duke of Portland also returned thanks for the warm welcome they had extended to his brother, who, he trusted, had maintained the traditions of the family in support of Queen and Empire.

10th Hussars.—Col. Fisher has returned to England from active service at the Cape, on vacating his command. Capt. Sir J. P. Milbanke and Sergt. Englebach will be decorated with the Victoria Cross by the Queen at Windsor to-day.

12th Lancers.—Lieut.-Gen. Lyttelton-Annesley, colonel of the regiment, has left town for Cairo and Khartoum. Col. Mahon, D.S.O., who lately arrived home from South Africa, is under orders for Egypt.

16th Lancers.—Capt. MacEwen is about to be seconded on appointment to the captaincy of the Fifeshire Light Horse. Capt. Lord Fincastle, V.C., rejoins the staff of Major-Gen. Sir Herbert Chermiside at the Curragh as A.D.C. on Jan. 10.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

As lately announced the batteries to proceed to India from South Africa on the close of active operations are G and J R.H.A., the 13th, 16th, 18th, 62nd, 69th and 75th R.F.A. G Battery will, as at present arranged, take over quarters at Meerut; J Battery at Bangalore; and the 13th, 16th, and 69th (forming Lieut.-Col. Pickwood's Brigade Division) at Kirkee. The 18th Battery will go to Bareilly, the 62nd to Lucknow, and the 75th to Bareilly.

It has been decided to issue whistles to sergeants of Royal Horse and Field Artillery, similar to those carried by sergeants of infantry.

Ex-soldiers of the Royal Garrison Artillery desirous of rejoining that branch of the service will be permitted to re-enlist under the conditions laid down in the recent Army Orders. Candidates for re-enlistment should apply in writing, stating their former rank and regimental number, to the officer commanding the division they wish to join.

Col. H. V. Hunt has taken over command of the 31st Brigade Division, R.F.A., at Trowbridge. He commanded the Brigade Division at the battle of Colenso last December. He was badly wounded and taken prisoner by the Boers.

Lieut.-Col. B. Burton, Howitzer Brigade Division; 2nd Lieuts. L. L. Hoare, 89th Battery; R. Marryat, 90th Battery; H. R. Hill, 26th Battery; N. P. R. Preston, 92nd Battery; T. R. Udsell, 137th Battery; and G. G. J. Walshe, 138th Battery, are under orders to embark for South Africa before the end of the month.

The Queen has sent to Mrs. J. C. Williams, of Netley, a substantial gift of money and a letter, in which her Majesty expresses her appreciation of the fact that Mrs. Williams has six sons in the regiment. Two of them have earned commissions, one is a warrant officer, one a quartermaster sergeant, and two are sergeants.

Driver H. Glasscock, R.H.A., will be decorated with the Victoria Cross by the Queen at Windsor to-day.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Changes of stations, &c.:—

Col. J. W. Thurnburn from Rawal Pindi, on leave to England.

Col. J. C. Barker to have the rank of Brigadier-General while commanding troops Eastern Line of Communication South Africa.

Col. G. E. R. Savage, C.R.E., Ceylon, ordered home.

Col. W. T. Shone, C.B., D.S.O., from Bangalore to Expeditionary Force, China.

Col. H. W. Duperier from leave, England to Simla.

Col. C. K. Wood, Chief Engineer, Natal, on leave.

Lieut.-Col. H. D. Olivier from Bombay, on leave.

Lieut.-Col. J. C. Campbell, C.R.E., Dublin, ordered to Ceylon.

Lieut.-Col. G. T. Jones from Poona, on leave to England.

Lieut.-Col. H. M. Sinclair from South Africa, on leave.

Major S. D. Cleeve from Ceylon to Dublin.

Major J. E. Dickie from Peshawar to Expeditionary Force, China.

Major H. E. S. Abbott, D.S.O., from Simla to Rawal Pindi.

Major. H. E. Goodwyn, D.S.O., from Cawnpore, on leave to England.

Major C. E. Commeline from Bermuda, ordered to Cork.

Major A. J. Kelly from Madras to Umballa.

Major E. Townsend at Gosport, ordered to Jamaica.

Major M. L. Tuke at Cork, ordered to Bermuda.

Major H. G. C. Swayne from Hyderabad to Jubbulpore.

Major W. M. Ellis from Bombay, on leave to England.

Major W. G. R. Cordue from Secunderabad to Poona.

Major A. B. Reynolds from Bangalore to Expeditionary Force, China.

Capt. C. F. Close, C.M.G., from sick leave, to Ordnance Survey, Southampton.

Capt. J. de C. Laffan from sick leave, to Home District, London.

Capt. J. P. Brewin from Malakand to Peshawar.

Capt. S. H. Powell from Aldershot to Australia.

Capt. R. P. Robinson-Embury from Woolwich to Portsmouth.

Capt. H. A. D. Fraser from special duty, England, to Dehra Dun.

Capt. St. G. R. S. Caulfield at Paull, ordered to Jamaica.

Capt. W. C. Smyth from leave, England, to India.

Capt. A. E. Panet from leave, England, to India.

Capt. A. H. Dumaresq at South Africa, ordered home.

Capt. A. F. Cumberlege from Bangalore to Expeditionary Force, China.

Capt. J. W. Petavel from Adjutant 1st West York V.R.E., to Chatham.

Lieut. A. Rolland from Rawal Pindi to Expeditionary Force, China.

Lieut. C. G. W. Hunter from leave, England, to Expeditionary Force, China.

Lieut. W. A. Stokes from Lundi Kotal, to Expeditionary Force, China.

Lieut. C. F. Rundall at Hong Kong, ordered home.

Lieut. A. J. Close from leave, England, to Chakrata.

Lieut. J. B. Barstow at Malakand, ordered home.

Lieut. G. S. Knox from Ordnance Survey, Ennis, to Southampton.

Lieut. C. H. Ley from sick leave, to be A.D.C. to I.G.F. War Office.

Lieut. A. Hardcastle from Waltham Abbey to Lydd.

Lieut. T. B. Kelsall on sick leave, ordered to Chatham.

Lieut. E. W. S. Mahon at Peshawar, ordered home.

Lieut. E. G. Meyricke from Salisbury Plain to Aldershot.

Lieut. L. F. Blandy from Jamaica to Victoria, British Columbia.

Lieut. M. St. L. Simon from Singapore, on sick leave.

Lieut. J. W. Skipwith from sick leave to Aldershot.

Lieut. W. S. Douglas from South Africa on sick leave.

Lieut. G. J. P. Goodwin from sick leave, England, to Bombay.

Lieut. P. H. Campbell from Cork Harbour to Hong Kong.

Lieut. R. B. Skinner from Kohat, on leave.

Lieut. N. B. E. Dawes at Plymouth, ordered to India.

2nd Lieut. J. S. Barker from Portsmouth to Ceylon.

2nd Lieut. G. C. B. Lock at Aldershot, ordered to India.

2nd Lieut. T. H. S. Spaight from Aldershot to Australia.

INFANTRY.

Scots Guards.—Lieut.-Col. the Hon. N. Dalrymple-Hamilton, 3rd Batn., as a result of his prolonged illness from wounds received in South Africa, has been advised to take complete rest for a time.

Royal Scots (1st).—Lieut.-Col. Douglas takes over command of his own battalion, the 1st, in South Africa, on promotion.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Capt. Macnab, 4th Batn., has joined the School of Musketry, Hythe, as an assistant instructor.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—The Countess of Warwick has issued an appeal to the ladies of Warwickshire for Christmas gifts for members of the Warwickshire Regiment who are likely to spend their second Christmastide in South Africa. "It is proposed," she says, "to send to each man in every territorial regiment throughout the country a small token of good will from absent friends. A Christmas card will be addressed personally to each man in our county regiment bearing the good wishes of the 'ladies of Warwickshire,' and if there is any surplus a cheque will be sent to the commanding officer of each battalion to be spent at his discretion on a small gift to every man, as there is no difficulty in purchasing luxuries as well as necessaries in the Transvaal at the present time. There are over 2,000 men in the regiment now in South Africa, and something like £200 will be needed to give every man a present of, say, the value of 1s. 6d. or 2s. Mrs. Glasgow has kindly consented to fill in the cards with each man's name, and Col. Glasgow, the Lodge, Warwick, will receive cheques and pay the same into the 'Warwickshire Ladies' Fund at Lloyd's Bank. It needs no reminder that among all the territorial regiments at the front the name of the Warwickshire has been ever before us in danger and hardship, and I feel sure that this appeal will meet with a prompt response."

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—The 1st Batn. is being moved from Nusseerabad and Neemuch to Mandalay. One wing left Bombay on the 5th inst. in the steamship Canning; the other will embark early next month.

East Yorkshire Regiment (15th).—In his despatches giving an account of the proceedings in Peking previous to and during the defence, Sir Claude MacDonald brings to notice Capt. Poole. "Of those," he says, "not belonging to the Diplomatic and Consular Staff, I would beg to recommend Capt. F. G. Poole, of the East Yorkshire Regiment, who was in entire charge of the Volunteers and of the northern defences of the Legation, and also acted throughout the siege as my personal Adjutant. . . I cannot speak too highly of the gallantry and devotion of this young officer, who set an excellent example to all the Volunteers under his command."

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Col. Lord Cranborne, who lately returned from South Africa, where he commanded the 4th (Militia) Batn., is to have conferred upon him the freedom of Rochester, which place he represents in Parliament, in recognition of his services in the field. The ceremony will take place on Jan. 2. Lord Cranborne, who has taken up his duties as Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, is in good health.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—In addressing the 3rd (Militia) Batn. at Leicester, previous to its disembodiment, Col. Low Braye reminded the battalion that in 1798 it did good service when embodied in Ireland, and that it had carried the Irish harp on its colours ever since. During the second embodiment ended in 1857, also in Ireland, it had been specially commended for its "extraordinarily good conduct," and that, now, having been again embodied and sent to Ireland, the behaviour of the battalion had been pointed out by the military authorities as most exemplary.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—Major Hatchell is retired for age disqualification. He would have been gazetted out some time ago, but was held on for active service in South Africa, when he was employed with Mounted Infantry. The position of second in command of the 1st Batn. at the Cape has been vacant since Major Hatchett was seconded.

Yorkshire Regiment (19th).—It is proposed as the 1st Batn. is to remain in South Africa for Christmas, that a sum of money should be sent to be expended at the discretion of the officer commanding. This, it is thought, will be more beneficial than anything that could be sent, parcels taking a long time on the way, while advices for money may be transmitted by telegram. Those wishing to contribute are requested to send their subscriptions, marked: "Christmas Fund, 1st Batn. P.W.O. Yorkshire Regiment," to Messrs. Holt and Co., 3, Whitehall Place; to Col. Bruce, the Barracks, Richmond, Yorkshire; or to Capt. Mercer, Details Yorkshire Regiment, Hillsborough Barracks, Sheffield.

Chester Regiment (22nd).—Col. Curteis, 2nd Batn., is placed on half-pay on return from South Africa.

Scottish Rifles (26th).—Capt. Bliss has been granted twelve months' leave from India.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th).—The new 3rd and 4th Batns. have now been constituted separate units. They have been quartered side by side in Blenheim Barracks, Aldershot, up to the present, but now the 4th Batn. has moved into Ramillies Barracks.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd). will leave Calcutta in the steamship Clive on the 22nd inst. for Ceylon, spending Christmas at sea. A correspondent writes to say how much all classes regret the departure of this well-ordered regiment from Dum Dum. To quote the words of the letter: "No battalion could have behaved better than the gallant Cornwalls have done. They have all been determined apparently to live up to their Indian reputation, with the result that they will carry away with them a character second to none for soldierly qualities and good discipline."

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (33rd).—Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Rivett, Carnac obtains the command, vice Lieut.-Col. Lloyd, D.S.O., killed in action. A correspondent who knew Col. Lloyd well, he says, in Soudan, writes to say what a loss the British Army has sustained by his death. To quote a passage from his letter: "I saw much of poor Lloyd when he was governor of the Red Sea Littoral, and I can assert conscientiously that I never met a better soldier. He was loved by all, and deservedly so, for he had no faults. He could not do an unkind thing. The men knew this and looked up to him as a man."

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S
HIGH-CLASS
CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition 1900
Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., 31 MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

of his excellent qualities ought to be looked up to. I read of his death with feelings of the deepest regret; but it was a death he would have preferred to die—on duty at the head of his regiment."

Hampshire Regiment (37th).—Capt. Ennis has been appointed Adjutant of the North-Western Railway of India Volunteers.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th).—Extract from Sir Claude MacDonald's despatch on the defence of the Peking Legation:—"Capt. Percy Smith, a retired officer of the South Staffordshire Regiment, performed very good service, undertaking the most disagreeable and dangerous duties with ready and cheerful alacrity, and keeping up the spirits of the men under his command in exceedingly difficult and depressing circumstances."

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (52nd).—When letters left India the wing which has been at Ferozepore during the hot weather was in such a bad state of health that the local medical authorities had recommended its being temporarily moved to another station for change of air.

North Staffordshire Regiment (64th).—Capt. Down and Farley are ordered to proceed to South Africa to join the 2nd Batn. (98th), on promotion.

Welsh Regiment (69th).—Lieut. Everett has been appointed Staff Officer, Colaba Depot.

Highland Light Infantry (74th).—The lieutenant-colonelcy becomes vacant by the appointment of Lieut.-Col. Rutherford to the command of the 26th-71st Regimental District. Major Carey gets the step.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—Capt. Towse, V.C., will shortly be retired on appointment as Sergeant-at-Arms in Ordinary to the Queen in the room of Lieut.-Col. Forbes Macbean, deceased. He has been awarded a pension of £300 a year by the War Office for the loss of his eyesight.

Gordon Highlanders (92nd).—Capt. Meiklejohn will be decorated with the Victoria Cross by the Queen at Windsor to-day. The Town Council of Dundee proposed to present the freedom of the town to Lieut. and Qmr. Robertson, V.C., 3rd Batn., in recognition of his distinguished gallantry in South Africa. He is a native of the town.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (93rd).—Capt. Bell is ordered home from India to join the depot at Stirling for two years.

Connaught Rangers (94th).—A wing has been ordered from Meerut to Nusseerabad and Neemuch to replace the 1st Batn. Royal Fusiliers proceeding to Mandalay.

North Staffordshire Regiment (98th).—Lieut. Sword is about to be seconded for service with the West African Frontier Force.

King's Own Light Infantry (105th).—Pte. C. Ward will be decorated with the Victoria Cross by the Queen at Windsor to-day.

Durham Light Infantry (106th).—The battalion has suffered so much in health lately that a decision was come to to move it to India and locate it at Wellington until its removal to England. The relief is now being carried out.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (108th).—Capt. Heastey has been appointed Adjutant of the 1st P.V.R. Volunteers in India.

Pay Department.—Recent changes:—Capt. F. W. Hill, Wrexham to Australia; Capt. Gillespie, Canterbury to Wrexham; Capt. Despard, Woolwich to Canterbury. Lieut.-Col. W. C. Nott, retired pay-joined District Office, Woolwich, Nov. 21. Appointed permanently to the department:—Capt. Blunt, from Jan. 29, 1898; Capt. Worgan, from May 7, 1898; Capt. Hunter, from Sept. 20, 1898; Capt. Mangles from Jan. 21, 1900; and Lieut. Thompson, from Dec. 29, 1899. Probationers:—Capt. Delacombe, Royal Warwick Regiment, Nov. 17, Portsmouth; Lieut. Bowen, North Lancashire Regiment, Nov. 15 Clonmell.

Volunteers.

The annual prize distribution of the 4th V.B. Queen's R. W. Surrey Regt. took place at Chelsea Town Hall on Saturday the 8th inst., when the prizes were distributed by Lady Pirbright. Previous to the prizes being distributed the commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. Rumsey, detailed the principal events of the year, stating that on Oct. 31 last the strength of the battalion was 1,057, only one of this number being non-efficient; 82 officers and sergeants earned the proficiency grant, nine officers the tactical grant; 45 men hold the ambulance certificate, six signalling, and seven the transport and supply. The total capitation grant earned is £3,041 18s. During the year 103 men joined the Regular Army; 1,002 of all ranks were present at the annual inspection; 573 attended brigade camp: musketry figure of merit: 142 for trained men and 106 for recruits. There are 227 marksmen, 223 1st class, 588 2nd class, and only two 3rd class shots. During the year 348 recruits joined and 226 members were discharged; 73 members of the battalion served in South Africa, of these three have been killed or died of disease, and two were wounded. A good record this.

Reviews.

SOME MAGAZINES.

It would have been a pleasure to deal at greater length with the magazines than has been possible to us this month. But even at this late date there are some that claim notice. The United Service Magazine is one of the best numbers produced by this most useful military organ. In addition to certain historical articles, it has several suggestive contributions. The incidents of the war lead Lieut.-Colonel Phillpotts, R.H.A., to propose to increase every horse and field battery by the addition of one subaltern and 20 mounted non-commissioned officers and men for reconnaissance, scouting, and escort, as well as by a 1-pounder Q.F. Vickers-Maxim gun, with six horses and a mounted detachment of six men in charge of a sergeant. The idea that artillery shall furnish its own escort merits attentive consideration. A regimental officer desires to know why there is such reluctance to push guns right up into the firing line when the infantry have established themselves, and he asserts that chance after chance has been missed in consequence. His paper is of a very practical character. In another article there is a well-thought-out note on the Volunteer force, which the writer says was intended to roll back invasion, and is quite unfit for that. Two writers reply to Dr. Maguire on the question of conscription, the main argument being that commercial success in Germany is achieved, not because of universal service, but in spite of it, and that conditions in France are an illustration of the fact. Mr. Murray's Monthly Review, which has already won wide acceptance, has many articles of interest, including one, "The Love Episode of William Pitt," by the Earl of Rosebery, which has been a good deal talked about. The only contribution to which we can devote any space is that by "Galeatus" on field guns. It is a successful attempt to explain the gun question to the general reader. There is no doubt that the superiority, real or supposed, of the Boer field-guns has been a great deal exaggerated, but they brought position guns into the field with surprising success, though "Galeatus" seems to overlook the fact that the naval gun accomplished more than ever the Boer guns achieved. In this article the gun question is explained under the heads of mobility, rapidity of fire, and velocity. The writer waxes very angry about "an order for 18 batteries, or 108 guns, actually placed by our War Office with an unknown German firm, called the Rheinische Metall Waaren Fabrik!" and he gives place to the rumour that foreign officers are being invited to inspect these guns at Düsseldorf. Upon the general question, "Galeatus" is of opinion that in the matter of mobility we are equal to the great continental Powers, that in regard to loading we are right in adhering to the De Bauge principle, and abandoning the brass cartridge, and that as regards rapidity of fire, though our gun is slower than the French gun it is as fast as the German, and perhaps sufficiently rapid, but that in regard to power our gun is deficient, and that we require one firing shrapnel up to 6,000 yards, and common shell up to 7,000 or 8,000.

Dr. Maguire himself has some hard things to say in the National Review which are well worth reading, and will carry conviction. He is writing upon the education of officers, and he asserts that changes made in 1884 have strangled military education. The position of the last man at the Sandhurst examination meant in 1883 at least three times as much as in 1874, and twice as much as in 1900. Cadets, at that time, were very well taught indeed.

But then the reign of stupidity was restored, and Dr. Maguire says it is now really distressing to compare the absolute ignorance of our captains and subalterns of military and civil history, modern literature, sciences and English composition, as compared with any other class of professional men, or even with Irish "Intermediate" schoolboys. The vast majority of officers who have joined in the past 15 years never learned any history at all. Dr. Maguire insists, not only that the programme of preliminary education for the army is utterly behind the age, but that the constant tinkering to which it is subjected renders systematic education and good sound training impossible. Another point upon which he dwells is the prejudice "in favour of playing instead of working," and he agrees with the Times that if, as has been falsely alleged, Waterloo was won in the playing fields of Eton, Colenso was lost there. Major C. B. Mayne, R.E., puts in a strong plea for "Church Parade in the Army."

THE FORWARD POLICY.

An important book is that of Mr. Richard Isaac Bruce, C.I.E., on The Forward Policy and its Results (Longman and Co.). Mr. Bruce has worked for 35 years among the tribes on the North-West Frontier of India, and has been Political Agent in Beluchistan and Commissioner and Superintendent of the Derajat Division of the Punjab. He was probably more intimately associated than any other political officer with Sir Robert Sandeman in his great work of settling the frontier, the opening of the Gomal Pass, and pacifying the Sherani tribe. During Sandeman's absence in 1886 that officer recommended him for the officiating appointment, but Mr. Bruce, for reasons that are not made quite clear, hesitated to apply for the appointment of Agent-Governor General of Beluchistan on Sandeman's death. He has been a first-rate frontier officer, closely identified with the Sandeman tradition, and it does not appear that his long service has ever received the reward it deserved. The book gives a very instructive account of Mr. Bruce's career, and is an urgent plea for the Forward Policy, which is explained very clearly and temperately. Sandeman's principle was not that of military subjugation, although at times he had to resort to force, but with very little fighting he turned the wild and restless Beluchis from a condition of absolute chaos into a peaceful and prosperous people. It is this system which Mr. Bruce advocates. He sees danger ahead, and would make all the frontier men our friends rather than let them drift into the ranks of our enemies. The frontier problem is undoubtedly one of great perplexity, and Mr. Bruce's historical contribution to it is one of the most important that has been made for some years. He considers it to be essential that the entire North-West Frontier should be directly under the Government of India, since the present system or systems in various parts of the borderland can never work smoothly or with perfect success, and he suggests that the Peshawar and the Northern Frontiers should be formed into a second Frontier Chief-Commissionership. There is both personal and political significance in the remark that tribal management, pure and simple, has never been accorded honours and decorations in adequate proportion, and that the present system of military rewards virtually gives a premium to bad management. We promise those who are interested in Frontier problems that they will find a fund of information in Mr. Bruce's book.

SHORT NOTICES.

The speech of General Mercier drawing new attention to the idea of a French invasion of England, might have been timed to give popularity to a short story, entitled "London's Peril," by F. M. Allen (Downey and Co.). It is a brightly-written story of a bland foreign Minister and an astute foreign diplomatist, who is ready to sell the terrible secret of the contemplated capture of the metropolis. The peril is averted, and the story of how that happened makes good reading. The idea of the French plotters was to make a tunnel unperceived straight through from somewhere near Cape Gris Nez to Hampstead and to pour through it an overwhelming force.

We owe to the Italians a great deal of our knowledge of malaria, and a book entitled Malaria according to the New Researches, by Professor Angelo Celli, is a valuable and a philosophic treatise on the subject, translated by J. E. Eyre, M.R.C.P. (Longmans and Co.). Professor Celli has conducted his researches upon strictly scientific lines, and has grafted on his earlier inquiries a new series of studies on the mosquito in relation to malaria. Dr. Patrick Manson, Medical Adviser to the Colonial Office, who contributes an introduction to the book, says that Celli's work bears the stamp of a master hand, and, inasmuch as Great Britain has very practical interest in the malaria question, it was only right that the book should be translated. Officers in India have conducted researches upon similar lines, but Dr. Celli's opportunities have been unrivalled.

We have received a second edition of A Self-Made Countess, by John Strange Winter, which is a very entertaining and readable story.

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.

£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400
(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT £100 to £185
(Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315
(Chelsea, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

Dr. T. MILLER MAGUIRE'S CLASSES.

10, 12, 14, & 16, EARL'S COURT SQ., S.W.

(Four minutes' walk from Earl's Court Station.)

Telegraphic Address:—"YCLEPT, LONDON."

ALL our CLASSES—STAFF COLLEGE, PROMOTION, MILITIA, SANDHURST, and WOOLWICH—are now in FULL WORKING ORDER, and will continue working as long as any Education—Literary, Scientific, or Military—is included in the curriculum for Cadetships or other posts in the Army.

We have retained all the leading and well-known members of our Instructional Staff for 1901.

STAFF COLLEGE, 1900.

There was no Competition, but, nevertheless, a considerable Proportion of the OFFICERS SELECTED so far STUDIED IN OUR CLASSES, including:—

Major de Rougemont, Royal Horse Artillery.
 Captain Lyon, Royal Field Artillery.
 Captain H. U. Benyon, Royal Garrison Artillery.
 Brevet-Major Thesiger, 2nd Rifle Brigade.
 Brevet-Major Haig, 1st King's Own Scottish Borderers.
 Captain and Adjutant C. P. A. Hull, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers.
 Captain H. Cumming, 1st Durham Light Infantry.
 Captain A. M. S. Elsmie, Indian Staff Corps.

Captain S. F. Geoghegan, Indian Staff Corps.
 Captain C. F. Moores, Army Service Corps.

The following OFFICERS also QUALIFIED:—

Captain H. D. de Pree, Royal Horse Artillery.
 Captain W. Strong, Royal Garrison Artillery.
 Captain J. H. Paine, D.S.O., Royal Artillery.
 Captain C. Cook, Indian Staff Corps.

MILITIA EXAMINATION, SEPTEMBER, 1900.

The method of selection adopted in September was unique owing to the war and mobilisation, and had little knowledge of any branch of learning, yet the following SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATES read with us:—

Mr. H. H. Hulton, Norfolk Artillery.
 Mr. A. L. M. Napier, 3rd East Surrey.
 Mr. H. F. Collingridge, 3rd Royal Scots.

Mr. A. J. Ellis, 3rd Border Regiment.
 Mr. W. H. Gribbon, 3rd Leicestershire Regiment.
 Mr. L. St. P. Benyon, 5th Royal Fusiliers.

When the Military Examinations were serious competitions and success depended on intellectual efforts,

OUR SUCCESSES were UNSURPASSED.

For example:—

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, Sept., 1899.

The following TWENTY-TWO passed.	Marks.
10th Cavalry	Sir R. St. G. C. Gore, Bart. 1316
3rd Artillery	Mr. O. S. Lloyd 1317
3rd Foot Guards	Mr. E. B. G. Foster 1310
16th Infantry	Mr. F. G. G. Cunningham 1627
22nd "	Mr. R. L. Payne 1558
23rd "	Mr. J. H. G. Crane 1554
29th "	Mr. H. J. S. Stanton 1522
36th "	Mr. H. R. Sturgis 1481
44th "	Mr. R. H. Seymour 1422
45th "	Mr. J. S. Ward 1420
47th "	Mr. E. E. G. Terry 1396
49th "	Mr. J. G. Hay 1386
52nd "	Mr. G. M. Lindsay 1380
58th "	Mr. F. E. Packe 1366
66th "	Hon. J. G. Eveleigh-de-Moleyns 1327
81st "	Mr. D. A. Blair 1271
85th "	Mr. F. G. W. Draffen 1221
86th "	Mr. T. L. B. Soutry 1210
SECOND University	Mr. F. B. Dugdale 1748
THIRD "	Mr. S. G. de O. Wheeler 1696
12th "	Mr. W. H. Middleton 1393
16th "	Mr. H. M. Lambert 1315

STAFF COLLEGE, 1899.

Of the TWENTY-THREE Officers who were successful on the COMPETITIVE LIST, EIGHTEEN Passed from us, viz:—

Capt. H. A. L. Tagart	15th Hussars.
Capt. K. Combe	Royal Artillery.
Lieut. H. M. de F. Montgomery	Royal Artillery.
Capt. T. B. Wood	Royal Artillery.
Capt. H. B. Roberts	Royal Artillery.
Capt. G. M. Harper	Royal Engineers.
Brevet-Major W. D. Bird	2nd Royal West Surrey.
Capt. A. E. Lascelles	2nd Norfolk Regiment.
Capt. T. H. Berney	2nd West Yorkshire.
Capt. W. S. Copland	2nd Leicester Regiment.
Lieut. M. H. E. Welch	1st Royal Irish.
Capt. J. Duncan	2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers.
Capt. T. O. Marden	1st Cheshire Regiment.

STAFF COLLEGE, 1899—(Continued).

Lieut. A. H. Marindin 1st Royal Highlanders.
 Capt. C. A. L. Yate 2nd Yorkshire Light Infantry.
 Capt. D. L. MacEwen 2nd Cameron Highlanders.
 Capt. G. B. H. Rice 1st Royal Irish Fusiliers.
 Lieut. R. O'B. Taylor Indian Staff Corps.

Of the TEN officers who were "NOMINATED," SEVEN read with us, viz:—

Brevet-Major His Highness Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein, G.C.B., G.C.V.O., King's Royal Rifles.
 Capt. A. G. Dallas 16th Lancers.
 Capt. E. S. Nairne Royal Artillery.
 Lieut. Hon. F. H. S. Roberts King's Royal Rifles.
 Brevet-Major D. W. Churcher 1st Royal Irish Fusiliers.
 Capt. A. W. Abercrombie 2nd Connaught Rangers.
 Brevet-Major C. E. de M. Norie Indian Staff Corps.

In addition to the above, THIRTEEN officers "QUALIFIED," but for whom there were no vacancies:—

Brevet-Major C. H. de Rougemont Royal Artillery.
 Capt. T. C. Molony Royal Artillery.
 Capt. H. Coningham Royal Artillery.
 Capt. E. T. James 1st South Lancashire.
 Capt. H. R. Cumming 1st Durham Light Infantry.
 Brevet-Major G. H. Thesiger 2nd Rifle Brigade.
 Capt. A. E. Studdert Army Service Corps.
 Lieut. C. F. Moores Army Service Corps.
 Capt. S. Geoghegan Indian Staff Corps.
 Capt. C. C. Cook Indian Staff Corps.
 Capt. H. W. R. Senior Indian Staff Corps.
 Capt. C. E. E. F. K. Macquoid, D.S.O. Indian Staff Corps.
 Capt. C. S. Stack Indian Staff Corps.

WOOLWICH, July, 1900.

	Marks.
L. E. O. Davidson	7832
A. J. R. Kennedy	7580
Sir T. P. Larcum, Bart.	7413
T. P. Bassett	6490
F. O. Lloyd	6461

SANDHURST, July, 1900.

G. C. Cooper	8754
H. D. Kay	7444
O. G. Hibbert	6860
E. H. Wienholt	5449

Thus notwithstanding the few candidates left with us for these competitions, we did well on the whole.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY, WOOLWICH, December, 1899.

The following FOUR Passed:

	Marks.
41st Mr. H. H. Joll	9197
58th Mr. Derrick le P. Trench	8477
99th Mr. A. H. Allen	7432
115th Mr. W. C. H. Cree	6740

ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE, SANDHURST, December, 1899.

The following EIGHTEEN Passed:—

	Marks.
Mr. C. P. Graham	7814
Mr. H. C. Ind	7425
Mr. A. E. Bonham Carter	7411
Mr. W. H. Padday	7384
Mr. K. E. Anderson	7217
Mr. J. L. R. Carey	7117
Mr. A. J. B. Wavell	6816
Mr. R. B. Umfreville	6454
Mr. A. F. Hartley	6371
Mr. W. D. Kenney	5268

UNIVERSITY CANDIDATES.

Mr. B. S. Allen	7876
Mr. R. M. Luckcock	7423
Mr. L. I. G. Morgan-Owen	7132
Mr. S. G. Smithwick	6973
Mr. J. S. Fitzgerald	6367
Mr. F. W. Robinson	5696
Mr. E. W. P. Love	4947

W.I. REGIMENT.

Mr. P. V. Holberton	6784
---------------------------	------

PROMOTION--1898-1899.

205 Officers PASSED.

SECOND IN COMMAND.

52 Officers PASSED.

For PROSPECTUS, TERMS, &c., apply to DR. T. MILLER MAGUIRE, 12, Earl's Court Square, LONDON, S.W.

REGIMENTAL INSTRUCTION IN THE MILITARY ART.

Literature Used at Earl's Court Square.

RE the NEW SYSTEM of INSTRUCTION by Officers, regimental and otherwise, on various branches of the Military Art, we have compiled Charts, Analyses, Outlines of Tactical Operations, Tactical Problems, Historical Outlines, Questions, and Notes on Fortification and Law and Administration, Summaries of Topography, Lectures on Military History and Geography, which we will be very glad to supply to regiments or individual officers on the most moderate terms.

These will be found very useful and very simple by OFFICERS SUDDENLY CALLED UPON to HOLD FORTH in classes. Every fair question and every point that a reasonable examiner should expect a student to know are set down in our notes.

Apply to Dr. T. M. MAGUIRE, or Col. E. C. MILNER. For Tactics only to HERR BURDE,
 2, EARL'S COURT SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.

ST. PAULI

(BREWERY: BREMEN)

LAGER OR PILSENER BEER.

SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER IN THE MARKET.

ANNUAL EXPORT, 12,000,000 BOTTLES.

Supplied to all the Principal LONDON Clubs,
The Messes of the British and German Navies, &c., &c.

AGENTS IN—

EUROPE:ALPERSHOT.
ATHENS.
CHATHAM.
CONSTANTINOPLE.
GENOA.
GIBRALTAR.
LISBON.
MALTA.
NAPLES.
PORTSMOUTH.
PLYMOUTH.ASIA:ADEN.
BAGHDAD.
BANGKOK.
BOMBAY.
BUSHIRE.
CALCUTTA.
CEYLON.
HONG KONG.
KARACHI.
MADRAS.
MAURITIUS.
NOVA GOA.
PENANG.
RANGOON.
SHANGHAI.
SINGAPORE.
TEHERAN.AFRICA:ALEXANDRIA.
BEYROUTH.
BONNY.
CAIRO.
MASSOWAH.
MOMBASA.
SUAKIM.
SUZ.
PORT SAID.
TANGIERS.AMERICA:ANTIGUA.
BARBADOS.
DENERARA.
JAMAICA.
MONTEVIDEO.
ST. LUCIA.
TRINIDAD.

And all the Principal NAVAL and MILITARY Stations.

The ST. PAULI BREWERIES CO., Limited,
8, Great Winchester Street, London, E.C.JEROME SACCONE, LTD.,15, COCKSPUR STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W.
AND GIBRALTAR.

Wine and Spirit Merchants to the Army and Navy.

Wines Supplied to Naval Messes Free of Duty.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESSES:—

"Saccone," Gibraltar. "Saccone," London.

SHELTON & BALL,Military and Court Tailors,
180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
(Opposite Burlington Gardens.)

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).

Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).

Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).

SATURDAY REVIEW

OF

Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review
are treated only by Naval and Military men.

The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:

8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.

HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,

KILTS, TREWS,

TARTAN PANTALOONS.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING MILKAS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.
A PERFECTUNSWEETENED*CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.

AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK
Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS,
ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this

good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.

WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.

Apply for particulars, Sample, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,

144, New Bond Street,

LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOXAppropriately arranged for everyday use as a lasting memento.PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.*THREE CHEERS FOR THE*RED*WHITE*& BLUE*COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.TRANSVAAL WAR.DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT
THE FRONT A SUPPLY OFBRAND'S*BEEF TEA*TABULES.To be had of ALL CHEMISTS, GROCERS, and STORES. In boxes of 12, price 2s. 3d.One tabule with boiling water makes a cup of savoury and nutritious Beef Tea.BRAND & Co., Ltd., Mayfair, W.

... THE ...

Royal Navy List.

(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.

Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST

CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER

10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS

(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.

"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—*Nautical Magazine.*Officers are earnestly requested to send
at once their special services to the Editor.WITHERBY & Co., 328, High Holborn, London, W.C.Advt. Dept.:—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)Important Notice . . .The publication of the ARMY AND NAVY STA-TIONS List, which has been suspended for the past few months, is resumed with our present issue, and will be published on the third week of each succeeding month.Burton Brewery*COMPANY, LIMITED,

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.

BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.

Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO

Mr. E. RUGGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent,
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street, Alexandria, Egypt.DAY & MARTIN,
LIMITED.

GOLD MEDAL. PARIS, 1900.

A VOLUNTEER WRITES FROM POTCHEFSTROOM:—

Aug. 1, 1900.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been requested by a few comrades to testify
as to the remarkable qualities of your "dubbin" as supplied to the troops by H. M. Government.Not only for preserving our boots, but for applying to the feet to prevent blisters; as fat for cooking chappatties, and for burning as candles, it is found of great service to "Tommy Atkins at the front."DAY & MARTIN'S
DUBBINIs Waterproof and absolutely the best Article for use on Shooting and Fishing Boots.Notices.THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.ALL EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.	TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year... .. £1 8 0	One Year... .. £1 12 6
Six Months... .. 0 14 0	Six Months... .. 0 16 3
Three Months... .. 0 7 0	Three Months... .. 0 8 1

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid
in advance.RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
will be forwarded on application.BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—
Price 5s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1900.

ON NAVAL DEVELOPMENT.

THE lecture which Sir John Hopkins delivered at the Royal United Service Institution on Wednesday fulfilled expectations, inasmuch as it was of a very practical and satisfying nature. The "ideas" were not novel, but they were exceedingly comprehensive, and acquired additional weight from the personality of the lecturer. As Sir John Hopkins said, in beginning his paper, "he hoped to furnish anew some subjects for reconsideration, the ventilation of which should assist in promoting healthy discussion." From his personal experience at the Admiralty he was able to affirm that those who administer the Service have quite enough to do without initiating reform, and suggestion for both improvements and amendment should naturally come from without. In a large measure Sir

John followed the lines which we endeavoured to indicate in this column last week. His subject naturally divided itself into the three categories, Personnel, Materiel, and Mobilisation. In the first two he dealt with the provision of men, and ships, and in the last with the utilisation of that which was thus provided. As regards the personnel he advocated the provision of a sufficient and efficient Reserve, and indicated where he hoped to find it. His plan for forming a Fleet Reserve from Bluejackets and Marines differs slightly from that which the Admiralty have just instituted, and in addition he would draw upon the crews of private yachts, policemen, workmen in private shipbuilding firms, and advocated a revival of the Naval Volunteers. He suggested also a reorganisation of the naval depot system, and insisted that the supreme command of the defences of the naval ports should be vested solely in the Naval Commanders-in-Chief, his opinion being, that, "briefly, our system of semi-military, semi-naval defence is as clumsy and chaotic as can be." Other matters dealt with under this category were the strengthening of the naval element at the Admiralty, the expediency of giving Engineer officers executive rank, the reorganisation of the Marines and extending the sphere of utility of Marine officers, the training of Bluejackets to mechanical work, and, "as an annual thing, that every Head of a Department in a ship, including the seconds in command, and the gunnery and torpedo lieutenants, be asked to contribute, through their captains, their views in the direction of any improvement they can suggest."

On the subject of the matériel Sir John Hopkins acknowledged the large debt which the Service and the country owe to Sir William White, but he expressed the hope that "the century now dawning will be equally rich in producing further developments, and that neither in speed armaments, coal endurance, nor general capacity shall we see anything but progress in each new class designed." Sir John then quoted largely from the article in the Navy League Journal, to which we have already referred, and followed up his remarks about cruisers by a similar criticism of the battleships. He also proposed a modified revival of sailing ships in the Navy by doing part of its coal and store work with such vessels. This, he said, would be a means of teaching the men some pure seamanship, and the Crown would be put to no loss in running the school. He described in detail the kind of vessels he thus proposed as fleet auxiliaries. In conclusion, Sir John Hopkins suggested that the fleet should be mobilised unexpectedly and without any warning in one of the winter months, while at the same time, without the slightest hint being dropped beforehand, the coastguard ships should be ordered to assemble with all despatch at Spithead. He said, "Directly the Reserve Squadron and mobilised ships are ready let them put to sea for a fortnight's cruise, returning to a home port at the expiration of it to fill up with coal as speedily as possible, carefully noting all weaknesses in its supply, then disperse and demobilise. At the same time as the ships at home mobilise let the Channel and Mediterranean Fleets be ordered to Gibraltar with all despatch; there let them fill up with coal, noting any shortcomings. Then let them cruise, as a combined fleet, under the senior admiral in the Atlantic for a month, which will conduce to the tactical knowledge the fleet should possess, as a whole, when joined up, as they would be, in wartime. If the ships require coal before the month has elapsed, the Commander-in-Chief to make the necessary communication to the Admiralty as to quantity and place of delivery.

On return to Gibraltar the bunkers to be refilled as speedily as possible, and any shortcomings noted. Advantage also to be taken of this combined fleet visit to test reserves of ammunition provisions, and engine-room stores at Gibraltar by drawing heavily on them, again noting difficulties, etc., and returning the same into store when the test is complete." In connection with this suggestion, Sir John Hopkins went fully into detail in regard to the way in which he would apply practical tests for the purpose of promoting general efficiency and revealing weaknesses.

It cannot be said that the discussion was as satisfying as the lecture, and indeed, considering the number of matters dealt with, it is a little difficult to see how it could have been without more organisation than is at present devoted in this direction. Sir William Kennedy, as Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, fastened upon that point in the lecture which referred to the necessity for placing the supreme command at the naval ports in the hands of naval officers. He pointed out how, from his own experience, he found absurdities in the present system. On the whole, however, the speakers on this point, including Sir Vesey Hamilton, appeared to differ from Sir John Hopkins. If we are at war with a great Power, said Sir Vesey, the right place for all our ships and all our officers and men is on the frontier, that is to say, on the enemy's coast, and until our fleets have been beaten from the seas it is impossible to suppose that the naval ports can be in danger of any serious attack. The analogy which Sir John Hopkins drew from France and Germany was shown to be a bad one. And while, in existing circumstances, those nations may find it advisable to put the coast in the care of naval men, it is quite likely that as they increase the offensive power of their fleets they will find it expedient to alter their plans; indeed, in France, there are indications that this is taking place already. Admiral Henderson, referring to the subject of naval training, advocated a further extension of the method of educating stokers. He went on to explain why he could not support the lecturer's suggested method of utilising the mercantile auxiliaries for training in seamanship. Mr. J. R. Thursfield took the opportunity to point out a mistake into which some of his critics had fallen in supposing that because he had read a paper on naval training, therefore he must be an advocate of the retention of masts and sails. The thanks of the Navy, and of the country generally, are due to Mr. Thursfield for his able paper and for his having been the cause of a suggestive discussion in which the views of naval officers on this subject were elicited to good purpose. Sir John Colomb and Major-General Moody of the Marines recognised the valuable nature of the suggestions which Sir John Hopkins made on the subject of the Marines. The former drew a picture of the advantages to the Service generally which would follow from the adoption of most of these suggestions, and also the saving to the country which might thereby be effected. He looked forward to the future amalgamation of the Marines and the Navy. Considering how many points in the lecture remained altogether untouched by the speakers, we cannot help expressing a hope that the Council of the Institution may take a hint from something in it, and ask that the discussion may be supplemented by written commentaries from a selected number of officers in every branch of the Service. It would be necessary to limit the length of such communications to the average number of words which can be spoken in ten minutes, but by some much arrangement as this the value of the lecture could be largely augmented.

ENGLAND AND PORTUGAL.

THE visit of the Channel Squadron to Lisbon last week assumed, in the light of recent events, an importance which had, perhaps, not been anticipated, and nothing could be more gratifying than the extreme warmth of the reception which was accorded to Sir Harry Rawson and his officers. The friendship of England and Portugal is of old standing, and, as King Charles said at the banquet, we have often co-operated in the struggles of the Portuguese, and in the fourteenth century assisted to the throne one of the most popular and one of the greatest kings who have ever occupied it. It is not necessary here to do more than allude to the cordial relations that have always existed. What is more important is to record the declarations of the Portuguese President of the Council and the British Minister. The former said that the alliance between the two countries had its roots in the past, its confirmation in the present, and its importance in the future, and that in a sincere understanding between the two peoples, and in their frank and loyal co-operation lies the assurance that their rights will be respected and their dominions maintained. From such an alliance Portugal, of course, derives greater advantages than ourselves, but each country contributes its part according to its powers. The remark of Sir Hugh MacDonnell that the alliance was confirmed, and its confirmation conveyed to Portugal by the presence of the Channel Squadron in the Tagus, was very significant. We must cheerfully recognise, and Sir Harry Rawson very happily touched upon the fact, that England has owed much to Portugal in the past, because the expansion of British commerce and colonisation was in a large part the result of earlier Lusitanian enterprise and valour; he was alluding to the brave navigators who opened the sea route to the East. Her Majesty's telegram to the King of Portugal followed as a pleasant expression of the Queen's appreciation of the cordial and friendly understanding between the two countries. The Portuguese people gave an exceedingly hearty welcome to the officers and men of the fleet, and the visit was quite a public holiday. There was a pleasant interchange of courtesies, and the Portuguese maintained their reputation for genial hospitality. The British officers took part in a football match, and the King himself joined in a tennis tournament organised in their honour. The visit of the squadron to the Tagus has left a very pleasant impression, and will have a gratifying effect both in this country and in Portugal.

THE FRENCH NAVAL DEBATE.

THE programme of the French Government, in which the chief item is the building of big battleships, was adopted by the Senate unanimously, M. Combes having withdrawn his counter project for the construction of numerous fast protected or armoured cruisers. The sensational incident was the intervention of General Mercier, whose remarks were ridiculous and very ill-timed. He thinks, or professes to think, that it is possible to invade England—"our eventual adversary"—because we had reverses in the Transvaal, and because mutinies have occurred in the fleet, and possibly may occur again. His plan has not been divulged, except that it would involve an outlay of 30,000,000 frs., which seems a small sum for such an object, but it is permissible to conjecture that the General's real object was to direct our attention and energy to the work of hedge-row defence. He clearly endeavours by his arguments to thrust conscription upon us. His proposals were received with ironical cheers, and he has been greatly ridiculed by the Press. Far more important was the statement of the Minister of Marine, which was a more lucid setting-forth of the conditions of naval defence than we have lately read in any French source. He told the Senators that there were two really formidable weapons—the torpedo and the gun—that beyond a certain range the torpedo was unavailable; and that therefore ships with powerful ordnance were necessary, so large that they would be stable gun platforms, and able to steam at sufficient speed to enable them to choose the hour and the place of combat and to bring their guns into action. Therefore, battleships are to be built to engage those of the enemy at sea, to blockade arsenals, and bombard forts, and to land troops if necessary, as well as to protect the sea routes. He directed destructive criticism to the arguments of the exponents of the guerre de course. Supposing France were to give up building battleships and construct only fast cruisers, what would happen? These would probably be blockaded in various ports; if they escaped and made captures, what would they do with them? Would they simply sink them? Such conduct, said M. de Lanessan, would quickly entail terrible reprisals. In short, he demonstrated that to render good service cruisers must be supported by battleships, and he condemned utterly the idea that one class of vessels would be useful without the other. These were sound arguments, and they prevailed. The Minister is of opinion that in England and Germany armour has been sacrificed to speed and other qualities, and he is well pleased with the new French design, which we described when it was presented to the Parliament. More wise than General Mercier, the Minister concluded by declaring that France desired nothing but to live at peace with neighbouring nations, and to exchange products with them for the development of her national wealth.

Navy Notes.

The loss of the Nelson relics from Greenwich is well-nigh irreparable. Probably the Government has done the best thing possible in offering a reward of £200 for their recovery, but it seems more than doubtful whether the person or persons who abstracted them was actuated solely by motives of greed. Altogether eighteen articles are missing, of which the larger proportion are connected with Nelson, and chiefly medals. It is unlikely that the intrinsic value of the articles amounts to anything like the sum offered as a reward. It is little use now asking why these relics of priceless value to the nation should not have been afforded adequate security, and there is almost an element of humour in the statement that since the loss became known the remaining relics have been locked up in a strong room. If, as is supposed, the robbery was the work of one hand, there does not appear to be much hope of tracing them. One thing is certain, that, as curiosities, they can hardly be offered for sale without detection. We regret to think that, in all probability, the fate of most of these priceless treasures is the melting-pot. On the subject of the future custody of those that remain and of others like them, while there is something to be said for Sir John Colomb's suggestion that they should be removed to the museum of the Royal United Service Institution, their proper resting-place is unquestionably Greenwich, and there seems to be no adequate reason why they should not be given sufficient protection there.

During the week a Parliamentary paper has been published containing Sir Claude MacDonald's despatches, and on Tuesday the Gazette contained further despatches from Sir Edward Seymour, enclosing the report of Captain Wray concerning the work of the Legation Guards. Extracts from these latter are given elsewhere, and we regret we cannot publish them in full. Sir Claude MacDonald in his report describes how Captain Halliday, in command of twenty Marines, led a sortie to drive the enemy out of the buildings in which they formed a danger to the Legation. He was almost immediately engaged and shot through the left shoulder at point-blank range, the bullet fracturing the shoulder and carrying away part of the lung. Notwithstanding the extremely severe nature of the wound, Captain Halliday killed three of his assailants, and telling his men to "carry on and not mind him," walked back unaided to the hospital, refusing escort and aid so as not to diminish the number of men engaged in the sortie. For some days the surgeons feared the wound was mortal, but Captain Halliday is now out of danger, and Sir Claude recommends that he should have the Victoria Cross.

Sir Claude MacDonald also refers to Captain Strouts as "my right hand from the commencement of the siege until he fell mortally wounded on July 16. He was a most excellent officer; his readiness of resource and calmness under fire were the admiration of all the besieged." Captain Wray, who was also wounded, has thrown his report in the shape of a diary from which we may give one day's events as a specimen:—"June 16. I was sent with twenty British, nine American, and five Japanese Marines to rescue a Chinese family. A reputed Boxer temple, which I intended visiting on my return, was passed on the way. Hearing shrieks issue from the temple, as of victims being tortured, and seeing signs of Boxers holding their rites, I approached the temple with some men. Bricks were hurled and spears thrust over the walls, so I decided to force my way in. I succeeded in doing so, and killed about 45 Boxers, none of them being able to escape. The mutilated bodies of two native Christians were found. My native guide having meantime run away I returned to the Legation and learnt that the Christian family had come in." These despatches afford ample demonstration that the behaviour of the whole detachment during a trying time and under most fatiguing circumstances was wholly exemplary and deserving of all praise.

From the secretary of the Navy League we have also received extracts from a letter written by the Hong Kong branch of the League, and dealing with the naval and military situation in China. The committee of the Hong Kong branch state as their deliberate opinion that our present naval strength out there is considerably below the margin of safety. "Especially in view of the fact that there are indications that the French are preparing to pursue a forward policy round and about Canton, and generally in provinces of Kwang-sung, Kwang-si, and Yun-nan." At the time the letter was written there were five French men-of-war at Canton, but only one British. The committee trust that the people at home will not keep their eyes exclusively fixed upon the country around Peking and in the Yangtse Valley, oblivious of the circumstance that considerable commercial British interests exist in the above-mentioned southern provinces. In connection with the defence of Hong Kong they state that until the following matters are corrected they will not be satisfied:

- (1) Every one of the muzzle-loading guns in our forts, which we mentioned in our letter to you of the March 31, 1900, has been replaced by modern B.L. ordnance; (2) we have a substantial movable column of all arms stationed here ready to protect British interests, wherever these interests may be threatened; (3) a mountain battery is sent here; (4) our volunteers are provided with proper B.L. guns instead of M.L. guns of old pattern; and (5) that our guns should be provided with smokeless ammunition.

Last week the Daily Express intimated that it was about to commence a crusade on behalf of the Navy, and on Thursday the first of a series of articles having this object appeared. The series, which is entitled "The Fleet and the Flag," is said to have been written by an "expert," and is intended to show not only that our Empire is in danger but that our own islands are liable to invasion. The taxpayer who grumbles about the Naval Estimates, says our contemporary, "will have to take horse and gun and fight on the slopes of the Kentish hills for the mere right of national existence." The fact that the Empire exists by its Navy cannot be too often drummed into the minds of our countrymen, and so we must wish the Daily Express well in its enterprise, and we shall look with much interest for the suggestions it promises in the direction of improving the Fleet. The articles certainly promise excitement, and our contemporary probably knows best the way to stir the patriotism of its readers; just a short specimen will give an idea of the manner in which it is going to work:—"Look round upon the beaming hungry faces of the children flocking to the table at meal-time. Whence comes the food that feeds them? Not from the land of their birth, but from over the seas: along the liquid highways which, night and day, are ceaselessly guarded by stout hearts, whose thoughts are still of 'England, Home, and Beauty.' When the war cloud bursts over these islands, and food leaps to famine prices, we well know that it is to our bluejackets we shall look. That they will nobly sustain their old traditions who shall doubt? Still, must England remember that, while she expects them to do their duty she must assuredly not stint them in the means of fulfilling it."

A memorandum has been issued to the ports giving details of the new scheme for increasing the Reserve, under the Act passed at the end of last session. We have already pointed out what the composition of this new division is to be, but it may be as well to remind our readers that it consists of three classes, of which the first are pensioners, whether seamen, stokers, or Marines. The second class will consist of men who have taken their discharge without pension, and the third of those artisans who, by a recent arrangement are being trained as boys in the dockyard on a similar continuous service engagement as that which the seamen boys enter into. So far as the first class is concerned, enrolment will in future be made a condition of receiving a pension, and those men already in receipt of pensions may join it. Service in the second class is optional, but it is hoped by the offer of a retainer of sixpence a day and full pay when called up for drill, to attract in time as many as fifteen thousand to enter this class. The new division, which is to be called the Royal Fleet Reserve, is to be directly connected with the naval ports, through the commanders of the depots and headquarters. The instruction which men in these classes will have to undergo is a week's drill every year, or a fortnight's drill every second year to be carried out at the port of enrolment. The instructions contain full information on the subjects of pay, victualling, clothing, and service in the Navy in time of emergency, as well as the conditions for retirement and discharge and additional pensions after the attainment of a certain age.

The working of this new scheme will be watched with great interest by everyone connected with the Navy. It is, in a measure, the introduction of short service, or rather an extension of the short service system as already applied to the coastguard. It goes much further than Sir John Hopkins suggested, inasmuch as any man who is otherwise suitable becomes eligible on taking his discharge, even if he has not served his first period of continuous service. On the other hand, it does not provide for a class midway between the active service and the Reserve, such as has been suggested for manning as skeleton crews the ships in the Fleet Reserve. We think there is a good deal to be said for the notion that selected men should serve twelve years in the Navy, three years in the dockyard, with, of course, liability for active service on mobilisation, and then pass into the Fleet Reserve with a somewhat higher retainer than is now offered. The formation of a stoker reserve and a Marine reserve will be commended on all sides. Whether the inducement now offered is sufficient is another matter, upon which we would not offer an opinion.

THE proprietors of the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, in response to the kindly appeal of Lady Audrey Buller, have just despatched to No. 7 General Hospital, Pretoria, a substantial consignment of papers and magazines for the use of the patients. It may assist the transmission of such much-needed parcels to state that they should be delivered not later than Wednesday in each week, to the manager of the Export Department, Junior Army and Navy Stores, Limited, Floral Street, Covent Garden.

Navy Personal.

The Duke of York's voyage will include New Zealand and Tasmania, neither of which colonies he visited while serving in the Bacchante. A small-pox epidemic (of small extent) at Sydney, N.S.W., necessitates quarantine on arrivals from the latter port, even in the case of Royal Princes.

Admiral of the Fleet the Earl of Clanwilliam, Admirals Sir Edward Fanshawe, the Hon. Sir Edward Fremantle, the Right Hon. Sir John Dalrymple-Hay, Sir Walter Hunt-Grubbe, and Sir Henry Stephenson, have consented to form a committee to assist in promoting the Naval and Military Exhibition at the Crystal Palace next year, to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the celebrated Exhibition of 1851 in Hyde Park. Charities of both services will, it is hoped, largely benefit by such a popular display.

Vice-Admiral Sir William R. Kennedy was the guest of the Royal Temple Yacht Club at their 43rd. annual dinner held last week, and in responding for the Navy referred to the recent pronouncement of a Continental general officer on a scheme for invading this country and the possibility of a repetition of the historical disaffection of the personnel of our fleet in time of war. The Admiral hoped that any foe would begin operations at the port where he now has the honour of being in command, as he was sure our forces thereat would not be found asleep. Sir William could have appropriately quoted from an old naval ballad, "Should their flat-bottoms in darkness come o'er," they'll find us ready to receive them before they get on shore.

Rear-Admiral Hugo L. Pearson, Commander-in-Chief of the Australia Station, arrived at Adelaide, S.A., on Monday last in the Royal Arthur, having accompanied the P. and O. steamship Victoria from Fremantle, W.A., with the Earl of Hopetoun on board. In consequence of continued ill-health, his Excellency had to be carried from the Victoria to the flagship, for passage to Sydney, N.S.W., where the latter vessel is due to-day.

Rear-Admiral Day H. Bosanquet, Commander-in-Chief of the East India Station, was to leave Trincomalee yesterday for Rangoon in the Highflyer.

Rear-Admiral John R. E. Pattison reached the age of fifty-six on Monday last, and Rear-Admiral Sir William Dyke-Acland, Bart., attains the age of fifty-three on Tuesday next. Captain Wilnot H. Fawkes, Private Secretary to the First Lord, will be fifty-four on Saturday next, and failing an exceptional vacancy on the flag list before March next, becomes rear-admiral on the 13th idem.

Rear-Admiral Albert B. Jenkins, second in command of the Channel Squadron, arrived at Devonport in the Magnificent early on Wednesday last.

Rear-Admiral Lewis A. Beaumont, appointed to relieve Rear-Admiral Hugo L. Pearson, Commander-in-Chief of the Australian station, left Plymouth on Saturday last in the Orient steamship Oroya for Sydney, N.S.W., to take up that appointment.

Captain John E. Blaxland paid off the Thunderer on Tuesday last at Chatham, and commissioned the Hood the following day as port guard-ship at Pembroke Dock. The difference in the accommodation of the vessels will undoubtedly be appreciated by both officers and men.

Captain Frank H. Henderson, of the Hermes paid off that cruiser at Devonport on Saturday last, after a commission of only fourteen months, two-thirds of which period she has virtually been hors de combat.

Captain Francis J. Foley, of the Furious, arrived at the Nore on Friday in last week, having been despatched in advance from the Channel Squadron instead of remaining to partake of the festivities at Lisbon. He proceeded to Chatham, where his vessel will probably be some time in dockyard hands.

Captain Richard W. White, of the Rodney, pays off that vessel early next month and commissions the Anson in her place as coastguard ship at Queensferry.

Captain James E. C. Goodrich, of the Colossus, was to have commissioned the Anson to replace his present command at Holyhead, but as the defects of the Rodney are too extensive to admit of early attention, the Colossus is to remain at her station, and the Rodney to be relieved instead. The latter would be useful in the line of battle, while the former is only capable as a harbour-service drill-ship.

Captain the Hon. Maurice Bourke, who died on September 16, while Private Secretary to the First Lord, left estate valued at £5,997. He was heir presumptive to the earldom of Mayo.

Commander Philip N. Wright, promoted for his services in China during the recent operations while gunnery officer of the Orlando, and Midshipman James A. G. Troup, late of the Terrible, who distinguished himself in South Africa and afterwards in the Far East, arrived home on Friday in last week by the P. and O. steamship Malta from Hong Kong.

Commander Arthur W. Ewart, naval attaché, was officially received on Saturday last at Berlin by the German Emperor.

Commander (N) John D. Daintree, of the Amphitrite, in Chatham Reserve, relieves Commander Ernest Gaunt at the Naval Depot, Liu-Kung-Tao, and assumes the newly-created post of Queen's Harbour Master at Wei-Hai-Wei. This is another "stone-frigate" appointment for the new navigating officers, and, considering the climate, more desirable than that at Hong-Kong.

Commander Montagu Cartwright, of the Cossack, appears recently to have disturbed the equanimity of the French Consul at Muscat, in declining to accord him a salute of eleven guns, which he demanded by reason of our consul and British resident for the Government of India at that port being allowed that compliment. The naval Commander-in-Chief decided in favour of Commander Cartwright, but the representative of France refused to return the latter officer's visit unless he was promised the salute.

Lieut. and Commander Alexander Gordon, of the Sparrow, who was detained at Devonport in consequence of machinery defects of that gunboat, left on Tuesday last for Australia to relieve the Ringdove.

Lieut. John F. H. Cole, relieved from the Speedy, arrived at Plymouth on Saturday last in the P. and O. steamship Egypt, from the Mediterranean.

Lieut. John H. Trye, appointed gunnery officer of the Devastation, left on Saturday last for Gibraltar by the Orient steamship Oroya.

Sub-Lieut. Charles C. Johnson obtains his commission as lieutenant after eighteen months' junior service, in consequence of the position he attained in the examination at the Royal Naval College and at Portsmouth. He was eighty-first on the list of sub-lieutenants when promoted.

Fleet-Paymaster John Hynes' appointment to the Duke of Wellington on the 21st ult., is in connection with the new scheme for forming a Royal Fleet Reserve of long service pensioners, men voluntarily discharged without pension on completing their first period of continuous service, and those who have purchased their discharge. The system is in a measure analogous to that of the Army Reserve.

ROYAL MARINES.

Major William S. Cumming left on Saturday last in the Orient steamship Oroya for Sydney, N.S.W., to relieve Lieut.-Colonel Francis J. Cotter in the Royal Arthur.

Major David Hailes relieves Major Charles Clarke, and Lieut. George C. Woodcock, R.M.A., replaces Captain Maurice P. Hankey, R.M.A., in the Ramilles, flagship of the Rear-Admiral, Mediterranean station.

Major Richard K. Clavell, of the Warspite, succeeds Major and Hon. Lieut.-Colonel Charles B. Dick, Paymaster of the Plymouth Division. Fortunately for the headquarters theatre Lieut.-Colonel Dick's mantle, as director of that popular institution, falls on excellent shoulders, as Major Clavell is not a stranger to histrionic art. Major William S. S. Harvest relieves Major Clavell in the flagship of the Pacific station.

Captain Arthur T. Schreiber, R.M.A., Assistant Adjutant at headquarters, has obtained the Adjutancy of the Suffolk Artillery Militia (Eastern Division), and is relieved at Eastney by Lieut. Charles T. Fisher, R.M.A., of the Mars.

Captain Richard C. Brown, R.M.A. (seconded), Adjutant of the Tipperary Artillery Militia, completes five years' service in that appointment on Saturday next and reverts to regimental duty at headquarters, Portsmouth, when relieved by Captain E. F. Corbett, R.G.A.

Captain Trant B. Luard embarks in the Blenheim, to be commissioned on the 1st prox. at Chatham.

Captains J. Hamilton Lambert and Gilbert Drage qualified as interpreters in Spanish at the last Army examination in languages.

Lieut. Claude L. Muntz relieved Lieut. H. F. Stockley in the Niobe on Saturday last, the latter officer having completed two years' service.

Lieut. Arthur F. Salkeld, R.M.A., relieves Lieut. Charles T. Fisher, R.M.A., in the Mars, on the appointment of the latter officer as Assistant-Adjutant at head-quarters.

ESTABLISHED 1789.

ROBERT LEWIS, 20, ST. JAMES' ST., LONDON, S.W.

CIGARS.

The Finest Selection of all the Leading Havana Brands.
Sole Agents for the Hoffman House Cigars.

CIGARETTES.

GOLD TIPPED, BALKAN SOBRANIE, and YENIDJE
NARGHILE BRANDS.

TOBACCO.

WINGFIELD LAWN TENNIS, GUARDS, and SANDRINGHAM
MIXTURES.

Telegrams: "Intimidat, London."

20, ST. JAMES' STREET, LONDON, S.W.

Telephone No. 3787, Gerrard.

Navv Foreign.

It has lately been stated that the Russian Naval Budget for 1901, amounting to 60,000,000 roubles, had proved insufficient, and that, therefore, the Minister of Marine had obtained the Imperial consent to a credit of 37,000,000 roubles more, making altogether 97,000,000 roubles. There appears to be some misunderstanding about this. As a matter of fact the estimates for 1901, amounting to the sum indicated (or to be exact, to 97,097,666 roubles) were published by the Kronstadtski Vestnik and the Kotlin last September, and the outlay of 60,000,000 roubles was for the normal or ordinary outlay. It could not have been anticipated that the Russians would expend in 1901 only the smaller amount, because in the present year the total outlay is over 87,500,000 roubles. The additional sum of 37,000,000 roubles is for what is known as extraordinary expenditure, and includes 16,000,000 roubles for the increase of the fleet, 10,000,000 for additions to the ordinary budget, 3,000,000 roubles for Port Arthur and 2,000,000 roubles for Vladivostok. About 38,000,000 roubles will be devoted to shipbuilding and guns.

Provision is made for building four battleships at St. Petersburg, the Borodino (New Admiralty yard), Orel (Galerny), Emperor Alexander III. (Baltic), and Prince Souvaroff (Baltic) of 13,516 tons; also the Admiral Boutakoff, being an enlarged coast-defence ship of the General Admiral Apraxine type. In addition there will be a cruiser for the Pacific of 3,300 tons, a collier of 7,200 tons, another Imperial yacht and two torpedo boats, which are intended to act as its escort. At Nikolaieff, on the Black Sea, a first-class cruiser of about 6,250 tons, and six torpedo vessels of 350 tons each, will be built, and at Sevastopol another cruiser of the same class, and 12 torpedo boats, which are to be sent in sections to Port Arthur. All these vessels are expected to be ready in 1902, but the promise is not likely to be realised. The Reichswehr of Vienna states that the two cruisers to be built on the Black Sea will be of the same type as the Bogatyr, which is in hand in Germany, and will be 436ft. long, with 54ft. beam, and a mean draught of 20ft. 6in. There are to be engines of 19,500 horse-power, intended to give a speed of 23 knots. The armament will comprise twelve 6in. quick-firers on the Canet system, of which four will be in pairs, in two armoured turrets fore and aft, four others in armoured casemates, and four on the upper deck with shields. There will also be twelve Canet 3-in. quick-firers, and six Hotchkiss guns, as well as two above-water and four submerged torpedo tubes. The boilers will be on the Normand system, and coal will suffice for a range of 5,000 miles at 10 knots. The complement of the vessels will be 21 officers and 550 men.

The German battleship "G," which was laid down a few days ago in the Kiel dockyard, belongs to the same class as the Wittelsbach, which was launched in July. So far as at present planned there will be five ships of the type, of which "D," "E," and "F" are on the stocks. It is expected that "G" will be launched next summer, it being intended to push her forward with great rapidity. She will displace 11,800 tons and be built entirely of German steel. The Berliner Börsen-Zeitung says that she is likely to have a speed of 19 knots. Like her sisters, she will have three engines driving as many bronze screws. The total horse-power will exceed 15,000, and there will be twelve boilers. The auxiliary engines on board will be about 100, and will be driven partly by electricity. The armament will consist of fifty-four guns, including four 9.4in., eight 5.9in., and twelve 3.2in. Protection will be given by a complete armoured belt with a maximum thickness of nearly nine inches, and there will be armour for the citadel 5½ inches thick.

The Danziger Zeitung states that the great number of German ships now on the China station has made it necessary for the Government to provide repairing facilities, and works are being erected therefore at Tsingtau. It was proposed to send a factory vessel, but this idea appears to have been abandoned, and the Löwenburg has been sent to Tsingtau instead, with material and stores for the establishment. In this way the German squadron is expected to become independent of Hong Kong and Shanghai. Up to the present time no serious damage has happened to any of the ships, although they have been lying for weeks together in unprotected harbours. They will now be sent in succession to be refitted at Tsingtau, where the Chinese destroyer Hai Ching has been overhauled. Tsingtau has large coaling facilities also.

The Rheinisch-Westphalische Zeitung publishes a report showing the sources from which the German navy was manned in the year 1899. Men were recruited to the number of 5,486, of whom 2,354 came from inland provinces, and 3,132 from the sea-faring or partly sea-faring population, while 1,480 entered as volunteers before they reached the period of service. The largest number of the sea-faring men came from the district of the 9th Army Corps (Schleswig-Holstein)—1,318. The largest entry from the inland districts was from the territory of the 7th Army Corps (660 men), and from Alsace came 146. Most of the volunteers were from Schleswig-Holstein, but our contemporary remarks with great gratification that from north and south, east and west, hill and valley, many came willingly to join the fleet.

A letter received from Tokio by the Allgemeine Marine Correspondenz states that the Japanese cruiser Yakumo, which was built at Stettin, and has lately proceeded to Japan, has given the greatest satisfaction. Japanese officers have reported very well upon her, and the boilers and engines have been examined. The system of ventilation is said to be excellent, and the assertion is made that on the passage through the Red Sea the temperature of the engine and boiler rooms was not much more than half that in British ships. The machinery worked very well during the passage, and without the smallest mishap.

The French Northern Squadron has been experimenting with wireless telegraphy. Apparatus was established at the Stiff semaphore at Ushant, and Lieut. Tissot, the naval expert on this subject, was there. Although the sea ran high, communication was made at a distance of about 44 miles, and messages from the semaphore station were distinctly read on board the Bruix and other ships of the squadron.

Instructions have been received from Admiral Morin at Spezia Dockyard to begin the construction of a battleship to be named the Vittorio Emanuele III., of which the following will be the characteristics:—Displacement, 12,625 tons; length, 472ft. 3in.; beam, 73ft. 6in.; draught, 25ft. 10in. Protection will be given by side-armour of Harveyised nickel steel, with a maximum thickness of 9.8in. with armoured bulkheads at the ends 7.8in. thick, and a thin armoured deck. The armament will comprise two 12-in. and twelve 7.9-in. B.L., and twelve 3-in. and twelve 1.8-in. quick-firers, as well as torpedo tubes. The engines are to develop 20,000 horse-power, and to give a speed of at least 22 knots. The range of action will be 10,000 miles at 10 knots, and 10,000 tons of coal will ordinarily be carried, but provision will be made for double that quantity. A sister ship, the Regina Margherita, will be launched at Spezia in March, and it is intended to lay down another battleship of the same class at Castellamare, which is to be known as the Regina Elena.

The Popolo Romano publishes the memorandum which Admiral Morin has presented with the Italian Navy estimates. He points out that latterly the operations have been conducted in relation to financial exigencies, and not to the naval needs of the country. The new proposals are that from the year 1900-1901 to the year 1903-1904 there shall be an extraordinary annual expenditure of 8,000,000 lire for shipbuilding, in addition to provision in the ordinary estimates. The money not included in the sum voted by the law of July 28, 1891, will be transferred to the ordinary funds for shipbuilding. During the quadrennium 24,500,000 lire will be expended in the first year, and 24,000,000 in each of the succeeding years. The number of operatives permanently employed in the building yards is not to exceed 12,000 under the provisions of the law.

The United States battleship Kentucky lately visited Smyrna in order to exert pressure upon the Ottoman Government in relation to the indemnity claimed for losses suffered by American subjects in the Turkish dominions. The effect is said to have been that the Sultan has ordered the Minister of Marine to enter into a contract with Messrs. Cramp, of Philadelphia, for the construction of a cruiser at a cost of £400,000. The relation between cause and effect is not quite apparent, and, inasmuch as the Sublime Porte finds money rather "tight," as is evidenced by the inability to pay salaries, and by the failure to push forward energetically the reconstruction of the old ships at Genoa, it is quite likely that the contract with Messrs. Cramp will end abortively.

THE PEKING LEGATIONS.

Tuesday's Gazette contained several despatches from Sir E. Seymour, Commander-in-Chief on the China station, relative to the part played by the Legation guards during the siege of the Peking Legations. Of the conduct of the force Sir Claude Macdonald speaks as follows in a despatch addressed to Sir E. Seymour:—

"I cannot speak in any other terms but those of the highest praise of the behaviour of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of this detachment. They were exposed day and night for two months to the most arduous, irksome, and responsible duties, which they fulfilled with a cheerful alacrity and with a courage and endurance which excited the admiration of everybody. Their bearing under fire was quite excellent, and could not have been surpassed by the best veteran soldiers. During the entire siege I did not observe the slightest signs of liquor in any of the men, neither was a case reported to me, and this though the facilities for obtaining drink were great. To sum up, the general good conduct, soldierly bearing, and steadiness under fire of the men of the detachment were worthy of the highest traditions of the British Army and of the corps to which they belong.

"This high state of excellence was undoubtedly in a great measure due to the officers and non-commissioned officers. Capt. Strouts was an excellent soldier and a gallant gentleman. He was killed in the defense of the Legation on July 16, and his loss was to me, and to the defense generally, irreparable. Had Capt. Strouts lived, I should certainly have recommended him to the Lords of the Admiralty, through your Excellency, for promotion for the Distinguished Service Order.

"Capt. Halliday was dangerously wounded whilst leading a sortie on June 24, and his valuable services were lost for the rest of the siege. Under another cover I am recommending this officer for the Victoria Cross.

"Capt. Wray, who was also wounded in taking part in the defence of the Tartar City Wall, one of the most dangerous posts in the defence, commanded the detachment very efficiently until the end of the siege. This latter officer has, I understand, recommended several non-commissioned officers. Those that came under my special notice were Sergts. Murphy, Saunders, and Preston, and Corpals. Gregory and Gowney, who are all worthy of the highest praise."

The non-commissioned officers recommended for promotion by Capt. Wray are Lance-Sergt. T. E. Preston, of the Orlando; Corpl. W. Gregory, Corpl. D. J. Gowney, and Acting Lance-Corpl. T. R. Allen, of the Wei-hai-wei detachment; Armourer T. S. Thomas, of the Orlando; and Sick Berth Steward R. G. Fuller. Of these Corpl. Preston is also recommended for the conspicuous gallantry medal. On July 14 Preston climbed on to the wall of the Imperial Carriage Park, and by keeping some 50 Chinese at bay with his rifle, enabled an American gunner named Michell to capture a banner left on a barricade by the Chinese. Armourer Thomas showed great ingenuity in adapting modern Russian projectiles to an old muzzle-loading smooth-bore gun and in making ammunition for this as well as for other guns and rifles. His services, says Capt. Wray, were invaluable. To Sick Berth Steward Fuller praise is given in Sir Claude MacDonald's despatches. Dr. W. Poole, Physician to the Legation, also speaks in high terms of his conduct, and Capt. Wray adds that his behaviour and treatment of the wounded and sick were beyond all description. Leading Signaller H. Swannell is recommended for reward for his gallant conduct in attending to Mr. Oliphant, who was mortally wounded, under a close and accurate fire. Sergt. T. Murphy is mentioned several times in the course of Capt. Wray's detailed narrative for courage and coolness. Of the steadiness of the whole detachment Capt. Wray quotes a proof in the fact that of 18,000 rounds of Lee-Netford ammunition brought from Tien-tsin some 9,000 remained at the end of the siege.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died.)

RUSTENBURG ROAD (Attack on Convoy).

Mtd. Inf.—Vict.: KILLED: 304 Sgt. Francis.
R.F.A.—75th Batt.: KILLED: Bombr. 25003 Brown-word: Gr. 30660 McCleary. Wounded: 2nd Lieut.
Baker; 20658 Burgess, 30803 Lamb, 32466 Wellings, 14121 G. Jones.
W. Yorks.—2nd: KILLED: Cpl. 2430 Anderson; L.-Cpls.
5300 Turner, 5054 Dodd; Ptes. 3254 Thornton, 5032
Waal, 3916 Russell, 2594 Heaphy. WOUNDED: Col.-Sgt.
1528 Jackson; Sgt. 2831 Sykes; L.-Cpl. 4758 Paling;
Ptes. 939 Burton, 4554 Brown, 5589 Waller, 789 Lambert, (P2445) Pound, 5319 Parking, 1324 Adams, 4502
Evans, 3336 McGlone. MISSING: Sgt. 4495 Mountain;
Cpl. 5230 Hey; Pte. 2884 Langam.
Yorks L.I.—2nd: KILLED: L.-Cpl. 1444 Syder; Ptes.
1909 Meppen, 4810 Costello, 96 Gosnell, 3576 Gowland.
WOUNDED: L.-Cpl. 5439 Miller, 1545 King, 4332 Wakefield, 3376 Parkinson, 1714 Daniels, 1885 Jeffreys.

MISCELLANEOUS.

6th D.G.—4145 Winthrop, wounded, Welverdiend,
Dec. 2.
2nd Drag.—3564 Keogh, wounded, Kaalfontein, Dec. 3.
5th Lancers.—4397 L.-Cpl. Cowhig, wounded, Elandsfontein, Nov. 30.
6th Drag.—3290 Hildwood, accidentally wounded, Barberton, Sept. 21.
8th Huss.—Capt. Burns-Lindow, 2568 L.-Cpl. Neal,
4476 Lambert, 3671 Maher, wounded, Kopperfontein,
Dec. 3; Lieut.-Col. Clowes, 4286 Gadd, wounded, Geluk,
Oct. 13.
9th Lancers.—Lieut. Theobald, 3695 Heights, 4267
L.-Cpl. McCrea, Dec. 2; 4216 Sear, 3621 Frisby, Dec. 3, wounded, Slickspruit; 4025 Cpl. Wells, wounded, Carolina, Sept. 6.
10th Huss.—3100 Weller, wounded, Kopperfontein,
Dec. 3.
11th Huss.—4033 Wilson (attached 18th Huss.), wounded, near Middleburg, Nov. 29.
12th Lancers.—3298 Hargreaves, 4523 Hopwood, 3437
Stokes, wounded, Kosterfontein, Dec. 1.
14th Huss.—181 Lawrence, wounded, near Heidelberg,
Dec. 4.
16th Lancers.—3427 Scott, missing, has rejoined.
17th Lancers.—Capt. Warner, 5149 Rose, 3930 Arnold, 4494 Hazelwood, wounded; 4721 Gould, missing, Slickspruit, Dec. 2.
18th Hussars.—4261 Grieve, reported missing, was killed Talana Hill, Oct. 20, 1899; 4084 L.-Cpl. Wilson, 3049 Lignerbee, wounded, Middelburg, Dec. 8.
Imp. Yeo.—10th Batn.: 10800 Walker, wounded, Buffelshoek, Dec. 6; Lieut. Arbuthnot, 4928 Birch, wounded, near Mafeking, Dec. 7. 19th: 13352 Taylor, wounded,
Buffelshoek, Dec. 6. 73rd Co.: 13471 Dann, wounded,
Buffelshoek, Dec. 6. 77th Co.: 15804 Blyth, wounded,
Krugersdorp, Aug. 21, previously reported Blythe, of Marshall's Horse.
Irreg. Horse.—S. Aust. Bushmen:—77* Sgt. McCabe,
48 Page, killed; 80 Johnson, 148 Mayfield, wounded,
Rietfontein, Nov. 29. N.S.W. Bushmen: 458 Mohr, 423
Moran, missing, Wolmaran's Drift, Dec. 8. Border:
Dayle, wounded, Witkop, Dec. 7.
Mtd. Inf.—Queensland: Lieut. Hanley, 187 Cpl. Skelton, 6 Cpl. Dodds, wounded, Rietfontein, Nov. 29-30.
N.Z.: 394 Jennings, killed, 507 Collins, wounded, Rietfontein, Nov. 29; 371 Grimes, injured, fall from horse,
Carolina, Sept. 9.
Mtd. Rifles.—Cape: 3177 Bluet, wounded, Heidelberg,
Sept. 14, previously reported as Charles.
Police.—Vryburg: Abrahams, Apolles, accidentally wounded near Vryburg, Dec. 6.
R.H.A.—"M" Batt.: 61873 Croft, accidentally injured,
Carolina, Sept. 9.
R.F.A.—68th Batt.: 24915 Parrott, 15434 Hudson, wounded, Hamillfontein, Dec. 4. 77th: 29155 Parker, accidentally wounded, Harrismith, Dec. 8. 83rd: 17817
Brown, wounded, Balmoral, Dec. 3. Vickers-Maxims:
55311 Sgt. Lacey, wounded, Wolvefontein, Nov. 25.
Amm. Col.—6th: 47438 Spencer, left hand amputated, result of accident, Standerton, Nov. 28. 4th Brig. Div.:

98524 Bombr. Fox, wounded, Stellenbosch, Dec. 4.
Scots Gds.—7506 Bakes, missing, has rejoined.
R. Scots.—Mtd. Inf.: 3613 Sgt. Sharp, wounded, Lady-brand, Dec. 4; 3402 Sgt. McBean, 6108 Henderson, wounded, Leeuw River, Dec. 2.
E. Kent.—2nd: 2427 Gammon, wounded, Balmoral,
Nov. 19; 2125 Beer*, accidentally wounded by sentry,
Brugspruit, Dec. 8.
Lanc.—5671 Brady, wounded, 6501 Hoyle, prisoner, near Utrecht, Dec. 2. 2nd: Col. Gawne, Lieut. Wood-gate, wounded, Vryheid, Dec. 11. 4th: 7409 Minshall, wounded, Naauwport, Dec. 10.
Northld. Fus.—Mtd. Inf.: 4468 Briggs, 4076 Gurden, 5121 Rymill, 3765 Vivian, wounded, Barberton, Dec. 8.
Warwick.—2nd: 2959 Copeland, 3284 Hughes, wounded, Elandschoek, Dec. 10.
R. Fus.—7083 L.-Cpl. Lodge, missing, has rejoined.
5th: Lieut. Compton, wounded, near Utrecht, Dec. 2.
Liverpool.—1st: 4787 Reilley, accidentally wounded,
Waterval Onder, Nov. 21. Mtd. Inf.: 1886 Sgt. Knight, wounded, Balmoral, Dec. 8.
Lincoln.—2nd: 3202 Wilson, wounded, self-inflicted, accidentally, Kromellenboorg, Dec. 3.
Somerset L.I.—2nd: 4253 Cpl. Giblet, accidentally wounded, Kockkoemer, Dec. 5.
W. Yorks.—2nd: 4495 Sgt. Mountain, 5230 Cpl. Hey, 2884 Langham, missing, were killed in action.
Irish.—1st: 1222 Ryan, missing, Kaapmuiden,
Sept. 23.
Lancs. Fus.—2nd: 5182 Ingham, 4776 Brownson, wounded, Vryheid, Dec. 10.
Scots Fus.—3277 L.-Sgt. Meeking, missing, has rejoined.
S.W. Borders.—2nd: 2708 Wynyard, missing, Krugersdorp, Dec. 3.
Cameronians.—2nd: 5585 Cannovan, 5244 G. Smith,
3171 Cpl. Simpson, 3647 L.-Cpl. Seymour, 6375 Bughr.
McLaughlin, 3654 W. Smith, 3201 McGee, Spion Kop,
Jan. 24; 3147 Hanlon, Vaalkranz, Feb. 5, reported missing, were wounded, and died of wounds.
Inniskillings.—3022 Sheridan, 1863 Cpl. Thompson, wounded, Middelburg, Dec. 9.
S. Lancs.—1st: 4950 Dumbell, 5750 Doyle, 2783
Trainer, killed, Spion Kop, Jan. 24, previously reported missing.
Oxford L.I.—5917 Taylor, 4646 Merry, 3372 Lundie 5937 Jarvis, 6016 Thorne, 2990 Keene, 2024 Larker, missing, have rejoined.
N. Lancs.—Mtd. Inf.: 4653 Hughes, wounded, Belfast
Dec. 6.
Yorks L.I.—2nd: 2907 Sgt. Bedford*, wounded, near Scheepoort, Dec. 4.
K.R.R.—1st: 5923 Laming, Nov. 29; 4705 Williams, wounded near Middelburg, Dec. 9. 3rd: 2904 A. Smith, wounded, Hamillfontein, Dec. 2.
Manchester.—1st: 4113 Makin, killed; 4354 Piggott, 5351 Mills, 3064 L.-Cpl. Hall, 4802 Kershaw, 4317 Darcy, injured by lightning, Schoeman's Kloof, Nov. 29. 2nd:
5466 Mattock, 5562 Foster, 5573 Smart, missing, Harri-smith, Dec. 6.
York and Lanc.—1st: 5640 Jordan, 5322 Neal, killed,
5748 Turpin, 5682 Skinner, 1355 Houghton, wounded,
5303 Matse, 5309 Summerfield, prisoners, near Utrecht,
Dec. 2.
Gordons.—Mtd. Inf.: 5638 Chalmers, 6321 L.-Cpl. Young, wounded near Bootplaatz, Dec. 7.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

7th D.G.—3815 Senior, Germiston, Dec. 5.
1st Drag.—2885 Bar. Lsdy Smith, Dec. 3; 4039 L.-Cpl.
Roy, Newcastle, Dec. 9.
5th Lancers.—4075 Fowns, accidental injuries, Middelburg, Dec. 3.
8th Huss.—4306 Rawcett, Pretoria, Nov. 15.
14th Huss.—3999 Forte, Pretoria, Dec. 3.
17th Lancers.—4930 Spiers, killed, Kaffir Kop, near Herschel, Dec. 10.
Imp. Yeo.—5608 Stockwell, Harrismith, Dec. 7. 4th
Batn.: 1020 Stubbs, Mooi River, Dec. 10. 5th: 3331
Turnbull, Kimberley, Dec. 4. 20th: Lieut. Barning-ham, enteric and heart complication, suddenly, Pretoria,
Dec. 7. 2nd Co.: 240 Dent, Vrede, Dec. 7; 206 Cpl

Carey, Harrismith, Dec. 9. 16th: 7312 Sgt. Whitehouse.
Mafeking, Dec. 4. 40th: 7936 Blake, Zeerust, Dec. 10.
48th: 2509 Cpl. Andrews, dysentery, Pretoria, Dec. 10.
57th: 10377 Sgt.-Major Dobson-White, dysentery, Kroonstad, Dec. 9. 70th: 12612 Russell, Tuli, Dec. 3.
Irreg. Horse.—N.S.W. Bushmen: 386 Mans, Pretoria,
Nov. 16. S.A.L.H.: 1693 Freeman, Pretoria, Dec. 6.
Steinacker's: Griffin, epilepsy, E. Swaziland, Aug. 11.
Roberts's: Lieut. Ingram (attd. Cape Pioneer Rly. Regt.), concussion of brain, Germiston, Dec. 5. Strathcona's:
21 Dandy, Potchefstroom, Dec. 11. Marshall's: Laing, wounds, Johannesburg, Nov. 29; 371 Wilmot (? disease), Thaba N'chu, May 5; 2798 L.-Cpl. Catton, wounds,
July 30.
Mtd. Inf.—N.Z.: 418 Sgt. Smith, wounds, Bronkhurst
Spruit, Dec. 2. N.S.W.: 455 Thompson, Kroonstad,
Dec. 4.
Mtd. Rifles.—Kaffi.: 2902 Keys, typhoid, East London,
June 14. Bechuanaland: Kerr (? disease), Mafeking,
Dec. 8. Canadian: 1st: 67 Dunsmore, Pretoria, Dec. 10.
R.H.A.—"M" Batt.: 85761 McCormish, accidentally killed on railway, Stormberg, Dec. 5.
R.G.A.—10th Co. (E.D.): 2nd Lieut. Thompson-Pegge, lightning, Dundee, Dec. 11.
R.F.A.—Col. Chapman, Pretoria, Dec. 3. 2nd Batt:
44926 Roads, dysentery, Frankfort, Dec. 5. 21st: 74066
Dutton, Pretoria, Dec. 7.
R.E.—Tele., 1st Div.: 19213 Sh.-Sm. Barrett, cardiac disease, Edenburg, Dec. 9.
Gren. Gds.—2nd: 5203 Harrison, pneumonia, Pretoria,
Dec. 9.
Coldstream Gds.—1st: Surman, Bethulie, Dec. 7. 2nd:
2314 Chambers, Dec. 8; 1197 Fisher, Dec. 1, Potchefstroom; 457 Allen, Klerksdorp, Dec. 5.
Scots Gds.—2nd: (P1674) Balmer, 90 Williams, Dec. 4; 2372 Harrison, Dec. 10, Harrismith; 2441 Meex, Potchefstroom, Dec. 2.
Lanc.—4th: 6967 Raynor, congestion lungs, Colesberg,
Dec. 8.
Northld. Fus.—7409 Nolan, wounds, Honing Spruit,
Dec. 9.
Warwick.—2nd: 924 Wankling, Pretoria, Dec. 10.
Liverpool.—1st: 4577 Lawlor, suffocation, Waterval
Boven, Nov. 30.
Norfolk.—2nd: 2908 Halls, Pretoria, Dec. 3.
Lincoln.—2nd: 5377 L.-Cpl. Hall, Pretoria, Dec. 7.
Suffolk.—Mtd. Inf.: 4123 Steggles, Pretoria, Nov. 30.
Somerset L.I.—2nd: 5794 Copp, dysentery, Bloemfontein, Dec. 9; 416 Locks, Kimberley, Dec. 8.
E. Yorks.—2nd: 6006 Sullivan, Harrismith, Dec. 6;
2945 Booth, phthisis, Cape Town, Dec. 7.
Bedford.—2nd: 6539 Halsey, Thaba N'chu, Dec. 5.
4th: 3852 Kurstenson, Kimberley, Dec. 4.
Lancs. Fus.—2nd: 1268 Corrigan, Mooi River, Dec. 5.
6th: 6899 Devine (cause unknown), near Edenburg-
Dec. 5.
Scots Fus.—5969 Anderson (? 5964 Anderson, Mtd. Inf.
Co.), killed, near Frederickstad, Dec. 5. 2nd: 7632 Cpl.
Winton, Bloemfontein, Dec. 11.
Cheshire.—2nd: 3060 Fisher, abscess liver, Johannesburg, Dec. 10. 4th: 3959 Whitfield, Springfontein,
Dec. 11.
S. W. Borders.—2nd: 5869 L.-Cpl. Horseman, Krugersdorp, Dec. 4; 3069 L.-Cpl. Tooke, Johannesburg, Dec. 10; 6160 Harris, dysentery, Kroonstad, Dec. 10. 3rd: L.-Cpl.
Walsh, accidentally shot dead, Warrenton, Dec. 11.
Inniskillings.—3230 Doherty, Dec. 1; 5914 Cpl. Clarke, Middelburg, Dec. 9.
Worcester.—1st: 4912 W. Smith, Winburg, Dec. 6.
2nd: (? 4511) Wright, at sea, Nov. 18.
E. Lancs.—3rd: 9339 Hargreaves, Bloemfontein, Dec.
4; 150 Botle, Brandfort, Dec. 6.
E. Surrey.—4th: 676 Puzay (attd. 2nd Hants), Germiston, Dec. 4. Vol.: 6160 Wood, Ladysmith, Dec. 10.
D.C.L.I.—2nd: 2789 Buckland, dysentery, Dec. 3; 2276
McLean, Dec. 6; 5865 Parker, Dec. 7, Middelburg; 6179
T. Jones, Springfontein, Dec. 6.
W. Riding.—1st: 1637 Gilby, wounds, Rhenoster Kop,
Dec. 4.
Sussex.—1st: 5884 Hope, Nov. 23; 3985 Baker, Nov.
30, Lindley; 5510 Coulson, Germiston, Dec. 4; 3615
Francis, Kroonstad, Dec. 10.
Hants.—2nd: 3659 Japcombe, Pretoria, Dec. 8.
S. Staff.—1st: 2646 Davies, peritonitis, Harrismith,
Dec. 3. Vol.: 6932 Witton, De Aar, Dec. 5.
S. Lancs.—5366 Heron, dysentery, Mooi River, Dec. 4.

ELKINGTON & CO., LTD.

Goldsmiths, Silversmiths, and Court Jewellers,

THE ORIGINATORS AND PATENTEES OF ELECTRO PLATE.

ELKINGTON'S SPOONS AND FORKS

are Manufactured and Hardened by a Special Superior Process.

ELKINGTON'S PATENT SECURE-HANDLE CUTLERY.

Blades of Finest Hand-Forged Double Shear Steel.

Fine African Ivory Handles.

CATALOGUES AND ESTIMATES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

22, REGENT STREET, S.W., & 73, CHEAPSIDE, E.C., LONDON;

9, Parker Street, LIVERPOOL; St. Ann's Square, MANCHESTER;

22, Blackett St., NEWCASTLE; 84, St. Vincent St., GLASGOW; 3, Esplanade, CALCUTTA;

Manufactory and Showrooms: Newhall Street, BIRMINGHAM.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED
ELKINGTON PLATE.

Elkington's "GEORGIAN" Pattern.

Elkington's "KENT" Pattern.

Elkington's "LOUIS XV." Pattern.

Elkington's "RICH BEAD" Pattern.

Welsh.—1st: 7520 Isaacs, Germiston, Dec. 5.
 Oxford L.I.—1st: 6069 L.-Cpl. Stopp, Heilbron, Dec. 10.
 Essex.—1st: 5727 Lodge, Germiston, Dec. 11. Mil.
 Res.: 6066 Siggins, Standerton, Dec. 11.
 Northampton.—2nd: 1334 Andrews, Kimberley, Dec. 7.
 W. Kent.—2nd: 4305 Shoebridge, Dec. 3; 3082 Pike, Dec. 4; 4844 W. Smith, Dec. 5, Frankfort. Vol.: 6884 Turpin, Norvalspont, Dec. 10.
 Yorks L.I.—2nd: 3175 Spurr, aneurism aorta, Bloemfontein, Dec. 9; 5817 L.-Cpl. Steward, Johannesburg, Dec. 9. Mtd. Inf.: 3468 Helstrup, dysentery, Middelburg, Dec. 4.
 Shrops. L.I.—2nd: 6188 Helsby, Pretoria, Dec. 6.
 K.R.R.—1st: 7591 Pearce, Middelburg, Nov. 30.
 Wilts.—2nd: 2312 L.-Cpl. Warrenner, killed, fall from train, Elandsfontein, Dec. 9; 4535 Bowden, Dec. 11; (? 2412) Fitzsimonds, Dec. 1; 4960 Sillence, Dec. 7, Pretoria.
 Manchester.—1st: 3428 Wren, Lydenburg, Dec. 2.
 2nd: 2825 Sgt. Ashton, lightning, Modderfontein, Dec. 5; 4561 Ridgway, Harrismith, Dec. 10.
 N. Staff.—4th: 3808 Sgt. Grocott, pneumonia, Deelfontein, Dec. 10.
 Durham L.I.—1st: 6469 L.-Cpl. Wilson, Standerton, Dec. 4. Vol.: 8087 Armstrong, killed accidentally by train, Vaal River, Dec. 6.
 Irish Rifles.—1st: 1623 Plunkett, Kroonstad, Dec. 7; 1471 Sinnott, Middelburg, Sept. 6; 3846 Kennedy, killed, Dewetsdorp, Nov. 23. Vol.: 7202 Law, Brandfort, Dec. 4.
 Irish Fus.—2nd: 3431 Andrews, died Nov. 29, incorrectly reported as of 2nd Scots Fus.
 Arg. and Suth.—3542 Austin, aneurism thoracic aorta, Pretoria, Nov. 30. 1st: 6862 Shaw, Pretoria, Dec. 9.
 Leinster.—1st: 1903 Farrell, uræmic convulsion, Harrismith, Dec. 5; 5506 Fitzgerald, Vrede, Dec. 7; 4846 Gallagher, Standerton, Dec. 10.
 Munster Fus.—3079 Bailey, dysentery, Kroonstad, Dec. 4.
 Dublin Fus.—1st: 6824 Byrne, drowned, Modder River, Dec. 6.
 Rhodesian.—Cpl. Mead, died, Tuli, Mar. 7; previously reported Cpl. Head.
 P.O. Corps.—Sgt. Amery, Lydenburg, Nov. 30.
 A.P.D.—554 Sgt. Devine, dysentery, Cape Town, Dec. 5.
 A.S.C.—Lieut.-Col. Stoneman, Maritzburg, Dec. 10.
 9th Co.: 8244 Slingo, dysentery, Kroonstad, Dec. 9.
 R.A.M.C.: 10394 Elliott, Bloemfontein, Dec. 8. 14th Brig. Bearer Co.: 12524 Lumbard, Pretoria, Nov. 30. Vols., No. II. Gen. Hosp.: 13562 Sgt. Dykes, influenza and heart failure, Kimberley, Dec. 2.
 St. John's Amb.—1470 Massey, Pretoria, Dec. 2.
 Cape Vol. M.S.C.—Crawley, Winburg, Dec. 9.
 Imp Bearer Corps.—Weston, Standerton, Dec. 9.
 A.O.C.—Condr. Shaw, Pretoria, Dec. 5.

CEYLON CASUALTY.

K.R.R.—2nd: 742 Scott, Colombo, Dec. 1.

INDIA OFFICE.

ARRIVALS REPORTED IN LONDON.

Lieut.-Col. M. H. S. Grover.	Lieut. G. Bailey.
Col. E. D. F. Bignell.	Lieut. A. J. P. Coke.
Capt. F. N. Windsor.	Lieut. A. W. McArthur.
Capt. A. H. Allenby.	2nd Lieut. J. L. Costello.
Capt. C. Roe.

EXTENSIONS OF LEAVE.

Capt. B. G. Seton, 8 days.	Lieut. L. Craig, 1 mo.
Capt. C. K. Anderson, 14 days.

PERMITTED TO RETURN.

Col. A. Howlett.	Capt. M. Dick.
Lieut.-Col. H. E. Cadell.	Lieut. F. B. Tillard.
Major A. Beale.	Lieut. R. S. Gillespie.
Major H. E. Banatwala,	Chief Engr. T. Walmesley.
I.M.S., B.	Engr. S. H. Stevenson.
Major F. P. Maynard,
I.M.S., B.

NEXT Thursday (Dec. 20), at the R.A. Institution, Lieut.-Gen. Sir H. Le G. Geary, K.C.B., R.A., in the chair, a lecture will be given by Major B. R. Ward, R.E., on "The War in South Africa, shown on Synoptical Charts."

THE fourth issue of United Australia, a quarterly review, but about to be published monthly, of which the motto is "One people, one destiny," has reached us. It is a comprehensive periodical, embracing all matters of general Australian concern, and the literary style is of a high order. Mr. Edmund Barton, Q.C., Sir John Downer, and other well-known persons are amongst the contributors. United Australia is issued simultaneously from Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane, Hobart, and Perth. The price is one shilling.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos

in Bond for Export.

The Gazettes.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 11.

2nd Dragoon Guards.—Appointment of 2nd Lieut. J. Porter (since killed in action) is dated Oct. 15, not as stated in Gazette of Oct. 23.
 19th Hussars.—Lieut. G. A. Egerton to be Capt., vice H. G. S. Young, promoted (June 23).

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

2nd Batn.—Sergt. J. Cavendish Browne (since killed in action) to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Sept. 11).
 4th Batn.—Sergt. E. M. Grantham to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (June 23).
 12th Batn.—Sergt. V. C. Jonas to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Oct. 31).
 13th Batn.—Lieut. W. B. Du Pre resigns his commission (Oct. 24).
 14th Batn.—Lieut. T. L. Halls to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army; Colour-Sergt. G. H. Hale to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Sept. 19).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.—2nd Lieut. J. H. Harvey-Pirie resigns his commission (Dec. 12); Robert B. Sanderson nominated by Governor of Victoria, to be 2nd Lieut. (dated July 18, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 12); Capt. H. J. Brook to be Div. Adjt., vice Major F. W. Heath, vacated appointment on promotion (Nov. 23).
 Royal Garrison Artillery.—Capt and Brevet Major A. H. Lee retires from the Service, receiving a gratuity (Dec. 12); Supy. Capt. D. F. Nicholl to be Capt., vice H. J. Cotter, seconded (Nov. 10); Lieut. Cyril H. Mortimer, from Bethune's Mtd. Inf., to be 2nd Lieut. (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 12).

Scots Guards.—2nd Lieut. A. H. Royds to be Lieut., vice A. M. Southey, killed in action (Nov. 24).
 Royal Guards Reserve Regt.—Capt. C. B. Balfour seconded whilst a member of the House of Commons (Dec. 10).

LINE BATTALIONS.

West Yorkshire Regt.—Lieut. C. W. Gordon seconded for service with Chinese Regt. of Infantry (Nov. 24).
 Bedford Regt.—Major H. Lysons, V.O., from Royal Fusiliers to be Lieut.-Col., vice Brevet Col. W. H. Riddell, removed on appointment to staff.
 Royal Irish Regt.—Capt. D. H. Davis (since deceased) seconded for service on staff (July 8). Promotions to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts., antedated:—F. M. Watkins, to July 8, vice D. H. Davis; A. W. Brush to July 8; F. S. Lillie, to July 11, vice J. B. S. Alderson, died of wounds received in action. Promotions to Lieut. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts., antedated:—R. W. W. Grimshaw, to July 8; C. G. Holland, to July 11. Lieut. E. O. Davis, from 4th Batn., to be 2nd Lieut., vice E. J. Norwood, seconded.
 Lancashire Fusiliers.—Capt. W. F. Elmslie to be Major, on augmentation (Dec. 12); Capt. D. T. Seckham seconded for service as an Adjt. of Volunteers (Nov. 15).
 East Lancashire Regt.—Lieut. W. H. Cooper to be Capt., vice E. A. Daubeny, seconded (June 4); appointment to a 2nd Lieutenantancy of Pte. W. L. Carter, from Gordon Highlanders, cancelled at his own request.
 Hampshire Regt.—Lieut. J. H. Deane to be Capt., vice R. M. Barrington, placed on temp. half-pay; 2nd Lieut. H. R. Jones to be Lieut., vice J. H. Deane (Sept. 28).
 Dorset Regt.—Lieuts. to be Capt.:—R. T. Roper, Adjt., vice A. A. Chichester, seconded; H. N. R. Cowie, to complete establishment (June 13).

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR.

ROSE'S LIME JUICE WHISKY.

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the Island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO Cherry Whisky, Cherry Brandy, Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—

HUNTSMEN,

GOLFERS,

and SPORTSMEN

generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants.

Bottled in Leith, Scotland. Price 54s. per Case of 12 Dozen Quarts, Carriage Paid. A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.,
41, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

Welsh Regt.—Lieut. J. V. Taylor to be Capt., vice L. H. Hawkes, deceased (Nov. 14).
 Essex Regt.—Lieut. H. J. Sammut to be Capt., vice B. A. Warry, seconded (Aug. 9). Lieut. R. M. C. Buxton seconded for service with Chinese Regt. of Infantry (Nov. 12). 2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts.:—S. E. Woolhouse, vice C. B. Hobkirk, promoted (May 11); A. E. M. Thomson, vice H. J. Sammut (Aug. 9).

Durham L.I.—2nd Lieut. C. L. Matthews to be Lieut., vice A. K. Robb, promoted (Feb. 19).

Highland L.I.—Capt. J. Richardson to be Major, vice J. Mitchell-Innes, retired; Supy. Capt. G. T. B. Wilson to be Capt., vice J. Richardson (Dec. 4).

Royal Irish Fusiliers.—Sergt.-Major John Shannon to be Qrmr., with hon. rank of Lieut., vice Hon. Capt. N. J. Drewin, retired.

Royal Rifle Reserve Regt.—Major R. A. S. Buckle ceases to belong to regt. (Nov. 21).

Staff.—Temporary appointment:—Major M. M. Morris, R.A., to be D.A.A.G. (Dec. 18, 1899). Appointment to Staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Lieut. F. G. Bayley, 13th Hussars, graded as Staff Capt. whilst a Brigade Signalling Officer (Feb. 1).

Staff College.—Col. H. S. G. Miles, M.V.O., resumes appointment of Commandant (Nov. 10).

MEMORANDA.

Officers placed on retired pay:—Col. D. C. De Wend, half-pay; Lieut.-Col. and Col. F. Glennie, Commandant, Royal Military School of Music (Dec. 10).

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. J. Davidson, on completion of his period of service on staff, placed on half-pay (Dec. 1).

Major Hon. E. Baring, 10th Hussars, granted temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst Military Secretary to Right Hon. G. N., Lord Curzon of Kedleston, Viceroy and Governor-Gen. of India.

Lieut. C. H. Poulkes, R.E., granted local rank of Capt. whilst C.R.E. on West Coast of Africa (Oct. 24).

Reserve of Officers.—Lieut. Sir Francis Burdett, Bart., to be Capt.; Lieut. L. A. C. Southam resigns his commission.

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Lancashire (S. Div.).—Carlos Bovill, to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 27).

Mid-Ulster (S. Div.).—Surg.-Lieut.-Col. W. Twigg, M.D., retires under para. 81 Militia Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform (Dec. 13).

Northumberland (W. Div.).—Capt. and Hon. Major F. D. Blake to be Major.

Silgo (S. Div.).—Capt. H. Russell resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform.

Yorkshire (W. Div.).—Capt. S. C. Scrope and Capt. and Instr. of Artillery W. E. Fell granted hon. rank of Major.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (MILITIA).

Royal Anglesey.—Capt. F. H. Rawlins granted hon. rank of Major.

INFANTRY.

3rd Batn. Royal Scots.—George J. R. Clerk and John E. Cruickshank to be 2nd Lieuts. (Nov. 28).

3rd Batn. Royal West Surrey Regt.—Major W. A. D. Shelton granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

4th Batn. Royal Lancaster Regt.—Charles W. R. M. Foster to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 3).

5th Batn. (Liverpool Regt.).—Major C. E. Terry resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform.

4th Batn. Suffolk Regt.—2nd Lieut. L. H. Luddington, from 3rd V.B., to be Lieut. (Dec. 1).

4th Batn. Somerset L.I.—Capt. D. G. Stewart resigns his commission on account of ill-health, and is granted hon. rank of Major, with permission to wear prescribed uniform (Nov. 22).

3rd Batn. Leicester Regt.—Geoffrey D. Nash to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 6).

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regt.—Bertie E. Massey to be 2nd Lieut.

4th Batn. Yorkshire Regt.—Archibald Wright to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 30).

3rd Batn. Scottish Rifles.—Capt. P. J. Maguire resigns his commission on account of ill-health (Dec. 12).

Michael C. Scarbrough to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 6).

5th Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.—Capt. F. F. Boyd to be Instr. of Musketry (Nov. 21); Arthur G. M. Hardingham to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 29).

3rd Batn. Dorset Regt.—2nd Lieut. A. C. Saunders to be Lieut. (Dec. 4).

3rd Batn. Essex Regt.—Guy F. Pryor to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 12). 4th Batn.: 2nd Lieut. E. C. Watson, G. W. F. Gyll, and J. A. B. Thompson to be Lieuts. (Dec. 3).

4th Batn. Derbyshire Regt.—Capt. J. Humber granted hon. rank of Major.

5th Batn. King's Royal Rifle Corps.—Capt. H. C. Jones resigns his commission on account of ill-health, and granted hon. rank of Major, with permission to wear prescribed uniform. 7th Batn.: 2nd Lieut. T. E. Baring to be Lieut.; 2nd Lieut. C. H. Coleman resigns his commission. 8th Batn.: Lieut. E. D. Banks resigns his commission on account of ill-health; Marcus L. S. Clements to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 12). 9th Batn.: 2nd Lieuts. R. C. Hill, G. K. Sullivan, A. E. Gallagher, P. Z. Paulson, and W. P. Hunt, to be Lieuts. (Nov. 8).

3rd Batn. (Wiltshire Regt.).—Albert H. P. Pepper to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 3).

4th Batn. Royal Irish Rifles.—2nd Lieuts. W. W. Shaw and G. T. Whittla to be Lieuts.; Andrew F. Persse to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 12). 5th Batn.: John H. L. Reade to be 2nd Lieut. (supy.) under para. 11, Militia Regulations (Dec. 1).

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers.—Paul L. Leared to be 2nd Lieut. (supy.) under para. 11, Militia Regulations. 4th Batn.: Lieut. W. A. T. Cole-Hamilton to be Capt.

and to remain seconded; 2nd Lieuts. C. G. D. Huggins and H. O. H. Smithers to be Lieuts.

3rd Batn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.—John M. Mackenzie to be 2nd Lieut. 4th Batn.: Major J. C. Cunningham resigns his commission on account of ill-health, with permission to retain his rank and wear, prescribed uniform.

4th Batn. Leinster Regt.—William D. Hamilton, jun., to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 28).

5th Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. J. E. Alkin, G. D. Rice, J. E. Fitzpatrick (Sept. 19). J. S. Rose, and D. W. S. E. Abbott to be Lieuts. (Oct. 11).

6th Batn. Rifle Brigade.—Lieut. C. K. Sutherland is removed from Militia, her Majesty having no further occasion for his services.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Derbyshire.—Michael C. McCreagh-Thornhill to be 2nd Lieut.

West Somerset.—Christophe B. Greenhill to be 2nd Lieut.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

1st Berwick-on-Tweed.—2nd Lieut. J. E. Carr resigns his commission.

1st Cinque Ports (E. Div., R.G.A.).—Lieut. H. K. Daniel to be Capt.

2nd Devon (W. Div., R.G.A.).—George D. Brook to be 2nd Lieut.; Surg.-Lieut.-Col. J. May resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps. Cadet Corps (Plymouth and Manna-mead College) (attached): Frank Woodcock to be Capt.

1st Dorset (S. Div., R.G.A.).—Capt. F. S. B. Calcott and Lieut. H. J. Till resign their commissions.

Highland.—William S. Roddie to be 2nd Lieut. (supp.)

3rd Lancashire.—John F. Walmsley and Herbert Astley to be 2nd Lieuts.

1st Warwick.—Lieut.-Col. S. Owen, Lieut. P. W. Kerby, and Surg.-Lieut. S. P. Johnson, M.B., removed from Volunteer Force, her Majesty having no further occasion for their services.

1st North Riding of Yorkshire (W. Div., R.G.A.).—2nd Lieuts. W. N. Coates, W. Hedley, E. F. C. Rahtkens, W. L. Buxton, R. L. Grigg, and T. D. H. Stubbs to be Lieuts.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (VOLUNTEERS).

1st Aberdeen.—James B. Bennett to be 2nd Lieut.

Cadet Corps (Bedford County School) attached to 1st Bedford.—Rev. Charles F. Farrar to be Capt., Farel V. C. Serjeant to be Lieut.

1st Devon and Somerset.—2nd Lieut. D. Cameron to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. J. F. Keen, W. H. Goodman, J. H. Commin, G. H. Lake, and F. J. W. Crowe, to be Lieuts.

1st Lanark.—2nd Lieut. C. B. McRitchie to be Lieut.

1st West Riding of Yorkshire (Sheffield).—Capt. and Hon. Major S. E. Howell to be Major; Lieut. L. S. M. Marsh to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. L. T. O'Shea to be Lieut.

Forth Div. (Submarine Miners).—Capt. T. Salvesen to be Major, and to command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations.

RIFLE.

Queen's R.V. Brigade (Highland Batn.) Royal Scots.—2nd Lieut. A. M. Campbell to be Capt.; Alexander S. Blair to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. A. M. Gregorson and D. H. Huie to be Lieuts.; George F. Deas to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt.—William W. R. Eastwood to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. Royal Lancaster Regt.—Reginald S. Rigg, to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 12); Thomas H. Singleton to be Qrnr. (Dec. 1).

2nd V.B. Northumberland Fusiliers.—Arthur J. Davis to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. Royal Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. O. F. Turner resigns his commission.

2nd V.B. Liverpool Regt.—Gilbert S. Carver, to be 2nd Lieut. (supp.). 3rd V.B.: Capt. J. Thorp resigns his commission. 4th V.B.: Surg.-Lieut.-Col. W. S. Limrick resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn. (Dec. 12). 8th (Scottish) V.B.: John Graham, jun., Finlay Dun, John A. Bingham (Dec. 1), and David McLaren (Dec. 3) to be 2nd Lieuts.; Archibald G. Gullan, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut. 1st Cadet Batn.: Hon. 2nd Lieut. S. B. Wilson resigns his appointment.

1st V.B. Lincoln Regt.—2nd Lieut. H. A. Howes and G. J. R. Lowe to be Lieuts.

3rd V.B. Devon Regt.—2nd Lieut. W. C. Vallance to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. A. B. Brett and J. F. Orchard to be Lieuts.

4th (Cambridge Univ.) V.B. Suffolk Regt.—Capt. P. A. Barran resigns his commission.

3rd V.B. Bedford Regt.—Acting Chaplain Rev. R. B. Poole, D.D., resigns his appointment.

3rd V.B. Cheshire Regt.—Major H. J. Mothersill resigns his commission; Capt. A. Sykes to be Major; Lieut. J. ff. Crofton to be Capt. and to remain supp.; Humphrey Watts to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. South Wales Borderers.—Lieuts. H. Charles (May 29) and J. C. Jenkins to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. W. A. Lewis, C. H. C. Mulligan, A. K. Edmonds, and W. A. James to be Lieuts.; Rev. E. J. Rogers to be Acting Chaplain. 4th V.B.: Lieut.-Col. A. Goss granted hon. rank of Col.; Major G. F. Colborne granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col. 5th V.B.: Lieut. J. R. A. Davis to be Capt.

1st Lanark.—James G. Andrew, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut.

1st (Bristol) V.B. Gloucester Regt.—Lieut. E. R. Harding resigns his commission; Qrnr. and Hon. Capt. S. S. Gouldsmith resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.

3rd V.B.: William K. Munro and Charles E. Hole to be 2nd Lieuts.

1st V.B. Worcester Regt.—Capt. and Hon. Major C. E. Ross resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn. on retirement; 2nd Lieuts. G. H. Green, W. R. Donne, H. E. Grainger, and G. V. Evers to be Lieuts.

2nd V.B. East Lancashire Regt.—Philip J. Broadley to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. East Surrey Regt.—Alexander F. Hood to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. Royal Sussex Regt.—Major E. H. J. D. Mostyn granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col. (Dec. 12). Cadet Corps (Lancing College) (attached): Hon. Capt. J. L. Watson to be Capt. (July 1); John H. N. Stephenson to be Lieut.

Cadet Corps (Winchester College) attached to 1st V.B. Hampshire Regt.—Hon. Capt. A. G. Bather to be Capt. (July 1); Lieut. F. P. David, 1st V.B. Hampshire Regt., to be Capt.

3rd Glamorgan.—Major T. W. Jones granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

1st V.B. Essex Regt.—Capt. and Hon. Major A. Moseley resigns his commission, with permission to retain his

MR. TRIPPEL'S ARMY CLASSES

FOR

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, SANDHURST & WOOLWICH,

AT

ON SLOW HALL, RICHMOND, SURREY.

Telegraphic Address: Trippel, Richmond, Surrey.

rank and wear uniform of batn.; Lieut. F. C. Bird and 2nd Lieut. G. Lawford resign their commissions.

1st V.B. Derbyshire Regt.—Lieut.-Col. W. W. Bemrose granted hon. rank of Col. 2nd V.B.: Vernon J. Greenhough, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut.

1st V.B. Middlesex Regt.—Lieut. T. Glover resigns his commission.

17th (North) Middlesex.—Surg.-Capt. P. S. Spokes and J. W. Pare, M.D., resign their commissions.

1st Middlesex (Victoria and St. George's).—Basil H. Wilkinson to be 2nd Lieut.; Siegfried Blumfeld and Glyn K. Butt to be 2nd Lieuts. (supp.).

21st Middlesex (Finsbury).—Capt. and Hon. Major W. Davis to be Major.

22nd Middlesex.—Stephen Chart to be 2nd Lieut. Cadet Corps attached to 1st London.—Arthur T. Kerslake to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. Manchester Regt.—Lieut. C. H. Redfern resigns his commission. 4th V.B.: Capt. S. L. Murgatroyd resigns his commission. 6th V.B.: 2nd Lieuts. W. White and E. Wakelam to be Capt. on increase of establishment; 2nd Lieut. G. W. Hardman to be Lieut.

1st V.B. North Stafford Regt.—Lieut.-Col. Commandant and Hon. Col. R. Clive retires under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.; Lieut.-Col. W. W. Dobson to be Lieut.-Col. Commandant under paras. 55A and 114 Volunteer Regulations (Dec. 5).

1st V.B. Durham L.I.—Capt. and Hon. Major J. A. Macfarlane resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn. on retirement; Qrnr. J. P. Wilson granted hon. rank of Capt. 2nd V.B. Durham L.I.: Hon. Henry C. Vane to be 2nd Lieut.; Charles H. D. Moore, William Davison, and William T. Spence to be 2nd Lieuts.

1st Dumbarton.—William Robertson and Daniel McBride to be 2nd Lieuts.

7th Middlesex (London Scottish).—Capt. W. H. Bradford resigns his commission.

16th Middlesex (London Irish).—Surg.-Capt. A. G. Bateman, M.B., resigns his commission.

19th Middlesex.—2nd Lieuts. S. Cooper and J. C. Cooper resign their commissions.

1st Tower Hamlets.—Capt. and Hon. Major H. Wright resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps; Lieut. F. J. Barthorpe to be Capt.

2nd Tower Hamlets.—Lieut. H. Wardell to be Capt.; Lieut. E. H. Hanks to be Capt. and to remain supp.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the forgoing commissions and appointments bear date Dec. 12].

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 14.

South Wales Borderers.—Major-Gen. H. J. Degacher, C.B., to be Col., vice Major-Gen. and Hon. Lieut.-Gen. B. T. Glyn, C.B., C.M.G., deceased (Nov. 22).

1st Life Guards.—Capt. J. A. E., Marquis of Hamilton, seconded as a Member of House of Commons; Supp. Capt. H. C. Keith Fraser to be Capt., vice J. A. E., Marquis of Hamilton (Dec. 3); Capt. P. B. Cookson resumes appointment of Adj. (Dec. 6).

8th Hussars.—Lieut. R. Lambert to be Adj. vice Lieut. P. A. T. Jones, killed in action (Oct. 14).

11th Hussars.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenancy of Capt. G. W. J. C., Earl of Cardigan, from Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry, which appeared in Gazette of Aug. 28, cancelled at his own request.

19th Hussars.—Lieut. B. F. Cox to be Capt., vice A. L. Powell, seconded (Aug. 28).

21st Lancers.—2nd Lieuts. P. H. A. Anderson and C. B. Pape to be Lieuts., to complete establishment.

AN IDEAL CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

EVERITT'S PATENT Trousers Press and Stretcher.

SIMPLE. EFFECTIVE. PORTABLE.

It is made in highly polished mahogany, with nickel plated fittings, thus making an elegant and necessary article for a gentleman's dressing room.

PRICE 25s.

Will take from One to Eight pairs of Trousers, and any pair can be removed without disarranging the remainder. To be obtained of all High Class Tailors, and the Stores, or direct from THE PATENTEE,

HARRY EVERITT, Tailor, 14, Maddox St., Regent St., London, W.

Colonial Types.

A Complete Set of the Coloured Military Types which depict the various COLONIAL FORCES, including Australian, S. African, Canadian, &c., &c., making Ten in all, will be sent post free on receipt of 5s. 3d.

Offices: 1, G, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

MARTELL'S THREE STAR BRANDY.

WHEN BUYING = = A CHEAP BICYCLE

look at the tyres. If they are not

DUNLOP TYRES

the machine is not cheap at any price.

THE DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD.,
ALMA STREET, COVENTRY; 100 to 106, CLERKENWELL ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

Corpl. Freville Cookson should have been appointed Lieut. (with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army) in 5th Batn. and not in 9th Batn. as stated in Gazette of Aug. 24.

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.—2nd Lieut. D. Stewart seconded for service with West African Frontier Force (Nov. 28). Appointments of undermentioned Lieuts., from the Canadian Local Military Forces, to 2nd Lieutenancies, notified in Gazette of Oct. 5, are cancelled:—William P. Murray, Thomas W. Van Tuyl. Pte. Horace M. T. Pym, from Canadian Local Military Forces and from Lord Strathcona's Corps, to be 2nd Lieut. (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 15).

Royal Garrison Artillery.—Lieut. H. S. Hearn seconded for service on staff (Mar. 14).

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Promotion to Capt. of Lieut. G. A. Beazeley antedated to Nov. 17, vice H. J. Hare, deceased.

Qrmr. and Hon. Capt. C. B. Godfrey retained as a Supy. to establishment, under provisions of Article 103A, Royal Warrant, Oct. 26 (Dec. 14).

Foreman of Works Sergt.-Major John W. Pearce to be Qrmr., with hon. rank of Lieut., vice Hon. Capt. C. B. Godfrey.

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal West Surrey Regt.—Lieut. H. C. Whinfield to be Capt., vice B. T. Pell, seconded; 2nd Lieut. C. R. K. Bacon to be Lieut., vice H. C. Whinfield (July 3).

Liverpool Regt.—Lieut. H. C. Potter to be Captain, in succession to Major H. Ross-Johnson, who holds an extra-regimental appointment (Dec. 5). Capt. C. H. Harington to be Adjt., on augmentation (Dec. 1).

West Yorkshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. F. J. Lemon to be Lieut., vice C. W. Gordon, seconded (Nov. 24).

Lancashire Fusiliers.—Lieut. R. H. M. Moody to be Capt., vice D. T. Saokham, seconded (Nov. 15).

Cheshire Regt.—Lieut. C. G. Porcher to be Capt., vice W. H. Anderson, seconded (Dec. 15); 2nd Lieut. E. B. Jones to be Lieut., vice P. L. Grove, promoted (June 4).

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.—Capt. T. G. C. Reynolds to be Major, vice A. J. Murray, promoted (Oct. 29).

Worcester Regt.—Capt. G. T. Peacocke to be Major, on augmentation (Dec. 15); Lieut. G. E. Lea to be Adjt., vice Capt. B. F. B. Stuart, whose period of service in appointment has expired (Nov. 23).

East Lancashire Regt.—Lieut. E. R. Collins to be Capt., vice W. H. Cooper, seconded (June 4); promotions to Lieut. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts. are antedated:—G. Clayhills to June 4, vice E. R. Collins; P. C. W. Goodwyn to June 20, vice B. C. De Gex, promoted into Lancashire Fusiliers.

Duke of Cornwall's L.I.—Capt. H. T. Cornish-Bowden seconded for service as an Adjt. of Indian Volunteers (Oct. 15).

Border Regt.—Lieuts. to be Capt. :—G. C. Brooke, vice E. G. Sinclair-MacLagan, appointed Adjt. (July 11); S. G. W. Hume, vice G. C. Brooke, seconded for service with Chinese Regt.; 2nd Lieut. H. W. Grubb to be Lieut., vice S. G. W. Hume (July 11).

Middlesex Regt.—Capt. B. de H. Burton to be Major, on augmentation.

Manchester Regt.—Capt. H. C. E. Westropp and A. H. Baldwin to be Majors, on augmentation.

Durham L.I.—Capt. L. Parke to be Major, vice Brevet Lieut.-Col. H. S. FitzGerald, promoted (Oct. 31); 2nd Lieut. A. W. B. Wallace to be Lieut., vice W. Northey, seconded (April 18).

Connaught Rangers.—Lieut. F. J. Byrne to be Capt., vice W. S. Sarsfield, seconded (July 24). Promotions to Lieut. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts. are antedated:—H. T. Walker to July 24, vice F. J. Byrne; G. Thompson to Aug. 1, vice W. N. S. Alexander, seconded.

Leinster Regt.—2nd Lieut. W. Waudby to be Lieut., vice H. T. Maffett, seconded (Nov. 14).

West India Regt.—Supy. Capt. H. Stewart to be Capt., vice N. P. Davies, promoted (Nov. 12); Lieut. E. E. D. Henderson, from 5th Batn. Worcester Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. F. Swabey, promoted.

Army Service Corps.—Christian names of 2nd Lieut. Samuel Francis Howe are as now described, not as stated in Gazette of June 22.

Royal Eastern Reserve Regt.—Capt. A. C. Way, D.S.O., ceases to belong to regt. (Dec. 1).

STAFF.

Lieut.-Gen. (local Gen.) Horatio Herbert, Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, G.C.B., K.C.M.G., B.E., to be General Officer Commanding-in-Chief the Forces in South Africa (and to retain local rank of Gen. in that country whilst so employed), on departure from Cape Town of Field-Marshal Right Hon. Frederick Sleigh, Lord Roberts, K.P., &c. (Dec. 12).

Col. E. W. Rainsford-Hannay resumes appointment of Col. on Staff for R.A., vice Col. A. W. Anstruther-Duncan, whose temporary appointment has expired (Dec. 1).

Appointment to Staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Capt. R. N. Smyth, 21st Lancers, to be an Intelligence Officer, graded as Staff Capt. (April 21).

Indian Staff Corps.—Officers transferred to Unemployed Supy. List:—Col. C. C. Brownlow, C.B. (Nov. 20); Col. J. G. Kelly, C.B., A.D.C. to the Queen (Nov. 28); Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. E. B. Bishop (Dec. 2). Majors granted temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst serving as Regimental Commandants:—W. H. Lewin, G. Rippon, J. Jackson (Aug. 11).

Indian Army.—Lieut.-Gen. W. W. Biscoe, C.B., Bengal Cavalry, transferred to Unemployed Supy. List; Major-Gen. G. T. Halliday, Bengal Cavalry, to be Lieut.-Gen. (Nov. 4).

MEMORANDA.

Col. E. J. Courtenay, on completion of his period of service on staff, placed on half-pay (Dec. 1).

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. E. Rabin, Reserve List, B.E., retires on retired pay.

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. J. A. F. H. Stewart-Mackenzie, half-pay, placed on retired pay.

Qrmr. and Hon. Lieut. L. C. Page, 8th Hussars, granted hon. rank of Capt. (Dec. 6).

Officers (temp. 2nd Lieuts.) granted temp. rank of Lieut. in Army whilst serving with Line Batns. in South Africa:—Lieut. C. C. R. Black-Hawkins, 3rd Batn. Hampshire Regt. (July 27); Lieut. J. C. C. Reid, 3rd Batn. Somerset L.I. (Aug. 18).

Officers of City of London Imperial Volunteers are, on disbandment of corps, granted hon. rank in Army as follows, with permission to wear uniform of corps (Dec. 1):—

To be Hon. Lieut.-Cols.:—Lieut.-Col. H. C. Cholmondeley, Lieut.-Col. Commandant and Hon. Col. 1st London V.R.C.; Lieut.-Col. A. A. C. Earl of Albemarle, Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. 12th Middlesex V.R.C.

To be Hon. Majors:—Major A. G. Pawle, Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. 18th Middlesex V.R.C.; Major G. McMicking, Hon. Artillery Company of London.

To be Hon. Capt. :—Capt. A. Reid, 1st V.B. Middlesex Regt.; Capt. C. W. Berkeley, 3rd London V.R.C.; Capt. C. G. R. Matthey, 1st London V.R.C.; Capt. J. F. Waterlow, 2nd V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt.; Capt. F. J. Cousens, 5th Middlesex V.R.C.; Capt. R. B. Shipley, 1st Middlesex V.R.C.; Capt. J. W. Reid, 3rd Middlesex V.A.C.; Capt. R. W. H. Edis, Capt. and Hon. Major, 20th Middlesex V.R.C.; Capt. A. A. Howell, 3rd V.B. Royal Fusiliers; Temp. Capt. J. E. H. Orr, Staff Capt. for Transport duties; Temp. Capt. E. W. St. V. Ryan, Medical Officer, Surg.-Capt. 16th Middlesex V.R.C.; Temp. Capt. R. R. Sleman, Medical Officer, Surg.-Capt. 20th Middlesex V.R.C.; Temp. Capt. A. Thorne, M.B., Medical Officer, Surg.-Capt. 2nd Middlesex V.A.C.; Capt. J. H. Smith, 5th Middlesex V.R.C.; Capt. S. C. Byrne, 21st Middlesex V.R.C.; Capt. W. J. P. Benson, 4th V.B. Essex Regt.

To be Hon. Lieuts. :—Lieut. C. H. W. Wilson, Major 2nd V.B. East Yorkshire Regt.; Lieut. E. G. Concannon, Capt. 16th Middlesex V.R.C.; Lieut. W. H. Brailley, Capt. 3rd V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt.; Lieut. F. R. Jeffery, Capt. 1st V.B. East Surrey Regt.; Lieut. E. Treffry, Hon. Artillery Company of London; Lieut. Hon. Schomberg K. McDonnell, C.B., Capt. 1st London V.R.C.; Lieut. E. D. Townroe, Capt. 4th V.B. East Surrey Regt.; Lieut. C. P. Grindle, 19th Middlesex V.R.C.; Lieut. B. C. Green, 7th Middlesex V.R.C.; Lieut. G. Berry, 13th Middlesex V.R.C.; Lieut. E. A. Manisty; Lieut. S. H. F. Hole; Lieut. E. V. Wellby, 1st Tower Hamlets V.R.C.; Lieut. A. H. Henderson, Capt. 21st Middlesex V.R.C.; Lieut. J. W. Cohen, Capt.

13th Middlesex V.R.C.; Lieut. A. C. Lowe, Hon. Artillery Company of London; Lieut. F. B. Marsh, Capt. 1st V.B. Essex Regt.; Lieut. H. Bayley, Hon. Artillery Company of London; Lieut. J. F. Duncan, 2nd Lieut. Hon. Artillery Company of London; Lieut. D. G. Baillie; Lieut. C. O'B. Greenwell; Lieut. R. Carr, Captain 13th Middlesex V.R.C.; Lieut. A. A. C. Salfie, Captain 2nd V.B. Middlesex Regt.; Lieut. C. F. Nesham; Lieut. B. C. Townshend.

To be Hon. Vet.-Lieuts.:—Temp. Vet.-Lieut. W. S. Mulvey, Veterinary Officer; Temp. Vet.-Lieut. E. Morgan, Veterinary Officer.

ARMY MEDICAL RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

Surg.-Major G. R. T. Phillips to be Surg.-Lieut.-Col.; Surg.-Capt. T. W. J. Allen, having resigned his appointment in Volunteers, ceases to belong to Army Medical Reserve.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Dec. 15.]

SMALL SHOT HILL, North Camp, Aldershot, has been selected for the new pigeon post, to be established under the direction of Lieut.-Col. Allatt.

THE outstanding vouchers for the assessment of deferred pay and gratuities due to the estates of soldiers dying in South Africa are to be sent home with as little delay as possible.

It is stated that the War Office has completed the purchase of 15,000 to 18,000 acres additional ground on Kilworth Mountains in Ireland in connection with the military camp there for the purpose of an artillery range. It is intended also to erect barrack accommodation for a large number of artillery batteries, but the site has not yet been selected.

THE first contingent of the South African Constabulary, about 100 men, sails from the Royal Albert Docks at noon to-day in the Idaho for Cape Town. The selected men have thoroughly satisfied all tests. The second contingent, about 200 strong, is due to leave on the 31st inst. So far the recruiting has proved particularly satisfactory. Only a thousand men were asked for at present.

CASES having been brought to notice in which soldiers have been wrongly discharged, as for the benefit of the public service, after 18 years' service (with a view to pension) under paragraph 1,805, ix., of the Queen's Regulations, whereby they have been awarded higher pensions than the circumstances of their service and discharge merited, it has been officially notified that in future no discharges are to be carried out under this sub-paragraph which are covered by any other class of discharge, such, for instance, as inefficiency, or misconduct, or medical unfitness, or at own request.

THE ALEXANDER MEMORIAL PRIZE.—Owing probably to the pressure of work entailed on the officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps by the war in South Africa, no essays, competing for the prize of £50 and a gold medal, have been received within the limits of time required. The committee have, therefore, resolved to offer the same subject for the next competition, viz.:—"Injuries to joints and long bones caused by modern small-arm projectiles; their nature, diagnosis and treatment, with special reference to the appliances required and available on field service." Essays must reach the president of the committee on or before December 31, 1902, must bear a brief motto and be accompanied by a sealed envelope similarly superscribed, containing the name and address of the author. No essay should exceed about 20,000 words, exclusive of tables, which may be added in the form of appendices. The competition is limited to executive officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps on full pay, and professors and assistant professors at Netley are not eligible while so employed.

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

OVERALLS A SPECIALITY.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A.—The senior captain C would preside. The circumstances were exceptional. A certainly drops his seniority.

WEST AFRICA.—The appointments you name are in the gift of the Colonial Office.

SAPPER.—It is strictly in accordance with the terms of the Royal warrant.

CONSTANT READER.—An Englishman.

L.R.M.—The matter will come up for discussion shortly after the Christmas holidays. It is not being lost sight of.

SENIOR MAJOR.—Your agents would be best able to advise you.

SOMERSET.—Yes, the regiment still has the privilege. It is highly appreciated, too.

MARKER.—The officer in charge of the party should arrange.

J. P.—Your decision certainly would seem to be legal.

F. O. N.—(1 and 2) Field service; (3) Yes.

SENIOR MAJOR.—Correspondence is now going on on the subject.

J. H. COOLEY.—A private soldier is not allowed to wear a black band around his arm when on parade. An officer is allowed to do so.

BLACK LINE.—In memory of Sir John Moore. If the regiment was not present at the burial of that distinguished soldier, it certainly was under his command at the time of his death.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED FOR REVIEW.

Kruger's Secret Service (Macqueen); The South African War, by Major S. L. Norris, R.E. (Murray); Madame Xmas No. (Essex Street, W.C.). Vanity Fair Album, 1900 (7, Essex Street, W.C.). Paul Jones, 2 vols. (Kegan Paul). Debreit, 1901 (Dean and Son). Hazell's Annual, 1901 (Hazell, Watson and Viney). The Guide to South Africa (Sampson Low). A Mule Driver at the Front (Chapman and Hall). The Story of the Uganda Protectorate (Horace Marshall). With Seven Generals in the Boer War (Skeffington). Live Stock Journal and Almanac, 1901 (Vinton and Co.). Advertisers' Guardian, 1901 (T. Dixon). Byon Biography Series: Lord Kitchener of Khartoum (H. J. Drave.)

Magazines for December:—National Review, Scribners, United Service, Monthly Review, Baily's, Strand, Wide World, Captain.

In addition to the patronage of the Queen, the movement inaugurated by the Guild of the Loyal Women of South Africa for the maintenance and preservation of the graves of soldiers who have fallen on the battlefields of South Africa has secured that of the Princess of Wales and the Duchess of York.

THE Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company have always been famed for the artistic character of their designs, and the sword of honour which was presented by Cape Town to Lord Roberts worthily maintains the company's reputation. The hilt is of gold, with a finely-cut figure of Britannia on one side, and of Justice on the other; an initial letter "R" in enamel is introduced into the handle-guard; the bands and "shoe" of the scabbard are of tasteful repoussé work, showing the many decorations and honours that Lord Roberts wears. On the fine steel blade, amidst much ornamentation, the sentiment "Draw for God and thy Queen, Justice, and Truth."

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded 3d. each or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper) 8s. per 100, post free, of Bewlay & Co., Importers, 49, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacconists.

APLEY PELLATT & Co.
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing
Cross, London, W.C
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA
MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

DEATHS.

GARRETT.—On the 9th inst., at Cairo, Lieut. Colonel Thomas Horsfall Heaton Garrett (late 16th Lancers), of Crakehall, Bedale, Yorks.

OAKLEY.—On the 11th inst., at Cwmcarvan Court, Monmouthshire, Richard Henry Oakley, second son of Thomas Oakley, of Lydart House, aged 81, J.P. and D.L. for Monmouthshire, Regimental Surgeon, Bengal Army, H.E.I.C.S. No flowers.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

ARMY AND NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LIMITED, 105, VICTORIA STREET, WESTMINSTER, LONDON, S.W.

NOTICE.

The Stores will be CLOSED on MONDAY, TUESDAY, and WEDNESDAY, 24th, 25th, and 26th DECEMBER. The execution before Christmas of country orders received after Thursday, 20th, or of Town and Suburban orders received after Friday, 21st, cannot be guaranteed. The delivery of Mineral Oils cannot be guaranteed if ordered after Wednesday, 19th.

By order,
H. LAWSON,

Secretary and Assistant Manager.
December 10th, 1900.

BRIGHTON.—PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENT (as homelike as possible) for those requiring Medical, Surgical, and Nursing care. Medical baths, packs, massage, electricity. Own doctor can attend if wished, or their treatment carried out. Close to sea, overlooking private grounds. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO COMFORT, NURSING, DIET. For Terms address, Medical Sup., Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF BLACKBURN.

The Watch Committee of the Borough of Blackburn are prepared to receive TENDERS for the supply of the following articles of POLICE CLOTHING, viz:—

For Inspectors: Six caps and covers, 6 great coats, 6 dress coats, and 12 pairs of trousers.

For Sergeants and Constables: 127 great coats, 127 tunics, 254 pairs of trousers, and 127 helmets. The cloth must be double milled, of the best police quality, of a dark blue colour, and wool dyed.

Forms of Tender and particulars of information may be obtained on application to Mr. I. G. Lewis, Chief Constable, Town Hall, Blackburn, to whom sealed tenders, with samples, including samples of trimmings, must be sent on or before Saturday, the 22nd inst., endorsed "Tender for Police Clothing."

By order,

ROBERT E. FOX, Town Clerk.
Town Hall, Blackburn,
December 7th, 1900.

INVENTOR.—A MATEUR PHOTOGRAPHER and Medalist, &c., &c., requires Gentleman to INVEST in NEW HAND CAMERA (Patented); most novel ever invented. Taking and projecting animated or ordinary pictures; also to join Syndicate; immense profits; highest references.—For further particulars, address W., care of "Perks," News Agents, 41, St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

LEAMINGTON.—Large House suitable for Bachelors wishing to Hunt, or for retired Indian Officer with family. Near station. Four large reception, nine bedrooms, two bath-rooms, good offices and kitchens. For Sale or to Let.—Apply, Dakeyne, Clarendon Square, Leamington.

MALARIA and NEURALGIA certain cure. This pacific discovered by a retired Physician, who requires a gentleman to join in developing the same.—Address, M.D., ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE Office, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

MAYO.—TO LET till March 1,

2,000 acres of rough SHOOTING; snipe, golden plover, duck, wild geese, hares, &c.; small furnished iron Lodge, six rooms. Rent £20.—Address, G. L., Office, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE.

STONE, near Greenhithe, Kent.—To be LET, for a period of three or five years, with or without meadow land, a desirable newly-decorated HOUSE, with nine bed-rooms and two dressing-rooms, four sitting-rooms, with fine conservatory and greenhouse, and three acres of pleasure and kitchen garden. Rent, partly furnished, £250 per annum; rent, unfurnished, £120 per annum. Additional meadow land at moderate rent per acre.—Apply to Messrs. Gamlen, Burdett and Gamlen, 3, Gray's Inn Square, London, W.C.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN of GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grocers, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employons, London."

TO RETIRED OFFICERS.—One requiring some light occupation connected with a Brewery, who will invest £1,000 to £1,500.—Address, "Brewer," 14, Devonshire Square, Bishopsgate, E.C.

YEOMANRY PLATES.—A complete set of Yeomanry Plates, together with a copy of the "Imperial Yeomanry" Type, making 33 in all, will be sent carriage paid on receipt of P.O.O. for 12s. 6d., to any address in the United Kingdom. "Army and Navy Gazette," 3, York Street, London, W.C.

HART AND SON,
60, Artillery Place, Woolwich,
(Established 100 Years), has
FOR SALE

Nearly New
REGULATION UNIFORMS
for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices.
Gold and Silver Dress
BELTS, SABRETACHES, and SASHES
for Sale or on Hire.
All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver
Lace, &c., bought for cash.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA,
SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS
TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate.
Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd. Bn., the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wiltshire Regiment. August, 1896.

Watch and Clock Makers.

Report.
"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,79 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1876. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.L.H., E.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE),
QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE. Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff. Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS. For Tariff, address MANAGER.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES,

BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.

The Warehouses, having been built expressly for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities.

JOHN HANES, Manager.

Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

ARMY ALTERATIONS

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date. Subscription—5s. 6d. per annum, post free. One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.

ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE. With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations. BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer,
Ashton-under-Lyne.

A REVOLUTION IN FURNISHING
BY MONTHLY PAYMENTS

WHAT IS NORMAN and STACEY'S PLAN of Furnishing?

It is a clever scheme, now known and adopted in all parts of the English-speaking world, which enables you to Furnish your House or Flat throughout, from Drawing Room to Kitchen (even to the extent of Linens, Silver, Cutlery, Blinds, etc.), out of income, without disturbing your Capital by (instead of paying Cash) dividing the whole amount into 6, 12, 24, or 36 equal monthly payments. During the above-mentioned period you can, of course, at any time (should you wish it) pay off the amount and avail yourself of the cash discount.

NORMAN & STACEY, LD.,

118, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.
Moderate Prices. Free Delivery Town or Country. Call and view Stock before Furnishing locally, and compare Quality and Prices with those of other firms.

REVERSIONS AND
LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the

EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand
Established 1895. Capital £500,000.

THE NEW

STRAP LEGGING.
LATSET STYLE.

DENNISON'S
PATENT,
No. 6795.

Stohwasser
and Winter's Licence.

SHOOTING.

RIDING.

WALKING.

HUNTING.

MILITARY.

IMPERIAL

YEOMANRY

VOLUNTEERS,

Lord Loch's

Own

IMPERIAL

YEOMANRY.

Order through your Saddler,
Bootmaker, or Outfitter.

Sole Manufacturers,

WALLACE, BAILEY & WILKINS,

176, Long Lane, Bermondsey, LONDON, S.E.

Extract from the "SHOOTING TIMES."

"We have recently given this Legging a severe trial through some of the roughest going in the Kingdom, and can recommend it to Sportsmen as extremely comfortable, and a most shapely improvement on the older forms of Gaiters."

"PALL MALL
EAST, CHARING CROSS."

"The Denison Patent Strap Leggings have given complete satisfaction, and I am convinced that they are the most comfortable Leggings for Riding and Shooting."

"LEWIS H.
LOYD."

CHARBONNEL AND WALKER,

PARISIAN CONFECTIONERS,

173, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

SPECIAL ARTICLES POUR COTILLONS: THE LARGEST AND MOST ARTISTIC COLLECTION IN LONDON.

Choicest Selections of FRENCH NOVELTIES suitable for CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

AND

NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

Any Article from 10s. 6d. upwards forwarded upon receipt of remittance.

The Baby.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 7.
Carpenters William L. Peain (Nov. 12), and Richard B. Lavers (Dec. 1), promoted to Chief Carpenters.

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 10.
Asst.-Paymrs. promoted to Paymr.—H. S. Hall (Oct. 26), C. H. Rodham (Nov. 29).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 12.
Asst.-Engrs. for temp. service promoted to Engr. on Permanent List, with seniority of Nov. 1.—George R. Byles, Henry O. Andrews, Hugh L. M. Ford.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 13.
Chaplain Rev. W. G. Litchfield, M.A., appointed Naval Instr. (Dec. 7).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 7.
Surgeons.—W. H. S. Stallkart to Alacrity (Dec. 7), H. T. Burniston to Duke of Wellington for Portsmouth Dockyard (Dec. 18).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 8.
Captain.—J. Ferris to Empress of India, reappointed on recommissioning (Dec. 8).
Commander.—A. W. Torlesse to Australia for Bognor Division of Coastguard, E. L. Lang to Collingwood for Queenstown Division of Coastguard (Dec. 21), C. E. Hunter to Anson (undated).

Lieutenants.—P. Hewett to Duke of Wellington (as first) (Dec. 15), P. B. A. Cooper to Vivid for R.N. Barracks (Dec. 18), J. C. Humfrey to Pembroke for Dockyard Reserve (Dec. 21).

Staff-Engineer.—C. M.K. Norris to Vivid for Pearl, on paying off (Dec. 6).

Chief Engineer.—A. E. Cox to Pembroke for Scylla, on paying off (Dec. 6).

Engineers.—W. Joop to Vivid for Lively, J. F. Bushby to Vivid for Gipsy, D. J. Carruthers to Howe (Dec. 8).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 10.
Lieutenant R.N.R.—H. A. Edwards to Prince George for second period of twelve months (Dec. 14).
Sub-Lieutenant.—R. Ayles to Penguin (Dec. 10).

Engineer.—A. S. Crisp to Osborne (Dec. 10).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 11.
Capt. F. H. Henderson to Pembroke for Blenheim (Dec. 22).

Commander.—J. D. Daintree to Centurion, addl., for charge of Naval establishment at Leu-kung-tan (N. as Queen's Harbour Master) (Dec. 10).

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.45, and Saturday mornings at 2.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 12.
Lieutenants.—G. de L. O. Johnson to Pembroke for Mallard, in command (Dec. 5); C. W. Unwin, R.N.R., to Excellent for one month's G. course (Jan. 2).
Sub-Lieutenant R.N.R.—G. W. Wellburn to Vernon (as acting) for short T. course (Jan. 2).
Midshipman.—R. S. Hewlett to Pembroke for Mallard (Dec. 5).
Fleet Engineer.—J. P. Thomas to Vernon for Torpedo Depot, Portsmouth Yard (Dec. 12).
Staff Engineer.—C. A. Moore to Mars (Dec. 12).
Chief Engineer.—G. Pascoe to Duke of Wellington for Brilliant (Dec. 12).
Staff Surgeon.—C. L. Nolan, M.B., to Blenheim (Jan. 1).
Surgeons.—H. W. W. Townsend, B.A., to Blenheim, E. T. Meagher to Briton, J. R. Muir, M.B., to Jupiter (Jan. 1).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 13.
Commander.—C. G. S. Eeles to Indus, addl. assistant to staff-captain (Dec. 13).
Chaplain.—Rev. F. A. J. Gace, B.A., to Hood (Dec. 12).
Surgeons.—C. L. W. Bunton, M.B., to Forte; S. Cronen to Raven (Dec. 13).

The programme of movements of the transport Britannic is approximately as follows:—She will leave Sydney on the return journey Jan. 7; Melbourne, Jan. 12; Hobart, Jan. 16; Albany, Jan. 21; Aden, Feb. 6; Suez, Feb. 10; Port Said, Feb. 11; Malta, Feb. 14; Gibraltar, Feb. 17, and arrive at Southampton Feb. 21. Two days will be spent both at Melbourne and Hobart, and one at Aden.

Shi ping.

INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA,
QUEENSLAND, BURMAH,
PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.

BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to

CALCUTTA.	ZANZIBAR.
MADRAS.	MOBASSA.
COLOMBO.	BRISBANE.
RANGOON.	BATAVIA.
MAURITIUS.	ROCKHAMPTON.
BOMBAY.	TOWNSVILLE.
KURACHEE.	MARYBOROUGH.
BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH, EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House, Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock House, Billiter Street, E.C.

P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA, CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICES.

P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS to GIBRALTAR, MARSEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN, BOMBAY, KURACHEE, CALCUTTA, CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.

P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TICKETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.—For particulars apply at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

BIBBY LINE

TO

MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMBO, RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA (via Tuticorin).

LANCASHIRE	4244	Dec. 13	Dec. 20
SHROPSHIRE	5789	Jan. 10	Jan. 17
STAFFORDSHIRE	6005	Jan. 24	Jan. 31

Those marked * are twin-screw steamers. These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.

Every possible comfort for first class passengers only. This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 28th day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO., 26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and 10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.

ALEX. HOWDEN & CO., 138, Leadenhall Street, London.
C. HOWARD & SONS, 45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

ALUMINIUM

Holds First Place for PORTABILITY. It is three to five times lighter than other metals, is non-poisonous, and does not tarnish.

Write for lists of Camping Outfits, Canteens, Mess-tins, Dekshais, Water Bottles, Flasks, Portable Baths, Sponge Boxes, Egg Cases, etc., etc.

THE LOUIS LEAKEY ALUMINIUM CO., LTD.,
127, FARRINGTON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

MOHAWKS

ALWAYS TO THE FRONT

Art
List
Free.

Prices
from £11.

SPECIAL TERMS TO THE ARMY, NAVY, AND VOLUNTEERS.

Address: Chalk Farm Road, London, N.W. Wires: "UNBEATEN."

UNBEATEN.

HEERING'S COPENHAGEN CHERRY BRANDY

Purveyor by Appointment to the Royal Danish and Imperial Russian Courts and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

ESTABLISHED 1818.

Peter J. Heering

SOLD THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

The Indian Army.

The Publisher of the "Army and Navy Gazette" begs to announce that, beginning on January 5, 1901, EIGHT Coloured Military Types of the INDIAN ARMY will be issued Monthly as Supplements to this Paper.

ORDERS for the series to be sent as Published, i.e., on the first weeks of each month from January to August, should be forwarded at once, accompanied by Money Order for (Inland) 4s. 4d., or (India and Abroad) 5s., made payable to the PUBLISHER.

Full particulars and list of Plates will be sent post free on application.

"Army and Navy Gazette" Offices, 3, York St., Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Publications

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Instruction, and Examinations.
5th EDITION.

OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIDE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memoirs, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Book. Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 8d.

By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.O.

Also by the same Author.
For Lectures and Study.
3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS

Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables. Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

WM. CLOWES and SONS, 13, Charing Cross, S.W., A. & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, &c.
Of whom Refill-Books, and Blocks may be had.
Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Cape Town.

NOTES ON NAVAL STRATEGY AND TACTICS.

By Lieutenant H. STANSBURY, R.N.

PRICE 1s. POST FREE 1s. 1d.

Published by J. J. Kellier and Co., 33, King William Street, E.C., and 99, Victoria Street, S.W.

WORKS ON GEOMETRY.

By JOHN S. RAWLE, F.S.A.,
Late Examiner to the Science & Art Department.

PRACTICAL PLANE & SOLID GEOMETRY, Approved by the Science and Art Dept., &c. MORE THAN 600 DIAGRAMS. 250th THOUSAND.

To Prepare Candidates for the Army, Navy, &c.

Price 1s. Bound in Cloth, 2s.

Class-Sheets for Practical Geometry. Price 1s.
Practical Geometry Test Papers. Price 6d.
Freehand Drawing Test Papers. Price 1s.

London:

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & Co. Ltd.

The Times of India

OVERLAND WEEKLY EDITION.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year, including postage	£1 10s. 0d.
Half Year	10s. 0d.
Quarter	5s. 0d.
Per Copy	1s. 0d.

Re-posted from our London Office 1d. additional each Copy.

ADVERTISEMENTS WILL BE RECEIVED At the "TIMES OF INDIA" Office, Bombay, OR AT THE LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C., Where all Orders from all parts of Great Britain and the Continent for the DAILY and WEEKLY Editions of the "TIMES OF INDIA" should be addressed.

Advertisement Rates on Application. LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.

THE ARMY.

CAVALRY.

1ST LIFE GUARDS	Lieut.-Col. C. N. Miles	Windsor
2ND	Lieut.-Col. A. D. Neeld	Regent's Park
ROYAL HORSE GDS.	Lieut.-Col. George Lord Binning	Hyde Park
1ST DRAGOONS	Lieut.-Col. H. M. Owen	Aldershot
2ND	Lieut.-Col. J. E. Dewar	Aldershot
3RD	Lieut.-Col. J. H. Aspinwall	Curragh
4TH	Col. G. D. F. Sullivan	Rawlin Pindi
5TH	Lieut.-Col. St. John C. Gore	S. Africa
6TH	Lieut.-Col. A. Sprout	S. Africa
7TH	Lieut.-Col. W. H. M. Lowe	S. Africa
1ST DRAGOONS	Lieut.-Col. J. F. Burn-Murdoch	S. Africa
2ND	Lieut.-Col. W. H. Hipsley	S. Africa
3RD HUSSARS	Lieut.-Col. F. W. N. Wogan-Browne	Lucknow
4TH	Col. W. A. Ramsay	Secunderabad
5TH LANCERS	Lieut.-Col. J. F. M. Fawcett	S. Africa
6TH DRAGOONS	Lieut.-Col. M. F. Rimmington	S. Africa
7TH HUSSARS	Lieut.-Col. Hon. R. T. Lawley	Aldershot
8TH	Lieut.-Col. P. L. Clowes	S. Africa
9TH LANCERS	Lieut.-Col. M. O. Little	S. Africa
10TH HUSSARS	Col. R. B. W. Fisher	S. Africa
11TH	Lieut.-Col. Hon. O. V. G. Lumley	Egypt
12TH LANCERS	Col. B. T. Mahon, D.S.O.	S. Africa
13TH HUSSARS	Col. H. J. Blagrove	S. Africa
14TH	Lieut.-Col. G. H. C. Hamilton	S. Africa
15TH	Lieut.-Col. E. C. Bethune	Meerut
16TH LANCERS	Lieut.-Col. E. B. Herbert	S. Africa
17TH	Lieut.-Col. E. C. Knox	S. Africa
18TH HUSSARS	Lieut.-Col. C. Wolsey-Jenkins	S. Africa
19TH	Lieut.-Col. H. G. P. Beauchamp	Mhow
20TH	Lieut.-Col. W. G. Crole Wyndham, C.B.	Dublin

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

ROYAL HORSE & ROYAL FIELD ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse Artillery (Headquarters, Woolwich).

Depôt: No. 1, Woolwich.

A Batt.	S. Africa	K Batt.	Rawlin Pindi	U Batt.	S. Africa
B "	China	L "	Secunderabad	V "	S. John's Wd.
C "	Mhow	M "	S. Africa	W "	Woolwich
D "	Umballa	N "	Aldershot	X "	Woolwich
E "	Kirkee	O "	S. Africa	Y "	Aldershot
F "	Sealkote	P "	S. Africa	Z "	Newbridge
G "	S. Africa	Q "	S. Africa	AA "	Newbridge
H "	Meerut	R "	S. Africa	BB "	Christchurch
I "	Umballa	S "	Aldershot
J "	S. Africa	T "	S. Africa

Royal Field Artillery (Headquarters, Woolwich).

Depôts: Nos. 1 & 7, Woolwich; No. 2, Glasgow; No. 3, Weedon; No. 4, Bristol; No. 5, Dublin; No. 6, Seaforth.

Batt.	Kirkee	51st	Rawlin Pindi	100th	Athlone
2nd	S. Africa	52nd	Jubbulpore	101st	Hilsea
3rd	Campbellpore	53rd	S. Africa	102nd	Hilsea
4th	S. Africa	54th	Meerut	103rd	Hilsea
5th	S. Africa	55th	Saugor	104th	Shorncliffe
6th	Cawnpore	56th	Egypt	105th	Shorncliffe
7th	S. Africa	57th	Meerut	106th	Shorncliffe
8th	S. Africa	58th	Kamptee	107th	Aldershot
9th	S. Africa	59th	Cahir	108th	Aldershot
10th	Aldershot	60th	Allahabad	109th	Aldershot
11th	Meerut	61st	S. Africa	110th	Newcastle-on-T.
12th	China	62nd	S. Africa	111th	Newcastle-on-T.
13th	S. Africa	63rd	S. Africa	112th	Newcastle-on-T.
14th	S. Africa	64th	S. Africa	113th	Colchester
15th	Meerut	65th	S. Africa	114th	Colchester
16th	Kirkee	66th	S. Africa	115th	Weedon
17th	S. Africa	67th	S. Africa	116th	Ipswich
18th	S. Africa	68th	S. Africa	117th	Ipswich
19th	S. Africa	69th	S. Africa	118th	Coventry
20th	S. Africa	70th	Bareilly	119th	Exeter
21st	S. Africa	71st	Mooltan	120th	Exeter
22nd	Mhow	72nd	Bellary	121st	Dorchester
23rd	Secunderabad	73rd	S. Africa	122nd	Woolwich
24th	Peshawur	74th	S. Africa	123rd	Woolwich
25th	Bangalore	75th	S. Africa	124th	Woolwich
26th	Aldershot	76th	S. Africa	125th	Fermoy
27th	Neemuch	77th	S. Africa	126th	Limerick
28th	S. Africa	78th	S. Africa	127th	Fermoy
29th	Kirkee	79th	S. Africa	128th	Brighton
30th	Fyzabad	80th	Nowgong	129th	Brighton
31st	S. Thomas' Mt.	81st	S. Africa	130th	Brighton
32nd	Jhansi	82nd	S. Africa	131st	Chatham
33rd	Hyderabad	83rd	S. Africa	132nd	Trowbridge
34th	Ahmedabad	84th	S. Africa	133rd	Newport
35th	Kurrachee	85th	S. Africa	134th	Sheffield
36th	Nusseerabad	86th	S. Africa	135th	Sheffield
37th	S. Africa	87th	S. Africa	136th	Woolwich
38th	S. Africa	88th	S. Africa	137th	Aldershot
39th	S. Africa	89th	Aldershot	138th	Aldershot
40th	Bangalore	90th	Aldershot	139th	Aldershot
41st	Lucknow	91st	Aldershot	140th	Curragh
42nd	S. Africa	92nd	Aldershot	141st	Curragh
43rd	S. Africa	93rd	Cahir	142nd	Curragh
44th	S. Africa	94th	Crommel	143rd	Fethard
45th	Barrackpore	95th	Leeds	144th	Cloghene
46th	Dinapore	96th	Birmingham	145th	Waterford
47th	Ferozepore	97th	Leeds	146th	Aldershot
48th	S. Thomas' Mt.	98th	Athlone	147th	Aldershot
49th	Belgaum	99th	Longford	148th	Aldershot
50th	Agra

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Mountain Division (Depôt, Newport).

No. 1 Batt.	Bara Gali	No. 5 Batt.	Jutogh	No. 8 Batt.	Darjeeling
" 2 "	Khyra Gali	" 6 "	Jutogh	" 9 "	Mandalay
" 3 "	Kalabagh	" 7 "	Quetta	" 10 "	S. Africa
" 4 "	S. Africa

Eastern Division (Headquarters, Dover).

Depôts: No. 1, Dover; No. 2, Great Yarmouth.

No. 1 Co.	Allahabad	No. 12 Co. (S.T.)	Dover	No. 22 Co. (H.)	Sh'ness
" 2 "	St. Helena	" 13 "	Bombay	" 23 "	Shoeburness
" 3 "	Rangoon	" 14 "	Golden Hill	" 24 "	Delhi
" 4 "	Kurrachee	" 15 "	Cork	" 25 "	Hong Kong
" 5 "	S. Africa	" 16 "	Egypt	" 26 "	Bombay
" 6 "	S. Africa	" 17 "	Malta	" 27 "	Sheerness
" 7 "	(H.) Mooltan	" 18 "	Gibraltar	" 28 "	Landguard Ft.
" 8 "	Aden	" 19 "	Gibraltar	" 29 "	Leith Ft.
" 9 "	Calcutta	" 20 "	Gibraltar	" 30 "	Dover
" 10 "	S. Africa	" 21 "	Sheerness	" 31 "	Shoeburness
" 11 "	Gibraltar

Southern Division (Headquarters, Portsmouth).

Depôts: No. 1, Fort Rowner, Gosport; No. 2, Seaforth Bks., L'pool.

No. 1 Co.	Malta	No. 15 Co. (S.T.)	S. Afr.	No. 28 Co.	Weym'th
" 2 "	China	" 16 "	S. Africa	" 29 "	Barrackpore
" 3 "	Portsmouth	" 17 "	Malta	" 30 "	Portsmouth
" 4 "	Malta	" 18 "	Aden	" 31 "	Malta
" 5 "	Agra	" 19 "	Malta	" 32 "	Gibraltar
" 6 "	Roorkee	" 20 "	(S.T.) Gosport	" 33 "	Attack
" 7 "	Weymouth	" 21 "	Portsmouth	" 34 "	Ceylon
" 8 "	Bombay	" 22 "	Jamaica	" 35 "	Singapore
" 9 "	Roorkee	" 23 "	Quetta	" 36 "	S. Africa
" 10 "	Gibraltar	" 24 "	(H.) Campbell	" 37 "	Ceylon
" 11 "	Roorkee	" 25 "	Hong Kong	" 38 "	Hong Kong
" 12 "	Singapore	" 26 "	Gibraltar	" 39 "	Golden Hill
" 13 "	Malta	" 27 "	Malta	" 40 "	Cork H'rb'r
" 14 "	S. Africa	" 28 "	Malta	" 41 "	Portsmouth

Western Division (Headquarters, Devonport).

Depôts: No. 1, Citadel, Plymouth; No. 2, Scarborough.
No. 1	Co. ... St. Lucia	No. 11	Co. F. S. George
" 2	" " S. Africa	" 12	" " Jersey
" 3	" " Halifax, N.S.	" 13	" " Pembroke Dk.
" 4	" (T.) Ferozepore	" 14	" " S. Africa
" 5	" " Rawul Pindi	" 15	" (S.T.) S. Africa
" 6	" " S. Africa	" 16	" " Aden
" 7	" " Jhansi	" 17	" " S. Africa
" 8	" " Mauritius	" 18	" " Bombay
" 9	" (H.) Secun-	" 19	" " Esquimaux
	derabad	" 20	" " Halifax, N.S.
" 10	" " S. Africa	" 21	" " Bermuda

LOCAL BATTALIONS OF ROYAL ARTILLERY.

HONG KONG-SINGAPORE BATN.:		CEYLON-AURITUS BATN.:
No. 1 Co.	Singapore	No. 1 Co.	Ceylon
" 2 "	Hong Kong	" 2 "	Ceylon
" 3 "	Hong Kong	" 3 "	Mauritius
" 4 "	Hong Kong	" 4 "	Mauritius
" 5 "	Hong Kong
SIERRA LEONE COMPANY.		JAMAICA COMPANY.
ROYAL MALTA ARTILLERY		ST. LUCIA COMPANY.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Co.	1st (Ft.)	Cork Hrb'r.	Co.	44th (Ft.)	Wei-Hai
2nd (Ft.)	Egypt	Wei & Victoria, B.C.
3rd (Ft.)	Bermuda	45th (Ft.)	Steam Rd.
4th (Sub.)	Gosport	Transp't	S. Africa
5th (Ft.)	S. Africa	46th (Ft.)	Salisbury Pl.
6th (Ft.)	S. Africa	47th (Ft.)	S. Africa
7th (Ft.)	S. Africa	48th (Sub.)	Esquimaux
8th (Rl.)	S. Africa	49th (Ft.)	Gib.
9th (Ft.)	S. Africa	50th (Ft.)	Gib.
10th (Rl.)	S. Africa	51st (Ft.)	Malta
11th (Ft.)	S. Africa	52nd (Ft.)	Portsmouth
12th (Ft.)	S. Africa	53rd (Rl.)	Chatham
13th (Sur.)	Clifton	54th (Ft.)	Curragh
14th (Sur.)	Dublin	55th (Ft.)	Colch'ter
15th (Ft.)	Gib.	56th (Ft.)	Curragh
16th (Ft.)	Bedford	57th (Ft.)	Devonp't
17th (Ft.)	S. Africa	58th (Ft.)	Chatham
18th (Ft.)	Halifax	59th (Ft.)	Chatham
19th (Sur.)	Souton	60th (Ft.)	Aldershot
20th (Ft.)	S. Africa	A (Dep.)	Chatham
21st (Sub.)	Felixstowe	B (Dep.)	Chatham
22nd (Sub.)	Loth'gton	C (Dep.)	Chatham
23rd (Ft.)	S. Africa	D (Dep.)	Chatham
24th (Ft.)	Malta	E (Dep.)	Chatham
25th (Ft.)	Hong Kong	G (Dep.)	Chatham
26th (Ft.)	S. Africa	H (Sub.)	Hqrs., India
27th (Sub.)	Bermuda	M (Sub.)	Chatham
28th (Sub.)	Malta	TELEGRAPH BATN.
29th (Ft.)	S. Africa	1st Div.	S. Africa
30th (Sub.)	Plym'th	2nd Div.	28, New-
31st (Ft.)	S. Africa	gate St., E.C.
32nd (Ft.)	Gib.	3rd Div.	Aldershot
33rd (Sub.)	Cork Hrb'r.	BRIDGING BATN.
34th (Sub.)	Gravesend	A Troop	S. Africa
35th (Sub.)	P'm'b'ke Dk	B Troop	Aldershot
36th (Ft.)	Bermuda	C Troop	S. Africa
37th (Ft.)	S. Africa	D Troop	Aldershot
38th (Ft.)	S. Africa	Fld. Troop	S. Africa
39th (Sub.)	Sheerness	Fld. Dep. R.E. Trps.
40th (Sub.)	Halifax	Aldershot
41st (Ft.)	Ceylon	1st Fld. Park	S. Africa
42nd (Ft.)	S. Africa	2nd Fld. Park	Alders't
43rd (Ft.)	Mauritius	3rd Fld. Park	Alders't

INFANTRY.

GRENADIER GUARDS:
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. D. A. Kinloch	Windsor
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. F. Lloyd, d.s.o.	S. Africa
3rd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. E. M. S. Crabbe	S. Africa
COLDSTREAM GUARDS:
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. A. E. Codrington	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. Hon. A. Henniker-Major	S. Africa
3rd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. H. C. Surtees	Chelsea
SCOTS GUARDS:
1st Batn.	Col. A. H. Paget	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Col. I. R. Jones	S. Africa
3rd Batn.	Lt.-Col. Hon. N. de C. D. Hamilton	Wellington Bks
IRISH GUARDS:
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. R. J. Cooper	Pirbright
ROYAL SCOTS (1ST):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. E. P. Morgan-Payler	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. C. W. Hallett	Poona
QUEEN'S (ROYAL WEST SURREY REGT.) (2ND):
1st Batn.	Col. J. S. Collins	Huldana
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. E. O. F. Hamilton	S. Africa
THE BUFFS (EAST KENT REGT.) (3RD):
1st Batn.	Col. A. E. Ommanney	Kamptee
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. J. B. Backhouse	S. Africa
KING'S OWN (ROYAL LANCASTER REGT.) (4TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. J. Rowlandson	Aldershot
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. J. M. Gawnie	S. Africa
NORTHUMBRIA FUSILIERS (5TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. G. C. Money, c.b.	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. Hon. C. Lambton, d.s.o.	S. Africa
3rd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. W. E. Sturges	Bradford
4th Batn.	Lieut.-Col. T. G. L. H. Armstrong	York
ROYAL WARWICKSHIRE REGT. (6TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. W. E. G. Forbes, c.b.	Madras
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. M. Q. Jones, c.b.	S. Africa
3rd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. A. W. F. Jackson	Malta
4th Batn.	Lieut.-Col. H. E. Irwin	Colchester
ROYAL FUSILIERS (7TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. R. P. B. Rodick	Nusseerabad
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. C. G. Donald	S. Africa
3rd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. G. E. Briggs	Gibraltar
4th Batn.	Lieut.-Col. F. C. Annesley	Dover
KING'S (LIVERPOOL REGT.) (8TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. L. S. Mellor	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. S. H. Harrison	Dublin
3rd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. P. Schletter	Dublin
4th Batn.	Lieut.-Col. O'D. C. Grattan	Dublin
NORFOLK REGT. (9TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. A. C. Beecher	Bombay
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. L. H. Phillips	S. Africa
LINCOLNSHIRE REGT. (10TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. F. R. Lowth, c.b.	Secunderabad
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. H. J. Archdale	S. Africa
DEVONSHIRE REGT. (11TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. C. W. Park	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. G. M. Bullock	S. Africa
SUFFOLK REGT. (12TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. G. F. C. Mackenzie	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. C. R. Townley	Quetta
SOMERSETSHIRE LIGHT INFANTRY (13TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. H. A. Walsh	Gharial
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. E. J. Galloway	S. Africa
WEST YORKSHIRE REGT. (14TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. G. Grant-Dalton	Kurrachee
2nd Batn.	Col. F. W. Kitchener	S. Africa
EAST YORKSHIRE REGT. (15TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. C. F. Garnett	Belgaum
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. F. S. Inglefield	S. Africa
SHERBORNE REGT. (16TH):
1st Batn.	Col. W. H. Riddell	Mooltan
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. T. D. Pilcher	S. Africa
SOMERSETSHIRE REGT. (17TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. G. D. Carleton	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. A. W. McKinstry	Egypt
ROYAL IRISH REGT. (18TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. H. W. N. Guinness	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. J. B. Forster	Mhow
LINCOLNSHIRE REGT. (19TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. H. Bowles	S. Africa
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. C. J. Spottiswoode	Dagshai
SOMERSETSHIRE FUSILIERS (20TH):
1st Batn.	Lieut.-Col. G. L. E. May	Crete
2nd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. C. J. Blomfield, d.s.o.	S. Africa
3rd Batn.	Lieut.-Col. E. G. Brunxer-Randall	Malta
4th Batn.	Lieut.-Col. F. Hammersley	Chatham

BIBLE BRIGADE:

1st Bn. Lieut.-Col. A. E. W. Colville S. Africa
2nd Bn. Lieut.-Col. C. T. E. Metcalfe S. Africa
3rd Bn. Lieut.-Col. W. R. Kenyon-Slaney Rawul Pindi
4th Bn. Lieut.-Col. A. R. Pemberton Dublin

WEST INDIA REGT.:

1st Bn. Lieut.-Col. A. L. Bayley Bermuda
2nd Bn. Col. D. M. Allen Jamaica
3rd Bn. Col. J. W. A. Marshall Sierra Leone

HONG KONG REGT.:

Lieut.-Col. J. M. A. Retallick, I.S.C. Hong Kong

CENTRAL AFRICA REGT.:

1st Bn. Lieut.-Col. W. H. Manning, I.S.C. Central Africa
2nd Bn. Lieut.-Col. H. E. J. Brake, D.S.O., R.A. Somaliland

WEST AFRICA REGT.:

Lieut.-Col. C. A. P. Burroughs.
CHINESE REGIMENT:
1st Bn. Lieut.-Col. H. Bower, I.S.C. Wei-Hai-Wei

ARMY SERVICE CORPS.

Headquarters of Companies:
No. 1 (Transp. depot) No. 19 S. Africa No. 38 (Supply Co.)
" 2 ditto Aldershot " 20 S. Africa " 39 (Trans. depot)
" 3 S. Africa " 21 S. Africa " 40 S. Africa
" 4 S. Africa " 22 S. Africa " 41 S. Africa
" 5 S. Africa " 23 S. Africa " 42 S. Africa
" 6 S. Africa " 24 S. Africa " 43 S. Africa
" 7 S. Africa " 25 S. Africa " 44 S. Africa
" 8 S. Africa " 26 S. Africa " 45 S. Africa
" 9 S. Africa " 27 S. Africa " 46 S. Africa
" 10 S. Africa " 28 S. Africa " 47 S. Africa
" 11 S. Africa " 29 S. Africa " 48 S. Africa
" 12 S. Africa " 30 S. Africa " 49 S. Africa
" 13 S. Africa " 31 S. Africa " 50 S. Africa
" 14 S. Africa " 32 S. Africa " 51 S. Africa
" 15 S. Africa " 33 S. Africa " 52 S. Africa
" 16 S. Africa " 34 S. Africa " 53 S. Africa
" 17 S. Africa " 35 S. Africa " 54 S. Africa
" 18 (Sup. dep.) Ald. " 36 S. Africa " 55 S. Africa
" 37 S. Africa " 56 S. Africa

ROYAL ARMY MEDICAL CORPS.

Headquarters of Companies:
No. 1 Aldershot No. 8 York No. 15 Belfast
" 2 Aldershot " 9 Colchester " 16 Cork
" 3 Aldershot " 10 Chatham " 17 Curragh
" 4 Netley " 11 Dover " 18 London
" 5 Netley " 12 Woolwich " 19 Chester
" 6 Portsmouth " 13 Edinburgh Depot, Aldershot
" 7 Dev'pt " 14 Dublin

ARMY ORDNANCE CORPS.

Headquarters of Companies:
No. 1 S. Africa No. 8 Gibraltar No. 15
" 2 S. Africa " 9 S. Africa " 16
" 3 S. Africa " 10 S. Africa " 17
" 4 S. Africa " 11 S. Africa " 18
" 5 S. Africa " 12 Aldershot " 19
" 6 S. Africa " 13 Aldershot Depot Co. Woolwich
" 7 Egypt " 14 Curragh

THE NAVY.

MEDITERRANEAN.

ANDROMEDA, cr. Capt. J. L. Burr, C.M.G.
ARIENT, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. H. L. Richardson.
BANSHEE, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. A. C. Bruce.
BARHAM, cr. Com. H. L. Tottenham.
BOXER, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. F. W. Kinahan.
BRUIZER, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. R. C. K. Lambert.
CESAR, b. Capt. E. H. Gamble.
CANOPUS, b. Capt. H. S. F. Niblett.
CONFLICT, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. J. E. de O. Coke.
COQUETTE, t.b.d. Com. M. Culme-Seymour.
CRUISER, sloop. Com. L. G. Tufnell.
CYGNET, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. O. C. M. Barry.
DRAGON, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. A. G. K. Hill.
DRYAD, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. F. G. Dineley.
EARNEST, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. E. A. Thomas.
EMPRESS OF INDIA, b. Capt. J. Ferriss.
FOAM, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. H. A. Carruthers.
GLADIATOR, cr. Capt. F. O. Pike.
GRIFFON, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. J. E. Gregory.
HALCYON, t.g.b. Com. A. A. G. Calthorpe.
HARDY, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. H. H. Smyth.
HEBE, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. A. T. Taylor.
HORNET, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. R. G. D. Dewar.
HUSSAR, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. A. H. Williamson.
ILLUSTRIOUS, b. Capt. F. Finnis.
INOGENE, d.v. Lieut.-Com. L. G. S. Hancock.
MELITA, sloop. Com. I. M. Fraser, D.S.O.
OCEAN, b. Capt. Hon. A. G. Curzon-Howe.
ORION, h.d.s. (Reserve, Malta).
ORWELL, t.b.d. Com. R. Huddleston.
PIONEER, cr. Com. H. E. Thomas.
PYRAMUS, cr. Com. J. M. de Robeck.
RAMILLIES, b. Capt. R. S. Lowry (Rear-Adml. Lord Charles Beresford, C.B.).
RENOUN, b. Capt. Hon. Hugh Tyrwhitt (Vice-Adml. Sir J. A. Fisher, K.C.B.).
ROYAL OAK, b. Capt. W. H. B. Graham.
ROYAL SOVEREIGN. Capt. C. H. Adair.
SALAMANDER, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. E. C. Villiers.
SANDFLY, t.g.b. (Reserve, Malta).
SCOUT, cr. Com. W. de Salis.
SKATE, t.b.d. (Reserve, Malta).
SPEEDY, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. E. G. W. Davy.
SUNFISH, t.b.d. (Reserve, Malta).
SURPRISE, d.v. Com. F. W. F. Hervey.
THESEUS, cr. Capt. V. A. Tisdall.
VENUS, cr. Capt. H. M. T. Udor.
VICTORIOUS, b. Capt. C. H. Cross.
VINDICTIVE, cr. Capt. H. A. Warren.

CHANNEL SQUADRON.

ARROGANT, cr. Capt. A. W. E. Prothero.
DIADEM, cr. Capt. H. S. F. Niblett.
FURIOUS, cr. Capt. F. J. Foley.
HANNIBAL, b. Capt. F. W. Russell.
JUPITER, b. Capt. J. Durnford, C.B., D.S.O.
MAGNIFICENT, b. Capt. A. J. Horsley (Rear-Adml. Jenkins).
MAJESTIC, b. Capt. G. Le C. Egerton, C.B. (Vice-Adml. Sir H. H. Rawson, K.C.B.).
MARS, b. Capt. H. D. Barry.
NIobe, cr. Capt. J. Denison.
PACOLUS, cr. Capt. A. G. Tate.
PELORUS, cr. Capt. E. T. C. Tronbridge.
PRINCE GEORGE, b. Capt. R. A. J. Montgomerie, C.B.
REPULSE, b. Capt. S. H. N. Login.
RESOLUTION, b. Capt. W. Wilson.

NORTH AMERICA AND WEST INDIES.

ALERT, sloop. Com. H. Saville.
BUZZARD, sloop. Com. L. F. G. Tippinge.
CHARYBDEIS, cr. Capt. G. A. Giffard.
COLUMBINE, y. Lieut.-Com. J. B. Sparks.
CRESCENT, cr. Capt. Hon. C. J. Colville, C.B. (Vice-Adml. Sir F. G. D. Bedford, K.C.B.).
INDEFATIGABLE, cr. Capt. F. L. Campbell.
PALLAS, cr. Capt. Hon. G. W. Stopford.
PROSERPINE, cr. Com. G. C. A. Marescaux.
PSYCHE, cr. Capt. F. R. Pelly.
QUAIL, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. E. H. Rymer.
ROCKET, t.b.d. (Reserve, Bermuda).
TRIDUNE, cr. Capt. R. S. Rolleston.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

BARRACOUTA, cr. Capt. H. Cotesworth.
DORIS, cr. Capt. R. C. Prothero (Rear-Adml. Sir E. H. Harris, K.C.M.G.).
DWARF, g.b. Lieut.-Com. H. F. Shakespear.
FORTE, cr. Capt. R. C. Sparkes.
MAGIENNE, cr. Capt. W. B. Fisher.
MAGPIE, g.b. Lieut.-Com. J. K. Laird.
PARTRIDGE, g.b. Lieut.-Com. E. La T. Leatham.
RACON, cr. Capt. J. E. Bearcroft.
SYBILLE, cr. Com. A. E. A. Grant.
TARTAR, cr. Capt. H. P. Williams.
THEFT, cr. Com. R. H. Travers.
THRUSH, g.b. Capt. W. S. Keeres.
WIDGEON, g.b. Lieut.-Com. W. H. d'Oyly.
Lieut.-Com. W. Forbes.

CHINA.

AIACRITY, d.v. Com. C. G. F. M. Craddock.
ALGIRINE, sloop. Capt. E. D. Hunt.
ARETHUSA, cr. Capt. J. Startin.
ARGONAUT, cr. Capt. G. H. Cherry.
ASTREA, cr. Capt. A. W. Paget, C.M.G.
AURORA, cr. Capt. E. H. Bayly.
BANFLEUR, b. Capt. J. S. Warrender (Rear-Adml. Bruce).
BOAVENTURE, cr. Capt. C. J. G. Sawle.
BRAMBLE, g.b. Lieut.-Com. F. M. Leake.
BRISK, cr. Com. Sir R. B. S. Wrey, Bart.
BRITOMART, g.b. Lieut.-Com. P. Walter.
CENTURION, b. Capt. J. R. Jellicoe (Vice-Adml. Sir E. H. Seymour, K.C.B.).
DAPHNE, sloop. Com. C. W. Wainington-Ingram.
LIDO, cr. Capt. F. E. Tillard.
ENDYMION, cr. Capt. G. A. Callaghan.
ESK, g.b. Lieut.-Com. W. F. Blunt.
FAME, t.b.d. Lt.-Com. C. P. Beatty-Pownall.
GLOST, b. Capt. S. F. Ingfield.
GLIATH, b. Capt. L. E. Wintz.
HANDY, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. G. H. H. Holden.
HART, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. J. G. Armstrong.
HERMIONE, cr. Capt. R. S. D. Cummings.
ISIS, cr. Capt. G. M. Henderson.
JANUS, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. R. G. Corbett.
JINNET, g.b. Com. W. W. Smythe.
LIZARD, g.b. Lieut.-Com. J. C. Watson.
MARATHON, cr. Capt. J. G. M. Field.
MOHAWK, cr. Com. F. H. P. W. Freeman.
ORLANDO, cr. Capt. J. H. T. Burke.
OTTER, t.b.d. Lt.-Com. H. D. Wilkin, D.S.O.
PEACOCK, g.b. Lieut.-Com. C. P. E. Coode.
PHOENIX, sloop. Com. R. G. Fraser.
PIGMY, g.b. Lieut.-Com. J. F. E. Green.
PIQUE, cr. Capt. H. C. Reynolds.
PROVER, g.b. Lieut.-Com. C. V. de M. Cowper.
PROTECTOR, g.b. Com. W. R. Creswell, C.M.G.
REDPOLE, g.b. Lieut.-Com. C. F. Corbett.
ROBIN, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. G. G. Webster.
ROSARIO, sloop. Com. C. A. W. Hamilton.
SANDPIPER, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. H. C. Carr.
SNIPE, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. A. H. Oldham.
SWIFT, g.b. (Reserve, Hong Kong).
TERRIBLE, cr. Capt. Percy Scott, C.B.
UNDAUNTED, cr. Capt. A. C. Clarke.
WALLAROO, cr. Capt. F. C. M. Noel.
WHITING, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. C. Mackenzie.
WIVERN, h.d.s. (Reserve, Hong Kong).
WOODCOCK, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. H. D. E. Watson.
WOODLARK, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. H. E. Hillman.

PACIFIC.

AMPHION, cr. Capt. J. Casement.
CONDOR, sloop. Com. C. Schlater.
ICARUS, sloop. Com. G. F. S. Knowling.
PHAETON, cr. Capt. E. J. Fleet.
SPARROWHAWK, t.b.d. (Reserve, Esquimaux).
VIRAGO, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. G. T. F. Pike.
WARSPITE, cr. Capt. C. B. Keppel, C.B., D.S.O. (Rear-Adml. A. K. Bickford, C.M.G.).

EAST INDIES.

ASSAYE, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. O. U. Coates.
COSSACK, cr. Com. M. G. Cartwright.
HIGHFLYER, cr. Capt. F. E. Brock (Rear-Adml. Bosanquet).
PIGEON, g.b. Lieut.-Com. O. V. de Satge.
PLASSY, t.g.b. (Reserve, Bombay).
POMONE, cr. Capt. E. A. Simos.
REDBREAST, g.b. Lieut.-Com. M. R. Hill.
SPHINX, s. Com. H. A. Phillips.

AUSTRALIA.

ARCHER, cr. Com. J. P. Rolleston.
BOOMERANG, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. E. M. Hale.
KARRAKATTA, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. G. E. Corbett.
MILDURA, cr. Capt. C. E. Kingsmill.
PORPOISE, cr. Com. A. H. D. Ravenhill.
PYLADIS, cr. Com. R. G. O. Tupper.
RINGAROOMA, cr. Capt. F. St. G. Rich.
RINGDOVE, g.b. Lieut.-Com. R. F. Ayscough.
ROYAL ARTHUR, cr. Capt. C. G. Dicken (Rear-Adml. Beaumont).
TAURANGA, cr. Capt. F. Hoskyns, C.M.G., M.V.O.
TORCH, sloop. Com. N. G. MacAlister.

PARTICULAR SERVICE.

ALBACORE, g.b. Lieut.-Com. W. J. W. Steward Ireland
BELLONA, cr. Com. C. H. Dare Fishery duties, Iceland
COCKATRICE, g.b. Com. H. N. Rolfe Mediterranean
HEARTY, cr. Com. W. Story North Sea
JACKAL, cr. Lieut.-Com. J. C. Tancred Coast of Scotland
JASON, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. H. H. Bruce
RAVEN, g.b. Com. E. J. Bain Channel Islands
SCILLA, cr. Capt. A. A. C. Galloway
TYNE, cr. Com. K. Wade
VULCAN, cr. Capt. H. B. Jackson Mediterranean
WYE, cr. Staff-Com. C. R. H. Robinson.

COASTGUARD AND PORTGUARD.

ALARM, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. H. Powley tender to Galatea
ALEXANDRA, b. Capt. F. W. Fisher (Rear-Adml. Sir G. H. U. Noel, K.C.M.G.) Portland
AUSTRALIA, cr. Capt. G. Neville Southampton Water
BENBOW, b. Capt. E. Humpage Greenock
CAMPERDOWN, b. Capt. A. C. Corry Lough Swilly
CIRCE, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. G. S. Carr, C.M.G. tender to Severn
COLLINGWOOD, b. Capt. L. C. Stuart Bantry
COLOSSUS, b. Capt. J. E. C. Goodrich Holyhead
DEVASTATION, b. Capt. F. G. Kirby Gibraltar
GALATEA, cr. Capt. R. D. B. Bruce Hull
HOTSUP, cr. Com. F. A. Garforth Bermuda
HOWE, b. Capt. H. L. Fleet (Rear-Adml. A. P. M. Lake) Queenstown
LEDA, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. V. Mand tender to Australia
LEOPARD, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. H. M. Hunter tender to Nile
LEVEN, t.b.d. Com. P. A. J. Lloyd tender to Nile
LOCUST, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. S. H. Radcliffe tender to Nile
MELAMPUS, cr. Capt. R. N. Gresley Kingstown
NILE, b. Capt. G. C. Langley Devonport
ONYX, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. G. Oliver tender to Severn
OPOSSUM, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. W. A. Barkley tender to Nile
PANTHER, t.b.d. Com. A. P. James tender to Nile
RENDAR, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. W. H. Eyre tender to Colossus
RODNEY, b. Capt. R. W. White Queensferry
RUPERT, b. Com. A. B. G. Grenfell Alexandria
SANS PAREIL, b. Capt. H. C. Bigge Sheerness
SEVERN, cr. Lieut.-Com. W. L. H. Browne Harwich
SHELDRAKE, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. C. Lambert tender to Rodney SKIPJACK, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. C. Lambert tender to Melampus
SPANKER, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. H. Worthington
SPEEDWELL, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. J. W. Pochin tender to Alexandria
THRASHER, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. H. F. Cayley tender to Nile
THUNDERER, b. Capt. J. E. Blaxland Pembroke Dock
TRAFALGAR, b. Capt. G. A. Primrose Portsmouth

SOUTH-EAST COAST OF AMERICA.

BASILISK, sloop. Com. Dodgson.
FLORA, cr. Commodore R. L. Groom.
NYMPHE, sloop. Com. H. J. D. Laxton (to relieve Swallow).
SAPHO, cr. Capt. C. Burney.
SWALLOW, sloop. Com. E. F. Ingfield.

TRAINING SERVICE.

AGINCOURT, cr. Com. D. St. A. Wake tender to Boscawen
ALBATROSS, cr. Lieut.-Com. P. J. Stopford.
ANTELOPE, t.g.b. Com. O. A. Stokes Portsmouth (B.N.R.)
ARIEL, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. J. P. Irven tender to Pembroke
AVON, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. M. M. Lockhart
BITTERN, t.g.b. Lieut.-Com. E. S. Carey, tender to Pembroke
BLACK PRINCE, cr. Com. W. J. Egan Queenstown (boys)
BOSCAWEN, cr. Capt. T. H. M. Jerran Portland (boys)
BRITANNIA, cr. Capt. M. P. O'Callaghan Dartmouth (cadets)
BRITON, cr. Lieut.-Com. A. Spearman Inverness (B.N.R.)
CALDONIA, cr. Com. J. G. Hewitt Queensferry (boys)
CALLIOPE, cr. Capt. E. D. St. A. Ommanney tender to Northampton
CAMBRIDGE, cr. Capt. C. R. Arbuthnot Devonport (gunnery ship)
CHAMOIS, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. tender to Victory
CHEERFUL, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. tender to Pembroke
CLYDE, cr. Com. J. P. Montgomery Aberdeen (B.N.R.)
CONQUEROR, b. Com. H. Lyon tender to Cambridge
CLEOPATRA, cr. Com. L. G. Tufnell tender to Northampton
CRUISER, sloop. Com. L. G. Tufnell Mediterranean
CURLW, g.v. Lieut.-Com. R. A. Norton, tender to Cambridge
CYNTHIA, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. B. C. Barber Bristol (B.N.R.)
DEDALUS, cr. Capt. F. T. Hamilton Devonport (torpedo school)
DEFIANCE, cr. Capt. F. T. Hamilton Devonport (torpedo school)

DOLPHIN, s. Lieut.-Com. J. Luce tender to Boscawen
DURHAM, cr. Lieut.-Com. R. H. Curtis Leith (B.N.R.)
EAGLE, cr. Com. C. E. Gladstone Liverpool (B.N.R.)
EDINBURGH, b. Com. Hon. F. C. B. Addington tender to Wiltshire
EXCELLENT, g.b. Capt. W. H. May (gunnery school) Wiltshire
FAWN, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. R. W. Dalgety tender to Victory
FLIRT, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. M. H. Hodges tender to Victory
FLYING FISH, t.b.d. Com. Morgan-Singer tender to Victory
GANGES, cr. Com. W. V. Anson Harwich (boys)
GLEAMER, t.g.b. Com. F. H. Peyton Gravesend (B.N.R.)
HERO, b. Com. F. A. R. Bowles tender to Excellent
HYACINTH, cr. Capt. R. K. McAlpine
IMPREGNABLE, cr. Capt. A. C. Bromley Devonport (boys)
JASEUR, t.g.b. Com. W. Carey (T.) tender to Vernon JURCO, cr. Capt. H. P. Routh Training Squad.
KESTREL, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. L. L. Dundas tender to Victory
KITE, g.b. Lieut.-Com. S. R. Drury-Lowe tender to Excellent
LANDRAIL, g.v. Lieut.-Com. C. H. Morgan tender to Wiltshire
LIBERTY, brig. Lieut.-Com. L. Mansergh tender to Victory
LIGHTNING, t.b.d. Com. J. de M. Hutchison Devonport (boys)
LION, cr. Lieut.-Com. J. Webber tender to Victory
MAGNET, cr. Lieut.-Com. S. M. Agnew tender to St. Vincent
MARTIN, brig. Com. C. G. May Southampton (B.N.R.)
MEDEA, cr. Com. H. Freedy North Shields (B.N.R.)
MEDUSA, cr. Com. F. W. Dean tender to Pembroke
MERMAID, t.b.d. Capt. C. H. Cochran Training Squad.
MINERVA, cr. Com. E. G. Barton tender to Boscawen
MINOTAUR, cr. Lieut.-Com. H. H. D. Tothill tender to In-NAUTILUS, brig. (Reserve, Hong Kong).
NORTHAMPTON, cr. Capt. W. G. White Recruiting service
PETEREL, t.b.d. Com. T. D. W. Napier tender to Victory PILOT, brig. Lieut.-Com. W. Alderson tender to Impre-
PRESIDENT, cr. Com. A. C. Woods West India Dock (B.N.R.)
RACER, sloop. Com. M. S. Beatty tender to Britannia
ST. GEORGE, cr. Commodore A. L. Winsloe Training Squad
ST. VINCENT, cr. Com. C. F. Thursby Portsmouth (boys)
SEAFOWER, brig. Lieut.-Com. C. C. Horne, tender to Boscawen
SEAL, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. V. G. Gurner tender to Vind
UNICORN, cr. Lieut.-Com. E. L. Austen Dundee (B.N.R.)
VERNON, cr. Capt. C. G. Robinson Portsmouth (torpedo school)

YACHTS.

ALBERTA Staff-Capt. G. A. Broad tender to Victoria
ELFIN Staff-Com. J. E. Tully tender to Victoria (Temporarily relieved by STARFISH, t.b.d.)
ENCHANTRESS Staff-Capt. H. E. Wood Portsmouth
FIRE QUEEN Staff-Capt. T. Hawkins Smith tender to OSBORNE Capt. C. Windham Portsmouth
VICTORIA AND ALB. Rear-Adml. Sir J. R. T. Fullerton, C.B.
BERT K.C.V.O.
VIVID Capt. Sir B. Poore, Bart. (Adml. Lord T.C.
M. D. Scott, K.C.B.).
WILDFIRE Capt. C. Campbell, C.B., D.S.O. (Admiral Sir
W. B. Kennedy, K.C.B.).

SURVEYING SERVICE.

DART Com. C. E. Monro Australia
BERGIA Com. C. H. Simpson Pacific
PENGUIN Capt. J. W. Combe Australia
RAMBLER Com. H. E. F. Cust West Indies
RESEARCH Capt. A. M. Field West Coast of England
SEAHORSE Staff-Com. G. S. Keigwin Home waters
TRITON Capt. G. E. Richards Home waters
WATERWITCH Lieut.-Com. W. O. Lyne China

HARBOUR SERVICE AND DEPOT SHIPS.

ABYSSINIA Lieut. H. F. Hopkinson East Indies
ALGERS Capt. G. L. Atkinson, A.D.C. (Rear-Adml. C. Holland) Chatham (Midway Reserve)
ASIA Capt. A. C. Parr (Rear-Adml. Aldrich) Portsmouth Reserves
DUKE OF WELLING- } Capt. W. de V. Hamilton Depot ship, TON } Portsmouth
STAG, t.b.d. Lieut.-Com. G. de L. O. Johnson tender to STAR, t.b.d. Com. B. S. Evans tender to Victory
SYLVIA, t.b.d. Com. W. Bowden-Smith tender to Victory
HIBERNIA Com. Keppel Wade (Rear-Adml. Watson) Malta Reserve
HUMBER Com. H. J. Davison China
INDUS Capt. W. Marnack (Rear-Adml. T. S. Jackson) Devonport Reserve
LIFFEY Staff-Com. P. H. Wright Bombay Reserve
MAGDALA Capt. T. Y. Greet Cape of Good Hope
MONARCH, b. Capt. H. B. Bayly, C.B. Cape of Good Hope
NORTHUMBERLAND, cr. Com. C. E. Tower Depot ship, Chatham
PEMBROKE Capt. A. MacLeod Chatham (Malaya Reserve)
TAMAR Comdr. F. Powell, C.B. Hong Kong
TERROR Capt. T. MacGill, C.B. Bermuda
URGENT Comdr. E. H. M. Davis, C.M.G. Jamaica
VICTORY Capt. E. F. Jones (Admiral Sir C. F. Holdan, K.C.B.).

THE ROYAL MARINE FORCES.

ARTILLERY Col. W. G. Tucker, C.B. Eastern
LIGHT INFANTRY Col. H. St. G. Schomberg, C.B. Chatham
Col. B. Kiroff Gourock
Col. F. Baldwin Plymouth
Col. A. B. Crosbie, A.D.C. Wiltshire

Printed by ODAMS, LIMITED, 19-24, Floral St., Covent Garden, W.C., and Published for the Proprietor by GEORGE PAUL BACON at the Offices, 3, York St., Covent Garden, London, W.C. —SATURDAY, December 15, 1900.

Educational.

Lieut.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM,
P.S.C.

(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM
and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.),
35, HEREFORD SQUARE, S.W.
(one minute's walk from Gloucester Road Station Metropolitan and District Railways).

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION,
SEPT.—OCT., 1900.

FIRST—MR. C. G. LESLIE, 24,060 Marks.
MR. H. G. SMITH, 14,517 Marks.
These were the only two candidates
sent up by Col. Needham.

Mr. Leslie made 4,384 marks more than any other competitor; the next in order
of merit scoring only 19,676 marks.

During the last three years all Colonel
Needham's Pupils have been successful
at the Militia Competitive Examinations.

Prospectus and List of Successes on application.

HOVE, SUSSEX.

MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,
Late the Border Regiment,
assisted by

Colonel E. KENSINGTON, late B.A., P.A.C.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

SEPTEMBER, 1900.

NEW REGULATIONS.

SECOND ARTILLERY— Marks.
J. Coldwell-Horsfall 16,790

SIXTH INFANTRY—
A. V. P. Marten 16,153

Place.	Name.	Marks.
14th (Infantry)	B. G. A. Townshend	15,109
21st (Infantry)	*F. O. Koebel.....	14,105
22nd (Infantry)	C. F. F. Campbell ...	13,893

* Military subjects only.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry	B. P. Wedd	5,862
Infantry	L. Aylmer	5,851
Infantry	K. O. Goldie	5,653
University.....	H. S. Winthrop	—

THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Colonel Russell, Clavinia, Weymouth.

SEPTEMBER, 1900.
Three sent up, three passed, viz. :—

Embodied Officers.	Topo.	Mil. Eng.	Mil. Hist.	1st	2nd
a Russell	940	1060	1465	1000
b Fletcher	1020	425	1020	845
c Yardley	900	1510	1255	620

a and c Four weeks' leave before exam. only.
b Four weeks' work interrupted by duty—an absolute beginner.
C. I. Russell's three sons passed FIRST TRIAL in 1896-98-1900 respectively, as also have nearly all his other pupils.

PROMOTION EXAM.

MILITARY SUBJECTS: Special System of Postal
Tuition adapted to all.
Prospectus, &c., on application.

TURKISH & ARABIC.

SCHOLARSHIPS. REWARDS.

Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S Double success at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish and Arabic, held on October 16 and 17, 1900, was
with Major W. E. Morton, R.E., Qualified Interpreter at FIRST TRIAL in both Languages, with marks 656 and 643, and mostly prepared by correspondence from London at Mooltan, Punjab,
India.

Also Colonel E. Stephenson, Essex Regiment,
Qualified Interpreter in Turkish, at First Trial, with 667 marks; Major H. A. Curtis, B.A., and
FIFTEEN other officers with high marks.
Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.
NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-
STANI, RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.
Distance offers no hindrance to success.
Intending Candidates should begin work early.
Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S. W.

MILITIA EXAMINATION.

SEPTEMBER, 1900.

Lieut.-Col. MOORES prepared for the above
Examination only Four Officers, all of whom have been selected for Commissions, but the marks obtained on this occasion do not in any way indicate a test of the knowledge acquired by
the pupils in the subjects of the examination.
Previous successes under real competition: 145
Officers of the Militia, also 62 Officers for promotion.

Pupils are also prepared for WOOLWICH and SANDHURST.
8, Redcliffe Gardens, Clarendon Road,
SOUTHSEA.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,
AND
MR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.

(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge),
ECCLEFECHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY,
prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and
Non-Resident, for
ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVER-
SITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.
Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate
Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of
many years' successful experience.
Careful individual Attention. Strong
Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical
Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer.
Competent Military Instructor.

SUCCESSES, 1900.

Militia Competitive, September.—C. A. de
G. Dalglish, 7th Infantry, 16,114 marks; E.
Corbould-Warren, 10th Artillery, 13,114
marks; both first trial.
Woolwich.—None sent up.
Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only Candidate.

Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy.
Cambridge.— Trinity College Entrance; and
"Previous" Examination.—J. Cundell.
A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his
moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare;
and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.

LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATION.
WOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and UNIVERSITIES.

MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.

Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PRE-
PARES a limited number of PUPILS.
RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST
Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.
The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.

RECENT SUCCESSSES.

WOOLWICH.

G. F. Farran 8001 marks Dec. 1898.
W. Burrell Hayley 9228 " Dec. 1899.

The only pupils sent up.

SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.
Viscount Ingestre 7th Cavalry Cadetship.
C. M. Truman Cavalry Cadetship.
E. P. Grant Infantry Cadetship.
G. Winne Finch Infantry Cadetship.
B. H. Leatham Infantry Cadetship.
G. E. Hawes Infantry Cadetship.
C. A. Antrobus Infantry.
R. H. Pipon Infantry.
H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh Infantry.
R. Neave Infantry.
G. Wahab Indian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Capt. Fuller, late R.E., in conjunction with Mr. A. J. de Havilland
Bushnell, M.A., prepares resident
and non-resident Pupils for the above.

Address: 1, Orrisdale Terrace, College Road, Cheltenham.

SANDHURST, WOOLWICH,
INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SER-VICE, AND UNIVERSITIES.

MR. J. J. GREVATT

(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY,
for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.

A Barrister's Staff as its Candidates for
DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.
Prospectus with list of successes on application.
57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1,
CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.

ARMY TAILOR AND MILITARY OUTFITTER.—F. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench
Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.

BREECHES MAKERS AND MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW,
BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.

GUN AND RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W.
PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. '303 Rifles a spécialité.

MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN. Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., EDINBURGH (late 27, North Bridge).

MILITARY TAILORS AND BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms
strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.

HOTEL DIRECTORY.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well
Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining,
Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.

CLEVEDON HYDRO.—FULLY LICENSED RESIDENTIAL HOTEL. Comfortable
Winter Health Resort. Reduced terms to invalids from the Front. Bright, Cheerful, Homelike. Well Warmed and Ventilated. Turkish, Electric and other Baths. Massage and Electro Massage. Special arrangements and amusements for the Xmas Holidays. Climate mild, equable, and bracing. SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea
Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.

DUBLIN.—SHELBOURNE HOTEL.
First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.

EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south
aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate.
An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.

LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.

PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL AND QUEEN'S HOTEL.—
Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

Educational.

THE
COLONIAL COLLEGE &
TRAINING FARMS,
HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have
unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.
Full information from the Director at above
address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 8, Victoria Street, Westminster.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,
ASPATRIA.

Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising
Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE
CIRENCESTER.

(Established by Royal Charter, 1845.)

For Land Owners, Land Agents, Surveyors,
Agriculturists, Colonists, &c.

PATRON:

H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

PRESIDENT:

HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF RICHMOND AND
GORDON, K.G.

COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT:

The Right Hon. the EARL OF DUCIE, Chairman.
Col. Sir NIGEL KINGSCOTE, K.C.B., Vice-Chairman.

PRINCIPAL:

THE REV. JOHN B. MCLELLAN, M.A.
Hon. Member of Surveyors' Institution, and late
Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

For Prospectus of College, Farm and
Dairy, List of Governors, Professors,
Practical Instructors, &c., Courses of
Instruction, Scholarships, Diplomas, Gold
Medals, &c., apply to the Principal.
NEXT SESSION begins TUESDAY,
February 5.

S. G. KIRCHHOFFER,
M.A., F.G.S., F.R.G.S.

(EX-SCHOLAR & HONOURMAN, PEMBROKE COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE).

Receives Twelve Pupils for all Army Examinations.

FOUR RESIDENT INSTRUCTORS.

GREAT FACILITIES FOR
MILITIA EXAMINATIONS.

House stands on gravel soil, in the Pine-wood district. Cricket, Football, and
Tennis Grounds.

Terms and List of Successes on Application to YATELEY GRANGE,
Blackwater, Hants.

SANDECOTES SCHOOL, PARK-
STONE, DORSET.

A HIGH-CLASS SCHOOL for the Daughters of Gentlemen, where the aim is to train girls to be practical, refined, and cultured.

Every care and comfort for delicate children.
Large grounds; tennis and fives courts; playing fields. Pupils prepared for the University and other Examinations. Head Mistress, MISS
SOPHIE M. SMITH (National Sciences Tripos,
Cambridge), assisted by a highly qualified staff.
A limited number of Entrance Scholarships are awarded by competition.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH
AND
MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.

(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge),
Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors,
PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for
the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and
UNIVERSITIES at

CEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE
HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;

For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.R.
Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."

Telephone, "153, Battersen"; and
7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT

(150 yards from the Station), for Promotion
Candidates and Day Pupils.

Telephone, "217, Kensington."

List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed,
will be sent on application.

LLANDOVERY COLLEGE.
ARMY CLASS.

An examination for two Scholarships, of £30 and £25 a year respectively, will be held in January at Llandovery.

For particulars apply to Rev. W. W. Poole Hughes, Sherborne School, Dorset (Warden-elect of Llandovery).

GRESHAM'S SCHOOL, HOLT,
NORFOLK. Founded 1555.

Head Master, G. W. S. HOWSON, M.A., late of Uppingham School.

Three miles from the sea, and close to Sheringham and Cromer. Splendid climate. The soil is gravel on chalk. Entirely new drainage.

Governors:—The Fishmongers' Company and County and Local Representatives.

Classrooms, Laboratories, and Workshops are in course of erection, at an estimated expenditure
of £40,000.

Highest inclusive fees £57 per annum.
Science and Modern Languages taught throughout the School.

ARMY AND NAVY CLASSES.
Arrangements made for Entire Charge of Boys
from India.

Yearly leaving Exhibitions of £60 per annum
for three years.

Next term commences Monday, Jan. 21.

For further particulars address the Head Master,
who can be seen by appointment at the Hotel
Metropole, London, on Monday and Tuesday,
January 7th and 8th.

BRIGHTON—Crescent House School.

A. H. THOMAS, M.A., Oxon.

(Late 2nd Master O.M.C.).

OFFERS A SOUND GENERAL EDUCATION
to Boys preparing for

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND NAVY.

Reduced Fees offered to Sons of Officers serving
in South Africa.

BATH COLLEGE.
ARMY CLASS.

10 Woolwich and Sandhurst successes direct from the College during the past two years.

A Scholarship of the annual value of £40 for a Boarder, or £20 for a Day-boy, is offered to the best Army Candidate joining the College in January, 1901. Candidates must be between 14 and 16 years of age.

For further particulars, apply to,
The BURSAR, The College, BATH.

RUSSIAN LESSONS.

A Russian, formerly a Student of the University of St. Petersburg, gives lessons in Russian.

Translations made into Russian.

Address—K. T., 13, Alfred Place,

Bedford Sq., W.C.

If personally, apply between 4.30 and 5.30 p.m.

ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY,
and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.

No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.

Capt. M. M. M. FESTING.

Resident and Non-resident Pupils received.
Prospectus with List of Successes on application.
Officers Coached by Correspondence.

TWO GIRLS, 13 or 14 years of age, may be received in good School, at reduced fees, Highgate, N., to fill vacancies.
Thorough education, limited number of boarders.
—Apply, H. H., c/o J. and J. Paton, 143, Cannon Street, London.

THE STANDARD LIFE
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.

LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C.,

and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.

ASSURANCES AND LOANS

can be effected by

MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS

in Government Service,

on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business.

Annual Revenue exceeds . . . £1,100,000

Bonus Additions Declared exceed . . . £6,750,000

Accumulated Funds exceed . . . £8,400,000

Claims Paid exceed . . . £17,000,000

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Fantaloons,
Polo Breeches.
11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.

F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.

Established over 80 Years

M. WISEMAN,
TAILOR & MILITARY OUTFITTER,
HELMET, ARMY CAP,
AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKER,
43, SACKVILLE ST., LONDON, W.

EMIGRATION TO CANADA.

Canada offers great advantages to settlers, including free grants of 160 acres of land and improved farms at reasonable prices. Fine climate, no rent, light taxes, free schools, good markets, rapidly developing industries, and large import and export trade. Pamphlets, maps, and full particulars (supplied post free), may be obtained from the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria Street, London, S.W., or from the Allan, Dominion and Elder Dempster Steamship Companies, or their Local Agents, or the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.
Write for particulars.

ALL BUT NEW
OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,
for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of

LEWIS MOSES,
65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,
at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms and apparel purchased.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and
VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete,
and single Articles in condition equal to New
at one-third original cost.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD.

E. WHISTLER,
11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND

BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.

Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S
The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach,
Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations,
Bilious Affections.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA
The Physician's Cure
for Gout, Rheumatic
Gout and Gravel; the
safest and most gentle
Medicine for Infants,
Children, Delicate Females, and the Sickness of Pregnancy.

MAGNESIA
Sold Throughout the World.

N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

If the Blood is Diseased the Body is Diseased and Enfeebled. Keep your Blood Pure and the Health of the System will follow.

Clarke's Blood Mixture,
THE WORLD-FAMED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RESTORER,

is warranted to Cleanse the Blood from all Impurities from whatever cause arising,
For Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Sores of all kinds, Eczema, Scurvey, Scrofula, Bad
Legs, Glandular Swellings, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous.
It is the only real Specific for Gout and Rheumatic pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the Blood and Bones.

As this Mixture is pleasant to the taste and warranted free from anything injurious to the most delicate constitution of either sex, from infancy to old age,
the Proprietors solicit sufferers to give it a trial to test its value. Clarke's Blood Mixture is sold by all Chemists throughout the world. Price 2s. 9d. and 11s.
per bottle.

Thousands of Testimonials of Wonderful Cures from all parts of the World.
Proprietors: The Lincoln and Midland Counties Drug Co., Lincoln.
BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS OR SUBSTITUTES.

To MILITARY MEN
and others.

PICKERING'S
BLANCO.

For whitening all articles of Buff or Buckskin Leather, such as Military Equipments, White Helmets, Gloves,
Cricket and Tennis Shoes, Tennis Balls, Hunting Thongs,
Whips, and a multitude of similar articles.
Removes stains and discolourations, and ensures evenness of colour and a soft, silky surface of glossy satiny appearance. Much better and more convenient than pipe-clay, as there is no trouble of preparation, and it is much cheaper in the end.
BLANCO is put up in cup-shaped blocks (registered design), and with the specially made non-corrosive zinc box, will be found the handiest article for the purposes named.
Sold at every Canteen, also by Ironmongers, Saddlers, &c.
Manufacturers, JOSEPH PICKERING and SONS, Sheffield, England.
London Offices:
St. George's House, Eastcheap, E.C.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,
Naval and Military Outfitters,

WEST END BRANCH—

19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.

Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard.
Do. Do. 5810 Avenue.

Telegraphic Address—
"Realistic, LONDON."

New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements

(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)

BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.

REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.

Infantry, 35s. 6d.

Cavalry, 38s. 6d.

ON APPROVAL.

RICHARD DICKESON
AND COMPANY,
WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND
PROVISION IMPORTERS,
LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, Mansell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVER: Market Lane and Queen Street,
ALDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street. PLY-
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse. PEN-
BROKE DOCK: Tremarick Street. GIBBAL-
TAR: City Mill Lane. CAPE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street. PORT ELIZABETH:
Lenkita Warehouses, Rufane Vale. DURBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street. Agencies at
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c. &c.

Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire.
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price List
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Canteen
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST
SOCIETY, LTD.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.

Established 1853.

Chairman—C. R. RIVINGTON, Esq., J.P., D.L.
Paid-up Capital, £20,000.
Debentures and Debenture Stock, £20,000.
REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS
PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.

W. OSCAR NASH, F.L.A., Actuary and Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE
INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL
INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED
FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL,
S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.

ESTABLISHED 1803.

Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.

Paid-up Capital, £300,000.

Invested Funds over £1,500,000.

E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

BLAND & SONS

"EUOPLIA"

BALL AND SHOT GUN.

A WEAPON OF PRECISION

Shooting Conical bullets up to 100 yards with the accuracy of any rifle; and shot with the pattern
and penetration of a shot gun.
In 12, 16 and 20 Bores. Weight of 12 Bore
about 7 lbs.

AS SUPPLIED TO

H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,

Whose Expedition to the North Pole

WAS ENTIRELY EQUIPPED WITH ARMS
AND AMMUNITION BY THIS FIRM.

And also to

"THE SOUTHERN CROSS" ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION,

led by

G. E. BORCHGREVINK, Esq.

T. BLAND & SONS,

2, King William St., Strand, W.C.

(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)

Works: 41, 42, & 43, Whittall St., Birmingham.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.

EPPS'S

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

COCOA

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

MOUSELL BROS.,

FURNITURE REMOVERS

AND STORERS,

Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, S.W.

AND WALHAM GREEN, FULHAM.

BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT

BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.

LEAMINGTON.—Windsor Street.

MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.

LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.

LIVERPOOL.—Bronte Street, Russell Street.

EXETER.—London Inn Square.

GLoucester.—Depository, and Van and Wagon
works, Commercial Road.

SECOND-HAND
UNIFORMS
BOUGHT AND SOLD.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UNI-
FORMS in all conditions at from one-fifth
original cost, or sells the same on commission.
Multi clothing also purchased.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2135.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRICE 6D.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—		PAGE
The Enemy in Cape Colony - - -	-	1229
Training Officers - - -	-	1230
The Submarine Again - - -	-	1240
The Loss of the Gneisenau - - -	-	1241
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes - - -	-	1230
Army Personal - - -	-	1233
Army Foreign - - -	-	1234
Navy Notes - - -	-	1241
Navy Personal - - -	-	1243
Navy Foreign - - -	-	1244
Letter to the Editor—
Our Militia's Grievance - - -	-	1236
Articles—
Aetheric Signalling - - -	-	1232
War Summary - - -	-	1235
Gratuity for South Africa - - -	-	1235
The Army Rifle Association - - -	-	1235
War Office Business - - -	-	1236
The Auxiliary and Colonial Troops - - -	-	1236
Press Views and Opinions on Army Matters - - -	-	1238
Prize Day on the Britannia - - -	-	1244
Cadetships in the Royal Navy - - -	-	1244
Casualties in South Africa - - -	-	1245
The Gazettes—
Army - - -	-	1246
Navy - - -	-	1249
Regimental Intelligence - - -	-	1237
Obituary - - -	-	1236
Naval Intelligence - - -	-	1249

THE ENEMY IN CAPE COLONY.

THE disquieting news that the Orange River had been successfully crossed by the Boers at two points widely apart was received from Lord Kitchener on Thursday. One point of passage lay at Rhenoster Hoek, to the west of Odendalstroom, the other in the vicinity of Sand Drift, to the west of Philipolis and the railway, from which district we suggested last week that such an attempt was not improbable. The eastern commando, numbering from 500 to 800, after gaining the south bank at Rhenoster and skirting Venterstadt, was moving towards Steynsburg on Tuesday, closely followed by mounted troops. The western commando, of which the strength has not been stated, was apparently making for the Colesberg district, and was also being pursued. Lord Kitchener had besides despatched a considerable body of mounted men with the object, if possible, of surrounding the raiding bands, and a mixed force of 1,000 men was reported from Cape Town to have been sent north to co-operate. The want of a sufficient force of trained mounted troops is much felt in the Colony, and the situation is considered grave.

The Queen, most opportunely, and with a deep realisation of the needs of her Army, in conveying to the Auxiliary Forces and the Colonial troops her grateful appreciation of their signal services during the past year in South Africa and elsewhere, has spoken, and informed them that she relies on those still abroad to continue to use their best efforts in aid of her Regular Army, trusting that the day may not be far distant when she may welcome their return home. This expression of her Majesty's reliance on her subjects, coupled with the decision to postpone the projected public thanksgiving on Lord Roberts' return as being somewhat premature, must remind the nation that serious work still remains to be done in the field, and that the resources of the Regular Army are insufficient at the present time to replace the Auxiliary Forces if withdrawn from active service. The Army under Lord Kitchener's command now numbers some 210,000 men, having recently been somewhat hastily reduced and appreciably weakened by the withdrawal of a considerable part of the Canadian and Australian contingents, as well as Lumsden's Horse, the City Imperial Volunteers, and some local corps, all of whom rendered most admirable and indispensable service during Lord Roberts' and Sir Redvers Buller's great forward movements. Of the field force now in South Africa, no less than 67,400 consisted, on the 7th inst., of Auxiliary and Colonial troops, according to a tabular statement issued by the War Office. Unfortunately, and very possibly as a consequence, a decided increase in the enemy's activity, culminating in the invasion of Cape Colony, has synchronised with the reduction of the field army. The difficulty of the task committed to Lord Kitchener has thus been augmented, and until he has been furnished with such additions to his mounted force as he may require we shall not expect to hear of much real progress being made. Surveying the entire theatre of war, and accepting the statement that the guerilla forces of the enemy number approximately from 12,000 to 15,000 men, it is no exaggeration to say that from 40,000 to 50,000 mounted riflemen, with a very large reserve of seasoned horses, will not be too much for their effectual and final suppression, leaving the dismounted troops and heavy field artillery to hold the fortified strategic points and the lines of communication.

De Wet, as the world knows, has again escaped, and this time by an act of conspicuous daring in charging with part of his force—according to the received accounts—through the British cordon near Thaba N'chu. By the splendid exertions of General C. Knox and his pursuing columns, De Wet himself was headed off and driven north from Orange River, but his bold scheme for the invasion of Cape Colony has nevertheless, as we have noticed above, succeeded in part, through his adroitness in dividing his force when hotly pursued near Rouxville, and leaving one part in the south while he escaped north with the remainder. By this skilful strategical move, which savours much of stratagem so dear to the Boers, he drew the bulk of the pursuers after himself, and uncovered the approaches to the Orange River for his lieutenant's advance.

Whether it be correct to call the affair at Nooitgedacht in the Megaliesberg on the 13th inst. a disaster or not may be a moot point. It certainly was a reverse, and a serious one, although redeemed to some extent by the heroic valour of the troops. In disasters, reverses, and surprises during the war many thousands of our men have been captured, their arms and unexpended ammunition being appropriated and used against us by the enemy. As concerns General Clements' defeat we have now sufficient data for criticism, and it would appear to rank amongst the most unfortunate, to use a mild word, that we have suffered. The key of his position, which also commanded his camps, was insufficiently fortified, if at all. The four companies of the 2nd Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers who held it were posted, according to a telegram from the Standard's correspondent, dated the 14th inst., in the centre of a depression, which reminds one of the cup-shaped depression in which our men were caught on Majuba Hill. This post was occupied by about 600 men, and Delarey was known to have a superior force close at hand, but it was not known that by a forced night march some 3,000 more had come from Warmbaths, and were upon the ground ready to commence an assault at dawn. General Broadwood, only seven miles off, was apparently out of touch and rendered no assistance. Despite the inequality in numbers and the failure to reinforce it when first assaulted, the post on the hill might have held its own until reinforcements arrived had there been an adequate reserve of ammunition. As it was, an engagement lasting only three hours sufficed to exhaust the supply, leaving the men on the hill defenceless, and the camps of General Clements and Colonel Legge on the lower ground untenable. The operation, so far as the Boers are concerned, was a signal success, and we must admit that both in strategy and tactics we were out-generalled. Lord Kitchener is credited with a new plan for the subjugation of the guerilla bands. We have no doubt that he, as an Engineer officer, will direct the effective fortifying of all posts held on lines of communication; also that ample supplies of ammunition and food be laid in, and that water-sources, covered by the fire of the posts, be secured within reach of the garrisons.

Notwithstanding recent untoward events, we would not convey the impression that we are losing ground. The growing activity of the enemy is largely due to the desperate straits in which they find themselves through want of necessities, food and clothing. Their ammunition supplies are running short; their waste in horseflesh is very great; and their actual losses in killed and wounded in all the recent engagements, and notably at Vryheid and Thaba N'Chu, have largely exceeded those of the British. To render success more probable and profitable their commanders now act more in concert and in concentrated bodies, paying less attention to small affairs such as raids on the lines of railway, which, as a consequence, are left more open for both military and civil traffic. There are still two chief requirements, namely, ample reinforcements at the front and unlimited patience at home.

TRAINING OFFICERS.

THERE has been a recrudescence of adverse criticism of our officers since the affair of Nooitgedacht. It was a bad business, no doubt, but it is scarcely fair to condemn a whole class for more or less isolated incidents, and the blame for the surprise on the Megaliesberg may yet be fixed upon individual shortcomings. The chief point to consider is not the right apportionment of blame, but the remedy, if such there be, for failings, whether of character or training, that have made such misadventures possible. Are British officers really more prone than other military men would be to be hoodwinked and out-maneuvred by our "slim" enemy? Have they really less professional knowledge, less aptitude for leadership, than their Continental comrades? Would the carefully-instructed German or Frenchman have fallen into such errors as the rash attacks of Stormberg or Magersfontein? Would they have escaped the ambushade at Sanna's Post, or avoided the surrenders at Nicholson's Nek, Reddersberg, Lindley, and so forth? It may be so, and yet this is all pure assumption. No officer in either Army has (except the French in Tonkin) heard a shot fired in anger for the last thirty years; none have had the smallest experience against modern weapons and appliances of war, long-range arms of precision, smokeless powder, and the immeasurable advantages conferred thereby on the defence. We may go further and remark that, however highly instructed—and it is a favourite doctrine that they are as highly trained as our officers are the reverse—they still, both French and German, steadfastly refuse to accept any of the lessons that, to us, seem so plainly written on the wall by the finger of dread experience. The Kaiser at the late manoeuvres is known to have expressed his conviction that old methods of attack—frontal, in dense columns moving across the open against an enemy strongly posted—will still be preserved in the German system of warfare. Precisely the same opinion is held in France, where senior generals have also shown at manoeuvres that they are resolved to adhere to obsolete forms despite significant warnings of the inevitable consequences. Can it be contended that these officers are one whit superior to ours? Does not the epithet "stupid" fit these pert self-complacent theorists who refuse to be taught by practical tests? It is a fair inference that they would not have been conspicuously successful against Boer tactics. Reverse, possibly without the set-off of numerous often unheeded successes, might have been encountered; for there have been many occasions on which very brilliant feats of arms have been performed—take the latest, Colonel Gawne's defence of Vryheid—which have been most inadequately acknowledged.

Let it be granted, however, that the peace training of our officers is not all that could be desired; the need for some change, some reform, in this direction cannot be gainsaid. No doubt training has been too stiff and wooden; there has been too great love for mere parade movements and ordinary barrack drill. At this very moment the halting wits of the authorities can think of no better improvement than to introduce a new manual and platoon, as though the mechanical handling of a rifle was of the slightest importance compared to marksmanship. The training that lacks is in the development of the higher qualities of leadership; familiarity with broken ground and the best methods of moving men over it or of holding it; the uses of cover; enlarged views as to reconnaissances, scouting and outpost duty, the whole aimed at raising the mental calibre and encouraging more thoughtful application of the principles of command, as exercised in direction and control. Book lore, the careful study and assimilation of precedents will, of course, greatly help, but theoretical instruction can never be all-sufficing. Self-reliance and the willing acceptance of responsibility are only learnt by actual opportunity, and they must have been gained to no mean extent already by large numbers of our officers. Whether the advantages of field service, almost unintermittent and constantly varied, have produced quite the right troop leader remains to be proved. It is contended that the most promising raw material is not invariably chosen for working up into commanding and other senior officers. Selection, so-called, is often condemned as a failure on the grounds that it has not as yet secured the advancement of the fittest. This is a wide and pregnant question which must be left for later discussion.

Army Notes.

Among the "lessons of the war"—many and various are they, and war is a stern master—is one which has been rubbed in by many "regrettable incidents" to permit it to be forgotten, and it is not one quite to our taste. The bayonet has lost its power in the face of the rifle. When Sir George Cathcart in his gallant but unfortunate attempt to affect a diversion of the great column of Russians on the right of the British infantry found that the enemy had cut him off from the plateau, and was told that the men were short of ammunition, he asked scornfully, "Have they not got their bayonets?" Even in this Boer war we have read over and over again of the dismay and flight of the burghers when they were charged with the cold steel, but it would seem as if the want of cartridges is now sufficient justification for the surrender of compact detachments of famous regiments, officers and all. However, without precise information on the exact nature of the situation we accept as a positive fact that there was no alternative open to Clements' men at Megaliesberg. There will be, no doubt, inquiry and decision on the point by-and-by. Lord Kitchener's report is not liberal in details, but it looks as if he thought Broadwood's force, only seven miles away, might have had a look in with good results. Anyway, the enemy captured a body of British infantry, whom they released presently, retaining only the officers as prisoners. But the disaster to the serviceable cavalry force called Brabant's Horse, near Zastron, is an incident of a different character. Surely these horsemen were not out of "eyes?" They were not "surrounded" by the Boers, we presume, and they could at all events have ridden away from the enemy.

The South African Hospitals Commission hope to be in a position to present their report early in the New Year. So Mr. Balfour stated in the House on Monday, in reply to a question put to him by Sir Walter Foster. Lord Justice Romer, who is, of course, mainly responsible for the report, has, we understand, been delayed in dealing with it by his judicial duties. Although away absent in South Africa all through the Long Vacation, he went back to his duties at the Law Courts immediately on his return, without, as he might well have done, claiming any holiday after his labours. The preparation of the report would, in any case, be a lengthy business, for the ground that has to be gone over is most extensive. Without anticipating the conclusions arrived at by the Commission, it is worth noting that the heavy mortality from dysentery and enteric still continues among the soldiers at the front, though no one now complains that the hospital accommodation is insufficient. Sir Walter Foster, who at the commencement of the war offered to go out in an unpaid capacity to superintend the sanitary arrangements, has been urging the formation of a sanitary corps for service in future campaigns.

There certainly seems something to say for the proposal, though it did not meet with a very favourable reception. Meanwhile, we may console ourselves with the reflection that however defective the hospital services may have been at the commencement of the war they were not worse than that supplied to the United States troops in the Cuban campaign. Mr. Black Atkins, one of the few English correspondents who went through that campaign, supplies a luminous picture of what took place in his book entitled "The War in Cuba." "The doctors," he writes, "worked day and night for a few days almost without food or sleep. Their devotion was simply admirable. But there were not nearly enough tents, cots, medicines, doctors, nurses, or carriers. Everything was insufficient. I have never seen anything more pitiable than the spectacle of wounded men lying all night without a tent covering over them on the muddy ground and in the soaking dew. Night on a hospital ground was a time of horror. There was moaning everywhere, and one night I remember two men calling all night for someone to kill them. . . . The men were supplied (at best) with the tiny dog or shelter tents which are not properly rain-proof." Later on he tells of men who had been crying out deliriously, wandering about the field at night gibbering. Some of Mr. Burdett Coutts's charges sounded almost like a paraphrase of this.

As one result of the Royal Commission on the finances of India, over which Lord Welby presided, it has become evident to Her Majesty's Government that something ought to be done to relieve India of a part of the burden now borne under the head of military expenditure. Those who know the situation best, men like the late Sir George Chesney, Sir Henry Brackenbury, and Sir Edwin Collen, soldiers who have filled the position of military member of Council, and have been able to hold the balance evenly, have long said that concessions would have to be made; but there has always been this difficulty hitherto—no one knew exactly to what extent the Home Government should go. When the report of Lord Welby's Commission appeared, it became clear there must be some concessions on the part of the home exchequer, as it was plainly indicated that India was paying too much. From all we can gather, matters may now be said to have been readjusted on what must be regarded as broad and practical lines and the recommendation of Lord Welby and his colleagues has been accepted in a proper spirit by both sides. The recommendation was that the charges against India should be reduced to the extent of £250,000 sterling yearly, which is about the amount of relief that the Indian financial authorities have all along pleaded for. There is no denying that of late years there has been a marked change in the attitude adopted with regard to India among all classes in this country. Nowhere has that change been more evident than in the Imperial Parliament, where statesmen of all shades of political opinion have been brought to recognise how great a part India plays in the British Empire, and how necessary it is that the local army should be maintained in the highest state of discipline and efficiency. The concession in favour of the Indian taxpayer to which we refer is the outcome of this altered state of feeling. The Indian Government has had to bear many disappointments in the past, but it may be reasonably supposed that a commission presided over by an authority of Lord Welby's high standing would not have issued such a report it did unless it had been felt that the case of the Indian taxpayer had been proved to the hilt. Lord Welby who was so long associated with the Treasury in Downing Street, would never have yielded to any readjustment of terms unless the arguments adduced in favour of such a proceeding were overwhelming, as they undoubtedly are.

The present war cuts two ways, in a recruiting sense. It rouses martial enthusiasm and sends into the ranks of the Army many a sturdy young fellow who, under other circumstances, would stick to his workshop or office. Yet the many other openings afforded for active service have necessarily produced an effect on recruiting, and the returns for the year promise to be satisfactory—very satisfactory indeed, in fact, if figures stand for anything. The year is not ended yet, but the particulars received to the end of last month enable us to form a pretty fair estimate as to what the general outcome of the year's work will be. There is every reason to believe that it will be a record one, the best since the introduction of short service. There never was a time when the popularity of the mounted arms stood so high as it does at present. Not only the cavalry has derived benefit, but the Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery and other mounted corps have had a larger influx of more desirable men; indeed, the standards of respectability, height, weight, and chest measurement, all have been maintained for these branches. The figures of the London Recruiting District tell their own tale. In 1897 there were passed into the Service through this channel for the Army only 6,515; for the Militia, 4,965—total, 11,480; in 1898, 6,824 and 5,276 respectively—total, 12,100; in 1899, 7,106 and 4,568 respectively—total, 11,674. During eleven months of this year, from January 1 to November 30, the numbers were—Army, 9,410; Militia, 5,896—total, 15,306; the eleven months' working showing an increase of 3,632 over the twelve months of 1899. Favourable as that year's return was, we find, so far as can be gathered, the same excellent spirit has pervaded the provinces also.

In 1899 the Inspector-General of Recruiting was able to point to a return of 42,700 men who had accepted service in the Regular Army, as compared with 38,418 in 1898, 33,722 in 1897, and 27,809 in 1896. This year, it is reasonable to suppose, the number will rise to upwards of 44,000. It is quite impossible to deal with figures in any critical sense until the complete returns are before us, and it may be as well for the taxpayer not to be carried away by any seeming tendency in the direction of an increased popularity of the Army. Full allowance must of course be made for a period which has been so exceptional and has produced such a praiseworthy outburst of patriotism everywhere. Major-General Borrett in his report on last year's recruiting, said:—"The war in South Africa largely contributed to the material improvement which set in during the early months of the year; thus the year has closed as the best since the introduction of the short service system. Not only did more recruits present themselves for enlistment, but they were of decidedly better physique. While recruiting was in an unsatisfactory condition, the percentage of recruits taken under standard had been very high, but in the last quarter of the year it fell materially." This bears out our view that the increased popularity is attributable to the war in South Africa. This being so, it would be in the highest degree reprehensible if advantage were not taken of these better returns to delay the measures required to improve the Army and increase its attractions.

In the course of his resumed lecture on "Army Organisation" before the Aldershot Military Society, on Monday, Lieut.-Colonel W. H. Daniell, D.A.A.G., drew attention to a fact which the critics of the War Office—owing to want of knowledge, of course—entirely ignore. Yet it is all important as bearing upon the vexed question of the efficiency of that department. It has been laid down by Government after Government ever since 1870, as Colonel Daniell showed, that, in case of war, the largest force this country would be required to put into the field would be two Army corps—each about 25,000 men. Our organisation has been based on that supposition, and all our military arrangements for years past have been made accordingly. Before the war in South Africa had been long in progress it became evident that at least four Army corps would be required to bring the operations to a successful issue, so formidable were the positions held by the enemy, so extensive was the field of operations, and so difficult to keep open were the lines of communication. Not 50,000 but 200,000 men were really needed. Within a few weeks of the orders for augmentation being promulgated, not only were the men forthcoming, but little or no difficulty arose with regard to transport and supplies. The strain on all at headquarters was enormous. It was borne, however, with patriotism and resolution. It is wrong to say, as some do, that the War Office has broken down completely during the war. There have been no indications of failure. The nation muddled into the Boer war, and disaster followed, but it has yet to be proved that the real responsibility for these disasters rested with those in military authority at home. Successive Governments ought to have foreseen that our Army has never been big enough for the work it has to do.

We understand that considerable pressure has been brought to bear on the Secretary of State to induce him to reconsider the attitude he took up in the House last week when urged to allow Militia officers who are embodied to be credited with marks for their service at the next Army examination. Mr. Strachey, Major Rasch, and other members who have taken this question up, deserve all praise for the efforts they have made to air what is really a very substantial grievance. The subject is one in which a great number of people are interested, and the sooner all doubt on the subject is cleared up the better. Mr. Strachey drew from Mr. Brodrick the announcement that the next Army examination will be somewhere about the 20th of March, and when he failed to elicit any statement as to whether marks would be allowed for embodied service or not, sought to elicit from the Secretary of State a promise that an announcement on the subject should be made at least two months before the examination took place. Mr. Brodrick was unable to give him satisfaction even on this point, though we can hardly see why. Militia officers who contemplate going in for the next examination, and are at present doing embodied service, think they will be at a disadvantage before the examiners as compared with candidates who, not being under service, are able to avail themselves of the services of the Army coach. If they are not to be credited with any marks for service, at least the War Office ought to let them know what to expect. They might then, if they wished, apply for discharge, and work with a tutor for a couple of months. Perhaps Mr. Brodrick thought these applications would be more numerous than would be convenient, and hence his rather unsatisfactory answers in the House. However this may be, he is, as at present advised, disposed, we understand, to reconsider his attitude and deal a little more generously with embodied Militia officers entering for the March examination.

A point about which some uncertainty was felt was cleared up in the House before it rose. The subject was raised by Mr. Warner, who asked the Secretary of State if old soldiers who had bought their discharge and have joined the Royal Reserves are to be given back two-thirds of the money they paid for their discharge besides the £22 bounty, whereas old soldiers who after leaving the Army joined the Militia are only to get £5 bounty in full discharge. It was stated in reply that old soldiers who have purchased their discharge and joined the Royal Reserves will have the usual proportion of their purchase money refunded, and that, as in the case of ordinary re-enlistments, old soldiers who have purchased their discharge and have joined the Militia are similarly entitled to a refund of their purchase money if their corps is embodied. On disembodiment they will receive a gratuity varying according to the period of embodiment, but amounting in no case to less than £5 3s. 6d.

Many engagements have been made by visitors to Egypt to extend their excursions to Khartoum this season, and Lord Cromer has already set the example. The Sirdar, Sir Francis and Lady Wingate, and General A. L. Annesley are also starting for the new seat of Government in the Soudan. Messrs. Cook and Son are booking places for many more visitors.

The National Association for the Employment of Reserve and Discharged Soldiers has had a more or less quiet time lately, in consequence of the war, which has taken nearly all Reserve men to the front. It is satisfactory to know, nevertheless, that the association is keeping its organisation in working order, and preparing for the strain which will be put upon it as soon as operations in South Africa are brought to an end, and our warriors at the front return to England on discharge or transfer to the Reserve. The rush for employment will then be very great and steps are already being taken to meet the emergency. During the six months, from January to June, for the reasons stated, only 1,060 men were registered for employment throughout the kingdom. Of these, 771 were provided for, some two-thirds being invalids from the Cape, whilst the remainder were men of the Royal Reserve Battalions and home Reservists who had been granted furlough for the purpose of placing themselves in civil life. What the association stands most in need of just now is money. Much pressure will be put upon it immediately, and in view thereof every endeavour has to be made to have its system complete. It would be of immense advantage to the executive if those friends of the Army who are desirous of helping the soldier would send in in good time any subscriptions they may contemplate giving to this deserving society. We have watched its growth with much interest, and we have no hesitation in saying that it would be impossible for the council to conduct its affairs more economically, and with better results than they do, having regard to the limited funds at their disposal. The head offices are at 12, Buckingham Street, Strand, W.C., where cheques will be gratefully received by the secretary, Colonel A. M. Handley.

The latest (1900) regulations for the Army Medical Services have been published, and many useful additions appear in them. One alteration particularly demands attention, viz., that now it is ruled that the principal officer of a force in the field (Part II. War, para. 626) will be attached to the staff of the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief. This effectually deals with the stupid arrangements which relegated the P.M.O. to the base, at whose suggestion it is difficult to know. Experience in South Africa has doubtless made it clear that a restoration of the principal medical officer to his proper position was urgently needed. The new regulations, together with "The Manual for the Royal Army Medical Corps," and the "Standing Orders" for the same (1899 edition), show work well done at the Medical Division of the War Office during a time of great pressure.

If a crux has been presented to the Indian financial authorities under the circumstances below noted, it is worth ascertaining how such a case would be dealt with by our own financial authorities. Having regard to the many wounded Yeomanry from South Africa, it might arise in the far future. An interesting amputation was successfully performed in the Calcutta Medical College Hospital the other day by Lieut.-Colonel Murray, the senior surgeon. The patient was suffering from the effects of a gunshot wound received while serving in the Yeomanry—not the Imperial Yeomanry, but the Bengal Yeomanry—in 1857. The injury was therefore forty-three years old, and the patient twenty years older; but he is making a good recovery none the less, and is looking forward to a stubborn campaign with accountant-generals and comptrollers on the questions that promise to arise over the settlement of his wound pension.

THE premises formerly known as the Eccentric Club in the Sharia-el-Maghraby, Cairo, have been leased for one year at a rental of £250 and will be transformed into a temporary soldiers' club pending the erection of the building for a permanent club near the Central Post Office, the site for which was recently acquired by the military authorities from the Egyptian Government.

THE credit for raising the largest number of recruits for the Yeomanry Cavalry during the past year is claimed by Lancashire where the Duke of Lancaster's Own and the Lancashire Hussars, according to official returns just issued, have enrolled 430 men between them. This is in addition to the two companies of Imperial Yeomanry raised in Lancashire for the South African campaign.

TO LET, WANTED, and other NOTICES will be found on page 1249.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1251.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1251.

AETHERIC SIGNALLING.

Colonel Hozier gave a lecture to the officers of the Woolwich garrison at the Royal Artillery Institution, Woolwich, last week, upon a subject which may be of very great importance to the Naval and Military Services. The subject was the science of communication over considerable distances without the intervention of telegraph wires or cables.

The desire to communicate ideas to a distance has been prevalent probably since history began. In the times of the Napoleonic wars long lines of semaphores were erected between the naval ports and London to keep up communication between the fleets and the Admiralty. Signalling by flags was in vogue long before Nelson flew his famous signal at Trafalgar. Early in this century the commercial code of flag signalling was adopted for the mercantile marine, and more lately a system of signalling, technically known as "flag-wagging," is constantly utilised in all manœuvres. Towards the middle of the century the electric telegraph was developed, and now by means of a conducting wire millions of messages are flashed every day between different continents and under various oceans. In various cases it is impossible or inconvenient to use a conducting wire for this purpose. For instance, if an island be separated from the mainland by a rocky channel where a tide runs strong, it is impossible to maintain a telegraph cable, and in other cases the cost of laying a cable could not be compensated for by the amount of traffic which would be secured, and this would prevent the postal authorities establishing telegraphic communication, especially in this country, where a careful Treasury watches so jealously over the public purse-strings. In such cases it must be of great importance to establish, if possible, communication of ideas between two distant points without the cost of laying a cable. This is still more the case with regard to communication between the shore and ships. A ship which is moving cannot possibly be connected by cable with the mainland, hence the only means by which communication of this sort beyond the range of vision can be maintained between a ship and the shore must be by some mode of wireless telegraphy or aetheric signalling. Nor is this the only advantage of aetheric signalling if it can be carried out. Experience has shown us that by means of aetheric signalling work can be done at a distance without any conducting medium for the transmission of energy. For instance, by means of aetheric signalling, it is possible, at a distance without any actual contact, to fire mines, to ring bells, or to light an incandescent lamp.

It is hardly necessary to point out that if we have the power of doing work at a distance, say, of 20 or 30 miles, by means of aetheric signalling, this system must be of advantage in war. If an enemy were advancing to attack a position, it might be possible to blow up a bridge even when his troops are upon it, and thus considerably hamper his advance. In the same way it might be possible to much inconvenience the enemy by blowing up buildings in which his troops were billeted. It is possible that if his divisions arrived after dark in a village, there would not be very much care taken to search the church towers and see that there was no small piece of wire running down one of them. Yet the existence of that wire, properly arranged by the defending army before it marched out of the village, might cause considerable injury to the invader. Nor need we limit our benevolent intentions towards our enemy to land. At present torpedoes and submarine mines are fired by electricity, by means of conducting wires, but in some cases it might be difficult, if not impossible, to lay the necessary cables. In these cases it is possible that the mines might be exploded and the torpedoes fired by aetheric signalling. For instance, although a cable could not be laid, it might be possible by placing the necessary apparatus on a buoy anchored out at sea beforehand, to secure the firing of a mine or torpedo, as I shall endeavour to show by a miniature experiment.

Aetheric signalling also might be useful in communicating between advance posts at a considerable distance and the main body of an army, or between the main body and the advanced posts. By touching a button in the headquarter office a bell might be rung at the advanced posts, or the same energy which could be utilised to ring a bell might by proper manipulation be also utilised for printing a message, as we shall be able to show at the conclusion of the lecture, and indeed, in some cases, a gun might be placed in position and when an enemy approached shrouded by rifle fire, it might be possible to fire the gun by aetheric signalling without exposing the gunners to infantry bullets.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Aetheric signalling and wireless telegraphy are much confounded in popular descriptions, but there is a considerable difference between them. There are two systems of wireless telegraphy which have proved successful. The first of these is that which has been introduced by that great electrical authority, Sir William Preece. Sir William Preece, whose name is received with respect in every scientific meeting in the world, on account of original research which has made him famous, was for many years the head of the telegraph department of the Post Office, and now is the consulting Electrical Engineer to the Post Office. Hence, he is the greatest living authority on telegraphy. He has devised a system of wireless telephony. The principle of this system is, that suppose it were desired to effect communication without the medium of a conducting wire between the island and the mainland, it would be achieved by stretching along the island and along the mainland two parallel telegraph wires, the ends of which would be sunk either in the sea or in the earth. It has been proved by Sir William Preece that if an electrical current be set up in one of these wires, a corresponding current is induced in the other wire, and that hence the signals transmitted through the first wire are repeated in the second wire. In this case it seems that the electrical effects are transmitted not only by induction between the two wires, but by conduction through the earth in which the terminal plates of the wires are embedded. This system has been established at the island of Flatholm, in the Bristol Channel, where Lloyds' signal station is now connected by wireless telephony with the mainland over a distance of three miles by sea. Sir William Preece has also established his system at the Skerries Islands, off the coast of Anglesea, where communication is effected over two miles of sea, and the Post Office is now establishing this system on behalf of Lloyds' to connect Lloyd's signal station at Rathlin Island, on the north coast of Ireland, with the mainland over a distance of about seven miles. The experiments which have been made, as Sir William Preece states, prove conclusively that communication, both telegraphic and telephonic, has been readily maintained by these means, and that wireless telegraphy across the sea by this method is now a practical and commercial system. He also believes that it would be simple to speak by telephone between ship and shore or between shore and ship at a considerable distance by means of a circuit formed of copper wire passing over the topmasts and terminating at each end of the ship in the sea, using simply telephones.

Another system of wireless telegraphy was proposed by Charles A. Stevenson, brother of the engineer to the Northern Lighthouse Board of Scotland. This system, which has been subsequently developed by Professor Oliver Lodge and other engineers, owes its origin, like that of Sir William Preece, to a physical fact discovered by the celebrated philosopher Faraday. Faraday showed that the approach or recession of a current might induce a current in a closed circuit near it. This I will endeavour to show by the apparatus before me, which is a miniature of Mr. Stevenson's coil system. For the purpose of experiment a coil of insulated wire is connected to a battery of two or three cells, with a key to turn the current on or off. A second coil entirely unconnected with the first is joined by wires to a galvanometer. We know that a coil of wire in which a current is circulating acts like a magnet. We find that if, while the current is flowing in one coil, the coil is suddenly moved up towards the other, a momentary current will be induced in the second coil. If the first coil is suddenly moved away from the second another momentary current will be observed in the second circuit. In a similar way if a circuit be made or broken, it has the same effect as suddenly moving the coils. It is evident that if sufficient force can be exerted in the coil by these means to move a galvanometer, the same force can be utilised to move a telegraph needle or any desired means of communication. This system has, I believe, been used, the coils, of course, being much larger and the batteries much stronger, by Mr. Stevenson, in Scotland, and has been fairly successful, but when it was proposed to utilise this system in connecting a lighthouse on an island lying to the North of the Shetland Isles, it was considered that it would have been necessary to place on the lighthouse rock a coil of 40ft. in diameter and on the shore of the mainland a coil of 200ft. in diameter. The rock coil would have required about 120ft. of wire, and the mainland coil about 630ft. of wire.

AETHERIC SIGNALLING.

The objections to wireless telegraphy appear to be that the length of wire required to transmit messages across a channel is large, and hence inconvenient, and not capable of being adopted where communication must be made from a small space, such as a rock lighthouse. The lecturer prefers to trust to the system of aetheric signalling so called, because the means by which the signals are transmitted depend upon the undulation of the waves of that ether which we know exists everywhere throughout the universe, and which is undoubtedly the means of propagation of light and radiant heat. The application of radiant heat to the transmission of signals is more interesting as a scientific experiment than capable of practical use. For practical, useful signalling, we must probably rely on aetheric signalling properly so called.

It is well known that if the positive and negative poles of a voltaic cell or a voltaic battery be connected by a conducting wire, an electric current flows from the positive to the negative pole. If the battery is strong enough, that current may be made to work—that is to say, it may move a motor, it may ring bells, light incandescent lamps, or be turned into any form of energy required. If the conducting wire be cut and the circuit thus opened, the electrical current immediately ceases to flow and the work that was being done instantly stops. It is perfectly easy for any person standing by a battery to connect by a conductor the two poles and cause the current to flow. The problem to be solved for aetheric signalling is how at a distance of some 10 or 20 or more miles to close the electric current of a battery at will and to open it at will so as to cause work or stoppage of work. This is done in all systems of aetheric signalling which employ the Hertzian waves by means of "a resonator" or what is called a "coherer." Resonators are better adapted for scientific investigations by savants in laboratories than for rough and practical work in the field.

The system of coherers was originally formulated by Branley, Professor of Physics at the Institute of Paris, in 1890, who first discovered that electrical sparks caused undulations in the luminiferous ether which acted upon a coherer. Since that time the system originally formulated by Branley has been improved upon and amended by Popoff, Bose, D'Arco, Oliver Lodge, Maskelyne and other electricians. It remained for Marconi to draw public attention to the possible commercial value of this system, but there seems nothing in Marconi's patent which is new except the patent of a special form of coherer which he employs. A coherer consists essentially of metallic springs or metallic filings. Experience has taught us that when the waves in ether—the Hertzian waves as they are termed—propagated by electric sparks, properly manipulated, even from a considerable distance, impinge on these metallic springs or metallic filings, they cause the springs or filings to cohere, and thus form a conductor for the passage of the electric current. The best coherer as yet brought to public notice appears to be the coherer invented and patented by Mr. Maskelyne. A simple experiment shows that if a coherer be placed in the circuit of a voltaic battery, it does not matter at how great a distance off the Hertzian waves impinge upon it, the electrical current immediately flows and is available to do work such as ringing a bell.

It cannot be too carefully borne in mind that the Hertzian waves do not ring the bell, nor does the coherer do any work. The work done is by the electric current of the local battery at the distant station conducted through the coherer. All that the coherer does is to close the circuit of the local battery. All that the Hertzian waves do is to cohere the coherer, and thus to cause the electric current at the distant station to flow and to do work. It is evident that so long as the Hertzian waves impinge upon the coherer the coherer will be cohered, and the electric current will pass. The next point, therefore, that is necessary to establish, is how to stop the circuit when we do not want the current to pass, or when we want work to be suspended.

Experience has shown that if a coherer is sharply tapped or shaken, the metallic particles fall asunder. There is, after shaking, no longer a conduction of electricity through the coherer—the electric current of the local battery consequently ceases, and work stops. One of the problems, therefore, of aetheric signalling is to devise a means by which the coherer can be decohered automatically after the receipt of an impulse. This is done by various methods in various systems; Marconi employs a tapper, Ducretet also employs a tapper, and most other systems do the same. In the receiver invented by Mr. Maskelyne, the coherer is not decohered by a tapper but by an armature.

To carry out this decoherence various subsidiary arrangements have to be introduced at the receiving station in the coherer circuit. It is hardly necessary to complicate a simple discussion of broad principles by details of subsidiary machinery, which at the best must be somewhat involved. Much of the success of Mr. Maskelyne's invention depends upon the perfection of the certainty and simplicity of the decohering device. The Maskelyne coherer is so simple that ordinary signalmen can use it and send messages and signals by it. Its action, too, is so certain that for many months the same coherer can be used without the necessity of alteration or regulation. At present it is necessary to have a tolerably high mast in order to secure communication, but it is believed that before long it will be possible to considerably reduce the height of the mast. It is also believed that before long by means of metallic telescopes it will be possible to direct the Hertzian waves, so that they will only impinge upon the particular target to which it may be desired to direct them, and there can be no doubt that experiments will suggest various improvements which will allow for the betterment of the system.

A system of aetheric signalling, which has been tried between Sheerness and Shoeburyness, across the mouth of the Thames, with the Maskelyne Coherer, is found to answer very satisfactorily across that distance, which is over five miles. It is probable that great improvements will shortly be made in this system, but in the meantime it is quite sufficiently developed for all practical purposes up to probably 30 miles, and it is not often that, so far as a ship signalling is concerned, a distance of more than 12 miles is required. In some instances the distance across channels over which communication is to be established between islands and the mainland is not nearly so much as 12 miles.

It is apparently established that if a coherer be placed in the circuit of a local battery and by any means that coherer can be made to cohere at will from a distance, so as to allow the electrical current to flow, and can be similarly decohered from a distance so as to stop the electrical current flowing through the local battery, that local battery will practically do any work that is required. The next question is as to the means by which the coherer can be cohered. This is effected by means of what is called the "Hozier transmitter," which emits sparks across the spark gap between two points. It is well known that if a coil of wire be wound round a piece of iron and a finer coil of wire wound again around the first coil, an induced current of electricity from the battery with which the coil is connected is sent through the secondary coil at a very high tension. This fact is made use of and the current from these batteries passed through this coil comes out of secondary coil at a high tension and emits sparks across the spark gap. These sparks have the property of causing undulations in the ether, and these undulations are waves which are very similar to the waves of light or of radiant heat. These Hertzian waves, propagated by the oscillating spark across the spark gap, can, like the waves of light when they strike upon a plane surface, be either absorbed, or reflected, or transmitted. If a piece of ebonite, which is an insulator, be placed between the waves and the coherer, the waves will pass through the insulator. If, on the other hand, a conductor, such as a piece of copper, be placed in the way, the waves are stopped, and you will see that the coherer has no effect. Ordinary ironwork will act in the same manner. If anybody would wish to study these Hertzian waves (and they form an interesting subject of study) they should refer to the work of Professor Hertz, translated into English for those who do not read German by Professor Jones, with a very valuable preface by Lord Kelvin.

PRACTICAL UTILITY OF AETHERIC SIGNALLING.

It is not unnatural that those who advocate aetheric signalling may be asked to what extent aetheric signalling will be of practical value. It seems that some damage has been done to aetheric signalling by the exaggerated claims that have been made for its utility. It appears that where it is impossible to make use of a conducting wire, such as a land wire or electric cable, this system of aetheric signalling may be of immense use; for instance, in bridging over those channels where a cable cannot be laid, in communicating between ships and shore, or between shore and ships, where it is impossible that a ship can be connected by cable, and in war where time will not allow a cable to be laid, or when circumstances intervene, such as the presence of an enemy, which prevent cable connection. But it seems that Aetheric Signalling at present can only be of great practical use where conductors of electricity cannot be utilised. Of course, we do not know what developments science may produce, but at present it is difficult to perceive how this system can be superior to the system of conductive telegraphy. The subject, however, is one of great interest, and no doubt capable of great developments; and it is one well worth the study of those who have an inclination to scientific research.

It is evident that for the purposes of Lloyds, and for the purposes of the Mercantile Marine, any system by which vessels that require assistance, or aid from the shore, may be able to communicate with the shore is most advantageous. It is evident that a vessel, being a moving body, cannot be connected by telegraph cable with the shore. Therefore, when she is beyond the range of vision so that flag signalling cannot be utilised, it is much to be desired that some system of communication between ship and shore should be established. Flag signalling is always precarious. Manifestly, it cannot be utilised at night. In thick weather, in snow, and sometimes in rain, the signals are obscured and cannot be distinguished. For this reason Col. Hozier and those who have worked with him have done their best to develop some practical system of Aetheric Signalling which may be the means of every year saving from the perils of the seas thousands of pounds' worth of property and hundreds of human lives.

DISTRESSED GENTLEFOLKS' AID ASSOCIATION.—An appeal is made on behalf of this association, which was founded nearly four years ago, and is now giving a weekly allowance to forty-five persons or families. The "poor" classes have much done for them, but ladies and gentlemen who are on the verge of starvation, though perfectly willing to work when they can get it, and are strong enough to accept employment, are almost entirely ignored, yet present poverty from its comparison with former comfortable circumstances is especially hard for them to bear. In many cases also "they cannot dig, and to beg they are ashamed." The accounts of the association are carefully audited and published annually. Subscriptions may be sent to the bankers, Messrs. Cox, 16, Charing Cross, S.W.

Army Personal.

A change has been made in the arrangements for Lord Roberts's reception on his return from South Africa. Lord Roberts will arrive in the Solent on board the Canada on Wednesday, January 2, and will at once visit the Queen at Osborne. The Canada will probably proceed to Southampton Water that evening, and Lord Roberts, on disembarking next morning, will receive an address from the Corporation of Southampton and afterwards leave for London. Lord Roberts will be received by the Prince of Wales and other members of the Royal Family and by the Headquarters Staff, and will proceed direct to Buckingham Palace for luncheon. The intended service at St. Paul's has been abandoned, owing to its being considered desirable to defer the general thanksgiving to be held till the close of the operations in South Africa.

The Prince of Wales has given permission for the regiment of light horse now being formed in South Africa under Major Thomas's command to be called the Prince of Wales's Light Horse.

General Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., was entertained yesterday week by the Whitefriars Club, Mr. John Bloundelle-Burton being in the chair. There was a very strong muster of literary men present, including Mr. Maxwell, special war correspondent of the Standard, Mr. W. Senior, Editor of the Field, Mr. Fisher, editor of the Daily Chronicle, Mr. T. Heath-Joyce, editor of the Graphic, Mr. Clement Shorter, editor of the Sphere, Mr. Alexander Paul, assistant editor of the Daily News, Mr. Ernest Foster, editor Cassell's Saturday Journal, Mr. Richard Whiting, Mr. Charles Lowe, Mr. G. Manville Fenn, and Mr. Arthur Spurgeon, secretary. The distinguished guest, in reply to the toast of his health by the chairman, entertained the company with some interesting reminiscences of his career and anecdotes of the war.

Lieut.-General Sir Archibald Hunter has been appointed to the command of the Bloemfontein district, on the reorganisation of the commands in South Africa, in accordance with Lord Kitchener's new plan of campaign.

Lieut.-General Pole-Carew, C.B., who arrived in England at the end of last week, has reverted to the rank of major-general on the establishment, or rather, it would be more correct to say, becomes a major-general, for he obtained the rank of lieut.-general in South Africa whilst still a colonel in the Army. The gallant general had a most enthusiastic reception when he reached his home, Antony House, Torpoint, on Saturday last. We have received the following account of the proceedings:—

On arriving at Devonport Station in the afternoon he was received by the deputy-mayor, the town council, and representatives of other municipal institutions. The deputy-mayor, in the name of the town, offered him a hearty welcome, and said that the western counties joined in congratulating him on the work he had performed in South Africa. General Pole-Carew briefly acknowledged this welcome, and said that of any services which he had been able to render the honour must be given to the troops who had served under him. He was then driven through thickly-crowded streets to Pottery Quay, where he embarked in a decorated Government launch and crossed the Hamoaze to Torpoint. The village was gaily decorated, and a number of triumphal arches had been erected. On landing, he was received with great enthusiasm. Among those present to receive him were his mother, his brothers, the Rev. G. Pole-Carew, and Mr. C. Pole-Carew, the Earl of Mount-Edgumbe, Lord Lieutenant of Cornwall; Lady Ernestine Edgumbe, Viscount and Viscountess Clifden, the Earl and Countess of St. Germans, Admiral the Hon. Sir E. R. and Lady Fremantle, and the members of the local Reception Committee. The horses were taken out of the carriage, which was drawn through the village by the members of the local football club. On arrival at the place set apart for the formal proceedings, the Earl of Mount-Edgumbe claimed the privilege, in his official capacity, of being the first to welcome Gen. Pole-Carew upon Cornish soil in the name of "one and all," and to assure him that the feelings of regard for him personally and of appreciation of his services as a soldier of the Queen which were being exemplified by his immediate neighbours were shared most heartily from one end of Cornwall to the other. Mr. W. D. Boger, chairman of the Reception Committee, read an address, and said it was the intention of the general's neighbours and other friends to offer for his acceptance at a later date a silver shield designed to commemorate his share in the campaign in which he took so prominent a part. Gen. Pole-Carew, in acknowledging the magnificent reception, said he felt that in their welcome to him they wished to do honour to the magnificent troops who were under his command. He began with the 9th Brigade at Modder River and a very fine brigade they were. Then he went on to the Guards Brigade, who needed no praise. When he got to the 11th Division he had with them the 18th Brigade, as fine a fighting force as one could wish to see. He also had a Naval Brigade of the very best. Then he had some Devon Yeomanry under Capt. Bolitho, a Cornishman, some Dorset Yeomanry, and in the Australian Contingent some of the best mounted infantry a general could wish for. With men of that class one ought to do something fairly decent. He thanked his friends most heartily for their kindness.

Major-General H. J. Degacher, C.B., succeeds the late Lieut.-General R. T. Glyn, C.B., as colonel of the South Wales Borderers. Obtaining first commission in the old 46th, February 22, 1855, exchanging to the 24th as lieutenant April 16, 1858, he commanded the 2nd Batn. from June 9, 1877, to June 9, 1882, including the Zulu War, in which the regiment played such a memorable part and suffered so severely. The South Wales Borderers have lost by death recently four general officers who once wore their uniform with credit, viz., Lieut.-Generals Sir Penn Symons, Ross, Glyn, and Watson.

Major-General C. Tucker, C.B., is to be retained on the present on the establishment of general officers notwithstanding that he has reached the age limit. He is made supernumerary with effect from the 6th inst., under the provisions of Article 105A Royal Warrant, October 26, 1890, and we understand will most probably be promoted a lieut.-general for distinguished service in the field, by which means the country will have the benefit of his recent experience for a further period of five years.

Major-General Sir J. F. Maurice, R.A., retains his command at Woolwich, pending a decision as to amalgamation of the Woolwich and Home Districts.

Major-General T. Kelly-Kenny, C.B., will arrive home with Lord Roberts in the Canada on the 2nd prox., to take up, it is said, on an early date, the appointment of Deputy-Adjutant-General at Headquarters, his fitness for which could not be doubted after all he has done at the Cape, and the wide range of staff experience he had before he left England.

Major-General Sir Edmund Elles, R.A., who has been selected to succeed to the First-Class District Command in Madras, vacated by Major-General C. Tucker, C.B., will retain for the present the appointment of Adjutant-General in India.

Major-General T. B. Tyler, Inspector-General of Artillery in India, will proceed to England to serve on the committee, which is about to be appointed, on Artillery Organisation.

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION. SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:

LIFE. { War Risks,
World-Wide.
ACCIDENTS &
DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence
Abroad.
BURGLARY, &c.

Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch. The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.

Special Quotations for Messes.
Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums.
Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.

Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT

Colonel W. H. Mackinnon becomes a major-general on the establishment with effect from the 6th inst., the day upon which Major-General C. Tucker, C.B., would have been retired but for the decision to retain him as a supernumerary. Colonel Mackinnon goes over the heads of four brother Guardsmen to the fixed establishment, viz., Colonels the Hon. H. W. L. Corry, H. Flud-der, H. Ricardo, and Sir E. Antrobus. He had seen no war service until he went to South Africa in command of the C.I.V.'s. It will be admitted, however, that the service he rendered was one of exceptional merit, for not only had he to organise his command but he was virtually responsible for three arms in the field. General Mackinnon more than once refused a brigade in order to remain with the "C.I.V.s."

Colonel H. S. G. Miles, M.V.O., has resumed his duties as Commandant of the Staff College, with effect from November 10, on return from South Africa. He took up the duties originally on March 1, 1898, and vacated on October 8, 1899, thus putting in eighteen months. This period, of course, will be reckoned in his term of appointment. Major-General W. F. M. Hutchinson, R.A., it was intended at one time, should have officiated in the appointment, but the decision to close the College altogether a year ago altered all plans.

Colonel A. H. Wavell, half-pay, lately returned from the command of a brigade in South Africa, has been appointed officiating D.A.G. in Ireland, pending the selection of a permanent successor to Major-General R. L. H. Curteis, vacated. Since General Curteis's departure, Lieut.-Colonel C. A. Hadfield has been officiating, in addition to his duties as officer commanding A.S.C. Dublin District and D.A.A.G. on the Headquarters Staff.

Colonel Lord Dundonald, C.B., was the guest at the dinner of the New 'Vagabonds' Club on Saturday. In response to the toast of his health, he referred to the services of the Irregular Cavalry in South Africa. Referring to the lessons of the war, he said the first was the immense power of the modern rifle, armed with which a few determined men could hold a position against superior numbers for an almost indefinite time. With regard to Army reform, he believed there were a large number of men who, while objecting to barrack life and military discipline in time of peace, would for a yearly allowance, be ready to qualify as marksmen, and form a splendid reserve to fill the ranks of the regular Army when war broke out.

Colonel C. Kennedy, late Suffolk Regiment, who has been officiating as D.A.G. at Aldershot, was offered the appointment of chief staff officer on the lines of communication in South Africa, but has been obliged to decline it on account of the state of his health.

Colonel M. S. Crofton, C.B., though he has vacated command of the Militia Brigade at Colchester, which he has held since May last, remains as officiating A.A.G. of the Eastern District, greatly to the satisfaction of all who are serving with him.

Colonel Lord Stanley, 1st V.B. North Lancashire Regiment, Financial Secretary of the War Office, will arrive in England, from South Africa, about January 2, to take up his duties. He is to sit as President of the Departmental Committee which is to consider the adaptation of motor transport to military purposes, he having devoted some attention to this matter in South Africa, where the matter was put to a practical test under the direction of Lieut.-Colonel Templar.

Lieut.-Colonel W. F. Cleeve, R.G.A., has been selected to draw up a new drill-book provisionally for the 12½pr. Vickers-Maxim mountain gun, and has been removed from Harwich to Newport, Mon., in order that he may be better able to carry out the duty.

Lieut.-Colonel Francis, V.D., commanding 4th New Zealand Rough Riders, 2nd Brigade Rhodesia, who is on his way from South Africa to New Zealand, invalided, was enabled by the kindly ingenuity of a noble lady, who has been conspicuous for her work in aid of our sick and wounded in South Africa, to obtain the honour he highly coveted of a presentation to the Prince of Wales when His Royal Highness was at Hall Barn, to which Colonel Francis was invited, last Thursday.

Lieut.-Colonel (Captain) J. T. Evatt, D.S.O., I.S.C., has been to the fore again in Uganda, where the Nadi tribe had been in rebellion. Colonel Evatt was operating against them with 600 native troops. He had with him Captains Hornby and Rumbold, and Lieuts. Cooper and Henderson. Dr. Sherlock, of the Uganda Medical Staff, had been killed in action, and Lieut. Henderson wounded. A force of trained Waganda was being employed for the first time, and are said to have behaved admirably. The fighting was in the neighbourhood of Fort Ternan.

Major H. L. Nathan, C.M.G., Royal Engineers, took over on Monday the duties of Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Gold Coast on appointment. Major Nathan was lately sent there, it may be remembered, on a special mission, and made himself exceedingly popular. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that he received on landing the other day "an enthusiastic reception from all classes."

Major Pemberton, Royal Engineers, having failed to secure a seat in Parliament at the General Election, returns to military duty as division officer in charge of works at Woolmer, the new hut camp near Aldershot.

Major the Hon. W. Lambton, 3rd Batn. Coldstream Guards, has been appointed military secretary to Sir Alfred Milner in South Africa, vice Major Hanbury-Williams, Oxfordshire Light Infantry, who takes up the duties of private secretary to the Secretary of State for War.

Major H. J. M. Hamilton, D.S.O., of the Queen's, has been appointed military secretary, and Captain W. N. Congreve, V.C., Rifle Brigade, private secretary to Lord Kitchener in South Africa. Major Hamilton served in the Egyptian Army under Lord Kitchener, 1897, and was brought to notice and given the D.S.O. for his service in the expedition to Khartoum. He went to South Africa a year ago as A.D.C. to Lieut.-General Kelly-Kenny. He was appointed A.A.G. of a division in July last.

Major L. A. Gordon, Bombay Lancers; Captains A. S. Arnold, Madras Lancers; Patterson, 5th Bombay Cavalry; and Lieut. A. W. Peck, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, who had been on special service in South Africa, left Port Natal on the 14th inst. for India, to rejoin their regiments.

Majors (Captain) A. S. Cobbe, I.S.C., commanding the Central Africa Regiment, which has been rendering such valuable service in the expedition to Kumasi under Sir James Willcocks, left Cape Coast Castle in command of 1,000 men on Tuesday in the transport Templemore for Chinde. Sir James Willcocks reports in the highest terms of the discipline and fighting qualities of Major Cobbe's battalion.

Captain F. B. Maurice, 1st Batn. Sherwood Foresters, on return from active service in South Africa, has resumed duty as A.D.C. to his father, Major-General Sir J. F. Maurice, at Woolwich.

Captain the Hon. E. O. Murray, Cameron Highlanders, has been appointed A.D.C. to Major-General Sir Henry Colville at Gibraltar provisionally.

Captain R. A. Irvine, Donegal Artillery, doing duty with the Gold Coast Constabulary with 200 Hausas and a Maxim, has been sent to quell a disturbance which has arisen between the Kwakadua, Juabins, and the Kibbes in the eastern part of the colony. Kibbe is one of the chief towns in Akim.

Selections for Adjutancies, Militia, and Volunteers: Captain and Adjutant G. Christian, 1st Batn. Yorkshire Regiment, for 4th Batn. Yorkshire Regiment; Captain H. Jellicorse, 1st Batn. Royal Sussex Regiment; and Lieut. T. R. Griffiths, R.A. (District officer for 4th Lancashire Volunteer Artillery).

Army Foreign.

The financial provision made for the German Army during the year 1901 is for expansion in several directions. The increase of the peace strength makes necessary an addition of 295 officers and 3,125 non-commissioned officers and men. There are to be formed in Prussia five squadrons of mounted rifles, the staff of a foot artillery regiment and a battalion of the same, a battalion of pioneers, and a second company of the ballooning section, with draught and waggons. Other formations will be machine-gun sections for each army corps, to be attached to rifle or infantry battalions in the same way that the squadrons of mounted rifles are attached to the cavalry regiments, and the year 1901 is to see the constitution of five of these sections. In Saxony there will be two new field artillery brigade staffs, two regimental staffs and two sectional staffs, as well as six mounted batteries on the lower establishment and a clothing office. The Bavarian forces will be increased by sixty-seven officers and 557 men. These facts are given by the Leipzig Neueste Nachrichten.

The long distances over which Russian soldiers are carried by rail makes necessary very careful provision for supplying them with proper rations. Certain stations are appointed on the lines at which the trains stop, and the men are there provided with good meals, but this system has not given satisfaction owing to the fact that they are expected to eat at particular and often unsuitable times, sometimes in the middle of the night. In these cases they often prefer to sleep, and are not to be induced to leave the carriages. Great inconvenience is also caused during the winter. The Russki Invalid states that, in order to obviate the difficulty, it is intended to extend the system of restaurant and kitchen cars which already exists on the Siberian and Trans-Caucasian lines. Trials have lately been made at Odessa of military ovens for use in railway trains, wherein food can be prepared en route. The advantages claimed are that meals can be provided at regular hours, that the food can be easily distributed either at railway stations or in the train, that the decentralisation will be greater, that there will be economy, inasmuch as the men will cook their own food, and that the transport of troops will be more rapid owing to shorter stoppages on the way. The Invalid believes that all difficulties will be overcome, and the trials certainly seem to have been encouraging.

A recent Ministerial decree in France enforces the terms of a circular dated a year ago, and signed by General Delanne, then chief of the staff, in which an appeal was made to officers and others who possessed documents relating to the war of 1870 to place them at the disposal of the historical section of the general staff. These documents are said by their character to belong to the public, and should be in the war archives; but, knowing the value which is attached to them by their possessors, the Minister will be content that they should be deposited for a time in the historical section to be copied or otherwise dealt with. During the year Generals du Barail, Lewal, Saussier, and Billot, Major de MacMahon, Captains Frossard, de Cisse, Ducrot, Urich and others have placed many documents at the disposal of the authorities. The purpose of the new decree is to facilitate the work of the general staff in producing a new history of the war. We note that the Progrès Militaire attaches little value to such letters and papers, which is singular, although it may be true that various observers see the same thing in different lights and fourteen accounts are not easy to harmonise. But the French themselves have a saying, "Du choc des idées jaillit la lumière," and it is from a multitude of records that good history is made.

The remarkable article of Dr. Miller Maguire upon the Military Training of British Officers, in the National Review, has attracted a good deal of attention on the Continent, and we observe that its arguments are cited at considerable length by the Hamburgischer Correspondent.

PREVENTION OF ZYMOTIC DISEASES.—For greater security have the Drainage and Water Supply of your Town and Country or temporary Residence examined and certified by the Sanitary Engineering Company (H. Carter, C.E., Manager), 6, Victoria Street, Westminster.—Fee quoted on receipt full particulars. Established 23 years. Telegrams: "Sanitation, London."

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Dec. 15.

Lord Kitchener, in a despatch of Dec. 13, from Pretoria, reports that at dawn on that day Gen. Clements' force at Nootgedacht, on the Megaliesberg, was attacked by the Boers under Delarey, reinforced by Beyer's commando from Warm Baths, their total strength being estimated at 2,500. Though at first repulsed, the enemy managed to get on the top of the Megaliesberg, which was held by four companies of the Northumberland Fusiliers, and was thus able to command Gen. Clements's camp. He retired on Hekpoort, and took up a position on a hill in the centre of the valley. The casualties are not yet fully reported, but the fighting was very severe, and Lieut.-Col. Legge, of the 20th Hussars, and three other officers were killed. Reinforcements have started from Pretoria. Gen. Broadwood's Brigade was on the north side of the Megaliesberg, seven miles west of Gen. Clements, but he has not yet been able to report any action he has taken. Lord Kitchener also states that in an attack made on a British column at Lichtenburg, Gen. Lemmer and two Boers were killed. There were no casualties on our side. Boer attacks on Bethlehem and Vrede have been repelled with a loss to the enemy of 10 killed and 14 wounded. An attack was also made on Vryheid on Dec. 11, and sniping was still going on when Lord Kitchener despatched his message.

A Reuter telegram from Standerton says that Louis Botha is reported to be twenty miles from that place with 1,500 men and one gun.

Monday, Dec. 17.

Lord Kitchener, in a telegram of Dec. 14, from Pretoria, says that Gen. Clements has brought in his force to Commando Nek unopposed. His casualties in the action of Dec. 13 were 5 officers and 9 men killed and 18 officers and 555 men missing. These latter were 4 companies of the Northumberland Fusiliers, who were stationed on the hill carried by the enemy, and some Yeomanry and other details sent up to support them. In later telegrams Lord Kitchener says Gen. Clements has come to see him, and reports that the Northumberland Fusiliers held out on the hill as long as their ammunition lasted. The Boer attacking force was 2,000 strong, while another force of 1,000 attacked his camp. By 6.30 a.m. the hill was carried, and a reinforcement of a company of Yorkshire Light Infantry failed to reach the top. Gen. Clements's retirement was carried out with regularity, but as many native drivers bolted a considerable amount of transport was lost. All ammunition that was not taken away was destroyed. All the troops are said to have behaved very well. Gen. Broadwood has gone to Rustenburg, and supports Oliphant's Nek, which has been reinforced. The Boers report that their losses were very heavy. Lord Kitchener has received news from Rustenburg that the British prisoners taken on the Megaliesberg have been sent in there. The Boer force has divided, one portion moving south and the other west. With regard to the operations against De Wet the Commander-in-Chief says that Gen. Knox drove De Wet north to the Thaba N'chu-Ladybrand line, which was held by our troops. De Wet's force, about 3,000 strong, made several attempts to get through, assisted by a number of Boers operating from the north. They were driven back, suffering considerable loss, but a portion of them eventually got north. Our troops captured a 15pr. gun—one of those taken at Dewetsdorp—a "Pom Pom," several waggons of ammunition, 22 prisoners, and some horses and mules.

Further details received from Lord Kitchener of the attack on Vryheid on Dec. 10 are to the effect that fighting continued all day, and that the enemy drew off in the evening with a loss of 100 killed and wounded. The British lost 4 men killed and 2 officers (both since dead), and 19 men wounded, and an officer and 29 men missing. On Dec. 13 Col. Blomfield, moving on Vryheid, drove the enemy, estimated at from 500 to 600 strong, in confusion from Scheepers Nek, inflicting heavy loss and capturing a quantity of arms and stock. During the recent operations in the Zastron district a party of 120 of Brabant's Horse was surrounded in a defile and obliged to surrender. Lord Methuen reports that on Dec. 13 he attacked the Boer positions, capturing their whole laager—15 ox-waggons, some Cape carts, 15,000 rounds of ammunition, 1,460 cattle, and 2,000 sheep. Two Boers were killed and 5 taken prisoners. Lord Methuen confirms the report of Gen. Lemmer's death.

The transport Canada arrived at St. Helena with Lord Roberts on board, but the field-marshal did not land.

Tuesday, Dec. 18.

Reuter despatches from Maseru state that De Wet, with between 2,000 and 3,000 men, reappeared a few days ago in the Thaba N'chu district, and made three determined attacks on the British positions near Lapberg. Two of them were repulsed, but in the third the Boer leader with a few men succeeded in charging through, and the rest of his force followed. The British, however, captured a 15-pr. gun, 15 waggons laden with ammunition, dynamite, and provisions, along with their teams and several horses. Two Boer commandos tried to break through the British lines near Thaba N'chu, but were driven back.

Lord Kitchener has requested that the New Zealand contingent may remain in South Africa for the duration of the war, and the New Zealand Cabinet as consented.

Reuter despatches from Capetown report an irruption into Cape Colony of a body of Boers, 600 or 700 strong, who were encountered on Dec. 16 by a force composed of Brabant's Horse, Cape Police, and other details. The latest reports are to the effect that the British troops retired with loss.

Thursday, Dec. 20.

From Johannesburg it is reported that Gen. Delarey's force is in close proximity to Gen. Clements's camp, and further fighting is expected. Gen. Clements has been strongly reinforced. During his recent engagement, it is stated that some ammunition fell into the hands of the Boers, and being mistaken by them for stores was set fire to. A frightful explosion followed, many burghers being killed and wounded. A Durban message states that on Dec. 18 a party of Boers near Glencoe Junction in search of loot, were surrounded, and surrendered. A report reached London on Dec. 19 that Gen. Knox had temporarily to abandon the chase of De Wet, owing to bodies of Boers having crossed the Orange River into Cape Colony.

A Gazette extraordinary was issued at Cape Town proclaiming martial law, in consequence of the Boer invasion of the Colony.

Friday, Dec. 21.

Lord Kitchener, in a telegram of Dec. 19 from Pretoria, says that a party of Boers, estimated at from 500 to 800, has crossed the Orange River at Rhenoster Hoek, and a second band is reported to have crossed near Sand Drift. They have been followed, and Lord Kitchener has sent down a considerable body of mounted men, who are getting round them. The Boers from Rhenoster left Venterstad on the afternoon of Dec. 18 going towards Steynsburg. The important points on the railway in this neighbourhood are well guarded, and the Commander-in-Chief hopes these bands will soon be driven north again. Cape Town telegrams, however, state that the invasion of the colony is spreading, that the total strength of the invaders is estimated at at least 2,000, and that the situation is considered grave. A mixed force of 1,000 troops was sent north from Cape Town on Dec. 19. It is said that New Zealand will respond to Lord Kitchener's appeal by the despatch of a sixth contingent.

GRATUITY FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

Although this announcement was made some little time ago, it is published in detail as of great interest to the service.

A special Army Order has been issued notifying that the Secretary of State has decided that a special war gratuity shall be issued to all the troops, whether Imperial or Colonial, employed in the operations in South Africa. Every officer, warrant officer, non-commissioned officer, and other soldier employed in the South African Command between Oct. 10, 1899, and such date (after the date of the present Army Order) as may hereafter be notified in Army Orders, will be entitled to the grant, unless instructions to the contrary are issued in any particular case. The gratuity will be issued upon the following scale, according to the rank of the recipient upon the date of this Order, or the date on which the officer or soldier previously ceased duty in South Africa.

Officers will be allowed the benefit of local or temporary rank, and soldiers of any rank, sanctioned in establishments, in which they have acted:—

	No. of Shares.
Field-Marshal	500
General	400
Lieutenant-General	152
Major-General	76
Brigadier-General	57
Staff officer paid at rate VI. or X. of the scale provided in Article 115 of the Pay Warrant; Colonel, Royal Army Medical Corps; Departmental Colonel; Ordnance officer, 1st class ...	40
Colonel (except as above defined)	32
Lieutenant-Colonel—regimental or departmental; staff officer paid at rate XI. of the scale above referred to; Ordnance officer, 2nd class ...	16
Major—regimental or departmental; staff officer paid at rate XII. or XIII. of the scale above referred to; Ordnance officer, 3rd class ...	12
Captain—regimental or departmental; staff officer paid at rate XIV. of the scale above referred to; Ordnance officer, 4th class ...	7½
Lieutenant	6
Second Lieutenant	6

WARRANT OFFICERS, NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS, AND MEN.

Warrant officers	4
Non-commissioned officers and men, according to the classification contained in Article 1,144 of the Royal Warrant for Pay, &c., as follows:—
Class I.	3
Class II.	2½
Class III.	2
Class IV.	1½
Class V.	1

The unit of the scale will, in all cases, be 45s.

THE ARMY RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

The annual general meeting of the Army Rifle Association will be held in the Levée Room, Horse Guards, Whitehall, S.W., on Jan. 7, 1901, at 3.30 p.m. Officers representing units, and other members who propose being present at the meeting, are requested to communicate to the secretary, not later than Jan. 1, any proposition which they may desire to bring forward.

Below are given the results of the competitions in 1900. Owing to the war in South Africa the following matches were not competed for:—The Young Soldiers' Cup, the Inter-Squadron Team Match at home, the Inter-Company Team Volley Match at home.

QUEEN'S CUP FOR CAVALRY (h.p.s. 840).—11th Hussars (Cup, Medals, and £25), 677; 4th Hussars (£8), 666; 20th Hussars (£4), 662.

QUEEN'S CUP FOR R.E., ETC., AND INFANTRY (h.p.s. 840).—1st Batn. Wiltshire Regt. (Cup, Medals, and £50), 742; 1st Batn. East Surrey Regt. (£24), 729; 2nd Batn. Essex Regt. (£16), 721; 2nd Batn. Yorkshire Regt. (£8), 717; 1st Batn. Hampshire Regt. (£4), 707.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S CUP (h.p.s. 504).—2nd Batn. Royal Sussex Regt. (Challenge Cup, and a Cup, value £20), 401.

INTER-SQUADRON TEAM MATCH—ABROAD (h.p.s. 560).—C Squadron, 20th Hussars (Shield and £4), 488; B Squadron, 20th Hussars (£2), 466; C Squadron, 4th Hussars (£2), 457; A Squadron, 20th Hussars (£2), 457; B Squadron, 3rd Hussars (£2), 452; A Squadron, 3rd Hussars (£2), 451.

INTER-COMPANY TEAM VOLLEY MATCH—ABROAD (h.p.s. 168).

G Co. 2nd Batn. Argyll and Sutherland High-landers (Shield and £8; section commander £2) ...	144
E Co. 1st Batn. Bedfordshire Regt. (£8) ...	138
F Co. 2nd Batn. Border Regt. (£8) ...	136
H Co. 1st Batn. East Surrey Regt. (£8) ...	135
A Co. 2nd Batn. Royal Scots (£8) ...	133
C Co. 1st Batn. Royal Warwickshire Regt. (£8) ...	132
E Co. 1st Batn. Black Watch (£5) ...	131
B Co. 2nd Batn. Welsh Regt. (£5) ...	131
F Co. 1st Batn. Northamptonshire Regt. (£5) ...	131
A Co. 1st Batn. East Surrey Regt. (£4) ...	130
B Co. 1st Batn. Wiltshire Regt. (£4) ...	128
A Co. 1st Batn. Northamptonshire Regt. (£4) ...	125
F Co. 2nd Batn. Yorkshire Regt. (£2) ...	125
A Co. 1st Batn. Bedfordshire Regt. (£2) ...	124
D Co. 1st Batn. Northamptonshire Regt. (£2) ...	124
D Co. 1st Batn. Bedfordshire Regt. (£2) ...	124
A Co. 2nd Batn. Essex Regt. (£2) ...	124
G Co. 1st Batn. West Yorkshire Regt. (£2) ...	122
G Co. 1st Batn. Bedfordshire Regt. (£2) ...	121
B Co. 1st Batn. N. Staffordshire Regt. (£2) ...	121
B Co. 1st Batn. Northamptonshire Regt. (£2) ...	121
D Co. 2nd Batn. Welsh Regt. (£2) ...	120
B Co. 1st Batn. East Surrey Regt. (£2) ...	119
H Co. 2nd Batn. Durham L.I. (£2) ...	119
F Co. 1st Batn. N. Staffordshire Regt. (£2) ...	118
C Co. 2nd Batn. Yorkshire Regt. (£2) ...	118
H Co. 3rd Batn. Rifle Brigade (£2) ...	118
D Co. 1st Batn. East Surrey Regt. (£2) ...	118
A Co. 1st Batn. Hampshire Regt. (£2) ...	117
B Co. 1st Batn. East Yorkshire Regt. (£2) ...	117
F Co. 2nd Batn. S. Lancashire Regt. (£2) ...	117
G Co. 1st Batn. N. Staffordshire Regt. (£2) ...	117
H Co. 2nd Batn. Welsh Regt. (£2) ...	117

It has been decided to recruit up to 5,000 men for the South African Constabulary in the United Kingdom, but only single men between the ages of 20 and 35, who can ride and shoot, can be accepted. Full particulars may be obtained from the Recruiting Officer, 1, Chapel Place, Delahay Street, Westminster, S.W.

SOLDIERS of eight years' service are to be offered bounties this trooping season to complete a further term of service in India with a view of reducing the strain on the home establishment in the way of drafts. It is thought that the offer will keep a fair proportion of men with the colours, as those who accept it will undoubtedly be doing something to help their country in an emergency.

THE erection of the obelisk opposite Round Point, Kasr-el-Nil, Cairo, to the memory of the British officers and men who fell in the Dongola Expedition of 1898 and the Sudan Campaign of last year, will be commenced as soon as the necessary permission and the grant of the site have been obtained from the Ministry of Finance. The monument, which is of granite, is ready for shipment, we are told.

WITH our issue of Jan. 5 will be presented the first of a series of coloured types of the Indian Army, which will be continued monthly until August next. They will be uniform with the Types of the British Army, which have been so well received. The first plate will represent a Resaldar Major of the 1st and 2nd and Sowars of the 15th and 18th Bengal Lancers, a Sepoy of the 2nd and a Subadar of the 5th Goorkhas, and Sepoys of the 20th and 26th Bengal Infantry.

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd. 32, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

Obituary.

ARMY.

Lieut.-Col. John Moore Gawne, 2nd Batn. King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment, died of wounds received in action at Vryheid on the 12th inst. Born July 23, 1854, he joined the 4th King's Own as Sub-Lieut. June 13, 1874, became Captain May, 28, 1884; Major, June 26, 1893; and succeeded to the command of the 2nd Batn. in February last. He served in the Zulu war of 1879 (medal with clasp). From November, 1880, to March, 1883, he was instructor of musketry to the regiment. In 1884-85 he served with the Bechuanaland Expedition under Sir Charles Warren, and passed the Staff College in 1890. He was D.A.A.G. in Egypt, from January, 1896, to June, 1897.

Major George Edward Giles, Retired List Royal Artillery, was found dead in a train at Capetown on Wednesday. He had seen a great variety of service and adventure in different parts of the world, and especially in South Africa. Entering the Royal Artillery in 1875, he first saw active service in the Kaffir war of 1878, in which he commanded two mountain guns (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp). He was afterwards appointed to the command of the artillery troop of the Cape Mounted Riflemen, served in the operations against Morosi, and was present at the capture of that chief's stronghold (twice mentioned in despatches). He will perhaps be best remembered as one of the companions of the late Lord Randolph Churchill during his visit to Mashonaland in 1891. The outbreak of the war last year again tempted Major Giles to South Africa, and in March last he was posted to the Rhodesian Field Force, with which he took part in Sir F. Carrington's operations.

Capt. Henry De Clervaulx Moody, South Wales Borderers, who was at first reported missing at Nooitgedacht, was it turns out, killed in action. Born Feb. 8, 1864, he joined the Royal West Surrey Regiment as Lieut., Aug. 25, 1883; became Captain March 25, 1892; and exchanged to the South Wales Borderers Sept. 19, 1894. He had been A.D.C. to Major-Gen. Clements in South Africa since December last. He served with the Burmese expedition 1885-87 (medal with clasp).

Lieut. Thomas Townley, Lord O'Hagan, 3rd Batn. Grenadier Guards, died at Springfontein, South Africa, of enteric fever, on the 13th inst. Born Dec. 5, 1878, he was educated at Sandhurst, and was appointed to a 2nd Lieutenancy in the Grenadier Guards, Feb. 16, 1898, and became Lieut. Oct. 21, 1899. His mother had been in South Africa until recently, assisting in hospital work. The deceased peer was second Baron O'Hagan of Tullahogue, Tyrone, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, was the son of the first baron, who was twice Lord Chancellor of Ireland, by his second wife, Alice Mary, youngest daughter and co-heir of Col. Towneley, of Towneley, near Burnley, by Lady Caroline Harriet, daughter of the second Earl of Sefton. He succeeded his father in the title in 1885. His brother, the Hon. Maurice Herbert Ignatius Towneley O'Hagan, who was born in 1882, now succeeds. The news of Lord O'Hagan's death was received with great regret at Burnley, where preparations were being made for the double celebration of his return home and his coming of age in December last year.

Lieut. William Ernest Streathfeild Woodgate, 2nd Batn. King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment, had died of the wounds received in action in South Africa. Born Nov. 27, 1877, the son of Mr. Woodgate, a well-known and respected solicitor at Rochester, who died suddenly during his year of office as Mayor of the city in 1897, he joined the King's Own as 2nd Lieut., Sept. 8, 1897, and became Lieut. June 15, 1899.

Lieut. Wilhelm Arthur David Lippert, 2nd Batn. King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment, joined the King's Own as 2nd Lieut. from the 4th Batn. Somersetshire Light Infantry on April 18 last, and had only just obtained his Lieutenancy.

Lieut. J. C. C. Reid, 3rd Batn. Somersetshire Light Infantry, attached to the 2nd Batn., was killed in action near Nooitgedacht, South Africa, on the 12th inst. He joined the Militia on April 4 last and as 2nd Lieut. at once proceeded to South Africa to join the Line battalion in Natal, becoming Lieut. on Aug. 18.

Lieut. Alfred Corkram Campbell, 14th Batn. Imperial Yeomanry, has died in South Africa. He was son of the late Capt. Hugh Campbell, R.N., commander of the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, and was in the Berwick and Lothian Yeomanry. He married shortly before he left for the front a daughter of Col. C. W. Campbell, of Thames Ditton.

2nd Lieut. James Johnstone, Royal Field Artillery, died at Mean Meer, Punjab, on the 14th inst., aged 22. He was the only son of Lieut.-Col. J. Johnstone, late of the Oxfordshire Light Infantry, and joined the Army May 23 last.

2nd Lieut. George J. Ramsay, R.G.A. (13th Company Western Division), was drowned in Milford Haven on Saturday afternoon through the capsizing of a boat. He had been dismounting some guns at Stack Rock, and was crossing the Haven in a sailing boat, accompanied by two other men, when the boat was caught by a squall and capsized. The men clung to the boat for some time, but eventually Lieut. Ramsay became exhausted and disappeared. The other two were afterwards picked up by a passing fishing smack.

WAR OFFICE BUSINESS.

The Secretary of State for War has appointed a committee to consider the present arrangements for the transaction of business within the War Office, the system of contract and audit, and the possibility of further decentralisation of work, with a view to the more expeditious and effective discharge of the duties of the various departments.

The members of the committee will be:—Mr. Clinton Dawkins, of Messrs. J. S. Morgan and Co., late Finance Minister in India (chairman); Mr. Beckett, M.P., of Messrs. Beckett and Co., Leeds; Mr. W. Mather, M.P., of Messrs. Mather and Platt, Salford; Sir Charles Welby, C.B., M.P.; Col. Sir George Clarke, K.C.M.G., Superintendent Royal Carriage Department, Woolwich; and Mr. George Gibb, general manager North-Eastern Railway.

The committee will meet early in the New Year.

OUR MILITIA'S GRIEVANCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Will you be so kind as to publish a grievance from a militiaman? We (the 3rd Batn. Seaforth Highlanders) were embodied on Dec. 13, 1899, nearly a year ago. Some of us volunteered for the front, but the main body of us volunteered for foreign service in Egypt, which was accepted. We took charge, on March 2, 1900, of the citadel garrison, which we still hold. We have a very good character for drill, duty, and personal appearance on parade, and in walking out we are second to none in Cairo. We saw in your paper that the Militia battalions first embodied would be the first to be disembodied. At reading the same we thought that we were not forgotten, but now we are afraid that our battalion is forgotten, as we hear, and read that most of the Militia battalions are to be disembodied on the 4th, 5th, and 6th inst., and I think it is high time for us to speak out for our own personal benefit. There are many married men in our battalion who are very anxious to get home to their wives and children, after being so long embodied, and under the scorching sun of Egypt. So, I think, it would be only fair for the authorities to do something to this end.

Egypt, Dec. 4.

HARDLINES.

The Secretary of State for War has approved of Dover Convict Prison and the Provost Prison at Dover being used as military prisons.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

MILITARY MEMORIALS IN "LATTEN" BRASS OR MARBLE, &c.—Special Illustrated Military Price List on application to GAWTHORP, 16, Long Acre, W.C., and 19, Castle Street East, W., London, Craftsman in Metals to H.M. the QUEEN and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Patronised by the War Office, Lord Wolseley, Sir Francis Grenfell, the Guards, Cavalry, and most Regiments of the Line. See Memorials to Officers killed at Glencoe, Dekiel's Drift, Kimberley, Kroonstad, Thebanah, Wagon Hill, Ladysmith, Magersfontein, Omdurman, Khartoum, Khyber Pass, Crete, &c.

THE AUXILIARY AND COLONIAL TROOPS.

The War Office has issued the following circular:—

"Her Majesty the Queen commands the Adjutant-General to convey to the Militia, Yeomanry, Volunteers, and colonial troops who have served during the past year in South Africa, the Mediterranean, and elsewhere her grateful appreciation of their signal services.

"Her Majesty has been glad to observe the testimony borne by general officers to the admirable spirit by which all ranks have been animated, as well as to the zeal and discipline which they have displayed.

"The Queen deeply regrets the sickness and loss of life which have occurred, and highly values the sacrifices made by soldiers of all ranks in these branches of the Service in the cause of the Empire, despite personal inconvenience and pecuniary loss.

"Her Majesty relies on those still employed abroad to continue to use their best efforts in aid of her Regular Army, and trust that the day may not be far distant when she may welcome their return home.

"EVELYN WOOD, Adjutant-General.

"War Office, Dec. 18, 1900."

In view of uneasiness expressed by some members of the above forces as to the situations which have been hitherto kept open for them, her Majesty's Government desire to express their earnest hope that employers of labour will continue their patriotic efforts to minimise as far as possible the sacrifice made by these men in the service of their country.

JOHN HARDMAN & CO.
25 COCKSPUR ST. | NEWHALL HILL
LONDON | BIRMINGHAM
ARTISTS IN
Stained Glass Windows and Memorial Brasses.

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPEL & CO. EXETER
44 & 45 DUNCANNON ST. | LONDON.
CHANCERY CROSS.
DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

JONES & WILLIS
79, EDMUND ST., Birmingham.
CONCERT ST., BOLD ST., L'POOL.

THIS CHANCEL RICH WAS BEING TO THE GLORY OF GOD AND IN LOVING MEMORY OF OLIVIA ELIZABETH DAUGHTER OF
SIR HENRY H. JONSON BARR.
AND WIFE OF
COL. RICHARD O'F. SEYMOUR
WHO DIED 1894. AGED 62 YEARS
R.I.P.

43, GREAT RUSSELL ST., London, W.C.
MEMORIAL BRASS ENGRAVERS.
STAINED GLASS ARTISTS.
TABLETS IN MARBLE, STONE, AND ALABASTER.
CHURCH FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.

NAVAL AND MILITARY MEMORIALS,
Brasses, Crosses, Gravestones, Monuments, Tablets, Windows, Fonts, Pulpits, Reredoses, Standards, Mosaics, &c., of the highest class, designed, executed, and erected by
THOMAS PRATT & SONS,
Ecclesiastical Art Workers,
MEMORIAL GALLERY, 24, TAVISTOCK STREET (facing Covent Garden), LONDON, W.C.
Illustrations Free. Old Military Flags netted and arranged for preservation.

MEMORIAL BRASSES
MARBLE & OTHER TABLETS,
Stained Glass Windows.
DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES FURNISHED BY—
Founded by COX, SONS, BUCKLEY & CO., LTD.
18, Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, London.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards.—Capt. Cookson resumed duty as adjutant on return from South Africa.

2nd Life Guards.—Lieut. Sir Edward Stracey is about to retire.

Royal Horse Guards (Blue).—Promotion promises to be slow for the subaltern for some time as there will be five captains to absorb.

4th Dragoon Guards.—Capt. Gaunt rejoins headquarters early next month in India, from active service at the Cape.

1st (Royal) Dragoons.—Major Lord Basing arrived in England on Tuesday from South Africa, invalided.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys).—Mr. Walter Long, President of the Local Government Board, writes:—

"I should be glad if you could find space in your columns to appeal to your many readers on behalf of the Royal Scots Greys now serving in South Africa. A fund was started a year ago in order to send out such comforts as were thought suitable, viz., tobacco, woollen underclothing, concentrated foods, &c., and I was fortunate enough to obtain over £800 from kind friends of officers and men serving in the regiment. This fund has now become exhausted, and as the receipt of the comforts before mentioned has proved an immense boon to the men (many having written home expressing both their gratitude for and approval of what was sent), it has been suggested that a second appeal for help should be made, for it is evident that the regiment is likely to remain for some considerable time longer in South Africa, and will continue to have need of such comforts as it is thought advisable to send. I am, therefore, appealing to all those who have given so generously in the past, and I earnestly hope that many of your readers, who possibly have not known of the existence of this fund, as well as those who are acquainted with the success which has attended the effort that has been made, will give what they can to such a worthy object. I should suggest the gifts in kind, for which I appealed before, should this time be discontinued, as it has been found that it is more convenient and useful to send out the same uniform present to all.—WALTER H. LONG."

4th Hussars.—The move of the regiment from Mhow to Secunderabad will not take place this cold season as had been arranged, owing to the plague and the scarcity of supplies in some of the routes which would have had to be taken. Lieut. Caldbeck is en route to India from the Cape, to rejoin headquarters, from active service.

6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons.—Capt. Fryer left Durban on the 14th inst. in the Atlantian, for India.

8th Hussars.—The last words Lieut.-Col. Le Gallais uttered to his staff officer, Major Hickie, were, it is stated, "If I die, tell my mother that I died happy as we have got the guns." The guns referred to were those captured by the enemy at Bothaville.

10th Hussars.—Lieut. the Hon. G. Portman joins the staff of Lord Curzon in India as A.D.C. at the end of January.

20th Hussars.—The order for the move of the regiment from Secunderabad to Mhow has been cancelled owing to the prevalence of plague and famine in some of the districts through which it would have had to pass.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Subject to events in South Africa, a number of reliefs of units R.H.A. and R.F.A. will be carried out in India before the end of the cold season. These will include:—

R.H.A.

E Battery from Kirkee to Mhow.
F Battery from Sealkote to Rawul Pindi.
G Battery from Cape to Meerut.
J Battery from Cape to Bangalore.

R.F.A.

1st Battery from Kirkee to Ahmedabad.
12th Battery from Jullundur to Bellary.
13th Battery from Cape to Kirkee.
15th Battery from Meerut to Jullundur.
16th Battery from Kirkee to Neemuch.
18th Battery from Cape to Bareilly.
22nd Battery from Mhow to England.
24th Battery from Peshawur to Meerut.
27th Battery from Neemuch to Dinapore.
30th Battery from Fyzabad to Peshawur.
32nd Battery from Jhansi to Deesa.
34th Battery from Ahmedabad to Agra.
35th Battery from Kurrahee to Belgaum.
36th Battery from Nusseerabad to Barrackpore.
40th Battery from Bangalore to Kamptee.
41st Battery from Lucknow to Nusseerabad.
45th Battery from Barrackpore to Ahmednuggar.
46th Battery from Dinapur to Ferozepore.
47th Battery from Ferozepore to Kurrahee.
48th Battery from St. Thomas's Mount to Nowgong.
49th Battery from Belgaum to Secunderabad.
50th Battery from Agra to England.
51st Battery from Rawul Pindie to Meean Meer.
54th Battery from Meerut to Meean Meer.
55th Battery from Sangor to St. Thomas's Mount.

57th Battery from Meean Meer to Jhansi.
58th Battery from Kamptee to Bangalore.
62nd Battery from Cape to Lucknow.
67th Battery from Cape to Kirkee.
69th Battery from Cape to Kirkee.
70th Battery from Bareilly to England.
75th Battery from Cape to Fyzabad.
80th Battery from Nowgong to Sangor.

Another reorganisation of the Royal Regiment is threatened, and a committee is to assemble early next year in London to report on the subject of the changes which are in contemplation.

Attention has been called in the House of Commons to the disproportion between the number of first and second lieutenants in the Royal Artillery. Mr. Brodrick admitted that in the Horse, Field, and Garrison Artillery there are 221 first lieutenants and 808 second lieutenants, but whilst not denying that the first and second lieutenants performed the same duties, pointed out that it was manifestly of importance that the senior subalterns, who frequently perform captain's duties, should have higher rank. Asked whether the authorities would now be willing to alter the rule which precludes the second lieutenants in the Royal Artillery and Engineers from receiving promotion till they have served for three years in the Army, though no such rule obtains in the cavalry or infantry, the representative of the War Office stated that the matter was under consideration.

Major E. A. Lambert, E Battery R.H.A. at Kirkee, has been appointed to the command of A Battery R.H.A. at Woolwich.

Major W. G. Massy, 68th Battery R.F.A., was taken prisoner by the Boers last week near Plaatkop, but has since been released.

Major C. T. Robinson, R.F.A., has been appointed officiating D.A.A.G., Mhow.

Capt. M. C. P. Ward, Staff Captain, R.A., has taken over the duties of Secretary of the Defence Committee Scottish Districts.

Capt. E. F. Corbett, R.G.A., has succeeded Capt. R. C. Browne, R.M.A., as adjutant of the Tipperary Artillery Militia, this week.

Lieut. H. S. Hearn, R.G.A., is appointed Fourth Assistant Superintendent of Experiment at the School of Gunnery, Shoeburyness.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The term "Commanding Royal Engineer" as the designation of a Royal Engineer staff appointment has been abolished, and that of "District Engineer" substituted.

Lieut.-Col. A. C. Foley succeeds Col. J. J. Leveson as District Engineer, Barbados.

Lieut.-Col. J. B. Sharpe has arrived home from South Africa.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Major Count Gleichen, 1st Batn., who arrived in England on Saturday last from South Africa, proceeds shortly to Egypt to take up an appointment on the Headquarters staff. Brevet-Major Lord Edward Cecil, D.S.O., received an enthusiastic welcome on his return to Hatfield House on Wednesday, on arrival home from South Africa. The horses were taken from his carriage, which was drawn in procession to the house, with the local fire brigade as an escort. Speeches were made, a bonfire lighted, and the townspeople and tenantry were entertained by Lord Salisbury.

Coldstream Guards.—Lieut.-Col. Surtees will arrive in England about the 2nd prox. from the Cape, in view of his early assumption of the command of the 3rd Batn., to which he was appointed in September last, on Lieut.-Col. Vesey Dawson's transfer to the Irish Guards. Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Rawlinson, with a reputation, if possible, enhanced, will arrive about the same time. If he returns to regimental duty it will be for a short spell only, as it is believed that he will get an important staff appointment. Capt. Steele completes his term of appointment as adjutant of the 2nd Batn. on the 29th inst., and will be succeeded by Lieut. Campbell.

Scots Guards.—Orders have been issued for special efforts to be made in London to raise recruits for the regiment so as to complete the formation of the new 3rd Batn. Lieut. Arbutnot, 3rd Batn., has been appointed District Signalling Officer Home District, vice Lieut. Cameron, Grenadier Guards, who has left for India as A.D.C. to the Governor of Madras.

Irish Guards.—The 1st Batn. moved on Wednesday from Pirbright to Chelsea Barracks. The three companies which at present constitute the establishment of the battalion number about 240 officers and men, but there are nearly 300 recruits of the regiment at the Caterham depot, and these, with the detachment gone to Australia as part of the Commonwealth guard of honour, and the men on furlough, make the present full strength nearly 600 officers and men. Lieut.-Col. Cooper, who returned from his post as railway staff officer in South Africa to take up command of the battalion was at its head on Wednesday. The companies consisted of smart and well set-up soldiers of good physique, wearing the usual Guards' white undress jacket and the new undress cap, the low, round, flat-topped cap of naval pattern recently adopted, with green band. The men detrained at Nine Elms and marched off to Chelsea Barracks, headed by the drums and fifes of the 3rd Coldstream Guards, their fellow-occupants of the Chelsea quarters.

Royal Scots (1st).—Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Carter, C.M.G., having returned to regimental duty from Colonial employ, is en route to India in command of troops on the transport Sunda, to join the 2nd Batn., to which he has been posted.

Queen's (2nd).—Major Burrell, who has commanded the 2nd Batn. during nearly all the fighting in Natal—Lieut.-Col. Hamilton having been selected for the command of a Brigade—is expected home from the Cape about the 30th inst. He ought to receive a hearty welcome from all "Queensmen," for under his orders the regiment has well maintained its splendid reputation, and been mentioned many times for its fine discipline and general fitness for the rough work of war. Majors Dunne and Fowler and Capt. Stevenson, all of the Reserve, are doing duty with the details in Malplaquet Barracks, Aldershot, with Capt. Lee, 3rd Batn., and a number of Militia and Volunteer subalterns attached. The details include a number of smart, well-conducted recruits.

Bufs (3rd).—Capt. Tarte, 1st Batn., who has been officiating, is to be confirmed as a D.A.A.G. for musketry in India, and will then be seconded. 2nd Lieut. Baldwin, 1st Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months on medical certificate.

King's Own Regiment (4th).—Major Matthews, 2nd Batn., succeeds the late Lieut.-Col. Gawne. An officer who knew Col. Gawne well in Egypt writes to say how grieved he and many other of his friends were to learn of his death. He refers to him as "a most earnest soldier, who loved his profession, and never lost an opportunity of studying it seriously. He always aspired to command a battalion, and in Egypt, where he did duty on the staff, many will regret greatly to learn of his death, glorious as the circumstances were in which he passed away."

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—It was the 2nd Batn. which met with the disaster in South Africa on the 12th inst. All ranks are said to have behaved splendidly. They fought until every round of ammunition was expended, and did not surrender until they were surrounded on all sides by the enemy. Capt. Somervell and Lieut. Stanton were severely wounded in the affair, and have arrived at Pretoria for treatment. They are both doing well. Lieut. Jones and 2nd Lieut. Westmacott and 205 non-commissioned officers and men reported missing have since been released and are now at Rustenburg. Lieut. Jones was wounded in the leg, and 2nd Lieut. Westmacott in the wrist.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Capt. Cockerill is posted to the 4th Batn. at Colchester, on transfer from the Indian Staff Corps.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—Major Bird is expected to give up his appointment on the staff in Egypt in order to join the 1st Batn. in India as second in command, vice Major Lysons, V.C., promoted to the command of the 1st Batn. Bedfordshire Regiment. Capt. Stone and Lieut. Forster, 1st Batn., have been granted leave from India to England for twelve months, on medical certificate.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—A meeting of influential city and county residents was held at Norwich Shire Hall on Saturday last, Viscount Coke presiding, to take into consideration the advisability of erecting a memorial to the Norfolk men of the Regulars and Volunteers who have fallen, or who have taken part in the war in South Africa. No scheme was laid before the meeting, but a series of resolutions moved by the Dean of Norwich, and seconded by the High Sheriff, affirmed the desirability of such a memorial, approved the formation of a committee representative of the county, and gave it power to elect its own executive committee. Suggestions as to the form the memorial should take may be sent to Major Besant, Britannia Barracks, and they will be dealt with by the committee, and presented to another county meeting. Lord Suffield favoured a monument on Mousehold Heights. Brevet-Major Carroll is en route to India from the Cape, to join the 1st Batn. at Bombay, on promotion.

Somersetshire Light Infantry (13th).—Capt. Ford, 1st Batn., has left the depot, at Taunton, and embarked in the Sunda for India, in charge of a draft.

East Yorkshire Regiment (15th).—Col. Ward, who went out from England in command of the 2nd Batn., and has been at the head of it in the field in South Africa, arrived home from Cape Town on Tuesday, and is about to be placed on half-pay on the expiration of his period. Col. Ward carried with him the best wishes of all ranks, for, as a staff officer wrote lately, "a better and more serviceable unit than the 2nd East Yorkshire under Col. Ward never took the field for any duty; it is a pleasure to deal with such a well-ordered regiment." The Mounted Infantry Company, consisting of 140 non-commissioned officers and men, under the command of Capt. Forte, with Capt. Campion and Lieuts. Musson and Key, have been in continuous touch with the Boers since the middle of May last, and were present at the battles of Dornkop, Diamond Hill, Nawport Nek, Golden Gate, the capture of Olivier, the relief of Ladybrand, and the occupation of Lindley, Heilbron, Johannesburg, and Pretoria, besides numerous other engagements. Telegrams report that this company was also present at the recent defeat of De Wet when Col. Le Gallais met with his death in the hour of victory. At the capture of Olivier and the relief of Ladybrand Major-Gen. Bruce Hamilton, who holds a commission as major in the regiment, was in command of the troops. It is interesting to note that the Rev. Phelps, formerly chaplain to the Bishop of Troup, joined this company at Bloemfontein in April, and has shared with it the dangers and difficulties of the campaign.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Capt. Nicholl, 1st Batn., has left England for India in the Sunda, in charge of a draft. Lieut. Rogers, 2nd Batn., is about to join the Indian Staff Corps, and has been posted to the 11th Bengal Infantry.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—Capt. Dent is transferred on promotion from the 1st Batn., in South Africa, to the 2nd Batn., in Egypt.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—The details under Major Tottenham have joined the Provisional Batn. at Aldershot, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Bosworth, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment. They are quartered in Maida Barracks.

Yorkshire Regiment (19th).—2nd Lieut. Smith, 2nd Batn., has applied to join the Indian Staff Corps and is posted to the 22nd Punjab Infantry.

Cheshire Regiment (22nd).—Capt. Shaw-Taylor, 2nd Batn., is in command of the details in Barrosa Barracks, Aldershot, which are attached to the provisional batn., under command of Lieut.-Col. Bosworth, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment. 2nd Lieut. Richardson is en route from Cape Town to Forcados to join the West African Frontier Force.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—The details under Major King-Hunter have formed the provisional batn. at Aldershot, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Bosworth, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment. They are accommodated in Maida Barracks.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (27th).—Lieut.-Col. Payne, D.S.O., writes from Middleburg, Transvaal, under date Nov. 21:—

"I wish to express on behalf of all ranks of the regiment I have the honour to command their grateful thanks to those many kind donors who have during the past year sent out comforts of every description for distribution to the non-commissioned officers and men of the battalion. Thanks to their generosity and thoughtfulness, all men have from time to time been supplied with various articles of clothing, pipes, tobacco, and other comforts. The greater proportion have naturally been sent from Ireland, but well-wishers from all parts of the United Kingdom have provided many parcels, newspapers, &c., and their forethought and interest in the welfare of the men has been thoroughly appreciated throughout the regiment."

Gloucestershire Regiment (28th).—Major Capel Cure, D.S.O., has been appointed second in command, vice Major H. Humphrey, promoted to the command.

East Surrey Regiment (31st).—Col. Phillips, commanding the 31st Regimental District, has forwarded the following letter to the commanding officers of the four Volunteer battalions:—

"Sir,—In a private letter from Major H. W. Pearse, commanding the 2nd Batn. East Surrey Regiment, Volksrust, South Africa, he asked me to convey to the officers commanding the four Volunteer battalions in this district his opinion of the Volunteer Service Company. I have the honour to forward extracts therefrom for your information. 'Its conduct during its six months' duty out here has been excellent. Officers, non-commissioned officers, and men have one and all shown a most soldierlike spirit. They have always been anxious to take their full share of the work, and from the very beginning I was able to feel perfect confidence in them and put them in responsible positions. When they took part in the operations in Northern Natal, and in the action at Alleman's Nek, Major Benson tells me their conduct could not have been improved on. The officers were all thoroughly efficient and hard-working. In conclusion, may I say that, thanks to a good colour-sergeant, good equipment, and, last but not least, very careful training at the depot, I do not believe there is a better Volunteer company in South Africa than ours.' I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, R. PHILLIPS, Colonel."

Hampshire Regiment (37th).—Capt. Williams, D.S.O., has left England for India in the Sunda in charge of a draft.

South Lancashire Regiment (40th).—2nd Lieut. Garratt is en route from Cape Town to Forcados to join the West African Frontier Force.

Welsh Regiment (41st).—Lieut.-Col. Banfield is on passage home from South Africa, and will arrive about the 30th inst. 2nd Lieut. Ellis, 3rd (Militia)

Batn., is en route from Cape Town to Forcados to join the West African Frontier Force.

Sherwood Foresters (45th).—The details under Capt. Jackson, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment, are attached to the provisional batn. at Aldershot, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Bosworth, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment. Lieuts. Chamberlain, 2nd Batn., and Manby are attached. The detachment is in Maida Barracks. Lieut. Wilkin is en route from the Cape to join the West African Frontier Force.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (46th).—The regiment has just lost its oldest representative in Major Mundy Poole, who has died at 7, Gloucester Square, Hyde Park, at the age of 96.

Royal West Kent Regiment (50th).—2nd Lieut. Stigand has been ordered to proceed to Somaliland from Aden, for service with the Field Force under Col. Ternan.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (52nd).—Major Clark has been appointed second in command, vice Major Eccles, promoted to the command.

Northamptonshire Regiment (58th).—Details remain at Portland for the present.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—2nd Lieut. Paulson, 9th (Militia) Batn., is en route from Cape Town to Cape Coast Castle to join the West African Frontier Force.

Gloucestershire Regiment (61st).—Major Tufnell and Capt. Fyfe were taken prisoners by the Boers near Plaatkop on the 13th inst., but have since been released.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—The establishment of majors of the four battalions is increased to 12 by the promotion of Capt. Westropp and Baldwin, leaving four still to be provided in due course.

Hampshire Regiment (67th).—The details under command of Capt. Whitaker have joined the provisional battalion commanded by Lieut.-Col. Bosworth, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment at Aldershot. They are in Maida Barracks. 2nd Lieut. Lawrence is en route from Cape Town to Cape Coast Castle to join the West African Frontier Force.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Major Davison has six months' leave from England on medical certificate.

Seaforth Highlanders (72nd).—This battalion, finding itself in Cairo with the 3rd (Militia) battalion, the two combined to keep up St. Andrew's Day, when the officers gave a joint dinner. Altogether seventy-six officers and guests were present. The following officers of the 1st Batn. were present:—Lieut.-Col. Campbell, Major Jameson, Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Egerton, Majors Elliot and Ramsden, and Capt. Spottiswoode, Arbuthnot, and Meiklejohn, and Lieuts. Marshall and Carden, and 2nd Lieuts. Mackenzie, Buchanan, Wicks, Horn, Macfie, Duncan, Arbuthnot, Davidson, Forbes Robertson, and Capt. and Qrmer. Anderson. 3rd Batn.:—Majors Henderson, Horne, Davidson, and Munro; Capt. Campbell (Adj.), Livingston Macdonald, and Arbuthnot, Lieuts. Addison Smith and Mackenzie. 2nd Lieuts. Grenfell, MacLachlan, Reid, Crichton, Tweedie, Warrand, Farquhar, Steuart, Bentley, and Lieut. and Qrmer. Glynn. The toasts were drunk with full Highland honours, and included those to the Queen, St. Andrew, the guests, and the 2nd Batn. Major-Gen. the Hon. R. A. J. Talbot, C.B., replied for the guests. Col. Campbell drank to the health of the 2nd Batn. fighting gallantly for the Empire in South Africa. This was responded to with the utmost heartiness, most of those present having kinsmen and friends among the battalion, which has lost so many brave fellows in South Africa.

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (76th).—Lieut. Bally is about to join the Indian Staff Corps, and is posted to the 10th Bengal Infantry.

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).
Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.
£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400
(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT . . . £100 to £185
(Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315
(Cheltenham, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILLIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—Major Souter has left England for Jubaland to resume his duties as commandant in view of the operations against the Ogaden Somalis in which his force is to be employed.

South Staffordshire Regiment (80th).—The appointment to second in command has become vacant by the retirement of Major Bent.

South Lancashire Regiment (82nd).—Capt. Green has left England in the Sunda for India in charge of a draft.

North Staffordshire Regiment (98th).—Lieut. Sword is en route from Cape Town to Forcados in the Ulstermore to join the West African Frontier Force.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (108th).—Capt. Cumliffe has left England for India in the Sunda in charge of a draft.

West India Regiment.—A telegram dated Cape Coast Castle, Dec. 19, says: "The West Indian special service officers have received orders to stop at Sierra Leone."

Army Service Corps.—The new 55th and 56th companies are being formed at Aldershot and Shorncliffe respectively.

Volunteers.

The Public Works Loan Commissioners have consented to grant a loan of £6,000 to the Electrical Engineer Volunteers for the erection of headquarters of which the Secretary for War has approved. The money is repayable in 40 years.

The annual returns of the Honourable Artillery Company, in respect of the official year, show an efficient strength of 857 of all ranks, against 548 in 1899—an increase of 309—and the efficiency of the regiment in drills, gun practice, and musketry is 100 per cent. In musketry the figure of merit is 137 and for recruits 126, there being 77 marksmen, of whom Pte. F. F. McKenzie is the chief. No. 6 is the best shooting company in the regiment, and No. 2 heads the list for attendance at drill.

PRESS VIEWS AND OPINIONS ON SERVICE MATTERS.

"Fontanels," in the Times of Dec. 17, stated that the particulars of Gen. Clements' reverse were known in Holland on the morning of Friday, Dec. 14, whereas the London papers did not publish the intelligence until Saturday, and further details not until Monday, Dec. 17. "Red Cross," in the Morning Post, calls attention to the wholly unnecessary torture caused in the unhappy relatives of the men who had laid down their lives for Queen and country, by the action of a certain section of the Press in vilifying and maligning the members of the R.A.M.C. in general. The daily papers of Dec. 18 published the reply of Lord Kitchener to an inquiry as to the truth of a charge preferred by Mr. Bryn Roberts, M.P., in the House of Commons against the discipline of the Australian troops in South Africa; the Commander-in-Chief wired that the report alluded to was absolutely without foundation.

Mr. A. A. Dangur writes to the Morning Post that no sickly sentimentality or pro-Boerism should permit the Majuba monument to stand any longer. It was erected by rebels to commemorate a victory over a handful of overburdened, demoralised, and worn-out British troops. The site, Pardekraal, is the scene of a yearly gathering of jubilation, speech-making, and swearing of oaths. The monument should be destroyed before peace is declared.

"Patriot," in the Daily News of Dec. 20, remarks that the Ottoman Order recently conferred by the Sultan of Turkey on Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher reflects no credit on the admiral or on his (Mediterranean) squadron. The facts of the case were that England was bound by actual treaty obligations to defend and protect the Armenian subjects of the Porte. It was not a matter of mere humanitarian sentiment, but of written national engagements and responsibility, according to the Cyprus Convention. Suddenly the whole civilised world was shocked by the Armenian massacres in Sassoun and Constantinople itself. England stood by and does nothing. And now his Imperial Majesty the Sultan, the man who was confessedly responsible for those unspeakable massacres, is permitted to decorate the Queen's admiral.

The Daily Mail says (Dec. 21) that there is some difference of opinion in the Cabinet on the subject of the future status of the Commander-in-Chief, and if Lord Roberts stands out it is beyond doubt that he will be placed in the position in which all competent and independent authorities consider it absolutely necessary he should stand in order to be able to carry out a thorough programme of Army Reform. The Daily Express, of the same date, has an article on a "Grave War Scandal." When this country was almost totally denuded of artillery this year, says the Express, one or two firms like Maxim Vickers were given carte blanche to produce batteries of what are now known as quick-firers, while the Government rushed off to Germany for additional supplies of guns. These guns, to the number of 108, have now proved defective in their breech-action, and, not only this—this same breech-action has been adopted in other guns ordered in the same hurried manner.

Dr. T. MILLER MAGUIRE'S CLASSES.

10, 12, 14, & 16, EARL'S COURT SQ., S.W.

(Four minutes' walk from Earl's Court Station.)

Telegraphic Address:—"YCLEPT, LONDON."

ALL our CLASSES—STAFF COLLEGE, PROMOTION, MILITIA, SANDHURST, and WOOLWICH—are now in FULL WORKING ORDER, and will continue working as long as any education—Literary, Scientific, or Military—is included in the curriculum for Cadetships or other posts in the Army.

We have retained all the leading and well-known members of our Instructional Staff for the year 1901.

STAFF COLLEGE, 1900.

There was no Competition, but, nevertheless, a considerable Proportion of the OFFICERS SELECTED so far STUDIED IN OUR CLASSES, including:—

Major de Rougemont, Royal Horse Artillery.
Captain Lyon, Royal Field Artillery.
Captain H. L. Benyon, Royal Garrison Artillery,
Brevet-Major Thesiger, 2nd Rifle Brigade.
Brevet-Major Haig, 1st King's Own Scottish Borderers.
Captain and Adjutant C. P. A. Hull, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers.
Captain H. Cumming, 1st Durham Light Infantry.
Captain A. M. S. Elsmie, Indian Staff Corps.

Captain S. F. Geoghegan, Indian Staff Corps.
Captain C. F. Moores, Army Service Corps.

The following OFFICERS also QUALIFIED:—

Captain H. D. de Pree, Royal Horse Artillery.
Captain W. Strong, Royal Garrison Artillery.
Captain J. H. Paine, D.S.O., Royal Artillery.
Captain C. Cook, Indian Staff Corps.

MILITIA EXAMINATION, SEPTEMBER, 1900.

The method of selection adopted in September was unique owing to the war and mobilisation, and had little knowledge of any branch of learning, yet the following SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATES read with us—

Mr. H. H. Hulton, Norfolk Artillery.
Mr. A. L. M. Napier, 3rd East Surrey.
Mr. H. F. Collingridge, 3rd Royal Scots.

Mr. A. J. Ellis, 3rd Border Regiment.
Mr. W. H. Gribbon, 3rd Leicestershire Regiment.
Mr. L. St. P. Benyon, 5th Royal Fusiliers.

When the Military Examinations were serious competitions and success depended on intellectual efforts.

OUR SUCCESSES were UNSURPASSED.

For Example:—

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, Sept., 1899.

The following TWENTY-TWO passed.	Marks.
10th Cavalry	Sir R. St. G. C. Gore, Bart. 1316
3rd Artillery	Mr. O. S. Lloyd 1317
3rd Foot Guards	Mr. E. B. G. Foster 1310
16th Infantry	Mr. F. G. G. Cunningham 1627
22nd "	Mr. R. L. Payne 1558
23rd "	Mr. J. H. G. Crane 1554
29th "	Mr. H. J. S. Stanton 1522
36th "	Mr. H. R. Sturgis 1481
44th "	Mr. R. H. Seymour 1422
45th "	Mr. J. S. Ward 1420
47th "	Mr. E. E. G. Terry 1396
49th "	Mr. J. G. Hay 1386
52nd "	Mr. G. M. Lindsay 1380
58th "	Mr. F. E. Packe 1366
66th "	Hon. J. G. Eveleigh-de Moleyns 1327
81st "	Mr. D. A. Blair 1271
85th "	Mr. F. G. W. Draffen 1221
86th "	Mr. T. L. B. Soutry 1210
SECOND University	Mr. F. B. Dugdale 1748
THIRD "	Mr. S. G. de C. Wheeler 1696
12th "	Mr. W. H. Middleton 1393
16th "	Mr. H. M. Lambert 1315

STAFF COLLEGE, 1899.

Of the TWENTY-THREE Officers who were successful on the COMPETITIVE LIST, EIGHTEEN Passed from us, viz.:—

Capt. H. A. L. Tagart	15th Hussars.
Capt. K. Combe	Royal Artillery.
Lieut. H. M. de F. Montgomery	Royal Artillery.
Capt. T. B. Wood	Royal Artillery.
Capt. H. B. Roberts	Royal Artillery.
Capt. G. M. Harper	Royal Engineers.
Brevet-Major W. D. Bird	2nd Royal West Surrey.
Capt. A. E. Lascelles	2nd Norfolk Regiment.
Capt. T. H. Berney	2nd West Yorkshire.
Capt. W. S. Copland	2nd Leicester Regiment.
Lieut. M. H. E. Welch	1st Royal Irish.
Capt. J. Duncan	2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers.
Capt. T. O. Marden	1st Cheshire Regiment.

WOOLWICH, July, 1900.

	Marks.
Lt. E. O. Davidson	7832
A. J. R. Kennedy	7560
Sir T. P. Larcom, Bart.	7413
T. P. Bassett	6490
F. O. Lloyd	6461

SANDHURST, July, 1900.

G. C. Cooper	8754
H. D. Kay	7444
O. G. Hibbert	6860
E. H. Wienholt	5449

Thus, notwithstanding the few candidates left with us for these competitions, we did well on the whole.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY, WOOLWICH, December, 1899.

The following FOUR Passed:—

	Marks.
41st	Mr. H. H. Joll 9197
58th	Mr. Derrick le P. Trench 8477
99th	Mr. A. H. Allen 7432
115th	Mr. W. C. H. Cree 6740

ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE, SANDHURST, December, 1899.

The following EIGHTEEN Passed:—

	Marks.
Mr. C. P. Graham	7814
Mr. H. C. Ind	7425
Mr. A. E. Bonham Carter	7411
Mr. W. H. Padday	7384
Mr. K. E. Anderson	7217
Mr. J. L. R. Carey	7117
Mr. A. J. B. Wavell	6816
Mr. R. B. Umfreville	6454
Mr. A. F. Hartley	6371
Mr. W. D. Kenney	5268

UNIVERSITY CANDIDATES.

Mr. R. S. Allen	7876
Mr. R. M. Luckcock	7423
Mr. L. I. G. Morgan-Owen	7132
Mr. S. G. Smithwick	6973
Mr. J. S. Fitzgerald	6367
Mr. F. W. Robinson	5696
Mr. E. W. P. Love	4947

W.I. REGIMENT.

Mr. P. V. Holberton	6784
---------------------------	------

PROMOTION--1898-1899.

205 Officers PASSED.

SECOND IN COMMAND.

52 Officers PASSED.

FOR PROSPECTUS, TERMS, &c., apply to DR. T. MILLER MAGUIRE, 12, Earl's Court Square, LONDON, S.W.

REGIMENTAL INSTRUCTION IN THE MILITARY ART.

Literature Used at Earl's Court Square.

RE the NEW SYSTEM of INSTRUCTION by Officers, regimental and otherwise, on various branches of the Military Art, we have compiled Charts, Analyses, Outlines of Tactical Operations, Tactical Problems, Historical Outlines, Questions, and Notes on Fortification and Law and Administration, Summaries of Topography, Lectures on Military History and Geography, which we will be very glad to supply to regiments or individual officers on the most moderate terms. These will be found very useful and very simple by OFFICERS SUDDENLY CALLED UPON to HOLD FORTH in classes. Every fair question and every point that a reasonable examiner should expect a student to know are set down in our notes.

Our RIDING SCHOOL, started only five years ago by Mr. SAVIGEAR, has become one of the best known in the Empire; every student should become a good horseman. FENCING and BOXING and GYMNASTICS are encouraged and taught.

Apply to Dr. T. M. MAGUIRE, or Col. E. C. MILNER. For Tactics only to HERR BURDE,
2, EARL'S COURT SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.

OETZMANN & Co.
62, 64, 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, 77, & 79,
HAMPSTEAD ROAD, W.
(Continuation North of Tottenham Court Road.)
60 & 61, GRAFTON ST., DUBLIN; 75, UNION ST., RYDE.

Factories:
Eagle Works, HAMPSTEAD ROAD;
Albion Works, DRUMMOND STREET;
Stanhope Works, WILLIAM STREET;
Camden Works, HIGH STREET, CAMDEN TOWN, N.W.

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE NOW PROCEEDING.

IMMENSE REDUCTIONS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

An Exceptional
Opportunity
Of Complete
Or Partial Furnishing
At Minimum
Cost.

All
Carpets
Made up
Free
of Charge.

SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED SALE CATALOGUE
(36 pages) POST FREE.

JEROME SACCONE, LTD.,
15, COCKSPUR STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W.
AND GIBRALTAR.

Wine and Spirit Merchants to the Army and Navy.
Wines Supplied to Naval Messes Free of Duty.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESSES:—
"Saccone," Gibraltar. "Saccone," London.

SHELTON & BALL,
Military and Court Tailors,
180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
(Opposite Burlington Gardens.)

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).

SATURDAY REVIEW

OF
Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review
are treated only by Naval and Military men.

The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:

8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.
HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,
KILTS, TREWS,
TARTAN PANTALOONS.
11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING
MILK

AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.
A PERFECT
UNSWEETENED
CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.
AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK.
Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS,
ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this
good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.
WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.
Apply for particulars, Sample, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,
144, New Bond Street,
LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.

H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOX
Appropriately arranged for everyday use as a lasting memento.

PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE RED
WHITE
& BLUE
COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.

MILITARY MEN

Under Orders for S. Africa should take with them a supply of

BRAND'S
MEAT LOZENGES.

Sustaining and Invigorating.
In Hermetically Sealed Boxes, Convenient for the Pocket.

BRAND & CO., Ltd.,
MAYFAIR, LONDON.

... THE ...
Royal Navy List.
(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.

Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST
CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER
10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS
(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.

"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—Nautical Magazine.

Officers are earnestly requested to send
at once their special services to the Editor.

WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.
Advt. Dept.:—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)

Important Notice . . .

The December Supplement of ARMY AND NAVY
STATIONS is now ready. In future, this list will be published on the third week of each month.

THE Burton Brewery
COMPANY, LIMITED,

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.

BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.

Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO

Mr. E. RUGGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent,
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street,
Alexandria, Egypt.

DAY & MARTIN,
LIMITED.

GOLD MEDAL. PARIS, 1900.

A VOLUNTEER WRITES FROM POTCHEFSTROOM:—

Aug. 1, 1900.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been requested by a few comrades to testify
as to the remarkable qualities of your "dubbin" as supplied to the troops by H. M. Government.

Not only for preserving our boots, but for applying to the feet to prevent blisters; as fat for cooking chappatties, and for burning as candles, it is found of great service to "Tommy Atkins at the front."

DAY & MARTIN'S DUBBIN

Is Waterproof and absolutely the best Article
for use on Shooting and Fishing Boots.

THIS DAY. CROWN 8vo, CLOTH, PRICE 3s.

NOTES and REFLECTIONS ON
THE BOER WAR.

By MAJOR-GENERAL H. M. BENGOUGH, C.B.

LONDON:—

WILLIAM CLOWES & SONS, LIMITED
13, Charing Cross, S.W.

Notices.

THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

All EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.		TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year...	£1 8 0	One Year...	£1 12 6
Six Months...	0 14 0	Six Months...	0 16 6
Three Months...	0 7 0	Three Months...	0 8 2

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid
in advance.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
will be forwarded on application.

BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—
Price 5s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.

All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1900.

THE SUBMARINE AGAIN.

IT is very evident that although Sir John Hopkins did not include the "submarine" among his ideas for the coming century, it will be there all the same. In the first place, both in America and in France, there is a determined attempt on the part of the authorities to experiment in this direction, and in both cases they cannot fail to learn a good deal. Indeed, M.
Fleury-Bavarin, the reporter to the French Naval Budget, expresses his entire contentment with the progress made. "We have grappled successfully," he affirms, "with the most difficult of the problems of submarine navigation, submersion, vision, steering, and offensive action." Likewise Mr. Holland believes that with his boat he could take possession of any harbour that was not similarly defended, and, moreover, blow any ship opposed to him out of the water. While we are not inclined to take Mr. Holland very seriously, the French claim is certainly something to think about. Unfortunately, there is little information available about the French boats which supports the statements of M. Fleury-Ravarin. Moreover, he seems to us to claim too much, since if the problems he speaks of have been successfully solved, what more experiment is necessary? According to the recent programme of the Ministry of Marine, it is proposed to build in the next five years 161 torpedo boats and forty-four "submarines," but if, as M. Fleury-Ravarin declares, the submarine boat is the torpedo boat of the daytime and can venture in daylight on enterprises which the torpedo boat can only undertake by night, surely the relative proportion should be the other way about, and the submergible vessels four times as many, since they can be used both by day and night. Until we learn many more details about the methods employed in the solution of the problems of submarine navigation we shall venture to regard the optimistic report we have quoted as another instance of the wish being father to the thought.

It is just as well that we should say at once that it by no means follows that because the French have been successful, if such should prove to be the case, therefore we ought at once to follow their lead. It must be remembered that there have been in this country many trials of submarine boats, and although none of these is very recent we are not without some knowledge of the difficulties connected with the subject. The two questions "Are submarine boats to be feared," and "Ought we to build submarine boats," should be dealt with as entirely separate and distinct. The answer to the first question must depend in the first place entirely on the progress made by possible foes. But even if we arrive at a conclusion that such boats are to be feared it by no means follows that it is necessary for us to build similar craft. The answer to the second question depends almost wholly upon strategical considerations. Given that the submarine boat is a possibility, and that submarine navigation is solved, can such a machine play a useful part in the kind of offensive-defensive operations which our peculiar position as a world empire demands for its security in the case of hostilities with one or more first-class naval powers? The answer to this question has been given by those naval officers best qualified to judge, and we are sure that it was only after a full consideration of the subject that the conclusion was arrived at. Mr. F. J. R. Carulla, who read a paper on this subject before the Derby Society of Engineers, seems to have made a curious mistake in reference to a previous statement in this connection which appeared in our issue of May 19 last. After quoting from THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE a similar statement to the above, he said, "If those who should be most interested look on with indifference while possible enemies are preparing these fearful engines, a disaster, the magnitude of which can hardly be conceived, may easily follow." The assumption of Mr. Carulla and other speakers in the discussion which followed his paper, that our naval officers have disregarded, and are indifferent to, what is being done abroad in this connection, is wholly unfounded and based on a misconception of fact. The omission to experiment in submarine boat-building in this country is not a result of indifference, but of careful study of the whole bearing of the matter. It by no means follows that because a footpad is expert in the use of the garotte that every wayfarer should take lessons from a professor in that particular art. There are surely other and even more effective ways of defending oneself.

There is one difficulty connected with the subject of the submarines which troubles many people much more than they seem to know. This is the difficulty of discriminating between fact and fiction. There are always interested parties anxious to exploit their schemes in the press, and not a few editors who will accept statements without much question so long as they are sufficiently startling. To sift the grain from the chaff is not easy, and this is particularly the case when the information to be dealt with comes from abroad. It is, however, incumbent upon anyone who poses as an educator of the country to get to the bed rock. Several papers have recently mentioned a new submarine boat which was said to have been brought to this country from Australia, to have had an official trial, and even to have received the serious attention of the Admiralty. As a matter of fact such a boat does not exist. The representative of a colonial syndicate or company is in this country with the plans of a boat and with a model, but according to the New York Herald the model does not and cannot enable a test to be made of the principal claims of the inventor. So far as the plans have been made known the boat differs but slightly in detail from some of its predecessors. It would be wasteful for the Admiralty to spend money on experimenting with this or, indeed, with any other boat until its success had first been demonstrated by private enterprise. We feel quite certain that Armstrong or Vickers or some other eminent firm would speedily turn their attention to the construction of submarine boats if they were satisfied that to do so would be a profitable enterprise.

THE LOSS OF THE GNEISENAU.

THE disaster which has befallen the German training-ship Gneisenau at Malaga has aroused the deepest concern and sympathy in this country, and particularly in the Navy. Such misfortunes are known in every Fleet, and the recent case of the French Framée, and, in our own service, the disasters to the Serpent, the Eurydice, and the Victoria, remind us that there is no partiality in the occurrence of them. The loss of the Gneisenau is peculiarly sad, because her company represented the flower of the youth of Germany, and upon the future of many in her very much was built. Grief is widespread in the Fatherland and in the Navy, and in many homes Christmas has been deeply saddened. Among the first to express sympathy were Admiral Fisher and the British Naval Attaché in Berlin, while the Blake and the Pioneer were immediately despatched to render assistance. Lord Lansdowne, in the name of the Foreign Office, and Lord Selborne, on behalf of the Admiralty, have conveyed their condolences to the German Embassy in London and to the Imperial Naval Office in Berlin, and the First Lord asked Count Hatzfeldt to express personally his deep sympathy to the Emperor. It was something of a tragic coincidence that intelligence of this disaster was received in Berlin at the very hour when the German capital was preparing to celebrate a day of honour for the Navy by its reception of the men returned from China.

The officers of the British Mediterranean Squadron at Malta had expected the Gneisenau at that port, and had intended to give her crew a cordial welcome at Christmas. The ship, which was an armoured corvette, built at Dantzic in 1879, formed part of the fleet under command of Admiral Knorr, which appeared before Zanzibar in 1886, and has for ten years been engaged as a training ship for naval cadets and boys. She started on her last cruise on September 18, with the other training ships, for the Mediterranean. The Stosch lately proceeded to Smyrna, the Moltke to Jaffa, and the Charlotte to Corfu, while the Gneisenau took the German envoy in Morocco, Baron von Mentzingen, from Tangier to Mazagan, and then proceeded to cruise on the southern coasts of Spain. She was presently to have returned to Morocco to bring back the Baron to Tangier. She had on board a complement of 460, including forty-nine naval cadets and 230 boys under training, and at 10 o'clock on the morning of December 16, while the boys were at divisions, the ship then lying off Malaga, the wind began to blow with great violence. Captain Kretschmann thereupon gave orders for steam to be got up as quickly as possible, but owing to the rapid rise of the storm the vessel dragged her anchors, and before she could be got under control, was wrecked at the entrance to the harbour. Many jumped into the sea, and others endeavoured to save themselves by clinging to the wreckage, but before long most of them had disappeared beneath the waves, many being dashed on the rocks. Heroic efforts were made by a small boat to rescue the drowning, and some of the rescuers themselves perished, but the harbour staff worked with great energy, and it was due to their efforts that many were saved. The body of Captain Kretschmann was the first to be recovered, and has been buried in the British cemetery wrapped in the German flag. The full extent of the loss is not yet known, but is believed to be very serious, practically reaching 50 lives, and many of the survivors are injured.

Though the German Navy is young, it has already a long list of disasters to chronicle. In 1860 the schooner Frauenlob was lost in a typhoon in the Far East, and the training ship Amazon foundered a few years later off the Dutch coast. In 1878 the Grosser Kurfürst sank after a collision near Folkestone, in 1884 the training ship Undine foundered off the Danish coast, and in 1885 the Augusta went down in the Red Sea. In the terrific hurricane at Apia, the Adler and Eber were both lost, and the Ilitis went down in Chinese waters in 1896 in circumstances well remembered. A pleasant feature disclosed by the misfortune is the true comradeship which exists among seamen. Ready sympathy that has been evoked throughout Europe, and the services of the naval authorities and seafaring population at Malaga to succour and aid the survivors, in some cases at the cost of their own lives, are beyond all praise. The kindness and hospitality shown to the rescued and injured deserved most friendly recognition.

Navy Notes.

It is customary towards the end of the year to take stock of our ships under construction, and it must be confessed that the outlook is not as bright as we could wish. Neither from the dockyards nor from the private establishments are the reports of a distinctly encouraging nature, and it seems quite likely that we may expect further under expenditure on the shipbuilding vote. Nor is it entirely consoling to learn that the French are suffering, in a minor degree, from the same complaint. With our neighbours such a state of affairs is chronic, and we can only suppose that when our own programme was drawn up, the usual state of things in France was taken into account. It is high time that something should be done to overcome the retardation of construction due to non-delivery of material. In fact, until we can get back to the standard set in the case of the Majestic and Magnificent, we cannot say that we have attained a satisfactory condition of affairs. Without reflecting upon the late First Lord, it must be pointed out that the real progress made in the early part of his administration was largely a legacy left by his predecessor. Since then, whatever might have been the actual intention of the Board, and we give them every credit for a desire to push on, what has happened is that we have been laying down more and more ships until the yards are full of vessels waiting for refit, and the slips are encumbered with unfinished hulls. Doubtless between now and the end of the financial year a great effort will be made to spend the money by working overtime and other methods known to most students of Admiralty administration. But unless we are misinformed, the net result is not likely to be such as we can regard with complacency.

Speaking in the discussion on the lecture delivered by Sir John Hopkins, Admiral Johnstone suggested that there was ample material in the paper for very many lectures and discussions. This is quite true, and doubtless we shall see many of the points raised by the Admiral made the subject of correspondence in the papers during the next few weeks. Already we have noticed that the reference to harbour time has called forth more than one letter on the subject of the state of the lieutenants' list. The actual matter referred to, by the way, is, we understand, already in process of reform, and indeed this is only right, since an officer is unable to choose his own ship. We know ourselves of at least one case in which a lieutenant appointed against his will to a harbour vessel, after appealing in vain for seaservice, retired from the Navy, feeling that his chances of promotion were being completely destroyed. But the subject of the letters we refer to is what it is the custom to call "the shortage of lieutenants." We trust that the Admiralty will not allow their hands to be forced by an agitation in this connection. For some time past the officers who have successively filled the post of second Sea Lord have grappled with this matter in statesmanlike fashion. And there can be little doubt that before long the lieutenants' list will automatically increase without unduly perilling the chances either of those who are not yet on it or of those already there. By a systematic arrangement of entry to the Britannia and the temporary expedient of a supplemental class, the list will gradually be augmented until it has reached the necessary number.

It is not as if the demands of war could not be supplied in an emergency. They can, and by expedients which should not necessarily diminish efficiency. Any kind of heroic legislation with a view of suddenly adding to the numbers could only work detrimentally both to the interest of the officers at present in the Service and of the Service itself. There are, however, two measures, not mentioned in Sir John Hopkins's paper, which might receive consideration at the hands of would-be reformers. Now that we have, or are to have, a Fleet Reserve taken from the ranks of the Navy and Marines, why not also from the grades of officers? There must be many lieutenants and some commanders who would gladly take retirement on some such terms, mutatis mutandis, as those offered to the Bluejackets and Marines. If lieutenants, for example, could retire after ten or twelve years' service with a pension to be increased on the understanding that they kept themselves qualified year by year until they attained a certain age, we might make a splendid Reserve of officers. The other point concerns promotion from the lower deck. We have seen a great deal about the promotion to the quarter-deck of warrant officers, but we do not believe that the warrant officers want this, while at the same time such promotion should surely be open to the lower deck. There is a great opportunity for someone to formulate a practical and well-considered scheme by which a certain number of young petty officers might step into the lieutenant's grade if they could show themselves to be fully-qualified for such advancement.

Attention has again been directed to the progress of the naval works at Dover, which should be completed in 1907, by a commercial project arising out of the improved shelter for shipping which the Admiralty breakwater will effect. A company has been formed to build a wharf at which the Channel steamers may lie and embark their passengers in comfort in all weathers. This purely commercial enterprise has roused the attention of the Press to the possibilities of Dover from the capitalist standpoint, but we may venture to point out that this costly breakwater is not being built by the nation in the interests of speculators, but for the purpose of providing a harbour of refuge to shipping. Several of our daily contemporaries have gone astray in commenting upon the commercial scheme, being, it would seem, of opinion that the harbour of refuge is being constructed mainly for warships. This is quite a mistake, and we doubt if the refuge will be much used by our fleets, though it may prove very useful to torpedo craft. Earl Spencer made it quite clear in 1897 that the refuge was designed for merchant shipping. Steamers of ordinary speed will undoubtedly be exposed to attack by the enemy in future wars owing to the development of speed in warships and torpedo vessels, and hence these refuges are required even more than they were in the old sailing days. In winter especially the ordinary merchant steamer could not reach Portland Roads before nightfall if she quitted the London Docks at dawn. Passing through the Downs in darkness she would be very liable to capture by the French torpedo craft. Similarly, in making the Thames, cargo steamers would be exposed to capture or destruction in the narrows of the Channel, however vigilantly our cruisers and destroyers patrolled this part of the straits. And should the convoy system be revived, as it quite probably will be, harbours of refuge in the Channel will none the less prove most useful for sheltering the convoys at night. With a refuge at Portland and another at Dover it may even prove possible to dispense with convoy and so liberate more cruisers for the ordinary work of commerce protection on a very different system. Meanwhile it does not appear desirable that private companies should be permitted to construct wharfs inside the breakwater at Dover which is intended to afford secure anchorage to shipping. Why should valuable space be blocked for the convenience of travellers whose luxurious habits make them shrink from facing a little rain when embarking for Calais?

The new twin-sloop Espiègle, which was launched last week, is one of a number of similar vessels which have within recent years been constructed at Sheerness. She had been on the slips just eleven months, which is rather a long time for such a small vessel to be in the hands of the builders before she is launched. The Espiègle was christened by Miss Godley, a daughter of Sir A. Godley, the Permanent Under-Secretary of State for India, and among those present at the launch were Admiral Sir W. R. Kennedy, the Commander-in-Chief at the Nore; Captain Henderson, the superintendent of the yard, and all the principal officers of the port. The Espiègle, whose sister-ship, the Fantôme, is not yet launched, is slightly different to the sloops of the Condor class in that she is five feet longer, has an additional displacement of ninety tons, but draws three inches less water. Her engines, which are to be of 1,400 h.p. under natural draught, are to be supplied by the Wallsend Slipway and Engineering Company, and will give her a speed of thirteen knots. The Espiègle is thus the first of a new class of twin-screw sloops.

The respect in which the memory of a departed chief is invariably held by the officers of the Royal Marine Corps was strikingly exemplified last week at the unveiling of a memorial, in the Royal Dockyard Church, Chatham, to the late colonel commandant of that headquarters, which bore the following inscription:—

"Sacred to the memory of Frederic Vincent Godfrey Bird, who served his Queen and country faithfully for upwards of 39 years in the Royal Marines and who died Dec. 29, 1899, while colonel commandant, Chatham Division, R.M.L.I. His brother officers, past and present, have erected this tablet as a slight mark of their appreciation of his sterling qualities, both as a soldier and as a friend. Also of Anna Narcisse Elise his wife, who died Jan. 22, 1900. 'In their death they were not divided.'"

When we had the misfortune of recording the gallant officer's death, we referred to the estimation in which he was held by everyone in the Corps, as well as by the wives and children of those belonging thereto, to whom he was a friend who will long remain in memory.

The cruiser Hermes, Captain F. H. Henderson, which has returned to England owing to boiler defects, has been paid off at Devonport. The commission of the Hermes has been brief, but not uneventful. She left Devonport in October, 1899, for the West Indies, but on reaching Madeira was detailed to assist in the protection of the British transports outward bound to South Africa, and cruised in the neighbourhood of Las Palmas for some two months before continuing her voyage to Bermuda. It was during this passage that her tubes began to leak. The defects were patched up at Bermuda, and the vessel was able to get through the usual cruise with the squadron. On return to Bermuda she broke down seriously in the course of a forty-eight steam trial, and lay in port for two months whilst efforts were made to grapple with her leaky tubes. But at the next trial the leaks broke out anew, and other engine defects developed themselves. The feed pumps did not work, the distilling apparatus worked badly, and even the steering gear went wrong, so that for two days the ship was helpless. At this crisis Staff Engineer C. A. Harding was ill, but Engineer J. D. Wilson managed to repair damages, and the Hermes crept back to Nassau, whence she was towed by the Crescent to Port Royal, where temporary repairs were effected, and the ship was convoyed to Bermuda, being again in tow most of the way. There she rested for six months whilst new boilers were sent out from England and fitted under the direction of Chief Engineer E. A. Short, who had meanwhile replaced Mr. Harding. In September last the vessel underwent a satisfactory steam trial of thirty-six hours' duration, after which she was at once ordered home. The Hermes appears to have steamed ten knots during the homeward voyage, but it may be judged that this experiment of reboiling her at Bermuda has not been very successful, since she is now to be paid off. It seems desirable that the defects of these engines and original boilers should form the subject of a rigid inquiry, as of all the cruisers fitted with water-tube boilers the luckless Hermes has been the most unreliable steamer.

The Naval Service will be pleased to see that Mr. Goschen has been raised to the Peerage as Viscount Goschen, of Hawkhurst, Kent. We understand that a corresponding dignity was offered to the late First Lord twenty years ago when he was asked to accept the Viceroyship of India. The Right Honourable W. E. McCartney, late Secretary of the Admiralty, has been presented with an Empire clock by the heads of departments of Whitehall as a token of their friendly goodwill. His successor, Mr. H. O. Arnold-Forster, M.P., who arrived home on Saturday last, will take up the work of his office after Christmas. His numerous naval friends will be delighted to congratulate Mr. Gordon W. Miller on his appointment as Director of Navy Contracts, consequent on the retirement of Mr. Tatham-Gwyn. Mr. Miller's well-known tact and urbanity cannot fail of appreciation in his new post. We are glad to see that Mr. David Evans becomes Director of Stores in the place of Mr. Gordon Miller, and thus obtains well-deserved promotion.

Fleet-Paymaster Henry Dawson, whose transfer from the Majestic to the Glory was cancelled last month, now goes to the Crescent, flagship on the North America and West India Station, in place of Fleet-Paymaster H. W. Hunt, who is recalled to become District Paymaster of Coast Guard at Edinburgh. Mr. Dawson served in the late Admiral Sir A. Cooper-Kel's flagship Bellerophon, on the same station, 1875-78, and is still remembered at Halifax, N.S., and other places within the command for his ability in field sports and other athletic exercise.

Navy Personal.

Admiral the Hon. Sir Edmund Fremantle, a former Commander-in-Chief of the Plymouth station, was present on Friday last when Lady Charles Scott, wife of the noble lord who now holds that appointment, laid the memorial stone of the New Royal Sailors' Home at Devonport. The gallant flag officer, whom we are glad to say shows no lack of activity, was the first donor, to no inconsiderable extent, of the building fund, and since his return from the Far East has used his influence in promoting it. Admiral Sir Alexander Buller, another donor, was also present; and Vice-Admiral Charles Cardale, chairman of the committee, in thanking Lady Charles Scott for her kindness in attending the ceremony, made a stirring speech on the advantages of the home to seamen and marines, and the necessity for supporting it.

Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson, commanding the Channel Squadron, whose term in that appointment expired on Thursday last, is to continue in command for a further period of four months, at the expiration of which he will be relieved by Vice-Admiral Sir Compton Domville, now President of the Admiralty Committee on Boilers, who hoists his flag in the new battleship Formidable, at present in course of preparation at Portsmouth, and expected to be ready for the pendant in April last.

Vice-Admiral Alfred J. Chatfield has been appointed Knight of Grace, in England, of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher, on hearing of the loss of the Gneisenau, despatched assistance and telegraphed to the German Emperor, through his consul at Malta, the sympathy of himself and the whole of his squadron at such a lamentable event. His Imperial Majesty replied, "I hasten to thank you sincerely. Your action shows once more that sailors are comrades all over the world, and that blood is thicker than water."

Rear-Admiral Edmund F. Jeffreys, who gives up the post of director of Naval Ordnance to Captain William H. May on the 1st prox., relieves Rear-Admiral Atwell P. Lake, senior officer on the Coast of Ireland, whose period of service in that appointment expires on the 6th idem.

Rear-Admiral Day H. Bosanquet, Commander-in-Chief of the East India station, arrived at Rangoon on Tuesday last in the Eclipse.

Rear-Admiral Arthur W. Moore, Junior Naval Lord, relieves Rear-Admiral Sir Robert Harris, Commander-in-Chief of the Cape of Good Hope and West African station, when that officer's appointment expires in April next. But, as rumour obtains of an exceptional vacancy occurring on the senior flag list early in the coming year, he should, in consequence, become vice-admiral in March next.

Commodore Robert L. Groome, commanding the South-East Coast of America station, left Monte Video on Monday last in the Flora, for the Falkland Islands.

Captain the Hon. Hedworth Lambton was the guest of the Authors' Club on Tuesday evening last, and in responding for the Navy referred to the recent allusion of a French general to the invasion of this country. The gallant officer considered such an intention preposterous, as it would necessitate at least 200,000 men, the transport of whom would be a considerable item, with the addition of baggage and munitions of war. Flag-officers of that nation were too highly cultivated and intelligent to endorse such a proposition.

Captain Frank H. Henderson, who paid off the Hermes at Devonport on the 7th inst., commissions the Blenheim at Chatham on the 1st prox. for the China station, and has escaped half-pay by being appointed to the Pembroke prior to hoisting the pendant.

Captain Frederick F. Fegan, of the Leander, arrived at the Nore on Saturday last, on returning from the Pacific station after three years' foreign service, and is to pay off at Chatham. As he is only forty-five years of age, he has at least nearly twenty years to remain on the active list.

Captain Sir Richard Poore, of the General Depot, Devonport, was president of a board of officers this week to discuss the arrangements for introducing the newly established Royal Fleet Reserve at the western port. Fleet-Paymaster C. E. Gifford, of the Admiralty Manning Committee; the Commander for drafting duties at the depot, who is to be Registrar of the Royal Fleet Reserve; and the accountant officers of the ships and establishments at Devonport assisted at this important duty.

Captain George L. Atkinson transferred the command of the Medway Dockyard Reserve on Saturday last to Captain John Durnford, late of the Jupiter, and virtually ended his career in his present rank, as he will, in the ordinary course, attain flag rank during the first half of the coming year. As he is not fifty-four until June next he may possibly secure promotion to vice-admiral.

Captain Sir A. Berkeley-Milne, Bart., relieved Capt. John Durnford, of the Jupiter, on Saturday last, on the transfer of the latter officer to the Algiers at Chatham.

Commander Clifton Selater, of the Condor, arrived at Pernambuco on Saturday last on his way to the Pacific Station to relieve the Pheasant. The latter vessel reached Panama on the following day.

Commander Hugh Evan-Thomas, of the Pioneer, arrived at Malta from England on Monday last, and was immediately despatched to Malaga to render assistance at the wreck of the Imperial German training ship Gneisenau.

Commander Bryan Godfrey-Faussett, of the Gladiator, is to be of the retinue of the Duke of York during the Australian visit of His Royal Highness.

Commander William O. Boothby, of the Endymion, has been awarded a testimonial by the Royal Humane Society for attempting to save the life of a seaman who had fallen overboard off Taku Bar, the Peiho, in September last.

Commander W. R. Cresswell, of the Protector, the vessel commissioned by the Government of South Australia for service in China, arrived at Sydney on Saturday last, en route for Adelaide, to pay off that gunboat.

Commander Arthur T. Taylor, of the Hebe, who recently returned from the Mediterranean, pays off that vessel at Chatham to-day.

Commander Murray T. Parks, of the Blanche, managed, after considerable delay, to get away from Plymouth on Saturday last for the Cape of Good Hope to relieve the Magicienne. He should have left in the previous week, but during a heavy gale in the Sound one of the cables of this cruiser parted, and it was necessary to test the remaining ones and replace the damaged portion. As he was fortunate enough to attain his present rank, under special circumstances, on that station, we hope luck will attend him in securing another step in the same command.

Lieut.-Commander W. J. Colquhoun, of the Victorian Navy, who served in the Naval Brigade in South Africa under the command of Captain

John E. Bearcroft, of the Philomel, had the honour of being decorated with the Distinguished Service Order by Her Majesty, on Saturday last, for his energy and resourcefulness in effecting repairs to disabled guns of his brigade, and rendering them fit for service at important operations against the enemy. Captain Bearcroft spoke in the highest terms of his services.

Lieut. Arthur Cole Lowry, late of the Empress of India, had the honour of being decorated with the Albert Medal, Second Class, by the Queen, at Windsor, on Saturday last, for his daring and heroism in proceeding in a cutter of that battleship to the rescue of some of the survivors of the steamer Charkieh, wrecked off the island of Andros in September last. The service was most dangerous, and subjected him to exceptional exposure.

Lieut. Eric V.F. Dugmore, of the Pelorus, has been awarded the bronze medal of the Royal Humane Society for saving a Royal Marine who fell into the basin from the Sirius, at Devonport, in November last, on a very dark night and during cold weather.

Lieut. Edward J. Headlam, Royal Indian Marine, is awarded the Royal Humane Society's bronze medal for rescuing a Sepoy who had fallen overboard from the transport Wardha off Taku in October last.

Fleet-Surgeon Robert Benthall, Plymouth Division R.M.L.I., completes three years in that appointment on Monday next, and will join the Magnificent on the 1st prox. Fleet-Surgeon J. O. B. Williams, of that battleship, takes his place at headquarters.

Paymaster-in-Chief Frederick L. M. Dyer has been selected for appointment as accountant-officer of the Royal Fleet Reserve, about to be established at the Royal Naval Barracks, Devonport. He will be allowed the difference between his retired pay and that of the highest rate for fleet paymasters, with the addition of lodging allowance and compensation for provisions. The latter increments will most probably cease when the officer's quarters at the depot are ready for occupation. Two retired accountant officers declined the appointment, one on the score of living away from the port, and the consequent expense of moving his household, while the other did not appreciate it, and could afford to say "No" to what is undoubtedly a desirable post. Mr. Dyer is the first paymaster-in-chief who has been called upon to wear the uniform of that rank on active service since the position was established in July, 1856.

ROYAL MARINES.

Major David Hailes, R.M.A., does not embark for the Ramillies, as previously reported.

Major William S. Harvest, embarked in the Allan liner Carthaginian, at Liverpool, on Thursday last to join the Warspite, in place of Major R. K. Clavell, appointed paymaster of the Plymouth Division.

Captain Walter T. C. Jones had the honour of being decorated by her Majesty with the Distinguished Service Order, on Saturday last, at Windsor, for his services with the Naval Brigade which accompanied the advance to the Modder River; also in the engagement at Enslin, Graspan, in November, 1899, when three senior officers of the brigade were killed, and he, although wounded in the thigh, led his men against a heavy fire and occupied the enemy's position.

Captain F. G. H. Nugent, R.M.A., relieves Captain Reginald Temple, R.M.A., in the Hannibal; Captain Edgar Henderson, R.M.A., relieves Captain Robert O. Patterson, R.M.A., in the Sans Pareil, and Lieut. Edward Wright, R.M.A., relieves Lieut. N. F. Trotman, R.M.A., in the Repulse, to-day. Lieut. Oswald C. Harrington, R.M.A., relieves Lieut. Arthur F. Simpson, R.M.A., in the Nile, on Wednesday last.

Lieut. Alexander A. Cordner joins the Royal Naval Barracks, Devonport, on Saturday next, and Lieut. J. R. H. Gattey relieves Lieut. F. S. Beyts, of the Duke of Wellington, the same day.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition

Two Gold Medals International Exhibition, 1895.

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

PRIZE DAY IN THE "BRITANNIA."

At Dartmouth, on Wednesday, Admiral Lord Charles Scott awarded the prizes for the recent passing-out examination.

Mr. G. B. Mason, Senior Naval Instructor, said with regard to the general results of the examination, he found that of the 63 cadets examined 13 had obtained a first class in mathematics, 28 a second class, and 22 a third class. While the first class seemed somewhat smaller than usual, the cadets who composed it thoroughly deserved its distinction. The second class was an exceptionally large one, and he was glad to note that the number of cadets placed in the third class had decreased from 37 in December last year to 22 on the present occasion. This he regarded as one very satisfactory feature of the examination. The marks obtained in algebra and in geometry were much above the average, while those in theoretical navigation and in practical navigation were distinctly high, so high, indeed, in the latter subject that the cadets appeared capable of coping with a somewhat more extended course. The fact that no failures had to be recorded, that the prizes were well distributed, and that the average of the marks obtained was good, all pointed to the conclusion that the passing-out term was above the average in ability, and he hoped that their examination might be considered generally satisfactory.

Commander Travers brought up the report of the seamanship examination. This stated that the general result of the examination was very satisfactory. Twenty-six candidates passed first class and the remaining 38 second class. There were no failures.

Mr. Sercombe presented the report on the examination in steam, which stated that all the 64 cadets, with few exceptions, had shown a good knowledge of the subject, the various questions having been treated in a satisfactory manner.

Admiral Lord Charles Scott said it gave him great pleasure to hear such a good report from the chief naval instructor, the commander, and the engineer. It reflected not only great credit on the cadets, but also on the instructing staff. The examining officer in steam reported that the cadets had been extremely good in the practical knowledge of the work they had to do in the steam boats. That was satisfactory because as midshipmen they would often have to go away in steam launches, and a practical knowledge of the machinery would be most useful to them. Some of them were now going off to sea for their first trip, and they would find many things that were new to them. A great thing was to be determined to do their duty in every way quite regardless of the consequences. It was no good telling a lot of British boys that they must be brave, because they had it shown to them every day that they were brave. They had just seen a case in China of a midshipman winning the V.C. Another midshipman highly distinguished himself at the battle of Graspan. He was a young Australian, and, though wounded three times, he kept right on, and was eventually killed close up to the enemy's lines. They could not wish for a nobler example of personal bravery than that, but it was not merely physical courage that was wanted, they needed moral courage as well. They would find a few even in the service who would laugh at them when they tried to do the right, to stick to their duty and maintain a high moral tone. There was a good deal of moral bravery required to stand all the chaff and temptations that would assail them, and they should remember that they could show just as great bravery by sticking to their duty in spite of every obstacle as in other ways. If they did that they would get on in their profession, earn the praise of those over them, and win the respect of those under their orders. His lordship announced the appointment of Mr. Campbell and Mr. Smyth Piggott, the chief captains, to the Glory.

The prizes were then distributed. Lady Fremantle pinned the badges on the arms of the new captains as follows:—Chief captains.—Mr. Tovey, Mr. Bisset. Fourth term captains.—Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Fraser, Mr. Alexander, Mr. Preston. Third term captains.—Mr. Potter, Mr. Clements, Mr. Halahan, Mr. Royle, Mr. Salt, Mr. Favell, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Seton.

The breaking-up entertainment took place on the poop on Tuesday evening, and was of an unusually interesting character. Its main features was a lime-light exhibition of photographic snapshots taken during the year by Lieut. Clinton-Baker, R.N. Exciting finishes at the sports, the regatta, swimming races, scenes at the assault-at-arms, and incidents on the Racer at sea were shown, and some amusing antics by the ship's dogs, Walkey and Jock. One of the most striking pictures was the view of a flash of lightning. At intervals there were songs by Mr. Binmore, Mr. Hartley, Mr. Sercombe, Lieut. Cameron, Lieut. Lewis, Mr. Richards, and Cadet Binning.

Prize List.—Grand aggregate.—Mr. L. V. Wells, Study subjects.—Mr. L. V. Wells, Mr. C. S. Benning, Seamanship, general.—Mr. B. C. Smyth Piggott, Mr. L. V. Wells.

Charts and Instruments.—Mr. J. W. A. Codrington, Mr. B. V. Layard, Mr. G. H. Kellett. French.—Mr. S. B. Mainguy, Mr. R. F. D. Fitzgibbon, Messrs. Fremantle, Powell, Tandy, Smyth Piggott. Drawing.—Mr. R. M. Hopkins, Mr. A. F. Powell.

Steam.—Mr. R. Makin, Mr. F. J. Chambers. Religious Knowledge.—Mr. F. N. Shearme. Prize for Best Boat-sailer in the Term.—Mr. A. F. Powell.

The chief captains each receive a dirk.—Mr. B. C. Smyth Piggott, Mr. A. U. Campbell. Beagle Whips.—Mr. A. E. Godsall, Mr. J. P. Farquharson. Photographic Prizes.—First, Mr. H. B. Pilcher; second, Mr. K. F. Swarder. Recipient of Diploma of Honour as Selected Candidate of his Term for her Majesty's Medal.—Mr. R. B. Janvrin. Captain Rugby XV.—Mr. Campbell. Captain Association XI.—Mr. Janvrin.

The marks were as follows:—

Wells, L. V. ...	1872	Grant, A. F. S. ...	1412
Fitzgibbon, R. F. D. ...	1803	Fremantle, A. E. ...	1389
Benning, C. S. ...	1802	Layard, B. V. ...	1380
Smyth Piggott, B. C. ...	1802	Ridley, J. J. C. ...	1378
Godsall, A. E. ...	1793	Sturdee, L. A. D. ...	1376
Mainguy, S. B. ...	1724	Kerr, F. M. ...	1366
White, R. C. S. ...	1686	Campbell, A. U. ...	1365
Brotherton, M. C. ...	1677	Alison, R. V. ...	1325
Saxby Thomas, D. H. ...	1675	Whitworth, W. J. ...	1323
Mackenzie, W. B. ...	1662	Ridgeway, G. E. ...	1323
Tandy, H. G. H. ...	1620	Chisholm, B. F. ...	1319
Wood, C. J. F. ...	1597	Chambers, F. J. ...	1311
St. John, A. B. ...	1596	Craufurd, C. E. V. ...	1287
Loveband, A. W. ...	1590	Hopkins, R. M. ...	1266
Scott, J. A. ...	1589	Willoughby, E. J. ...	1254
Richardson, B. W. ...	1582	Janvrin, R. B. ...	1249
Grattan, E. L. Colley ...	1566	Cochrane, A. D. ...	1238
Hitchins, H. L. ...	1565	Morris, J. A. ...	1237
Makin, R. ...	1547	Pilcher, H. B. ...	1236
Moore, H. G. ...	1531	Wahab, J. C. ...	1214
Scrivenor, E. H. B. ...	1518	Baldwin, C. W. ...	1207
Ardrill, H. ...	1516	Curteis, R. W. S. ...	1172
Arathoon, E. B. ...	1516	Russell, S. F. ...	1170
Bavin, G. G. ...	1515	Thrupp, H. R. ...	1166
Harvey, J. R. ...	1507	McLeod, J. K. ...	1141
Kellett, G. H. ...	1499	Codrington, J. R. A. ...	1135
Phillimore, W. R. ...	1494	Seymour, A. G. ...	1130
Wolley, C. Philipps ...	1491	Lamb, F. J. O. ...	1094
Powell, A. F. ...	1474	Jones, H. Vaughan ...	1042
Head, C. G. W. ...	1469	Bodilly, R. B. ...	999
Farquharson, J. P. ...	1429	Hall, H. D. ...	923
Brewer, J. J. ...	1415

CADETSHIPS IN THE ROYAL NAVY.

Successful candidates at the competitive examination held on Nov. 20 and following days, for 64 cadetships.

Shove, Herbert W. ...	3029	Bowles, Guy P. ...	2111
West, Charles S. ...	2735	Brooke, Edward ...	2108
Lubbock, Rupert E. ...	2610	Vivian, Cyril P. ...	2107
Colles, Richard B. ...	2547	Crocker, William R. ...	2099
Bell, Archibald C. ...	2534	Macnamara, Patrick ...	2093
Leggatt, Claud M. ...	2513	White, William R. J. ...	2077
Pegler, Edgar W. ...	2469	Hensman, Melvill ...	2077
Harris, Arthur G. ...	2486	Platt, Francis C. ...	2068
Beatty, Stuart P. ...	2463	Wright, A. E. H. ...	2066
Blake, Reginald W. ...	2434	Chester, C. E. S. ...	2066
Sedwick, Cyril G. ...	2417	Conlon, W. K. E. ...	2058
Willett, G. A. S. ...	2398	Wilson, Gerald A. ...	2051
Nash, Walter M. ...	2392	Johnston, A. E. ...	2048
Morris, Charles S. ...	2369	Fenner, A. A. L. ...	2028
Lapage, C. H. S. ...	2362	Ward, Eric C. ...	2028
Dering, C. L. Y. ...	2356	Fielding, Walter L. ...	2003
Lees, John A. ...	2350	Greig, Donald ...	2001
McGillwie, D. I. ...	2327	Graham (Lord) A. M. ...	1994
Duke, A. C. H. ...	2316	Clare, Lewis R. ...	1987
Firebrace, A. N. G. ...	2304	Fletcher, A. L. ...	1980
Holberton, B. D. ...	2301	Carey, Archie B. ...	1970
Browne, G. E. C. ...	2267	Warre, Philip A. ...	1963
Bramble, Frank G. ...	2255	Hughes, Sydney M. ...	1960
Oldham, L. E. ...	2251	Westmacott, Horatio ...	1954
Edwards, H. D. ...	2206	Salisbury, E. W. ...	1948
Francis, B. A. ...	2172	Coxon, Henry L. M. ...	1943
Sladen - Watkins, ...		Forsyth - Forrest, ...
Geoffrey R. ...	2160	Edward J. ...	1938
Lyon, Herbert I. N. ...	2138	Charlsley, F. G. ...	1936
Walter, Elwyn H. ...	2137	Knight, Harold A. ...	1935
Hamond, Charles E. ...	2125	Hare, Owen C. ...	1925
Haslewood, Hugh L. ...	2122	Maguire, O. H. K. ...	1915
Briggs, Charles C. ...	2117	Bolster, Thomas C. C. ...	1913

Ronald H. C. Hallifax passed a Qualifying Examination for a Service Cadetship with 2,060 marks.

THE War Office has just completed the purchase of some 15,000 acres of additional ground at Kilworth near Cork, and it is proposed to proceed with the erection of permanent buildings there for the accommodation of troops and to use the place as training ground for field artillery.

ORBIT BRAND TOBACCO.

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos

in Bond for Export.

Navy Foreign.

In the report of M. Godin to the French Senate upon the naval programme of the Government, which has lately been adopted, he gives some curious statistics in order to examine the possibilities of naval construction in French yards. He says that the building of a battleship will require 1,678,000 days' labour, that of a cruiser 1,562,000, and that of a destroyer 81,000. Thus the total number of days' labour necessary to build the six battleships, the five cruisers, and the twenty-eight destroyers will be 20,160,000. There are, at the present time, 22,692 workmen in the dockyards, of whom two-thirds are occupied upon the work of new construction. In round numbers, therefore, 14,500 workmen could be counted upon, and, since a man serves 305 days in the year, the total of days available will be 4,422,500 per annum. Basing his estimate upon these calculations, giving approximately 26,550,000 days' labour during the six years of the programme, M. Godin concludes that the whole of the work might be executed in the Government dockyards. He does not think that any delay should occur in the provision of guns. He also refers, without much comment, to the greater cost of shipbuilding in France than in England, which he estimates at an excess of about £80 per ton, and this difference sometimes attains 20 per cent. of the total price. Although the estimates in the Budget were high, he recommended their adoption owing to the increased price of materials.

The German Emperor has placed in the library of the Reichstag seven fresh diagrams comparing in graphic form the fleets of the Powers. Three of them show the squadrons in the Far East, while the other four give the complete strength of the fleets of England, France, and Russia (Baltic ships only). The drawings are exactly in the style of those which the Kaiser placed at a former date in the same place. They have been framed, and bear the Imperial crown, and are signed by his Majesty's hand, and dated for September, to which date the comparison has been brought up.

We learn from the Vossische Zeitung that the extension of the dockyard at Kiel, on the Ellerbek side, is not only a costly work, but that its execution raises some difficult questions. The district to be included has for centuries been an important fishery station, and the population has to be removed. A naval assessor was lately at Kiel hearing the grievances of the fishermen, who maintain that the proposals made for them are unsatisfactory. It is now suggested that they should be removed to the Wyker Bucht, and that at Spentimunde, which is found unsuitable, a small harbour should be formed.

Correspondence from Tokio, published by the Berlin Neueste Nachrichten, states that the Japanese Government is building at Kiusiu Island a large steel factory, which, it is hoped, will be working some time in the spring, even if not completed. Artisans have been brought from Hanyang, near Hankau, on the Yangtze, to carry on the work. It is hoped that the Japanese navy may yet become independent of foreign constructors; but we may point out that, on the highest authority, it has been stated that the day when this will be possible is yet far distant. The Tokio correspondent, therefore, probably exaggerates the immediate importance of the Kiusiu establishment.

The remarks made by the socialist paper Gleichheit, of Neunkirchen, concerning the increase of the Austrian navy, will illustrate the difficulties that beset the administration. If any reform is demanded for the people, says this paper, the answer is that money is wanting, however necessary reform may be. But when militarism demands outlay, then money is found, and so now, two battleships are to be built, each of which will cost 13,000,000 crowns. The Gleichheit demands to know why Austria needs these ships, since she has no colonies and no sea commerce of any importance. The only reason, it says, for building them is that they are necessary in the minds of statesmen even when the people are hungry and misery awaits them. We have heard such arguments in this country, also.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died).

NOOITGEDACHT, Dec. 13.

20th Huss.—KILLED: Lieut.-Col. Legge.
Imp. Yeo.—20th Co.: MISSING: Capt. Purvis, Lieut. Campbell, 26 N.C.O.'s and men. 22nd: MISSING: 29 N.C.O.'s and men. 26th: WOUNDED: 6 N.C.O.'s and men. MISSING: 2 N.C.O.'s and men. 27th: MISSING: Capt. Bolitho.
Irregular Horse.—Kitchener's: KILLED: 2 N.C.O.'s and men; WOUNDED: Lieut. Skene, 10 N.C.O.'s and men; MISSING: 44 N.C.O.'s and men.
Mtd. Inf.—Ceylon: WOUNDED: 3 N.C.O.'s and men.
R.H.A.—"P" Batt.: KILLED: 1 man. WOUNDED: Lieut. Nevill, 8 N.C.O.'s and men.
R.F.A.—WOUNDED: Capt. Stevenson, 2 N.C.O.'s and men.
R.G.A.—5th Co. (E.D.): WOUNDED: 2 N.C.O.'s and men.
Northumberland Fus.—2nd: KILLED: 10 N.C.O.'s and men. WOUNDED: Lieuts. Isaac, Jones; 2nd Lieut. Westmacott (now at Rustenberg); Capt. Somerville; Lieut. Stanton; 68 N.C.O.'s and men (now at Reitfontein), 3353 Col.-Sgt. Spencer.* MISSING: 44 N.C.O.'s and men.
RELEASED PRISONERS: 205 N.C.O.'s and men.
Somerset L.I.—KILLED: Lieut. Reid.
Welsh Fus.—WOUNDED: Lieut. Hon. Cleg-Hill.
S.W. Borderers.—KILLED: Capt. Moody, A.D.C.
Yorks L.I.—KILLED: 6 N.C.O. and men. WOUNDED: 5 N.C.O.'s and men. MISSING: 544 N.C.O.'s and men.
Wilts: KILLED: Capt. Atkins.
Cameronians: KILLED: Lieut. Murdoch. WOUNDED: Lieut. Sandilands.
Dublin Fus.—KILLED: Capt. Maclean.
A.S.C.—30th Co.: MISSING: Sgt.-Maj. 7586 Ward; St.-Sgt. 4997 Tindall; L.-Cpl. 11797 Bullock; Ptes. 13964 Rowland, 9834 Ashmead, 12718 Evans, 8853 Neat, 9583 Roberts. 38th: 15201 Butler.
R.A.M.C.—KILLED: Civ.-Surg. Englebach.
Field Hosp. 12th Brig. attd. 2nd Worcester.—WOUNDED: 2 N.C.O.'s and men.
Corps not stated.—MISSING: 72 N.C.O.'s and men.

VRYHEID, Dec. 11.

R.G.A.—2nd Co. (W.D.): KILLED: 22566 Harcourt.
Lancaster.—KILLED: Lieut. Lippert; L.-Sgt. 5397 Gord; Ptes. 4638 Burrows, 1035 Lawson. WOUNDED: Lieut.-Col. Gawne*, L.-Cpls. 3951 Haig, 4136 Wilkinson, 6324 Neil, 5535 Birks, 5968 Mahon, 2320 Hazelhurst, 4752 White, 3119 McGee, 1459 Barry, 2897 Cooper, 6389 Wood, 2680 Gunn, 5790 Turner, 3412 Carpenter.
PRISONERS: Sgts. 4177 Johnstone, 3244 Burton; L.-Cpls. 5984 Barber, 4570 Martin; Ptes. 3382 Kennedy, 5503 Sutton, 4578 Saunders, 4510 Barrett, 954 Coombs, 233 Marsall, 5732 Curley, 4643 Ferris, 4411 Eastwood, 4646 Crone, 1262 Kenrest, 5485 Hogg, 5684 Lyons, 3481 Burgess, 3846 Smithson, 4459 Mooney, 5907 Hopkins, 5135 Moulton, 4700 Grimshaw, 3815 Robinson, 5927 Smallwood.
Lanc. Fus.—KILLED: L.-Cpl. 4267 Walshe. WOUNDED: 4224 Lyons, 5259 Brassington, 6129 May, 4149 Davies, 4654 Ramsay. PRISONERS: L.-Cpl. 5298 Rathbone; Ptes. 4428 Harris, 6389 Naley, 5271 Smithson.
Cameronians.—2nd: MISSING (believed prisoners): 6259 Myers, 3035 Davidson, 6016 Shepperd.
K.R.R.—3rd: UNWOUNDED PRISONER: 7285 Raynor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

6th D.G.—2726 Rowlands, wounded, Losberg, Dec. 12; 3087 Roberts, wounded, Klip River, Dec. 10.
7th D.G.—Lieut. Mansel, 4096 Ford, 3224 Goddard, wounded, Standerton, Dec. 14.
2nd Drag.—3433 Linnell, wounded and missing, Lake Chrissie (Oct. 16), released, arrived Standerton Dec. 13; 4534 Payne, wounded near Taabosh, Dec. 14.
6th Drag.—5114 White, wounded, Machododorp, Oct. 15; 3310 Marshall (right arm amputated); 3401 Steele, wounded and missing, Lake Chrissie, Oct. 16, released, arrived Standerton Dec. 13.
10th Huss.—4327 Butler, wounded, Schoeman's Kloof, Dec. 14.
16th Lancers.—4204 Wyke, wounded, Vaalkop, Dec. 14.
Imp. Yeo.—16117 Sh.-Sm. Heath, 16135 Watkins, 13717 Howarth, missing, Nov. 29, now reported prisoners; 8293 Gepp, wounded, Doornpoort, Aug. 28. Scouts: Capt. Anderson, prisoner, released Pontdrift, Limpopo, Dec. 13. 3rd Batn.: 3343 Goodson, wounded, Wonderfontein, Dec. 9. 5th: 1330 Mansel, wounded, Lichtenburg, Dec. 14. 10th: 10600 Fry, wounded, Wonderfontein, Dec. 9. 19th: 13315 Laskie, killed, near Jacobsdal, Dec. 12. 29th Co: 3657 Sgt. Tyrer, wounded, Quagga-laagte, Nov. 27. 50th: 4726 Cpl. Grace, wounded, Boshof, Dec. 15. 70th: 12617 Sgt. Kerry, wounded, Boshof, Dec. 15. 73rd: 13558 Radford, missing, Kaffirs Kraal, Oct. 24, has rejoined.
Irreg. Horse.—Kitchener's: Townsend, wounded, Dwarsvlei, Dec. 3; 3216 Buckley, wounded and missing, Lake Chrissie, Oct. 16, released, arrived Standerton, Dec. 13. Kimberley Mtd. Corps: 321 Saunders, wounded, Venters-kroon, Aug. 7. S.A.L.H.: 3456 White, wounded, Lydenburg, Oct. 1, previously reported killed; 1958 Smythe*, 1853 Gelding, 3838 D'Arcy, wounded, Thabanchu, Dec. 14. Marshall's: McLeod, wounded, Welverdiend, Dec. 5. N.S.W. Bushmen: 458 Mohr, 423 Moran, missing, have rejoined. Brabant's: 20099 H. Jansen,* 20198 Read, 4257 O. Jansen, Dec. 11, 20056 McGregor, Dec. 7, wounded, De Wet's Spruit. 2nd: 4229 Bosman, 21228 Johnston, 7004 Justo, killed; 657 Lupton*, 9392 Cpl. Wilson*, 20306 James*, 20308 Martin, 20539 Cunningham, 7060 Squires, Lieut. Bloomfield-Storey, 316 L.-Cpl.

Marran, 20143 Shea, 765 Fredericks, 20100 Kavanagh. 20565 Prouse, Capt. Ranburg, 5101 Sgt.-Maj. Taylor, 20556 Gellens (Ellins), 4180 Cpl. Foster, wounded. Missino: Lieut. Warrington, Knecht Kloof, Dec. 13. O.C. reports wounded likely to recover.
Police.—O. R. C. Maher, missing, has rejoined.
R.F.A.—Major Massy, prisoner, released, near Plaatkop, Dec. 13.
Gren. Gds.—2nd: Capt. Hon. W. Cavendish, accidental dislocation of shoulder, Harrismith, Dec. 15.
Scots Gds.—1st: Armr.-Sgt. 725 Johnson, right hand crushed and amputated, fall from train, Edenburg, Dec. 14.
Northld. Fus.—2nd: Mtd. Inf.: 4838 Burt, 4580 Harris, killed; 4185 Banister, wounded, Barberton, Dec. 8.
Devon.—1st: 3147 Sgt. Leach, wounded, Mauchberg, Dec. 15.
S. W. Borders.—2nd: 3646 Cpl. Withers, 3196 Bowler, previously reported missing, Paardeberg, Feb. 18, were killed; 2708 Winyard, missing, has rejoined.
Cameronians.—2nd: 6506 Whittam, wounded, Greylingstad, Dec. 17.
Gloucester.—Capt. Menzies, Lieuts. Walshe, Ford, prisoners, escaped, Dec. 11; Major Tufnell, Capt. Fyffe, prisoners, released near Plaatkop, Dec. 13.
Worcester.—1st: 2807 Small, 5520 Summers, 3381 Sgt. Lucas, 2788 Cpl. Short, 2286 Cox, 4935 Stringer, 4945 L.-Cpl. Sutton, wounded, Bethlehem, Dec. 9.
D.C.L.I.—Lieut. Rendall, prisoner, Novitgedacht, released.
Border.—1st: 2985 Col.-Sgt. Gregorson, wounded, Vlakkfontein, Dec. 14.
N.J. Lancers.—4839 Whiteway, wounded, near Belfast, Dec. 7.
Middlesex.—2nd: Sgts. 2143 Murphy, 2698 Hudson; Cpls. 4214 Arnold, 3752 Bailey; Ptes. 5482 Rosser, 5013 Barnard, 2321 Lukey, 3440 Charter, 5641 Painter, 5658 Spooner, 2564 Arnold, 2721 Burgess, 5142 Carey, 2078 Holland, 3321 Torrance, 5264 Champness, 5250 Hudson, previously reported missing, Spion Kop, Jan. 24, were killed.
Wilts.—2nd: 3141 Gale, reported died Bloemfontein, Apl. 18, is alive.
H.L.I.—2nd Lieut. Alston, prisoner, escaped Dec. 11.
Gordons.—2nd: 6406 Hawthorne, Dec. 1; 1785 Greig (Mil. Res.), wounded, Dec. 14, Waterval.
Leinster.—5034 Doorley, wounded, Vrede, Dec. 14.
Munster Fus. Mtd. Inf.—5958 Ambrose was reported dead in error, is now at Kimberley convalescent from wounds.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

Reserve of Officers.—Major Giles (late R.F.A.), found dead in train, cause not stated, Capetown, Dec. 19.
1st L.G.—Yandle, inflammation brain at sea, Hawarden Castle, Nov. 22.
5th Lancers.—4363 Trill, killed, Lydenburg, Oct. 8.
9th Lancers.—3819 L.-Cpl. Johns, killed, Poplar Grove, Mar. 7.
10th Huss.—3129 Cpl. Pickin, Middleburg, Dec. 15.
14th Huss.—3037 Goring, Pretoria, Dec. 14; 3112 (?) S. Smith, A. Hide, Maritzburg, Mar. 27.
17th Lancers.—3697 J. Smith, Winburg, Dec. 14.
Imp. Yeo.—2nd Co.: 109 Griffin, Harrismith, Dec. 13; 7th: 2218 Tayleur, Harrismith, Dec. 18; 20th: 9177 McGrady, Reitfontein, Dec. 17; 22nd: 1789 Whitelegge, Maitland, Dec. 12; 29th: 3701 Sh.-sm. Griffiths, wounds, Bloemfontein, Dec. 12. 34th: 6290 McIlwraith, Reitz, Dec. 17; 69th: 16485 Russell, Pretoria, Dec. 7; 62nd: 11398 Jarvis, dysentery, Harrismith, Dec. 13.

Irreg. Horse.—Roberts's: 2624 McKenna, Waterval Onder, Dec. 12; 2374 Sgt. Pringle, killed, Dronfield, Feb. 16. Marshall's: Maxfield-Collip, dysentery, Johannesburg, Dec. 13. Kitchener's: 3178 Farr.-Cpl. Goodwin, wounds, Hekpoort, Sept. 21; 4061 Hogg, wounds, Bloemfontein, Nov. 23. N.Z. Rough Riders: 2226 Caldwell, Pretoria, Dec. 13. Natal Carbineers: Cpl. Combie, Trpr. McKella, killed, Scheeper's Nek, Dec. 14. S.A.L.H.: 1714 Ainsworth, wounds, Thaba N'chu, Dec. 15. Brabant's, 1st: 9042 Cooke, Lindley, Dec. 9. Driscoll's Scouts: Sgt. Calderwood, Bloemfontein, Dec. 16. Rhodesian Regt.: 208 Mead, blackwater fever, Tuli, Mar. 7; 656 Skelly (? cause and place), Apl. 7; 297 Schuckburg, wounds, Ramathlabama, Apl. 12; 359 Wales, fever, Umlugula, Apl. 13; 86 Elliott (? cause), Sefitili, May 16.
Mtd. Inf.—Thornycroft's: 228 Far.-Maj. J. T. Richardson (? 6779 Far.-Qrmer.-Sgt. J. Richardson), Dec. 13; 4887 Cpl. Baillie, Dec. 14, both dysentery; 12826 Hooper, Dec. 14, Bloemfontein; Wilson (late of), heart disease, Maritzburg, Dec. 8; 3801 Bouch, Bloemfontein, Dec. 17.
Mtd. Rifles.—Cape: 3165 Pierce, wounds, Kimberley, Dec. 15.
Police.—Transvaal Constab.: Sgt. Macintosh (late Lovat's Corps), Pretoria, Dec. 14. B.S.A.: 67 Hitchings, dysentery, Bulawayo, June 26.
R.H.A.—"A" Batt.: 90779 Humber, Bloemfontein, Dec. 12. "P": 5801 Wright, wounds, Reitfontein (? date). "J": 93789 Vallyley, disease, Kroonstad, May 18.
R.F.A.—14th Batt.: 29983 Cunio, Bloemfontein, Dec. 17. 20th: 18191 Bomb. Warwick, Barberton, Dec. 13. 21st: 5758 Yates, dysentery, Middleburg, Dec. 16. 73th: 81331 Burgess, Johannesburg, Dec. 17. 86th: 3616 Sgt. Winfield, Standerton, Dec. 17.
R.G.A.—Lieut. Dalryell, Pretoria, Dec. 7. 10th Co (E.D.): 32492 Tappinden (? disease), Newcastle, Dec. 14. 17th Co. (W.D.): 54878 Sgt. Clarke, dysentery, Kroonstad, Dec. 14.
Amm. Col.—R.F.A.: 58987 Cragnell, Harrismith, Dec. 18.
R.E.—20th Co.: 28681 Hill, Bloemfontein, Dec. 17. Bridging Bn.—"A" Troop: 2951 Hoay, dysentery, Volksrust, Dec. 17. Tele.—1st Div.: 4691 Buchanan, Bloemfontein, Dec. 17; 430 Lockyer, Frankfort, Dec. 17.
Gren. Gds.—2nd: 7346 Spear, Dec. 13; 2294 Sellen, Dec. 16; 5386 Lewis, 4344 Dixon, both dysentery, Dec. 17, Harrismith. 3rd: Lieut. Lord O'Hagan, Springfontein, Dec. 13; 6648 L.-Cpl. Everitt, Harrismith, Dec. 14; 1937 Knowles, killed, Rolfontein Drift, Dec. 14.
Coldstream Gds.—2nd: 9751 Cleary, Johannesburg, Dec. 16.
R. Scots.—Mtd. Inf.: 5726 Macdonald, Vrede, Dec. 17. Lanc.—3rd: 4877 Scrafton, Bloemfontein, Dec. 13. Vol.: 7276 Dowthwaite, Ladysmith, Dec. 13.
Northld. Fus.—2nd: 685 Cairns, Pretoria, Dec. 16. Warwick.—3rd: 5499 Howard, dysentery, Amaldeal, Dec. 15. 2nd: 3284 Hughes, wounds, Elandshoek, Dec. 13.
R. Fus.—5th: 9346 Lee, wounds, Natal, Mar. 1. Vol.: 8900 Titley, Kroonstad, Dec. 17.
Lincoln.—2nd: 6695 Royce, Pretoria, Dec. 15. Devon.—2nd: 2781 Shaddick, lightning, Standerton, Oct. 25; 2854 Bully, inflammation spinal cord, Germiston, Dec. 15.
Suffolk.—1st: 4964 Manchester, thrombosis, Springfontein, Dec. 12.
Somerset L.I.—1869 Matthews, found dead on veldt (? cause), E. London (Dec. 14). Bedford.—4th: 3066 L.-Cpl. Bone, Dec. 13, 1693 Tyler, Dec. 12, Mafeking; 690 Cpl. Sills, dysentery, Kimberley, Sept. 29.
Irish.—1st: 3419 Scannell, peritonitis, Johannesburg, Dec. 14.
Cheshire.—4th: 3352 Lynn, heart disease, Dec. 13, 2710 Hughes, dysentery, Dec. 18, Springfontein.
Welsh Fus.—5220 Lucas, Kimberley, Dec. 13.
S. W. Borders.—5783 Davies, dysentery, Bultfontein, Dec. 7.
Inniskillings.—1st: 1551 McManus, fractured skull, Ladysmith, Aug. 7.
Gloucester.—2nd: 1988 Farmiloe, Springfontein, Dec. 17.
Worcester.—2nd: 1703 Cowles, accidentally shot, Reitfontein, Dec. 8.
E. Lancers.—3rd: 4592 Cpl. Donnelly, Germiston, Dec. 17; 9807 L.-Cpl. Lord, Vet River, Dec. 18.
D.C.L.I.—3338 Moran, Pretoria, Dec. 14.
W. Riding.—2nd: 3479 Harrison, dysentery, Aliwal North, Dec. 15.
Border.—1st: 5481 L.-Cpl. Davies, disease, Modderspruit, Apr. 3; 4827 Cpl. Poole, Johannesburg, Dec. 16.
Sussex.—1st: 4619 Cpl. Walsh, Pretoria, Dec. 12; (? 6067) Mitchell, Bloemfontein, Dec. 16; 5055 Cpl. Potts, Lindley, Dec. 13.
S. Staff.—4th: 5354 Pike, Winburg, Dec. 16.
Dorset.—2nd: 3346 Poor, pneumonia, at sea, Simla, Dec. 11.
Welsh.—1st: 5890 Hughes, accidentally poisoned, Petrusville, Dec. 13. 3rd: 8638 Griffiths, Kimberley, Dec. 11.
Oxford L.I.—1st: 3645 Cpl. Grant, Norvals Pont, Dec. 17; 5997 Merry, Heilbron, Dec. 18.
Essex.—1st: 6028 Cpl. Miller, Heidelberg, Dec. 16.
Derby.—4th: 6376 Mitchell, Frankfort, July 1; 7354 McDermott, Port Elizabeth, Dec. 14.
Northampton.—2nd: 4327 G. Smith Lichtenburg, Dec. 12; 5620 Osborne, Kroonstad, Dec. 13. 3847 Linab, Kroonstad, Dec. 14.
Berks.—2nd (43rd S.A.R.): Flynn, Naauwpoort, Mar. 26.
W. Kent.—2nd: 5514 Barnes, internal obstruction, Frankfort, Dec. 17. Vol.: 6865 Wilcox, Dec. 15; 6868 Cpl. Marchant, Dec. 18, Norvals Pont.

HENNESSY'S

THREE

STAR

BRANDY.

Ja. Hennessy & Co.'s Brandy has the largest sale in the world. IT IS GENUINE BRANDY.

The Gazette.

TUESDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 18.

6th Dragoons.—Supy. Capt. J. C. A. Anstice to be Capt., vice A. R. Mosley, promoted (Nov. 24).
19th Hussars.—James W. Lewis nominated by Authorities of a University, to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. G. A. Egerton, promoted.

Candidates, nominated by Authorities of Universities, to be 2nd Lieuts. (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 19):—

5th Dragoon Guards.—Trpr. John C. Close-Brooks, from Imperial Yeomanry, on augmentation.

6th Dragoon Guards.—Trpr. Hereward Sadler, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. W. J. S. Rundle, seconded.

6th Dragoons.—Trpr. Frederick Close, from Imperial Yeomanry, in succession to Lieut. A. W. Swanston, killed in action.

Reserve Regt. of Dragoons.—Lieut.-Col. H. J. Watson ceases to belong to the regt.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

4th Batn.—Lieut. A. F. Watt resigns his commission (Oct. 9).

5th Batn.—Lieut. H. G. C. Carr-Elison resigns his commission.

7th Batn.—Capt. W. M. Sherston resigns his commission; Lieut. T. R. Symons to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (Nov. 29); Lieut. G. H. St. Hill resigns his commission (Sept. 27).

10th Batn.—Lieut. W. Selby Lowndes resigns his commission (Sept. 15).

11th Batn.—Temp. Lieut.-Col. W. K. Mitford, commandant of the batn., resigns his commission (Aug. 22).

12th Batn.—Lieut. G. S. C. Paget resigns his commission; Temp. Lieut. S. Paget Machine Gun Commander, resigns his commission (Oct. 24); Temp. Vet. Lieut. W. C. B. Revill, Vet. Officer, resigns his commission (Oct. 26).

14th Batn.—Lieut. J. W. F. W. Ashby resigns his commission (Sept. 27).

15th Batn.—Temp. Capt. C. Banbury, Adjt., resigns his commission (Oct. 11); Lieut. P. Cazenove resigns his commission (Oct. 31).

16th Batn.—Lieut. V. Dicks resigns his commission (Aug. 22).

19th Batn.—Lieut. C. C. Mahony resigns his commission (Sept. 15).

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

Officers to be 2nd Lieuts.:—Lieuts. Henry R. Ayton, from Antrim Art.; J. H. Coldwell-Horsfall, from Suffolk Art.; C. W. H. Skinner, from Glamorgan Art.; J. H. B. Millar, from Edinburgh Art.; 2nd Lieuts. G. B. Oliver, from Kent Art.; H. H. Hulton, from Norfolk Art.; Lieuts. E. Corbould-Warren, from Suffolk Art.; R. D. Harrison, from Lancashire Art.; C. J. A'Court, from Fife Art.; C. T. S. Paul, from Devon Art.; 2nd Lieut. P. J. B. Heelas, from Cornwall and Devon Miners Art.; Lieut. P. P. Budge, from West of Scotland Art.

Gentlemen, nominated by Authorities of Public Schools, to be 2nd Lieuts.:—Charles C. Munn, Alison K. G. White, Charles R. Gover, Francis L. Congreve, Willoughby Sitwell, Robert Benson, Gerald M. Smith, Robert H. Edmondson, Thomas D. H. Hackett, Patrick Turnbull, Percy G. Robinson, William M. Shaw, Joseph I. D'Arcy, Joseph A. D. Bell.

Royal Garrison Artillery.

Capt. R. Morris retires from the Service, receiving a gratuity.

Lieut. William Jickell, from Rough Riders 4th New Zealand Contingent, to be 2nd Lieut. (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 19).

Officers to be 2nd Lieuts.:—Lieuts. A. G. Thomas, from Edinburgh Art.; D. N. Stuart, from West of Scotland Art.; R. S. Rothwell, from Suffolk Art.; 2nd Lieut. W. B. Duncan, from Edinburgh Art.; Lieuts. W. C. Downing, from Cornwall and Devon Miners Art.; L. M. Davies, from Lancashire Art.; 2nd Lieuts. P. Rashleigh, from Cornwall and Devon Miners Art.; C. J. Russell, from Sligo Art.; Lieuts. G. B. Greer, from Clare Art.; E. D. Douglas-Jones, from West of Scotland Art.; W. H. Barker, from Mid Ulster Art.

Claude E. L. Johnston (Univ. Cand.), to be 2nd Lieut. Gerald E. Du P. Moore and Norman C. Taylor, nominated by Authorities of Public Schools, to be 2nd Lieuts.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut. H. A. L. Hepper to be Capt., vice B. C. Johnston, promoted (Dec. 5).

Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenantcy of Gent. Cadet George B. Stoney, from R. M. Academy, which appeared in Gazette of Jan. 16, is cancelled, on account of ill-health.

REGIMENTAL DISTRICTS.

Col. G. F. Guyon, from Major-Gen. on Staff, temporarily commanding a Brigade at Aldershot, resumes appointment of Col. commanding 7th (Royal Fusiliers) and 57th (Middlesex Regt.) Regimental Districts, vice Col. E. H. Fitzherbert, vacated appointment (Dec. 1).

Col. T. E. Verner, C.B., from Major-Gen. on Staff, temporarily commanding a Brigade at Aldershot, resumes appointment of Col. commanding 10th Regimental District (Lincoln Regt.) (Dec. 1).

LINE BATTALIONS.

East Kent Regt.—Brevet Col. R. A. Hickson, Supy. Lieut.-Col., placed on half-pay (Dec. 6).

Royal Fusiliers.—Capt. G. L. B. du Maurier to be Major, vice H. Lysons, V.C., promoted into Bedford Regt. (Dec. 12).

Yorkshire Regt.—Lieut. E. A. Hosford to be Adjt., vice Capt. R. D'A. Fife, whose period of service in that appointment has expired (Dec. 16).

Lancashire Fusiliers.—Supy. Capt. O. D. Blunt to be Capt., vice W. F. Elmslie, promoted (Dec. 12).

Royal Scots Fusiliers.—Capt. A. H. Thurburn retires on retired pay.

Cheshire Regt.—Brevet Col. W. F. Curteis, Supy. Lieut.-Col. placed on half-pay (Dec. 4).

King's Own Scottish Borderers.—Name of 2nd Lieut. appointed from Royal Highlanders (Lovat's Scouts), in Gazette of Nov. 9, is James Corbet Lang, not as previously stated.

Hampshire Regt.—Capt. A. B. Ennis seconded for service as an Adjt. of Indian Volunteers (Sept. 23); promotion to Capt. of Lieut. J. H. Deane antedated to Sept. 23, vice A. B. Ennis.

Royal Highlanders.—Restoration to establishment of Supy. Lieut. F. D. Murray cancelled. Promotions to Lieut. of undermentioned 2nd Lieuts. antedated:—P. A. F. Spence to Nov. 4, 1899, to complete establishment; F. M. B. Robertson to Dec. 12, 1899, vice C. W. MacRae, promoted; S. A. Innes to Dec. 16, 1899, vice H. C. W. Berthon, died of wounds received in action. Supy. Lieut. J. D. G. Walker to be Lieut., to complete establishment (Oct. 27).

Middlesex Regt.—Lieuts. to be Capts.:—R. Heinemann, vice R. de H. Burton, promoted; C. McKey, on augmentation (Dec. 15).

North Stafford Regt.—2nd Lieut. A. S. Conway to be Lieut., vice B. B. Waddell-Dudley, deceased (June 21).

Seaforth Highlanders.—2nd Lieut. J. O. Hopkinson, appointed 2nd Lieut. in Gazette of Dec. 4, should have been described as from 8rd V.B., not from 1st V.B.

Army Service Corps.—Officers transferred as 2nd Lieuts.:—Lieuts. F. J. Reid from Royal Marines, J. A. C. Hamilton from 1st Dragoon Guards, L. G. M. Harcourt, C. E. Hills, and E. Gibb from West India Regt., J. D. Buller from Worcester Regt., A. G. Galloway from Lincoln Regt. (Oct. 2, 1899), W. Fox from Hampshire Regt. (Nov. 1, 1899). 2nd Lieuts. to be Lieuts., to complete establishment:—F. J. Reid, J. A. C. Hamilton, L. G. M. Harcourt, C. E. Hills, E. Gibb, J. D. Buller, A. G. Galloway (Oct. 2), W. Fox (Nov. 1).

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Surgs. on Probation to be Lieuts.:—Henry J. McGrigor, M.B., William R. P. Goodwin, John H. Brunskill, M.B., Arthur C. Duffey, M.D., Arthur W. Gibson, Charles D. Myles, M.B., Rochford N. Hunt, M.B., Henry E. J. A. Howley, Ralph F. M. Fawcett, William L. Steele, Hugh A. Davidson, M.B., Thomas Fincane, M.B., John W. West, M.B., William Riach, M.D., Herbert R. Bateman, Horace G. Pinches, Thomas White, James C. Kennedy, M.B., Arthur R. C. Parsons, John B. Cautley, William M. B. Sparkes, Samuel B. Smith, M.D., Eyre W. Powell, John Jones (Nov. 29).

STAFF.

Brevet Col. J. Davidson, from Lieut.-Col. half-pay, to be an A.A.G., and to have substantive rank of Col. in Army, vice Col. E. J. Courtenay, whose period of service in appointment has expired (Dec. 8).

Capt. M. C. P. Ward, R.A., to be a Staff Capt. for R.A., in succession to Major A. D. Addison, Reserve of Officers, vacated appointment (Dec. 1).

Appointments to staff of Lines of Communication made in South Africa confirmed:—Lieut.-Col. E. H. Pickwood, R.A., to be a Station Commandant, graded as an A.A.G. (Oct. 17); Capt. A. W. M. Richards, Reserve of Officers, is graded as D.A.A.G. whilst employed in Remount Dept. (March 18).

To be graded as Staff Capts.:—Capt. H. J. Mackie, Royal Canadian Field Art., whilst an Asst. Railway Transport Officer (Aug. 16); Capt. G. B. Rickards, Imperial Yeomanry, whilst Asst. Staff Officer for Colonial Forces, vice Capt. R. M. O. Glynn, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, who has vacated (Oct. 24); Lieut. C. Erie, Imperial Yeomanry, whilst performing duties of D.A.A.G., Imperial Yeomanry Base (Oct. 11).

Royal Military School of Music.—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. F. O. B. Foote, from half-pay R.A., to be Commandant, vice Lieut.-Col. and Col. F. Glennie, retired (Dec. 10).

Army Pay Dept.—To be Paymsrs.:—Capt. C. P. Greig, West India Regt. (Feb. 1); Capt. H. S. Ravenhill, Royal Scots Fusiliers (Feb. 2).

Half-Pay.—Major and Brevet Col. T. P. B. Ternan, C.M.G., D.S.O., from Royal Warwick Regt., to be Lieut.-Col.

Brevet.—Lieut.-Col. G. H. Leatham, Recruiting Staff Officer, Class I., to be Col. (Dec. 16).

MEMORANDA.

Col. W. H. Mackinnon, on vacating appointment of Col.-Commandant (Col. on staff) City of London Imperial Volunteers, placed on half-pay (Dec. 1).

Col. W. H. Mackinnon, half-pay, to be Major-Gen., vice C. Tucker, C.B., placed on Supy. List whilst retained under provisions of Article 103a Royal Warrant Oct. 26, 1900 (Dec. 6).

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. W. G. Du Boulay, half-pay R.E., retires upon retired pay.

Hon. Major A. H. Scott-White, 1st Cadet Batn. East Kent Regt., granted temp. rank of Capt. in Army whilst employed with Army Ordnance Dept.

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Glamorgan (W. Div.).—2nd Lieut. C. G. F. Leder resigns his commission.

Sligo (S. Div.).—Edward St. G. T. Irvine to be 2nd Lieut.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (MILITIA).

Royal Anglesey.—2nd Lieut. C. E. Hatchell resigns his commission.

INFANTRY.

5th Batn. Royal Warwick Regt.—Lieut. H. E. O. Bacchus resigns his commission.

6th Batn. Royal Warwick Regt.—William Beatty to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 10).

5th Batn. Royal Fusiliers.—Francis G. D. Brenes to be 2nd Lieut.

4th Batn. Norfolk Regt.—2nd Lieuts. G. de W. Cunynghame, E. N. Sneyd, C. H. Turner, P. Hamond, F. C. Finch, C. M. Nash to be Lieuts.

3rd Batn. Bedford Regt.—Lewis R. W. Loyd to be 2nd Lieut.

5th Batn. Royal Irish Regt.—Lieut. C. G. Newbery to be Capt. (Dec. 6).

3rd Batn. Yorkshire Regt.—Seconding of Capt. R. L. Aspinall for service with a Cavalry Regt. in South Africa, announced in Gazette of Aug. 10, bears date July 1, not as therein stated.

3rd Batn. Royal Scots Fusiliers.—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. R. C. Toogood resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform on retirement.

3rd Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. A. F. A. Delme-Radcliffe to be Lieut. (Dec. 8).

6th Batn. Worcester Regt.—Lieut. A. W. Agg resigns his commission.

4th Batn. East Surrey Regt.—Hugh Lancaster to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 7).

3rd Batn. Duke of Cornwall's L.I.—Supy. Capt. A. E. G. Graves to be Capt. on establishment (Dec. 6); Edward G. St. Aubyn to be 2nd Lieut. (Supy.), under para. 11 Militia Regulations.

3rd Batn. West Riding Regt.—2nd Lieuts. J. W. C. O. Glencross, S. F. Marriner, F. C. Stonor, A. C. Adams, and W. B. Goddard to be Lieuts. (Nov. 15).

4th Batn. South Stafford Regt.—Lieut. R. C. Dunn-Gardner resigns his commission (Dec. 14).

4th Batn. Oxford L.I.—Lieut. Hon. C. W. S. Douglas resigns his commission; Harry Worthington to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 12).

3rd Batn. Yorkshire L.I.—Lieut. F. Martineau to be Instr. of Musketry, vice Capt. G. C. M. Rouse, vacated appointment; Samuel S. Moore to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd Batn. Durham L.I.—Surg.-Lieut. Col. J. Munro, M.D., resigns his commission on account of ill-health, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform. 4th Batn.: Lieut. S. G. Evans resigns his commission.

3rd Batn. Highland L.I.—Capt. J. L. H. Bennett seconded for service with Remount Dept. (Nov. 20).

3rd Batn. Seaforth Highlanders.—Hugo H. Houstoun, to be 2nd Lieut. (Nov. 28).

Militia Medical Staff Corps.—Surg.-Capt. A. R. H. Oakley, from 1st V.B. Essex Regt., to be Surg.-Capt.; Capt. W. V. Sinclair, from 3rd V.B. Devon Regt., to be Surg.-Lieut.; Surg.-Lieut. W. E. M. Corbett, from 2nd V.B. Devon Regt. to be Surg.-Lieut.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Ayrshire (Earl of Carrick's Own).—William C. Gairner, to be 2nd Lieut.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

1st Aberdeen.—Lawrence J. Davidson to be 2nd Lieut. 1st Cornwall (W. Div. R.G.A.).—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. W. T. Lovering resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps. 1st Cumberland.—Lieut. J. W. Pattinson to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. F. R. Hill to be Lieut.

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR.

ROSE'S LIME JUICE WHISKY.

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the Island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO Cherry Whisky, Cherry Brandy, Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—

HUNTSMEN,
GOLFERS,
and SPORTSMEN

generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants.

Price 54s. per Case of 1 Dozen Quarts, Carriage Paid.

Bottled in Leith, Scotland. A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.,
481, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

1st Edinburgh (City).—Major P. Morison, jun., resigns his commission.

1st Gloucester.—Surg.-Major J. H. Wathen resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps.

1st Kent (E. Div. R.G.A.).—Lieut. A. Neame to be Capt. (Sept. 4).

1st Lanark.—Lieut. R. T. Osborne, from 3rd Kent (Royal Arsenal) V.A., to be Lieut. (Dec. 6); Spiers C. E. Costigane and John H. Strang to be 2nd Lieuts.

2nd Middlesex.—John Brodie, jun., to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd Northumberland (Percy) (W. Div. R.G.A.).—Lieut. W. F. Easton resigns his commission.

1st Renfrew and Dumbarton.—Capt. J. Birkmyre, jun., resigns his commission.

2nd East Riding of Yorkshire (W. Div. R.G.A.).—Major J. Travis-Cook is granted hon. rank of Lieut.-Col.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (VOLUNTEERS).

1st London.—Capt. J. E. Jones and Surg.-Capt. S. B. Dyer, M.D., resign their commissions.

1st Sussex.—2nd Lieuts. H. B. Fisher, R. M. Gloyne, W. J. M. Hughes, E. M. Marx, E. D. Stafford, F. R. Paramor, W. F. Langridge, and E. T. Young to be Lieuts.

1st West Riding of Yorkshire (Sheffield).—Qrmer. and Hon. Capt. J. W. Dewsnap resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps.

RIFLE.

6th V.B. Royal Scots.—Capt. and Hon. Major T. Rough to be Major. 8th V.B.: Capt. and Hon. Major E. Peterkin to be Major; Lieut. M. W. Henderson to be Capt. and to remain supy.; Lieut. A. P. Simpson to be Capt.

1st V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt.—Capt. and Hon. Major T. A. Clark retires under para. 111 Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn. (Dec. 19). 2nd V.B.: Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. G. Drewitt retires under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn. (Dec. 17). 3rd V.B.: Capt. E. J. Previté to be Major.

2nd V.B. Royal Lancaster Regt.—Capt. C. V. R. Wright, South Wales Borderers, to be Adjnt. on formation of batn. (Dec. 15).

1st V.B. Northumberland Fusiliers.—Lieut.-Col. Commandant and Hon. Col. B. Weddell resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.

1st V.B. Royal Warwick Regt.—Lieut.-Col. C. J. Hart is granted hon. rank of Col.

3rd V.B. Royal Fusiliers.—Capt. R. E. N. J. Seyd is seconded whilst holding appointment of Signalling Officer to West London Vol. Inf. Brigade.

2nd V.B. Liverpool Regt.—Capt. and Hon. Major W. H. Davison to be Major. Lieut. E. L. Fletcher to be Capt. 2nd Lieut. W. W. Moyers to be Lieut. (Dec. 19). 8th Scottish V.B.: Charles J. Macalister, M.D., formerly Surg.-Capt. 2nd V.B., to be Surg.-Capt. (Dec. 5). 1st Cadet Batn.: Albert B. Harris, formerly Lieut. 6th V.B. to be Hon. Capt.

3rd V.B. Lincoln Regt.—Lieut. E. Sleight and 2nd Lieut. G. V. Dove to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. H. E. U. Burke to be Lieut., and to be appointed Instr. of Musketry.

1st (Exeter and South Devon) V.B. Devon Regt.—2nd Lieut. F. J. Harvey to be Lieut.

3rd (Cambridge) V.B. Suffolk Regt.—Herbert P. Sharman to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. East Yorkshire Regt.—Cyril H. Pearce to be 2nd Lieut.

1st (Hertford) V.B. Bedford Regt.—Henry Collett, jun. and Edward M. C. Mackenzie to be 2nd Lieuts. Cadet Corps (Haileybury College) attached to 1st V.B.: Hon. C. P. H. Latham to be Capt. (July 1); Lieut. A. Trethewey, 1st V.B. to be Capt. (Dec. 19). 4th V.B.: Brevet-Col. C. Linton, retired pay, Reserve of Officers, late South Lancashire Regt., to be Lieut.-Col. and to command under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations (Dec. 4); John P. L. D. Stables, late 2nd Lieut. 1st V.B. Royal Sussex Regt. to be Capt.; Charles H. Coote and Francis N. Butler to be Capt.; John Hutchinson and William Hunnybun to be Lieuts. (Dec. 8).

1st V.B. Royal Scots Fusiliers.—Lieut. J. McCosh to be Capt.

4th V.B. Cheshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. E. Sumner to be Lieut.

3rd V.B. Royal Welsh Fusiliers.—Lieut. E. J. Owen resigns his commission.

Galloway.—2nd Lieut. A. McLauchlin to be Lieut.

1st Lanark.—James Lowson to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd Lanark.—Lieut. J. M. Webster resigns his commission.

1st V.B. Worcester Regt.—Richard P. Homfray to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. East Surrey Regt.—Brig.-Surg. Lieut.-Col. E. Pocklington resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn., vacating thereby his appointment as Senior Medical Officer to Surrey Vol. Inf. Brigade. 3rd V.B.—2nd Lieut. J. F. H. Macnamara resigns his commission; 2nd Lieut. P. Hallett to be Lieut.

2nd V.B. (West Riding) Regt.—Surg.-Lieuts. L. P. Demeriadi and H. W. Williams, M.B., to be Surg.-Capt. 3rd V.B.: Capt. W. N. Town to be Instr. of Musketry.

3rd (Cumberland) V.B. Border Regt.—Lieut. A. C. Scouler to be Capt.

Cadet Corps (Brighton College) attached to 1st V.B. Royal Sussex Regt.—Lieut. L. P. Duckworth to be Capt.

1st Cinque Ports.—Lieut. H. A. H. Claridge resigns his commission; Lieut. A. T. Howe to be Capt. and to remain supy.; Lieut. R. W. A. Jeffery, and 2nd Lieuts. H. C. Willmott and H. Stott to be Capt.; 2nd Lieuts. J. Jefferson, R. W. Stent, F. B. Rowley, and C. D. Atkinson to be Lieuts.

2nd V.B. South Stafford Regt.—Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. T. T. Fisher retires under para. 55A Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn. 3rd V.B.: Capt. C. Marston resigns his commission; William L. Jones and Percy D. Barlow to be Lieuts.

2nd V.B. Welsh Regt.—Capt. A. Sinclair is granted hon. rank of Major; Qrmer. H. A. Burgess is granted hon. rank of Capt.

3rd V.B. Essex Regt.—2nd Lieut. P. G. Lancaster resigns his commission. 4th V.B.: Lieut. J. C. Broadbridge resigns his commission.

4th (Nottingham) V.B. Derbyshire Regt.—Redmond B. Cafferata to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. Royal Berkshire Regt.—Lieuts. H. F. Goodford and E. B. Ormond to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. H. E. Tyser to be Lieut.

2nd V.B. Royal West Kent Regt.—Capt. O. B. Simpson, Royal West Kent Regt., to be Adjnt. vice Capt. A. W. Martyn, whose period of service has expired (Dec. 1).

1st V.B. Shropshire L.I.—Qrmer. H. F. Newman resigns his commission.

5th (West Middlesex).—Capt. H. J. Dixon is granted hon. rank of Major.

13th Middlesex (Queen's Westminster).—2nd Lieut. E. Hudson to be Lieut.

3rd London.—Lieut. J. A. Wilson to be Capt.

1st Cadet Batn. King's Royal Rifle Corps.—Hon. Lieut. W. D. Goaty to be Hon. Capt.

1st Wiltshire.—Erlysman C. Pinckney, late 1st V.B. Royal Berkshire Regt., to be Capt.; Frederick J. Sparks to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. Manchester Regt.—Capt. L. E. G. Bryan is granted hon. rank of Major.

2nd V.B. Durham L.I.—William Bratton to be Surg.-Lieut.

1st (Renfrew) V.B. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.—James Agnew and William Wylie to be 2nd Lieuts. (supy.). 2nd (Renfrew) V.B.—Major and Hon. Lieut.-Col. W. Shanks retires under para. 111 Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn. 4th (Stirling) V.B.: Capt. and Hon. Major C. E. Allum to be Major. 5th V.B.: William Disselduff, jun., to be 2nd Lieut.

14th Middlesex (Inns of Court).—Lieut. E. A. Manisty, late City of London Imperial Vols., to be Lieut.

15th Middlesex (Customs and Docks).—Capt. and Hon. Major C. Hart to be Major.

2nd Tower Hamlets.—Harold F. J. Nichols to be 2nd Lieut.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Dec. 19.]

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 21.

2nd Life Guards.—Lieut. Sir E. P. Stracey, Bart., resigns his commission.

5th Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. S. Harwood-Banner resigns his commission.

20th Hussars.—Capt. H. R. Lee to be Adjnt. vice Capt. A. O. Jacob, whose period of service in that appointment has expired (Dec. 21).

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

10th Batn.—Lieut. W. C. De M., Viscount Milton, resigns his commission (Sept. 15).

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

2nd Lieuts. C. M. Browne, H. L. Lewis, F. H. Bushell, and H. St. J. L. Winterbotham to be Lieuts. (Dec. 23).

GRENADIER GUARDS.

2nd Lieut. C. L. Blundell-Hollinshead-Blundell, from 3rd Batn. Royal Lancaster Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. T. T. Lord O'Hagan, deceased.

LINE BATTALIONS.

West Riding Regt.—Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. P. T. Rivett-Carnac to be Lieut.-Col., vice G. E. Lloyd, D.S.O., killed in action (Nov. 30).

Border Regt.—Sergt.-Major Frederick W. Austin to be Qrmer., with hon. rank of Lieut., vice Hon. Capt. J. King, placed on retired pay.

Hampshire Regt.—Lieut. A. A. L. Collard to be Capt., vice R. M. Barrington, placed on temp. half-pay (Sept. 28).

Dorset Regt.—2nd Lieut. R. G. B. M. Hyslop to be Lieut., vice G. F. Cardew, deceased (Nov. 17).

Derbyshire Regt.—Major H. C. Wylly to be Lieut.-Col., vice Brevet Col. H. L. Smith-Dorrien, D.S.O., removed on appointment to staff.

York and Lancaster Regt.—Capt. C. H. Kekewick to be Major, vice E. H. Hughes, deceased (Nov. 30).

Durham L.I.—Capt. C. C. Luard, on completion of his period of service as Adjnt., has vacated appointment (July 1).

Leinster Regt.—Capt. C. S. B. Evans-Lombe to be Major, vice St. J. J. St. Leger, promoted (Aug. 12).

Royal Munster Fusiliers.—2nd Lieut. H. J. C. Leland is seconded for service under Colonial Office (Nov. 24).

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 3d. each or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Bewlay & Co., Importers, 40, Strand, London, or of any respectable tobacconists.

West India Regt.—Major F. A. Liston placed on temp. half-pay on account of ill-health (Dec. 22). Officers seconded for service on West Coast of Africa:—Capt. H. D. Carleton (May 15); Capt. S. H. Hingley (June 27); Lieut. (now Capt.) F. Swabey (May 14). Lieut. A. B. O'Donnell resigns his commission (Dec. 22). Supy. Lieut. H. J. Willis to be Lieut., to complete establishment (Nov. 12); 2nd Lieut. H. A. M. Mosse to be Lieut., to complete establishment.

Royal Irish Reserve Regt.—Capt. O. C. J. Hallum to be Major, with temporary rank of Major in Army (Aug. 4).

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Lieut.-Col. G. D. N. Leake to be Col., vice N. B. Major, placed on temp. half-pay (Nov. 6).

STAFF.

Capt. F. B. Maurice, Derbyshire Regt., resumes appointment of A.D.C. to Major-Gen. Sir J. F. Maurice, K.C.B., R.A., Commanding Troops, Woolwich District (Dec. 10).

Capt. A. C. Buckle, South Stafford Regt., to be a Recruiting Staff Officer Class II., vice Major W. G. Grant, Lincoln Regt., whose period of service in appointment has expired (Dec. 13).

Grading of Lieut. G. M. Shipway, Gloucester Regt., as a Staff Lieut. whilst attached to A.S.C., Field Force, South Africa, dated July 23, which was notified in Gazette of Oct. 26, is cancelled.

Appointments to staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. H. N. Bunbury to be Director of Transport, vice Col. (local Major-Gen., Sir W. G. Nicholson, K.C.B., vacated appointment (Oct. 5). Lieut.-Col. J. W. Godfrey, King's Own Scottish Borderers, to be A.A.G., and to have local rank of Col. whilst so employed, vice Lieut.-Col. E. Hegan, vacated appointment (Oct. 5); Major R. P. Macdonald, D.S.O., Reserve of Officers, to command Railway Police, and to be graded as an A.A.G. whilst so employed (Sept. 11); Capt. A. J. Chapman, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, graded as A.A.G., and to have the local rank of Major whilst in command of the 5th Division Mounted Infantry Batn. (Aug. 11); Capt. (local Major) Sir S. H. L. Stuart, Bart., Imperial Yeomanry, to be a D.A.A.G. Imperial Yeomanry, vice Major the Hon. W. L. Bagot, Imperial Yeomanry, transferred (July 8); Major A. E. Longden, A.S.C., to be a D.A.A.G., vice Capt. H. Colquhoun, vacated (Aug. 31); Major W. H. Salmon, King's Royal Rifle Corps, to be D.A.A.G. for Intelligence (Sept. 28); Capt. A. Blair, King's Own Scottish Borderers, to be a D.A.A.G. for Intelligence, vice Major T. H. B. Forster, Reserve of Officers, resigned (Sept. 17); Major F. F. Hill, Royal Irish Fusiliers, to be a D.A.A.G., vice Lieut. R. P. Cobbold, Reserve of Officers, invalided (Sept. 7); Capt. and Brevet Major W. Campbell, Gordon Highlanders, to be D.A.A.G. at Hdqrs. (Oct. 1).

To be graded as D.A.A.G.:—Capt. E. A. Haggard, 3rd Batn. Bedford Regt. (Capt. retired pay), whilst acting as Supply Officer (April 20); Capt. H. F. Wilkinson, 3rd Batn. Royal West Surrey Regt., whilst acting as Supply Officer (Sept. 21); Capt. Q. G. K. Agnew, Royal Scots Fusiliers, whilst Town Commandant, Krugersdorp (June 24); Major S. S. Long, A.S.C., whilst Senior Transport Officer (Aug. 20); Capt. H. G. A. Garsia, A.S.C. whilst in charge of Supply Depot, Pretoria (Sept. 2); Capt. G. B. Hook, Southern Rhodesian Vols., whilst Transport Officer (March 1); Capt. H. E. Vernon, D.S.O., Rifle Brigade, whilst extra Staff Officer, 8th Brigade (July 19); Major (temp. Capt. in Army) R. Hayes-Sadler, 3rd Batn. Yorkshire L.I., whilst Commandant, Rest Camp, Pretoria (June 24); Capt. L. H. Spry, West Yorkshire Regt., whilst extra Staff Officer, 7th Brigade (Aug. 24).

Appointment of Major (now Lieut.-Col.) A. W. L. Bayly, D.S.O., I.S.C., as D.A.A.G., antedated to Dec. 2, 1899.

Lieut. A. H. Marindin, Royal Highlanders, Staff Officer, Lines of Communications, graded as D.A.A.G. whilst so employed, not as stated in Gazette of Nov. 9 (Aug. 30).

Capt. H. F. Kellie, Cheshire Regt. to be an Asst. Provost-Marshal, graded as D.A.A.G. (Sept. 29).

Capt. G. C. I. Stockwell, Highland L.I., to be a Brigade Major vice Capt. and Brevet Major W. Campbell, Gordon Highlanders (Oct. 1).

Capt. C. V. Gunning, Reserve of Officers, is graded as D.A.A.G., whilst a Remount Officer on Lines of Communications, dated July 1, not as stated in Gazette of Nov. 9.

To be graded as Staff Capt.:—Lieut. (now Capt.) B. S. Moore, A.S.C., whilst in charge of A.S.C. Supply Detail Issue Store at Pretoria (Aug. 1); Capt. C. E. Terry, 4th V.B. East Surrey Regt., whilst attached to A.S.C. for Supply duties (May 23); Lieut. F. H. Stapleton, Oxford L.I., whilst attached to Field Intelligence Dept. (Apr. 20); Lieut. J. B. C. Thomson, Somerset L.I., whilst Provost-Marshal to Major-Gen. R. FitzE. Hart's column (Aug. 4).

Officers attached to the A.S.C. graded as Staff Capt., whilst so employed, not as notified in Gazette of Nov. 2:—Lieut. A. P. Frankland, Suffolk Regt. (Aug. 15); Lieut. A. B. Lemon, Bedford Regt., from May 20 to June 10; 2nd Lieut. E. J. Norwood, Royal Irish Regt. (June 13).

To be graded as Staff Capt. whilst employed as Brigade Signalling Officers:—Lieut. (now Capt.) W. G.

MR. TRIPPEL'S ARMY CLASSES

FOR

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, SANDEURST & WOOLWICH,

AT

ONSLow HALL, RICHMOND, SURREY.

Telegraphic Address: Trippel, Richmond, Surrey.

CAPTAIN GALL, Late Northumberland Fusiliers.
AND
CAPTAIN H. C. KING, late of 6, Clifton Gardens, W.
90a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.,
Prepare Pupils for
ALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS
Individual Attention Guaranteed. Lists of Successes and Terms on Application.

Home, 6th Dragoon Guards (Dec. 1); Lieut. R. F., Earl of Wicklow, 2nd Life Guards (from Feb. 10 to April 6); Capt. C. V. Sloane-Stanley, 12th Lancers (April 7); Capt. J. Knowles, 15th Hussars (Feb. 10); Major R. Cooper, 7th Dragoon Guards (from April 6 to May 24); Lieut. F. M. Jennings, 8th Hussars (from May 25 to June 8); Lieut. N. D. H. Campbell, 7th Dragoon Guards (June 9); Capt. K. A. Macleod, West Riding Regt. (from Oct. 9, 1899, to Dec. 12, 1899); Lieut. (now Capt. A. N. E. Browne, Highland L.I. (from Dec. 13, 1899, to Feb. 11); Capt. C. E. Stewart, Royal Highlanders (April 17); Lieut. W. M. Kingston, Royal Welsh Fusiliers (Nov. 18, 1899); Lieut. R. C. Coldwell, Northampton Regt. (May 9); Capt. H. D. Milward, Worcester Regt. (Jan. 23); Capt. H. J. A. Banks, Hampshire Regt., since appointed a Div. Signalling Officer (Jan. 31); Lieut. T. W. Youngson, King's Own Scottish Borderers (April 17); Lieut. C. W. Collins, Cheshire Regt. (Feb. 9); Lieut. M. Barne, Scots Guards; Lieut. F. H. Dorling, Manchester Regt. (April 18); Lieut. C. B. Woodman, Duke of Cornwall's L.I. (from Feb. 12 to March 12); Lieut. H. G. Bryant, Shropshire L.I. (from March 13 to June 9, and from July 10 to Sept. 2); Lieut. F. F. W. Hall, Suffolk Regt. (from June 16 to July 9); Capt. H. C. Fernyhough, Yorkshire L.I. (May 14); Lieut. R. M. Daniel, British South Africa Police (June 3); Capt. A. G. E. Bingley, Royal Berkshire Regt. (July 20); Lieut. M. O. Clarke, Royal Fusiliers (from June 25 to Aug. 15); Lieut. D. Burges, Gloucester Regt. (Aug. 15); Lieut. C. M. Gibbon, Royal Irish Fusiliers (from July 15 to Oct. 15); Lieut. (now Capt.) C. P. Wyld, Coldstream Guards (Nov. 21); Capt. W. K. Legge, Essex Regt. (from Feb. 6 to Oct. 10); Lieut. J. W. Cohen, City of London Imperial Vols. (Capt. 13th Middlesex V.R.C.) (from April 27 to Sept. 29); Lieut. B. H. Mangles, Royal West Surrey Regt. (Aug. 24); Lieut. Sir T. A. A. M. Cuninghame, Bart., Rifle Brigade; Lieut. C. G. Hay, Dorset Regt. (April 18); Lieut. (now Capt.) C. R. S. Woods, South Lancashire Regt. (Jan. 30).

To be Railway Staff Officers graded as Staff Lieuts. — Lieut. (temp. Lieut. in Army) J. C. Gaskell, 3rd V.B. Welsh Regt. (Sept. 15); Lieut. A. G. N. Wood, Essex Regt. (Sept. 20); Lieut. (temp. Lieut. in Army) C. A. R. Stower, 3rd Batn. Suffolk Regt. (Sept. 22); Lieut. (temp. Lieut. in Army) H. S. Atkinson, 1st V.B. West Riding Regt. (from Aug. 31 to Oct. 10); Lieut. G. D. H. Ewart, South Lancashire Regt.; Lieut. H. K. Utterson, Dorset Regt. (July 16).

Lieut. (temp. Lieut. in Army) J. Bates, 4th V.B. Cheshire Regt., graded as Staff Lieut. whilst Crown Prosecutor, Johannesburg (June 8).

Lieut. A. Lawson, 2nd Dragoons, to be A.D.C. to Lieut.-Col. (local Brig.-Gen.) J. E. P. Gordon, Commanding a Cavalry Brigade, vice Capt. F. W. Wormald, 7th Hussars, vacated appointment (Sept. 22nd).

Capt. H. B. Jones, R.E., to be A.D.C. to Col. J. C. Barker, Commanding Eastern Lines of Communication (Sept. 24).

Capt. J. E. Gough, Rifle Brigade, to be A.D.C. to Col. (local Major-Gen.) F. Howard, C.B., C.M.G., A.D.C., to the Queen, commanding a Brigade, vice Capt. H. E. Vernon, D.S.O., Rifle Brigade (July 19).

Capt. A. W. Speyer, 4th Batn. West Yorkshire Regt., to be A.D.C. to Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. (local Major-Gen.) F. W. Kitchener, West Yorkshire Regt., commanding a Brigade, vice Capt. L. H. Spry, West Yorkshire Regt. (Aug. 24).

Capt. R. N. Harvey, R.E., to be A.D.C. to Col. (local Major-Gen.) E. Wood, C.B., Engineer-in-Chief, South Africa, vice Major (local Lieut.-Col.) R. S. Curtis, R.E. (Aug. 2).

Appointment of Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. Sir H. S. Rawlinson, Bart., Coldstream Guards, as A.A.G., ante-dated to Oct. 12, 1899.

Appointment made to Staff of China Field Force. — Lieut. V. G. W. Kell, South Stafford Regt. to be A.D.C. to Col. (local Major Gen.) A. R. F. Dorward, C.B., D.S.O., Commanding Troops at Wei-hai-Wei (July 4).

Royal Military Academy. — Capt. W. Ellershaw, R.A., to be Instr. (Nov. 30).

Brevet. — Lieut.-Col. W. R. Le G. Anderson, I.S.C., to be Col. (Oct. 1).

MEMORANDA.

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. (local Brig.-Gen.) F. W. Kitchener (West Yorkshire Regt.), granted local rank of Major-Gen., whilst commanding a Brigade, South African Field Force (Feb. 23).

Capt. J. S. Cayzer, 7th Dragoon Guards, granted local rank of Major whilst employed as Director of Signalling, Natal Field Force (since vacated) (Aug. 31).

Lieut. A. R. Mildmay, King's Royal Rifle Corps, granted local rank of Capt. whilst in command of a Company of Mounted Inf., Field Force, South Africa (June 11).

Lieut. P. J. Preece, 24th Middlesex V.R.C., granted the local rank of Capt. whilst employed with Army Post Office Corps in South Africa (Oct. 1).

Qrmr. and Hon. Lieut. G. T. East, Royal Munster Fusiliers, granted hon. rank of Capt. (Dec. 17).

Qrmr. and Hon. Lieut. E. Stephens, R.E., granted hon. rank of Capt. (Dec. 20).

Gentlemen granted local rank of Lieut. in South Africa whilst employed under Director of Transport. — F. R. McDonald, and F. G. Counock (Sept. 19).

F. L. Shepstone granted local rank of Lieut. in South Africa whilst employed as a Railway Staff Officer (Oct. 1).

Reserve of Officers. — Lieut. J. A. MacLean resigns his commission (Dec. 22).

HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY OF LONDON.

Lieut. C. F. Nesham, late City of London Imperial Vols., to be 2nd Lieut.

Harold T. Hanson and Stanford G. Hammack to be 2nd Lieuts.

MILITIA.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Cardigan (W. Div.). — Supy. Lieut. G. H. Oughterson to be Lieut. on establishment (Dec. 7).

Clare (S. Div.). — 2nd Lieut. B. Blood resigns his commission.

Dublin City (S. Div.). — Robert T. C. Cream to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 22).

Durham (W. Div.). — Major J. C. H. M. Jones resigns his commission on account of ill-health, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform.

Glamorgan (W. Div.). — Capt. J. A. FitzGibbon, R.G.A., to be Adj. vice Major E. F. Hall, R.A., vacated appointment (Dec. 13).

Yorkshire (W. Div.). — Supy. Lieut. A. W. White to be Lieut. on establishment (Dec. 10).

INFANTRY.

5th Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers. — Capt. and Hon. Major L. M. Crossman resigns his commission on account of ill-health, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform (Dec. 22); Malcolm Borwick to be 2nd Lieut. (Dec. 15).

6th Batn. Royal Warwick Regt. — Capt. M. J. de Bathe resigns his commission.

5th Batn. Royal Fusiliers. — 2nd Lieut. W. H. Machin to be Lieut. 7th Batn.: Henry G. Grist to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regt. — George A. C. Alcock, to be 2nd Lieut.

5th Batn. Lancashire Fusiliers. — Capt. W. P. Ryall resigns his commission.

4th Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. — Lieut. F. E. Thompson resigns his commission.

4th Batn. Oxford L.I. — 2nd Lieut. F. R. Bulkeley to be Lieut. (Dec. 12).

3rd Batn. Northampton Regt. — Lieut.-Col. Commandant and Hon. Col. S. G. Stopford Sackville retires from command, under para. 77 Militia Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.

ARTILLERY.

2nd Devon (W. Div. R.G.A.). — S. J. Fowler and J. Willoughby, jun., to be Capt.

1st Dorset (S. Div. R.G.A.). — Montague J. Raymond to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd Durham (W. Div., R.G.A.). — Lieut. A. J. Brown to be Capt.

1st Lanark. — Capt. A. D. Cuthbert resigns his commission.

4th Lancashire. — Surg.-Capt. J. C. M. Given, M.D., resigns his commission.

8th Lancashire. — Francis B. Kirby to be 2nd Lieut.

Tynemouth (W. Div., R.G.A.). — Lieut. J. A. Wait to be Capt.

ROYAL ENGINEERS (VOLUNTEERS).

2nd Gloucester (Bristol). — 2nd Lieuts. H. B. Mayor and E. Gardiner to be Lieuts.

East London (Tower Hamlets). — Major R. Norman resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps.

RIFLE.

Queen's R.V. Brigade, Royal Scots. — Andrew H. Watt, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut. 8th V.B.: William A. S. Duncan to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. Royal West Surrey Regt. — Stuart Spurling to be 2nd Lieut.

2nd V.B. Royal Warwick Regt. — Arthur Lazenby and Gerald H. Robinson to be 2nd Lieuts. Cadet Corps (Rugby School) attached to 2nd V.B.: Rev. Frederick F. S. Williams to be 2nd Lieut.

3rd V.B. Royal Fusiliers. — Lieut. G. A. Child, and 2nd Lieuts. C. T. Innes-Baillie, and H. F. Sleep resign their commissions.

8th (Scottish) V.B. Liverpool Regt. — David A. Bingham to be Capt. (Dec. 13); James M. Irvine (Dec. 11) and George A. Blair (Dec. 22), to be 2nd Lieuts; William S. Henderson, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut. (Dec. 13).

2nd V.B. Norfolk Regt. — Lieut. W. J. Crampton resigns his commission.

3rd (Cambridge) V.B. Suffolk Regt. — Lieut. E. Stanley resigns his commission.

1st V.B. Prince Albert's Somerset L.I. — 2nd Lieut. J. H. Cadogan resigns his commission. Cadet Corps (King Edward's School, Bath) attached to 1st V.B.: Lieut. C. King Mason to be Capt.

1st V.B. Lancashire Fusiliers. — Capt. and Hon. Major J. Isherwood to be Major; Lieut. F. A. Woodcock to be Capt. and to remain supy.; Lieut. J. S. Webb to be Capt.

5th V.B. Cheshire Regt. — Capt. and Hon. Major G. Backhouse retires under para. 111 Volunteer Regulations, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of batn.

3rd Lanark. — Lieut.-Col. Commandant H. Morton resigns his commission, and is granted hon. rank of Col., with permission to wear uniform of corps (Dec. 20).

3rd V.B. Gloucester Regt. — Capt. E. P. Clark (Hon. Lieut.-Col., late Militia) to be Major (Dec. 17); Lieut. J. M. Guttridge (Dec. 17), H. F. Briggs (Dec. 18), and T. J. Moss-Flower (Dec. 19) to be Capt.; 2nd Lieut. D. C. St. G. McClellan to be Lieut. (Dec. 17).

1st V.B. East Lancashire Regt. — Arthur Foster, M.D., to be Surg.-Lieut.

4th V.B. East Surrey Regt. — 2nd Lieut. J. L. F. Blood resigns his commission.

1st V.B. South Stafford Regt. — Henry R. Souttar to be 2nd Lieut.

1st V.B. Dorset Regt. — Surg.-Lieut. A. Emson to be Surg.-Capt.

1st (Pembroke) V.B. Welsh Regt. — Capt. W. Griffith resigns his commission. 2nd V.B.: Thomas J. David to be 2nd Lieut.

1st (Oxford Univ.) V.B. Oxford L.I. — Henry Cothall to be Qrmr. (Dec. 9). 4th (Eton College) V.B.: Major A. A. Somerville to be Major Commandant, under para. 65a Volunteer Regulations.

1st V.B. Northampton Regt. — Evelyn W. Jackson to be 2nd Lieut.

17th (North) Middlesex. — 2nd Lieut. H. T. Adams to be Lieut.

13th Middlesex (Queen's Westminster). — Arthur C. G. Smith and Reginald F. Davern to be 2nd Lieuts.

1st Cadet Batn. King's Royal Rifle Corps. — Hon. Lieut. V. L. Burnside to be Hon. Capt.; Hon. 2nd Lieut. H. S. Davies to be Hon. Lieut.

1st Wilts. — Lieut.-Col. R. G. W. Chaloner granted hon. rank of Col.

1st (Renfrew) V.B. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. — Claud W. Marshall, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut.

15th Middlesex (Customs and Docks). — Lieut. C. H. Seabrooke to be Capt.; John J. Smith, to be 2nd Lieut.

1st Tower Hamlets. — Lieut.-Col. and Hon. Col. H. Coningham resigns his commission, with permission to retain his rank and wear uniform of corps.

VOLUNTEER MEDICAL STAFF CORPS.

Aberdeen Company. — Arthur H. Lister, M.B., to be Surg.-Lieut. (Supy.).

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Dec. 22.]

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

OVERALLS A SPECIALITY.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

The Navy.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 15.
Acting Sub-Lieuts. N. A. Marshall and C. W. J. Howard confirmed in rank of Sub-Lieut.
Royal Naval Reserve.—Midshipman J. A. Phenix to be Sub-Lieut. (Dec. 13).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 17.
Rev. Henry E. Roberts, B.A., appointed Chaplain (Dec. 27).
Gunnery Benjamin Cook (Nov. 19) and George Hackney (Nov. 30) promoted to Chief Gunners.
Royal Naval Reserve.—Lieut. M. W. C. Hepworth placed on retired list, at his own request, with rank of Commander (Dec. 12). Acting Sub-Lieut. T. W. Bennett confirmed in rank of Sub-Lieut. (June 8).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 18.
Royal Naval Reserve.—Asst.-Engr. L. F. Payne to be Engr. (Dec. 10).

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 18.
Sub-Lieut. R. H. Waring promoted to Lieut. (Sept. 15).

Proby. Lieut. G. Threlfell confirmed as Lieut. on Supplementary List, with seniority of Oct. 1, 1898.
In accordance with Order in Council of June 29, Engr. W. C. Morcom placed on retired list of his rank (Nov. 29).
Rev. Connop C. FitzH. Miles, B.A., appointed Chaplain (Dec. 28).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 19.
Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lieut. R. A. Norris to be Lieut. (Dec. 15).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 14
Commander.—The Hon. S. Hawke to Anson (undated).
Lieutenants.—A. W. Lewis to Hood; R. F. Thorn to Colossus (Dec. 14).
Sub-Lieut. R.N.R.—R. W. Steavenson to Victorious, as (Acting) Lieutenant for twelve months' service (Nov. 13).
Staff-Engineer.—F. H. Dart to Blenheim (Jan. 1).
Engineers.—W. H. Murray to Blenheim; J. Thomson to Raven (Jan. 1).
Assistant-Engineers.—S. U. Hardcastle temp.; G. Moore to Blenheim (Jan. 1).
Probationary Assistant-Engineers.—F. W. Bromley, G. R. Macey to Blenheim (Jan. 1).

Staff-Surgeon.—J. H. Acheson to Anson (undated).
Surgeons.—H. C. Adams, W. E. Gribbell, H. V. Wells to Vivid; L. Lindop, J. Whelan, J. Verdon to Duke of Wellington, all for disposal (Jan. 19).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 15.
Engineers.—O. A. Morris to Pembroke for Mallard; H. R. Batchelor to Pembroke for Salmon (Dec. 5).
Appointments of Staff Surg. J. H. Acheson and Surg. R. B. Ainsworth to Anson cancelled.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 17.
Lieutenants.—H. F. J. Rowley to Pembroke for Amphitrite (N.); R. P. Clutton (1st and G.), S. B. Norfolk (N.), H. G. Duff, R. G. Rowley-Conwy, F. P. Norman to Blenheim (Jan. 1); J. F. H. Cole to Colossus (Dec. 15).
Sub-Lieutenants.—G. L. Parnell to Blenheim (Jan. 1); A. P. le C. Faught to Severn for Circe (Dec. 15).
Midshipmen.—G. Corlett, R. H. O. Lane-Poole, G. L. D. Gibbs, H. D. Hamilton, E. G. de S. Jukes-Hughes, W. C. Pearce, W. Burrows, G. C. Harrison, C. B. M. McK. Pringle, S. R. Smyth, J. H. K. Clegg to Blenheim (Jan. 1).
Fleet-Paymaster.—W. B. Autridge to Anson when commissioned.
Assistant Paymasters.—R. A. Jenkins to Anson when commissioned (undated); A. T. Babb to Hyacinth; C.

APSLEY FELLATT & CO.,
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing
Cross, London, W.C.
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA
MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

ARMY AND NAVY CLUB.

The COMMITTEE, in accordance with Rule 33, hereby call an EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of the Members for MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1901, at 2 p.m., to consider the question of entertaining Field-Marshal Right Hon. Lord ROBERTS, V.C., K.P., at dinner on his return.

GILBERT JNO. SMALLPEICE,
Manager and Secretary.

BRIGHTON.—PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENT (as homelike as possible) for those requiring Medical, Surgical, and Nursing care. Medical baths, packs, massage, electricity. Own doctor can attend if wished, or their treatment carried out. Close to sea, overlooking private grounds. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO COMFORT, NURSING, DIET. For Terms address, Medical Sup., Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

FIRST-CLASS OPENING for a YOUNG GENTLEMAN who may have failed in his Army Examination.—Address, 080, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

INVALID or CONVALESCENT OFFICERS received at The Bournemouth Hydro. Airy site overlooking Sea. Sea-water, Turkish Baths, Massage, Billiards, Gymnasium, Resident Physician.—Apply Secretary.

LEAMINGTON.—Large House suitable for Bachelors wishing to Hunt, or for retired Indian Officer with family. Near station. Four large reception, nine bedrooms, two bath-rooms, good offices and kitchens. For Sale or to Let.—Apply, Dakeyne, Clarendon Square, Leamington.

ROYAL CAMBRIDGE ASYLUM FOR SOLDIERS' WIDOWS.

For widows of soldiers who have served not less than 14 years and married with leave while serving. Comfortable home with large garden. Furnished room for each inmate, 7s. a week, and coat allowance. Number in Asylum 71. Election by subscribers.

COMMITTEE APPEAL for more SUBSCRIPTIONS to meet current expenses.
For particulars apply to Secretary, 5, York Street, St. James Square, S.W.

STONE, near Greenhithe, Kent.—To be LET, for a period of three or five years, with or without meadow land, a desirable newly-decorated HOUSE, with nine bed-rooms and two dressing-rooms, four sitting-rooms, with fine conservatory and greenhouses, and three acres of pleasure and kitchen garden. Rent, partly furnished, £250 per annum; rent, unfurnished, £120 per annum. Additional meadow land at moderate rent per acre.—Apply to Messrs. Gamlen, Burdett and Gamlen, 3, Gray's Inn Square, London, W.C.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN OF GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, grooms, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employons, London."

YEOMANRY PLATES.—A complete set of Yeomanry Plates, together with a copy of the "Imperial Yeomanry" Type, making 33 in all, will be sent carriage paid on receipt of P.O.O. for 12s. 6d., to any address in the United Kingdom. "Army and Navy Gazette," 3, York Street, London, W.C.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE BOER WAR.

Officers and Privates having good photographs of the above are invited to send them, with terms, to Publisher, care of RADFORD & PERRISS,
5, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES, BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.

The Warehouses, having been built expressly for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities.

JOHN HANES, Manager.
Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

REVERSIONS AND LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the

EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED.
10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand
Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA, QUEENSLAND, BURMAH, PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.

BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to CALCUTTA. MADRAS. COLOMBO. RANGOON. MAURITIUS. BOMBAY. KURRACHEE. BAGDAD.
ZANZIBAR. MOMBASSA. BRISBANE. BATAVIA. ROCKHAMPTON. TOWNSVILLE. MARYBOROUGH.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH, EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.
Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House, Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dock House, Billiter Street, E.C.

CLEVEDON HYDRO.

FULLY LICENSED RESIDENTIAL HOTEL. COMFORTABLE WINTER HEALTH RESORT. Reduced Terms to Invalids from the Front. Bright, Cheerful, Homelike. Well Warmed and Ventilated. Turkish, Electric and other Baths. MASSAGE AND ELECTRO MASSAGE. Special arrangements and amusements for the Xmas Holidays.
Climate mild, equable and bracing.
SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.

The Indian Army.

The Publisher of the "Army and Navy Gazette" begs to announce that, beginning on January 5, 1901, EIGHT Coloured Military Types of the INDIAN ARMY will be issued Monthly as Supplements to this Paper.

ORDERS for the series to be sent as Published, i.e., on the first weeks of each month from January to August, should be forwarded at once, accompanied by Money Order for (Inland) 4s. 4d., or (India and Abroad) 5s., made payable to the PUBLISHER.

Full particulars and list of Plates will be sent post free on application.

"Army and Navy Gazette" Offices, 3, York St., Covent Garden, London, W.

Publications.

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Instruction, and Examinations.
5th EDITION.

OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIDE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memos, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Block. Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.

By LIEUT.-COL E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.
For Lectures and Study.

3rd EDITION.
OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS
Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables. Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

WM. CLOWES AND SONS, 13, Charing Cross, S.W., & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, &c.
Of whom Refill-Books, and Blocks may be had.
Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED. TACTICS OF TO-DAY.

BY MAJOR C. E. CALLWELL, R.A.
Author of "The Effect of Maritime Command on Land Campaigns since Waterloo." Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE.

Price Two Shillings.
CONTENTS—866, JANUARY.

Notes on the Evolution of Cavalry. Lieut. Col. F. N. MAUDE.
Naval Economics. L. G. CARR LAUGHTON.
The Armoured Cruiser. A Compromise Vessel. B. W. LEES.
Cyprus for German East Africa. A Fair Exchange. OAKLEAF.
Strategic Devastation. T. MILLER MAGUIRE, M.A., LL.D.
The Bay of Gibraltar. A Spanish Scheme for its Fortification. SCOUT.
The New Magnanimity. C. DE THIERRY.
The Chinese Crisis.—Was it Foreseen? Commander HON. HENRY N. SHORR, R.N.
Frederick the Great.—V. The Second Part of the Campaign of 1757. Rosbach and Leuthen. WILLIAM O'CONNOR MORRIS.
Cavalry Training. Major J. M. MACARTNEY.
Sundries.
Letters to the Editor.—Obligatory Military Service.

London: WM. CLOWES & SONS, Limited,
13, Charing Cross, S.W.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA, SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate.
Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd. Batn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms.—P. M. C. 2nd Wiltshire Regiment. Au. ust. 1896."

Watch and Clock Makers.

"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discography and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D. D.I.H., R.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.

RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

HART AND SON, 60, Artillery Place, Woolwich, (Established 100 Years), has FOR SALE Nearly New

REGULATION UNIFORMS for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices.
Gold and Silver Dress BELTS, SABRETACHES, and SASHES for Sale or on Hire.
All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver Lace, &c., bought for cash.

BIBBY LINE

TO MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMBO, RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA (via Tuticorin).

Tous. Liverpool, Marseilles.
SHROPSHIRE* 5789 Jan. 10 Jan. 17.
STAFFORDSHIRE* 6005 Jan. 24 Jan. 31
CHESHIRE* 5775 Feb. 7 Feb. 14

Those marked * are twin-screw steamers. These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.

Every possible comfort for first class passengers only. This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burmah, as passengers via Marseilles are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,
26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and
10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.
ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,
138, Leadenhall Street, London.
C. HOWARD & SONS,
45, Lendenhall Street, E.C.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS, ARMS, CREST, and ADDRESS

DIES Engraved as Gems, from original and artistic designs.

NOTE PAPER and ENVELOPES brilliantly illuminated by hand in gold, silver, bronze, and colours.

BEST RELIEF STAMPING,

any colour, 1s. per 100.
HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.

All the New and Fashionable Note Papers, BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS OF FARE, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, INVITATIONS and BOOK PLATES, REGIMENTAL BAND CARDS.

A VISITING CARD PLATE elegantly engraved and 100 CARDS printed for 4s. 6d.

RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

A. Underwood to Canopus; W. A. Brown to Camperdown (Dec. 15).

Surgeons.—J. M. H. Conway, A. J. Sheldon, C. R. Rickard to Wildfire (Jan. 19).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 19.

Captain.—C. H. Dare to Pembroke for service in new auxiliary ship now fitting (Dec. 14).

Lieutenant.—C. A. Fulcher to Northampton for Cleopatra (N.) (Dec. 19).

Sub-Lieutenant.—N. A. Marshall to Royal Oak for Dragon (Dec. 19).

Midshipmen.—G. F. Cholmley, W. W. Hallwright to Niobe (Dec. 19); A. B. Cunningham to Hannibal (Dec. 15); Lord G. F. Seymour to Hannibal (Jan. 7); A. St V. Keys to Blenheim (Jan. 1).

Fleet Engineer.—R. C. Moon to Anson when commissioned (undated).

Staff Engineer.—J. A. H. Hicks to Pembroke for Rodney (undated).

Fleet Surgeons.—J. O. B. Williams, M.D., to Royal Marines, Plymouth, R. Bentham to Magnificent (Jan. 1); E. Ferguson to Anson on commissioning (undated); Surg. J. T. M. McDougall to Anson on commissioning (undated).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 20.

Captain.—H. N. Dudding to Severn (Jan. 1).

Lieutenants.—L. Hulsey (1st), N. B. Youell (N.), F. R. M. White (G.), J. H. Janes, J. C. Powles, D. F. Murray (undated), H. W. Broadbent (R.N.E.) to Excellent (G.), R. L. Daniel (R.N.R.), H. T. M. Watkins, G. O. B. Elliott (R.N.R.), acting to Cambridge and Defiance for short course G. and T.; A. J. May (R.N.E.), acting to Anson, to complete second period, 12 months' service (undated); G. F. G. M'Combie, L. W. Pooley, F. W. N. Higgins (R.N.R.) acting to Excellent and Vernon, short courses G. and T., commencing Jan. 3 (Jan. 2).

Sub-Lieutenants (R.N.R.).—D. Fulton to Excellent and Vernon, for short course G. and T.; S. B. Graves, E. C. Roden (acting) to Cambridge and Defiance for short course G. and T., both commencing Jan. 3 (Jan. 2).

Surgeons.—J. H. Fergusson to Ramillies; R. B. Ainsworth to Hannibal (Dec. 20).

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.45, and Saturday mornings at 2.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

THE War Office will be closed from to-day until Thursday morning next.

THE 17th Bombay Infantry has been celebrating its Centenary at Poona, it having been raised in December, 1800.

THE rules as to the voluntary retirement of officers have been relaxed, and there are now permitted exceptions in the case of officers of regiments on active service in South Africa and China.

THE Treasury has fixed the rate for the issue of the dollar at Hong Kong, the Straits Settlements, and on the Chinese station at 2s. This rate is fixed for regulating the payments which would be made in England in sterling.

THE Secretary of State for War, having telegraphed to Lord Kitchener the substance of a charge brought by Mr. Bryn Roberts, M.P., on Saturday last in the House of Commons against the discipline of the Australian troops in South Africa and requested a report, has received the following telegram in reply:—"The report you allude to regarding the Australian troops is absolutely without foundation."
—KITCHENER.

THE "SCOUT" PUTTIE . . LEGGING

(Clarke's Patent, 1914-1899.)
SUPERSEDE ALL OTHERS

The Best, Simplest and most Effective Article in the market.

FOR MILITARY AND SPORTING PURPOSES THEY ARE UNEQUALLED.

No loops used. Straps are self-adjusting. Inside portion of calf is smooth for saddle.

Price 25s. per pair

Best blocked pigskin.

Descriptive particulars on application to Patentee—

Thomas H. Clarke, Military Boot Maker, Fermoy, Co. Cork.

AN IDEAL CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

EVERITT'S PATENT Trousers Press and Stretcher. SIMPLE. EFFECTIVE. PORTABLE.

It is made in highly polished mahogany, with nickel plated fittings, thus making an elegant and necessary article for a gentleman's dressing room.

PRICE 25s.

Will take from One to Eight pairs of Trousers, and any pair can be removed without disarranging the remainder. To be obtained of all High Class Tailors, and the Stores, or direct from THE PATENTEE,

HARRY EVERITT, Tailor, 14, Maddox St, Regent St., London, W.

A REVOLUTION IN FURNISHING BY MONTHLY PAYMENTS

WHAT IS NORMAN AND STACEY'S PLAN of Furnishing?

It is a clever scheme, now known and adopted in all parts of the English-speaking world, which enables you to furnish your House or Flat throughout, from Drawing Room to Kitchen (even to the extent of Linens, Silver, Cutlery, Blinds, etc.), out of income, without disturbing your Capital by (instead of paying Cash) dividing the whole amount into 6, 12, 24, or 36 equal monthly payments. During the above-mentioned period you can, of course, at any time (should you wish it) pay off the amount and avail yourself of the cash discount.

NORMAN & STACEY, LD.,

118, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.
Moderate Prices. Free Delivery Town or Country. Call and view Stock before furnishing locally, and compare Quality and Prices with those of other firms.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE), QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE. Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff. Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS. For Tariff, address MANAGER.

Regimental Badges.

SOME OF THE REGIMENTS KEPT IN STOCK.
CAP BADGE.

10TH HUSSARS.

21st Lancers.
South Lancashire.
Royal Dublin Fusiliers.
13th Hussars.
Munster Fusiliers.
Essex Regiment.
Grenadier Guards.
Royal Irish Fusiliers.
Seaford Highlanders.
Cheshire Regiment.
Yorkshire Light Infantry.
Royal Army Medical Corps.
Scots Greys.
Rifle Brigade.

17th Lancers.
15th Hussars.
Leinster Regiment.
Coldstream Guards.
Royal Scots Fusiliers.
Northumberland Fusiliers.
Royal Fusiliers.
Loyal N. Lancashire.
9th Lancers.
19th Hussars.
Lancashire Fusiliers.
Royal Malta Artillery.
Royal Malta Militia.
Royal Scots.

King's Royal Rifles.
Scots Guards.
Connaught Rangers.
Duke of Cornwall's L.I.
Cameronians.
York and Lancaster.
Berkshire.
North Stafford.
King's Own Scottish Borders.
Royal West Surrey.
Army Pay Corps.
Worcester Regiment.
Army Ordnance Corps.
Manchester Regiment.

Liverpool Regiment.
Derbyshire.
Lancaster (old pattern).
Bedford Regiment.
Norfolk Regiment.
Leicestershire Regiment.
Black Watch.
Sussex.
Royal Reserves.
R. R. Lancers.
" Dragoons.
" Hussars.

GORDON HIGHLANDERS.

Royal Berkshire Regt.
West Riding Regiment.
Norfolk Regiment.
Scots Greys.
Cameron Highlanders.
North Stafford.

Royal W. Surrey Regiment.
10th Hussars.
The Buffs.
R. Inniskilling Fusiliers.
Gordon Highlanders.
R. Army Medical Corps.

A. & S. Highlanders.
Middlesex.
W. Kent.
Worcester.
Royal Irish Fusiliers.
Army Service Corps.

Army Ordnance Corps.
Derbyshire Regiment.
D.C.L.I.
R. R. Lancers.
" Dragoons.
" Hussars.

F. S. HELMET BADGE.

Royal Engineers.

Grenadier Guards.

Any of the above Cap Badges, 6d. each, post free; Collar Badges, 4d. each, postage 1d. extra. All kinds kept in stock. Write which regiment you require. Medal Ribbons of all Wars, including S. Africa, 1900, one penny per inch; postage, one penny extra.

Address—F. ROBERTS, 3, CAMDEN GROVE, PECKHAM, S.E.

Educational.

War Office, Dec. 13, 1900.

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Fantaloons,
Polo Breeches.

11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.
F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.

Established over 80 Years
EMIGRATION TO CANADA.

Canada offers great advantages to settlers, including free grants of 160 acres of land and improved farms at reasonable prices. Fine climate, no rent, light taxes, free schools, good markets, rapidly developing industries, and large import and export trade. Pamphlets, maps, and full particulars (supplied post free), may be obtained from the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria Street, London, S.W., or from the Allan, Dominion and Elder Dempster Steamship Companies, or their Local Agents, or the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.
Write for particulars.

THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.
LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C.,
and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.
DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.
ASSURANCES AND LOANS
can be effected by
MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS
in Government Service,
on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business
Annual Revenue exceeds £1,100,000
Bonus Additions Declared exceed £6,750,000
Accumulated Funds exceed £8,400,000
Claims Paid exceed £17,000,000

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and
VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete,
and single Articles in condition equal to New
at one-third original cost.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD.
E. WHISTLER,
11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND
BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.
Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S
The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach,
Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations,
Bilious Affections.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA
The Physician's Cure for Gout, Rheumatic Gout and Gravel; the safest and most gentle Medicine for Infants, Children, Delicate Females, and the Sickness of Pregnancy.

MAGNESIA
Sold Throughout the World.
N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

MOHAWKS
ALWAYS TO THE FRONT

Art List Free.

Prices from £11.

SPECIAL TERMS TO THE ARMY, NAVY, AND VOLUNTEERS.

Address: Chalk Farm Road, London, N.W. Wires: "UNBEATEN."

UNBEATEN.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,
Naval and Military Outfitters,
WEST END BRANCH—
19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.
Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard. Telegraphic Address—
Do. Do. 5810 Avenue. "Realistic, LONDON."
New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements
(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)
BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.
REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.
Infantry, 35s. 6d. Cavalry, 38s. 6d.
ON APPROVAL.

ALL BUT NEW
OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,
for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of

LEWIS MOSES,
65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,
at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms and apparel purchased.

ARMY ALTERATIONS
Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly
to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various
Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date.
Subscription—5s. 6d. per annum, post free.
One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.
ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE.
With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Cor-
recting, 1s. per month, including Alterations.
BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer,
Ashton-under-Lyne.

SECOND-HAND
UNIFORMS
BOUGHT AND SOLD.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UNI-
FORMS in all conditions at from one-fifth
original cost, or sells the same on commission.
Mufti clothing also purchased.

RICHARD DICKESON
AND COMPANY,
WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND
PROVISION IMPORTERS,
LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, Mansell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVER: Market Lane and Queen Street,
AIDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street, PLY-
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse, PEM-
BROKE DOCK: Tremeryck Street, GIBRA-
LTA: City Mill Lane, CAPE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street, PORT ELIZABETH:
Lenkita Warehouses, Rufane Vale. DURBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street. Agencies at
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c., &c.
Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire.
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price Lists
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Canteen
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST
SOCIETY, Ltd.
24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.
Established 1853.

Chairman—C. B. RIVINGTON, Esq., J.P., D.L.
Paid-up Capital £240,000
Debentures and Debiture Stock £207,250
REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.
W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.
SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE
INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL
INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED
FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL,
S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.
ESTABLISHED 1803.
Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.
Paid-up Capital, £900,000.
Invested Funds over £1,500,000.
E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

BLAND & SONS
"EUOPLIA"
BALL AND SHOT GUN.

A WEAPON OF PRECISION
Shooting Conical bullets up to 100 yards with the accuracy of any rifle; and shot with the pattern
and penetration of a shot gun.
In 12, 16 and 20 Bore. Weight of 12 Bore
about 7 lbs.

AS SUPPLIED TO
H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,
Whose Expedition to the North Pole
WAS ENTIRELY EQUIPPED WITH ARMS
AND AMMUNITION BY THIS FIRM.

And also to
"THE SOUTHERN CROSS" ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION,
led by
C. E. BORCHGREVINK, Esq.

T. BLAND & SONS,
2, King William St., Strand, W.C.
(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)
Works: 41, 42, & 43, Whittall St., Birmingham.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS
EPPS'S
GRATEFUL-COMFORTING
COCOA
BREAKFAST-SUPPER

MOUSELL BROS.,
FURNITURE REMOVERS
AND STORERS,
Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, S.W.
AND WILKINSON GREEN, FULHAM.
BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT
BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.
LEAMINGTON.—Windor Street.
MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.
LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.
LIVERPOOL.—Bronte Street, Russell Street.
EXETER.—London Inn Square.
GLOUCESTER.—Depository and Van and Wagon
Works, Commercial Road.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

No. 2136.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1900.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. } PRICE 6D.
AS A NEWSPAPER. } POSTAGE EXTRA.

Contents of the Number.

Leaders—		PAGE
Sir Henry Colville - - - - -		1253
Honour to whom Honour - - - - -		1253
The Invaded Colony - - - - -		1254
Public Schools and Military Education - - - - -		1254
The "Royal Fleet Reserve" - - - - -		1264
Editorial Notes—
Army Notes - - - - -		1255
Army Personal - - - - -		1257
Army Foreign - - - - -		1259
Navy Notes - - - - -		1265
Navy Personal - - - - -		1267
Navy Foreign - - - - -		1268
Letter to the Editor—
Militia Competitive Examination - - - - -		1260
A Memorial to the Fallen - - - - -		1269
Articles—
Field-Marshal Count Von Blumenthal - - - - -		1256
War Summary - - - - -		1258
Press Views and Opinions on Army Matters - - - - -		1259
Casualties in South Africa - - - - -		1268
Royal Military Academy - - - - -		1269
Retirements, &c., 1901 - - - - -		1270
Promotion Examination - - - - -		1271
The Royal Regiment of Artillery - - - - -		1271
Reviews - - - - -		1272
The Gazette—
Army - - - - -		1272
Navy - - - - -		1269
Regimental Intelligence - - - - -		1261
Obituary - - - - -		1260
Naval Intelligence - - - - -		1274

SIR HENRY COLVILLE.

ALL London was startled yesterday by the abrupt and unexpected announcement that Sir Henry Colville had been called upon to resign his command of the Infantry Brigade at Gibraltar. It will be remembered that he resumed this appointment after his return from South Africa. The reasons which led to his leaving the front were never made public, but it was patent that something more than the breaking up of his Division had occasioned it. The disaster at Lindley was then fresh in every mind, and the chief blame having been visited upon Colville it was generally agreed that he had suffered in consequence. His responsibility for the Lindley surrender was never very clearly established, however, not at least to the scantily informed public. Even now we do not know whether there were not other contributory causes. At this later date we have other stories, the common talk of officers and correspondents, that Sir Henry Colville erred in worse affairs than Lindley, as that, for instance, he was too slow to move to Broadwood's relief, and that but for him the Waterworks might have been saved. We are told, too, that he was much dissatisfied and discontented at the favour shown to some of his juniors; that, in fact, he sulked like Achilles in his tent, and that he was more or less a thorn in the side of the Field-Marshal-in-Chief.

These are matters that are now likely to be fully elucidated; nay, they must be made plain in the interest of the public service, or we shall lose all confidence in the wisdom and judgment of the military authorities. What we must know is why different measure is meted out to a man within a few months. Either Sir Henry Colville was to blame, or he was not. If he failed in his duty, then he should not have been sent back to his old command at Gibraltar. That view clearly was not the one adopted, for he suffered no such penalty. Why is he now arraigned, afresh, so to speak, after what amounts to a verdict of acquittal, or what the French call non lieu? Nothing less than an open inquiry can solve this still inscrutable problem.

HONOUR TO WHOM HONOUR.

IT is generally known, although no official announcement has as yet been made, that a special pension will be awarded to Lord Wolseley, not as personal to himself, but as a new rule for all outgoing Commanders-in-Chief. The amount is fixed at £2,000 per annum; no extravagant liberality after all, seeing that most officers who hold the post will, as a general thing, be of the rank of Field-Marshal, and, as such, entitled to a pension of £1,300 a year. It would be almost equally certain that he would be in the receipt of a distinguished service reward of £100, so that the increase given will not amount, as a rule, to more than £600. Nowadays, too, since the abolition of the lucrative full colonelcies that carried the dignity of a gold stick, the senior officers of the Army have been mulcted in many emoluments which would have otherwise offered some compensations for a niggardly grant. In Lord Wolseley's case there was abundant reason for special consideration. On the occasion of his recent retirement we adverted in the strongest terms to the many and great services which Lord Wolseley has rendered to this country. These are written large in the page of history, and all who run may read. But he has other even greater claims to the national gratitude in respect of what he has done so strenuously, yet unobtrusively, within the last year. Hardly a word has been said for the man who was unhappily denied the brilliant part of gaining new laurels in the field, but who toiled incessantly and most successfully in making continuous operations possible. When public clamour, warped and unreasoning as ever, condemns the War Office as an effete and useless organisation, it takes no account of the work done there by the whole hierarchy, and especially by Lord Wolseley. We need not go back to that triumphant vindication of the scheme for mobilising reserves which he planned and saw perfected by his chosen staff. That great item has been placed to his credit, although in none too liberal terms. It was in other less ostentatious measures that his quality was shown: in dealing with current business, in meeting the huge, abnormal, ceaseless demands for the sinews of war that came in day after day and were always so amply and ungrudgingly honoured. We have but to consider what were the needs of the army at the front—needs so regularly supplied to realise this.

Some figures given by a contemporary are worth quoting in amplification. Before Pretoria was reached no less than a hundred and seventy millions of small arm ammunition had been despatched to South Africa, and half a million cartridges (various) for the artillery, as well as 175,000 horses and mules, 300,000 drab or khaki suits, 370,000 pairs of boots, 420,000 blankets, harness, camp equipage, tents, jerseys, flannel belts—all in bewildering proportions. The food supply has been even more colossal, and the multiform nature of the modern Army rations has greatly complicated the task. Some eight million tons of meat, bacon, Maconochie rations, groceries, compressed vegetables, and so forth had been sent out to the same date, and, speaking more in detail, there were twenty million pounds of preserved meat, twenty-seven million of biscuits, a million and a half of tobacco, and so on, and so on. Forage has run to seventy-nine million of tons from English ports alone. The supply of stores, munitions de guerre, and munitions de bouche has been nearly unlimited, and the machinery by which delivered at six thousand miles distance has never suffered from breakdown or even temporary hitch. The governing spirit, the energetic central power that has given the first impulse, has been Lord Wolseley. Immense credit, of course, is due to the active agents and subordinates who have worked out details, but they were always under the supreme authority, which often gave the initiative, always advised, controlled and carried through. The same is true, and to a still greater degree, as regards the provision of personnel, the much-needed reinforcements that were poured forth in an endless stream—men and officers the best that could be found. We have already been at some pains in a series of papers to justify the selections made for commands and staff employment, and have borne witness to the general wisdom and undoubted care exhibited in seeking out and utilising the best material available. There must be flaws, of course, in every human institution, and none is more liable to error than the estimate men form of each other. But, on the whole, it has been proved pretty conclusively that patronage, as worked under Lord Wolseley, has resulted in the survival of the fittest. For the generally honest, single-minded discharge of the difficult functions of choice, Lord Wolseley is entitled to the highest praise.

Those also serve who sit at home and wait. The rôle of furnishing forth and replenishing an army in the field is passive and comparatively inglorious, but it is absolutely indispensable, and he who succeeds in it contributes in no small degree to any great results achieved. This has been Lord Wolseley's concern throughout, and he has attended to it with unremitting zeal and completeness. The country owes him a great debt, and it is not to be repaid by the grant of a few paltry hundreds for the remainder of his life. Such inadequate recognition would be utterly unworthy of a generous nation, and discreditable to those who have the power to unseal the fountain of honour.

THE INVADED COLONY.

LORD KITCHENER is becoming almost as ubiquitous as De Wet. During the recent coursing of that intrepid raider about the Caledon River the Commander-in-Chief moved his headquarters from Pretoria to Bloemfontein to be in closer touch with the operating columns. A few days later, when Delarey became menacing in the Megaliesberg mountains, Lord Kitchener was found again at Pretoria, having made a record journey between the capitals in one night. On Monday he sent home a brief despatch from Naauwpoort Junction, 450 miles to the south, announcing the occupation of Britstown by the British, the retirement of the western raiders towards Prieska, and his intention of having them followed up. He was also reported on the same day to be at De Aar, a point well suited as a centre whence he might direct operations both east and west, being at the junction of important strategical railways. A brief survey, however, seems to have satisfied him that his continued presence in the south was not required, and on Wednesday he was once more at Pretoria, whence he informed the War Office of an action then proceeding between the columns of General Charles Knox and De Wet's force in position near Leeuwkop, twenty miles south of Senekal, it being the Boer leader's intention to break through again to the south, if possible. The issue of this action will be eagerly awaited. The untiring energy of Lord Kitchener could not fail to infuse fresh life and vigour into the troops, who, without some fresh impulse, might well begin to show some signs of staleness and weariness, in a species of warfare that appeared to be interminable. Accordingly from north to south there is evidence of a fixed determination to push matters to a conclusion, and to carry on the pursuit of the Boer commandoes at all cost until decisive results are secured.

Heavy fighting has again occurred in the Megaliesberg, to which we shall refer later on; but the raids across the Orange River claim priority of attention, owing to the weighty issues involved, and the urgent necessity that exists for the promptest action, with adequate forces for the pursuit and crushing of the raiders, and the overawing of the disaffected throughout Cape Colony. Lord Kitchener reported on Saturday that he thought the movement was checked. The view of the situation taken at Cape Town was less optimistic, although there is as yet no clear evidence to show that the Dutch colonists are joining the invaders, and the contrary is asserted to be the case. The proclamation of martial law in certain districts, as well as the decision to send reinforcements of mounted troops, have had an excellent effect in restraining the more turbulent spirits. It is most satisfactory to learn that remount horses and transport mules are being procured in America by the War Department on an unprecedented scale, 50,000 having, according to Reuter, been purchased at Kansas City, for shipment to South Africa. The enormous waste of horses during the war has been the greatest difficulty our commanders have had to deal with, and the greater the energy displayed in maintaining without cessation the pursuit of the hostile commandoes, the greater will be the necessity for keeping up the supply of fresh horses. De Wet, from whom we need not be ashamed to take a lesson in mobility, is reported to have had three horses for every man when he set out on his daring but unsuccessful raid to the Orange River. We have also learned with satisfaction that our oversea colonies have been invited, in consequence of the persistent character assumed by the guerilla war, to send contingents of their invaluable mobile troops again to South Africa to assist in the restoration of peace, and in the establishing of British supremacy there on a firm and enduring basis.

Nothing very heroic has marked the course of the eastern body of raiders since their passage of the Orange River on the 16th inst. at Rhenoster Hoek. Some fighting is reported to have occurred near Steynsburg on that day and again on the 18th, when the Boers retreated into the Zuurberg Range, fifty miles south of the Orange River. As on the same day a Boer force of about 300 was located between Burghersdorp and Venterstad, the eastern invading commando had presumably divided into at least two portions after passing over the border. Lord Kitchener stated in a despatch on Thursday that this eastern force had been headed by our troops and driven in the direction of Venterstad, which is but five miles from the Orange River. We regret to learn that Lieut. Lord Frederick Blackwood, 9th Lancers, was wounded on Christmas Eve in an action with this commando at Plaisterheurel.

The western commando, some 2,000 strong, which effected a passage at Sand Drift on the 17th inst. attacked the small post at Hamelfontein in the Colesberg district held by a handful of Yeomanry and Guards, but was repulsed. The enemy occupied Philipstown on the 19th, and, cutting the telegraph wires and the railway near Hout-Kraal station, proceeded to Britstown, twelve miles west of De Aar, whence, after obtaining supplies, they pushed on towards Prieska. Fighting was reported near De Aar, and a party of Yeomanry is stated to have been entrapped on the Britstown road. This column is supposed to have gone north in two bodies, one marching towards Prieska, and the other through Strydenberg, thirty miles south of Orange River Station. Our troops are in pursuit. A third commando is said to have crossed the Orange River at Zoutpan Drift, fifteen miles east of Orange River Station, moving in the direction of Petrusville. Lord Kitchener has been organising a mobile column for despatch wherever its services might be most urgently required; he reported, however, that his troops were already getting round the raiding bands.

General Clements, on the 19th inst., achieved a decided success near Hekpoort, at the foot of the Megaliesberg, redeeming to some extent his recent discomfiture. Acting in anticipation of General French's co-operation from Krugersdorp, he attacked Delarey and Beyer, who were strongly posted on the hills, and, after five hours' fighting, drove them from their positions, the simultaneous advance of our troops on their flanks and centre being irresistible. French coming up in the afternoon, fell upon the retreating enemy near Zeeboehoek, eight miles to the westward, inflicting heavy loss. This successful action has cleared the Magaliesberg of the Boers, the defeated force having broke up, some going to the north, and others towards the south-west. Clements subsequently fixed his camp a few miles north of Oliphant's Nek on the Rustenburg road, and French returned towards Krugersdorp.

The Boers continue to be active in other quarters; a police post at Boksburg, near Johannesburg, and Utrecht in the east have been unsuccessfully attacked, but the minor incidence attending guerilla warfare have been gradually becoming less numerous. Colonel Colville's mobile column of General Wynne's command was engaged on the 21st inst. with two commandos between Heidelberg and Villiersdorp in the neighbourhood of the Vaal, and repulsed the enemy with loss. Renewed activity is also reported amongst the Boers near Rhenoster Kop, north of Kroonstad, but General Paget, who commands in that district, is in touch with them, and fully on the alert. Despite the fact that the invading commandos are still at large in Cape Colony, the general situation shows healthy signs of improvement under the vigorous direction of Lord Kitchener, while his last proclamation is couched in such moderate language and offers such favourable terms to all who will come in, that it is not strange that reports are already current of the contemplated surrender of the chief leaders still in the field, including Steyn and De Wet.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND MILITARY EDUCATION.

AT the close of last week the Acting Commander-in-Chief inspected the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, while at the Headmaster's Conference at Bradfield College two subjects of considerable military significance were seriously discussed, the system, namely, of examining Militia candidates for the Army, and the organisation of Volunteer corps in public schools. Neither the schoolmasters nor Sir Evelyn Wood failed to say much that was well worth saying and hearing, but it is not surprising that in both cases propositions were advanced which are open to fair argument. Taking the Conference first, we find that the new system of examination of Militia candidates is so unpopular with the heads of public schools that the latter have unanimously resolved to represent the system to the War Office as likely to result in "very serious consequences." It must, however, be admitted that a careful study of the reported discussion does not make it very clear what these very serious consequences will be. Apparently the headmasters are concerned not only for themselves, but for the War Office, which Dr. Warre, of Eton, thinks has placed itself in rather a dangerous position. The suggestion is that as the present system "presents a very much easier line than the old competitive examination for Sandhurst," the latter will lose favour, and the standard of Army education will accordingly be lowered. But the headmasters forget that in this matter the War Office can always ensure the popularity of Sandhurst by giving it that marked preference in the matter of commissions to which it is clearly entitled. As to the effect of the new system upon the public schools themselves, the grievance appears to be the withdrawal of a boy from school before he has completed his education in literæ humaniores, in order to send him to a Militia training—assuming that it is desired to pass the youngster through the Militia into the Line at the earliest possible age, namely, nineteen. The alternative of letting the youngster come back to school from his Militia training is regarded by some headmasters with disfavour, but by others has been adopted without regret. As one of them suggested, it does not say much for the moral discipline of a public school if a lad's absence for four weeks at a Militia training is calculated to utterly destroy the effects of that discipline and render the lad unfit to go back among his old school companions. But, even assuming this objection to have some weight, there is the question to be considered whether the tendency of future Army reform will not be to render the value of public school training as a preparation for the Army less of a fetish than the headmasters would like to make it. The analogy of the Navy, at any rate, seems to indicate that even where the highest professional efficiency is required, it is not necessary to cultivate literæ humaniores until the age of eighteen, and that between seventeen and eighteen the future Army officer might well be employed in studies which can be successfully pursued elsewhere than at an expensive, and not always completely satisfactory, public school.

The subject of Volunteer corps in public schools is a very large, and to some extent, a contentious one. The manner in which it was introduced to the Headmasters' Conference by Dr. Rendall, of Charterhouse, was unexceptionable, and the appointment of a select committee to negotiate with the several schools, the War Office, and the Volunteers for the best settlement of the various weighty questions involved is in every way satisfactory. But exception may fairly be taken to two remarks made by Dr. Warre, of Eton, with reference to this subject: not, assuredly with the idea of entering upon any controversy with such an authority, but merely to clear the public mind of the cant which seems inseparable from a discussion of this sort. In the first place Dr. Warre made appreciative reference to the praise given by Lord Roberts to the system pursued in Natal by which all the boys in the Government schools are compulsorily organised into cadet corps. But he forebore to mention that between Government schools in a colony like Natal and public schools in the mother-country there is a marked and, indeed, obvious distinction. What might be clearly advisable, if not urgently necessary, in the one case might be—one does not say it is—quite superfluous in the other. Accordingly for purposes of serious argument Dr. Warre's quotation of Lord Roberts may be dismissed as quite worthless, if not misleading. Again, the headmaster of Eton said with special reference to the good results accruing from membership of his own corps, that it was "an educational force that boys should learn to obey and learn discipline." Such a remark in such a connection is enough to make some of the old headmasters of Eton turn in their graves. If ordinary school methods are not sufficient to inculcate obedience and discipline, then indeed have schools in general been sailing under false colours for a good many generations past.

Here, indeed, is a striking, almost appalling, instance of ill-considered advocacy. Surely the real truth is that, while as a supplement to the everyday school system the cadet corps may be, and commonly is, highly beneficial in various ways, it is an institution which requires careful management and does not lend itself to universal application. One doubts whether in his cooler moments even Dr. Warre, enthusiast as he is, would care to assert that he has been seriously assisted in maintaining either the disciplinary or physical standard of Eton by the existence of the 4th Volunteer Battalion Oxfordshire Light Infantry. It must be remembered, too, that the majority of the boys who go to Eton are not intended for professions or careers in which any possible struggle for a livelihood is indicated. Probably at Eton, if membership of the College corps were compulsory for all boys over a certain age, the conditions would be more or less cheerfully accepted, and the College would remain at its old level. But there are other public schools in which, if pressure were brought upon boys to give up an appreciable amount of time and thought to military exercises, the numbers would soon fall off. Whether without pressure many schools could maintain efficient cadet corps is, to say the least, doubtful, and without reasonable efficiency it is hardly to be expected, or desired, that the War Office would extend any substantial encouragement.

Sir Evelyn Wood's inspection of the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, was remarkable for an innovation of considerable interest from an educational standpoint. The novel idea of exercising the cadets at this familiar half-yearly function in minor tactical operations rather than in parade movements is pleasantly characteristic of the practical soldier at whose instance the change was made. At the same time it may be questioned whether in this specific case it is not possible to pursue the practical study of tactics too fast and too far, and, moreover, at the expense of those other branches of military education which, if neglected at Sandhurst, can never, except at Camberley, be followed under equally favourable conditions at any subsequent period of an officer's career. The plan adopted hitherto of giving the cadets only as much drill as enabled them at the inspection to go creditably through a few battalion movements, the manual and firing exercises, and a march past had one great advantage. While it taught steadiness and cohesion, and could not be safely dispensed with, it did not interfere materially with the theoretical part of the curriculum, which comprises, as is generally known, valuable instruction under selected professors not only in tactics, but also in fortification, military topography, administration, and law. But if the cadets are to be tested at the half-yearly inspection in minor tactical operations, the time, already short, which is now devoted to studies other than tactics will necessarily be curtailed, since, in addition to the indispensable daily parades, field days will consume many useful hours, besides temporarily throwing the work of the whole college out of gear. By reducing, ever so little, the time available for, more particularly, fortification, administration, and topography, not to speak of the theory of tactics, irreparable harm would be done, since, as noted above, the future career of an officer provides all too few opportunities for the prosecution of such studies under competent supervision. As a makeshift the garrison class is useful, but it has the manifest disadvantage of giving the student only one and the same instructor for all subjects, instead of a class of experts in each particular branch. Nor is the absolute necessity for this early indulgence in minor tactical operations clearly apparent. Under the new system of military training surely the young officer of the future will secure quite as useful a tactical education as he could pick up in a few field days at Sandhurst. Why not, while he is at the R.M.C., let him continue to glean as much as possible of that sort of knowledge which he will find difficulty in gleaning elsewhere.

Army Notes.

It will be seen by our article on Artillery in another column that a great effort is being made in certain circles to revive the appointment of Deputy-Adjutant-General of Artillery. When the Royal Regiment was re-organised to the extent that it was resolved into its two principal branches, viz., Horse or Field and Garrison Artillery, changes were also introduced in the higher Staff, and the War Office work for the regiment was entrusted to an assistant military secretary and an assistant adjutant general, both subordinate officials. The effect of this was to bring patronage under the military secretary, posting and grading under the Adjutant-General of the Army. The reason given for the change was that the Artillery had become too much of a close borough, worked almost exclusively by its D.A.G. at headquarters, and it was hinted that the holders of that office were often influenced by old traditions, and the action of strong cliques that favoured now this set of men, now that, not always to the advantage of the Service. Nevertheless, putting such and other unworthy considerations on one side, it does not seem right that so powerful and so important a branch of our military array should not be represented at headquarters by an officer of higher rank than colonel. Why should not its interest and well-being be watched over by its own more or less independent staff branch, such as still exists for its sister Service, the Royal Engineers?

Opinions may differ as to the methods by which the raw material out of which we manufacture our officers is obtained, whether by direct competitions, by invitations to colleges and great schools, or by passing on young Militia officers into the regular battalions. All, however, who have been privileged to see the cadets now at Woolwich and Sandhurst, on parade or at play, must agree that they constitute a magnificent body of young men. Their physique is splendid, the general height above the average, and they may be expected to worthily maintain the character of their class in the days to come. It has been a somewhat too common fashion to sneer at the professional qualifications of officers commanding forces, large and small, in the Boer War; but whether their leadership has been defective or not, only one verdict that has been passed upon the company officers, the juniors in rank who have served so nobly in South Africa—the bulk of them have shown themselves brave, chivalrous gentlemen, never shrinking from the dangerous duties that fell to them. Their loudest champions are those most competent to judge them—their own men.

Controversy is rife as to the influence of long range guns of position upon field tactics, and the Times of India has a good leader touching the employment of heavy artillery in modern warfare, and particularly in the present campaign. Never before in the history of the world had there been any demand for pieces shooting accurately at a range of five miles. The Boers were in possession of such weapons at the outbreak of hostilities, but these were brought to the front primarily as siege pieces for the leaguer of Ladysmith. It was not until their great good qualities were revealed that similar guns were provided for the defence of the Tugela. Speaking broadly, the duties of field artillery is to prepare the way for infantry. Now, in turn, the duty of the heavy guns will be to mask the field batteries. But the scope of the utility of the larger pieces is strictly limited by their mobility. If they are unable to keep pace with an army on the move, their use is likely to be much curtailed. In this respect the Natal Campaign has afforded but little precedent; for Buller's movements were but slow. Even so, the difficulties of placing the 4.7 guns were far from being inconsiderable.

The following is the opinion of a far-seeing officer of high rank on the possible rectification of "officers' expenses" by the War Office. He writes, in reply to a friend who expresses a hope that reform in this line will take place, as follows:—"I should be glad could I think your hopes of economic Army reform would be justified; but I have known so many disappointments that I am not sanguine such will ever be enforced, however much they may be commended. The Army is full now of rich men's sons in place of those who sprung from the Army, and the liberal professions at one time officered it."

On this as to the result of the South African Hospital Commission fill the air. The latest is that the War Office is now fully aware of the fact that new rates of pay and retirement will have to be granted to Army medical officers before the most desirable class of candidates for the R.A.M.C. can be obtained. The young members of the medical profession appreciate their services at a higher value than the War Office seems to think, and an eminent surgeon of a large London hospital quite recently told an R.A.M.C. officer that the pay must be improved before eligible candidates are forthcoming. Another point which is under consideration, and which we trust will be effected, is the matter of "hospital supplies" being altogether left in the hands of the Army medical officers, and removed from the responsibility of the Army Service Corps. Of course bound up with this is the question of "transport" (Hospital and Bearer Company), which should be placed under the control of the Army surgeons. The present arrangements are most unsatisfactory, and for years past the Army Medical Service has rightly clamoured for the management of its own transport. Until it is granted full responsibility for the movements of hospitals cannot be fixed on it.

The following extract from a diary kept by an officer of the 2nd Northumberland Fusiliers, dated Commando's Nek, in October last, has a melancholy interest since the late fatal affair on the Megaliesberg:—

"Next day being a long one, we started from our bivouac at Damhoek at 5 a.m. That was our record bag day, in so far as the battalion was concerned. We were responsible for 460 head of cattle, and a sprinkling of donkeys, goats, and ponies, all of which we got safely down the Nooitgedacht Pass. It was a long and hard day; but our fatigue was amply repaid by the extraordinary beauty of the deep kloofs on the north side that had to be searched. The descent into them was like a sudden plunge into a totally different latitude. Up above was the fresh mountain air, the bare hill side, and the gigantic, distorted boulders in the shape of mushrooms, or Brobdignagian tea-urns; huge rocks resting on comparatively slender pedestals. Down in the depths, we were plunged in the muggy, warm steam atmosphere of Singapore, and surrounded by tropical tree-ferns and jungle of every description. Troops of dog-faced baboons dropped from rock to rock and coughed wheezily and resentfully at us; and small brilliant coloured birds flashed like jewels along the streams of fair water that were sure to be found at the bottom of each gorge. To get down, was a matter of swinging from tree to tree and from rock to rock, like a company of orang-outangs. At one time, one officer caught sight of some of the advanced guard in this predicament, and saying hastily 'There are some Boers,' seized his rifle for a shot. 'Hold hard' said another, 'they're monkeys.' A look through a glass eventually revealed their identity."—St. George's Gazette.

During the course of the past week we had occasion to refer to the 1881 volume of THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, and encountered the following letter, which appeared in April of that year, and is of some little interest at the present day:—"Patrol" writes: 'Your correspondent, "Shamrock," properly suggests that an Irish Foot Guard Corps ought to exist; and if the Guards are increased the doing so by adding a battalion each to the Coldstreamers and Scots Guards, as has been rumoured, instead of by raising an Irish Foot Guard Corps, will be an exceedingly unpopular and unjust measure. You, sir, from your long connection with the Services, know well how large a part of the Army are Irishmen, and how deeply so sensitive a people would feel anything so patently proclaiming that they are not thought fit to share in the guarding of our Queen. Your motto, "Audi alteram partem," will, it is hoped, impel you to break a lance in so just a cause for the Irish soldiers.' At this period, of course, the Grenadiers alone had three battalions, the Coldstreamers and Scots Guards having two battalions each. Thus, it seems that the idea of the formation of an Irish regiment of Guards has taken at least twenty years to mature. It may be that perhaps some of our readers know of an earlier proposition to raise some Irish Guards.

THE Earl of Selborne, First Lord of the Admiralty, has retired from the board of the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company. His lordship has been a director of the company for several years, but as soon as he accepted the post which he now holds in the Cabinet, he decided that, in view of the necessarily close business relations between the company and the Transport Department of the Admiralty, it was desirable for him to sever his connection with the former.

TO LET, WANTED, and other NOTICES will be found on page 1273.
BUSINESS AND HOTEL DIRECTORY will be found on page 1275.
EDUCATIONAL Announcements will be found on page 1275.

FIELD-MARSHAL COUNT VON BLUMENTHAL.

The last but one of the Field Marshals who stood in the Galerie de Glaces in the Chateau of Versailles when the King of Prussia was acclaimed the Emperor of the Germans, died last week at the age of ninety. The Kaiser, in a remarkable order of the day, has pronounced on Count Blumenthal an egregious eulogium in no wise exaggerating his services or in any way minimising the value of the veteran's military virtues and strategical abilities in the two great campaigns in which he was Chief of the Staff to the Kaiser's father. "No Chief of the Staff," said Berthier, "can ever be duly recognised by his own chief or by the Army. The credit of his work will be given to his own chief if all goes well. If otherwise any praise that may be going will be too little to include the poor Chef d'Etat Major." Blumenthal was a self-conscious man, and knew his own value thoroughly. He certainly grasped the military ability of his own superiors. Some fine day, if his immense private correspondence is published, the world will be able to appreciate the keenness of vision and the justness of judgment he brought to bear on the men and circumstances around him. His father, who died of his wounds at the action of Dennewitz, near Potsdam, had the happiness of assisting at the defeat of Ney in one of the engagements in 1813 which preceded the invasion of France and the abdication of Napoleon. Young Blumenthal was enrolled in the Cadet Corps in 1820 and received his commission in 1827—"a very steady, silent, and severe young man"—in an infantry battalion of the Prussian Guards. We have heard of officers in our Service who more than once meditated retiring because they were a few years longer than they liked in the same rank—one of them a distinguished General to-day. What would the lucky young fellows who have got their companies after four years' service in this year of grace think of such a trial as twenty-two years' service as subaltern in the same corps? The Times correspondent, who furnished an excellent summary of his career last Monday, tells us that he heard the Field-Marshal at the regimental dinner ten years ago recall the fact. "Promotion was slow in these days, gentlemen," said the hale octogenarian; "our allowances from home were small, and our way of living correspondingly simple." A captain at forty, Blumenthal was called to the Prussian general staff after preliminary study at the Staff College, passing the strict examination. Whatever he might have looked in 1850 he certainly was not "thick-set" in 1870; nor had he then "the kindly features" which the Times correspondent saw some years later at dinner; but "the keen eyes" were all there, and "flashed" about with lightning quickness; and the manner, courteous and gentle generally, could become as rugged and unpleasant as Vogel and Falkenstein's, or Voigts-Retz's to a British camp follower. In 1866 Blumenthal's name was connected with a little capture by an Austrian patrol of a Prussian mail bag from the Crown Prince's headquarters, in which were certain letters from the Chief of the Staff containing caustic pen and ink sketches of the military personnel not altogether complimentary to anyone but the writer, which were published by a Vienna journal. The text was repudiated by Blumenthal, but what angered him most was the horrible lie that he was a Jew, which the journalist appended to the translation. In fact he was a blue-blooded Prussian, and it was in the fine flower of Junkerdom that he met and married the daughter of Captain Vyner, then a Foreign Office messenger of a good old Yorkshire family. His first military employment in the field was one which had to our eyes somewhat of a buccaneering or filibustering character about it. Prussia did not proclaim war against Denmark on the Schleswig-Holstein question, but she allowed Prussian officers, soldiers, and subjects to volunteer freely in aid of the rebels, and Blumenthal was Chief of the Staff of the Schleswig-Holsteiners in 1849, and had an object lesson in the weakness of insurrectionary levies; and his subsequent experiences in Hesse-Cassel during the political troubles inclined him to favour "the short way" of dealing with troublesome patriots, which he had occasions to carry into effect subsequently. In 1860 he became regimental colonel, but he was already noted for staff employment by the Red Prince, and in 1864 he took the field with that fiery leader against the much-suffering King of Denmark in a war wherein victory had blighted laurels, brought little honour, and no peace. It may be true that Blumenthal had to spur the Red Prince, but it is certain that they never worked together again, and in 1866 the Crown Prince's army was directed by Blumenthal to march from Silesia through the gorges of the Reisingebirge to co-operate with the armies of the King and of the Red Prince, in the "Bismarck-engineered" war against Austria—every day's march being regulated by the Chief of the Staff. Anxious moments, risky withal! When Gablentz gave that hard knock in the face to them at Frautenau there was some misgiving, and when on the historic day that saw the sceptre of the empire pass from the hand of the Austrian Emperor to that of the King of Prussia at Koniggrätz, the only orders that the Crown Prince could give to his army was "March to the green trees!" beyond which stood the fatal Chlum, the strategy of chance was justified by victory.

Between 1866 and 1870 Blumenthal as commander of the 15th Army Division at Düsseldorf improved his time in a series of manoeuvres with the 13th Division commanded by General Von Goeben, and so great was the reputation and skill of the well-matched commanders that these peaceful operations became a classic for students of the art of war.

"The achievements of the Third Army in 1870," says the Times, "are written in letters of imperishable fame in the words Weissenburg, Wörth, Sedan, Paris. Blumenthal's genius now shone with steady and unsurpassed brightness. He never failed to grasp the situation; he never hesitated for one instant to snatch the advantages it offered. His commands were often dictated in the middle of the night, when he had been roused from sleep by the arrival of intelligence. They were always extraordinarily brief, clear, and to the point. He deliberated and decided almost without advice and with no aid save that of his marvellous memory and the map. Before King William had given orders for the decisive flank march which ended at Sedan, Blumenthal had grasped the position of Bazaine at Metz with lightning-like intuition and had made all his preparations. The Crown Prince and he could tell the King this at the decisive council of war held at Bar-le-Duc. It is well known that no general order for the battle of Sedan was issued from the King's headquarters. Moltke knew that the Third and Fourth Armies would be there and would close the iron ring in the nick of time. When the ring closed the taciturn thinker of battles looked at his watch and uttered the two words 'Es stimmt,' which may be translated 'Precisely,' while Moltke and Blumenthal delayed the bombardment because they made the mistake of expecting a speedy capitulation, Bismarck and Roon, with surer instinct on this occasion, foresaw the necessity."

But his great work was overshadowed by the fame of Moltke. When I returned to London after the capitulation of Paris in the spring of 1871 there were two names on every tongue, Moltke and Bismarck—or vice-versa. Of course the Kaiser, the Crown Prince and Prince Frederick Karl held high place in table talk, and the great soldiers of Prussia, Bavaria, Saxony, and the other States who had gained honour and fame in the march from the Rhine to the Moselle, the Loire, and the Seine were known to the man in the street, who, unlike some members of the Government, read the papers, but these people were not "enthused" over them; and when one night at a big dinner I casually observed that I thought General von Blumenthal deserved a great deal of credit for the direction of the operations of the Third Army (the Crown Prince's), my neighbour said: "Yes! I know Eyre has a high opinion of him. Isn't he a Jew?" and the good opinion of that worthy general, chiefly memorable for sound views on accounts, was the stamp that gave Blumenthal's reputation value in that elevated society. I have much I should like to say of him if I had time and space at my disposal, but nothing I could write of him could add to the reputation of Leopold von Blumenthal in the eyes of his sovereign and of his comrades; and to his courtesy and "sweet reasonableness," whilst I was with the Headquarters of the Crown Prince, I owe undying gratitude.

W. H. RUSSELL.

Army Personal.

General Sir Redvers Buller is to be entertained at dinner by the Green Jacket Club, at the Hotel Cecil, on January 7. The Duke of Cambridge and the Duke of Connaught will be present.

General Sir Henry Daubeney, colonel of the Border Regiment, has just celebrated his ninetieth birthday. The gallant general is in good health notwithstanding his age, and is able to take constant exercise. It may not be known to all that but for the regulation then in force he would now be in possession of the Victoria Cross. The late Sir John Pennefather recommended him for the honour, but being a regimental field officer he was ruled to be ineligible.

Lieut.-General Sir William Butler, since his arrival at Aldershot, has been devoting attention to long-range rifle fire, with the result, we understand, that some important changes are likely to be introduced in the course of musketry instruction.

Lieut.-General J. D. P. French will remain in South Africa, for the present at least.

The Dormer peerage and estates pass, by the death of the twelfth Baron on Monday last, to Mr. Roland John Dormer, son of Lieut.-General the Hon. Sir James Dormer, who met with such a tragic death whilst shooting in India, where he was Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army. The new peer, born in 1862, is a Secretary in the Egyptian Ministry of Finance. Sir James Dormer, it will be remembered, had considerable experience in Egypt during the first years of the occupation.

Lieut.-General J. P. Carr Glyn will be placed on the retired list on the 31st inst., when he will have been four years unemployed. His promises to be the last retirement under the five years' rule.

The period of command of Major-General R. T. Thynne, C.B., at York, has been still further extended. His time was really up on October 1, 1899. He is now to hold on until February 28, when he will have completed six years and five months in the command. It is understood Lord Roberts will select General Thynne's successor from among the officers home from the war.

The case of Major-General Sir Francis Clery is one of those which will shortly come up for consideration in connection with the South African honours. General Clery attained in February last the age for compulsory retirement in his present rank. An officer of his ability, reputation, and practical experience would be such a distinct loss to the Service that we may be certain steps will be taken to prolong his active military career.

Major-General R. S. S. Baden-Powell was presented with a sword of honour at Port Elizabeth on Monday. The sword was manufactured by the Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, Limited, of 112, Regent Street, W. It bears this inscription:—"Presented by the citizens of Port Elizabeth to Major-General Baden-Powell in commemoration of the gallant defence of Mafeking, 1900." In a speech of acknowledgment, General Baden-Powell paid the highest tribute to the gallantry and devotion of the garrison, who, he said, set an example of heroism.

Dr. Haig-Brown, the master of the Charterhouse, Godalming, writes:—"Owing to the uncertainty of the date of Major-General Baden-Powell's return, it has been thought expedient to proceed no further at present with the Carthusian proposal to do him honour. There will be at Charterhouse a record of those whom we have lost in the war. This will probably be in the form of a memorial cloister."

Major-General Sir William Nicholson, R.E., is expected in London to-morrow on leave from India, and will join Lady Nicholson at Whitehall Court.

Major-General D. J. S. McLeod, C.B., Madras Cavalry, has been appointed to the command of the Punjab Frontier Force.

Major-General L. V. Swaine, C.B., has left Chester for Germany, having been deputed by the Queen to represent her Majesty at the funeral of Field-Marshal von Blumenthal to-day.

Much sympathy will be felt for Major-General C. A. P. Clements, D.S.O., in South Africa, whose mother, widow of the late Sub-Dean Clements, of Lincoln, died in that city on Wednesday, aged eighty, after a long illness.

Major-General J. B. B. Dickson, C.B., will take his departure for Singapore early in the new year to resume the duties of his command in the Straits Settlements. He will be promoted in due course to the rank of major-general on the Establishment.

We see it stated in several papers that Brigadier-General Sir Reginald Hart, V.C., became a major-general on the establishment of the Royal Engineers in consequence of the promotion of Lord Kitchener to the rank of lieutenant-general. This is incorrect. Lord Kitchener is not on the establishment of general officers, but is borne on the list as a supernumerary. His promotion, therefore, creates no vacancy. But for his promotion for distinguished service in the field in September, 1896, Lord Kitchener's name would now appear on the list of colonels next after that of Sir Reginald Hart, and before that of Major-General (Colonel) E. Wood, C.B., the next senior officer of the corps of the Royal Engineers. Sir Reginald Hart will require to wait for the next vacancy before he becomes a major-general. He has been a colonel since November 1886.

Brigadier-General H. Pipon, R.A., would, in ordinary circumstances, have been placed on the retired list for age on the 4th inst. As, however, he is on active service in China he is retained on the list.

Three Regimental District commands change hands on Tuesday next, when the present holders complete their extended periods. These are the 3rd, Canterbury, where Colonel R. A. Hickson, lately commanding the 1st Batn. the Buffs, succeeds Colonel W. E. R. Kelly; the 45th, at Derby, where Colonel J. G. Sparkes retires in favour of Colonel J. W. T. Hume, lately commanding the 1st Batn. Sherwood Foresters; and the 83rd, Belfast, where Colonel F. J. Graves is relieved by Colonel F. S. F. Stokes, lately A.A.G. at Poona, and formerly of the Royal Irish Rifles.

Colonel, but local Lieut.-General, Ian Hamilton, C.B., who is on passage home from South Africa with Lord Roberts, will, we learn, on arrival be asked to resume charge, for a short time of the musketry instruction of the Army. In this department he is an enthusiast, and it is felt that an officer of his wide experience ought to be utilised as long as possible to superintend the introduction of those changes which are rendered imperative as a result of the war. It is generally accepted that he will be the next military secretary in succession to Sir Coleridge Grove.

The names of six senior colonels have passed within the last month or so to the retired list, viz.,

Colonels C. F. Morton, Lord Algernon Gordon Lennox, the Duke of Wellington, A. C. F. Fitz-George, C.B., F. Glennie, D. C. De Wend—all having had to go under the terms of the Royal warrant. It rarely happens that there is such a rapid thinning at the top of the list.

The case of Colonel A. G. Wavell is, we learn to be specially considered in connection with the South African war honours, and he is retained on the active list of his rank pending a decision. Hence his appointment as officiating D.A.G. at Irish headquarters.

Colonel J. Spence, D.A.G. at Malta, is to retain his appointment until the end of February, so as to allow of a successor being named by the incoming Commander-in-Chief.

Colonel Ivor Herbert, C.B., who has arrived home from South Africa, is expected to relieve Colonel F. C. Ricardo as A.A.G., Home District.

Colonel Lord William Beresford, V.C., has been lying seriously ill at Deepdene, Dorking, suffering from peritonitis. He became so ill on Wednesday night that Sir Lauder Brunton was sent for, and arrived at Dorking by special train at 4 a.m. He left for town in the course of the morning, and after his departure the following bulletin was issued:—"His lordship's condition still causes grave anxiety, but the patient has somewhat rallied this morning." Lord William was afterwards able to take nourishment better than he had previously done for some time, and his strength was maintained.

Colonel T. C. Porter, who since he vacated the command of the 6th Dragoon Guards (Carabineers) has commanded the 1st Cavalry Brigade under Lieut.-General French, goes to half-pay on return to England. Colonel Porter took over his brigade in July last, and has since been much to the fore.

Colonel F. W. Benson, late 17th Lancers, has reverted to half-pay on return from service in South Africa, where he was employed as an A.A.G.

Colonel R. H. Jelf, C.M.G., R.E., is to retain his appointment as District Engineer, Eastern District, until February 28, to enable the new Commander-in-Chief to name his successor.

Colonel W. G. Du Boulay, R.E., who was placed on half-pay on August 12 last, retires voluntarily on pension. He is fifty-two years of age.

Colonel H. L. Dundas, late East Yorkshire Regiment, is retained for the present at Gibraltar, in performance of the duties of A.A.G., pending the appointment of a successor by Lord Roberts on his arrival in England. On being relieved Colonel Dundas will be placed on the retired list for age disqualification.

Colonel W. H. Riddell, from the command of the 2nd Batn. Bedfordshire Regiment, has taken up duty on the staff of the Indian Army as A.A.G. Bombay District.

Colonel A. W. Morris, late of the Northamptonshire Regiment, who has been commandant at Durban for some time past, has been appointed Assistant Inspector of the Midland section of the lines of communication at the Cape.

Colonel E. W. D. Ward, C.B., A.S.C., has joined the Horse Guards Staff as A.Q.M.G., on return from service in South Africa. Colonel Ward, who is so widely known and respected for his services to the Military Tournament at Islington, was the officer who acted as Military Governor of Ladysmith during the siege. Though the late Lieut.-Colonel Stoneham really provisioned the place, it was due to Colonel Ward's admirable administration that food and water held out as they did. The two officers worked in perfect harmony as they fortunately belonged to the same Service and knew exactly what was wanted. There was no interference with their arrangements as it was felt that all depended upon their receiving loyal support. The result was that Colonel Ward earned the reputation of being one of "the best staff officers who ever did

THE ARMY ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION. SPECIAL ARMY POLICIES:

LIFE. { War Risks,
World-Wide.
ACCIDENTS &
DISEASES.
FIRE. { Residence
Abroad.
BURGLARY, &c.

Lowest Rates of premium, with unique features, have been granted by the Leading Companies in each Branch. The "Special Army" Fire and Burglary Policies hold the insurer covered in any Barracks, Garrison, or Private Dwelling house in which he may be residing without endorsement on removal.

Special Quotations for Messes. Refund of Income Duty obtained by arrangement with the War Office, on all Life and Accident Premiums. Premiums collected from Banker or Agents when due, on permanent order.

Apply for Prospectus, MANAGER,
217, PICCADILLY, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, W.
Branch Office: IMPERIAL BUILDINGS, GROSVENOR RD., ALDERSHOT

duty in the field." This is saying a great deal, but those who can appreciate what the difficulties were will at once admit that his appearance at Headquarters is opportune. His fitness for the position to which he is called is beyond question.

In Colonel C. C. Brownlow, C.B., I.S.C., a well-known frontier officer disappears from the active list. Colonel Brownlow first saw service in the North-West Frontier Campaign, 1863. His record also includes the Utmanzai Expedition, 1866; Dour Valley Expedition, 1872; Jowaki Expedition 1877-78; Afghan War, 1879, and Miranzai Expeditions (1st and 2nd), 1891.

Lieut.-Colonel J. F. G. Ross of Bladensburg, C.B., late Coldstream Guards, D.A.A.G. at Aldershot, has been appointed by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland to succeed Mr. J. J. Jones, C.B., as Chief Commissioner of Dublin Metropolitan Police.

The members of the Home District Tactical Society will have learnt with the deepest regret of the death of Lieut.-Colonel H. C. Boyes, their energetic and popular honorary secretary, who passed away on Wednesday, at the age of fifty-four, at his residence at Weybridge, after undergoing an operation. Colonel Boyes had been closely identified with the society from its initiation. He was constant in his attendance at war games, and a paper he wrote some time ago on the subject showed at once how complete a master he was of the principles of modern warfare, a fact not to be wondered at, seeing that for years past he had attended the autumn manoeuvres of foreign armies.

Lieut.-Colonel C. A. P. Burroughs, West African Regiment, remains in command of the troops at Kumasi.

Lieut.-Colonel O. C. Radford, Punjab Infantry, has been granted a two years' extension of command from January 5.

Major P. E. F. Hobbs, A.S.C., is ordered to take up duty as D.A.A.G. at Woolwich on the 3rd prox.

Major E. T. Gastrell, I.S.C., from 19th Punjab Infantry, has been selected for the command of the 41st Dogras, with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

Major G. P. Ranken, from the Punjab Infantry, has been selected for the command of the new 46th Punjab Infantry, with Major W. Thuillier, from the 21st Punjab Infantry, as second in command, and Captain W. H. Miller, 27th Punjab Infantry; C. H. Paterson, 33rd Punjab Infantry; and F. B. Hill, 34th Punjab Infantry, as double-company commanders; Lieut. J. C. P. Chester, 40th Pathans, as adjutant; and Lieut. W. A. S. Walker, 40th Pathans, as quarter-master.

Major J. Hanbury-Williams, C.M.G., 1st Batn Oxfordshire Light Infantry, will take up his duties as private secretary to Mr. Brodrick towards the end of next month. He is, it is said, to be promoted before long to a lieut.-colonelcy. The Corporation of Cape Town entertained him at lunch on Saturday last on the occasion of his leaving South Africa. The Mayor, in proposing the health of the guest, paid a high tribute to the tact he had shown in the discharge of his duties. Major Hanbury-Williams, in reply, said that it had been his privilege to serve under a great master, Sir Alfred Milner, and he should always look back with pleasure to his period of service in South Africa.

Captains J. H. E. Holford, 7th Hussars; MacG. Greer, Royal Warwickshire Regiment; R. M. Stallard, Bedfordshire Regiment; F. E. Christian, 3rd Batn. Cheshire Regiment; E. C. S. Margeson, South Wales Borderers; P. Lonsdale, East Lancashire Regiment; A. A. St. Hill, Duke of Wellington's Regiment; H. Bryan, Manchester Regiment; A. L. Cartwright, Durham Light Infantry; and W. J. Peyton, C.M.G., I.S.C.; and Lieuts. W. R. Roe, 3rd Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers; C. M. Berington, 5th Batn. Worcestershire Regiment; W. Judkins, 5th Batn. Rifle Brigade; and C. Godfrey and C. R. Wilkinson, I.S.C., are on passage home from the Gold Coast, after active service with the Kumasi expedition.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Dec. 22.

A Gazette Extraordinary issued in Cape Town on the night of Dec. 20 announced that, owing to the Boer invasion, martial law was proclaimed in 12 additional districts of Cape Colony. All persons were warned against joining the Boer forces, and it was specially notified that any persons who, having previously assisted the invaders and been released, again rendered such assistance would be treated with exceptional severity. An official memorandum gave an account of the invasion of the colony and of the movements of the enemy. It mentioned that two or three small places had been occupied by the Boers, who, however, avoided fighting as much as possible, and retreated whenever British troops approached them. All strategic points were strongly held by our forces, and as the Orange River had risen the invaders could only move with difficulty.

A Reuter despatch of Dec. 16 from Thaba N'chu gave a detailed account of the foiling of De Wet's attempt to enter Cape Colony, and of the final escape of De Wet through Springhaan Nek with the greater part of his commando.

The Secretary for War informed Lord Kitchener that, in view of the general position in South Africa, 800 mounted infantry would start within the week. Two cavalry regiments have been put under orders and will leave as soon as transports are ready.

Monday, Dec. 24.

Lord Kitchener, in a Pretoria telegram of Dec. 22, says that, as far as he can form an opinion from reports sent by officers on the spot, he thinks the Boer movement into Cape Colony has been checked. Of the two forces which entered the colony, the eastern is still north of the Zoutpansberg range, while that which entered to the west seems to have been turned in the direction of Britstown and Prieska. Our troops are getting round both bodies, and a column is being organised which will be ready to be despatched as soon as Lord Kitchener knows where its services are most wanted. The Boers have not yet received much assistance in Cape Colony, and some of the colonials have been armed and are assisting our forces. Britstown was occupied on Dec. 22 by the western column of the enemy, who cut the railway line to the south of De Aar Junction. They are being followed up.

Reuter despatches from Cape Town say that the invading commandoes are led by Hertzog, Philip Botha, and Haasbroek. A force has also crossed at Zoutpan to reinforce the commando which has occupied Philipstown. It is feared that the situation in the colony is serious, and that the Dutch in the northern districts, who are very restless, may join the invaders.

Gen. French has been in contact with Beyers's and Delarey's commandoes for the last two days, south of the Magaliesberg, and is in pursuit. The enemy has lost considerably. Commandant Krause and some other prisoners have been captured. Col. Colville, with a movable column, engaged two separate Boer commandoes on Dec. 21 near Vlaktefontein. The enemy retired before our attack, losing several men.

Wednesday, Dec. 26.

Lord Kitchener, in a telegram from Naauwpoort of Dec. 24, says that Thorneycroft's Mounted Infantry have occupied Britstown without resistance. The Boers retired north in the direction of Prieska; they will be followed up. A Cape Town message states that the damage to the railway and telegraph lines in Cape Colony has been slight, and has already been repaired. Breakages due to the weather were attributed to the Boers. Scarcely any colonials have joined the invading commandoes. It is believed that only a few effective arms are in the hands of colonials. The Government has taken care to keep the local stocks of ammunition low.

A Reuter despatch from Cape Town reports that regular railway service has now been restored between Cape Town and De Aar, and that trains are running regularly between De Aar and Kimberley. Major-Gen. Baden-Powell visited Port Elizabeth on Dec. 24, and Grahamstown the next day. At each place he was enthusiastically welcomed and presented with a sword of honour and addresses of congratulation. In his replies he bore emphatic testimony to the bravery and endurance of the garrison of Mafeking, and said that the moral to be drawn from the war was the idea that the colonies should help one another.

In consequence of an important communication from Mr. Chamberlain regarding the situation in the Orange River Colony and the Transvaal, the New Zealand Ministry has decided that the contingents from the colony at present in S. Africa shall remain, and that a sixth contingent shall be formed.

Thursday, Dec. 27.

Reuter despatches from Cape Town, Burghersdorp, and Cradock give some details regarding the movements of the Boer commandoes in Cape Colony and the operations against them. Fighting has occurred near De Aar, but no particulars have been received. The Boers who occupied Britstown retired after commandeering supplies. They numbered about 200. It is reported that a squadron of Yeomanry who were following them up were entrapped and most of them captured. The rapid movement and concentration of troops in the disturbed districts and the personal energy displayed by Lord Kitchener have largely allayed the uneasiness felt in Cape Town regarding the Boer invasion. The colonial Dutch continue to hold aloof, and the promulgation of martial law and the despatch of reinforcements from England have had an excellent effect. There was some indecisive fighting at Rooipoort, 15 miles from Burghersdorp, on Dec. 23. On Dec. 18 a fight occurred on the Colesberg road, 11 miles from Steynsburg. The Boers were driven out of some kopjes, leaving several dead behind, and retreated on the Zuurberg.

A Maseru telegram of Dec. 24 says that now that our forces are pressing De Wet and keeping him continually on the move his horses are getting knocked up and have to be left behind. He is consequently running short of them. The Ladybrand district is now clear of the Boers, who have all gone northward. Lord Kitchener, after visiting Naauwpoort, has left for the north.

A sixth New Zealand contingent of 200 men, half of them Maoris, will sail for South Africa three weeks hence.

A Rustenburg telegram gives details of two engagements fought by Gen. Clements against the Boers under Delarey in the neighbourhood of Nooitgedacht on Dec. 19 and 20, in which the enemy were driven out of the valley south of the Magaliesberg.

Friday, Dec. 28.

Telegrams of Dec. 26 and 27, received from Lord Kitchener, who has returned to Pretoria, briefly summarise the operations against the Boers in the Orange River Colony, the Transvaal, and Cape Colony. In Cape Colony, the invaders' eastern column has been apparently headed by our troops about Riet Port Spruit, and driven in the direction of Venterstad. Their western column has gone north in two portions in the direction respectively of Prieska and Strydenberg; they are being followed and driven by the British forces. In the Transvaal, attacks made by Boer parties on a small police post near Boksburg and on Utrecht were successfully repelled, with loss to the enemy, who were also driven off with loss after holding up a train three miles west of Pan Station. In the Orange River Colony, Gen. C. Knox is engaged with De Wet, who is in the neighbourhood of Leeuwkop, and is again endeavouring to break through our lines to get to the south.

A Reuter despatch from Bloemfontein says it is reported by a trustworthy native that De Wet, Steyn, and Haasbroek recently held a conference, and decided to offer to surrender on condition that the rebels were not punished and the leaders not deported. The news is not yet confirmed, but there are various indications that De Wet has of late been seriously considering the expediency of surrendering, and has no hope of ultimate success. A Boer commando which recently entered Cape Colony east of Bethulia has dispersed in small groups, said to consist chiefly of colonial rebels.

Lord Kitchener has issued a proclamation notifying to burghers that if, after this date, they voluntarily surrender, they will be allowed to live with their families in Government laagers until the cessation of the present guerilla warfare will admit of their returning safely to their homes. All stock and property brought in at the time of the surrender of such burghers will be respected, and paid for if requisitioned by the military authorities.

THE Government of India is evolving a scheme for the organisation and training of Mounted Infantry.

MRS. HILL-CLIMO, The Cottage, Bourne End, Bucks, writes that the Indian troops in China are suffering much from sickness caused by cold. Consignments of warm clothing are forwarded by Messrs. H. S. King and Co., 65, Cornhill. It is desired that packages may be sent on to Messrs. King without delay. Additional subscriptions in furtherance of the movement for aiding the troops are also urgently solicited.

ON Aug. 1, 1899 (that is before any expectation of an outbreak of hostilities) the strength of the garrison in South Africa in non-commissioned officers and men only (commissioned officers not being included) was 9,622. By Oct. 11 (outbreak of the war) this number had been increased to 12,007. After that, reinforcements were rapidly and constantly sent out, so that up to the 1st of the present month the total of all arms sent, including the original garrison on Aug. 1, 1899, amounted to 267,311. Allowing for casualties, &c., but not allowing for the disbandment of colonials, of which precise details have not been received, the present strength of the forces in South Africa is 210,293.

Army Foreign.

Although, as we have announced, the Russian Government decided to bring back, or to retain, a number of troops serving or intended to serve in China, it is taking steps to strengthen the contingents in Siberia. Thus a recent order of the Minister of War prescribes the formation of certain reserve units. The military district of the Amur is to furnish two new reserve battalions, which are to be named the Nertchinsk and the Verniudinsk, while the military district of Siberia is to supply a reserve battalion at Yeniseisk. The battalions will have the ordinary organisation of Russian reserve battalions, with companies of sixty-four files. The companies of the 13th and 17th battalions of sappers and of the 4th bridge-building battalion are to be grouped in a battalion to be known as the "2nd East Siberian Sappers," forming part of the 2nd Siberian Army Corps.

General Davis, commanding the American troops in Porto Rico, lately presented a report in which he assigns much value to the Porto Rican native volunteers. The experiment of utilising their services had proved a marked success judging from the appearance of the force on the parade, in review, marching, and in camp. These natives are of small stature and weigh 10 per cent. or 15 per cent. less than American soldiers, but they are tough and wiry and can endure much hardship. They are also tractable and obedient, and show willingness and even anxiety to learn, and they readily adopt American ways. Though their own diet is mostly vegetarian, they have all been eager for the meat component of the ration. A remarkable point is that the new native troops compare favourably with the Americans in regard to health and fitness for duty. Very satisfactory results were attained with the mounted battalion. General Davis recommends the continuance of the regiment, with the addition of a third battalion, and the retaining of one as a mounted force. With a battalion of regular infantry and two of regular artillery, the island, he says, would have a sufficient military protection. The native soldiers are much less given to drunkenness than the Americans, but we may surmise that this is a condition not likely to continue perhaps if the natives are so apt in adopting American customs.

We are sorry to find that the Münchener Neueste Nachrichten, like some other German papers, continues to furnish its readers with grotesque pictures of the war in South Africa. It reproduces the old story that Lord Roberts offered Botha £10,000 a year if he and his force would lay down their arms and come in. Also the amusing yarn about the officer who was so busy in seeing that the lines of tents in his camp were straight that he omitted to notice the approach of the Boers, who attacked and captured his force. It also publishes a letter supposed to have been written by an officer who was with Colonel Plumer, and to have been captured by the Boers. The letter is dated July 14, and contains some extraordinary things, but its authenticity is not assured, and we should be sorry to accept it on such authority. The Neueste Nachrichten says that the situation in the Transvaal is even worse for our arms than in the Orange River Colony. It is a great pity that some of our German contemporaries are unwilling to recognise the inevitable.

The report of M. Raiberti upon the French military estimates of 1901 was an important document. He began by showing that the War Budget has attained its extreme limit, and that the burden borne by the people is greater than in England or Germany. He did not, however, admit the possibility of reducing the military strength, and advanced the apparently contradictory problem of augmenting the forces without increasing the burden. He believed the solution to lie in redistribution, and pointed out that, though France has adopted the principle of the armed nation, she still labours under the disadvantages of the earlier system. He advocated a reduction in the number of officers in time of peace to the strict minimum, and the provision of necessary stores for mobilisation and the preparatory needs of war. The number of men good for service tends to diminish, and in less than ten years the minimum effective of 573,000 men, corresponding to an annual contingent of about 210,000 men, will no longer be attained. Either, therefore, a system of re-engagements must be established or dispensations from service must be abolished, and M. Raiberti proposed experiments of the first expedient in order to discover the feeling of the country and the pay or bounties that might be required. He dealt at length with the question of officers, and insisted that there should be no supernumeraries, but that a strong reserve should be maintained. His remarks upon promotion threw some new light upon the internal condition of the French army. It is complained that not sufficient room is left for officers coming from the non-commissioned officers' schools. This results from too many being admitted from the schools for officers, and even for them positions are not always available, and promotion is therefore restricted, while there is little scope for selection, which tends to become confounded with seniority in the lower ranks. In a general manner the total number of officers increases much more rapidly than the establishment in each grade, and as palliatives for this state of things the reporter proposed a system of proportionate retirements, though he admitted that this would throw a heavy charge upon the budget, and that it was an open question whether the money would not be better spent in increasing pay, especially for captains. Several temporary measures were suggested, including the lowering of the limit of age for entry at the schools, and the reduction of the number of pupils at the Polytechnic School and at St. Cyr. These measures would promise immediate relief, but remedies for the future were suggested, including the establishment of a system of unity of origin for officers at the beginning of their careers in each particular arm with ulterior selection intended to distinguish those deemed suitable for the rank of general officer.

PRESS VIEWS AND OPINIONS ON SERVICE MATTERS.

"One Who Was There" writes to Wednesday's Times with reference to that journal's statement, in its third instalment of "Lessons of the War," that the Boer position at Modder had not been reconnoitred. He says that the 9th Lancers reconnoitred the position, but their reports were disregarded entirely. "H." writes from South Africa in the same issue as to the following scheme for improving our Army. It amounts, he says, to a question of £ s. d., and suggests:—

1. That the pensions be graded, and the minimum be 10s. per week.
2. That the pension fund be open to both soldiers and marines.
3. That a certificate entitling the bearer to a pension be granted to every soldier and marine who completes a seven years' service, the bearer either to continue in the ranks or to retire as a Reservist.
4. That the pension age limit commence at 60.
5. That, in the event of loss of limb, the pension commence at once.
6. That the Patriotic and other funds be absorbed and worked in one common pension fund.
7. That widows and orphans be entitled for a series of years to the husband's and father's pension.
8. That the scheme be worked on the annuitant principle.
9. That it should commence as soon as Parliamentary sanction is granted.

"Miles," in the Morning Post of Dec. 22, marvels that no attempt has been made to strengthen our army as yet. When war broke out great reforms were to be brought about; no panic legislation could do any good. After a year's waiting nothing has been done in this direction. "Miles" hopes Lord Roberts's return will be the signal for some activity. But a year has been wasted.

Surgeon-Gen. J. B. Hamilton sets forth in a letter to the Daily Telegraph the reasons he believes to account for the dearth of good candidates for the Army Medical Service, as follows:—(1) Insufficient pay, especially in India. (2) Long foreign and short home service. (3) Difficulty in getting (a) ordinary, (b) study leave, and the unfair expense to which officers are put when they endeavour to increase their professional knowledge. It should be noticed that Royal Engineers and Royal Artillery officers are given full opportunities to keep up their knowledge at the expense of the State. The writer affirms that the present state of affairs had been foreseen for years past by all thinking officers, and the War Office is to blame.

Two most important articles appeared in the Times of Thursday on the services rendered by the artillery and the cavalry during the Boer War. They afford the authoritative evidence which has been much wanted by cautious people disinclined to believe the severe strictures of the self-constituted experts. We have been told, ad nauseam, that our guns were inferior to those of the Boers; that we were out-ranged, out-weighted, and out-shot. The very contrary is the fact. The artillery officer who has so ably defended his arm points out that our small field-guns have been continually in action against the much heavier Boer guns, and have invariably held their own. His actual words deserve to be quoted: "On every occasion the Boer guns have gone, and in no single instance had we to go." Not only that; on many occasions single batteries have been under the fire of these terrible guns from three directions. Our loss has been practically nil, our guns have never budged an inch, and the Boers invariably retired at the first decent shrapnel. "It was clear that the alleged advantages did not exist, and that not even selected positions, nearly always on the higher ground and well concealed while our guns were generally in the open, could give the Boers any superiority. The same writer bears testimony to the marked excellence of our gun equipment—carriages, wheels, harness, and so forth, have "stood the campaign in the most extraordinary way," and abundant praise is due to all classes of workmen who have contributed to the great result.

As to cavalry, a distinguished member of that service protests against the current opinion that the arm has not done well. He is certain that had correspondents been more often present in the minor affairs they would have admitted the force of this. His letter is more useful, however, in its discussion of moot points connected with cavalry. He warns us against accepting the experience of a campaign in which the enemy had no cavalry as disposing of shock tactics with the methods and manœuvres that are still practised in regular armies. As to the suggested abolition of cavalry in favour of mounted infantry, he scouts the idea. Both have their distinct and great uses: "It would be the height of folly to spoil two good arms by making one try to do the work of both. Let cavalry and mounted infantry both remain, and the more of both the better," is a verdict with which all common-sense people will cordially agree. At the same time he is satisfied that cavalry must be made more mobile, and he would secure it by looking to the weight carried by the horse, lightening the soldier's equipment, and improving the character of the remounts. In the first, much might be effected by attaching light-wheeled transport; in second, by changing or modifying the weapons carried; and the third, by paying closer attention to horse-breeding, all matters of deep moment, which, it may be hoped, are already attracting much attention. As regards equipment, it may be remarked that the cavalry reinforcements now about to embark for the Cape are to be armed with sword and rifle alone. The substitution of the latter for the carbine being evidently in deference to a marked consensus of practical opinion.

WAR RELIEF FUNDS ORGANISATION.—The Earl of Derby, as chairman of the Central Council for the Organisation of War Relief Funds, which has been appointed in pursuance of the recommendation of Lord Justice Collins's committee, has issued a communication on the subject to the authorities of the various funds, to the Lords Lieutenant of counties, and to the Lord Mayors and Lord Provosts and Mayors and Provosts of the provincial municipalities. He states that the council recognises that its functions are only consultative and advisory; the council does not control any funds of its own, and there is no desire on its part to interfere except by way of suggestion and advice in the administration of funds. The action of the council will be chiefly directed, as recommended by the Government committee, to arranging for the interchange of necessary information, endeavouring to arrive at an understanding as to methods and standards of relief, and assisting in the development of local organisation. The council accordingly invites the sympathy and co-operation of all persons interested in the relief of those who have suffered in consequence of the war. The council is now issuing a form of request for certain information in respect of the various funds with the view of ascertaining the amounts remaining available throughout the country for purposes of relief and the opinions of the committees as to their appropriation. The information thus obtained will enable the council to estimate how far the funds subscribed are adequate, and possibly to offer suggestions whereby greater uniformity in the administration of relief may be attained. The offices of the council are at the Mansion House.

AMUSEMENTS.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES,
SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON.

Every evening at 7.45, and Saturday mornings at 2.—The most comfortable and elegant place of amusement in England. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

Obituary.

Lord Armstrong, C.B., L.S.P., D.C.L., F.R.S., died on Thursday morning at his residence, Craigside, Rothbury, Newfoundland. He had been ailing for some time. Sir William George (first Baron) Armstrong, came of Cumberland ancestry. His father was a corn-merchant of Newcastle-on-Tyne. It was in the Tyneside city that Lord Armstrong was born in 1810. He was confined to the house for months together to avoid the hard winters and the still more trying east winds of the early spring. The old spinning wheels and other adaptable articles to be found in the house were converted by him into mechanical appliances during the long tedious hours, and young Armstrong used to set his machinery in motion by the aid of descending weights suspended from the staircase railing. When he could get out he would spend hours in the shop of an old joiner. He was educated at Bishop Auckland Grammar School. On leaving school he entered the office of Mr. Donkin, a solicitor in Newcastle, and completed his legal studies at the chambers in the Temple of the late Baron Watson, at that time a special pleader. In 1833 he returned to his native town, and became a junior partner in Mr. Donkin's firm. But the tendency of his mind was always towards mechanics and science, and these ultimately diverted him altogether from the law. Mr. Armstrong finally shook the dust of the lawyer's office from his feet, and the productions of the Elswick Company underwent constant improvements at his hands. During the Crimean War the difficulty which was experienced, especially at Inkerman, in bringing up the heavy artillery suggested to him the question: "Why could not lighter guns obtain a greater range?" Inkerman was fought in Nov., 1854. Within a month he had solved the problem, convinced the War Secretary, and constructed a gun. Next the projectile claimed his attention. The arrow in its flight suggested a new form, and for a couple of years he experimented with his new inventions in out-of-the-way places, on the moors and by the shore of the north-eastern coast. At last in the spring of 1856 everything was ready for the official scrutiny, and subsequently a Parliamentary committee reported strongly in favour of the Armstrong gun, "a combination," to quote its report, of "construction, breechloading, rifling, and coating projectiles with a soft metal." With a noble patriotism he presented his patents to the country, the Queen conferred on him a C.B., he was appointed Engineer of Rifled Ordnance, at a salary of £2,000 a year, and subsequently Superintendent of the Gun Factory. Woolwich was quite unprepared for constructing these new weapons, and Lord Derby's Government entered into a contract whereby they were to be made on the Tyne, and thus the Elswick Ordnance Company came into being. This arrangement continued until 1863, when Sir William Armstrong resigned his appointment and the contract was cancelled by mutual consent. So many have been the improvements since 1856 that few of the original features of the Armstrong gun now remain. The first 3-ton gun has grown to the monster 110-ton, though these have not proved altogether successful, and a smaller weapon now answers all requirements, at least for naval purposes. To gun-making the Elswick firm soon added shipbuilding, and their productions are to be found in every quarter of the globe, while the works extend to 70 acres and employ 5,000 men. He received the honorary degree of LL.D. Lord Armstrong leaves no heir to the barony.

ARMY.

Lord Dormer, twelfth baron, died at Grove Park, near Warwick, on the 24th inst., aged 70. Having been educated at Oscott College, he joined the Royal Horse Guards, but was immediately transferred to the Grenadier Guards, and then exchanged as Captain to the 74th Highlanders in 1858. He served in the Crimean Campaign with the Grenadier Guards, joining the 74th in India. He was appointed a District Inspector of Musketry in 1863, and retired by sale of his commission.

Col. George Todington Osborn, Lieut.-Colonel, retired list, late of the 11th Regiment, died very suddenly on the 24th inst. at his residence, Upper Addison Gardens, Kensington, aged 69. Born Feb. 19, 1831, he joined the Army as Ensign Dec. 1, 1848; became Lieut.-Colonel March 7, 1877; and retired on retired pay with the hon. rank of Colonel Oct. 31, 1877.

Lieut.-Col. Francis Edward Carleton, retired list, King's Own Scottish Borderers, died on the 15th inst. at his residence, Windsor Terrace, Plymouth, aged 57. He joined the Army as Ensign, Jan. 29, 1861; became Lieut. March 1, 1864; Captain, Sept. 3, 1870; Major, July 1, 1881; and Lieut.-Colonel, commanding 1st Batn. K.O.S.B.'s, June 27, 1889; retiring June 27, 1892. He served in the Afghan War, 1879-80, with the Khyber Field Force, under Lieut.-Gen. Bright (medal).

Lieut.-Col. Philip Campbell-Wyndham, retired list, Bengal Army, died at Corhampton, Bishop Waltham, Hants, on the 23rd inst., in his 79th year. Son of the Hon. F. Pleydell-Bouverie, and a grandson of the second Earl Radnor, he was born in 1821; joined the Indian Army in 1839; became Major, April 6, 1862; and retired with the hon. rank of Lieut.-Colonel, Oct. 24, 1863.

Lieut.-Colonel William Edward Shaw, Captain, retired list, formerly of the 12th Lancers, 16th Lancers, and 3rd Dragoon Guards, died at Caterham on the 19th inst. Born May 7, 1836, he joined the Army Feb. 24, 1857. He served in the Indian Mutiny 1858-59 with the 12th Lancers, including the operations of the Sangar and Nerbudda Field Forces under Gen. Whitlock (medal with clasp). He commanded a squadron of the 7th Hussars, with the Eusofzai Field Force in 1863, under Brig.-Gen. Shipley. He retired in 1878, and was granted the hon. rank of Lieut.-Colonel Oct. 1, 1881.

Major James Henderson Sellick, Indian Medical Service, died at Mandalay, on Nov. 25. Born Jan. 17, 1863, he joined the Army Sept. 30, 1886, and became Major Sept. 30, 1898.

Lieut. Arthur Newton Dalglish Fagan, I.S.C. (1st Hyderabad Lancers), was drowned at Bolaram, Deccan, on the 21st inst., "whilst trying to save the life of another," as the telegram puts it. Born Dec. 26, 1876, the son of Major-Gen. J. L. Fagan, he was appointed to the Worcestershire Regiment as 2nd Lieut. June 22, 1892, and, joining the Staffords two years later, served through the Tirah Campaign, 1897-98, being present at the actions of Sampagha and the Arbanga Passes, and in the operations against the Khaul Khel Chamkannis and in the Bazar Valley (medal, with two clasps).

Lieut. Charles William Parry Dalyell, R.G.A. (15th Company S.T. Western Division), died at Pretoria, of enteric, on Dec. 7. He was a son of Lieut.-Gen. J. T. Dalyell (retired), and entered the Royal Artillery from Woolwich in September, 1897, and proceeded with his company to South Africa last December.

FOREIGN.

Field-Marshal Count von Blumenthal.—With the solitary exception of King Albert of Saxony, the last of the great German soldiers of the war of 1870-71 has passed away, Field-Marshal Count von Blumenthal having died at Quellendorf, near Cöthen, on the 21st inst., at the patriarchal age of 90. Leonard von Blumenthal was born in 1810 at Schwedt on the Oder, and was the son of Capt. Louis von Blumenthal, who commanded a squadron of the 2nd Prussian Dragoons at Dennewitz in 1813, and died of wounds received in that battle. At the age of 10 young Blumenthal entered the corps of Prussian cadets, and received his commission at the age of 17 in the Guards Fusiliers. From this slow but sure school Blumenthal was transferred at the age of 40 with the rank of Captain to the Prussian General Staff, after having previously studied for a few years at the Staff College. In 1849 he had an opportunity of testing his knowledge in the field when he became Chief of the Staff of the Schleswig-Holstein army, and though the campaign ended in defeat at Fredericia, it is on record that the decisive battle was fought against his urgent advice, and that he prophesied the issue. For the next ten years he worked hard on the Prussian General Staff and did not obtain the command of a regiment till 1860, when he was 50 years of age. His future, however, was now assured, since he had attracted the notice of Prince Frederick Charles, who made him his personal aide-de-camp. In the "Red Prince" Blumenthal found an enthusiastic supporter. When operations were begun against Denmark in 1864 Blumenthal, then Chief of the Staff of the Third Army Corps, accompanied Prince Frederick Charles to the theatre of war in the same capacity. In 1866 he was appointed Chief of the Staff of the Crown Prince's troops, and his relations with his Royal commander remained unclouded and fruitful in achievement throughout the campaign. When the war of 1870 broke out Blumenthal was at once appointed Chief of the Staff of the Crown Prince's army, and this approved combination led to still more glorious successes. Blumenthal's genius now shone with steady and unsurpassed brightness. He never failed to grasp the situation. His commands were always brief, clear, and to the point. He deliberated and decided almost without advice and with no aid save that of his marvellous memory and the map. After the war Gen. von Blumenthal was made a Count by the Emperor William I. in 1883 and a Field Marshal by the Emperor Frederick in 1888. He commanded the Fourth Army Corps for some years, and was afterwards in succession Inspector-General of the Fourth and Third Army inspections, and finally Inspector-General of the Army. On July 30, 1897, he celebrated the 70th anniversary of his connection with the army. Like Moltke he was throughout life a man of sterling simplicity of character and manners, and his kindness and courtesy to high and low were unflinching. He married in 1852 Delicia Anna von Vyner, nee Calthorpe, of the county of Warwick, who predeceased him in 1890. He is survived by two sons, one of whom is a Prussian Lieut.-General, commanding the 19th Division, and by three daughters

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Seeing in your paper of the 21st inst. there is a possibility of service marks being allowed to count at the March, 1901, Militia Competitive Examination, it is decidedly unfair; and if the examination is of any use why should men who make their marks on the examination papers be defeated by those who make fewer and, with the assistance of service marks, get ahead? No doubt Militia officers who are serving in South Africa and abroad should be first considered. Why not gazette them at once to regiments of the line (and retain them with their Militia regiments) as supernumeraries? Also gazette those officers who are embodied over a year, after the batch of Militia officers who will pass in March? No doubt an outcry would be raised at this proposition, but, taking into consideration the large proportion of University candidates who have been gazetted, together with Volunteers and Colonials who have passed no examination, the Militiaman who has served his country and will receive his medal ought to be considered. If we want rank and file it is to the Militia we look to send men to the Regulars.

A SOLDIER OF THE PAST.

It has been decided that Mark IV. 303 rifle ammunition is only to be used for "deliberate individual practice," and not for "collective practice."

THE bicycle is taking its place in South African warfare. Major-Gen. Baden-Powell has decided to have a strong contingent of wheelmen under his command, and large orders for military machines have been placed with makers at Coventry and elsewhere.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

JOHN HARDMAN & Co.
25 COCKSPUR ST. | NEWHALL HILL
LONDON | BIRMINGHAM
— ARTISTS IN —
Stained Glass Windows
and Memorial Brasses.

MEMORIAL BRASSES & BRONZES
J. WIPPEL & CO. EXETER
4 & 5 DUNCANNON ST. | LONDON,
CHANCERY CROSS.
DESIGNERS & MANUFACTURERS

HART, SON,
PEARCE, & CO. LTD
Metal Workers.

— SPECIALITÉ —

Memorial Brasses.

88-91, DRURY LANE,
LONDON, W.C.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards.—Capt. Carden, son of Col. Sir Frederick Carden, of Stargrove, near Newbury, who arrived home on Monday last from South Africa to rejoin his regiment, received a hearty reception on reaching his father's residence.

2nd Life Guards.—Capt. Champion-de Crespigny is about to be seconded on appointment as A.D.C. to Lord Curzon in India. Capt. Lord Longford will be restored to the establishment on rejoining from service with the Irish Yeomanry. Capt. Trotter will remain seconded on joining Sir Redvers Buller's staff at Aldershot on the 10th prox. Capt. the Hon. M. Bowes-Lyon, having arrived home from the Cape in the Braemar Castle, takes up the duties of adjutant in succession to Capt. Ellison.

Royal Horse Guards (Blue).—Capt. the Marquis of Tullibardine, D.S.O., is to be seconded for special service in South Africa, where he will command the Scottish Horse which he is raising at Johannesburg.

1st (King's) Dragoon Guards.—Orders were received at Aldershot on Saturday for the regiment to be prepared for embarkation for South Africa on Jan. 8. It will go out with Lieut.-Col. Owen in command. The regiment, which arrived home in Nov., 1891, was at the Cape from Feb., 1879, to Oct., 1880. It was then commanded by Col. H. Alexander when it took part in the Zulu war. Capt. Langton and 2nd Lieuts. Kayser and Crocley remain behind with the Reserve Squadron. The embarking strength is to be 584, with 554 horses. The men are to be armed with rifles.

3rd Dragoon Guards.—Orders have been received at the Curragh for the regiment to be in readiness to embark immediately for South Africa. It was quartered in Natal for two years prior to its return home in 1898.

5th Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. Otter has arrived in England from South Africa, invalided.

6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers).—Col. Porter, who went out from Aldershot in command, and was afterwards appointed to the command of a Union Brigade, consisting of the Carabiniers, Scots Greys, and Inniskilling Dragoons, with the rank of brigadier-general, arrived at Plymouth on Tuesday from Southampton, where he landed from the Braemar Castle on return from South Africa. Col. Porter at once left Plymouth for Saltash, and drove to his Cornish residence at Trematon Castle. A public reception was accorded him. Col. Porter had three horses shot under him in the course of the campaign, and was once grazed on the knee.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys).—Lieut. Lawson, when letters left the Cape, had joined the staff of Brig.-Gen. Gordon, commanding a cavalry brigade, as A.D.C.

4th Hussars.—Lieut. Clutterbuck who has been on active service in South Africa, has arrived home, invalided.

6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons.—Lieuts. Paterson and Harris have arrived home from South Africa, and Lieut. Bull is expected immediately.

8th Hussars.—A comrade in a private letter writes of Col. Le Gallais in most affectionate terms. He had served with him, he says, almost since the date of his arrival in South Africa, and considers his loss "an irreparable one at the present moment. He was a man after Lord Kitchener's own heart: an enthusiast where duty was concerned, and a soldier who soldiered for soldiering sake, not with the view of making his name known, or gaining honours. To obey his orders was a pleasure to all, because officers and men all knew how absolutely well thought out every instruction had been. To say that we mourn his loss is inadequately to express our feelings, for it is only now, when he is gone from among us for ever, that we can fully realise how much we owed to his splendid example of unselfishness and thoughtfulness for all about him. His name ought long to be revered in the Royal Irish Hussars, a regiment of which he was so proud to belong, and of whose honour he was so jealous."

9th Lancers.—Lieut. Lord Frederick Blackwood was wounded in Lieut.-Colonel Grenfell's skirmish with Kruitzinger's commando, at Plaister Heuvel on Monday.

10th Hussars.—Col. Wilson who took the regiment out to South Africa, has arrived in England this week, in view of his transfer to half-pay, carrying with him the respect and good wishes of all ranks, who fully recognise the work he has done to raise the gallant 10th to the high standard of field efficiency, to which they have been brought during the last four years.

12th Lancers.—The committee entrusted with the erection of the memorial to the late Lieut.-Colonel Lord Airlie, killed at Diamond Hill, near Pretoria, on June 11, have accepted the plans of Mr. T. M. Cappon, Dundee, for the construction of the monument on Tullich Hill (1,230 ft. above the sea level), near the family seat at Cortachy. The monument, which closely follows the character of the tower at Airlie Castle, is a modification of the old Scotch peel tower, about 65 ft. high, with the old-fashioned arrangement of stair, signal platform, and beacon introduced. The base proper will be worked out in rock-faced ashlar, relieved with dressed panels with carved representations of the family arms and badges of the different regiments in which the late Earl served. The remainder of the tower will be executed in rock-faced, squared rubble. The Countess of Airlie has sent a letter to the committee, expressing her appreciation of the honour done to the memory of her late husband. Capt. Crawley is home from South Africa, where he has been on special service. In memory of Lieut. Keswick, son of Mr. W. Keswick, who was killed in action on March 7, four stained glass windows have been placed in the chancel of the parish church of East Clandon, Surrey.

15th Hussars.—Capt. Knowles, who has been on special service in South Africa, has arrived in England, and will shortly proceed to India to rejoin headquarters.

16th Lancers.—The survivors of the Sikh war of 1846, who served with the regiment, will be the guests of the members of the Aliwal Dinner Fund at a dinner to be held at the Holborn Restaurant on Jan. 28, to celebrate the 55th anniversary of the charge at Aliwal, in which the regiment so greatly distinguished itself. There are now only six survivors, and it is expected that three will attend the dinner; the others are too aged and infirm to put in an appearance, but they will be looked after in another way. Officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the regiment, past or present, wishing to attend should communicate with the hon. secretary, 57½, Old Broad Street, E.C.

20th Hussars.—Lieut. Street vacates his appointment as A.D.C. to the Governor of Barbados. Lieut. Hussey, who has been on active service in South Africa, has arrived home invalided.

21st Lancers.—Capt. Hutchison and 2nd Lieut. De Crespigny have arrived home from the Cape.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Lieut.-Col. A. C. Bailward commands the Brigade Division R.F.A., which occupies the new Deepcut Hut Barracks, Frimley, near Aldershot. It is made up of the 137th Battery (Major W. G. Botfield), 138th Battery (Major H. S. White), and 139th Battery (Major G. S. Duffus).

The new Ewshot Hut Barracks at Aldershot have been taken over by a Brigade Division, made up of the 146th, 147th, and 148th Batteries R.F.A., commanded respectively by Majors C. Battiscombe, E. F. Hall, and C. Lyon. These batteries are each armed with four 5-in. howitzers.

Appointments have been made to R.H.A. thus:—Majors A. S. Tyndale-Biscoe to K Battery at Rawul Pindi, and A. Stokes to W Battery at Woolwich; Capt. W. B. Eden to A Battery at Dorchester, E. W. M. Powell to M Battery in South Africa, A. F. R. Thomson to P Battery in South Africa, and H. Reed, V.C., to U Battery in South Africa; Lieuts. J. D. B. Fulton to G Battery in South Africa, H. W. Hill and W. E. Clark to J Battery in South Africa, E. H. H. Elliott to M Battery in South Africa, G. L. Butler, C. N. Buchanan Dunlop, and H. L. Nevill, to P Battery in South Africa, W. H. N. Cantlie and F. Rainsford-Hannay to S Battery in South Africa, B. Dickson to V Battery at St. John's Wood, and H. C. Rochford-Boyd to AA Battery at Newbridge. The following R.F.A. officers are attached, viz., 2nd Lieuts E. H. Arkwright and H. S. S. Vaughan to S Battery at Aldershot, N. J. E. Finnes to V Battery at St. John's Wood, G. M. A. Gregory to X Battery at Woolwich, and W. H. J. Barbier Starkey and B. R. W. Boor to Q Battery at Newbridge.

Major J. F. N. Birch, Capt. N. B. Roberts, H. M. Montgomery, K. Combe, W. J. Napier, and H. G. Ravenhill, Lieut. F. R. Sedgwick, and 2nd Lieut. R. A. Anstruther have arrived home from South Africa.

Lieut. R. F. Finlay is a candidate for the Indian Staff Corps, and has been posted to the 15th Madras Infantry.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Col. T. R. Main, Majors H. J. W. Jerome and J. H. Cowan, Capt. C. G. Falcon, and Lieuts. P. G. H. Hogg and V. H. James have arrived home from active service in South Africa.

Lieut.-Col. A. H. Kenney has been appointed District Engineer at Exeter.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Lieuts. Cameron, 1st Batn., and the Hon. R. Lygon, 3rd Batn., are about to be seconded, on appointment, as A.D.C.'s to Lord Amthill, at Madras.

Coldstream Guards.—Lieut.-Col. Surtees is expected at Chelsea Barracks next week from South Africa to assume command on promotion.

Scots Guards.—Capt. de Kierzkowski-Steuart, 3rd Batn., is about to be seconded on appointment to the South African Constabulary for duty.

Irish Guards.—Brevet Major Godley and Capt. FitzClarence, V.C., are to be brought on to the establishment on return from South Africa.

Royal Scots (1st).—Capt. Neill, 2nd Batn., is about to be seconded on appointment as chief storekeeper in Nigeria. Lieuts. Wildes and Scott, 2nd Batn., have applied to join the Indian Staff Corps. The former is posted to the 16th Madras Infantry and the latter to the 3rd Punjab Cavalry.

Queen's (2nd).—Major Burrell and Capt. Whinfield, 2nd Batn., have arrived home from South Africa invalided.

East Kent Regiment (3rd).—A very pleasant evening was spent at the Prince of Wales' Soldiers' and Sailors' Institute, Canterbury, one day last week, when about 200 wives and children of the men were entertained to tea. Afterwards Mrs. Daughish, wife of Major Daughish, made a presentation, on behalf of the soldiers' wives, to Mrs. Kelly, of an inkstand and writing case. Col. Kelly, who is retiring from the command of the district, thanked the company on behalf of his wife, and expressed his sorrow at leaving them. Qrmr.-Sergt. Bennell, on behalf of those present, spoke of the loss they would sustain by the departure of Col. Kelly, and also of Mrs. Kelly, who was always willing to do anything in her power for the good of the wives of the men. Brevet-Major Bainbridge, who has been in command of the 7th Mounted Infantry Corps, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and has done excellent work upon the enemy, has just arrived in England from the Cape invalided. His departure was deeply regretted by all ranks under his command.

King's Own Regiment (4th).—The Mounted Infantry Company, 130 strong, is to leave Aldershot immediately for South Africa. Capt. Laurie will be in command, with Lieuts. Chichester and Stockwell, and 2nd Lieuts. Mackay and Money.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Capt. Ferguson, 1st Batn., has arrived home from South Africa, invalided. Capt. Leach vacates his appointment as adjutant of the 4th Batn. Yorkshire Regiment. Capt. Turner, 1st Batn., is to be seconded on taking up the adjutancy of the 4th Batn. Bedfordshire Regiment in South Africa.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Major Landon, who has been second in command of the 2nd Batn. in South Africa since the beginning of the year, has arrived home invalided, and will rejoin the 1st Batn. in India as soon as the condition of his health will permit. It was with this battalion he served in the Dongola and Khartoum Expeditions. Major Landon commanded his battalion for some time before his departure for England, in the absence of Lieut.-Col. Quayle-Jones on sick leave in England. The latter officer is now quite restored to health, and resumes his duties at the front.

King's Regiment (8th).—Capt. d'Amico has arrived home from South Africa to join the 2nd Batn. at Dublin, on promotion.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—Capt. Lascelles, who has been acting as D.A.A.G. at the base, Cape Town, has been obliged to hand over his duties and return home in consequence of ill-health. He has now arrived, and has derived much benefit from the voyage. A correspondent at Cape Town speaks in a private letter of "the good work this officer has done, and of the great respect in which he is held by all who have had official dealings with him."

Lincolnshire Regiment (10th).—Capt. Gamble is ordered to join the 2nd Batn. Royal Berkshire Regiment in South Africa on promotion to a majority by selection.

Suffolk Regiment (12th).—Major Cubitt, who has been second in command of the 2nd Batn. since its arrival in South Africa, has come home on sick leave. His health is improving.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Lieut.-Col. Lysons, V.C., takes over command of the 1st Batn. at Mooltan, on promotion from the 1st Batn. Royal Fusiliers at Nusseerabad. Major Logan-Horne has been appointed second in command of the 1st Batn. in India, vice Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Pilcher, promoted to the command of the 2nd Batn. in South Africa. He has been in the performance of the duties for some time past during Col. Pilcher's absence on service.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—Capt. Copland, who has been attached to the Staff of the Military Governor of Johannesburg, has arrived home invalided.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—Lieut. Fraser, 2nd Batn., from the Indian Staff Corps, is posted to the 1st Bengal Infantry.

Royal Scots Fusiliers (21st).—The adjutancy of the 3rd (Militia) Batn. becomes vacant by the retirement from the Service of Capt. Thorburn, who has held the appointment since Sept. 16, 1895. Capt. Dick, 2nd Batn., has arrived home from South Africa, invalided.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers (23rd).—Capt. Gabbett, 1st Batn., has arrived home from South Africa, invalided.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—Capt. Gaisford, whose term of appointment as Inspector of Musketry, Eastern District, expires on Feb. 1, is to be continued in the post until Feb. 28.

King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th).—Lieut.-Col. Godfray has handed over command of the 1st Batn. to Major Mayne, he having been selected for duty as an A.A.G. at the front.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th).—The Mounted Infantry Company will leave Aldershot immediately for South Africa, 130 strong. Capt. Johnson, 1st King's Own, will be in command, with Capt. Kennedy and Lieut. Cathcart, 3rd Batn., and 2nd Lieut. Matson.

East Lancashire Regiment (30th).—Major Gallwey, C.M.G., her Majesty's Consul and Deputy-Commissioner, Southern Nigeria, has come home on leave. It is believed that steps will be taken shortly to recognise the great services this able administrator has rendered for ten years' past by his promotion to a half-pay lieutenant-colonelcy. Such a step is certainly due to him, having regard to his weighty responsibilities.

East Surrey Regiment (31st).—Lieut. Elphinstone-Dalrymple has applied to join the Indian Staff Corps, and is posted to the 11th Madras Infantry.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd).—Capt. Jones-Parry has completed his term of appointment as adjutant of the 2nd Volunteer Batn.

Hampshire Regiment (37th).—Capt. Parker is ordered to join the 2nd Batn. (67th) in South Africa, on promotion.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th).—Major Williams, who has been A.D.C. to Major-Gen. Tucker in South Africa, had, when the mail left, been selected for the command of a corps of Mounted Infantry.

Welsh Regiment (41st).—Capt. Bayliff, Royal Marines, has taken up duty as adjutant of the 2nd Volunteer Batn. at Bridge End, Glamorganshire.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (43rd).—Major Hanbury-Williams, who has left Cape Town this week to take up his appointment as private secretary to Mr. Brodrick at the War Office, has, says a correspondent, "won all hearts by his urbanity and good feeling during the time he has been at the Cape." This opinion is certainly more than justified by a telegram from Cape Town, which states that a representative gathering of citizens was held in the Town House on the 21st inst., including the Archbishop, the clergy of all denominations, the local Members of Parliament, and the leading merchants, for the purpose of raising a fund to present the gallant officer with a service of plate on his departure from South Africa. The presentation was made by the Mayor of Cape Town on Monday, when his worship spoke in the highest terms of the invaluable services rendered by the recipient.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (46th).—Lieut.-Col. Ashby writes from Middelburg, Transvaal:—

"I fear many of our kind friends at home who have sent comforts to the battalion must feel surprised that in many cases no acknowledgment or word of thanks has been received from us for their kind gifts. Yesterday no less than 800 pillows arrived from some kind but unknown friends; also a quantity of soap and some writing paper and pencils. There is nothing to show where these came from, except that the boxes have the name of Messrs. Spooner and Co., of Plymouth, on them. I trust, therefore, that those who so kindly contributed towards these kind presents will, through your paper, accept my very warmest thanks on behalf of the non-commissioned officers and men for such useful presents, which are highly appreciated by them. Many cases sent out to the battalion have as yet not got beyond Bloemfontein, but I am now hoping to receive them shortly."

Northamptonshire Regiment (48th).—Col. Hill succeeds to the command of the 3rd (Militia) Batn., vice Col. Stopford Sackville, who has retired. The latter took the late Marquis of Exeter's place at the head of the double battalion in May, 1898. Since then the establishment has been reduced, so that Lord Westmorland, who is senior major, will not at present obtain promotion to lieutenant-colonel.

Middlesex Regiment (57th).—Capt. Randolph is to be seconded for employment as a station staff officer, 1st Class, Madras.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—A stained glass memorial window to the late Prince Christian Victor is to be placed in the Royal Chapel, Windsor Great Park, which the late Prince used to attend. It is being subscribed for by Windsor Park Crown employees, and will be placed over the west entrance. Major Fortescue, second in command of the 1st Batn., has arrived in England from South Africa. Capt. Clark and Horden have arrived from South Africa to rejoin the 4th Batn. in Ireland, from which they have been detached for active service.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—The Mounted Infantry Company of the 5th and 6th (Militia) Batns. leaves Aldershot immediately for South Africa, 120 strong. Capt. Jackson, 5th Batn., will be in command, with 2nd Lieut. Fellowes, 2nd West India Regt.; Machin, 5th Batn. Royal Fusiliers; Kerans, 3rd Batn. Leicestershire Regt., and Carter, 1st V.B. Royal Berkshire Regiment.

York and Lancaster Regiment (65th).—Major Scholes has been appointed second in command, vice Major Lousada promoted to the command of the 2nd Batn. (84th) in India.

Royal Berkshire Regiment (66th).—Major Gamble joins this battalion in South Africa on promotion from the Lincolnshire Regiment.

Hampshire Regiment (67th).—Col. Briggs, whose term of command was extended in August last, is on passage home from the Cape and will arrive early next week.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Capt. Cumming has arrived home from South Africa.

Highland Light Infantry (71st).—The Commissioner of British Central Africa has telegraphed from Zomba to the Foreign Office a report of the death of Assistant-Collector Edward Gordon Stanley Creek, late of this regiment, of blackwater fever, on Dec. 8. Mr. Creek, who was 27 years of age, was nominated by Lord Salisbury for an appointment in the B.C.A. Civil Service soon after he had completed two years' service in the H.L.I. He was educated at Marlborough and R.M.C., and was the elder son of Col. Creek, retired pay, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. His loss will be keenly felt by his large circle of friends.

Black Watch (73rd).—Lieut. Sir William Dick-Cunyngham, who left Gen. Chapman's staff in Scotland to proceed on active service in South Africa, and has been employed for some time as a railway staff officer, has been selected to act as adjutant of the corps of Scottish Horse which is being raised at Johannesburg.

Highland Light Infantry (74th).—The Mounted Infantry Company, which is about to leave England for South Africa, will be 130 strong, Capt. Purvis will be in command, with Capt. de Berry, Lieuts. Chichester and Stockwell and Lieut. Hitchcock, 3rd Batn. Royal Fusiliers.

York and Lancaster Regiment (84th).—Lieut. Lind has applied to join the Indian Staff Corps, and has been posted to the 3rd Bombay Light Infantry.

Royal Irish Rifles (86th).—Major Tobin has been appointed second in command of the 1st Batn. (83rd) in India, vice Major Swaine, promoted to the command.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (89th).—Col. Reeves completes on Monday his extended term in command and will be placed on half-pay, but is to be continued in employment in South Africa, where he has been for some time holding a command on the lines of communication.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st).—Capt. and Adj. Glasfurd has arrived home from South Africa, invalided.

Derbyshire Regiment (95th).—Major Wyll has been posted to the 1st Batn. (45th) in South Africa on promotion to the command.

Wiltshire Regiment (99th).—Gen. Dunne, colonel of the regiment, has left England for Alassio, Italy, where his son, invalided from the Imperial Yeomanry, has been sent for the benefit of his health.

Rifle Brigade.—Major Lamb, who has been serving as second in command of the 1st Batn. since its arrival in South Africa, has arrived home invalided; he has derived much benefit from the sea voyage. Lieut. Holland has also arrived home.

West India Regiment.—The war in Ashanti being now at an end, Majors Stansfeld and Ryde, and Capt. Rew and Thorne have returned to Sierra Leone.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Lieut.-Col. H. L. Battersby, Majors W. G. A. Bedford, R. W. Lord, and J. G. Black and Capt. K. M. Cameron are among recent arrivals from South Africa.

Reviews.

THE "VANITY FAIR" ALBUM.

The genial pencil of "Spy," and the kindly and witty spirit which informs the productions of that clever artist, have found new opportunities in the fresh volume—and we draw attention to the fact that it is the thirty-second—of the Vanity Fair Album. Probably "Spy" has done few better pictures than his "General Group." The representation of the generals is admirable, and not merely have we their personal appearance, but the actual character of the subjects is suggested. Lord Roberts, Sir Redvers Buller, and Gen. Baden-Powell are admirable. Not less noteworthy are the individual portraits of Lord Salisbury and Mr. Kruger, and of many members of the Government, of several judges, and of a great number of men of the day, including Gen. Baden-Powell, Gen. French, Lord Walter Kerr, and Sir George White. In many of these pictures "Spy" is content with portraiture, but in some, as in the figure of the Maharajah of Patiala, he revels in the extreme of caricature. There are inequalities in the work, of course, but it may be said of him that he touches nothing that he does not in some way illuminate, and genial Jehu Junr., his companion, has contributed very bright biographical and critical notices. Altogether, it may be said that the new Vanity Fair Album is equal to any of its predecessors, and that is saying a great deal.

KHURASAN AND SISTAN.

This is the title of the most entertaining and instructive narrative of travel and administration by Lieut.-Col. C. E. Yate, C.S.I., C.M.G. (Blackwood and Son). In the same author's Northern Afghanistan, he gave a description of Afghan Turkistan in relation to the work of the Boundary Commission, and his present book carries us further west into Persia, and describes each district of the two provinces in detail. It also includes excellent accounts of the Goklan and Yamut Turkomans, who have hitherto been almost unknown, and scarcely visited by Europeans. It was in 1893 that the author was directed to proceed to the Northern Frontier of Afghanistan to settle certain small disputes with Russia regarding the Kushk River canals, and then to proceed to Mashad in Persia, in order to take up the post of Agent to the Governor-General of India and Consul General for Khurasan and Sistan. He travelled under an escort of Afghan cavalry and gives an excellent description of their quality. "A cheerier, heartier, and more willing man than the Afghan Sowar in his own country, is hard to find." He tells us that Afghan officials were curiously ignorant of everything beyond the frontier, for they were not permitted to cross the borders or to mix with foreigners, but he saw that the Ameer had greatly strengthened his position in the countries he passed through. Arrived at the frontier, he was treated with great rudeness by the Russian officer at the Kushk post, but the Russian officers who arrived to settle the disputes were very amiable, and everything went well. Indeed, Colonel Yate throughout his book speaks in terms of warm admiration of the Russians he met. We have not space to say anything about his extremely interesting account of his travels through Persia and his sojourn at Mashad, but we will remark that the general reader will find it extremely entertaining, and that to the merchant and the traveller it will be invaluable. It is, indeed, one of the best accounts of Persia and the Persians ever written, and it has the advantage of being well illustrated. Colonel Yate does not deal specifically with political problems, but on his return he met some officers whom he had known in connection with the Afghan Boundary Commission, including Colonel Alikhanoff. One point upon which they constantly touched was the division of Afghanistan between England and Russia. It was astonishing to see how almost every Russian officer harped upon that subject, seeming to forget that Afghanistan has received a pledge from England that her integrity would be respected. This fact the Russians on the frontier seem not at all to have realised. They were strongly in favour of uniting the Indian and Trans-Caspian railways, the main object apparently being to get the Russian railway into Herat. Colonel Yate gives good reasons why no such arrangement should be thought of.

ANNUAL VOLUMES AND CURRENT ISSUES.

Debrett's Peerage, Baronage, and Knightage (Dean and Son), of which we have received "The Royal Edition," claims precedence of all its companions. Having borne upon its title page the index dates of three centuries, it now sees the dawn of a second century of existence, and in every page bears the evidence of that marvellous accuracy and laborious care which have always distinguished it. Nothing illustrates its rapid growth and increased value more than a comparison of a Debrett published, say, in the early sixties and a volume of the present day. Then there were 400 pages, now there are over 2,000. Then there were names, dates, facts, and other closely packed with names, dates, facts, and other detailed information not obtainable in any other work published. It was hoped to include a list of the

THE BRIGHTEST FLATS IN LONDON.

FITZGEORGE AVENUE

(NEAR ADDISON ROAD STATION, KENSINGTON).

Flats of five to eleven rooms, with Bath (h. and c.), excellent kitchens and offices; passenger lifts; electric light. Perfect sanitation, and Safety from Fire. Gravel soil.

EIGHT ACRES OF GROUND WITH FINE CENTRAL BOULEVARD
£120 to £200 per annum.

CHELSEA COURT,

CHELSEA EMBANKMENT.

Beautiful Suites, with uninterrupted view of the River and Battersea Park.

£250 to £500 per annum.

PRINCE EDWARD'S MANSIONS £200 to £400
(Princes Terrace, Hyde Park, W.)

SHELLEY COURT £100 to £185
(Tite Street, S.W.)

EMBANKMENT GARDENS £200 to £315
(Chelsea, S.W.)

All these Rents include Rates and Taxes.

Apply to any Estate Agent, or to the Resident Agent, Mr. PHILLIPS, at the Estate Office, FitzGeorge Avenue, Kensington, or Chelsea Court, S.W.

aristocracy who have shared in the present war, but that was impossible. It is, however, estimated that over 50 peers and 30 baronets have proceeded on active service, and these pages bear evidence of the sacrifices they have made for Queen and country. Debrett draws attention to the curious later limitations which are found in the patent of the Duke of Fife, in which it would almost appear that some error must have been made, though it deserves to be noted that the enrolment of the patent is not yet to be found in the Record Office. The aggregate number of honours conferred during the last 12 months has reached a total of about 280, and a considerable number of these have been bestowed for naval or military service. It is always a great pleasure to welcome the famous volume of Debrett. The Peerage and Baronetage can, of course, be purchased separately if desired, but "The Royal Edition," which includes both, is the thing to possess.

"Avaunt Perplexity" is the well-chosen motto of Hazell's Annual, which dissipates many a doubt, and is truly an encyclopædic record of men and topics of the day (Hazell and Co.). Mr. W. Palmer edits it with great and commendable skill, and crowds an immensity of information into its pages. The British Navy and the Army are very fully treated in all their branches, and the account of parliamentary and foreign affairs under something like a hundred headings is admirable. There is a full record of the war, and probably not a topic that attracts public attention that is not mentioned in its pages. There are biographies of men of the day, maps illustrating the subjects of the hour, and details concerning a wondrous variety of things. Hazell's Annual is sui generis; there are few who can do without it.

The Live Stock Journal Almanac is too well known to all who are interested in agricultural pursuits to require fresh commendation from us. Here is everything that the farmer and breeder can need, and a volume that will help to keep every man up to date. The special chapters are very numerous, and by most competent authorities. For example, Sir Walter Gilbey has an article, statistical and descriptive, upon Army horses abroad, which is very interesting and well illustrated, and his accounts of the system of remounts and government studs is most useful. There are articles also upon Heavy Shire or Cart Horses, Military Stables and Stable Management (by Mr. C. Stein), The Pony and its Breeding for Army Purposes (by Sir Richard Green Price), Short-horns in 1900, Sporting Dogs, and a great many other subjects. Military men will find the almanac full of interest.

The Advertiser's Guardian (Thomas Dixon) is a capital guide for those who seek publicity. The publisher is well known in all advertising matters, and his hints, suggestions, and accounts of journalistic methods are very valuable, and some of them not a little amusing. It is an excellent handbook, and the classified list of papers is well arranged.

Our enterprising contemporary, Madame, produced a very good Christmas number, wherein there were abundant interests for ladies, both in the way of fashions and fiction. All the pictures were good and some of them excellent, especially the presentation portrait of Lord Roberts, which was a very fine photograph.

Although they have reached us late, we must draw attention to the December number of the Imperial and Colonial Magazine, which is full of interest and very promising, and of the Northern Counties Magazine, in which there is an interesting article on Steam and Speed, largely in relation to torpedo destroyers.

SHORT NOTICES.

Field Duties for Volunteers, by Capt. A. O. Norman, Gordon Highlanders (Peterhead, P. Scrogie). This is a treatise written by one who, as a Volunteer adjutant, knows exactly what citizen soldiers require in the way of instruction. As Capt. Norman says in his preface, his first idea was to give the officers and men of the 3rd V.B. Gordon Highlanders, with which he is doing duty, an opportunity to dip into the subject of the conduct and handling of troops in the field. But his labour evidently was a labour of love, for one only has to read between the lines of what is here written to recognise how thoroughly the subject has been mastered in all its bearings. The pages are full of valuable advice and instruction, and others, besides Volunteers, could read them with advantage. The diagrams are well executed, and, in fact, no pains have been spared to render the little volume perfect in its way. We have no hesitation in recommending it to notice.

The Army Diary and Pocket Book for 1901 (Aldershot, Gale and Polden). A most useful little work this, especially for those who have official engagements to keep, and memoranda to note. It has been compiled with great care by one who evidently knows well what the wants of the Service are. It is scarcely necessary to say that it is well turned out, for everything that emanates from the works of this well-known firm of publishers always is.

The Queen has accepted a copy of "The Life of Admiral Sir Thomas Pasley, Bart.," by his daughter, Miss L. M. S. Pasley.

His Honour Judge Raikes has done very great service to the cause of commerce in publishing the maritime codes of Spain and Portugal and of Holland and Belgium. He now adds The Maritime Codes of Italy (Effingham Wilson). He speaks of them as more comprehensive than the codes of the states already dealt with, because they include a code of maritime law in time of war, and he has, therefore, given the Italian codes a volume to themselves. The book will be welcomed by officers of the merchant marine, but we commend it also to naval officers, because of its treatment of the extremely important regulations concerning belligerent rights of merchant ships, captures by ships of war, neutral ships and goods, recaptures, prize law and prize money, reprisals, and embargoes and neutral rights and duties. The code is very carefully annotated by Judge Raikes, adding very greatly to the value of the book. There is a pathetic note in the introduction. The volume is dedicated to "The Memory of F. H. R., the spring of my every effort, and the source of my every hope for the last twenty years"—that gallant officer killed while in command of a Company of the King's Royal Rifles at Waggon Hill.

FOREIGN.

The Jahrbuch des Deutschen Flotten-Vereins, 1900 (Mittler, Berlin) is the annual of the German Navy League, a stout volume of 700 pages which is quite an encyclopædia of naval things. It has a calendar, an account of German finances, a chapter on the foreign trade of the nations, an estimate of naval strength, the German Naval Budget, the fleets of the world (covering about 250 pages), the development of the German Navy and commerce, and a great deal else. It is, in short, quite a wonderful volume, and an excellent illustration of the strength and vigour of the propaganda for the increase of the German Navy.

Die Wirren in China (Liebel, Berlin), by Lieut.-Col. von Müller, is a serial publication of a popular character, describing the interests of Germany in China and the progress of events. It is extremely patriotic, full of the Weltpolitik, and quite abreast of the times—written, in a word, for "Jung-Deutschland." The story is well told, and the maps and plans are distinctly good. A very useful feature is the diagrammatic account of the forces of the Powers, with a complete list of the German military and naval officers employed.

Capt. GALL

(late Northumberland Fusiliers),

ASSISTED BY

Capt. H. C. KING

(late of 6, Clifton Gardens, W.),

90a and 88, GLOUCESTER ROAD, S.W.

Prepares Candidates for Woolwich, Sandhurst, and all Army Examinations.

SPECIAL CLASSES for University Candidates.

SPECIAL CLASSES for Promotion.

PROMOTION EXAMINATION, November, 1901.

Home Stations:—TEN Officers read at Gloucester Road—ALL Passed.

Capt. GALL or Capt. KING can be seen any day by appointment.

Work for all the above Examinations commences
7th JANUARY, 1901.

ST. PAULI
(BREWERY: BREMEN)
LAGER OR PILSENER BEER.
SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER IN THE MARKET.
ANNUAL EXPORT, 12,000,000 BOTTLES.
Supplied to all the Principal LONDON Clubs,
The Messes of the British and German Navies, &c., &c.
AGENTS IN—

EUROPE:
ALDERSHOT.
ATHENS.
CHATHAM.
CONSTANTINOPLE.
GENOA.
GIBRALTAR.
LISBON.
MALTA.
NAPLES.
PORTSMOUTH.
PLYMOUTH.

ASIA:
ADEN.
BAGHDAD.
BANGKOK.
BOMBAY.
BUSHIRE.
CALCUTTA.
CEYLON.
HONG KONG.
KARACHI.
MADRAS.
MAURITIUS.
NOVA GOA.
PENANG.
RANGOON.
SHANGHAI.
SINGAPORE.
TEHERAN.

AFRICA:
ALEXANDRIA.
BEYROUTH.
BONNY.
CAIRO.
MASSOWAH.
MOMBASA.
SUAKIM.
SUZ.
PORT SAID.
TANGIERS.

AMERICA:
ANTIGUA.
BARBADOS.
DEMETERA.
JAMAICA.
MONTEVIDEO.
ST. LUCIA.
TRINIDAD.

And all the Principal NAVAL and MILITARY Stations.

The ST. PAULI BREWERIES CO., Limited,
8, Great Winchester Street, London, E.C.

JEROME SACCONE, LTD.,
15, COCKSPUR STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W.
AND GIBRALTAR.

Wine and Spirit Merchants to the Army and Navy.
Wines Supplied to Naval Messes Free of Duty.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESSES:—
"Saccone," Gibraltar. "Saccone," London.

SHELTON & BAILL,
Military and Court Tailors,
180, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
(Opposite Burlington Gardens.)

New Designs for Dress Coat (Reg. No. 357721).
Shooting, or Golf Coat (Reg. No. 357576).
Covert Cape and Overalls, Waterproof (Reg. No. 358,490).

SATURDAY REVIEW

OF
Politics, Literature, Science and Art.

(Established 1855.)

EDITED BY HAROLD HODGE.

Naval and Military subjects in the Saturday Review
are treated only by Naval and Military men.

The SATURDAY REVIEW, Price 6d. Weekly.

ADVERTISEMENT AND PUBLISHING OFFICES:
8, SOUTHAMPTON ST., STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

SANDILANDS.
HIGHLAND EQUIPMENT,
KILTS, TREWS,
TARTAN PANTALOONS.
11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, W.

VIKING MILK

AS SUPPLIED TO HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A PERFECT
UNSWEETENED
CONDENSED MILK

From the Milk of Cows pasturing on Norwegian Highlands.
AS GOOD AS BEST FRESH MILK.
Stewards and Managers of MESSES, CLUBS, CANTEENS,
ENCAMPMENTS, &c., at home and abroad, will find this
good pure Milk most serviceable.

Will keep any time in any climate.
WHOLESALE DEPOT,

HENRI NESTLE, 48, Cannon Street, E.C.
Apply for particulars, Sample, &c.

THORNHILL & CO., LTD.,
144, New Bond Street,
LONDON, W.

TROPHIES OF THE
SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

Shells, Pompons, and other Relics
Mounted in Novel, Artistic,
and Useful Designs.

H.M. THE QUEEN'S CHOCOLATE BOX
Appropriately arranged for everyday
use as a lasting memento.

PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE
RED
WHITE & BLUE
COFFEE.

DELICIOUS FOR BREAKFAST & AFTER DINNER.

In making, use rather less quantity, it being much stronger than ordinary Coffee.

TRANSVAAL WAR.

DO NOT FORGET TO SEND FRIENDS AT
THE FRONT A SUPPLY OF . . .

BRAND'S
BEEF TEA
TABULES.

To be had of ALL CHEMISTS, GROCERS, and
STORES. In boxes of 12, price 2s. 3d.

One tabule with boiling water makes a cup of savoury
and nutritious Beef Tea.

BRAND & Co., Ltd., Mayfair,
W.

... THE ...
Royal Navy List.
(Supported by the Admiralty.)

500 PAGES.
Published Quarterly, Price 7s. 6d., post free.

LEAN'S ROYAL NAVY LIST
CONTAINS THE RECORDS OF OVER
10,000 NAVAL OFFICERS
(Active and Retired)

and Full Particulars of Ships and other Information.
"What Whitaker is to the general public, so is 'Lean's Royal Navy List' to everyone interested in the Naval Service."—Nautical
Magazine.

Officers are earnestly requested to send
at once their special services to the Editor.
WITHERBY & Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.
Advt. Dept.:—Granville House, Arundel St., LONDON, W.C.
(Mr. C. Gilbert Wood, Sole Agent.)

Important Notice . . .

The December Supplement of ARMY AND NAVY
STATIONS is now ready. In future, this list will be published on the third week of each month.

THE Burton Brewery
COMPANY, LIMITED,
BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Brewers of the Finest Ales and Stouts.

BONDERS & BLENDERS OF WINES & SPIRITS.
Contractors to Her Majesty's Forces.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO
Mr. E. RUGGARD, General Manager, Burton-on-Trent,
or Messrs. E. BARBER & SON, Custom House Street,
Alexandria, Egypt.

DAY & MARTIN,
LIMITED.

GOLD MEDAL. PARIS, 1900.

A VOLUNTEER WRITES FROM POTCHEFSTROOM:—

Aug. 1, 1900.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been requested by a few comrades to testify
as to the remarkable qualities of your "dubbin" as supplied to the troops by H. M. Government.

Not only for preserving our boots, but for applying to the feet to prevent blisters; as fat for cooking chupatties, and for burning as candles, it is found of great service to "Tommy Atkins at the front."

DAY & MARTIN'S
DUBBIN

Is Waterproof and absolutely the best Article for use on Shooting and Fishing Boots.

Notices.

THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE exchanges with or receives all the foreign and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

All EDITORIAL communications should be addressed to the EDITOR, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The rates of SUBSCRIPTION for the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
are:—

FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.	TO THE COLONIES AND ABROAD.
One Year... .. £1 8 0	One Year... .. £1 12 6
Six Months... .. 0 14 0	Six Months... .. 0 16 3
Three Months... .. 0 7 0	Three Months... .. 0 8 2

Subscriptions (which may commence at any time) should be paid
in advance.

RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The rates for ADVERTISEMENTS in the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE
will be forwarded on application.
BIRTHS, DEATHS, and MARRIAGES ANNOUNCEMENTS:—
Price 5s. not exceeding six lines (about 40 words). P.O. must accompany advertisements.

All BUSINESS communications should be addressed to the MANAGER, ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, London, W.C.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1900.

THE "ROYAL FLEET RESERVE."

THE effort which the Admiralty are about to make to build up a Reserve for the Navy from the personnel of the Navy itself has not unnaturally been confused in some quarters with the general principles of short service in the British and other armies. Several critics have informed the public that the Admiralty scheme is actually the beginning of short service in the Fleet. It involves, however, no such principle; the scheme is in no sense designed to tamper with long service, and of this the vast majority of naval officers will be heartily glad.
Hitherto, the only reserve of naval seamen and stokers has been the Coastguard, and, since no man is admitted to that very capable force under several years' service, the system has little in common with any system of military short service. Unfortunately, as many Naval men will consider, the scheme does not aim at increasing the strength of the Coastguard. In this force the Navy already possesses a highly-trained Reserve of men in the prime of life, ranging between the ages of twenty-eight and fifty years. Its total strength is under 5,000, and, if the cost can be faced, it would be well worth while to double it. The initial cost of such a step would probably not be less than £1,250,000, owing to the necessity of housing the additional men on the existing system, but, if this outlay could be faced, the country would speedily possess a trained Reserve strong enough to man a powerful squadron at two days' notice. This project has not been included in the scheme for the creation of what is to be known as the "Royal Fleet Reserve."

In an examination of the Admiralty scheme the first point to be noted by the public is the wide distinction between the "Royal Fleet Reserve," which is to be composed of fully-trained seamen, marines, stokers, and mechanics, and the Naval Reserve, so-called, composed of merchant seamen and fishermen. It may be said, and without any slight upon our merchant seamen and hardy fishermen, that naval officers, as a body, have never felt much confidence in a force that necessarily lacked training and discipline. It has been felt that six months' peace service in a ship of war cannot transform a fisherman into a man-o'-war's man, and doubts have been expressed whether the gunnery or discipline of the merchant seamen can be brought to fighting pitch in the same brief period. Besides this, only a section of the merchant seamen and fishermen has been embarked for even six months in ships of war. The official reports of captains upon the Reservemen embarked for the annual manœuvres have not, in most cases, been published. It is perfectly well known inside the Service that many of our captains and admirals regard the Reservemen as good raw material and nothing more. The fishermen, it is whispered, are conspicuously inefficient, whilst it is at least doubtful if the 12,000 merchant seamen can safely be withdrawn from their ships at all on the eve of war. Mr. Ritchie, when President of the Board of Trade, officially admitted that the withdrawal of these men would leave the country a mercantile marine manned chiefly by aliens. Legally, the Admiralty can claim them to a man; practically, they will scarcely venture to do so. Hence, it is discreet to assume that a very partially trained Naval Reserve of 26,000 men may be reduced in practice to 14,000 imperfectly trained and undisciplined fishermen. In these circumstances the urgent need of the "Royal Fleet Reserve" becomes very evident. It is to be composed of seamen, marines, stokers, and mechanics trained in the dockyards and afloat, and is to be divided into three classes. Class "A" is to comprise all pensioners of full service, ranging between the age of thirty-seven and fifty years. All such long-service pensioners are already liable to be called out in time of war, but in future such liability is to be more clearly emphasised and defined in regulations. It is to be one of the conditions of entry to every branch of the Navy that men shall serve in the Royal Fleet Reserve up to the age of 50 after receiving their long-service pensions. Service in this force will also involve liability to be called up in times of "emergency." At present, naval pensioners might legally be called up in war, but could hardly be mobilised in an emergency from which war threatened to result. Not until the year 1922 will this "emergency" regulation begin to take effect, since it can only be imposed upon boys and men now joining the Navy, and not upon the men already serving or pensioned.

We may remind our readers that the average blue-jacket earns his pension at the age of 38;

the average marine and stoker at the age of 40. At present, the number of seamen pensioners is about 6,000, and of these no small proportion is probably unfit for active service. The expansion of the active list is, however, annually increasing the supply of pensioners. In a few years the seamen pensioners should number 10,000; but we have no data by which to estimate the number of marine and stoker pensioners. We will hazard the opinion that the total force of seamen, stoker, and marine pensioners does not, to-day, exceed 12,000, out of which some 50 per cent. may perhaps be physically fit for active service.

The "B" class of the new Reserve is a problematical and an experimental force which is now to be open to all men of good character who have quitted the Navy unpensioned. The Admiralty have decided that at present this division of the Reserve is not to exceed 15,000 men. The difficulty will be, we apprehend, to recruit one-third of that number. There are no official statistics to tell us what becomes of the men who quit the Navy unpensioned, but the records of the "Castaways' Club" may throw some useful light on the point. There is a strong presumption that the bulk of these men are absorbed in the civilian labour market, adopt new callings, and entirely lose touch with the Navy. Some are known to join the mercantile marine of this and other countries; some become fishermen; some join the fire brigades, or police. But there is no means of estimating the ultimate destiny of these well-trained seamen, stokers, and Marines—men who, for the most part, have served twelve years in the Navy. The Admiralty are now offering these men a strong inducement to join the Reserve, but it may very possibly fail to attract such as have secured regular employment on shore. In time of peace the conditions of service in the Reserve will not interfere with civil employment. In time of war the whole commercial system of the country may be so dislocated that ex-soldiers and ex-Marines and ex-stokers may welcome service in the Fleet. Besides this the men are offered a life pension of £12 in their declining age, which is a very solid inducement to persons unlikely to have made provision for that period of life. Men eligible for the "B" class of the Reserve will be required to undergo one week of training annually or a fortnight bi-annually. This easy condition cannot interfere with civil employment, and, even if it did, employers of labour will be prepared to facilitate the training, just as they do in the case of Volunteers. The retaining fee offered is 6d. a day, plus the pay of their ratings during training, and the provision of uniforms. The period of engagement is for five years, and may be renewed up to the age of fifty. In war this class of Reservemen may be called out for three years by Royal proclamation. War service may be extended to five years, but in such case the men are to receive extra pay and a small addition to their pensions. It will be seen that the Admiralty are offering liberal terms to the "B" class, but it is most desirable to secure these fully-trained men, since they will constitute the most efficient Naval Reserve in the world. If it proves possible to enrol 15,000 of these men such a Reserve should be of greater value to the country than double the number of fishermen and merchant seamen. Another very satisfactory feature of the scheme, as a whole, is the recognition by the Admiralty of the need of a Reserve of marines and stokers. We owe the inception of the Marine Reserve to Major Gatliff, R.M.L.I., who read an excellent paper on the subject at the Royal United Service Institution a few years ago.

As we have said, it is almost impossible to estimate the future numerical strength of the Royal Fleet Reserve, since so much hangs upon the enrolment of men in the "B" class. The number of long-service pensioners below the age of fifty can be calculated at Whitehall, and the proportion fit for active service can also be ascertained by means of medical examinations held from year to year. Five years hence, and scarcely sooner, the country will be able to judge of the success or failure of the scheme. Absolute failure is impossible, since service in the Reserve is now to become a condition of joining any branch of the Navy; but the scheme will not be a complete success if it fails to attract at least 10,000 men to the "B" class. With an active list of 110,000 men and boys (inclusive of the coastguard) it should be possible to build up from the ranks of the Royal Navy itself a well-trained Reserve of nearly 30,000 men. But this cannot be accomplished rapidly, and meanwhile we shall have to make the best of our present Royal Naval Reserve.

Navy Notes.

In a characteristic letter to the Morning Post Sir George Elliot deals with our naval deficiencies as revealed by that paper and the "Navy League." The Admiral is fearful lest no result should follow the urgent appeal which the authorities mentioned have addressed to Lord Selborne, inasmuch as the complaints referred to are "inherent in the existing system of Admiralty administration and legislative enactments." As an example of what he means, Sir George Elliot points out that at the present time, when, as he says, it is evident that the safety of the Empire demands a large and a rapid increase of our Naval Power, we shall have to wait for months for the approval of Parliament before we can begin, during which time the private shipbuilding yards will have accepted contracts for warships for foreign nations. Then, he says, we shall be again told that our national resources are insufficient. But is it the case, as Sir George Elliot alleges, that we must wait for the approval of Parliament before the Admiralty can take steps in connection with the new programme of shipbuilding, if such be intended? Surely experience shows that if the Government have determined on a new Naval programme, it is quite within the competency of the Admiralty to intimate at once to the contractors that such is the case, and, indeed, to allow the armour manufacturers and the gun and machinery makers to make preparations for the work which must come into their hands. That this has happened in the past is no secret, and why it should not happen now we fail to see.

In regard to another point made by Sir George Elliot we fancy there may be more general agreement. The Navy League, the Morning Post, and other authorities have affirmed that the so-called "two Powers limit of strength" is no longer of value, and that it is necessary to have a new standard for our naval strength. Sir George Elliot's suggestion is that Lord Selborne should appoint some of our latest retired and most experienced admirals to report on the requirements of the Navy for Imperial Defence. He says, "It will be interesting to read a report from such officers as Admirals Fremantle, Culme-Seymour and Hopkins on this point." It would, indeed, be interesting to read such a report, and such a report would in all probability be quite as valuable and important as that of the three admirals on the Naval Manœuvres of 1888. But Admiral Richards and his colleagues were on the active list and two of them were about to fill most important posts at the Admiralty. There cannot possibly be the same sense of responsibility in any admiral who has retired from active service. Moreover to ask the admirals that he has mentioned for their views in an official document would be in a measure to show distrust of the Board, which would be entirely unfair and uncalled for. We call to mind, however, that about the same time that the report was issued on the Manœuvres of 1888 three retired admirals, Sir Geoffrey Hornby, Lord Alcester and Sir Thomas Symonds did set forth their views and opinions in a magazine, and the articles thus contributed played a large part in formulating public opinion, with the subsequent result that the Naval Defence Act was drawn up and became law.

Whether the time has now arrived for an agitation in the direction of strengthening the Admiralty in its demands for further ships is a question which many people are evidently inclined to answer in the affirmative. There are many indications pointing this way, but it is not sufficient that such an agitation should be opportune; what is necessary above all is organisation. What does the London Chamber of Commerce say on the subject? Expenditure on the fleet, it is a commonplace to say, is the nation's insurance, and therefore we look primarily to the City of London as representing the wealth of the nation to take the lead in such an agitation if it becomes necessary. Nevertheless, in one respect, Sir George Elliot hits the right nail on the head. We do not need to wait until the Naval Estimates are announced to learn what is to be the policy of the new Government in regard to the Navy. Certain statements of Lord Salisbury have unquestionably shaken the confidence of many in this connection. It would be very timely, therefore, if Lord Selborne could make an announcement of a reassuring nature. So long as there is a feeling in existence, such as that expressed by Sir George Elliot when he says that "the policy of the last four years of naval administration has been one of dawdle and excuse without justification," it is not of any practical use for Lord Selborne to say that he will follow in the steps of his predecessor. Something more is wanted than this, something to assure the public that there will be less delay in construction, and a more strenuous effort towards placing the Navy, on its material side, in an effective condition.

The lamentable disaster on board the Mutine has caused a revival of the outcry about the Belleville boiler, and has been followed by a number of misleading and incorrect paragraphs in the Press. In several quarters the circumstances have been stated in such a manner as to give the impression that the Mutine was actually in commission as a man-of-war, or at least that her machinery has been accepted by the naval authorities. Such is not the case; the vessel was on her way from the contractors to a naval port for trial, and the machinery was in charge of a working party supplied by the builders of the ship. A court of enquiry is being held, and doubtless one of the points for elucidation will be the composition and experience of those who were engaged in stoking and attending to the boilers. This is important, because over and over again it has been stated that so much depends upon the training and experience of those who are placed in this position. The inquest into the circumstances attending the disaster has been adjourned until January 17, and in the meantime it is both absurd and unfair to attribute the catastrophe either to the boilers themselves or to any part of them. In any case the circumstances as at present revealed do not in any way point to a defect in principle, and cannot fairly be twisted into an indictment of the Belleville system.

Recently an Army Order has been gazetted notifying that "gratuities will be issued to all troops employed in the operations in South Africa." We are told that the Admiralty have officially extended this Order to include the Naval Brigade landed from the various men-of-war on the South African Station. It is not, however, clearly notified that the officers and men who remained on board the ships will be entitled to these gratuities. There is at least some reason for considering a claim on this account, and we believe precedent is to be found for doing so. Take the case of the Powerful, for example, and what is true of her is true of all. This ship conveyed from Mauritius to Durban a half-battalion of the K.O.Y.L.I. in October, 1899. After arriving at Cape Town half the ship's company was landed as a naval brigade, and the remainder from October to March did double duty on board, and also assisted materially in the operations of the war by unloading transports and colliers and railway trucks.

After nightfall, too, armed boats had to be used to patrol around the transports containing the Boer prisoners, and armed pickets were sent on shore to protect the dockyard and railway station. To these duties in the other ships were added the work of patrolling Delagoa Bay, intercepting merchant steamers, and generally watching the coast. Captain Lambton, in an address to those who remained on board said, "It is obviously necessary that all the best cannot land, but those who remain behind have the satisfaction of knowing that they also serve who stand and wait, and that they are rendering just as valuable service to Queen and country as those who are going to the front." Those who remained on board the ships are, from the continued grumbles we get, still waiting for the Queen's chocolate. If they have also "to stand and wait" for the gratuities it is quite certain considerable discontent will be aroused. It is true these men were not under fire, but that is the case with many of those who have been landed, and at least they were very obviously in evidence at the sea end of the line of communications.

The Navy League Journal for the current month is quite up to its usual standard. An article on our naval requirements by Captain Eardley Wilmot sets forth what he considers to be our deficiencies in material and personnel. He considers that in order to reach the number we were supposed to require in 1889 we ought to have twelve more battleships and at least forty-six more cruisers. As regards torpedo boat destroyers, he calculates that we are about forty short of what is wanted, and his advice is to the effect that although the turbine principle of propulsion may prove superior to the ordinary steam engine for such vessels, "it is a dangerous principle to await perfection in any branch of war material." So he says "take the best at the moment and complete as soon as possible." He is further of opinion that to put our fleet on a war footing and to provide for the various services such a condition would entail, we should require 110,000 seamen, marines, and boys. Admitting that we could find this number in a week, and yet leave 20,000 men of the Naval Reserve to supply the wastage of war he still wishes to see this force doubled, and a large addition to the lieutenants' list of the active service. There is also an article on "Our Naval Wants," by Admiral the Hon. Sir E. R. Fremantle.

At the recent military court-martial at Dover on a master gunner in connection with canteen affairs, the officer who defended the accused obtained a reply from a member of a former court-martial, on the same subject, that the verdict of acquittal was not unanimous. In naval criminal law such a question would be over-ruled, as members of courts-martial are bound by oath not to divulge opinions enunciated by members, nor any discussion that takes place while the Court is cleared to consider questions, or otherwise deal with the evidence, and consider the sentence. About a quarter of a century back, at a naval court-martial in the Mediterranean, the court unanimously acquitted the prisoner. When the minutes reached home the legal advisers of the Admiralty pointed out the irregularity of publicly expressing an unanimous opinion in the sentence of a court-martial, and a memorandum on the subject was issued to the fleet. Divulging non-unanimous votes of a court-martial might induce brother officers to speculate as to the names of the minority who voted for or against the accused, and possibly lead to unpleasantness and ill-feeling. In the Dreyfus case the names of the minority in favour of the prisoner at the military trial were freely discussed—a procedure detrimental to discipline and inimical to the interests of those concerned.

Dockyard officials and established clerks clamoured not long ago to be styled "officers," and were granted titles "naval store officer," "deputy—do—do—," &c., and the objectionable term "clerk" was eliminated from all naval establishments outside the Admiralty. Dockyard established writers recently asked to be designated "clerks," and allowed to rise to administrative positions in their respective departments, which "my lords" refused. The alteration would only have been a trifling concession to deserving men. But former holders of the title "clerk" probably imagined that their dignity would be assailed if those who are really the backbone of the dockyard clerical branch were given what they, the quasi higher-division clerks, had managed to cast off. The bona fide higher-division clerks at Whitehall and Downing Street are, however, able to exist with the designation "clerk"!

¶ We have previously referred to the impolicy of building vessels at our dockyards and constructing their machinery and boilers at a distant naval arsenal. The Cramp Shipbuilding Company, of Philadelphia, are about to extend their building yards, and increase the plant, so that a warship can be completed at one establishment, and thus avoid the delay and expense of splitting up the work. It would be an advantage if the Admiralty adopted similar methods.

The President of the Court, in an unfortunate civil case last week, remarked, on hearing that the petitioner was on active service, that strictly speaking, an officer on full pay should appear in a court of law in uniform. The officer in question regretted that, as he was under orders to leave England the following day, his uniform was packed up and probably on board the steamer. His lordship, while possibly within his right, enunciated a principle that has never previously obtained in any court, excepting when an officer attends officially as representative of the ship or naval establishment to which the prisoner at a civil trial is attached. While invariably advocating a proper recognition of and respect for legal authority, it is somewhat incompatible with Her Majesty's uniform that it should be worn in a Divorce Court, as trials of that description no way pertain to the Act of Parliament nor the Queen's Regulations for governing the Naval Service.

It is to be devoutly hoped that the Admiralty will endeavour to find out how it is that the shooting of the Scylla and the Terrible has been so much better than that of any other of her Majesty's ships. Captain Lambton, in speaking of the Navy at the annual dinner of the Commercial Travellers' Association, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, last Friday week, remarked that some of those present had most probably read of the good shooting of the seamen on board the Terrible in the China seas. He said, as all naval officers will admit, that the results achieved by Captain Percy Scott are unique, and he only expressed the general opinion when he added that he felt sure if Captain Scott's system of gunnery training were adopted throughout the Service the shooting of the Navy would be improved 50 per cent.

In connection with the Naval and Military Exhibition to be held next year at the Crystal Palace we notice that it has been determined to present in the Art Section a very full pictorial history of the Navy and Army, with historical or retrospective tableaux illustrating the changes in naval and military uniform and equipment. For this purpose the committee of the Exhibition are requesting the loan of prints, engravings, water-coloured drawings or oil paintings, illustrating battles and reviews, portraits of distinguished naval and military commanders, and pictures illustrative of daring deeds, acts of bravery, and other important naval and military historical events. A new feature of the Exhibition, and one which should be of permanent value, is the arrangement and classification in albums of photographs of such relics and art treasures as are not available for exhibition. It was suggested at the time of the Naval Exhibition at Chelsea to do something of this sort, but the idea was not carried out, and what was at the time supposed to be a unique opportunity for gathering together a complete pictorial history of the Navy was thus lost. The committee of the Crystal Palace will be well advised if they do not lose the opportunity which is now likely to present itself, and everybody interested in preserving in an available form much which illustrates naval and military life should do everything possible to further the execution of this capital project.

Navv Personal.

The Duke of York, who succeeded his Royal uncle, Admiral of the Fleet the late Duke of Edinburgh, as President of the Royal Amateur Orchestral Society, honoured that institution with his presence at a smoking concert on Friday in last week, it being the first occasion of meeting the members since his acceptance of the presidency. His Royal Highness has nominated Lord Wenlock to the principal post in his retinue during the Royal visit to the Australian Commonwealth. It is to be regretted that, as His Royal Highness is a naval officer, there is no peer in the Sea Service available for the appointment, with the exception of the Earl of Clanwilliam, whose health would hardly admit of his undertaking the arduous duties entailed by such an important occasion.

Rear-Admiral Edmund F. Jeffrey's appointment to the Queenstown command prevents the three flag officers immediately senior to him from obtaining active service for another year, unless one of them obtains the rear-admiral's post in the Channel Squadron in June next. The rear-admiral in China will not vacate his appointment until December in next year, and the commander-in-chief in the East Indies has only served half his period on that station; while the same obtains with the admiral superintendent at Devonport. Rear-Admiral Jeffrey's services, coupled with his ability as a gunnery and ordnance officer, fully justify his selection as Rear-Admiral Atwell Lake's successor.

Rear-Admiral Albert B. Jenkins, second in command of the Channel Squadron, is not likely to leave Devonport in his flagship, the Magnificent, until the 31st prox., when the other vessels of the Western Division are to be ready. This unusually long stay at home is due to the refit of these vessels occupying longer than was anticipated. But this should not be the case with the Arrogant and Pelorus, as they have, especially the latter, been a considerable time in dockyard hands during the past six months.

Captain Casper J. Baker, of the Blake, who was detached to Malaga, while en route to Malta with a new crew for the Empress of India, to assist at the wreck of the Imperial German training ship Gneisenau, attended the funeral of the late Captain Kretzman of the latter vessel on Friday in last week, and left the same day for his destination, which he reached on Saturday. On Wednesday last he left for Devonport with the relieved crew from the abovementioned battleship.

Captain Horatio N. Dudding's appointment to the Coastguard ship Severn, in the vacancy caused by the untimely death of Captain William L. H. Browne, will at its termination bring him within eight months of compulsory retirement. It is to be regretted that the active career of an officer with such good services as Captain Dudding must of necessity terminate before he reaches the flag list.

Captain John E. Blaxland has resumed his post in command of the port-guardship at Pembroke Dock, with the newly-commissioned battleship Hood in place of the Thunderer.

Commander Herbert C. Smith, of the Pheasant, appears to have had to undertake some diplomatic work, on his way home from the Pacific, in reference to the seizure of the Tobago, while under the British flag, within the jurisdiction of the Panama district of the State of Colombia, and has demanded from the local Government an indemnity of £14,000, and the release of those who were detained as prisoners when the vessel was taken.

Commander Hugh Cotesworth, of the Barra-couta, who recommissioned that vessel at the Cape of Good Hope in November last, will not be able to proceed to sea until the end of the coming month, in consequence of the delay in completing the ship's refit. It would have saved both time and expense had she been ordered home and replaced on the station by another vessel.

Commander Francis S. Wheeler (retired), a former surveying officer, has been selected as captain superintendent of the Southampton, industrial training ship at Hull, in place of Rear-Admiral (retired) George D. Broad, who, in the early seventies of life, resigns his post to an officer a quarter of a century junior to him in age.

Commander Gerard M. Brooke, Inspecting Officer of Coastguard, Bognor Division, is compulsorily retired on reaching the age of fifty, and after upwards of thirteen years in his present rank. He served in the Abyssinian Campaign, 1868, and the Perak Expedition, 1874, was a Torpedo officer, and promoted Commander while Senior Lieutenant (T) of the Hecla, 1887. As Commander he was an Assistant Director of Naval Ordnance until 1891, commanded the Polyphemus 1891-94, and has held a Coastguard appointment since 1896. Although an able officer of the new scientific school, he had not the good fortune of several of his contemporaries in securing promotion.

Lient. and Commander Edward H. Rymer, of the Quail, after recommissioning that vessel at Bermuda, left for the West Indies on Saturday last without an escort. Remarks on the absence of the latter have been made in the daily papers. During the fine season, however, on that part of the station a vessel in attendance can be dispensed with. Besides which, destroyers on other stations have covered similar distances without any one to look after them.

Lient. (N.) Charles J. Wintour, invalided from the Cleopatra, arrived home on Friday in last week, by the P. and O. steamship Arabia from Gibraltar, where he had been left as a patient in the Royal Naval Hospital.

Staff-Commander C. R. H. Robinson, of the Wye, should have left Plymouth on Thursday in last week for Ascension, but was detained owing to the bad weather. When about to leave the Sound the Traveller collided with the Wye, then at anchor, and caused sufficient damage to necessitate the latter being placed in dockyard hands for repairs, which were to be completed last evening.

Sub-Lient. Ruric H. Waring, of the Orwell, has been promoted lieutenant after eighteen months' service for meritorious examination at the Royal Naval College.

Paymaster-in-Chief Edward W. M. Millman is awarded the Greenwich Hospital pension, vacant by the death of Paymaster-in-Chief William H. Richards. The latter officer secured this advantage after being nine years on the retired list. His successor obtains it after twenty-two years in the latter position, but the deceased officer's service in the Arctic, and subsequently in vessels bearing an admiral's flag, undoubtedly constituted a special claim.

Chaplain the Rev. John M. Clarkson, of Devonport Yard, retires from the Service to become Rector of Brington-with-Bythorn, Huntingdon, in the gift of Clare College, Cambridge, at which University he graduated. The net income is £150.

ROYAL MARINES.

Major and Hon. Lient.-Colonel C. G. B. Dick, Paymaster, Plymouth Division, who shortly resigns that appointment for the purpose of assuming the secretaryship of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, was presented last week with a pair of silver candlesticks by the members of the Minima Yacht Club, of Plymouth, as a mark of their appreciation of the generous aid he afforded in establishing the club, the success of which is largely due to his influence.

Major Harry G. Cotterill succeeds Major Archibald G. Oochrane in the Majestic, when the latter officer completes two years' sea service on Wednesday next.

Lient. Edward W. Harding, R.M.A., becomes Assistant Instructor of Gunnery at headquarters. He is next on turn for promotion to Captain.

Lients. Edward S. Mairis and Frederick H. Cox, about to disembark from the Vivid, have been allowed to commence a course of military equitation during the coming month at the Royal Artillery Depot, Woolwich.

Lient. Charles B. Partridge relieves Lient. Hugh Channer in the Mars, when the latter officer's term of service afloat expires on Thursday next.

The Navy.

(From Tuesday Evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 20.

In accordance with Order in Council of June 29, Engr. F. Wise placed on Retired List of his rank (Dec. 7).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 21.

In accordance with Order in Council of Feb. 22, 1870 Commander G. M. Brooke placed on Retired List, with permission to assume rank of Capt. (Dec. 21).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lients. C. J. Swanson (Dec. 12) and J. C. Goldsmith (Dec. 15) to be Lieuts.; Engr. F. J. Blake to be Senior Engr. (Dec. 17).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 22.

Carpenter James Attrill specially promoted to Chief Carpenter, for services during disturbances in China (Nov. 9).

Royal Naval Reserve.—Acting Sub-Lient. H. L. Butt confirmed as Sub-Lient. (Feb. 5).

(From Friday evening's London Gazette.)

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 22.

Royal Naval Reserve.—Sub-Lient. G. Gregory to be Lient. (Dec. 20).

APPOINTMENTS.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 22.

Gunners.—R. Saxton to Liffey, W. P. Rowe to Vivid for Triumph (Dec. 21).

Chief Officers.—W. Tucker to Alexandra for Charles-town; A. Jeffers to Alexandra for Bournemouth (Jan. 3).

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 24.

Sub-Lieutenant, R.N.R.—D. S. Miller to Excellent and Vernon, additional (as acting), for short courses of gunnery and torpedo (Jan. 2).

Midshipman.—S. B. Richardson to Empress of India (undated).

ASSISTANT CLERKS IN THE ROYAL NAVY.—Successful candidates at the Competitive Examination held on Nov. 20 and following days for 15 Assistant Clerks in the Royal Navy:—Percy D'E. Marks, 2,771 marks; Claud M. Ware, 2,676; Charles E. Boyd, 2,641; John W. E. Gilhespy, 2,625; Henry A. Brown, 2,602; Thomas H. S. Senior, 2,574; Arthur S. Whyham, 2,568; Percy F. F. Bourne, 2,550; John H. Budgen, 2,546; John C. Hart, 2,519; Donald H. Nelson, 2,513; Ian R. Watson, 2,505; Francis G. Cavanagh, 2,437; Silas B. F. Carter, 2,435; Edwin P. Thompson, 2,427.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGAR.—Mild, exquisite, and delicate. Leaves no unpleasant taste. Seven gold medals awarded. 8d. each or five for 1s. Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes (all tobacco leaf, no paper), 8s. per 100, post free, of Bewlay & Co., Importers, 49, Finsbury Lane, London, or of any respectable tobacco-nists.

THE XXth CENTURY LIQUEUR.

ROSE'S LIME JUICE WHISKY.

A DELICIOUS TONIC AND STIMULANT.

Made with a blend of Special 10 Year Old Scotch Whiskies and the Finest Lime Fruit grown in the Island of Dominica, West Indies.

SUPERIOR TO Cherry Whisky, Cherry Brandy, Sloe Gin, &c.

It is SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED TO—
HUNTSMEN,
GOLFERS,
and SPORTSMEN

generally, whilst as an after-dinner Liqueur it is unsurpassed.

To be obtained from All Stores and Wine Merchants.

Price 54s. per Case of 1 Dozen Quarts Carriage Paid.

Bottled in Leith, Scotland.
A Sample Bottle will be sent Carriage Paid on Receipt of P.O. for 5s. by the SOLE PROPRIETORS—

L. ROSE & CO., LTD.,
481, MITCHELL STREET, LEITH, SCOTLAND.

Navv Foreign.

M. Normand, the well-known builder of torpedo craft at Havre, has addressed to the Yacht a letter of some interest, dealing chiefly with the conditions of war with England. Some of his views were misrepresented during the recent debate in the Senate, and he writes with the purpose of removing misapprehension. He holds that the battleship will long remain the principal element of the fighting fleet, but that, in order to fight with full chance of success, the type should be built in adequate number. He would change neither the offensive nor the defensive qualities of ships as they are, but holds the curious view that speed might be reduced to 13 or 14 knots, this reduction implying larger numbers. But he requires that bases of operation should be multiplied. He also offers some technical considerations concerning the types of engines. "The vital elements of a great naval Power such as England are, above all, her floating ramparts, her battleship squadrons. This is why we must have fighting ships as powerful, as numerous as is possible, and of such dimensions that bases of operations and ports of refuge may always be open to them."

In regard to the guerre du course, he remarks that its double object is to disorganise the material and industrial life of the enemy, and to ruin his maritime commerce. He goes on to say that the first object can only be attained if the maritime and commercial relations of the enemy with neutrals are rendered impossible by the blockade of his ports, and his view will not be questioned that France could never expect to be able to blockade British ports. He also argues that this kind of warfare could not prevent the merchant ships of neutrals from providing for the exigencies of our material and commercial life, and that it is an illusion to suppose that the guerre du course could reduce us by famine. In regard to the destruction of trade, he persists in the belief that the greater number of our ships would fly a neutral flag. International trusts, treaty tariffs, and commercial unions have set up such complex conditions and united interest that M. Normand believes it would be impossible to prevent the transfer of shipping to a neutral flag; and these and other considerations lead him to urge that no considerable portion of French naval expenditure should be devoted to preparations for a form of warfare which could bring no tangible good.

The really salient point of M. Lockroy's attack upon the French naval programme in the Senate was his statement that, owing to the time occupied by steam trials, the fleet which is to be built cannot be in commission until the year 1909, or even 1910. The Minister declared that the ships would be completed in 1906, but M. Lockroy protested, and pointed to the efforts being made by Germany, which would cause France to fall from the second rank unless better measures were taken. He enforced his point by declaring that Great Britain constructs three ships for one built in France, and will have sixteen ready while France completes only six. He asked also why, after the experiences of the Jeanne d'Arc, armoured cruisers were still put in hand at Toulon. In regard to submarine boats, his contention was that the new type reproduces all the faults that should have been eliminated.

The recent fire at the Cherbourg dockyard inflicted considerable loss. It took place in the steam saw-works, which were entirely destroyed, notwithstanding the very prompt measures which were taken to check the flames. A large number of models of ships were burned, and the neighbouring mould loft was involved in the flames, and a number of valuable plans were destroyed, including those of the armoured cruiser Jules Ferry, which is now building in the arsenal. The making afresh of these plans will throw a considerable labour upon the department of naval construction. A building known as the atelier des canots also suffered, but was not destroyed, and so intense was the heat that a depot of briquettes of fuel, at a distance of 50ft., burst into flames without any contact with the fire in the buildings. Troops to the number of 3,000 were called out, and 1,500 of them were employed at the pumps; but the tide was out, and some of the pipes were not long enough to reach the water, so that effort was partly wasted.

At the Weser yard at Bremen, the small German cruiser E, which has received the name of Medusa, was lately launched. She is the sixth ship of the type, but not all her sisters are alike, and the new vessel shows a considerable advance upon the others. The Börsen Zeitung, of Berlin, states that she is well protected for her class by a complete armoured deck and sub-division into fifteen water-tight compartments. The engine-room is separated from the stoke hole, which is itself subdivided, so that an accident in one part would not affect the other. The armament consists of ten 4-in. quickfirers, and ten 1.4-in., and eight smaller machine guns, and there are two submerged torpedo tubes. The cruiser will have a company of eleven officers and 200 men. The Princess zu Eulenburg, wife of the Ambassador in Vienna, presided at the launching ceremony. The Hamburger Nachrichten states that with the launch of the Medusa the number of German cruisers is brought up to thirty-nine, of which eleven are large, eight of these being modern, and three old battleships. The smaller cruisers are twenty-eight, but only nine are modern and protected, including the Gazelle, Niobe, Nymph, Thetis, Ariadne, Amazon, and the new ship.

A statement has been circulated by the Deutsche Warte of Berlin, that the new German battleships are to be of a larger type, displacing some 15,000 tons. The Allgemeine Zeitung, of Munich, questions very much the truth of this, and says it will be found that the displacement of the Kaiser class, 11,000 tons, will not be exceeded, since ships of larger displacements could not enter some of the German harbours. We find, however, in the Reichswehr, of Vienna, a statement that the Kaiser ships will prove far more expensive than was anticipated, for each of them not less than two and a half million marks being required than was originally estimated. It appears that this increased outlay is found also in the building of the cruisers, so that it probably arises not from any change of plan, but from increased cost of material.

A singular accident occurred on board the French battleship, Amiral Duperré, near Brest, before Christmas. The Northern Squadron was engaged in target practice near Brest in a long rolling sea, when the lurching movement of the ship caused a chain of the training gear of one of the big gun turrets to snap, with the result that the gun swung round and struck against the supports of the bridge, inflicting considerable damage. Certain of the stays of the foremast were broken, and the mast rendered so insecure that the ship had at once to return to port. Fortunately no one was injured. The mishap shows that the vessels which were steady in the short seas of the Mediterranean are subject to heavy rolling in the Channel, and it is pointed out that the addition of bilge keels to all of them is imperative. This will not cure the evil, or make them perfect gun-platforms, but it will reduce the disadvantage at which they now are placed.

Rapid progress is being made at Lorient with the cruisers Jurien de la Gravière and Gueydon. The former has been delayed by the retarded delivery of her engines from Saint Nazaire. Urgent orders have been issued to push the vessel forward, the hull being now almost complete. The Gueydon, begun much later, is much further advanced. Her three engines are now in their places, and great activity has been displayed in December, the four funnels, the masts, bridges, air-tubes, and conning tower having all been added since the beginning of the month. The screws and steering gear are about to be added, but the cruiser will have to await her turn before passing into the basin, the accommodation being much restricted.

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd.
82, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Canteeens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

CASUALTIES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(Where not otherwise designated the names are those of Privates, Troopers, Gunners, Sappers or Drivers. Wounded marked with asterisk (*) have since died).

HEKPOORT, Dec. 19.

R.H.A.—"J" Batt.: KILLED: 13642 Hill. WOUNDED: 15422 Warriner, 16685 Bombr. Bailey, 96559 Leonard. R. Scots.—Mtd. Inf.: WOUNDED: 4339 Andrews.* Lincoln.—Mtd. Inf.: WOUNDED: 5215 Hewitt. Devon.—1st: WOUNDED: 4245 Millard. E. Yorks.—2nd: WOUNDED: 5899 Thomas, 2937 Healey.

Inniskillings.—KILLED: 5930 Thornton. WOUNDED: 6067 Duncan, 1116 McLoughlin. Middlesex.—Mtd. Inf.: WOUNDED: 3489 Chandler. Irish Fus.—Mtd. Inf.: WOUNDED: (P 637) Grimes.

NOOITGEDACHT, Dec. 13 (2nd List).

Imperial Yeomanry.—20th Co.: KILLED: Lieut. Campbell, 9152 Grant, 9205 Matthews, 9197 Mudge, 9143 Walker, 9159 Wilson. WOUNDED: Capt. Purvis, Cpl. 9128 Bronthorne, Ptes. 9225 Forbes, 9141 Gibb, 9246 Thomson, 9161 Haig, 14573 Mitchell. 26th Co.: WOUNDED: Cpl. 5407 Briddle, 5383 Norris, 5324 Rossier, 5387 Walton, 5410 Williamson, 5405 Robinson. 27th: KILLED: Sgt.-Maj. 6494 Matthew, Cpl. 6511 Clarke, Pte. 6506 Whippill. WOUNDED: Capt. Bolitho, Cpl. 6510 Creber, Sh.-Sm. 6549 King, Ptes. 6482 Bernes, 6558 Thorne, 6521 Loveys, 6505 Whitton, 6531 Steed, 6527 Penrose, 6488 Fowler. MISSING: 6525 Palmer.

Kitchener's Horse.—KILLED: Capt. Stevenson, Lieut. Skene (previously reported wounded), Act. Sgt.-major Carter, Cpl. 4461 Ayling, Tpr. Beattie. WOUNDED: Qrmr.-Sgts. Langfield, Bothal, Grant, and Sgts. 4122 Calder, Head, Cpls. 9155 Williams, C. Clarkson, Tprs. 9572 Rabbetts, 9724 McIlroy, 9645 West, Beattie, Duthie, Morrison, Clarkson, Ward.

Ceylon Mtd. Inf.—KILLED: 379 Kelly. WOUNDED: Cpl. 274 Paul, L.-Cpl. 293 Sturdee, Tpr. 347 Braithwaite. R.H.A.—"P" Batt.: KILLED: Cpl. 16540 Kinley, Sh.-Sm. 15548 Pannell. WOUNDED: Sgt. 5239 West, Bombr.-Whlr. 82180 Blisset, Dr. 79090 Taylor, Grs. 516 Hagan, 27478 Gray, 22723 Hopkins, 78785 McLaughlin, 67445 Saunders.

R.F.A.—8th Batt.: WOUNDED: 18592 Bull.* R.G.A.—5th Co. (E.D.): WOUNDED: Sgt. 89448 Gilbert, Gr. 90777 Waldron. Amm. Col.—13th Brig. Div.: WOUNDED: Bombr. 96065 Cook.

R.E.—38th Co.: WOUNDED: 2637 Jennings. Royal Scots.—Mtd. Inf.: KILLED: Ptes. 4625 Jones, 1169 Savage. WOUNDED: L.-Cpl. 5989 Hill, Ptes. 2454 Buchanan, 6421 Jackson, 2077 Wilson, 1596 Crighton, 1394 Cleaver. MISSING: L.-Cpl. 3077 Clarke, Ptes. 1610 Jacques, 6021 Edwards.

Northumberland Fus.—2nd: KILLED: Cpl. 2480 Smallwood; L.-Cpls. 5105 Parker, 3141 Southern; Ptes. 2403 Rumble, 5687 Taff, 6870 Connor, 2106 McCulloch, 6834 Kirk, 6772 Baird, 6783 Meehan, 523 Coxon, 4457 Wallace, 4629 Main, 3329 Rouse, 6767 Keegan, Somerville, 6741 Stewart, (P 5584) Connor.* WOUNDED: Col.-Sgt. 2036 Twigg; Sgts. 870 Railton, 6818 Creegan, 1938 Hutton; Cpls. 3080 Laxen, 3693 Frazer, 2884 H. Chapman; L.-Cpls. 2456 Henderson, 2312 Smith, 3273 Thompson, 2289 T. Chapman, 6023 Ridley; Ptes. 2748 Kelly,* 2254 Rumford, 6881 Flynn, 6727 Anderson, 6779 McSorley, 3038 Johnson, 1038 Grant, 3673 Hetherington, 6744 Marshall, 3919 Lovell, 4672 Bradley,* 2661 Ward, 3086 Vaughan, 3130 Husband, 6807 Cullen, 6890 Kelly, 6874 Cowley, 590 Irving, 6900 Sloan, 6786 Bonnor, 6893 Lawler, 762 Corfield, 2433 Malin, 558 Hall, 4446 Reardon, 4548 Bryan, 11800 McLoughlin, 6795 Doherty, 6714 Sinclair, 3428 Douglas, 6708 Lewis, 6074 Lannigan, 3209 Paramor, 6727 Coyle, 675 Jackson, 1036 Denial, 2650 Hudson, 3224 Vincent, 1263 Dearsley, 6705 Bailey, 6820 Keenan, 3572 Price, 3891 S. Smith, 932 Jackson, 4859 R. Smith, 6869 Cheevers, 672 Motherwell, 6809 Waterspoon, 2180 Butterworth, 2043 Bunting, 3275 Malia, 6748 Carrigan, 6762 Curran, 513 Lavell, 706 Pearson, 4727 Bolton, 6837 McCue, 2869 Nicholson. MISSING: 3096 Brown, 3146 Connolly, and Pte. Clarke.

Leicester.—Mtd. Inf.: WOUNDED: 4270 W. Smith, 4472 White.

Welsh Fus.—Mtd. Inf.: WOUNDED: 2714 Livingstone, 4300 Price.

S.W. Borderers.—Mtd. Inf.: KILLED: 3372 Timmins. WOUNDED: 9470 Harris.

Cameronians.—Mtd. Inf.: KILLED: Sgt. 5273 Reid; Pte. 6075 Pugh. WOUNDED: 5533 Pratt, 5506 Bell. MISSING: Cpl. Roberts.

Worcester.—Mtd. Inf. 2nd: WOUNDED: 4002 Pardoe, 5058 Price, 2263 Peebles.

Dorset.—Mtd. Inf.: KILLED: 3059 Hughes. WOUNDED: 2881 Maidment, 5394 Priestly. MISSING: Cpl. 3037 Vickery, Ptes. 3591 Collyer, 3610 Crate.

Yorks L.I.—2nd: KILLED: 3407 Curran, 1119 Fogg, 5774 Gillott, 1488 Butcher, 1924 Madden, 1930 Greenwood, 5320 Bullock, 3229 Kettbridge. WOUNDED: Cpl. 4381 Smith, L.-Cpl. 4768 Fletcher (and missing); 3916 Chandler, 1169 Battley, 2473 (P 2734) O'Hara, 5699 Armistage, 1706 Brown, 1743 Richardson, 4319 Kennedy, 1942 Jarvis, 5736 (P 5631) Hepworth, 1364 Austin, 3881 Dungworth.

Wilts.—Mtd. Inf.: WOUNDED: 2507 Harrison. Durham L.I.—4th (attd. 2nd Northd. Fus.): KILLED: 61117 Connor. WOUNDED: 5276 Scrafton, 610 Burns, 2814 Gairns, 5296 Coyne, 3872 Bradley, 6389 Macdonald, 3345 Harrison, 4147 Keel.

Cameron Highrs.—Mtd. Inf.: KILLED: Sgt. 2462 (P 2931) Hamilton, Ptes. 4016 McIntosh, 3606 Campbell, 3621 Davis, 3699 Doig, 3783 Dow. WOUNDED: 3458 Wright, 4544 Sutherland, 3600 Hughes, 3868 Burns, 2724 Hobson, 2773 Newberry, 3516 Sutherland, 3066 Duncan, 4016 Beaton, 3882 Timpany, 3176 Parrock, 3042 Wright.

Arg. and Sub. Highrs.—Mtd. Inf.: KILLED: Sgt. 4902 Meredith; Ptes, 3819 Bliss, 6115 Wintrup. WOUNDED: 6454 Logan.
Dublin Fus.—1st Mtd. Inf.: WOUNDED: L.-Cpl. 5076 Murphy.
Rifle Brig.—WOUNDED: Sgt.-Maj. 4938 Worthing.
A.S.C.—30th Co.: WOUNDED: 9583 Roberts, 8853 Neat.
R.A.M.C.—12th Brig. Bearer Co.: WOUNDED: 8797 Sgt. Samuel.

MISCELLANEOUS.

6th Drag.—3822 Lawrence, 3894 Trickett, missing, Lindique, Dec. 16.
13th Huss.—4945 Lee, wounded, near Heidelberg, Dec. 19.
17th Lancers.—4958 Reade, wounded, Steynsburg, Dec. 19.
19th Huss.—4779 Hutt, wounded, Burghersdorp, Dec. 22.
Imp. Yeo.—17th Batn.: Major de Burgh; 11282 Kirkwood, 11219 Cleary, 11060 Floyd, 11191 Cpl. Roland, 11281 Land, 11309 Nash, 9452 Crynible, wounded, arrived De Aar, Dec. 23, from Houtkraal. 32nd Co.: 9046 Johnson, 8973 Swann, killed; 8887 Sh.-sm. Knowles, 8911 Walsh, 9054 Bough, 8978 Sgt. Bounds, 8905 Marsden, wounded; 8970 Boardman, 8988 Arden, 8975 Stevenson, prisoners, Hamilfontein, Dec. 17. 49th: 9849 Nell, killed; 9842 Sgt. Thomas, wounded, near Winburg, Dec. 20. 75th: 15426 Davies, wounded, Boshof, Dec. 14. 77th: 15901 Edmondson, wounded, Heilbron, Dec. 19.
Irreg. Horse.—Brabant's: 2nd Lieut. Friedlander, 706 Young, wounded, near Lindley, Dec. 14. S.A. Mtd. Irregs.: Lieut. Stryden, prisoner, Burghersdorp, Dec. 22. N.S.W. Bushmen: 468 Oswald, 1392 Ball, missing, Vermaas Drift, Dec. 12. N.Z. Rough Riders: 1258 Baker, wounded, Koochmoer, Dec. 18. Kitchener's: Galvin, missing, Terreden, Oct. 16.
Mtd. Inf.—Queensland: 176 Joe, 159 Farrington, 243 Thorpe, wounded, Rhenoster Kop, Dec. 17.
R.F.A.—61st Batt.: 28578 Bmbr. N. Read (? 20578 N. T. Mead), wounded, Machadodorp, Dec. 19. 75th: 30911 McTavish, 20493 West, wounded, Elandsdrift, Dec. 3.
R.E.—4729 Rhodes, wounded, Koochmoer, Dec. 18.
Capt. Casgrain and party taken prisoners, Philipstown, Dec. 18, released Dec. 19.
Gren. Gds.—3rd: 2333 Rowe, 2757 L.-Cpl. Radford, wounded, Hamilfontein, Dec. 17; 5412 Howard, wounded, Burghersdorp, Dec. 23.
R. Scots.—6363 L.-Cpl. Clewley, accidentally wounded, Barberton, Dec. 23.
Lanc.—Lieut. Browne was incorrectly reported missing, Vryheid, Dec. 10.
Liverpool.—2nd: Wood, wounded, Naauwpoort, Dec. 21.
E. Yorks.—2nd: 5872 Coates, missing, Naauwpoort, Dec. 21.
Bedford.—2nd: 2nd Lieut. Gordon, wounded, near Thaba N'chu, Dec. 14.
Yorks.—1st: 3210 Chaplin, missing, Paardeberg, Feb. 18, was killed.
Lanc. Fus.—Lieut. Browne, unwounded prisoner, Vryheid, Dec. 10. 2nd: 4248 Hogan, wounded, Venter-spruit, Jan. 20, died at Spearman, Jan. 24.
S.W. Borders.—2nd: 3945 Webster, wounded, Krugersdorp, Dec. 15.
Glouces ter.—2nd: 4529 L.-Cpl. Taylor, wounded; 5219 Gallanger (? Dallinger), missing, Naauwpoort, Dec. 21; 3300 Lydiard, 2286 Little, 3759 Baxter, 615 Baxter, 2640 Perry, 1993 Simmons, 613 Sgt. F. Smith, 5591 Coghlan, 2612 Bundy, 2569 Wright, 2616 Dowler, 3959 Limbrick, 3939 L.-Cpl. Clements, 2644 Manley, 2643 Maycock, 2721 Sgt. Knight, 6089 Hibbs, 3419 Jennings, 3018 Collins, 3214 Routley (wounded), 5009 L.-Cpl. Smith, prisoners, Dewetsdorp, Nov. 21-23; since released.
E. Surrey.—5399 Cobb, killed; 3570 Allington, wounded, Platrand, Dec. 20.
S. Lancs.—3478 J. Devine, reported wounded, Feb. 27, in error; 3486 P. Devine was wounded and died Feb. 29.
Shrops. L.I.—4757 Freeman, wounded, Steynsburg, Dec. 19.
York and Lanc.—1st: 2984 Sgt. Sinfield, killed, 2698 Connor, wounded, near Woolfdrift, Dec. 19.
Munster Fus.—1st: 4277 Graham, prisoner, Taungs, Nov. 4; 2833 Chaplin, wounded, Rhenoster Kop, Nov. 29.
Imp. L.I.—636 Farren, 933 L.-Cpl. Rogers, 599 Garner, 837 Moore, 33 Turnbull, missing, Spion Kop, Jan. 24, were killed.
Grahamstown Vols.—Snow, injured by train, Cradock, Dec. 19.

DEATHS REPORTED.

(Except when otherwise mentioned, the deaths in this list have occurred through enteric fever.)

2nd Drag.—3588 White, nephritis, Germiston, Dec. 20.
10th Huss.—4159 MacKerrie, Rustenburg, Dec. 24.
14th Huss.—177 Clarke, Pretoria, Dec. 22.
19th Huss.—3158 Reid, heart disease, Machadodorp, Dec. 22.
Imp. Yeo.—5th Co.: 308 L.-Cpl. Tibbits, Pretoria, Dec. 24. 27th: 6482 Bewes, wounds, Pretoria, Dec. 24. 35th: 4221 Farr. Sgt. Mitchell, Winburg, Dec. 24. 52nd: 13198 Sgt. Skelton, Mafeking, Dec. 19. 72nd: 14540 L.-Cpl. Mountain, Pretoria, Dec. 19.
Irreg. Horse.—S.A.L.H.: 1958 R. C. Smith, wounds, Thaba N'chu, Dec. 15. Strathcona's: 500 St. George, Johannesburg, Dec. 21. N.S.W. Bushmen: 398 Quigley, Lichtenburg, Dec. 20.
Steinacker's.—S. Thomas, remittent fever, Komati Poort, Dec. 23.
Mtd. Inf.—Queensland: 242 Damrow, De Aar, Dec. 19.
Mtd. Rifles.—Johannesburg: Knight, railway accident Greylingstad, Dec. 20.
R.F.A.—9th Batt.: 1194 Price, Pretoria, Dec. 19. 28th: 69192 Wykes, Johannesburg, Dec. 19. 77th: 3285 Sh.-sm. Jefferies, Vrede, Dec. 24. 86th: 32780 Bombr. Finch, Standerton, Dec. 24.
R.G.A.—6th Co. (E. D.): 6259 Banks (? Barrett), Pretoria, Dec. 17. 15th (S. D.) 90608 Cpl. Maidman, Pretoria, Dec. 21. 16th (S. D.) 19143 Morrison, wounds, Standerton, Dec. 23.

N.Z. Army.—2507 Brown, Lichtenburg, Dec. 18.
Amm. Col. Arty. Div.—3505 Bombr. Williams, Machadodorp, Dec. 19.
R.E.—7th Co.: 1137 Dudley, mine explosion, near Krugers Siding, Dec. 22. 12th: 24637 Martin, pneumonia, Middelburg, Dec. 18. 42nd: 6032 Shipstone, Pretoria, Dec. 21. Tele. Batn., 1st Div.: 19216 Sh.-sm. Barrett, heart disease, Edenburg, Dec. 9; 4381 Walton, Kroonstad, Dec. 23.

Gren. Gds.—2nd: 3517 Houghton, Mooi River, Dec. 23. Coldstream Gds.—2nd: 2610 Hanaford, Potchefstroom, Dec. 18; 709 Sutton, De Aar, Dec. 22.
R. Scots.—7035 Telly, at sea, on Tagus, Dec. 11. 1st: 2092 Wilson, wounds, Pretoria, Dec. 24; 6954 Stewart, appendicitis, Johannesburg, Dec. 23. 3rd: 7381 MacKenzie, Kroonstad, Dec. 23. Mtd. Inf.: 5989 L.-Cpl. Hill, wounds, Pretoria, Dec. 22. Vol.: 7182 Lambert, Springfontein, Dec. 24.

E. Kent.—2nd: 2963 Willey, wounds, Dec. 18; 6069 Bullock, Dec. 23, Pretoria; 4027 Prior, dysentery, Brugspruit, Dec. 22. 3rd: 5115 Pearce, Dec. 21; 4620 Sgt. Thompson, Dec. 24, Springfontein.
Lanc.—3rd: 6966 Lloyd, Dec. 21; 7033 Holmes, Dec. 22, Bloemfontein.

Northd. Fus.—1st: 3641 Hext, Lichtenburg, Dec. 20. 2nd: 3887 Alderson, Pretoria, Dec. 22.
R. Fus.—5th: 5316 Vine, dysentery, June 8, Wynberg, previously reported as of Northd. Fus.

Norfolk.—Vol.: 5508 Crick, Pretoria, Dec. 21.
Lincoln.—2nd: 8117 Allen, Pretoria, Dec. 23. Vol.: 6588 Bonner, Pretoria, Dec. 23.

Devon.—2nd: 4117 Lush, dysentery, Howick, Dec. 19. Suffolk.—1st: 1374 Garrod, Pretoria, Dec. 24.
E. Yorks.—2nd: 4408 L.-Sgt. Prinn; 6473 Henderson, intestinal obstruction, Dec. 18; (? 5412) Simpson, Dec. 21, Reitz.

Bedford.—2nd: 2953 Cpl. Stannard, dysentery, Kroonstad, Dec. 19. Vol.: 7793 Goodman, Thaba N'chu, Dec. 19. Leicester.—1st: 171 Alsé, Dec. 17; 5376 Bullock, Dec. 21, Middelburg.

Lancs. Fus.—2nd: 5438 Hogan, 1206 Jaques, 40123 Williams, all accidentally drowned, De Jager's Drift, Dec. 20; 2635 Butler, dysentery, Dundee, Dec. 23.

Welsh Fus.—1st: 6273 Cain, Johannesburg, Dec. 22. S. W. Borders.—2nd: 6645 Herriman, Johannesburg, Dec. 19; 6422 Maloney, Kroonstad, Dec. 21.

Cameronians.—2nd: 6052 Jubbs, wounds, Standerton, Dec. 23.
Inniskillings.—1155 McCrey, dysentery, Middelburg, Dec. 20.

Worcester.—2nd: 4313 Harrison, Rietfontein, Dec. 24. E. Lancs.—3rd: 9230 McLaughlin, Dec. 18; 9476 Higson, Dec. 22, Bloemfontein.

West Riding.—2nd: 1290 Marney, dysentery, Charles-town, Dec. 22.

Hants.—2nd: 3337 Lacy, Pretoria, Dec. 19.
S. Staff.—1st: 3611 Dyche, Dec. 18; 5297 Doleman, Dec. 19. Reitz: 5324 Clarke, Bloemfontein, Dec. 19; 5512 Hewitt, Winburg, Dec. 23. 4th: 4358 Hallanby, Winburg, Dec. 18.

Welsh.—3rd: 822 Sgt. Shears, heart disease, Prieska, Dec. 18.

Northampton.—2nd: 2956 Penn, Kimberley, Dec. 18. Berks.—2nd: 4839 Beales, 5047 Langham, Kroonstad, Dec. 22.

W. Kent.—2nd: 2957 Fricker, Frankfort, Dec. 20. Shrops. L.I.—2621 Blaney, pleurisy, Middelburg, Dec. 20.

W. Kent.—1st: 4461 Sgt. Court, dysentery, Kroonstad, Dec. 19.

K.R.R.—1st: 8789 Pitcher, Charlestown, Dec. 24. 3rd: 2181 Hill, Maritzburg, Dec. 16. 9th: 74 Farrell, Kroonstad, Dec. 15.

Wilts.—2nd: 2200 Daniels, pneumonia, Greenpoint, Dec. 14; 5146 Sanger, Pretoria, Dec. 12; 6593 Lockhead, disease, Senekal, June 20. 2561 Tilley, killed, Honingspruit, Dec. 22.

Manchester.—1st: 5262 Schofield, Pretoria, Dec. 19. N. Staff.—2nd: 5891 Lloyd, Johannesburg, Dec. 13. 4th: 6035 L.-Cpl. Talbot, Deelfontein, Dec. 15.

Durham L.I.—1st: 6999 Rowntree, Standerton, Dec. 19. 3rd: 2127 Holmes, Kroonstad, Dec. 20.

Cameron Highrs.—1st: 3326 Patchthorn (?), Kroonstad, Dec. 21.

Irish Fus.—2nd: 6347 Corrigan, dysentery, Kroonstad, Dec. 16.

Arg. and Sub.—1st: 4149 Drysdale, Rustenburg, Dec. 22.

Leinster.—1st: Lieut. Finlay, dysentery; 5274 Levins, Vrede, Dec. 11; 2269 Lowerie, Dec. 18; 5545 Dooling, Dec. 23; Standerton, 3rd: 617 Sgt. Pack, inflammation lymphatics and septicemia, Queenstown, Dec. 21.

Munster Fus.—2857 James Kroonstad, Dec. 23. 1st: 5437 McCarthy, Dec. 8; 5950 Creedon, Dec. 20, Pretoria.

Dublin Fus.—1st: 5421 Drmr. Allen (? 5421 Pte. J. Adler), Charlestown, Dec. 18.
R.B.—1st: 6114 Light, dysentery, Standerton, Dec. 24.
Imp. L.I.—Cpl. McKenzie, dysentery, Johannesburg, Dec. 10.

Cape Town Highrs.—1240 Stansfield (? disease), Cape Town, Dec. 21.

Durban L.I.—450 Bugler Ashdown, fever, Durban, Oct. 24. A.S.C.—13572 L.-Cpl. Low, dysentery; Middelburg, Dec. 15. 9th Co.: 8332 St.-Sgt. Coll-Maker Lewis, Winburg, May 13. 2nd: 8116 Ward, Pretoria, Dec. 22. 24th: 8706 Sgt. Imray, Pretoria, Dec. 20. 36th: 13812 Coulter, dysentery, Aliwal North, Dec. 22.

R.A.M.C.—6004 Sole, sarcoma stomach at sea, Simla, Dec. 1; 13736 Rogers (specially enlisted compounder), Pretoria, Dec. 14; 10829 Meyers (? disease), Wynberg, Dec. 14; 12565 Atkins, Pretoria, Dec. 19. Bearer Co. 14th Bde.: 7022 Patterson, Pretoria, Dec. 17.

St. John's Amb.—1504 Errington, Maritzburg, Dec. 19. Imp. Hosp. Corps.—I. C. Jones, Mooi River, Dec. 20.

Imp. Yeo. Base Hosp.—14 Harvey, Deelfontein, June 1. Field: Sgt. Walker, Dec. 19; Fincher, Dec. 21, Pretoria.

A.O.C.—2954 Sagar, Maritzburg, Dec. 21.
P.O. Corps.—353 Mills, Middelburg, Dec. 13.
Natal Naval Vols.—248 Harford, Durban, Oct. 16.

OTHER CASUALTIES.

CHINA.

R.G.A. Siege Train, 15th Com. S.D.—34315 Dick, died, dysentery, Station Hosp., Hong Kong, Dec. 7.
Welsh Fus.—4616 Bartram (? disease), died Peking, Dec. 20.

WEST AFRICAN FIELD FORCE.

R.A.M.C.—7947 Sgt. Walton, died at sea on Olcinda, Nov. 5.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY.

Result of the examination of the 4th class:—
Recommended for commissions in the Royal Engineers.

Sen. Under Officer	Marks.	Corpl. Piggott, F. S.	Marks.
Bird, A. J. G. ...	12517	G. ...	11219
Corpl. North, H. N. ...	12431	Evans, C. E. ...	11063
" Cox, E. W. ...	12348	Porter, M. T. ...	10930
" Kent, L. M. ...	12023	Wood, J. C. I. ...	10799
" Williams, M. ...		Boger, R.A. ...	10720
" S. P. ...	11907	Loring, E. J. ...	10483
" Ingham, O. ...		Trenchard, O. ...
" E. U. ...	11855	H. B. ...	10416
" Powell, A. E. ...	11822	Wyatt, F. J. ...
" Festing, J. E. ...		C. ...	10374
" G. ...	11681	Master, G. ...	10346
" Anderson, E. ...		Holwell, R. V. ...
" P. ...	11563	D. ...	10259
" Bissett, J. S. ...	11339

Recommended for commissions in the Royal Artillery.

Corpl. Mackintosh,	Marks.	Corpl. Mackintosh,	Marks.
G. H. T. ...	10149	Harvey, A. F. ...
" Farlan, A. J. ...		B. ...	9210
" T. ...	10042	Gregory, A. ...
" Anstey, E. C. ...	9933	J. E. ...	8919
Under Officer Her-		Joll, H. H. ...	8780
ingham, G. W. ...	9897	Batchelor, V. ...
Corpl. Weir, J. L. R. ...	9810	A. ...	8672
" Reid, F. H. ...	9755	Walker, O. A. ...	8652
" Stevens, H. ...		Allen, V. M. ...	8539
" B. G. ...	9692	Meek, C. F. U. ...	8448
" Lanyon, O. M. ...	9643	Under Officer Hay-
" Edmond, J. H. ...	9627	ley, W. B. ...	8442
" Blumenthal, ...		Corpl. Syers, T. S. ...	8423
" A. Z. ...	9594	" King, J. F. ...	8410
" Cory-Smith, ...		" Yorke, P. G. ...	8309
" H. C. ...	9558	" Christie, H. ...
" Little, E. M. ...	9486	" G. F. ...	8304
" White, G. F. ...		" Salvin, H. C. ...
" C. ...	9438	" J. ...	8285
" Dundas, J. C. ...	9435	" Routh, G. M. ...	8276
" Denniss, G. ...
" E. B. ...	9217

A MEMORIAL TO THE FALLEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—It may interest some of your readers to know what is proposed to be done in All Saints' Church, Ladysmith, as a memorial of all who lost their lives in this parish during the campaign. The church was partly destroyed by shells from the enemy during the siege. It is intended therefore to rebuild this part of the building and to erect mural tablets, on which shall be inscribed the names of all who died, irrespective of creed or denomination. The parish includes the battles of Elandslaagte, Tintanyoni, Lombard's Kop, Ladysmith, Wagon Hill, Caesar's Camp, Gun Hill, Surprise Hill, Spion Kop, Vaal Krantz, Krantz Kloof, Hart's Hill, Pieter's Hill, so that there is, alas, a very long list of names to be recorded. The tablets will cost about £400, the building about £2,000. If it were possible I would write to the relatives of those who died and ask them to contribute to the memorial, but it is impossible to get the address of very many, hence my reason for asking you to be good enough to publish this letter. The Ven. Archdeacon Barker, D.D., was here during the siege, and is well known to most of the commanding officers who were in Ladysmith at that time. The Bishop of Natal, who expects to be in England by the New Year, will give any information about the fund that may be required. (Address Ch. House, Westminster.) Subscriptions can be paid to the Natal Bank, Limited, London and South African branches, or to the Ven. Archdeacon Barker, incumbent of Ladysmith.

E. FORTESCUE CARTER,

Secretary and Treasurer.

Box 69, Ladysmith, Natal, Nov. 29, 1900.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO

TADDY & CO., LONDON, E.

Manufacturers of Cigarettes and Tobaccos

in Bond for Export.

RETIREMENTS, &c., 1901.

The following officers will have to retire or vacate their commands and Staff appointments in the course of the ensuing year:—

GENERAL OFFICERS ON THE ACTIVE LIST.

Major-Gen. M. W. E. Gosset, C.B. (age) ... July 6
Major-Gen. Lord Congleton, C.B. (age) ... July 10
Major-Gen. Sir C. Grove (age) ... Sept. 26

COLONELS ON THE ACTIVE LIST.

Col. W. R. Purchas, R.E. ... Jan. 24
Col. H. P. Kirkwood, R.E. ... Jan. 25
Col. J. Spence, D.A.A.G., Malta ... Jan. 27
Col. R. H. Jelf, C.M.G., R.E. (employment extended to Feb. 28) ... Feb. 2
Col. E. Lake, R.A. ... Feb. 6
Col. A. W. Noyes, 14th Regimental Dis. ... Feb. 12
Col. W. T. Dooner, A.A.G., Chatham ... Feb. 14
Col. W. H. Thompson, h.p., 1st D.G. ... April 1
Col. Sir W. Everett, A.Q.M.G., Head Quarters ... April 20

Col. A. W. Sheringham, 22nd Regtl. Dis. ... April 21
Col. F. C. Beresford, R.E. ... May 3
Col. R. Corbett, R.A. ... May 9
Col. H. Gunter, 63rd Regimental District ... May 9
Col. P. D. Trotter, 91st Regimental Dis. ... June 13
Col. J. E. Josselyn, R.A. ... July 6
Col. C. M. Watson, C.M.G., R.E. ... July 10
Col. A. D. M'Arthur, R.E. ... July 16
Col. Lord Downe, C.I.E. ... July 20
Col. C. Needham, late 1st Life Guards ... July 20
Col. A. H. Luck, late York and Lancaster ... Aug. 2
Col. R. C. Hare, C.B., 24th Reg. District ... Aug. 8
Col. S. Waller, R.E. ... Aug. 13
Col. E. Blaksley, R.A. ... Aug. 19
Col. G. E. Harley, C.B., late 3rd Foot ... Aug. 21
Col. G. A. Lee, h.p., Durham L.I. ... Aug. 21
Col. F. B. J. Jerrard, late 33rd-76th ... Aug. 24
Col. J. C. R. Glasgow, 12th Reg. District ... Aug. 24
Col. R. W. Rainsford-Hannay ... Sept. 9
Col. W. Creagh, A.A.G., Netley ... Sept. 19
Col. W. E. R. Kelly, 3rd Reg. District ... Sept. 20
Col. C. E. Swaine, late 11th Hussars ... Sept. 20
Col. G. Hildebrand, R.E. ... Oct. 18
Col. J. W. Savage, R.E. ... Oct. 24
Col. R. W. Phillips, 31st Reg. District ... Nov. 18
Col. J. A. F. Nutt, R.A. ... Dec. 19
Col. N. L. Walford, R.A. ... Dec. 7

INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

Col. R. G. E. Dalrymple ... Jan. 17
Col. F. C. Barton ... Feb. 14
Col. G. W. Sawyer ... June 17
Col. W. O. Thompson, D.S.O. ... Nov. 14

REGIMENTAL DISTRICTS.

3rd (Canterbury), Col. W. E. R. Kelly ... Jan. 1
45th (Derby), Col. J. G. Sparkes ... Jan. 1
83rd (Belfast), Col. F. J. Graves ... Jan. 1
14th (York), Col. A. W. Noyes ... Feb. 12
88th (Galway), Col. A. S. Woods ... April 12
22nd (Chester), Col. A. W. Sheringham ... April 21
63rd (Ashton), Col. H. Gunter ... May 9
13th (Taunton), Col. R. B. Cotton ... June 4
91st (Stirling), Col. P. D. Trotter ... June 13
20th (Bury), Col. J. L. Ross ... June 30
24th (Brecon), Col. R. C. Hare ... Aug. 8
12th (Bury St. Edmunds), Col. J. C. R. ... Aug. 24
Glasgow ... Nov. 30
30th (Preston), Col. M. S. Brownrigg ... Nov. 30
31st (Kingston-on-Thames), Col. R. W. F. Phillips ... Dec. 14

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Col. R. G. W. Hepburne, R.F.A. ... Mar. 25
Col. J. W. T. Spencer, R.F.A. ... April 1
Col. A. R. Fraser, R.G.A. ... April 1
Col. G. D. Fanshawe, R.G.A. ... April 11
Col. Lord Playfair, R.G.A. ... May 29
Col. G. G. Monck-Mason, R.G.A. ... July 16
Col. E. B. Coke, R.H.A. ... Aug. 1
Col. J. V. V. Baker, R.G.A. ... Aug. 1
Col. F. A. Aylmer, R.G.A. ... Sept. 7
Col. H. W. Brackenbury, R.F.A. ... Oct. 12
Col. H. V. Hunt, R.F.A. ... Nov. 1
Col. A. N. Rochfort, R.H.A. ... Dec. 2
Col. J. Hotham, R.H.A. ... Dec. 2

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Col. C. A. Rochfort Boyd ... Aug. 5
Col. M. W. Skinner ... Aug. 6
Col. W. T. Shone, C.B. ... Aug. 12
Col. W. H. White ... Aug. 12
Col. J. M. T. Badgley ... Aug. 13
Col. H. W. Duperier ... Aug. 13
Col. F. W. Bennet ... Sept. 8
Col. A. Heathcote ... Sept. 16
Col. R. Thompson ... Oct. 1
Col. E. J. T. Ross, of Bladensburg ... Oct. 1
Col. S. McM. Maycock ... Oct. 7
Col. E. J. Dewing ... Oct. 19
Col. N. M. Lake ... Dec. 6
Col. M. Martin ... Dec. 31
Col. B. Scott, C.I.E. ... Dec. 31
Col. S. Grant ... Dec. 31
Col. S. H. Exham ... Dec. 31
Col. E. Glennie ... Dec. 31

REGIMENTAL AND BATTALION COMMANDS.

2nd Batn. Devonshire Regiment: ... Jan. 18
Lieut.-Col. G. M. Bullock ...

19th Hussars: ... Feb. 7
Lieut.-Col. C. B. H. Wolseley-Jenkins ...
2nd Batn. Suffolk Regiment: ... Feb. 24
Lieut.-Col. C. R. Townley (extended to Feb. 24, 1902) ...
4th Dragoon Guards: ... Mar. 4
Col. G. D. F. Sullivan (extended term) ...
2nd Batn. South Lancashire Regiment: ... Mar. 27
Lieut.-Col. A. F. G. Richardson ...
2nd Batn. Cameron Highlanders: ... April 3
Lieut.-Col. J. M. Hunt ...
2nd Batn. North Lancashire Regiment: ... May 1
Lieut.-Col. B. A. Satterthwaite ...
4th Hussars: ... May 13
Col. W. A. Ramsay (extended term) ...
2nd Batn. Scots Guards: ... May 23
Col. I. R. Jones (extended term) ...
1st Batn. Buffs: ... May 23
Col. A. E. Ommanney (extended term) ...
2nd Batn. Middlesex Regiment: ... May 27
Col. A. W. Hill (extended term) ...
1st Batn. South Wales Borderers: ... June 9
Col. H. G. Mainwaring (extended term) ...
1st Batn. Royal Lancaster Regiment: ... June 26
Lieut.-Col. J. Rowlandson ...
13th Hussars: ... July 1
Col. H. J. Blagrove (extended term) ...
2nd Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers: ... July 23
Lieut.-Col. P. S. Druitt ...
2nd Batn. Liverpool Regiment: ... Aug. 11
Lieut.-Col. S. H. Harrison ...
2nd Batn. Royal West Kent Regiment: ... Aug. 19
Col. E. A. W. Grove (extended term) ...
1st Batn. Shropshire Light Infantry: ... Aug. 19
Lieut.-Col. C. H. Collette ...
2nd Batn. Hampshire Regiment: ... Aug. 29
Col. W. E. Briggs (extended term) ...
1st Batn. North Staffordshire Regiment: ... Sept. 14
Col. T. Currie, C.B. (extended term) ...
2nd Batn. East Lancashire Regiment: ... Sept. 23
Lieut.-Col. A. G. Watson ...
1st Batn. Lancashire Fusiliers: ... Sept. 25
Lieut.-Col. G. L. E. May ...
1st Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers: ... Nov. 4
Col. E. S. Evans (extended term) ...
1st Batn. York and Lancaster Regiment: ... Nov. 10
Lieut.-Col. W. J. Kirkpatrick ...
2nd Batn. Dorsetshire Regiment: ... Nov. 19
Lieut.-Col. C. H. Lav ...
1st Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers: ... Nov. 23
Lieut.-Col. C. G. C. Money, C.B. ...
1st Batn. South Staffordshire Regiment: ... Nov. 23
Lieut.-Col. H. C. Savage (extended term) ...
1st Batn. Queen's Regiment: ... Sept. 29
Col. J. S. Collins (extended term) ...
1st Batn. Scottish Rifles: ... Oct. 10
Lieut.-Col. S. H. Lomax ...
3rd Batn. Rifle Brigade: ... Oct. 15
Lieut.-Col. W. R. Kenyon-Slaney ...
8th Hussars: ... Oct. 19
Lieut.-Col. P. L. Clowes ...
2nd Batn. Border Regiment: ... Oct. 20
Lieut.-Col. J. S. Wood ...
1st Batn. Royal Fusiliers: ... Nov. 28
Lieut.-Col. R. P. B. Rodick ...
4th Batn. Rifle Brigade: ... Dec. 1
Lieut.-Col. A. R. Pemberton ...
1st Batn. Welsh Regiment: ... Dec. 2
Lieut.-Col. R. J. F. Banfield (extended term) ...
2nd Batn. Norfolk Regiment: ... Dec. 6
Lieut.-Col. L. H. Phillips ...
2nd Batn. East Surrey Regiment: ... Dec. 14
Lieut.-Col. R. H. W. Harris (extended term) ...
2nd Batn. Seaforth Highlanders: ... Dec. 22
Lieut.-Col. J. W. Hughes-Hallett ...
2nd Batn. Royal Irish Regiment: ... Dec. 23
Lieut.-Col. J. B. Forster ...

MAJORS LIABLE TO RETIREMENT, 1901.

S. Jackson, North Lancashire Regiment ... Jan. 26
E. Herapath, Lincolnshire Regiment ... May 3
C. Grant, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders ... April 13
A. H. N. Champion, Leinster Regiment ... June 28
H. S. B. Hodgkinson, North Staffordshire Regiment ... July 8
N. J. R. Blake, Middlesex Regiment ... July 20

D. E. Wood, 8th Hussars ... Aug. 22
A. W. Collings, Royal Scots Fusiliers ... Sept. 4
E. Lindesay, Royal Irish Regiment ... Sept. 6
H. W. Rowden, Wiltshire Regiment ... Sept. 14
M. A. Close, 13th Hussars ... Oct. 5
P. Farrer, Dorsetshire Regiment ... Nov. 17
W. H. Scott, East Lancashire Regiment ... Nov. 21

ARMY SERVICE CORPS.

Col. S. H. Winter ... Aug. 1
Col. A. G. Hipwell ... Aug. 8
Lieut.-Col. G. G. Challice ... Nov. 1
Col. W. R. Winter ... Nov. 1

ROYAL ARMY MEDICAL CORPS.

Surg.-Gen. W. S. M. Price ... April 9
Surg.-Gen. H. S. Muir ... Oct. 4
Surg.-Gen. T. F. O'Dwyer ... Dec. 26
Col. C. F. Churchill ... April 10

PAY DEPARTMENT.

Col. and Chief Paymr. E. Roberts, C.B. ... Jan. 8
Col. and Chief Paymr. H. W. Bateman ... Jan. 22
Col. and Chief Paymr. R. O. Richmond ... May 2
Lieut.-Col. and Staff Paymr. A. Longley ... Feb. 17
Lieut.-Col. and Staff Paymr. G. W. Barnes ... June 22

CHAPLAINS' DEPARTMENT.

Rev. F. Sadleir, M.A. ... May 28
Rev. W. H. Muller ... June 29
Rev. W. H. Bullock, M.A. ... Nov. 16

COMMANDS AND STAFF APPOINTMENTS—HOME AND COLONIES.

Command, N.E. District: ... Feb. 28
Major-Gen. R. T. Thynne, C.B. ...
D.A.A.G., Malta: ... Feb. 28
Col. J. Spence ...
District R.E., Eastern District: ... Feb. 28
Col. R. J. Jelf, C.B., R.E. ...
Inspector of Musketry, Eastern District: ... Feb. 28
Capt. D. J. Glasford, S. W. Borderers ...
D.A.A.G., Singapore: ... Feb. 28
Capt. R. W. P. White, Welsh Regt. ...
Command R.A., S.E. District: ... Feb. 6
Col. E. Lake, R.A. ...
A.A.G., Thames District: ... Feb. 14
Col. W. T. Dooner ...
Command, N.W. District: ... March 1
Major-Gen. L. V. Swaine, C.B. ...
A.Q.M.G., Intelligence Departments: ... April 20
Col. Sir W. Everett, K.C.M.G. ...
Deputy Inspector General of Fortifications, Headquarters: ... April 30
Col. C. M. Watson, C.M.G., R.E. ...
Chief Engineer, Ireland: ... May 3
Col. C. F. C. Beresford, R.E. ...
Military Secretary, Headquarters: ... May 6
Major-Gen. Sir Coleridge Grove ...
Command, Scottish District: ... May 6
Gen. E. F. Chapman, C.B., R.A. ...
Command, R.A., Woolwich: ... May 9
Col. R. Corbett, R.A. ...
Staff Captain, Alexandria: ... May 19
Major E. Montagu, Suffolk Regt. ...
D.A.A.G., Hong Kong: ... June 30
Col. N. P. O'Gorman ...
Command R.A., N.E. District: ... July 1
Col. J. E. Josselyn, R.A. ...
Command, Dublin District: ... July 6
Major-Gen. M. W. E. Gosset, C.B. ...
Military Attaché, Paris: ... July 20
Col. C. Needham ...
Recruiting Staff Officer, Edinburgh: ... Aug. 6
Capt. J. R. Hay ...
District R.E., Home District: ... Aug. 13
Col. S. Waller, R.E. ...
D.A.A.G., Curragh: ... Aug. 27
Major Sir W. Jenner, 9th Lancers ...
Inspector of Musketry, Southern District: ... Sept. 14
Major H. A. Kinloch, K.R.R.C. ...
A.A.G., Netley: ... Sept. 19
Col. W. Creagh ...
District R.E., N.W. District: ... Oct. 9
Col. J. W. Savage, R.E. ...
Deputy-Inspector of Fortifications, Headquarters: ... Oct. 18
Col. G. Hildebrand, R.E. ...
D.A.A.G., Egypt: ... Nov. 30
Lieut.-Col. F. R. P. Kane ...
Recruiting Staff Officer, Manchester: ... Dec. 16
Col. G. H. Leatham ...
District R.E., S.E. District: ... Dec. 31
Col. H. P. Kirkwood ...

CONNOISSEUR'S SMOKE

TEOFANI'S
HIGH-CLASS
CIGARETTES

Gold Medal (Highest Award) Paris Exhibition, 1900.

Two Gold Medals International Exhibition 1895

TEOFANI'S are sold at the leading Tobacconists and Stores throughout the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE FROM

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.C.

FOR the convenience of members of the Colonial forces invalided or on leave in this country from South Africa, a room has been set apart at the War Office for the purpose of answering queries. The room is near the eastern entrance. Forms of inquiry will be provided, and these should be filled up and given to the clerk in charge. Replies will then be obtained to the various queries and the completed forms will be handed back to the inquirers, or sent by post if desired. Replies to questions which require consideration and which cannot therefore be answered at once will be sent by post as soon as a decision has been obtained.

PROMOTION EXAMINATION.

Successful candidates at the recent examination at Home Stations of officers for promotion, with the subjects in which they passed (S.C., "special certificate" D., "distinguished" in any subject):—

2nd Dragoon Guards:
Lieut. C. P. Bradshaw	(c), (d), (g).
" J. A. Browning	"
5th Lancers:
Lieut. M. F. McTaggart	"
7th Hussars:
Capt. A. F. A. Imbert-Terry.	"
11th Hussars:
Capt. F. T. Bacon	(c), (d), (g); D. in Tactics.
" T. A. Salt	(c), (d), (g).
14th Hussars:
Capt. R. G. Brooksbank	Org. and Equip.
" W. G. Eley	Military Engineering.
17th Lancers:
Lieut. F. W. V. Greetham (Reserve of Officers).	(c), (d), (g).
18th Hussars:
Lieut. A. McLachlan	(c), (d), (g); S.C. and D. in Mil. Eng. & Mil. Topog.
20th Hussars:
Lieut. J. C. L. Bott	(c), (d), (g).
21st Lancers:
Capt. W. W. Cordeaux	Military Engineering.
" C. S. Nesham	(c), (d), (g). (for Capt.).
Royal Artillery:
Major J. McC. Maxwell	(c), (d), (g) (for Major); D. in Org. & Equip.
Capt. M. W. S. Pasley	(c), (d), (g); D. in Mil. Topog. & Org. & Equip.
" C. E. Phipps	(c), (d), (g).
" A. G. Shortt	"
" W. H. Jones	(c), (d), (g); D. in Mil. Topog.
" E. W. Spedding	(c), (d), (g).
" F. M. Thrupp	"
" W. J. K. Rettie	(c), (d), (g); D. in Tactics.
" H. M. Barnes	(c), (d), (g).
" T. St. A. B.-L. Nevinson.	(c), (d), (g); D. in Org. & Equip.
" F. B. H. Moore	Artillery (for Capt.)
" E. F. Corbett	Tactics (for Capt.)
" L. T. Ashworth	Artillery; D. in Mil. Eng. (for Capt.)
" J. O'Kinealy	(c), (d), (g) (for Capt.); S.C. & D. in Mil. Law, Mil. Eng., Tactics, & Mil. Topog.
" C. N. Ewart	(c), (d), (e), (g) (for Capt.)
" E. W. Plummer	Mil. Law & Art. (for Capt.)
" J. Dalby	Artillery (for Capt.)
" H. S. Browning	Org. & Equip. & Art. (for Capt.).
" A. F. Beckie	(c), (d), (e), (g) (for Capt.); S.C. & D. in Mil. Law, Tactics, & Org. & Equip.
" T. M. Kough	(c), (d), (e), (g) (for Capt.); D. in Mil. Topog.
" G. H. C. Wilkins	(c), (d), (e), (g) (for Capt.); D. in Mil. Eng. & Org. & Equip.
" F. J. Odevaine	(c), (d), (g) (for Capt.); D. in Mil. Law & Mil. Topog.
" A. J. Thompson	Artillery (for Capt.).
" A. R. Izat	(c), (d), (g) (for Capt.); yet to pass in (e).
" G. P. C. Blount	Artillery (for Capt.).
Lieut. L. B. Montresor	(c), (d), (e), (g).
" F. T. Brown (A.P.D.).	"
" C. D. Balfour	(c), (d), (e), (g); D. in Mil. Topog.
" J. S. Maidlow	"
" R. L. Barton	(c), (d), (e), (g).
" L. S. Bayley	"
" F. D. Logan	(c), (d), (e), (g); S.C. & D. in Mil. Law, Tactics, Mil. Topog. & Org. & Equip.
" F. Goodson	D. in Artillery; yet to pass in (c), (d), (g).
" F. G. T. Deshon	(c), (d), (g); D. in Tactics.
" A. M. Seton	(c), (d), (g); S.C. & D. in Tactics; yet to pass in (e).
Royal Engineers:
Capt. E. C. Johnston	Mil. Law, Tactics, & Org. & Equip.
" J. A. Gibbon	Tactics; S.C. & D. in Mil. Law & Org. & Equip.
" H. C. Carey	"
" E. M. J. Burn	Mil. Law, Tactics, & Org. & Equip.
" E. H. W. H. Stafford.	Tactics; S.C. & D. in Mil. Law & Org. & Equip.
" C. F. B. Pike	Mil. Law, Tactics, & Org. & Equip.
" H. W. Weekes	"
" G. A. F. Sanders	Mil. Law; S.C. & D. in Tactics & Org. & Equip.
Lieut. C. H. Ley	Mil. Law, Tactics, & Org. & Equip.
" G. B. Kensington	"
" C. St. B. Sladen	"
" E. Walker	Mil. Law, Tactics; S.C. & D. in Org. & Equip.

Grenadier Guards:
Capt. W. P. C. Lethbridge	Mil. Law.
" J. S. Reeve	Tactics (for Capt.).
Scots Guards:
Capt. F. H. de Kierskowski Stuart	(c), (d), (g); D. in Mil. Law.
East Kent Regiment:
Capt. H. A. B. Ternan	(c), (d), (g) (for Capt.).
Royal Lancaster Regiment:
Capt. D. M. McLachlan	(c), (d), (g).
Lieut. J. H. Morrah	Tactics.
Royal Warwickshire Regt.:
Capt. A. C. Herbert	(c), (d), (g).
Lieut. E. J. M. Harvey	(c), (d), (g); S.C. & D. in Mil. Eng., Tactics, Mil. Topog., & Org. & Equip.
" C. D. H. Moore	Military Engineering.
Royal Fusiliers:
Lieut. R. Hare	D. in Tactics.
Liverpool Regiment:
Capt. H. A. Denham	Org. & Equip. (for Capt.).
Lieut. H. C. Potter	(c), (d), (g); D. in Org. & Equip.
Norfolk Regiment:
Lieut. H. R. Done	(c), (d), (g).
Lincolnshire Regiment:
Lieut. F. D. Gibbes	"
Suffolk Regiment:
Capt. W. H. N. Glossop	"
Royal Welsh Fusiliers:
Lieut. F. C. France-Hayhurst.	Tactics.
Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers:
Capt. E. B. Blennerhasset.	(c), (d), (g).
Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry:
Capt. J. J. B. Jones-Parry.	(c), (d), (g).
Border Regiment:
Lieut. C. H. Pringle	"
Royal Sussex Regiment:
Capt. C. T. W. Church	"
South Staffordshire Regiment:
Capt. A. C. Buckle	"
Welsh Regiment:
Lieut. G. P. Hoggan	Tactics.
Royal Highlanders:
Lieut. H. F. S. Amery	(c), (d), (g); S.C. & D. in Mil. Topog.
Oxfordshire Light Infantry:
Capt. C. Parr	(c), (d), (g); D. in Org. & Equip.
" Sir C. Cuyler, Bart.	Tactics & Mil. Topog.; D. in Mil. Law, & Org. & Equip.
Derbyshire Regiment:
Capt. J. W. G. Roy	Military Topography.
Loyal North Lancashire Regiment:
Lieut. C. de Putron	Military Topography.
Royal West Kent Regiment:
Capt. J. Lees	Military Engineering.
Yorkshire Light Infantry:
Capt. M. W. K. Connolly	(c), (d), (g).
Lieut. H. W. B. Thorp	"
Shropshire Light Infantry:
Lieut. C. A. Wilkinson	"
" C. E. Atchison	"
King's Royal Rifle Corps:
Capt. C. C. Herbert-Stepney	"
Lieut. R. Johnstone	"
" H. F. W. Bircham	Mil. Law, Tactics, Mil. Topog. & Org. & Equip.
Manchester Regiment:
Capt. R. S. Weston	(c), (d), (g); D. in Org. & Equip.
York and Lancaster Regiment:
Lieut. R. J. Longden	"
" F. T. C. Hill	(c), (d), (g).
Durham Light Infantry:
Lieut. W. J. Ainsworth	"
Highland Light Infantry:
Capt. H. J. Pack-Beresford	D. in Org. and Equip. (for Capt.).
Lieut. P. Balfour	(c), (d), (g).
" K. L. Buist	"
" A. A. J. Hall (Reserve of Officers)	Military Topography.
Gordon Highlanders:
Capt. H. P. Uniacke	(c), (d), (g); D. in Org. & Equip.
Lieut. W. W. MacGregor	(c), (d), (g); S.C. & D. in Mil. Eng. & Mil. Topog.
Cameron Highlanders:
Lieut. S. Hay	(c), (d), (g).
Royal Irish Fusiliers:
Lieut. W. D. Dooner	"
Connaught Rangers:
Lieut. R. W. Harling	(c), (d), (g); D. in Tactics.
Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders:
Lieut. R. J. P. Cox	(c), (d), (g); S.C. & D. in Mil. Eng. & Mil. Topog.
Royal Munster Fusiliers:
Capt. C. L. Hendriks	Military Topography.
" F. A. D'O. Goddard	(c), (d), (g); D. in Mil. Topog. & Org. & Equip.
Rifle Brigade:
Capt. Hon. A. W. de B. S. Foljambe, M.V.O.	(c), (d), (g).
Lieut. L. H. Thornton	"
" R. E. Solly-Flood	"
West India Regiment:
Lieut. A. M. Byng	Tactics.
" J. C. Robertson	"
Army Service Corps:
Capt. W. H. Harrison	A.S.C. subjects.
Lieut. R. P. S. Elderton	"

THE ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

The section devoted to the Royal Artillery in the Army Book for the British Empire, published in 1893, commences with the following paragraph:—"The artillery of the Army is in tactical and numerical importance a great branch of the land Service, ranking with cavalry and infantry. It is, however, organised and governed as one corps, and is proud of its traditions and of its time-honoured title of the Royal Regiment of Artillery. The practical result of this organisation is that all its officers are on one list for promotion, and that all the men are enlisted for service in the Royal Artillery, and are available to serve in any part thereof." The above is no longer a correct definition of the organisation of the regiment. While it retains unimpaired its high position as a great and indispensable branch of the Army, and enjoys still the time-honoured title of which it is justly proud, it has ceased to be organised and governed as one corps, its officers are not now included in one list, nor are the men who enlist for it available to serve in any part thereof. After years of most careful and patient consideration, in the face of constantly increasing evidence of the urgent necessity that existed for the step, the great corps was divided in 1899 into its present mounted and dismounted branches, the former including the Horse and Field Artillery with their depots, the latter the Garrison Artillery with depot. The two grand divisions of the regiment are represented in the "Army List" by two seniority lists of officers, and men are recruited for the respective branches.

Owing to the sturdy conservatism that pervades the military services it was natural that the Royal Artillery, and especially the senior officers of the regiment, should view askance any proposal to break up their corps, and that they should approach the matter with reluctance. The difficulties that surrounded the preparation of the seniority lists were considerable, and, as is almost inevitable in all great changes of organisation, it is possible that some individuals have suffered, or may suffer, through retardation of promotion, especially in the dismounted branch, which has not benefited to the same extent as the mounted branch by recent augmentation. The greatest care was, however, exercised by the capable men who arranged the details to consult the wishes of officers as far as possible, and to protect them from effects injurious to their interests. It is believed that, on the whole, those efforts have been successful, and that the great majority of the officers have recognised that partition, however distasteful, had become not only expedient but indispensable, if the Artillery were to hold and retain a position of efficiency second to none. The question had in effect become one of imperial importance, as affecting the efficiency of the entire army, of which the Artillery is an essential part.

If the almost portentous numerical growth of the Royal Artillery in recent years be borne in mind, it must be allowed that, even from weight of numbers, the corps was becoming an unwieldy mass. When, moreover, we view the increasing complexity of the technical duties imposed upon it, due to the endless variety of the ordnance of all kinds in use, with their munitions and equipments, as well as the frequent changes in matériel that take place as science advances; the essential difference between the rôle of the mobile battery of field artillery and that of the fortress company, and between the natures of the ordnance worked respectively by them, we are forced to the conclusion, as every dispassionate observer of modern military requirements must be, that the old system of a single corps could not be retained. It tended to hang a millstone about the neck of the Artillery that must sink it into a condition of mediocrity fatal to its efficiency, unworthy of its glorious traditions, and detrimental to its prospects of further expansion.

Reference to the expansion of the regiment suggests a few brief words by way of historical retrospect. The Royal Artillery came into existence as a regimental organisation in 1716, when it was started with two companies. It has since grown with the Empire to its present great and still augmenting proportions. Its first Lilliputian establishment has swelled into thirty horse batteries, 155 field batteries, eleven mountain batteries, and 109 garrison companies, including depots in each case, and the total numerical strength of the regiment now exceeds 40,000 officers and men. Several modifications in organisation have marked its progress. Until 1855 it remained under the Master-General of the Ordnance, but in that year, during the war with Russia, the Board of Ordnance and the Master-General were abolished, and the Royal Artillery passed, together with the Royal Engineers, under the administration of the Commander-in-Chief. Four years later it was organised in brigades of field and garrison artillery respectively, each brigade comprising so many companies, which thenceforward were styled batteries. In 1877 this system practically disappeared, having failed to meet certain important requirements, and the battery became in a great measure an independent unit. Again, in 1882, the territorial system was adopted as in the case of the infantry, but only so far as it was applicable. The regiment was formed into two brigades of horse, and four of field, composed of battery units, with eleven territorial divisions of garrison artillery composed of company units. The eleven divisions were, in 1889, reduced to three, viz., the Eastern, Southern, and Western, as they stand at present. The mobile batteries have since been grouped, for command and manœuvre, into Brigade-Divisions, each comprising two horse or three field batteries. Lastly, in 1891, "Armament Majors" were appointed, chiefly to look after artillery duties in out-lying forts, and the "District Establishment," composed of skilled officers and men for armament duties apart from companies, was created to secure permanency of supervision in defensive works, a want that had been long felt.

The last-mentioned developments, which affect the Garrison Artillery, affects the opinion supposed to be held in certain quarters that, under the existing organisation, the dismounted branch of the corps is a wasted force, and that it should be converted into mobile batteries for field service, the duties connected with the coast defences at home and the coaling stations abroad being transferred to the Royal Marine Artillery. This view is both superficial and unsound. The change would entail a vast augmentation of the Marines, and immensely increase the labours of the Admiralty. In times of emergency, moreover, it might lead to the neglect and under-manning of fortresses, in order to maintain the ships' complements, the Marines being on the naval vote and at the entire disposal of the Admiralty. There would also result the anomaly and inconvenience arising from a mixture of Marine and other military officers and men, performing identical duties but under different service conditions, in all the home coast defences. It should be borne in mind that the manning of the batteries in the United Kingdom would, of necessity, be largely undertaken in time of war by the Militia and Volunteer Artillery, the regular Garrison Artillery, although over 20,000 strong, being entirely insufficient for that duty, in addition to providing for fortresses abroad. Those who hold this opinion are disposed to undervalue the importance of fortress artillery as such, or even of fortified works for coast defence, on the alleged ground that it is the duty of the Fleet to defend our coasts, forgetting that the armed defences of the naval ports and arsenals afford points d'appui for ships, both naval and commercial, in need of shelter or support, as well as secure places for re-fitment and replenishment. Each branch of the Artillery has an equally weighty and important part to play in Imperial defence, and the requisite strength and efficiency of each should be maintained at all times. The Garrison Artillery, moreover, may fairly claim that its officers and men should enjoy a healthy share of active employment, such as duty with any heavy field batteries that may be formed would provide, in addition to service in mountain batteries and siege trains.

The war in South Africa has brought out once more in undiminished lustre the high, soldierly qualities of the Royal Artillery personnel, and the general efficiency of the batteries, but it was a rude shock to the country to hear so much of the alleged superiority of the Boers, a matter now clearly proved. No doubt our military authorities will now strive to keep abreast of the times, and no doubt the maintenance of our Artillery at the highest level of efficiency will engross the early attention of the new Commander-in-Chief. In this connection the status of the chief officer of the Artillery at headquarters has become a matter of great importance. Until April, 1899, the Royal Artillery was represented in the Adjutant-General's Division of the War Office by a Deputy Adjutant-General, a Major-General of the Corps, with suitable staff, as is still the case in the sister scientific Corps of Royal Engineers. It was the duty of the subdivision administered by this officer to deal with all questions affecting the Artillery, and with the armament and equipment in possession of the regiment. That important office has been inadequately replaced by an Assistant-Adjutant-General in the Adjutant-General's Division, and an Assistant Military Secretary in the Division of the Military Secretary. This particular change, which formed part of the general scheme for subdividing the Artillery, was adopted to bring the Artillery arm more effectually under the control of the Adjutant-General, conformably with the system obtaining for the Cavalry and Infantry of the Army. It is no secret, however, that the abolition of the appointment of Deputy-Adjutant-General for Royal Artillery is strongly disapproved by the regiment, the change being considered inconsistent with the increasingly scientific character of the corps, and one that tends to lower its importance and to cause its maintenance in the highest degree of efficiency to be less assured. This is a matter demanding the early consideration of the Commander-in-Chief and the Secretary of State for War, and should they in their wisdom and foresight decide to restore, and if anything strengthen, the office that formerly represented the Royal Regiment of Artillery at headquarters, the step will give undoubted satisfaction not alone to the entire corps interested, but also to all who watch its career with pride.

THE South African War Fund which the Lord Mayor is collecting now amounts to £1,035,400.

The Gazette.

FRIDAY EVENING.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 28.

7th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. W. E. Royds, A. B. Pollok, W. Gibbs, J. M. Thomson, G. Roberts, E. S. Gooch, O. Haigh, and E. W. Hermon to be Lieuts., to complete establishment (Nov. 29).

8th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. R. W. Allen to be Lieut., vice R. Lambert, appointed Adj.; Corpl. Harry C. St. Lo Malet, from Cape Mounted Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), to be 2nd Lieut., vice R. W. Allen.

11th Hussars.—Sergt. Charles A. B. Hawkins, from 3rd New Zealand Contingent (nominated by Governor of New Zealand), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. N. M. Johnstone, killed in action (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29).

14th Hussars.—Qrmer. and Hon. Capt. F. Mugford retires on retired pay.

15th Hussars.—Pte. Philip D. Holt, from Imperial Yeomanry (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. H. Lord Kensington, seconded.

19th Hussars.—Pte. C. B. H. Mansfield, from Col. Lumden's Corps (recommended by Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, South Africa), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. R. F. Cox, promoted.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

1st Bn.—Temp. Lieut. Sir J. P. Dickson-Poynder, Bart., from Qmr., to be Lieut., retaining his temp. rank; Temp. Lieut. Hon. R. B. F. Robertson, from Lieut., to be Qmr., retaining his temp. rank (April 4); Sergt. Henry F. Clifford (May 15), and H. T. Edwards (Oct. 11) to be Lieuts., [with temp. rank of] Lieut. in Army.

2nd Bn.—Lieut. F. B. J. Stapleton-Bretherton to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (Nov. 28).

3rd Bn.—Lieut. L. E. Starkey, Major Reserve of Officers, to be Capt. (Feb. 3); Lieut. C. H. Simpson resigns his commission (Dec. 29); Frank Mitchell to be Qrmer., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Feb. 3); Temp. Lieut. F. Mitchell, from Qrmer., to be Lieut., retaining his temp. rank (March 10).

4th Bn.—Capt. W. Bromley-Davenport to be second in command, with temp. rank of Major in Army; Capt. Lord A. F. Compton resigns his commission; Lieut. T. A. Wight-Boycott to be Capt., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army; Lieut. Hon. F. C. Stanley, Capt. Grenadier Guards, to be Capt. (Nov. 28).

5th Bn.—Appointment to Lieutenancy, with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army, of Corpl. Reginald Smart, notified in Gazette of Nov. 27, is cancelled at his own request.

7th Bn.—Lieut. Hon. Ivor Guest resigns his commission (July 11); Sergt.-Major V. L. Gordon (July 11) and Col.-Sergt. R. G. Cave (Sept. 26) to be Lieuts., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army; Lieut. R. W. W. Eyton, from Lieut., to be Adj., with temp. rank of Capt. in Army (Oct. 18).

9th Bn.—Capt. E. D. Miller resigns his commission (Oct. 31).

10th Bn.—Lieut. L. Noble resigns his commission.

11th Bn.—Capt. Frewen to be second in command, with temp. rank of Major in Army; Lieut. F. D. J. Annesley, Capt. Reserve of Officers, to be Capt. (Aug. 22); Lieuts. F. B. Mildmay (Aug. 29) and J. M. S. Crealock (Dec. 29) resign their commissions; Sergts. Charles E. B. Hunt (Aug. 29), Charles H. Blackburne (Sept. 20), and E. Hely and Pte. R. E. S. Barrington (Nov. 21) to be Lieuts., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army.

12th Bn.—Lieut. W. R. Greene resigns his commission (Oct. 31).

13th Bn.—Temp. Lieut.-Col. B. Spragge, D.S.O., Commandant, and Lieut. R. Woodhouse resign their commissions (Nov. 6).

14th Bn.—Lieut. F. J. Mitchell resigns his commission (Dec. 29); Sergt. A. T. Clark to be Lieut., with temp. rank of Lieut. in Army (Aug. 16).

15th Bn.—Lieut. F. J. St. John resigns his commission.

SANDILANDS & SON

Military Outfitters,

OVERALLS A SPECIALITY.

11 & 12, CONDUIT STREET, LONDON, W.

ROYAL REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery.

Promotions to Lieut.-Col. of undermentioned Majors antedated:—E. S. May to Oct. 18, vice Brevet Col. A. G. Creagh, C.B., removed on appointment to staff; C. M. T. Western to Nov. 14, on augmentation.

Major J. W. Dunlop to be Lieut.-Col., on augmentation (Nov. 21).

Promotions of undermentioned Officers antedated:—Major E. J. Duffus to Oct. 18, vice E. S. May, promoted; Major F. Potts to Oct. 31, vice J. Hanwell, killed in action; Major G. F. Milne to Nov. 1, vice A. W. Gay, appointed to Staff; Capt. E. M. Conolly to Oct. 18, vice E. J. Duffus, promoted; Capt. M. J. F. Fitzgerald to Oct. 23, vice C. H. Wilson, appointed Div. Adj.; Capt. W. A. S. Gemmell to Oct. 26, vice F. F. L. Barker, appointed Div. Adj.

Supy. Capt. J. B. Aldridge to be Capt., in succession to Major C. J. U. Morris, who holds a staff appointment (Nov. 14).

Lieuts. to be Capts.—B. Dickson, in succession to Major G. F. Milne, who holds a staff appointment (Nov. 1). C. C. Barnes, vice J. R. Wilson, employed in China (Nov. 10). E. L. Wheeler, vice E. S. E. W. Russell, seconded (Dec. 10). C. St. M. Ingham, vice F. B. D. Broadrick, seconded (Nov. 10). H. R. Peck, vice G. Calvert, promoted. R. H. Griffith, vice H. L. Powell, promoted (Nov. 14).

Name of Pte. Francis Gordon Sanders, from South Australian Mtd. Inf., who was appointed to a 2nd Lieutenant in Gazette of Nov. 13, is as now described, not as therein stated.

Christian names of 2nd Lieut. Frederick Hugh Langston Oldham are as now described, not as stated in Gazette of July 3.

Gentlemen, from Cape of Good Hope Local Military Forces, to be 2nd Lieuts., (dated May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29):—Corpls. Herbert G. Howell and James Macdonagh, from Cape Mounted Rifles.

Capt. H. S. Wilson to be Div. Adj. on augmentation (Dec. 3).

Royal Garrison Artillery.

Promotions to Major of undermentioned Captains antedated:—A. J. Breakey to Dec. 18, 1899, vice M. M. Morris, appointed to staff. E. F. Hoblyn to Jan. 3, A.O.D. J. W. Ormiston to Jan. 3, Professor Ordnance College; G. C. Dowell to Jan. 3, Brig. Major. H. S. Jendwine to Jan. 3, employed on special service in South Africa. H. E. B. Lane to Jan. 3, vice W. H. F. Taylor, employed on special service in South Africa. D. P. L.

Birch to Jan. 4, vice A. H. Browne, promoted; A. B. Denne to Jan. 16, vice A. H. Callwell, promoted; H. D. Grier to Jan. 19, on augmentation; H. A. K. Jennings to Feb. 1, Indian Ordnance Dept. H. R. Adair to Feb. 1, A.O.D. R. C. Stevenson to Feb. 1, vice G. T. Kelaart, promoted; M. Taylor to Feb. 7, on augmentation; H. B. Foote, W. W. Cookson and C. T. Bell to April 1, Indian Ordnance Dept.; F. T. Fisher to April 1, Asst. Supt. Royal Carriage Factory; H. C. W. Eteson to April 1, Asst. Supt. Royal Laboratory; F. H. S. Giles to April 1, on augmentation; M. M. Noble to May 7, vice F. F. Minchin, appointed to A.O.D.; C. O. Smeaton to May 9, vice M. B. G. Jackson, appointed to Staff; A. C. Currie to June 16, vice A. F. Montanaro, employed on West Coast of Africa; W. H. Mills to July 1, employed on staff; W. L. Farmar to July 1, vice W. A. Plant, promoted; F. L. Donaldson to July 13, vice N. W. H. Du Boulay, employed on special service in China; G. J. L. de Berry to Sept. 19, vice A. C. Currie, appointed to staff.

Cpts. to be Majors:—M. S. C. Campbell, Indian Ordnance Dept.; F. R. Drake, on augmentation (Oct. 10).

Promotions to Capt. of undermentioned Lieuts. antedated:—J. C. Hanna to Jan. 4, Div. Adj.; M. L. Wilkinson to Jan. 4, vice D. B. L. Birch, promoted; I. B. F. Currie to Jan. 9, vice H. D. Larymore, C.M.G., seconded; R. G. Westropp to Jan. 16, vice A. B. Denne, promoted; J. H. Massie to Jan. 19, on Seconded List; T. M. Luke to Jan. 19, vice H. D. Grier, promoted; J. A. FitzGibbon to Jan. 25, vice R. M. B. Ruthven, seconded; Hon. N. A. Hood to Feb. 1, vice R. C. Stevenson, promoted; R. H. McVittie to Feb. 3, on Seconded List; G. E. Carter to Feb. 3, in succession to Major F. W. G. Tothill, employed on special service in South Africa; A. J. Thompson to May 7, on Seconded List; G. Stoddart to May 7, vice M. M. Noble, promoted; H. W. G. Keddie to May 9, on Seconded List; R. B. Crofton to May 9, Div. Adj.; W. H. Moore to May 9, vice C. O. Smeaton, promoted; W. D. C. Trimmell to May 28, on Seconded List; A. L. B. Jacob to May 28, Instr. in Range-Finding; A. R. Izat to May 28, vice W. H. Mills, seconded; P. H. Crickshank to June 1, vice H. C. H. Burton, seconded; C. S. S. Curteis to June 15, Div. Adj.; W. E. Kemble to June 15, vice R. St. G. Gorton, seconded; G. P. C. Blount to July 1, on Seconded List; G. F. C. Finch to July 1, vice W. L. Farmar, promoted; H. W. Ravenhill to July 10, vice R. H. F. McCulloch, D.S.O., seconded.

Supy. Capt. N. G. Barron to be Capt. on augmentation (Dec. 1).

Lieut. F. W. Van der Kiste to be Capt., vice F. R. Drake (Oct. 10).

Gentlemen, from Cape of Good Hope Local Military Forces to be 2nd Lieuts. (May 23, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29):—Corp. Reay M. Sutherland and Ptes. Frederick H. P. O'Connor, and Cecil A. Orton, from Cape Mtd. Rifles.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

2nd Lieut. P. B. O'Connor to be Lieut.

Notification which appeared in Gazette of Dec. 18, cancelling appointment to a 2nd Lieutenant of Gent. Cadet George B. Stoney, from Royal Military Academy, is cancelled.

GRENADEER GUARDS.

2nd Lieut. V. Vivian to be Lieut., vice Thomas T. Lord O'Hagan, deceased (Dec. 14).

LINE BATTALIONS.

Royal West Surrey Regt.—Pte. J. E. C. Wilcox, from Cape Mtd. Rifles (nominated by Governor of Cape Colony), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. H. C. Whinfield, promoted (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29).

Liverpool Regt.—Capt. A. C. Lewin seconded for service in South Africa (Dec. 5). 2nd Lieut. W. N. W. Gape to be Lieut., vice H. C. Potter, promoted (Dec. 29). Pte. Almeric F. Wilson, from South Australian Bushmen (nominated by Governor of South Australia), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. G. A. Howard-Vyse, promoted (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29).

East Yorkshire Regt.—Capt. E. Gloster retires from the Service, receiving a gratuity, with permission to retain his rank and wear prescribed uniform.

Bedford Regt.—Capt. J. S. Lightfoot to be Major, vice Brevet Lieut.-Col. T. D. Pilcher, promoted (Oct. 20).

Yorkshire Regt.—Capt. W. J. Todd retires on retired pay; Lieut. B. S. Moss-Blundell, from 1st V.B. East Yorkshire Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. E. B. Pusey, resigned.

Lancashire Fusiliers.—Pte. Harold D. Collison-Morley, from Queensland Bushmen (nominated by Governor of Queensland), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. R. H. M. Moody, promoted (dated May 19), but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29). Surname of 2nd Lieut. R. D. Whigham, who was appointed in Gazette of Oct. 2, is as now described, not as therein stated.

Cheshire Regt.—2nd Lieut. J. A. Busfield to be Lieut., vice C. G. Porcher, promoted (Dec. 15); Pte. Rowland Sleight, from Queensland M.I., nominated by Governor

Publications.

Invaluable for Field Service and Training, Instruction, and Examinations.

5th EDITION.

— THE —
OFFICER'S FIELD NOTE & SKETCH BOOK, & RECONNAISSANCE AIOE-MÉMOIRE.

Revised to latest date according to Official Text-Books, with New Tables, Trenches, and many additions, Field Memos, Coloured and Black Pencils, and Detachable Sketch or Order Block.
Price 6s. 6d. net, post free, 6s. 9d.

By LIEUT.-COL. E. GUNTER, P.S.C.

Also by the same Author.
For Lectures and Study.

3rd EDITION.

OUTLINES OF MODERN TACTICS
Rewritten and Revised to date, with New Tables.
Hill Fighting, &c. Price 7s. 6d.

WM. CLOWES AND SONS, 13, Charing Cross, S.W.,
A. & N. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, &c.

Of whom Refill-Books, and Blocks may be had.
Agents for South Africa: Messrs. Juta, Capetown.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 1023.—JANUARY, 1901.—2s. 6d.

MAROONED. By "LINESMAN."—THROUGH DRY PLACES SEEKING BEST.—THE FOIBLE OF COMPARATIVE LITERATURE.—FIFTEEN HUNDRED MILES ON FRESH WATER. By C. HANBURY WILLIAMS.—THE ENGLISH IN CHINA.—DOOM CASTLE: A ROMANCE. By NEIL MUNRO. CHAPS. XIII.-XV.—THE HOUSE OF COMMONS, PAST AND PRESENT.—MUSINGS WITHOUT METHOD: AUTOBIOGRAPHY—THE VALUE OF PRIDE—THE EGOISM OF PEPPYS AND MONTAIGNE—ABDUR RAHMAN—HIS ADVENTUROUS LIFE—GIBSON, THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF THOUGHT—THE ART OF CRITICISM.—MORE PROBLEMS OF RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.—MY WISH.—THE LAST SESSION OF THE CENTURY.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

ARMY ALTERATIONS

Printed on one side only, and forwarded monthly to subscribers, enabling them to keep the various Army Regulation Books corrected up-to-date.

Subscription—5s. 6d. per annum, post free.
One copy monthly will correct a set of Regulation Books. Being printed on one side they can be cut into slips and inserted in the books where necessary. Back numbers supplied.

ARMY BOOKS CORRECTED TO DATE.
With the Printed Army Alterations, Price for Correcting, 1s. per month, including Alterations.
BOOKS PARTLY CORRECTED MADE COMPLETE.

A. WILLIAMSON, Army Printer,
Ashton-under-Lyne.

MARTELL'S THREE STAR BRANDY.

The Indian Army.

The Publisher of the "Army and Navy Gazette" begs to announce that, beginning on January 5, 1901, EIGHT Coloured Military Types of the INDIAN ARMY will be issued Monthly as Supplements to this Paper.

ORDERS for the series to be sent as Published, i.e., on the first weeks of each month from January to August, should be forwarded at once, accompanied by Money Order for (Inland) 4s. 4d., or (India and Abroad) 5s., made payable to the PUBLISHER.

Full particulars and list of Plates will be sent post free on application.
"Army and Navy Gazette" Offices, 3, York St., Covent Garden, London, W.

HEERING'S COPENHAGEN CHERRY BRANDY

Purveyor by Appointment to the Royal Danish and Imperial Russian Courts and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

ESTABLISHED 1818.

Peter J. Heering SOLD THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Colonial Types.

A Complete Set of the Coloured Military Types which depict the various COLONIAL FORCES, including Australian, S. African, Canadian, &c., &c., making Ten in all, will be sent post free on receipt of 5s. 3d.
Offices: 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.O.

A REVOLUTION IN FURNISHING

BY MONTHLY PAYMENTS

WHAT IS NORMAN and STACEY'S PLAN of Furnishing?
It is a clever scheme, now known and adopted in all parts of the English-speaking world, which enables you to furnish your House or Flat throughout, from Drawing Room to Kitchen (even to the extent of Linens, Silver, Cutlery, Blinds, etc.), out of income, without disturbing your Capital by (instead of paying Cash) dividing the whole amount into 6, 12, 24, or 36 equal monthly payments. During the above-mentioned period you can, of course, at any time (should you wish it) pay off the amount and avail yourself of the cash discount.

NORMAN & STACEY, LD.,

118, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.

Moderate Prices. Free Delivery Town or Country. Call and view Stock before Furnishing locally, and compare Quality and Prices with those of other firms.

MARGATE (CLIFTONVILLE),

QUEEN'S HOTEL.

EXCELLENT POSITION, situated in PRIVATE GROUNDS on PROMENADE. Special Low En Pension Winter Tariff. Exceptional arrangements and Terms for Officers returning from South Africa, and SPECIAL ATTENTION given to INVALIDS. For Tariff, address MANAGER.

THE NEW

STRAP LEGGING.

LATEST STYLE.

DENNISON'S
PATENT,
No. 6795.
Stohwasser
and Winter's Licence.

SHOOTING.
RIDING.
WALKING.
HUNTING.
MILITARY.
IMPERIAL
YEOMANRY
VOLUNTEERS.

Lord Loch's
Own IMPERIAL YEOMANRY.

Order through your Saddler,
Bootmaker, or
Outfitter.

Sole Manufacturers,
WALLACE, BAILEY & WILKINS,
176, Long Lane, BERMUDSEY, LONDON, S.E.

Extract from the "SHOOTING TIMES."

"We have recently given this Legging a severe trial through some of the roughest going in the Kingdom, and can recommend it to Sportsmen as extremely comfortable, and a most shapely improvement on the older forms of Gaiters."

"FALL MALL EAST, CHARING CROSS."

"The Denison Strap Leggings have given complete satisfaction, and I am convinced that they are the most comfortable Leggings for Riding and Shooting."
"LEWIS H. LLOYD."

of Queensland, to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. C. G. E. Hughes, seconded (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29); Lieut. A. F. de Trafford, from 3rd Batn. South Stafford Regt., to be 2nd Lieut., vice J. A. Busfield.

Worcester Regt.—Lieuts. to be Capt.:—R. A. C. L. Leggett, in succession to Major G. T. Peacocke, who holds an extra-regimental appointment; G. E. Lea, Adj't., to complete establishment; J. H. M. Arden, on augmentation.

East Lancashire Regt.—Lieut. J. E. Green to be Capt., vice E. C. Da Costa, seconded (June 5); promotion to Lieut. of 2nd Lieut. P. C. W. Goodwyn, antedated to June 5, vice J. E. Green; 2nd Lieut. F. J. C. Bonnyman to be Lieut., vice B. C. De Gex, promoted into Lancashire Fusiliers (June 20); Corpl. Dudley R. Hewitt, from 4th New Zealand Contingent (nominated by Governor of New Zealand), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. E. R. Collins, promoted (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29).

Border Regt.—To be 2nd Lieuts.:—Sergt.-Major Thomas H. Dawson, from 4th New Zealand Contingent (nominated by Governor of New Zealand), in succession to Lieut. S. G. W. Hume, promoted (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29); Lieut. G. U. Jameson, 4th Batn. Highland L.I., in succession to Lieut. A. R. S. Lyon-Campbell, seconded.

Hampshire Regt.—Corpl. George H. F. Rolleston, from 4th New Zealand Contingent (nominated by Governor of New Zealand), to be 2nd Lieut., in succession to Lieut. J. H. Deane, promoted (dated May 19, but not to carry pay or allowances prior to Dec. 29).

Middlesex Regt.—Lieut. C. S. D. Fisher to be Capt., vice C. McKey, seconded for service with Egyptian Army (Dec. 15).

Manchester Regt.—Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenantcy of Corpl. C. E. Northcott, from West Australian Contingent, which appeared in Gazette of Nov. 20, is cancelled at his own request. Appointment to a 2nd Lieutenantcy of Trpr. H. C. S. Malet, from Cape Mtd. Rifles, which appeared in Gazette of Dec. 4, is cancelled at his own request.

Connaught Rangers.—2nd Lieut. H. J. K. Wallis to be Lieut., vice A. Delacombe, promoted into Royal Warwick Regt. (Aug. 22).

West Indian Regt.—Capt. D. P. Malins retires on retired pay (Dec. 29); Lieut. (now Capt.) G. E. Hewett seconded for service on West Coast of Africa (May 30); 2nd Lieut. E. E. D. Henderson seconded for service under Colonial Office. (Dec. 15).

Royal Eastern Reserve Regt.—Capt. W. H. Scales ceases to be employed with regt. in consequence of ill-health.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Civil Surgeons now serving in South Africa to be Lieuts.:—Walter J. Waters, Basil Pares, Henry F. Shea, M.B., Charles E. Fleming, M.B., Percival J. Bodington, M.B., Joseph F. Whelan, M.B., Percy S. Leelan, F.R.C.S. Eng., James Barkley, William H. Odum, Frederick A. Stephens, Miles G. Sterling, William M. Power, John T. Johnson, M.B., Edgar F. L'Estrange, Robert B. Black, M.B., William M. McFarlan, M.B. Temp. Capt. T. B. Unwin, M.B., from Medical Officer, Imperial Yeomanry, to be Lieut. (Nov. 14). Officers granted hon. rank of Capt.:—Qrmer. and Hon. Lieut. E. Thowless and Qrmer. and Hon. Lieut. F. Kyle (Dec. 24).

STAFF.

Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. J. R. L. Macdonald, C.B., R.E., is graded as an A.A.G. whilst employed on staff of China Field Force (Oct. 29).

Capt. A. C. Hyde, West India Regt., to be A.D.C. to Gen. Sir G. D. Barker, K.C.B., Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Bermuda (May 1).

Notification substituted for that which appeared in Gazette of March 2:—Col. H. H. Settle, C.B., D.S.O., Insp.-Gen. of Lines of Communication, to be a Brig.-Gen. on staff, Field Force, South Africa, with temp. rank of Brig.-Gen. whilst so employed (Jan. 25).

Notification substituted for that which appeared in Gazette of July 3:—Capt. W. R. Birdwood, I.S.C., to be a D.A.A.G., Field Force, South Africa, from Dec. 2, 1899, and to have local rank of Major from Jan. 10, 1900, whilst so employed.

Appointments to staff made in South Africa confirmed:—Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. E. A. H. Alderson, Royal West Kent Regt., to be a Brig.-Gen. on staff to command a Mtd. Inf. Brigade and to have local rank of Brig.-Gen. whilst so employed, vice Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. (local Brig.-Gen.) C. P. Ridley, appointed to South African Constabulary (Oct. 18); appointment of Major G. R. C. Paul, A.S.C., as Asst. Director of Transport, Field Force, South Africa, graded as an A.A.G., which was notified in Gazette of Oct. 2, is cancelled; Major G. B. C. Paul, A.S.C., Asst. Director of Transport, to be an A.A.G. (Jan. 10). Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. J. R. M. Dalrymple-Hay, West India Regt., graded as an A.A.G. whilst a Station Commandant (May 9); Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. S. C. H. Monro, Seaforth Highlanders, Special Service Officer, was attached to Field Intelligence Dept., Natal, graded as A.A.G., from June 27 to Sept. 16; Capt. and Brevet Major A. J. Godley, Irish Guards, to be graded as A.A.G., and to have local rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst commanding a brigade (Aug. 29); Lieut. (local Capt.) R. H. Hare, Norfolk Regt., to be D.A.A.G., and to retain local rank of Capt. whilst so employed (Aug. 29); Major C. F. S. Vandeleur, D.S.O., Irish Guards, to be D.A.A.G. for Transport (Aug. 30).

To be graded as D.A.A.G.'s:—Majors St. J. W. T. Parker, A.S.C. (Aug. 25); Capt. G. E. Pigott, D.S.O., A.S.C. (May 15); Major C. N. Watts, Derbyshire Regt., whilst a Station Staff Officer (April 6); Major G. H. Cardew, A.S.C., whilst a Senior Transport Officer, vice Major S. S. Long, A.S.C., vacated (Oct. 8); Capt. J. R. Beech, C.M.G., D.S.O., Reserve of Officers, to be an Asst. Provost-Marshal, graded as D.A.A.G., vice Capt. P. A. Kenna, V.C., 21st Lancers (July 26); Capt. C. FitzClarence, V.C., Irish Guards, to be a Brig. Major (Aug. 19); Capt. P. A. Kenna, V.C., 21st Lancers, to be a Brig. Major, vice Major J. W. P. Peters, 7th Dragoon Guards, appointed an Asst. District Commissioner (July 26).

To be graded as Staff Capt. whilst Brigade Signalling Officers:—Lieut. A. W. F. Baird, Gordon Highlanders, from April 7 to Oct. 9; Capt. C. L. Parmiter, Liverpool Regt., from March 12 to July 13; Capt. C. Ashburnham, King's Royal Rifle Corps, from July 14 to Sept. 9; Capt. J. E. Gough, Rifle Brigade (Sept. 10); Capt. A. B. Whatman, Somerset L.I. (Sept. 11).

Capt. (temp. Lieut. in Army) H. W. Hutson, 5th Batn. Liverpool Regt., to be an Asst. Provost-Marshal, graded as a Staff Capt. (Sept. 1).

Lieut. L. N. Jones-Bateman, Norfolk Regt., to be A.D.C. to Lieut.-Col. (local Brig.-Gen.) H. C. O. Plumer, Commanding a Brigade (Aug. 29).

Capt. W. I. S. McCormick, A.S.C., graded as Staff Capt. whilst in charge of Supply Detail Issue Store at Bloemfontein (Sept. 1).

2nd Lieut. R. M. Wilford, Suffolk Regt., to be a Railway Staff Officer, graded as Staff Lieut. whilst so employed (Sept. 2).

Corpl. Edwin S. Craig, Loch's Horse, to be an Intelligence Officer, graded as Staff Lieut. whilst so employed, and to have hon. rank of Lieut. (Oct. 1).

Appointments to Staff of Lines of Communication made in South Africa, confirmed:—Col. K. Mackay, 6th Regt. Imperial Bushmen, New South Wales Contingent, to be Staff Officer for Australian Contingents, graded as A.A.G., vice Lieut.-Col. W. D. Gordon, Canadian Staff, vacated appointment (Nov. 12); Major C. B. Vyvyan, East Kent Regt., to be Station Commandant, graded as A.A.G. whilst so employed (June 6); Capt. R. M. Foot, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, to be D.A.A.G., vice Capt. (local Major) A. E. Lascelles, Norfolk Regt., vacated appointment (Nov. 14); Capt. S. Wilcock, Gloucester Regt., to be Brig. Major, vice Capt. R. M. Foot, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (Nov. 14); Major W. H. Mills, R.A., graded as D.A.A.G., whilst an Asst. District Commandant (Sept. 19); Capt. W. Elton, 3rd Batn. Welsh Regt., graded as Staff Capt. whilst an Asst. Press Censor (Nov. 5); Capt. K. F. MacLachlan, Imperial Yeomanry, to be Asst. Provost-Marshal and Press Censor, graded as a Staff Capt. (Sept. 19). Major Hon. E. J. Montagu-Stuart-Wortley, C.M.G., D.S.O., King's Royal Rifle Corps, graded as A.A.G. whilst employed in South Africa, from Dec. 9, 1899, to Mar. 13, 1900.

Indian Staff Corps.—Majors granted temp. rank of Lieut.-Col. whilst serving as Regimental Commandants, Indian Army:—G. A. Gott (June 9); J. F. Wilson (June 27); L. S. H. Baker (July 8); A. Wallace (July 30); H. W. E. Georges (Aug. 11); Capt. granted temp. rank of Major whilst serving as Regimental Commandants or seconds in command, Indian Army:—W. O. M. Mosse (May 30); T. D. Leslie (June 20); A. W. Newbold (June 27); F. W. Rea (July 1).

Army Chaplains' Dept.—The Rev. W. J. Ward, M.A., Chaplain to Forces 4th Class, to be Chaplain to Forces 3rd Class (Oct. 10).

Brevet.—Officers to be Cols.:—Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. J. Collinson, C.B., Northampton Regt. (Nov. 18); Lieut.-Col. J. Hotham, R.H.A. (Dec. 21); Lieut.-Col. H. C. M. Woods, R.G.A.; Lieut.-Col. G. P. Owen, R.G.A. (Dec. 21).

MEMORANDA.

Col. A. W. Anstruther-Duncan, on vacating appointment of Col. on Staff for R.A., is placed on half-pay (Dec. 1).

Lieut.-Col. and Brevet Col. A. Porcelli, half-pay R.E., retires on retired pay.

Capt. (now Major) G. A. Cookson, I.S.C., granted local rank of Lieut.-Col. in South Africa whilst employed with Kitchener's Horse, from May 13, and not as stated in Gazette of Nov. 9.

Army Medical Reserve of Officers.—Surg.-Major J. P. Massingham resigns his commission.

[Where not otherwise mentioned, the foregoing commissions and appointments bear date Dec. 29.]

APSLEY PELLATT & Co.,
21, Northumberland Avenue, Charing
Cross, London, W.C.
FALCON GLASS WORKS AND CHINA
MANUFACTURERS
Complete Mess Furnishers.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

ARMY AND NAVY CLUB.

The COMMITTEE, in accordance with Rule 33, hereby call an EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of the Members for MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1901, at 2 p.m., to consider the question of entertaining Field-Marshal Right Hon. Lord ROBERTS, V.C., K.P., at dinner on his return.

GILBERT JNO. SMALLPEICE,
Manager and Secretary.

BRIGHTON.—PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENT (as homelike as possible) for those requiring Medical, Surgical, and Nursing care. Medical baths, packs, massage, electricity. Own doctor can attend if wished, or their treatment carried out. Close to sea, overlooking private grounds. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO COMFORT, NURSING, DIET. For Terms address, Medical Sup., Sillwood Lodge, Brighton.

INVENTION FOR SALE by the INVENTOR.

1. The Model of a simple apparatus for stopping or impeding screw steamers.
2. The Model of a contrivance for closing a river, etc., against ships.

The purchaser may test both inventions as to the possibility of connecting them with mines.

Purchase price £2,500.

Please address, M.S.H., care of Nygh and Van Ditmar's General Advertising Offices, Rotterdam.

MILITARY TYPES.—Collectors in search of copies of 1st and 2nd Life Guards types issued with THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE are requested to communicate with OLS, c/o ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

To Let, Wanted, &c.

ARMY AND NAVY PENSIONERS' EMPLOYMENT SOCIETY.

REQUIRED, a RETIRED NAVAL or MILITARY OFFICER to act as Secretary. Salary £150 per annum. Application in writing only, with references, to the Secretary, 2, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C. Age not above 50.

STONE, near Greenhithe, Kent.—To be LET, for a period of three or five years, with or without meadow land, a desirable newly-decorated HOUSE, with nine bed-rooms and two dressing-rooms, four sitting-rooms, with fine conservatory and greenhouses, and three acres of pleasure and kitchen garden. Rent, partly furnished, £250 per annum; rent, unfurnished, £120 per annum. Additional meadow land at moderate rent per acre.—Apply to Messrs. Gamlen, Burdett and Gamlen, 3, Gray's Inn Square, London, W.C.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE SOLDIERS, 12, Buckingham Street, Strand.—If you want YOUNG MEN OF GOOD CHARACTER, trained to habits of discipline, punctuality, and steadiness, as porters, clerks, groomers, indoor servants, messengers, timekeepers, labourers, &c., apply to Secretary. Branches at all the principal Towns in the United Kingdom. No Fees. Telegraphic Address: "Employons, London."

THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

EDINBURGH: (Head Office) 3 and 5, George Street.
LONDON: 83, King William Street, E.C., and 3, Pall Mall East, S.W.

DUBLIN: 66, Upper Sackville Street.
ASSURANCES AND LOANS

can be effected by
MILITARY OFFICERS & CIVILIANS

in Government Service,
on moderate and advantageous terms on applying to the offices of the Company. Every facility afforded for transacting all kinds of Assurance Business.
Annual Revenue exceeds . . . £1,100,000
Bonus Additions Declared exceed . . . £6,750,000
Accumulated Funds exceed . . . £8,400,000
Claims Paid exceed . . . £17,000,000

BIBBY LINE

TO MARSEILLES, EGYPT, COLOMBO,
RANGOON, & SOUTHERN INDIA
(via Tuticorin).

Tons. Liverpool, Marseilles.
SHROPSHIRE* . . . 5789 Jan. 10 Jan. 17.
STAFFORDSHIRE* . . . 6005 Jan. 24 Jan. 31.
CHEESHIRE* . . . 5775 Feb. 7 Feb. 14
Those marked * are twin-screw steamers.

These fast mail Steamers, built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, of Belfast, have their accommodation amidships, are supplied with electric light throughout, and fitted with mechanical ventilation and refrigerators, and carry a surgeon and stewardess.

Every possible comfort for first class passengers only.
This route has proved itself the quickest and easiest to Burma, as passengers via Marseilles are landed regularly in Colombo and Rangoon respectively on the 18th and 23rd day after leaving London.

Apply to BIBBY BROS. & CO.,
26, Chapel Street, Liverpool, and
10 & 11, Mincing Lane, London.

ALEX. HOWDEN & CO.,
138, Leadenhall Street, London.
C. HOWARD & SONS
45, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the

STORE WAREHOUSES,
BAKER STREET BAZAAR, W.

The Warehouses, having been built expressly for the safe keeping of goods, are peculiarly convenient and are kept warm at an even temperature during the winter. Removals effected.

Separate lock-up rooms for large or small quantities.

JOHN HANES, Manager.
Store Warehouse, Baker Street, London, W.

E. & E. EMANUEL,

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA,
SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS
TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate.
"Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd Bn. the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India. The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms—P. M. C. 2nd Wiltshire Regiment, August, 1886."

Watch and Clock Makers.

Report.
"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch. No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.L.H., R.N.

WAR MEDALS.

All Medals and Decorations in miniature.
RARE NAVAL & MILITARY PRINTS.

REVERSIONS AND LIFE INTERESTS.

In Landed or Funded Property or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or LOANS or Annuities thereon Granted by the
EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED.

10, Lancaster Place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand
Established 1835. Capital £200,000.

HART AND SON,
60, Artillery Place, Woolwich.
(Established 100 Years), has
FOR SALE

Nearly New
REGULATION UNIFORMS
for REGULAR and VOLUNTEER OFFICERS

at Low Prices.
Gold and Silver Dress
BELTS, SABRETACHES, and GARNES
for Sale or on Hire.
All kinds of Clothing, Gold and Silver
Lace, &c., bought for cash.

Educational.

Lient.-Col. J. L. NEEDHAM,
P.S.C.(late Messrs. WOLFFRAM & NEEDHAM
and late of the Manor House, Lee, S.E.), Metropolitan and District Railways).MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION,
SEPT.—OCT., 1900.FIRST—Mr. C. G. LESLIE, 24,060 Marks.
Mr. H. G. SMITH, 14,517 Marks.
These were the only two candidates sent up by Col. Needham.Mr. Leslie made 4,384 marks more than any other competitor; the next in order
of merit scoring only 19,676 marks.*During the last three years all Colonel Needham's Pupils have been successful
at the Militia Competitive Examinations.Prospectus and List of Successes on application.HOVE, SUSSEX.*MR. SPENCER MITCHELL,
(late the Border Regiment),
assisted byColonel E. KENSINGTON, late R.A., P.A.C.
MILITIA COMPETITIVE.
SEPTEMBER, 1900.NEW REGULATIONS.

Place and Name. Marks.

SECOND ARTILLERY—

J. Coldwell-Horsfall 16,790

SIXTH INFANTRY—

A. V. P. Martin 16,153

Place. Name. Marks.

14th (Infantry) B. G. A. Townshend 15,109

21st (Infantry) F. O. Koebel 14,105

22nd (Infantry) C. F. F. Campbell 13,893

* Military subjects only.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.

Infantry B. P. Wedd 5,862

Infantry L. Aylmer 5,851

Infantry K. O. Goldie 5,653

University H. S. Winthrop —

SANDHURST, 1899.

22nd (Infantry) B. C. Young 7,869

23rd (Infantry) A. C. G. Besley 8,107

29th (University) V. P. Druce 5,898

32nd (Infantry) C. H. Clutterbuck 7,688

40th (Infantry) C. C. Wigram 7,516

110th (Infantry) A. W. K. Loyd 6,614

— (Infantry) E. C. Otter 5,998

— (Infantry) P. M. Connellan 5,406

Queen's Cadet A. d'E. Knox 5,229

— (Infantry) C. B. Ingram 4,736

— (Infantry) J. P. G. Crosbie 4,735

* Indian Staff Corps.

NEXT TERM COMMENCES 8TH JANUARY.THORNHAM, WILBURY ROAD, HOVE.*BRIGHTON—Crescent House School.*A. H. THOMAS, M.A., Oxon.

(Late 2nd Master O.M.C.).

OFFERS A SOUND GENERAL EDUCATION

to Boys preparing for

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND NAVY.

Reduced Fees offered to Sons of Officers serving

in South Africa.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.

Colonel Russell, Clavinia, Weymouth.

SEPTEMBER, 1900.

Three sent up, three passed, viz. :—

Embodied Officers.	Topo.	Mil. Eng.	Mil. 1st	Mil. 2nd
a Russell	940	1060	1465	1000
b Fletcher	1020	425	1020	845
c Yardley	900	1510	1255	620

a and c Four weeks' leave before exam. only.

b Four weeks' work interrupted by duty—an absolute beginner.

Col. Russell's three sons passed FIRST TRIAL in 1896-98-1900 respectively, as also have nearly all his other pupils.

PROMOTION EXAM.MILITARY SUBJECTS: Special System of Postal Tuition adapted to all.

Prospectus, &c., on application.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE
CIRENCESTER.

(Established by Royal Charter, 1845.)

For Land Owners, Land Agents, Surveyors,
Agriculturists, Colonists, &c.PATRON:*H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.*PRESIDENT:*HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF RICHMOND AND GORDON, K.G.*COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT:The Right Hon. the EARL OF DUCIE, Chairman.
Col. Sir NIGEL KINGSFOTE, K.C.B., Vice-Chairman.PRINCIPAL:*THE REV. JOHN B. MCLELLAN, M.A.
Hon. Member of Surveyors' Institution, and late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

For Prospectus of College, Farm and Dairy, List of Governors, Professors, Practical Instructors, &c., Courses of Instruction, Scholarships, Diplomas, Gold Medals, &c., apply to the Principal.

NEXT SESSION BEGINS TUESDAY,
February 6.

Educational.

MR. ALEXANDER WATT, M.A.,
AND
MR. C. H. THOMSON, M.A.(formerly Scholar, Queen's College, Cambridge), ECCLEFECHAN, WIMBLEDON PARK, SURREY, prepare a limited number of Pupils, Resident and Non-Resident, forALL ARMY EXAMINATIONS, UNIVERSITIES, COOPER'S HILL, &c.

Militia and Promotion Candidates in a Separate Establishment, under a retired Army Officer of many years' successful experience.

Careful Individual Attention. Strong Staff of Experienced Tutors. Chemical Laboratory. Resident Science Lecturer. Competent Military Instructor.

SUCCESSSES, 1900.

Militia Competitive, September.—C. A. de G. Dalghish, 7th Infantry, 16,114 marks; E. Corbould-Warren, 10th Artillery, 13,114 marks; both first trial.

Woolwich.—None sent up.

Sandhurst.—C. T. Tomes, 87th Inf., our only Candidate.

Cooper's Hill.—M. Samy, Cambridge.—Trinity College Entrance; and "Previous" Examination.—J. Cundell.

A personal interest is taken in each pupil—in his moral and physical, as well as intellectual welfare; and the Principals take every means to concentrate the full attention of their pupils on their work.

LIST OF SUCCESSSES ON APPLICATIONWOOLWICH, SANDHURST, and UNIVERSITIES.*MANOR HOUSE, FELIXSTOWE.

Mr. D. J. COWLES, M.A., Oxford, assisted by a Resident Staff of experienced Masters, PREPARES A LIMITED NUMBER OF PUPILS.

RECENT SUCCESSSES include the FIRST Place for Sandhurst twice. The classes are small, and special attention is given to Mathematics, Modern Languages and Science.

The Manor House is healthily situated immediately on the sea. There are ample facilities for boating, golf, fives, football, and lawn tennis.

RECENT SUCCESSSES.WOOLWICH.

G. F. Farran 8001 marks Dec. 1898.

W. Burrell Hayley 9228 " Dec. 1899.

The only pupils sent up.

SANDHURST, December, 1898, to December, 1899.

Viscount Ingestre 7th Cavalry Cadetship.

C. M. Truman Cavalry Cadetship.

E. P. Grant Infantry Cadetship.

G. Winne Finch Infantry Cadetship.

B. H. Leatham Infantry Cadetship.

G. E. Hawes Infantry Cadetship.

C. A. Antrobus Infantry.

B. H. Pison Infantry.

H. A. D. Bockett-Pugh Infantry.

R. Neave Infantry.

G. Wahab Indian Cadetship.

COOPER'S HILL, June, 1899.

H. F. Basset, the only pupil sent up.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE.Capt. Fuller, late R.E., in conjunction with Mr. A. J. de Havilland Bushnell, M.A., prepares resident and non-resident Pupils for the above.

Address: 1, Orrisdale Terrace, College Road, Cheltenham.

SANDHURST, WOOLWICH, INDIAN POLICE, DIPLOMATIC SERVICE, AND UNIVERSITIES.MR. J. J. GREVATT
(ASSISTED BY SPECIALISTS)

PREPARES EIGHT Candidates (FOUR Resident) INDIVIDUALLY and EXPEDITIOUSLY, for the above Examinations. Many years' Successful Experience.

A Barrister (a) Staff assists Candidates for DIPLOMATIC SERVICE and LAW.

Prospectus with list of successes on application.
57, LEINSTER SQUARE, HYDE PARK, W.

Educational.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE & TRAINING FARMS,

On the fine Seaside Estate of the College (1,800 acres), in a splendid climate, STUDENTS have unique opportunities of receiving training, practical and theoretical, which will fit them for a career abroad or at home.

Full information from the Director at above address, or from Mr. Godfrey Johnson, 3, Victoria Street, Westminster.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, ASPATRIA,

Cumberland.

Situated in one of the finest Stock-raising Districts of the Country. In close proximity to Lake District and Seaside.

Six Farms, Dairy and Workshops.

Next term begins October 2.

Principal: J. SMITH HILL, B.A., B.Sc.

ARMY, UNIVERSITY, MILITIA, MILITARY, and PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS

No. 15, PARK CRESCENT, OXFORD.

Capt. M. M. M. FESTING.

Resident and Non-resident Pupils received. Prospectus with List of Successes on application. Officers Coached by Correspondence.

BATH COLLEGE. ARMY CLASS.

10 Woolwich and Sandhurst successes direct from the College during the past two years.

A Scholarship of the annual value of £40 for a Boarder, or £20 for a Day-boy, is offered to the best Army Candidate joining the College in January, 1901. Candidates must be between 14 and 16 years of age.

For further particulars apply to
The BURSAR, The College, BATH.TURKISH & ARABIC.*SCHOLARSHIPS. REWARDS.

Professor G. HAGOPIAN'S DOUBLE success at the recent Government Examinations in Turkish and Arabic, held on October 16 and 17, 1900, was with Major W. E. Morton, B.E., Qualified Interpreter at FIRST TRIAL in both Languages, with marks 656 and 643, and mostly prepared by correspondence from London at Mooltan, Punjab, India.

Also Colonel E. Stephenson, Essex Regiment, Qualified Interpreter in Turkish, at First Trial, with 667 marks; Major H. A. Curtis, B.A., and FIFTEEN other officers with high marks.

Officers rapidly and effectively instructed in all branches, both orally and by correspondence.

NO FAILURES. Also tuition in HINDU-STANI, RUSSIAN, Persian, French, &c.

Distance offers no hindrance to success.

Intending Candidates should begin work early. Address, 25, Chesilton Rd., Fulham, London, S.W.

S. G. KIRCHHOFFER,
M.A., F.G.S., F.R.G.S.(EX-SCHOLAR & HONOURMAN, PEMBROKE COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE), Receives Twelve Pupils for all Army Examinations.FOUR RESIDENT INSTRUCTORS.*GREAT FACILITIES FOR MILITIA EXAMINATIONS.

House stands on gravel soil, in the Pine-wood district. Cricket, Football, and Tennis Grounds.

Terms and List of Successes on Application to YATELEY GRANGE,
Blackwater, Hants.

Educational.

LIEUT.-COL. W. J. BOSWORTH
AND
MR. H. A. STERN, M.A.

(Honours, Oxford and Cambridge).

Assisted by a Staff of over THIRTY of the most successful and experienced Civil and Military Instructors.

PREPARE RAPIDLY and INDIVIDUALLY for the ARMY, CIVIL SERVICE, and UNIVERSITIES atCEDAR COURT and DOWNSHIRE HOUSE, ROEHAMPTON, SURREY;
For Resident Pupils. Station, Barnes, S.W.R.Telegrams, "Exercitus, London."
Telephone, "153, Battersea"; and7, HOGARTH ROAD, EARL'S COURT
(150 yards from the Station), for Promotion Candidates and Day Pupils.Telephone, "217, Kensington."
List of successes, which are quite unsurpassed, will be sent on application.GRESHAM'S SCHOOL, HOLT,
NORFOLK. Founded 1555.

Head Master, G. W. S. HOWSON, M.A., late of Uppingham School.

Three miles from the sea, and close to Sheringham and Cromer. Splendid climate. The soil is gravel on chalk. Entirely new drainage.

Governors.—The Fishmongers' Company and County and Local Representatives.

Classrooms, Laboratories, and Workshops are in course of erection, at an estimated expenditure of £40,000.

Highest inclusive fees £57 per annum. Science and Modern Languages taught throughout the School.

ARMY AND NAVY CLASSES.
Arrangements made for Entire Charge of Boys from India.

Yearly leaving Exhibitions of £60 per annum for three years.

Next term commences Monday, Jan. 21.
For further particulars address the Head Master, who can be seen by appointment at the Hotel Metropole, London, on Monday and Tuesday, January 7th and 8th.ROYAL NAVAL CADET-SHIPS.Mr. CHARLES E. LUPTON specially prepares a limited number of pupils for the Royal Navy (H.M.S. Britannia). Pupils have taken 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and many other high places. Individual attention.

A class of two or three boys for the March Examination commences Jan. 7.

Address: FAIRBOROUGH PARK, HANTS.

HOME SCHOOL FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN.

Home School for the Daughters of Gentlemen in one of the healthiest suburbs of London. A thoroughly sound modern education is given to a limited number of young ladies, under the careful superintendence of an experienced lady principal, assisted by accomplished masters and mistresses (graduates).

Pupils are prepared for the London University examinations, Royal Academy of Music, &c., when desired.

References kindly permitted to His Grace the Archbishop of York, Sir William Howard Russell, the Rev. Canon Duckworth, Colonel Swiney, Judge Gates, parents of pupils, &c.

Address—
D. C. L. Ellery, Atkins Road, Clapham Park, London, S.W.P. & O. COMPANY'S INDIA, CHINA, & AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICES.*P. & O. FREQUENT SAILINGS to GIBRALTAR, MARSEILLES, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN, BOMBAY, KURRACHEE, CALCUTTA, CEYLON, STRAITS, CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, TASMANIA, and NEW ZEALAND.

P. & O. CHEAP RETURN TICKETS and ROUND THE WORLD TOURS.

For particulars apply at the London Offices, 122, Leadenhall Street, E.C., or Northumberland Avenue, E.C.

INDIA, CEYLON, JAVA, QUEENSLAND, BURMAH, PERSIA, EAST AFRICA, &c.BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, LIMITED.*BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION.

Mail Steamers from London to

CALCUTTA. ZANZIBAR.
MADRAS. MOMBASSA.
COLOMBO. BRISBANE.
RANGOON. BATAVIA.
MAURITIUS. ROCKHAMPTON.
BOMBAY. TOWNSVILLE.
KURRACHEE. MARYBOROUGH.
BAGDAD.

Delivering Mails, Passengers, Specie, and Cargo to all the principal Ports of INDIA, BURMAH, EAST AFRICA, QUEENSLAND, and JAVA.

Every comfort for a tropical voyage.

Apply to GRAY, DAWES & CO., 23, Great Winchester Street, E.C., and Craven House, Northumberland Avenue, W.C.

GELLATLY, HANKEY & CO., Albert Square, Manchester; 51, Pall Mall, S.W., and Dook House, Billiter Street, E.C.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.ARMY TAILORS AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS.—SAMUEL GARDNER & CO., 1, CLIFFORD STREET, Savile Row, W., from J. B. Johnstone, and late of 70, Jermyn Street.*ARMY TAILOR AND MILITARY OUTFITTER.—F. MARTIN, DOVER (13, Bench Street), Officers' Uniforms strictly accurate to Regulation. All orders promptly executed.*BREECHES MAKERS AND MILITARY TAILORS.—SANDON & CO., 8, SAVILE ROW, BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.*GUN AND RIFLE MAKERS.—JOHN RIGBY & CO., 72, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W. PATENTEES of an IMPROVED HAMMERLESS GUN. 303 Rifles a specialité.*MILITARY & MUFTI TAILORS.—MARSHALL & AITKEN. Regimental Tartans for the various Scottish Regiments kept in stock. 12, St. Andrew St., EDINBURGH (late 27, North Bridge).*MILITARY TAILORS AND BREECHES MAKERS.—HODGSON & MORGAN. All Uniforms strictly Regulation. 1, THOMAS STREET, WOOLWICH, Next Door General Post Office.*HOTEL DIRECTORY.*BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL.—In Private Grounds. Well Sheltered. One Minute from Pier. Lovely Views of Pine Woods and Sea. Handsome Dining, Drawing, Smoking, and New Private Billiard Room. Telephone 74.—H. NEWLYN, Proprietor.CLEVEDON HYDRO.—FULLY LICENSED RESIDENTIAL HOTEL. Comfortable like. Well Warmed and Ventilated. Turkish, Electric and other Baths. Massage and Electro Massage. Special arrangements and amusements for the Xmas Holidays. Climate mild, equable, and bracing. SECRETARY, Hydro, Clevedon, Somerset.DOVER.—GRAND HOTEL.—Well known for Home Comforts. Best Position. Sea Front. Electric Light. Lift to all Floors. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate Tariff.—Apply MANAGER.DUBLIN.—SHELBOURNE HOTEL. First-Class Moderate Tariff. Much patronised by Officers and Families.EXMOUTH (SOUTH DEVON).—IMPERIAL HOTEL, in private gardens, south aspect, facing sea. Chef de Cuisine. A home-like, comfortable hotel. Mild equable climate. An ideal residence for Spring, Summer and Winter. Moderate inclusive terms arranged. Managed by the Proprietor, H. W. HAYWARD.LONDON.—For the Army and Navy, and Families.—THE LANGHAM HOTEL. This Hotel is one of the finest in England. Rooms secured by wire or letter to Manager.PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL PIER HOTEL AND QUEEN'S HOTEL.—Very comfortable. Redecorated. Opposite Sea and Southsea Common.

THRESHER & GLENNY,
OUTFITTERS.
INVENTORS & SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
THRESHER'S INDIA TWEED,
JUNGRA and KASHMIR.
Detailed Lists, with Prices, will be forwarded on application.
ONLY ADDRESS—
NEXT DOOR TO SOMERSET HOUSE,
152, STRAND, LONDON.

HAWKES & CO.,
14, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MANUFACTURERS.
TAILORS and MILITARY OUTFITTERS.
Inventors and Sole Manufacturers of
HAWKES'S CORK PATENT
HELMETS FOR INDIA.
DISCOUNT, TEN PER CENT. FOR CASH.

JONES, CHALK & DAWSON,
6, SACKVILLE STREET, LONDON, W.
TAILORS &
MILITARY OUTFITTERS,
HELMET, ARMY CAP, & ACCOUTREMENT
MAKERS.
Inventors and Makers of the Patent
CORK FIELD SERVICE CAP.
*The best finished and most perfect fitting
Cap yet produced.*
10 per cent. Discount for Cash.
Telegraphic Address: "Jonesian, London."
Telephone: No. 5503 Gerrard.

SANDILANDS.
Cavalry Outfitters.
Pantaloon,
Polo Breeches.

11 & 12, CONDUIT ST., W.
F. G. BUHL,
58 and 59,
Burlington Arcade,
PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MILITARY AND HUNTING
BOOTMAKER.
Established over 80 Years.

M. WISEMAN,
TAILOR & MILITARY OUTFITTER,
HELMET, ARMY CAP,
AND ACCOUTREMENT MAKER,
43, SACKVILLE ST., LONDON, W.
EMIGRATION TO CANADA.

Canada offers great advantages to settlers, including free grants of 160 acres of land and improved farms at reasonable prices. Fine climate, no rent, light taxes, free schools, good markets, rapidly developing industries, and large import and export trade. Pamphlets, maps, and full particulars (supplied post free), may be obtained from the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria Street, London, S.W., or from the Allan, Dominion and Elder Dempster Steamship Companies, or their Local Agents, or the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.
Write for particulars.

ALL BUT NEW
OFFICERS' UNIFORMS,
for the Army, Navy, Militia, and Yeomanry
may be obtained of

LEWIS MOSES,
65, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.,
at one-fourth their original cost; or on hire.
Swords, cloaks, belt-sashes, saddles, &c., for nearly every regiment in Her Majesty's Service. Uniforms
and apparel purchased.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., supplies ARMY, NAVY and
VOLUNTEER Officers' Uniforms complete,
and single Articles in condition equal to New
at one-third original cost.

TO OFFICERS ORDERED ABROAD.

E. WHISTLER,
11, STRAND, CHARING CROSS, LONDON.

Largest Stock of SECOND-HAND
BREECHLOADERS,
HAMMERLESS EJECTORS,
EXPRESS DOUBLE RIFLES,
REVOLVERS, RACE GLASSES,
WATCHES AND JEWELLERY.

Guns, Regimentals, and Private Clothes Bought for Cash or taken in Exchange.
Catalogue and Price List on application. Valuations for Probate.

E. WHISTLER, 11, STRAND, LONDON.
Telephone: No. 2033 Gerrard.

DINNEFORD'S

The Universal Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach,
Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Sour Eructations,
Bilious Affections.

MAGNESIA
Sold Throughout the World.

N.B.—ASK FOR DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

If the Blood is Diseased the Body is Diseased and Enfeebled. Keep your Blood Pure and the Health of the System will follow.

Clarke's Blood Mixture,
THE WORLD-FAMED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RESTORER,

is warranted to Cleanse the Blood from all Impurities from whatever cause arising,
For Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Sores of all kinds, Eczema, Scurvy, Scrofula, Bad
Legs, Glandular Swellings, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous.
It is the only real Specific for Gout and Rheumatic pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the Blood and Bones.

As this Mixture is pleasant to the taste and warranted free from anything injurious to the most delicate constitution of either sex, from infancy to old age,
the Proprietors solicit sufferers to give it a trial to test its value. Clarke's Blood Mixture is sold by all Chemists throughout the world. Price 2s. 9d. and 11s.
per bottle.

Thousands of Testimonials of Wonderful Cures from all parts of the World.
Proprietors: The Lincoln and Midland Counties Drug Co., Lincoln.
BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS OR SUBSTITUTES.

PICKERING'S
"KHAKI-BLANCO"

For cleaning and renovating "Khaki" Accoutrements, Helmets, Shoes, etc.

Everybody knows the merits of Pickering's Blanco for whitening all articles of Buckskin Leather, or White Canvas, and now Pickering's have met the want of the day by introducing "Khaki-Blanco," a similar preparation to Blanco, but of a "Khaki" colour; it is prepared in a most careful manner to ensure an Evenness of Colour, and contains nothing at all injurious to any "Khaki" article to which it may be applied. "Khaki" cleaned regularly with this article keeps a good colour and always looks like new.
White belts and other military equipment, buckskin and canvas shoes, etc., can be made khaki colour by the application of "Khaki-Blanco," and this will in no wise interfere with their being re-whitened with Blanco at any future time.

SOLD BY ALL THE USUAL DEALERS.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS—
JOSEPH PICKERING & SONS, Sheffield.

JOHN HYMAN & CO.,
Naval and Military Outfitters,

WEST END BRANCH—
19, LEICESTER SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.
Telephone No. 2312 Gerrard. Do. 5810 Avenue.
Telegraphic Address—"Realistic, LONDON."

New and Second-Hand Uniforms and Accoutrements
(IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION)
BOUGHT, SOLD OR EXCHANGED.
REGULATION WATERPROOFS. BEST QUALITY.
Infantry, 35s. 6d. Cavalry, 38s. 6d.
ON APPROVAL.

SECOND-HAND
UNIFORMS
BOUGHT AND SOLD.

RICHARD DICKESON
AND COMPANY,
WHOLESALE GROCERS, TEA, AND
PROVISION IMPORTERS.
LONDON: Victoria Warehouse, Mansell Street,
Aldgate, E. DUBLIN: Upper Exchange Street,
DOVEY: Market Lane and Queen Street,
ALDERSHOT: High Street and Nelson Street,
PORTSMOUTH: Highbury Street, PLY.
MOUTH: Strand Street, Stonehouse, FEN-
BROKE DOCK: Tremeryck Street, GIBRAL-
TAR: City Mill Lane. CAPE TOWN: White
House Stores, Long Street. PORT ELIZABETH:
Lenkerts Warehouses, Rufane Vale. DURBAN:
Hampsons Buildings, Smith Street. AGENCIES AT
Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, Bombay, Calcutta,
Karachi, &c., &c.

Thirty years' experience in CANTEN SUP-
PLIES in all parts of the British Empire.
Unsurpassed facilities for immediate delivery
of every possible requisite for the most varied
system of Messing and all the requirements of Regimental Institutions. Printed Price Lists
issued monthly; all quotations guaranteed lowest
Wholesale Market Rates; free delivery. Canteen
Presidents not being supplied by us should write for a Price List. Samples submitted on application.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST
SOCIETY, LTD.

24, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.
Established 1883.
Chairman—C. B. BRINGTON, Esq., J.P., D.L.
Paid-up Capital.....£400,000
Debentures and Debenture Stock.....£207,226
REVERSIONS & LIFE INTERESTS
PURCHASED.

ADVANCES MADE THEREON.
W. OSCAR NASH, F.I.A., Actuary and Secretary.
SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE
INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL
INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED
FIRE

1, OLD BROAD STREET, E.C.; 22, PALL MALL
S.W.; and 47, CHANCERY LANE, W.C.
ESTABLISHED 1803.

Subscribed Capital, £1,200,000.

Paid-up Capital, £300,000.

Invested Funds over £1,500,000.

E. COZENS-SMITH, General Manager.

BLAND & SONS'
"EUOPLIA"
BALL AND SHOT GUN.

A WEAPON OF PRECISION
Shooting Conical bullets up to 100 yards with the accuracy of any rifle; and shot with the pattern
and penetration of a shot gun.
In 12, 16 and 20 Bores. Weight of 12 Bore
about 7lbs.

AS SUPPLIED TO
H.R.H. THE DUKE of the ABRUZZI,
Whose Expedition to the North Pole
WAS ENTIRELY EQUIPPED WITH ARMS
AND AMMUNITION BY THIS FIRM.

And also to
"THE SOUTHERN CROSS" ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION,
led by
C. E. BORCHGREVINK, Esq.

T. BLAND & SONS,
2, King William St., Strand, W.C.
(Adjoining 430, West Strand.)
Works: 41, 42, & 43, Whitall St., Birmingham

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS
EPPS'S
: GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
COCOA

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.
MOUSELL BROS.,
FURNITURE REMOVERS
AND STORERS,
Elizabeth Street, Eaton Square, London, S.W.,
AND WALHAM GREEN, FULHAM.
BRANCH DEPOSITORIES AT
BIRMINGHAM.—Broad Street.
LEAMINGTON.—Windsor Street.
MANCHESTER.—Derby Street, Cheetham.
LEEDS.—St. Paul's Street.
LIVERPOOL.—Bronte Street, Russell Street.
EXETER.—London Inn Square.
GLOUCESTER.—Depository, and Van and Wagon
Works, Commercial Road.

LEWIS MOSES, of 65, NEW OXFORD
STREET, W.C., buys OFFICERS' UNI-
FORMS in all conditions at from one-fifth
original cost, or sells the same on commission.
Mufti clothing also purchased.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

["ARMIGER, LONDON."]

Telegraphic Address :]

EDITED BY W. H. RUSSELL, LL.D.

No. 2,085.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1900.

[REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. PRICE 6D. POSTAGE EXTRA.]

Dr. T. MILLER MAGUIRE'S CLASSES

10, 12, 14, & 16, EARL'S COURT SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.

(Four minutes' walk from Earl's Court Station).

Telegraphic Address:—"YCLEFT, LONDON."

SUCCESSSES IN 1898 ONLY.

TOTAL NUMBER—TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTY-NINE.

SANDHURST
MILITIA LITERARY 34
MILITIA COMPETITIVE 46
WOOLWICH 36
DIRECT COMMISSIONS FOR ROYAL ARTILLERY 2

STAFF COLLEGE, PASSED
"PROMOTION" QUALIFIED, but no Vacancies ... 20
INDIAN POLICE 17
SECOND IN COMMAND 87
... .. 1
... .. 21

N.B.—CLASSES are NOW going on for the NOVEMBER PROMOTION EXAMINATION, and also in Subject "E."

WOOLWICH, December, 1899.

41st	H. H. Joll.	Marks.
58th	D. le P. Trench	9197
99th	A. H. Allen	8477
115th	W. C. H. Cree	7432
		6740

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, Sept., 1899.

The following TWENTY-TWO Passed:—

10th Cavalry	Sir R. St. G. C. Gore, Bart.	1316
3rd Artillery	Mr. O. S. Lloyd	1317
18th Foot Guards	Mr. E. B. G. Foster	1310
16th Infantry	Mr. F. G. G. Cunningham	1627
22nd	Mr. R. L. Payne	1558
23rd	Mr. J. H. G. Crane	1554
29th	Mr. H. J. S. Stanton	1522
36th	Mr. H. R. Sturgis	1481
44th	Mr. R. H. Seymour	1422
45th	Mr. J. S. Ward	1420
47th	Mr. E. E. G. Terry	1396
49th	Mr. J. G. Hay	1386
52nd	Mr. G. M. Lindsay	1380
58th	Mr. F. E. Packe	1366
66th	Hen. J. G. Eveleigh-de-Moleyns	1327
81st	Mr. D. A. Blair	1271
85th	Mr. F. G. W. Draffen	1221
86th	Mr. T. L. B. Soutry	1210
SECOND University	Mr. F. B. Dugdale	1748
THIRD	Mr. S. G. de C. Wheeler	1696
12th	Mr. W. H. Middleton	1393
16th	Mr. H. M. Lambert	1315

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, March, 1899.

The following TWENTY-SEVEN Passed:—

SECOND Cavalry	Mr. G. H. H. Freeman	1627
FOURTH Artillery	Mr. W. F. Parsons	1740
7th	Mr. O. R. Swayne	1652
4th Foot Guards	Lord Henry C. Seymour	1372
5th	Mr. G. R. Houston-Boswall	1293
7th	Mr. C. Leslie-Melville	—
13th Infantry	Mr. W. J. C. Fletcher	1760
35th	Mr. L. V. Fitzgerald	1674
42nd	Mr. H. W. D. Hill	1661
58th	Mr. N. G. B. Halked	1598
59th	Mr. A. H. M. Hill	1596
66th	Mr. R. W. W. Grimshaw	1575
73rd	Mr. C. A. Cooke	1537
74th	Hon. M. C. A. Drummond	1534
76th	Mr. R. G. Alexander	1515
89th	Mr. A. D. M. Browne	1482
94th	Mr. L. G. Hart	1464
100th	Mr. M. J. Hamilton	1448
112th	Mr. J. A. L. Campbell	1386
113th	Mr. H. Waugh Snow	1385
114th	Mr. R. W. R. Jendwine	1383
116th	Mr. H. Mallinson	1379
122nd	Mr. E. S. Girdwood	1372
126th	Mr. R. F. Finké	1356
130th	Mr. L. J. Comyn	1345
132nd	Mr. R. H. Chisholm	1337
13th University	Mr. R. S. Popham	1609

SANDHURST June, 1899.

The following FOURTEEN Passed:—

SIXTH Cavalry	Mr. L. St. P. Beynon	Marks.
31st Infantry	Mr. J. C. Hathornthwaite	6410
32nd	Mr. W. W. Marshall	7893
40th	Mr. V. V. V. Sandiford	7676
46th	Mr. A. J. B. Wavell	7595
54th	Mr. H. J. N. Davis	7408
Queen's India Cadet	Mr. Beauchamp Duff	6472
19th University	Mr. G. Pearse	5111
20th	Mr. C. J. S. Macrae-Finnie	6253
24th	Mr. F. de Winton Harman	6190
26th	Mr. W. F. Oldham	6040
Qualified for Militia	Mr. E. N. French	6021
"	Mr. L. W. Kentish	6596
"	Mr. M. R. M. McLeod	4891

MILITIA LITERARY, April, 1899.

The following THIRTEEN Passed, viz:—

FIRST	Mr. H. J. Nolan-Ferrall	10025
8th	Mr. J. Secker	6344
13th	Mr. F. H. J. Finlay	6093
14th	Mr. S. H. Charrington	6081
28th	Mr. W. Garrard	5686
38th	Mr. C. V. L. Poë	5393
53rd	Mr. R. G. Strong	5161
59th	Mr. H. G. L. Bengough	5083
68th	Mr. S. M. Macnaghten	4941
70th	Mr. R. M. Tidmarsh	4909
74th	Mr. C. S. Cameron	4829
76th	Mr. A. H. Murray	4743
Qualified in Geometrical Drawing	Mr. J. S. Ward	535

INDIA FOREST SERVICE,
June, 1899.

7th Mr. E. A. Courthope 6235

PROMOTION.

NOVEMBER, 1899, 44 Passed on Home List.

MAY, 1899.—64 Passed.

NOVEMBER, 1898.—52 Passed.

MAY, 1898.—35 Passed.

NOVEMBER, 1897.—48 Officers passed.

MAY, 1897.—38 Officers passed.

Officers can read at 10, Earl's Court Square with Colonel Milner, P.S.C., and our other instructors at any time. Since the establishment at Earl's Court Square opened October, 1899, no fewer than 354 officers have passed for promotion, and many of these have obtained special certificates.

WOOLWICH, June, 1899.

STAFF COLLEGE, 1899.

Of the TWENTY-THREE Officers who were successful on the COMPETITIVE LIST, EIGHTEEN Passed from us, viz:—

Capt. H. A. L. Tagart	15th Hussars.
Capt. K. Combe	Royal Artillery.
Lieut. H. M. de F. Montgomery	Royal Artillery.
Capt. T. B. Wood	Royal Artillery.
Capt. H. B. Roberts	Royal Artillery.
Capt. G. M. Harper	Royal Engineers.
Brevet-Major W. D. Bird	2nd Royal West Surrey.
Capt. A. E. Lascelles	2nd Norfolk Regiment.
Capt. T. H. Berney	2nd West Yorkshire.
Capt. W. S. Copland	2nd Leicester Regiment.
Lieut. M. H. E. Welch	1st Royal Irish.
Capt. J. Duncan	2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers.
Capt. T. O. Marden	1st Cheshire Regiment.
Lieut. A. H. Marindin	1st Royal Highlanders.
Capt. C. A. L. Yate	2nd Yorkshire Light Infantry.
Capt. D. L. MacEwen	2nd Cameron Highlanders.
Capt. G. B. H. Rice	1st Royal Irish Fusiliers.
Lieut. R. O'B. Taylor	Indian Staff Corps.

Of the TEN officers who were "NOMINATED," SEVEN read with us, viz:—

Brevet-Major His Highness Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein, G.C.B., G.C.V.O., King's Royal Rifles.
Capt. A. G. Dallas 16th Lancers.
Capt. E. S. Nairne Royal Artillery.
Lieut. Hon. F. H. S. Roberts King's Royal Rifles.
Brevet-Major D. W. Churcher 1st Royal Irish Fusiliers.
Capt. A. W. Abercrombie 2nd Connaught Rangers.
Brevet-Major C. E. de M. Norie Indian Staff Corps.

In addition to the above THIRTEEN officers "QUALIFIED," but for whom there were no vacancies:—

Brevet-Major C. H. de Rougemont Royal Artillery.
Capt. T. C. Molony Royal Artillery.
Capt. H. Coningham Royal Artillery.
Capt. E. T. James 1st South Lancashire.
Capt. H. R. Cumming 1st Durham Light Infantry.
Brevet-Major G. H. Thesiger 2nd Rifle Brigade.
Capt. A. E. Studdert Army Service Corps.
Lieut. C. F. Moores Army Service Corps.
Capt. S. Geoghegan Indian Staff Corps.
Capt. C. C. Cook Indian Staff Corps.
Capt. H. W. R. Senior Indian Staff Corps.
Capt. C. E. E. F. K. Macquoid, D.S.O. Indian Staff Corps.
Capt. C. S. Stack Indian Staff Corps.

N.B.—ALL the subjects required for the MILITIA COMPETITIVE under the NEW REGULATIONS have been regularly taught at Earl's Court Square for the past NINE years.

The highest places have frequently been taken in MILITARY ENGINEERING, TOPOGRAPHY, MATHEMATICS, and MILITARY HISTORY at all the Military Examinations, including Staff College and Militia, in which these subjects formed part of the course.

N.B.—We wish to call attention to the fact that Colonel E. C. Milner, P.S.C., late of the 18th Regiment and late Instructor at Sandhurst, one of the most distinguished Military "Coaches" in England, devotes himself solely to our Military Classes. He is in addition to our former Staff of distinguished Lecturers, including Major Clarke, R.A., Colonel Daniel, P.S.C., Mr. W. P. Lynam, M.I.C.E., Herr Bürde, and others.

Our London Establishment alone has a Staff of 40 able and experienced Lecturers, and this number can be indefinitely increased. Our London Pupils are instructed in RIDING by Mr. A. SAVIGEAR, late Chief Instructor at Sandhurst and Woolwich, whose large and well-appointed Riding School is attached to our Establishment. PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT under the PERSONAL SUPERVISION of Mr. SANDOW.

Dr. MAGUIRE'S Classes in London work in conjunction with Dr. W. J. CHETWODE CRAWLEY'S Classes, 3 & 4, ELY PLACE, DUBLIN.

A Prospectus, with Lists of Lecturers, References, Terms, &c., will be forwarded on application to either of the Principals. Each Department is quite distinct from the others. Resident, as well as non-resident pupils, are received in Dr. Maguire's own houses.

TELEGRAMS: "ORVIETO, LONDON."

TELEPHONE: 1491, "GERRARD."

CHRISTOPHER & CO.,

(next door to United Service Club)

NAVAL AND MILITARY WINE MERCHANTS,
118, PALL MALL, LONDON.

	from	Per doz.	15/-	18/-
CLARET	"	18/-	24/-	24/-
VIN DE GRAVES	"	18/-	24/-	24/-
STILL HOCKS & MOSELLES	"	18/-	24/-	24/-
BURGUNDIES (Red and White)	"	18/-	24/-	24/-
MADEIRA	"	42/-	54/-	54/-
MARSALA	"	18/-	24/-	24/-
SPARKLING HOCKS AND MOSELLES	"	50/-	60/-	60/-
PORT	"	32/-	36/-	36/-

	from	Per doz.	48/-	60/-
CHAMPAGNES (Christopher's)	"	78/-	84/-	84/-
CHOICEST BRANDS	"	28/-	30/-	30/-
SHERRY (Pale or Gold)	"	42/-	48/-	48/-
Christopher's WHITE WHISKY	"	54/-	60/-	60/-
" FINE OLD COGNAC	"	132/-
" VIRGIN BRANDY, 60 years old	"	36/-
" GIN (Dry and Old Tom)	"
CHOICE LIQUEURS, RUM, &c., &c.	"

CHRISTOPHER'S FINEST SLOE GIN, 48/-

FIVE PER CENT. DISCOUNT FOR CASH.

CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY RAILWAY STATION IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

All Wines, Spirits, Liqueurs, &c., can be put on board H.M. Ships at Home at the shortest notice, or shipped Abroad from our Bonded Warehouses. The greatest care will in all cases be given to the selection of the goods, and the best value guaranteed.

PRICE LISTS FOR HOME AND ABROAD ON APPLICATION.

SCOTTISH PROVIDENT
INSTITUTION.

ESTABLISHED 1837.

IN THIS SOCIETY are combined the advantages of Mutual Assurance with Moderate Premiums.

THE PREMIUMS are so moderate that an Assurance of £1,200 or £1,250 may generally be secured from the first for the yearly payment which usually would be charged (with profits) for £1,000 only—equivalent to an immediate bonus of 20 to 25 per cent.

THE WHOLE SURPLUS goes to the Policyholders, on a system at once safe and equitable, no share being given to those by whose early death there is a loss. LARGE ADDITIONS have thus been made to the policies of those who participate, notwithstanding the lowness of the premiums.

The Surplus at last Investigation was £1,423,000.

More than one-half of the Members who died during the Septennial period were entitled to Bonuses which, notwithstanding that the premiums do not as a rule exceed the non-profit rates of other Offices, were on the average equal to an Addition of about 50 per cent. to their policies.

ACCUMULATED FUNDS exceed £11,000,000.

All the conditions of Assurance are arranged on the most equitable basis.

Officers of the Army and Navy,

may cover War or Climate Risk, or both, by an uniform annual extra premium of moderate amount, payable for any period not exceeding ten years, but ceasing on permanent retirement from the Service. This arrangement secures relief from the necessarily heavy extra charges which would otherwise be imposed as occasions might arise; but it can be taken advantage of only when there is no near prospect of Active Service or Foreign Residence.

PROSPECTUS, WITH FULL TABLES OF RATES, &c.,
ON APPLICATION.

LONDON OFFICE: 17, KING WILLIAM ST., E.C.

Head Office: 6, St. Andrew Square, Edinburgh.

ARTIFICIAL EYES, LEGS, ARMS, AND HANDS.GROSSMITH'S PRIZE MEDAL ARTIFICIAL LEGS.

With patent action Knee and Ankle Joints, enable the patient to walk, sit, or ride with ease and comfort, wherever amputated. They are lighter in weight, less expensive, and more durable than any self-acting Leg hitherto introduced, and are worn by Ladies and Children with perfect safety. They were awarded the highest Medals at the London and Paris Great International Exhibitions, and pronounced by the Surgical Juries to be "excellent in manufacture, well constructed, and on a system superior to all others."

THE PRIZE MEDAL ARTIFICIAL EYES

have now been brought to the greatest perfection, and are so easy of adaptation that they are fitted in a few minutes, without pain or operation, to any case where sight has been lost. The colours are perfectly matched, and a movement obtained precisely in accordance with the action of the natural eye. They are the only Artificial Eyes which have been awarded Prize Medals at the Great International Exhibitions of London, Paris, and Dublin.

Address to—

W.R. GROSSMITH, MANUFACTORY: 110, STRAND, LONDON.

Established 1769.

Price Lists sent Post Free.

You DON'T want to write a letter in the same manner as the man in the illustration.

The cut is merely to illustrate the . . .

Wonderful Perfect
Feed of the

== YOST

FOUNTAIN PEN.

NO MATTER IN WHAT POSITION
THE PEN IS HELD, THE INK
FLOWS FREELY TO THE POINT.

WE need only add that this pen never soils the fingers; that it is made of the very finest materials throughout; that it has a gold nib which, with ordinary care, will last a lifetime; and you have in a few words the chief features of the best reservoir pen ever offered to the British Public. We guarantee satisfaction.

Send for Full Price List—post free.

THE YOST TYPEWRITER Co., Ltd.,

50, Holborn Viaduct, LONDON, E.C.

The Troops
in South Africa.

THE PUBLISHER of the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE begs to announce that he has Coloured Pictures of each BRITISH Regiment (or YEOMANRY Corps) in, or ordered to, South Africa, and will be pleased to supply same on application. Price 6d. each regiment, post free to any part of the World. These types have been favourably Noticed by Hundreds of Newspapers.

Apply—The Manager, . . .

Offices—3, York St., Covent Garden, London, W.C.

ARMY & NAVY GAZETTE.
With last No. was issued the 145th Military Type, the 21st Lancers.

[JANUARY 13, 1900.]
A Coloured Military Type is issued with this Journal the first week in each month.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE RESERVE

GAZETTE.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX
TILDEN FOUNDATION

Telegraphic Address :]

EDITED BY W. H. RUSSELL, LL.D.

["ARMIGER, LONDON."]

No. 2,086.—Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, JANUARY 13, 1900.

[REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. PRICE 6D POSTAGE EXTRA.]

TRADE MARK.

HUNTING
HAMMOND & CO., LTD.
(ESTABLISHED NEARLY A CENTURY)

Leather Breeches and Trousers Makers,

Military and Sporting
Tailors.

465, OXFORD STREET, W.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESSES: "BREECHES, LONDON—PARIS—BRUSSELS—NEWMARKET."

Mounted Infantry.

Branch Establishments :—

Paris : 8, Place Vendome ;
Brussels : 41, Boulevard de Waterloo ;
Newmarket : High Street.

Mounted Infantry.

KNICKERBOCKER

Riding and Walking

PANTALOONS.

Patented June 26, 1891. No. 10,886.

KNICKERBOCKER

Riding and Walking

PANTALOONS.

Patented June 26, 1891. No. 10,886.

The above represents the Model Uniform as introduced by us and Approved for the Officers of the Mounted Infantry.

OUTFIT.

CLOTHING.
TRUNKS & CASES.
GUNS and REVOLVERS.
SADDLERY.

SILVER & Co.
& BENJN.
EDGINGTON, LD.
67, CORNHILL, E.C.

OUTFIT.

TENTS and ACCESSORIES.
CAMP
FURNITURE.
CANTEENS.

SILVER & Co.,
& BENJN.
EDGINGTON, LD.
2, DUKE STREET,
LONDON BRIDGE.

JOHN JAMESON'S

NONE GENUINE
WITHOUT SPECIAL WATERMARKED LABEL.

TO BE HAD OF ALL WINE MERCHANTS
AT HOME AND ABROAD.

THREE STAR WHISKEY.

FISHER, 188, STRAND. LONDON.

UNIFORM CASES.

20/- to £5.

AIR-TIGHT.
ALL SIZES AND QUALITIES
IN STOCK.

£5
to £100

FISHER'S EIFFEL.

THE ATTENTION OF . . .

MILITARY AND NAVAL OFFICERS

IS DIRECTED TO THE

EMPIRE TYPEWRITER.

It possesses visible writing, is particularly strong and durable, and is undoubtedly the best portable machine in the market. Weights but 16½ lbs.
Cases supplied in Metal or Solid Leather.

Send for Descriptive Booklet.

THE EMPIRE TYPEWRITER SYNDICATE, Ltd., . . .
. 77, Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C.

Price £12 12s.

METAL CASE, 10s. 6d.

Capt. JAMES, P.S.C. (Honours), late R.E.; Mr. E. CARLISLE, M.A. Cantab.
Capt. M. H. GREGSON, late R.E.,

5, LEXHAM GARDENS, CROMWELL ROAD, LONDON, W.,

Prepare Resident and Non-Resident Pupils for the Navy, the Army, all Civil Service Examinations, and the Universities.

SPECIAL FACILITIES ARE ALSO AFFORDED TO OFFICERS STUDYING FOR THE STAFF COLLEGE, PROMOTION, ARTILLERY COLLEGE, AND INTERPRETERS.

No pains are spared to individualise as much as possible, and with this in view there are no large classes.
The Educational Staff is not only sufficiently numerous to render individual attention easy, but is composed of Tutors of well-known efficiency and long experience.

RECENT SUCCESSES INCLUDE:-DECEMBER 1899.

WOOLWICH.
H. Lovell	...	...	8445
J. N. Biggs	...	...	8434
T. Donnelly	...	...	8182
V. C. P. Hodson	...	...	8096
A. J. R. Gregory	...	...	7998
V. E. Purcell	...	...	7779
J. C. Walford	...	...	6824
O. M. Brown	...	...	6661
G. W. W. Tresidder	...	...	6651

Queen's India Cadet

SANDHURST.
FIRST ON WHOLE LIST
15th Infan'y	...	G. D. Ogilvie	9627
22nd "	...	J. A. F. Ozanne	7904
34th "	...	G. L. S. Elbrow	7803
57th "	...	C. Williams	7549
78th "	...	E. P. H. Pardoe	7240
92nd "	...	L. H. Soames	6894
96th "	...	H. G. Quin	6677
12th Cavalry and Foot Guards	...	J. Crookenden	6634
24th "	...	N. G. B. Lechmere	5708
	...	G. E. Vaughan	4722
	...	M. Wylie.

The important subject of MATHEMATICS is under the personal supervision of Mr. CARLISLE, who has had most remarkable successes both for Woolwich and Sandhurst, and he has the valuable assistance of four other Wranglers

Work now going on in all Departments.

TELEGRAMS: "ORVIETO, LONDON."

TELEPHONE: 1491, "GERRARD."

CHRISTOPHER & CO.,

(next door to United Service Club)

NAVAL AND MILITARY WINE MERCHANTS,
118, PALL MALL, LONDON.

	from	Per doz.
CLARET	15/-	18/-
VIN DE GRAVES	18/-	24/-
STILL HOCKS & MOSELLES	18/-	24/-
BURGUNDIES (Red and White)	18/-	24/-
MADEIRA	42/-	54/-
MARSALA	18/-	24/-
SPARKLING HOCKS AND MOSELLES	50/-	60/-
PORT	32/-	36/-

	from	Per doz.
CHAMPAGNES (Christopher's)...	18/-	60/-
CHOICEST BRANDS	78/-	84/-
SHERRY (Pale or Gold)	28/-	30/-
Christopher's WHITE WHISKY	42/-	48/-
FINE OLD COGNAC	54/-	60/-
VIRGIN BRANDY, 60 years old	132/-
GIN (Dry and Old Tom)	36/-
CHOICE LIQUEURS, RUM, &c., &c.

CHRISTOPHER'S FINEST SLOE GIN, 48/-

CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY RAILWAY STATION IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

FIVE PER CENT. DISCOUNT FOR CASH.

All Wines, Spirits, Liqueurs, &c., can be put on board H.M. Ships at Home at the shortest notice, or shipped Abroad from our Bonded Warehouses.
The greatest care will in all cases be given to the selection of the goods, and the best value guaranteed.

PRICE LISTS FOR HOME AND ABROAD ON APPLICATION.

With Dec. 1 No. was issued the 156th Military Type,
"FORCES OF THE SMALLER COLONIES."

Send for Particulars and Price of Series of Coloured Military Types of the Indian Army.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE
RESERVE

Telegraphic Address :]

GAZETTE.

EDITED BY W. H. RUSSELL, LL.D.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

["ARMIGER, LONDON."]

No. 2135. Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1900.

[REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. { PRICE 6d. AS A NEWSPAPER. { POSTAGE EXTRA

TEACHER'S "HIGHLAND CREAM" WHISKY.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

WM. TEACHER & SONS,
SCOTCH WHISKY DISTILLERS, BLENTERS AND EXPORTERS, GLASGOW, LONDON, AND MANCHESTER.

DERBYSHIRE.

BUXTON

*Highest Town in England.
On the Mountain Limestone.
1,000 feet above sea level.*

CENTRE OF THE PICTURESQUE PEAK DISTRICT. PURE AIR. CHARMING SCENERY.

HOT MINERAL-WATER BATHS FOR GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, &c.

NATURAL TEMPERATURE, 82° FAHRENHEIT.

Finest Public Gardens at any Health Resort in Europe, with Pavilion, Theatre, Concert Hall, Tennis, Bowls, &c. Golf Links (18 Holes).

For ILLUSTRATED GUIDE, with Tariffs of the leading Hotels, Hydropathics, Boarding and Lodging Houses, send Postage-stamp to COUNCIL CLERK, TOWN HALL, BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

MILITARY EDUCATION.

DR. T. MILLER MAGUIRE'S ANNOUNCEMENT OF SUCCESSES, &c.,
WILL BE FOUND ON PAGE 1239 INSIDE.

JOHN JAMESON'S

BOW ST. DISTILLERY, DUBLIN.

THREE STAR WHISKEY.

ESTABLISHED 1789.

ROBERT LEWIS, 20, ST. JAMES' ST.,
LONDON, S.W.

CIGARS.

The Finest Selection of all the Leading Havanah Brands.
Sole Agents for the Hoffman House Cigars.

CIGARETTES.

GOLD TIPPED, BALKAN SOBRANIE, and YENIDJE
NARGHILE BRANDS.

TOBACCO.

WINGFIELD LAWN TENNIS, GUARDS, and SANDRINGHAM
MIXTURES.

Telegrams: "Intimidad, London."

20, ST. JAMES' STREET, LONDON, S.W.

Telephone No. 3787, Gerrard.

WHEN BUYING A CHEAP BICYCLE, look at the tyres. If they are not

DUNLOP TYRES

the machine is not cheap at any price.

THE DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD., Alma Street, Coventry; 160 to 166, Clerkenwell Road, London, E.C.

ROSS' Patent New Model PRISMATIC BINOCULAR GLASSES.

AS SUPPLIED TO OFFICERS OF SOUTH AFRICAN FIELD FORCE.

ALSO
TELESCOPES, COMPASSES, &c.

PRICE LISTS FREE

"The Power and Field of a Telescope in the Compass of an Opera Glass."

COMBINING
Perfect Mechanical
Construction.
Extreme
Portability and Rigidity.
High Power and Splendid Definition.

Magnification	£.	s.	d.
6 Diameters	8	0	0	Screw
8 "	8	0	0	Focussing
10 "	10	0	0	Adjustment
12 "	10	0	0	£1 each extra.

ROSS, Ltd., MANUFACTURING OPTICIANS,
CONTRACTORS TO H.M. GOVERNMENT.
111, New Bond St., London, W., and 31, Cockspur St., Charing Cross, S.W.

The Army and Navy Omnium Gatherum.

A Monthly Naval and Military Directory and Trade Circular for Firms and Businesses catering for the Wants of the Army and Navy.

CIRCULATES FREELY IN ALL SERVICE CLUBS AND INSTITUTIONS.

COPIES are sent to all Regimental Messes at home and abroad, to all Ships of the Royal Navy in Commission, to all General and Staff Officers, and the Principal Naval Officers; many Copies to Hotels in Garrison and seaport towns, and elsewhere.

A useful Circular for Officers of both Services.

A most valuable Medium for Advertisers.

For all Particulars, Sample Copy, &c., apply to VAN, ALEXANDER & CO., 8, Paternoster Row, LONDON, E.C.

SCOTTISH PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

ESTABLISHED 1837.

IN THIS SOCIETY are combined the advantages of Mutual Assurance with Moderate Premiums.

THE PREMIUMS are so moderate that an Assurance of £1,200 or £1,250 may generally be secured from the first for the yearly payment which usually would be charged (with profits) for £1,000 only—equivalent to an immediate bonus of 20 to 25 per cent.

THE WHOLE SURPLUS goes to the Policyholders, on a system at once safe and equitable, no share being given to those by whose early death there is a loss. LARGE ADDITIONS have thus been made to the policies of those who participate, not withstanding the lowness of the premiums.

The Surplus at last Investigation was £1,423,000.

More than one-half of the Members who died during the Septennial period were entitled to Bonuses which, notwithstanding that the premiums do not as a rule exceed the non-profit rates of other Offices, were on the average equal to an Addition of about 50 per cent. to their policies.

ACCUMULATED FUNDS exceed £11,500,000.

All the conditions of Assurance are arranged on the most equitable basis.

Officers of the Army and Navy

may either pay such extra premiums for Climate and War Risks as are imposed when the occasions arise—the climate extra being limited to five payments; or (when there is no near prospect of War or Foreign Service) they may elect, at entry, to cover War or Climate Risk, or both, by a uniform equivalent annual extra payable for any period not exceeding ten years, but ceasing on permanent retirement from the Service.

PROSPECTUS, WITH FULL TABLES OF RATES, &c.,
ON APPLICATION.

LONDON OFFICE: 17, KING WILLIAM ST., E.C.
Head Office: 6, St. Andrew Square, Edinburgh.

The YOST Type- writer.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1900.

No Ribbon.—Type

strike direct on paper.—

Result, Beautiful Work.

In Typewriting, as in most other things, it pays to have the best.

PERFECTION IN TYPEWRITING

Can only be attained with a Machine in which nothing intervenes between the type and the printing surface. Hence there must be no ribbon. The YOST is the Typewriter that provides for this in the most practical way, by having as its Ink Supply a Circular Pad, on which each type rests when not engaged in printing, and is thereby always evenly inked.

One YOST PAD will outlast many ribbons.

The Pad is not the only strong point of the YOST machine. Our Art Catalogue, which can be obtained post free, gives full details of others. Send for this and specimens of YOST writing.

The YOST Typewriter Co., Ltd.,

50, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

West End Depot:—303, OXFORD STREET.

TELEGRAMS: "ORVIETO, LONDON."

TELEPHONE: 1491, "GERRARD."

CHRISTOPHER & CO.,

(Next door to United Service Club),

NAVAL AND MILITARY WINE MERCHANTS,
118, PALL MALL, LONDON.

	Per doz.
CLARET	from 15/- & 18/-
VIN DE GRAVES	" 18/- & 24/-
STILL HOCKS & MOSELLES	" 18/- & 24/-
BURGUNDIES (Red and White)	" 18/- & 24/-
MADERA	" 42/- & 54/-
MARSALA	" 18/- & 24/-
SPARKLING HOCKS & MOSELLES	" 50/- & 60/-
PORT	" 32/- & 36/-

	Per doz.
CHAMPAGNES (Christopher's)	from 48/- & 60/-
CHOICEST BRANDS	" 78/- & 84/-
SHERRY (Pale or Gold)	" 28/- & 30/-
Christopher's WHITE WHISKY	" 42/- & 48/-
" FINE OLD COGNAC	" 54/- & 60/-
" VIRGIN BRANDY, 60 years old	from 132/-
GIN (Dry and Old Tom)	" 36/-
CHOICE LIQUEURS, RUM, &c., &c.

FIVE PER CENT. DISCOUNT FOR CASH.

CHRISTOPHER'S FINEST SLOE GIN, 48/-

CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY RAILWAY STATION IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

All Wines, Spirits, Liqueurs, &c., can be put on board H.M. Ships at Home at the shortest notice, or shipped Abroad from our Bonded Warehouses.
The greatest care will in all cases be given to the selection of the goods, and the best value guaranteed.

PRICE LISTS FOR HOME AND ABROAD ON APPLICATION.

With Dec. 1 No. was issued the 156th Military Type,
"FORCES OF THE SMALLER COLONIES."

NEXT WEEK.—The First Plate of the Series of Coloured Military Types of the Indian Army.

ARMY

NAVY

JOURNAL OF THE
RESERVE

Telegraphic Address :]

GAZETTE.

EDITED BY W. H. RUSSELL, LL.D.

AND AUXILIARY
FORCES.

["ARMIGER, LONDON."]

No. 2136 Vol. XLI.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1900.

[REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O. AS A NEWSPAPER. PRICE 6D. POSTAGE EXTRA]

MR. TRIPPEL'S ARMY CLASSES FOR MILITIA COMPETITIVE, SANDHURST, AND WOOLWICH,

At ONSLOW HALL, RICHMOND, SURREY.

During the last 2½ years ONE HUNDRED AND FIVE SUCCESSES were gained, including the First Place on the List not less than Six Times, besides other High Places.

Instruction in Gymnastics, Fencing, Boxing, Drill, and Military Riding.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE, SEPTEMBER, 1900. NEW REGULATIONS.
		Marks.
H. T. Thornhill.....	24th Infantry.....	13,815
L. D. Furber.....	57th Infantry.....	11,553

Another Candidate who joined Mr. Trippel's Classes six weeks before the Examination, and had no knowledge whatever of Military subjects, scored half-marks in Military History, and over half-marks in Military Engineering; his total was over 11,000 marks (3,000 Service marks).

Address: MR. H. F. TRIPPEL, Onslow Hall, Richmond, Surrey.

WOOLWICH, JULY, 1900.
		Marks.
J. L. Mitchell.....	57th.....	8,900.
A. B. Sherrard.....	96th.....	7,221
C. W. Smeed.....	118th.....	7,167
H. W. Walker.....		5,769

ALL FOUR PASSED ON FIRST TRIAL DIRECT AND AT THE EARLIEST POSSIBLE AGE, I.E., SIXTEEN.

SANDHURST, JULY, 1900.
		Marks.
R. S. Hart.....	Hon. Queen's Cadetship.....	6,197

FIRST TRIAL DIRECT AT THE MINIMUM AGE OF SEVENTEEN.

INDIAN POLICE, JULY, 1900.
		Marks.
C. W. T. Feilmann.....	11th.....	7,527

PASSED ON FIRST TRIAL DIRECT, AND WAS THE ONLY CANDIDATE SENT UP.

WOOLWICH, DECEMBER, 1899.
		Marks.
W. C. Cripps.....	63rd.....	7,200

SANDHURST, DECEMBER, 1899.
		Marks.
E. C. Jury.....	OUT OF TEN. FIRST CAVALRY.....	8,204
J. M. F. Spout.....	SIXTH CAVALRY.....	6,819
C. D. Evans.....	47th Infantry.....	7,882
T. A. Davis.....	72nd Infantry.....	7,047
E. H. Ioff.....	108th Infantry.....	6,588
A. W. Delves-Broughton.....	11th Infantry.....	6,479
T. B. H. Keppel.....	1st Infantry.....	6,384
L. T. Watson.....	16th Infantry.....	6,336
N. H. Grierson.....	Infantry Cadetship.....	5,404
K. Robertson.....	Infantry Cadetship.....	4,997

Telegraphic Address: Trippel, Richmond, Surrey.

DERBYSHIRE.

BUXTON

Highest Town in England.
On the Mountain Limestone.
1,000 feet above sea level.

CENTRE OF THE PICTURESQUE PEAK DISTRICT. PURE AIR. CHARMING SCENERY.

HOT MINERAL-WATER BATHS FOR GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, &c.

NATURAL TEMPERATURE, 82° FAHRENHEIT.

Finest Public Gardens at any Health Resort in Europe, with Pavilion, Theatre, Concert Hall, Tennis, Bowls, &c. Golf Links (18 Holes).

For ILLUSTRATED GUIDE, with Tariffs of the leading Hotels, Hydropathics, Boarding and Lodging Houses, send Postage-stamp to COUNCIL CLERK, TOWN HALL, BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

JOHN JAMESON'S

BOW ST. DISTILLERY, DUBLIN.

THREE STAR WHISKEY.

ESTABLISHED 1789.

ROBERT LEWIS, 20, ST. JAMES' ST., LONDON, S.W.

CIGARS.

The Finest Selection of all the Leading Havana Brands.
Sole Agents for the Hoffman House Cigars.

CIGARETTES.

GOLD TIPPED, BALKAN SOBRANIE, and YENIDJE
NARGHILE BRANDS.

TOBACCO.

WINGFIELD LAWN TENNIS, GUARDS, and SANDRINGHAM
MIXTURES.

Telegrams: "Intimidat, London."

20, ST. JAMES' STREET, LONDON, S.W.

Telephone No. 3787, Gerrard.

WHEN BUYING A CHEAP BICYCLE, look at the tyres. If they are not

DUNLOP TYRES

the machine is not cheap at any price.

THE DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD., Alma Street, Coventry; 160 to 166, Clerkenwell Road, London, E.C.

TELEGRAMS: "ORVIETO, LONDON."

TELEPHONE: 1491, "GERRARD."

CHRISTOPHER & CO.,

(Next door to United Service Club),

NAVAL AND MILITARY WINE MERCHANTS,
118, PALL MALL, LONDON.

	Per doz.
CLARET ...	from 15/- & 18/-
VIN DE GRAVES ...	" 18/- & 24/-
STILL HOCKS & MOSELLES ...	" 18/- & 24/-
BURGUNDIES (Red and White) ...	" 18/- & 24/-
MADEIRA ...	" 42/- & 54/-
MARSALA ...	" 18/- & 24/-
SPARKLING HOCKS & MOSELLES ...	" 50/- & 60/-
PORT ...	" 32/- & 36/-

	Per doz.
CHAMPAGNES (Christopher's)	from 48/- & 60/-
CHOICEST BRANDS	" 78/- & 84/-
SHERRY (Pale or Gold)	" 28/- & 30/-
Christopher's WHITE WHISKY	" 42/- & 48/-
" FINE OLD COGNAC	" 54/- & 60/-
" VIRGIN BRANDY, 60 years old	from 182/-
" GIN (Dry and Old Tom)	" 36/-
CHOICE LIQUEURS, RUM, &c., &c.	"

FIVE PER CENT. DISCOUNT FOR CASH.

CHRISTOPHER'S FINEST SLOE GIN, 48/-

CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY RAILWAY STATION IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

All Wines, Spirits, Liqueurs, &c., can be put on board H.M. Ships at Home at the shortest notice, or shipped Abroad from our Bonded Warehouses. The greatest care will in all cases be given to the selection of the goods, and the best value guaranteed.

PRICE LISTS FOR HOME AND ABROAD ON APPLICATION.

THE STANDARD WORK ON THE HORSE.

The Most Complete Practical Guide . . .
... Ever Written on the Horse.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO "OUR FRIEND THE DOG."

London: DEAN & SON, Limited, 160a, Fleet Street, E.C.

NOW READY, 7TH EDITION.

Our Friend the Dog.

By Dr. GORDON STABLES, R.N.

With over 60 Portraits of the latest Champions and leading Prize Winners, beautifully printed on Plate Paper, with numerous other Illustrations.

Price 10s. 6d.

Size, Demy 8vo (or 8 by 5½ in.), Handsomely Bound, Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, etc.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO "OUR FRIEND THE HORSE."

London: DEAN & SON, Limited, 160a, Fleet Street, E.C.

Our Friend the Horse.

By F. T. BARTON, M.R.C.V.S.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED.

PRICE 6s.

Size, Demy 8vo (or 8 by 5½ in.), Handsomely Bound, Cloth Gilt, Bevelled Boards, etc.

THE STANDARD WORK ON THE DOG.

A Complete Practical Guide to all that is known about every Breed of Dog in the World.

Mohawks

Telegrams:
"Unbeaten, London."

Send for our Art List.

Unbeaten.

SPECIAL TERMS TO . .

. . THE ARMY, NAVY, . .

. . AND VOLUNTEERS.

THOMSON, JAMES and HEARD, Ltd., 39, Chalk Farm Road, London, N.W.

Prices from Eleven Guineas.

S. & H. HARRIS,MANUFACTORY: LONDON, E.*BARKENTIN & KRALL,*291-289, REGENT STREET,
GOLDSMITHS,And Workers in all Metals
AND IN ALL STYLES.MEMORIAL TABLETS*ENGRAVED,
AND WORKED IN RELIEF.*JOSEPH GILLOTT'S
PENS*Of Highest Quality, and Having
Greatest Durability, are therefore CHEAPEST.*ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS,
RAILWAY ACCIDENTS, EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, insured against, THEFT INSURANCE and FIDELITY BONDS granted by the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.,*Established 1849. Claims paid over £4,200,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.*AN IDEAL
NEW YEAR GIFT.*Adds
immeasurably
to Celerity and Comfort
in writing.
Of all
Pens
most famous

Made in 3 Sizes

10/6, 16/625/-TO
£18 18s.
POST FREE.Complete Illustrated Catalogue post free on application toMABIE, TODD & BARD,93, Cheapside, E.C. } LONDON.
95a, Regent Street, W. }
3, Exchange Street, Manchester.
Paris: Brentano's, 37, Avenue de l'Opera.
And of all Stationers.THE Indian Sporting Times.*THE BRIGHTEST, SMARTEST, CHEAPEST & BEST PRINTED SPORTING PAPER IN INDIA.
CIRCULATES THROUGHOUT INDIA, CEYLON, BURMAH
AND ASSAM.The Only Sporting Paper in Western India.
Covers every branch of Indian Sports, and contains the latest Home Sporting News.
FORMS A UNIQUE ADVERTISING MEDIUM
FOR SPORTING GOODS, &c.Published every Sunday. Subscription 10/- per annum.
Printed and Published at TIMES OF INDIA Press,
Bombay.
LONDON OFFICE: 121, FLEET STREET, E.C.REPORTS:Lieut.-Col. VERNER says: "In every instance the ranges were found with all practical accuracy."
A. H. MARINDIN, Esq., says: "Those here (Hythe) who have tried your Telemeter are much pleased with its speed, accuracy, and portability."
AN OFFICER in the Soudan says: "Excellent work has been done with it when mapping out the Nile."
AN OFFICER in Matabeleland says: "Great execution was done with the machine guns after taking the ranges with the Steward Telemeter."
AN OFFICER with General Buller's Force says: "Your Telemeter is invaluable."

DESCRIPTIVE PAMPHLET SENT ON APPLICATION.

J. H. STEWARD,
406, Strand; 457, West Strand, W.C.; 7, Gracechurch
Street, E.C., LondonTHE STEWARD
TELEMETER(Patent),
Acknowledged as the best portable RANGE-
FINDER for RECONNAISSANCES and for ranging machine guns.PRICE £5 5s.,If with TELESCOPIC POWER, £7.
The STEWARD TELEMETER with OPTICAL SQUARE, SIGHT VANES, and BASE LINE for use on moving objects. £7 10s.
If with Telescopic Power to Telemeter and Optical Square, £10 10s.The Ceylon Mail.

(THE WEEKLY INDEPENDENT.)

Circulates in Europe, America, Africa, India,
Australia, and the Straits Settlements.
Published weekly on the date of each outgoing mail. Contains a complete account of the week's doings and is the most popular paper with Ceylon men at home. It is the fullest, cheapest, and best weekly paper issued from the Island.Rates of Subscription.Quarterly (including postage) 6s.
Half-yearly " " 10s.
Yearly " " £1
A splendid medium for advertising goods abroad, both local and foreign.THE CEYLON INDEPENDENT.

Every Morning.

FORTY-EIGHT COLUMNS.

Five cents (one penny).

The INDEPENDENT has more than DOUBLE
THE CIRCULATION OF ANY OTHER JOUR-NAL IN THE ISLAND, and is admittedly the cheapest, best, and most influential paper in Ceylon.
It is acknowledged to be by far the best advertising medium, as it circulates all over the Island, and among all classes and communities.As an advertising medium, both for local and European goods, it is facile princeps in the Island.
All business communications to be addressed to
The MANAGER "CEYLON INDEPENDENT,"
Queen Street and Chatham Street,
Colombo, CEYLON.The Rangoon TimesIs the Most Popular Daily Newspaper in BURMA. Conducted on Independent
Lines. Has a large Circulation throughout the Province, and is a Splendid
Medium for Advertising.THE WEEKLY
RANGOON TIMESIs published on every Homeward Mail day, giving an excellent summary of the week's news.THE RANGOON
COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER,Published every morning, is a Favourite Medium with Business Men for Advertising Purposes.

10, MERCHANT STREET, RANGOON.

An Officer at Cheveley Camp Reports:—"The big Telescope (The Viceroy) I purchased has proved invaluable. IT IS THE BEST IN THE CAMP."MILITARY TELESCOPES.Invaluable for Active Service.MAXIMUM POWER, WITH CLEARNESS OF DEFINITION AND LARGE FIELD OF VIEW.
The No. 2c. as illustrated above, with 2 1/2-in. Object-Glass magnifying 25 diameters.

In Bronzed Brass ... £6 6s. In Extra Light Metal ... £8 8s.

IN SLING CASES.

The VICEROY, with 2 1/2-in. Object-Glass magnifying 30 to 40 diameters:

In Bronzed Brass ... £9 0s. In Extra Light Metal ... £12 12s.

IN SLING CASES.

*Illustrated Catalogues Gratis, Post Free.J. H. STEWARD, OPTICIAN,
406, Strand; 457, West Strand; 7, Gracechurch St., LONDON.Telegraphic Address: 406 STRAND—"GERRARD 1867."
"TELEMETER, LONDON" Telephone: 7 GRACECHURCH STREET—"AVENUE 930."ARTIFICIAL LIMBS

Manufactured on the premises by

M. MASTERS & SONS,
240, New Kent Road, London, S.E.

The Largest Manufacturers in the World. Established 1849.

CONTRACTORS TO THE ADMIRALTY, &c.*ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE FREE ON APPLICATION.SIX PRIZE MEDALS.N.B.—Many Officers in both Services wearing our Limbs have kindly promised to reply to any Letters respecting our manufactures, and grant interviews by appointment.ACCURATE FIT GUARANTEED.

“Let the Patient have SCHWEITZER'S
Cocoatina
 if you please.” —SIR ANDREW CLARK.

Guaranteed an Absolutely Pure Cocoa.

It has long been claimed for this article that it is absolutely the finest and most nourishing Cocoa in the world, and the sentence above is quoted to show how strong scientific evidence is in favour of that plea. These words were used by the late Sir Andrew Clark in the course of one of his latest inaugural addresses to students. He described a typical case of malnutrition, with its attendant evils, and in indicating the proper course of treatment to be pursued, he urged his hearers to insist on the use of this wonderfully strengthening and recuperative beverage.

This eminent practitioner also invariably recommended SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA to sufferers from digestive troubles who consulted him, and gave it a prominent place in his famous diet rules. The reasons for the great and ever growing popularity amongst medical men and the general public of this are not far to seek, and may thus be briefly summarised :

TRULY GREAT COCOA

- I.—SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA is a Pure Cocoa, made from the finest beans obtainable, and the choicest of the world's markets. Before the initial stages of manufacturing are commenced these are carefully inspected, and ONLY THOSE in sound condition are used. Much has been said about Cocoa of late, but there is one point that we should like to impress upon our readers. In manufacturing Cocoatina we use ripe beans. It is of the utmost importance that the public should avoid Cocoa made from the unripe article, as nothing deranges the system so easily.
- II.—In the process of manufacture all the valuable properties natural to Cocoa are preserved intact, thus rendering Cocoatina absolutely full of nourishing and strengthening properties, and any so-called beneficial admixture would only lessen its value.
- III.—By an unique process of manufacture, the valuable PHOSPHATES—of vital importance to children—are rendered perfectly soluble and assimilative to the weakest digestive organs, so much so that children using it regularly become perfectly supplied with RED BLOOD corpuscles, and are independent of unpalatable and digestive disturbing chemical tonics.

“The Queen

has a cup of Schweitzer's COCOATINA brought to her at 7.30 a.m., and two hours later uses the same beverage at the breakfast table.”—Society.

SCHWEITZER'S
Cocoatina
Guaranteed an Absolutely Pure Cocoa.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

ORIGINAL AND

ONLY GENUINE.

ONLY GENUINE.

COUGHS, COLDs, ASTHMA
BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—This wonderful remedy was discovered by DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE, and the word CHLORODYNE coined by him expressly to designate it. There never has been a remedy so vastly beneficial to suffering humanity, and it is a subject of deep concern to the public that they should not be imposed upon by having imitations pressed upon them on account of cheapness, and as being the same thing. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a totally distinct thing from the spurious compounds called Chlorodyne, the use of which only ends in disappointment and failure.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a LIQUID MEDICINE which ASSUAGES PAIN OF EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the NERVOUS SYSTEM when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION,
HYSTERIA.
Is the true PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, RHEUMATISM,
TOOTHACHE,
RHEUMATISM.

GREAT SPECIFIC for HOLERA, DYSENTERY, DIARRHŒA.

The GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. MR. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "TWO DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCUPULOUS IMITATIONS. N.B.—EVERY BOTTLE of GENUINE CHLORODYNE BEARS the GOVERNMENT STAMP the name of the Inventor—DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle. Sold in Bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell Street, W.C.

TO YOUNG ARTISTS!

DO YOU WANT TO WIN A...

£20

BANK NOTE?

IF SO, send a Halfpenny Stamp for Prospectus of Patriotic Painting Book Competition to DEAN & SON, Limited, 160a, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

OVER SEVENTY PRIZES.

The Ceylon Mail.

(THE WEEKLY INDEPENDENT.)

Circulates in Europe, America, Africa, India, Australia, and the Straits Settlements.

Published weekly on the date of each outgoing mail. Contains a complete account of the week's doings and is the most popular paper with Ceylon men at home. It is the fullest, cheapest, and best weekly paper issued from the Island.

Rates of Subscription.

Quarterly (including postage)	6s.
Half-yearly	10s.
Yearly	£1

A splendid medium for advertising goods abroad, both local and foreign.

THE CEYLON INDEPENDENT.

Every Morning.
FORTY-EIGHT COLUMNS.
Five cents (one penny).

The INDEPENDENT has more than DOUBLE THE CIRCULATION OF ANY OTHER JOURNAL IN THE ISLAND, and is admittedly the cheapest, best, and most influential paper in Ceylon. It is acknowledged to be by far the best advertising medium, as it circulates all over the Island, and among all classes and communities.

As an advertising medium, both for local and European goods, it is facile princeps in the Island.

All business communications to be addressed to The MANAGER "CEYLON INDEPENDENT," Queen Street and Chatham Street, Colombo, Ceylon.

The Rangoon Times

Is the Most Popular Daily Newspaper in BURMA. Conducted on Independent Lines. Has a large Circulation throughout the Province, and is a Splendid Medium for Advertising.

THE WEEKLY RANGOON TIMES

Is published on every Homeward Mail day, giving an excellent summary of the week's news.

THE RANGOON COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER,

Published every morning, is a Favourite Medium with Business Men for Advertising Purposes.

10, MERCHANT STREET, RANGOON.

J. H. STEWARD'S

PATENT ENGLISH-MADE

PRISM . . .

BINOCULARS

FOR MILITARY USE OR RACING.

Magnifying Power 8 Diameters or 64 Times. Wide Field of View. Rigid Frame. Separate Adjustment for each eye.

Price, £8. 0. 0, in Sling Case.

Post free in Great Britain and the Colonies.

J. H. STEWARD, OPTICIAN,

406, Strand; 457, West Strand; 7, Gracechurch St, LONDON

Telegraphic Address: TELEMETER, LONDON.

Telephone } 406 Strand: "Gerrard 1867."
7 Gracechurch St.: "Avenue 930."

STEWARDS

ENGLISH-MADE

BINOCULARS

FOR MILITARY USE.

The "Regulation" Binocular as approved by the authorities,

£2 15. 0.

IN LEATHER SLING CASE.

POST FREE TO GREAT BRITAIN AND THE COLONIES.

J. H. STEWARD,

406, Strand; 457, West Strand; 7, Gracechurch Street, London

Illustrated Catalogue, Part I., Gratis.

OLDRIDGE'S BALM OF COLUMBIA FOR THE HAIR.

(Established 1821.)

For Beautifying, Strengthening, or Restoring the Hair, Whiskers, and Moustaches, and preventing them from turning grey.

The first application stops the hair from falling off, makes the scalp clear and clean, and causes the hair to assume a beautiful wavy appearance. For Ladies' and Children's hair it is unrivalled, it being a vegetable preparation, and free from anything of an objectionable nature.

The Balm (unlike those articles which give a superficial gloss, afterwards making the hair dry and harsh) acts gradually and permanently on the skin and roots, bracing the fibres, promoting the growth, and imparting the highest vigour and elasticity to the hair.

3/6, 6/-, and 11/- per Bottle, of all Chemists, and Perfumers.

C. & A. OLDRIDGE'S, 22, Wellington Street, Strand.

OUR NEXT PLATE.

Ready on January 5, 1901.

Will commence a series of types of

THE INDIAN ARMY,

And will illustrate part of the Military Forces of BENGAL, the remainder appearing in the

FEBRUARY PLATE.

"Folkestone Telegraph and Review."

THE LEADING NEWSPAPER AND ADVERTISING MEDIUM OF FOLKESTONE & DISTRICT.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, PRICE ONE PENNY.

Replete with all local news. Bright and interesting articles on current topics, fashions, drama, and music.

Advertising rates and specimen copy sent on application.

Address—Advertisement Manager, "Folkestone Telegraph and Review," Offices: THE PARADE, FOLKESTONE.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS

Manufactured on the premises by

M. MASTERS & SONS,

240, New Kent Road, London, S.E.

The Largest Manufacturers in the World. Established 1849.

CONTRACTORS TO THE ADMIRALTY, &c.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE FREE ON APPLICATION.

SIX PRIZE MEDALS.

N.B.—Many Officers in both Services wearing our Limbs have kindly promised to reply to any Letters respecting our manufactures, and grant interviews by appointment.

ACCURATE FIT GUARANTEED.

HEALTHY MIDDLE AGE.

Let every reader of this article inscribe clearly on the tablets of his memory the fact that Gout, Rheumatism, Gravel, Sciatica, Skin Irritation, Eczema, Constipation, and Liver Disorders all arise from one and the same cause viz., an excess of uric acid in the blood. A small quantity of uric acid is always produced in the system, and this should be excreted through the kidneys. Whilst active exercise is taken and youthful vitality is strong, this quantity is easily got rid of, and its presence is unrecognised. When, however, a man or woman reaches the age of thirty or forty, in the general way exercise is to a large extent discontinued, and more food is taken than the system requires. As a necessary consequence, an excess of uric acid is produced which the body cannot expel, and it is deposited in the muscles and tissues, and acts as a poison. It is this deposition that causes the various symptoms referred to below.

The existence of uric acid troubles may be recognised by various trifling indications in the early stages, such as irritation between the fingers, on the palms of the hands, or about the ankles and feet, and small concretions may often be felt round the outer rim of the ear. All these are nature's warnings, to which the wise pay heed. These slight symptoms are followed by acidity or heartburn, there is Constipation, Gouty Indigestion, the Liver is torpid, with aching in the right side, and small red grains of uric acid are often passed. It is worth while going carefully over the list given above to see whether you have personally experienced any of them. The next stage is a feeling of stiffness in the joints and muscles, and slight difficulty in bending them. There may be tenderness also both to the touch and on movement. The joints are slightly enlarged; there is more or less rheumatism at intervals, till eventually a painful attack of gout, rheumatism, sciatica, &c., comes on. This is the usual course that most cases showing a uric acid tendency take. It may be that only two or three of the symptoms are present, but if these symptoms are disregarded the result will be either gout or rheumatism of a more or less acute type.

FACTS ABOUT HEALTH PRESERVATION.

Everyone must see the importance of recognising the first signs of a coming ailment, and preventing its further development. It must be remembered that if there is any variation from the state of perfect health, however slight, early attention is desirable, and if this is given much future suffering may be avoided. How many people are there who are able to recognise the early symptoms of Gout? Gout, they fancy, always makes its presence known by swelling of the foot and intense pain and it is with feelings of intense amazement that they learn from their doctor that some slight ailment from which they are suffering is gouty in its origin.

It would surprise many men and women to learn that few troubles are more common than Gouty or Uric Acid troubles. We credit the port wine drinking of our ancestors with our suffering to-day from Gout, Rheumatism, and other troubles of similar origin. This is undoubtedly the cause in some cases, but in the large majority of instances the trouble is due to modern conditions of life, and were the premonitory symptoms recognised life would be far happier, and there would be far less avoidable pain. Obviously, the most natural and effective way of curing uric acid troubles must be by dissolving out of the system the uric acid which is irritating it. Uric acid, if deposited in the tissues or muscles, is as detrimental as would be any foreign matter in a delicate piece of machinery, and no cessation of the annoyance can be obtained until the offending matter is removed.

BISHOP'S LITHIA VARALETTES are supplied in vials at 1s. and 2s., and in boxes containing twenty-five days' treatment at 5s., by all Chemists and Drug Stores. Also direct from ALFRED BISHOP (Limited), Spelman Street, Mile End New Town, London, for 1s. 1d., 2s. 1d., and 5s. 2d., post free to any part of the United Kingdom. Also supplied by G. BIRKS, 18, O'Connell Street, Sydney, New South Wales; and LEHN and FINK, 128, William St., New York.

FACTS ABOUT A HEALTH PRESERVER.

Bishop's Lithia Varalettes are taken in water, whisky and water, aerated waters, &c., and when one is dropped into the liquid it dissolves completely, with brisk effervescence, in a few moments. A clear, tasteless, palatable drink is thus produced, possessing the highest remedial power. A vial goes into the waistcoat pocket, so that they are always and instantly available.

Bishop's Lithia Varalettes are not ordinary Citrate of Lithia Tablets, but a special combination of Lithia salts, made only by Alfred Bishop (Limited), and are far more effective than any other preparation for Gouty Affections. The name of the manufacturers constitutes in itself a guarantee of excellence and perfection and absolute uniformity of quality. They are entirely free from sugar, a most important point, and one in which they are superior to other so-called Gout Remedies.

In chronic cases the use of Bishop's Lithia Varalettes must be continued for a considerable time, so as to ensure the complete elimination of the uric acid from the system. It is not reasonable to expect that after the poison has been accumulating in the body for years, and causing trouble and derangement of the functions for a long period, that everything can be put right in a day or so. Where there is a tendency to accumulation of gout or rheumatism, it is not pretended that taking a few of Bishop's Lithia Varalettes will eradicate the tendency. They must be used again at intervals so as to prevent the recurrence of the troubles complained of.

EVIDENCE OF THE VALUE AND VIRTUES OF

BISHOP'S LITHIA VARALETTES.

Lieutenant-Colonel CLARKE, 7, Beachcroft-road, East Sheen, S.W., writes:—

"I have been in the habit of using Bishop's Lithia Varalettes for some time, and I find them the best corrective for Gout I know of. I have suffered great inconvenience in the past from this malady, but since I have used Bishop's Lithia Varalettes I have been but seldom troubled. I was through the Egyptian campaign, 1881, and during the whole time I used Bishop's Lithia preparations, and found them of great value. I always take one of Bishop's Lithia Varalettes in my whisky and water, and I find them most convenient and portable."

Miss E. CROSSLAND, Brougham-terrace, Imperial-road, Exmouth, writes:—

"I have been taking Bishop's Lithia Varalettes for some time for enlarged finger-joints, the result of rheumatism, and I am very thankful to say they are doing me good. The joints are not so large or stiff, and my health generally is very much improved."

S. & H. HARRIS.MANUFACTORY: LONDON, E.*THE PIONEER

(Established 1866).

LONDON OFFICE:

13a, COCKSPUR STREET, PALL MALL.

This leading Indian paper has long held the acknowledged position of being in the very forefront of Indian journalism. Its circulation extends all over the Indian Empire, and is wider than that of any other two daily papers in the country.

Subscription to Europe, America, and the Colonies, £6 16s. per annum, post free.

THE PIONEER MAIL

(Established 1874)

Is published weekly in time for the English Mail, and contains a summary of Indian news for Anglo-Indians in Europe.

Subscription to Europe, America, or the Colonies, £2 8s. per annum, post free.

For scale of charges for advertisements, address—

GENERAL MANAGER,
PIONEER PRESS, ALLAHABAD, INDIA.

Or the London Office,

13a, COCKSPUR STREET, PALL MALL, S.W.

OLDRIDGE'S BALM OF COLUMBIA
FOR THE HAIR.

(Established 1821.)

For Beautifying, Strengthening, or Restoring the Hair, Whiskers, and Moustaches, and preventing them from turning grey.

The first application stops the hair from falling off, makes the scalp clear and clean, and causes the hair to assume a beautiful wavy appearance. For Ladies' and Children's hair it is unrivalled, it being a vegetable preparation, and free from anything of an objectionable nature.

The Balm (unlike those articles which give a superficial gloss, afterwards making the hair dry and harsh) acts gradually and permanently on the skin and roots, bracing the fibres, promoting the growth, and imparting the highest vigour and elasticity to the hair.

3/6, 6/-, and 11/- per Bottle, of all Chemists and Perfumers.

C. & A. OLDRIDGE'S,
22, Wellington St., Strand.

THE "VERNER"

Patent Luminous COMPASS.

The BEST Compass for

NIGHT MARCHING,
SKETCHING, and
all Military WORK.

Illustrated Catalogue of Military Instruments gratis.

FIELD-MARSHAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY says: "The Compass will be of use to all Regimental Officers."

MAJOR-GEN. HUTTON says: "I consider the Compass a great success and a boon to all Staff Officers."

REPORTS:—

Lieut.-Col. VERNER says: "In every instance the ranges were found with all practical accuracy."

A. H. MARINDIN, Esq., says: "Those here (Hythe) who have tried your Telemeter are much pleased with its speed, accuracy, and portability."

AN OFFICER in the Soudan says: "Excellent work has been done with it when mapping out the Nile."

AN OFFICER in Matabeleland says: "Great execution was done with the machine guns after taking the ranges with the Steward Telemeter."

DESCRIPTIVE PAMPHLET SENT ON APPLICATION.

J. H. STEWARD,

406, Strand; 457, West Strand, W.C.;

7, Gracechurch Street, E.C., London.

OUR Special Offer

Full particulars from the OFFICES,
3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN.
Address: "SPECIAL OFFER."

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S
PENS

Of Highest Quality, and Having Greatest Durability are Therefore CHEAPEST.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS,
RAILWAY ACCIDENTS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY,
insured against and FIDELITY BONDS granted by the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.,
Established 1849. Claims paid £4,150,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

COLOURED MILITARY TYPES.

THE FOLLOWING
Original Water = Colour
Drawings

ARE FOR SALE:—

- 21st Lancers (in Khaki and Home Uniforms).
- The Egyptian Army (Lancers, Camel Corps, and Infantry).
- Yorkshire Dragoons.
- West Kent Yeomanry.
- Derbyshire Yeomanry.
- Northumberland Hussars.
- 4th Yeomanry Brigade:—North Somerset, West Somerset.
- 5th Yeomanry Brigade:—Shropshire, Worcestershire.
- 9th Yeomanry Brigade:—Cheshire, Lancashire Hussars.
- 15th Yeomanry Brigade:—Denbighshire, Montgomeryshire.
- 17th Yeomanry Brigade:—Sherwood Rangers, Southern Nottinghamshire.

When framed would be especially suitable for Decoration of Schools, Clubs, or other Military Institutions.

For particulars apply to

The MANAGER,
Army and Navy Gazette Office,
3, YORK ST., COVENT GARDEN,
LONDON, W.C.

"VANITY FAIR" PORTRAITS

OF MANY OF THE

BRITISH OFFICERS

And others who are ENGAGED IN THE TRANSVAAL may still be had. Among them may be mentioned:

GENERAL SIR ARCHIBALD HUNTER (6d.)

GENERAL LORD METHUEN (price 2/6)

GENERAL SIR HENRY COLVILE (1/6)

SIR ALFRED MILNER (1/-)

MR. CECIL RHODES (2/-)

MAJOR STUART-WORTLEY (6d.)

MAJOR COUNT GLEICHEN (1/-)

CAPTAIN GEORGE NUGENT (6d.)

SIR WILLIAM MCCORMACK (1/6)

DR. JAMESON (1/6)

Remittance should be sent with order to the Publisher, "Vanity Fair" Office, 7, Essex Street, Strand, W.C.

OUR ARMY NURSES. = = =

THE PUBLISHER begs to remind readers that he still has copies of the Coloured Plate showing the

MEDICAL STAFF

AND

HOSPITAL CORPS

together with types of an

ARMY CHAPLAIN

AND

= = = OUR ARMY NURSES.

Copies of the Plate, price 6½d., post free from

THE PUBLISHER,

"ARMY & NAVY GAZETTE,"

3, York Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

WOOL FOR THE WAR.

Khaki Drill spells Chill.

Write or Wire for details of complete

PURE WOOL REGULATION FIELD SERVICE OUTFIT.

Yeomanry Specialties:

KHAKI PURE-WOOL SERGE.

CAMEL-HAIR KHAKI.

KHAKI TWILL.

KHAKI ELASTIC.

Jaeger

MILITARY AND

... SPORTING

Pure Wool TAILORS,

42, CONDUIT STREET, W.

Telegrams:—"HIGHMOST, LONDON."

THE "ARMY & NAVY GAZETTE" ALBUMS.

THESE ALBUMS MAKE HANDSOME GIFT BOOKS.

VOLUMES II, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, and X may still be obtained of the Publisher.

Each Album contains 12 Military Types, together with an Historical Record of each Regiment. The Types are Mounted, and the Volumes Bound in Red or Blue Cloth, Gilt Edges.

Volumes III and XI, containing the Types issued during 1890 and 1898 respectively, can only be bound to order, without Letterpress.

PRICE 10s. 6d. each. Carriage extra. May be ordered through any Bookstall or Newsagent.

OFFICE :— 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

COUGH, COLD,
ASTHMA,
BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—This wonderful remedy was discovered by Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE, and the word CHLORODYNE coined
by him expressly to designate it.
There never has been a remedy
so vastly beneficial to suffering humanity, and it is a subject of deep concern to the public that they should not be imposed upon by having imitations pressed upon them on account of cheapness, and as being the same thing.
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a totally distinct thing from the spurious compounds called Chlorodyne, the use of which only ends in disappointment and failure.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a
LIQUID MEDICINE which
ASSUAGES PAIN OF EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the NERVOUS SYSTEM when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY,

SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION,
HYSTERIA.

Is the true PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT,

CANCER,
TOOOTHACHE,
RHEUMATISM.

GREAT SPECIFIC for CHOLERA,
COLIC, DYSENTERY,
DIARRHŒA.

The GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient.
MR. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states:—"TWO DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this RE-MEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS.
N.B.—EVERY BOTTLE of GENUINE CHLORODYNE
BEARS on the GOVERNMENT
STAMP the name of the INVENTOR—
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE.

Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.
Sold in Bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d.,
4s. 6d., by all Chemists.
Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVEN-PORT, 33, Great Russell St., W.C.

OUR Special Offer.

... A HUNDRED ...
... MILITARY TYPES ...

for 35s. 6d. Carriage Paid.

Fuller particulars from the OFFICES,

3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN.

Address: "SPECIAL OFFER."

Adds
immeasurably
to Celerity
and Comfort
in writing.
Of all
Pens
most famous.

Made in 3 Sizes

10/6, 16/6

25/-

UP TO £18 18s.
POST FREE.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue post free on application to

MABIE, TODD & BARD,

93, Cheapside, E.C. } LONDON.
95a, Regent Street, W. }

3, Exchange Street, Manchester.

Paris: Brenan's, 37, Avenue de l'Opera.
And of all Stationers.

THE MADRAS TIMES

WEEKLY AND OVERLAND EDITION.

For Weekly Subscribers, and for despatch to the United Kingdom, Russia, Germany, France, America,
South Africa, Borneo, the Straits Settlements,
China, Japan, and Australia, the MADRAS TIMES
(Weekly and Overland Edition) is the best weekly newspaper in Southern India. Post free £1 5s. per annum.

AGENTS IN LONDON:

Messrs. HENRY S. KING & Co., Cornhill.

Scale of Charges for Advertisements may be obtained from all leading Agents.

J. H. STEWARD'S

Military Surveying

ANEROID BAROMETER.

Altitude Scale, 4,000ft. up, 1,000ft. down.
Graduated to 10ft.

Compensated best quality movement.

Price £3 10 0.

Lieut.-Col. VERNER says: "When using your Aneroid at the Signal Station
Gibraltar, the indicated height read between 1,260 and 1,270ft., the actual 'Bench
Mark' being 1,267-2ft."

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, Part II., post free.

THE "BOSWORTH" SKETCHING BOARD

This Board is intended for use on a Cycle, and is provided with a ball and socket fitting with clamp. This fitting is easily removed, and the Board can then be strapped on the wrist like the Regular Cavalry Board.

Price £2 17s. 6d.

Price of BOARD only, without Cycle Fitting, £2.

J. H. STEWARD, OPTICIAN,

406, Strand; 457, West Strand; 7, Gracechurch Street; LONDON.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, Part viii, post free.

COLOURED MILITARY TYPES.

THE FOLLOWING
Original Water-Colour
Drawings

ARE FOR SALE:—

21st Lancers (in Khaki and Home Uniforms).

The Egyptian Army (Lancers, Camel Corps, and Infantry).

Yorkshire Dragoons.

West Kent Yeomanry.

Derbyshire Yeomanry.

Northumberland Hussars.

4th Yeomanry Brigade:—North Somerset,
West Somerset.

5th Yeomanry Brigade:—Shropshire, Worcestershire.

9th Yeomanry Brigade:—Cheshire, Lancashire Hussars.

15th Yeomanry Brigade:—Denbighshire, Montgomeryshire.

17th Yeomanry Brigade:—Sherwood
Rangers, Southern Nottinghamshire.

When framed would be especially suitable for Decoration of Schools, Clubs, or other Military Institutions.

For particulars apply to

The MANAGER,

Army and Navy Gazette Office,

3, YORK ST., COVENT GARDEN,
LONDON, W.C.

Ward & Maconie,

MILITARY AND SPORTING
TAILORS,

15, HANOVER STREET, W.

New materials for Hunting Coats and Breeches, Knickerbocker-breeches, Norfolk Shooting Jackets, and Suits for country wear. Patterns and Prices on application.

PATENT PUTTIE LEGGINGS and FOX'S PATENT
SPAT PUTTIES supplied at the manufacturer's prices.

COMPLETE SETS OF YEOMANRY TYPES.

... SPECIAL OFFER ...

The publication of our series of Yeomanry Pictures having come to an end, the Publisher is in a position to offer a

COMPLETE SET

of 32 Pictures, showing every Corps of Yeomanry Cavalry, at the following Special Price.

Packed Flat, and sent Carriage Paid in the United Kingdom,

Price 12s. 6d. per Set.

Carriage Abroad Extra.

Suitable for Library, Club Room, Officers' Quarters, or Mess.

Some Press Opinions :

"Absolute accuracy."—Daily Telegraph.

"They will be prized by all."—Dublin Express.

"ROYAL BERKS YEOMANRY . . . beautifully coloured plate."—Berks Chronicle.

"YORKSHIRE DRAGOONS . . . The picture is a good one . . . men and horses are splendidly represented."—Yorkshire Chronicle.

"The coloured supplement of the LEICESTERSHIRE YEOMANRY CAVALRY . . . perfect in every way."—Leicester Advertiser.

"DUKE OF LANCASTER'S OWN YEOMANRY CAVALRY . . . There can be no two opinions about the picture being a very smart one. . . . The whole production is striking and realistic."—Oldham Standard.

"Capitally drawn and coloured. . . . Very effective pictures."—Globe.

*"THE WESTMORELAND AND CUMBERLAND HUSSARS. Handsome coloured supplement. . . . Striking picture."—Kendal Mercury.

* This picture ran out of print on the day of publication. It has now been reprinted.

"THE HAMPSHIRE CARABINIERS . . . capital illustration. Clever sketch, well worth preserving."—Hants Observer.

"DORSET YEOMANRY. . . . Well produced."—Dorset County Chronicle.

"The series . . . beautifully coloured, correctly drawn in every detail."—Teachers' Aid.

NOTE.—The number of sets for disposal at this special price is strictly limited and this offer will be withdrawn as soon as these are sold.

Address : THE PUBLISHER,

Offices : 3, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

NP